Town, district reach pact on sewer routing

By Alex Girall and George Lovng Herald Staff

The town administration and the Eighth Utilities District have reached a dispute over where a $1.4 million sewer line to serve the growing Buckland area will be hooked into the town's system.

Public Works Director George Kandra said today the agreement calls for the construction of a two-directional flow manhole on Tolland Turnpike.

In one position, the control would allow sewage to flow west to a sewer that runs along Adams Street in the direction the town has insisted the flow should take. In the other position, the sewage would flow east along a planned sewer on North Main Street to a point in the North Manchester Interceptor sewer. That direction is the one district officials have favored.

Under the agreement, reached at a meeting Tuesday afternoon, the town is to control the manhole and will not pay any part of the cost of the sewer along North Main Street.

The Eighth District has authority to collect sewage in most of the northern part of town, but the sewage is treated in a town-owned treatment plant off Otcott Street in the southern part of town.

The controversy over the direction of flow has gone on for months and appeared to be at an impasse until the agreement was announced. In the background, a controversial attempt by Manchester's Democratic leadership to take away the district's century-old right to provide fire protection and sewer service in northern Manchester.

Kandra said the meeting at which the agreement was reached was called by the state Department of Environmental Protection and involved Walter Joyner, president of the district; attorney John D. Labelle Jr., district legal counsel; Richard Lombardi, the district's consulting engineer; and Robert Norwood of the DEP.

Neither Labelle nor Joyner could be reached for comment this morning.

In a memorandum to the Board of Directors, Kandra said the agreement meets two major concerns of the town. The concerns were that the Adams Street trunk line be used to its full capacity and that the town have no financial obligation for the sewer line running east.

The district had originally proposed no hookup to the Adams Street line, but later proposed to provide flow to either the Adams Street sewer or the North Manchester Interceptor.

The sewer involved in the dispute will serve the area on which the massive Buckland Hills Mall and other developments are planned.

In what could break another town-district deadlock, Town Manager Robert Weiss said this morning he has received a reply from the district concerning his latest offer to share the town's Buckland firehouse on Tolland Turnpike.

Weiss refused to disclose the details of the district letter. He said he is currently drafting a reply, which should be completed by the end of the week.

In early June, district officials complained that the talks had broken down over the latest offer by Weiss, which they said called for unequal sharing arrangements for district and town firefighters.

U.S., Soviets agree to talks on test ban

By David Mason The Associated Press

LONDON - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said today the United States and Soviet Union have agreed to resume talks on a nuclear test ban that were broken off six years ago.

He told a news conference Moscow had "fundamentally an agreement from the United States to resume negotiations, to resume talks in Geneva on banning nuclear tests."

A U.S. official in London confirmed "we have agreed to resume talks without pre-conditions on a nuclear test ban treaty."

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the talks would be held in the framework of regular U.S.-Soviet arms control negotiations scheduled to resume Sept. 16 in Geneva.

The Soviet Union unilaterally halted nuclear weapons tests last August, but a moratorium which has been extended several times - is due to expire Aug. 6. The United States has conducted several nuclear tests during the period.

Shevardnadze, who is winding up an official visit to Britain, also retined the Kren position that it is ready for a second summit with the United States, but only if such a meeting produces concrete results in arms control.

He refused to predict when a summit might be held.

PEOPLE

Suspects are victims

Singer Keely Smith was out of jail only seven hours when she was accosted at her Palm Springs, Calif., home by thieves who pistol-whipped her brother and stole a $250,000 diamond ring off her finger, police said.

Two suspects were arrested and booked for investigation of invasion robbery, officers said.

The 54-year-old singer and her brother, Norman Alonzo Smith, were released from the Palm Springs jail on Friday after posting $1,500 bail each. They were arrested earlier that day for investigation of failing to withhold employees' personal income taxes and pay disability insurance taxes.

That evening, they were tied up and robbed by four intruders at Miss Smith's home, said Palm Springs police Sgt. Fred Donnell.

Miss Smith, who recorded "That Old Black Magic" in the early 1950s with the late Louis Prima, was wearing the 18-carat diamond ring valued at $250,000, police said. The men also took a $50,000 diamond necklace and $1,100 in cash.

Miss Smith, her brother and two other face felony and misdemeanor charges of failing to pay income and disability taxes withheld from employees' paychecks.

Sultor won't quit

A lovesick Englishman was jailed for 28 days after appealing to his former sweetheart over the radio to give him another chance.

It was the second time that Alan Parris, 30, has been sent to jail for trying to get Judy Malle, 42, to take him back.

After spending 17 days behind bars last month for defying a judge's order to stay away from Malle, Parris called Radio Orwell and had the station broadcast the message: "Please, Cherry Blossom, give Tom Thumb another chance."

Ipswich County Court Judge John Hall, who heard about the broadcast in court, ruled that Parris had breached an existing court order not to harass Malle, and ordered him jailed Tuesday for 28 days.

"He just won't give up," Malle said.

Northwest Hills: Becoming partly cloudy today with a 30 percent chance of an afternoon thunderstorm. Highs 80 to 85. Light and variable wind. Partly cloudy tonight with a 30 percent chance of an evening thunderstorm. Lows around 60. Light and variable wind. Partly sunny Thursday with highs 80 to 85.

Coastal forecast

Long Island Sound to Watch Hill, R.I. and Montauk: Variable winds about 10 knots this morning becoming southerly to 15 knots this afternoon, but less than 10 knots tonight. Thursday east about 10 knots. Seas on Long Island Sound around 10 to 2 feet through Thursday. Chance of showers tonight. Visibility locally 2 to 4 miles in haze Thursday morning.

Across the nation

Severe thunderstorms struck the northern Plains and Midwest today, while showers were scattered in parts of the South. A severe thunderstorm watch was in effect this morning in portions of northern and central South Dakota and much of central North Dakota.

Heavy thunderstorms struck the area and western Nebraska and eastern Montana. Winds gusting over 50 mph at Murdo, S.D., while 60 mph winds were clocked at Lavinia, Mont.

A storm system over the Pacific Northwest, meanwhile, prompted gale warnings along the northern California coast.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms were scattered across the Rockies, the Southwest, eastern North Carolina and Florida. A tornado near Onsted, Mich., knocked down trees, but no injuries were reported. Strong winds also caused damage in Washnetaw, Lenawee, Ottawa and Allegan counties.

The storm system also produced severe weather across parts of northern Indiana and northwest Ohio. Three-quarter-inch hail fell at North Baltimore, Ohio, while winds of 60 mph, small hail and heavy rain were reported at Etna Green, Ind.

Almanac

Today is Wednesday, July 16, the 177th day of 1986. There are 164 days left in the year. Today's highlight in history: On July 16, 1945, the United States exploded its first experimental atomic bomb over the desert in Alamogordo, N.M.

On this date, the District of Columbia was established as the seat of the United States government. In 1862, David G. Farragut became the first rear admiral in the United States Navy.

In 1918, Russia's Czar Nicholas II, his empress and their five children were executed by the Bolsheviks. In 1935, the era of the parking meter began as the first of the coin-operated devices were installed in Oklahoma City.

In 1951, the novel "The Catcher in the Rye" by J.D. Salinger was published. In 1957, Marine Maj. John Glenn set a transatlantic speed record when he flew a jet from California to New York in three hours, 23 minutes and eight seconds.

In 1969, Apollo 11 blasted off for the moon. In 1973, during the Senate Watergate hearings, former White House aide Alexander P. Butterfield publicly revealed the existence of President Richard M. Nixon's secret taping system.

In 1980, The Republican National Convention, meeting in Detroit, nominated Ronald Reagan for president. Ten years ago: In Nice, France, 10 burglars tunneled into the branch bank of the Societe Generale and in the course of a weekend, looted the vault of up to $10 million in cash, jewels, securities and bonds.

Workers claim Crestfield rule not used fairly

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

HARTFORD — The debate over whether the owners of the Crestfield-Fenwood nursing home have used a no-solicitation rule to discriminate against unionized employees heated up Tuesday as the National Labor Relations Board continued a hearing into the matter.

Six former or current employees of the Vernon Street nursing home took the stand during the day and claimed that they had witnessed many employees buy and sell merchandise at the home since June 1983. Although the owners say a rule barring such activity was in place all the time, none of the witnesses recalled hearing about it until recently.

Workers soliciting for causes such as school teams or service organizations were not disciplined, the witnesses said, even though some of the activity took place in work areas and in front of supervisors. Among others, the witnesses named Nancy LaPointe and Chris Naylor as shift supervisors who never disciplined merchandise at work.

Among others, the witnesses named Nancy LaPointe and Chris Naylor as shift supervisors who never disciplined merchandise at work.

The case involves a complaint filed by the New England Health Care Employees Union, District 1199, which represents 92 nurses' aides and other service employees at the 155-bed home. The complaint contends that the no-solicitation rule was used in a discriminatory fashion to fire nurse's aide Carol Chesky March 6 and discipline aide Suzanne Starling with a verbal warning.

Both were active supporters of District 1199 during the strike, and were disciplined because they "talked union" while at work, according to the union.

District 1199 is seeking to have Chesky reinstated and the warning removed from Starling's file under orders of the NLRB.

The owners claim workers returned after the strike were told during a Feb. 5 reorientation meeting that talking about the union was prohibited in patient areas while duty.

THE HEARING, which continued today, was scheduled after an NLRB investigation found the contract talks now under way with District 1199, made it clear that the no-solicitation rule was being enforced only for unionized workers.

"He said to (union officials), 'Look... in the past we have been very relaxed about solicitations. We have allowed Girl Scout cookies... etc. But when it comes to the union, we will not allow union discussion,'" Secher said.

Secher, who has not been in court since the NLRB hearing, could not be reached for comment. In cross examination, Castleman questioned Secher's memory on the matter.

IN OTHER TESTIMONY, Secher said that during a contract-bargaining session, Harwood attorney Alan I. Secher, who represents the owners in the contract talks now under way with District 1199, made it clear that the no-solicitation rule was being enforced only for unionized workers.

"You didn't talk to (Spieker) about a program (for Ethiopia) that would call for the collection of money in the work place, did you?" Castleman asked.

"No," Secher answered. She added that Spieker did not tell her she couldn't collect it while at work either.

Castleman sought more information in his cross examination of Secher. "You didn't talk to (Spieker) about a program (for Ethiopia) that would call for the collection of money in the work place, did you?" Castleman asked.

State Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester, makes a point during a speech to delegates at the GOP's Fourth Senatorial District convention after winning the nod to seek a fourth term.

Zinsser gets GOP nod

Three-term incumbent blasts Democrats

By George Lovvo Herald Reporter

GLASTONBURY — State Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester, wasted no time before attacking the Democrats Tuesday after winning the GOP nomination to seek a fourth term.

William Ferris withdrew following a bitter dispute with Manchester party leader Theodore Cummings. "Every time they get one, he drops out," Zinsser said of his Democratic opposition. While admitting he is not familiar with Meotti, who is a lawyer for the Travelers Insurance Co., Zinsser said his potential opponent has been inconsistent in his comments on how to help lower skyrocketing insurance costs.

Zinsser criticized insurance companies for increasing their premiums on automobile and homeowners' policies, and suggested that a consumer council for insurance be created to protect against unwarranted increases. He said if he is re-elected, he will push again for two bills that were defeated in the last legislative session. One would automatically disbar attorneys convicted of a felony and the other would limit computer-solicitation telephone calls.

Pointing to his accomplishments this year, Zinsser listed an $11 million grant to help Manchester upgrade its sewage treatment plant, a $2.2 million grant to repair a section of Route 83 near the Manchester-Vernon line, and the creation of a hiking trail along an abandoned railroad right-of-way owned by the state that stretches from Manchester to Windham.

So far, Michael Meotti, the majority leader on the Glastonbury Town Council, is the only Democratic candidate to oppose Zinsser. He decided to wage a campaign last week after Glastonbury Democratic Town Chairman Dianna criticized FitzGerald for his involvement in the Cheney Historic District Commission, saying FitzGerald was lending the prestige of his office to a controversial issue.

At the Democratic Town Committee meeting July 24, James McCavanagh is expected to win the nomination for re-election in the 12th Assembly District and former Mayor John Thompson is expected to be nominated to run in the 13th Assembly District. Both districts are wholly within Danbury.

Republicans do not yet have an opponent for the incumbent McCavanagh. Thompson is expected to oppose incumbent Republican Elsie Swenson, who has narrowly defeated him in two previous elections.

Committee member Frank Pitts said he felt they were well thought out. He suggested that outdoor security lighting be controlled by photocells and that some provision be made to cover attic fans in winter to prevent heat loss.

DURING HIS PRESENTATION, Lamson explained that he had been asked to meet certain conditions in planning the housing, one of which was to avoid long rows of units along the perimeter of the 1.8-acre parcel.

His plan calls for six buildings. The one-story apartments would be arranged so that some would have entrances at the fronts of the buildings and some on the sides. Lamson said the buildings would look like extended Cape Cod houses with attached garages.

Each unit would be equipped with appliances, including washers and dryers. The apartments would be wood-framed on concrete floor slabs and would have gas-fired warm-air heating with ducts in the attic spaces. The sloped rooms would be covered with asphalt shingles and siding would be vinyl.

Questioned about a drainage problem at one corner of the plot, Lamson said the construction would lessen the problem.

Probate judge unopposed

GOP looks for 'willing' FitzGerald foe

No opposition has surfaced in either party to Democrat William E. FitzGerald's bid for election to a fifth consecutive term as Manchester's judge of probate.

FitzGerald, 42, will seek the nomination to run in the November election at a meeting of the Democratic Town Committee July 24.

He said Tuesday he knows of no opposition candidate in the Democratic Party.

Donald Kuehl, the Republican town chairman, said his party is seeking a candidate to oppose FitzGerald, adding that the person would have to be a willing candidate. "I will not draft anyone," Kuehl said Tuesday.

Asked if Republicans would endorse FitzGerald if no candidate comes forward, Kuehl said, "That depends on the Republican Town Committee."

The Republicans will meet July 23 to consider naming a candidate in that race and others.

FitzGerald took office as judge of probate in January 1973 to complete the unexpired term of John Walllet, a Republican who retired after holding the post for many years.

He was subsequently elected to three four-year terms. The latest election campaign, in 1982, began on a low key like most probate campaigns in Manchester. But it later erupted into a bitter battle between FitzGerald and Republican William Dians, now minority leader on the Board of Directors.

FitzGerald defeated Diana, 9,901 to 8,894.

Opponent sought for 'Big Mac'

Manchester Republicans will meet Thursday in an attempt to find a candidate to run against Democratic incumbent James McCavanagh in the 12th Assembly District.

There are a number of possible choices. GOP Town Chairman Donald Kuehl said Tuesday.

The meeting follows the announcement Tuesday morning by former Republican town Director John Garside Jr. that he would not run for the seat. Garside had been considering a campaign for the past month, and other possible candidates said they would step aside if he decided to run.

But when Garside said he would not run because he wanted to devote more time to his real estate business, he left a void that has not yet been filled.

The GOP candidate who faced McCavanagh in 1984, lawyer John D. Kuehl, said Tuesday he will not run this year. So did Betty Sadtloski, who challenged Mercer for the party nomination that year.

McCavanagh, a Manchester real estate broker whose nickname is "Big Mac," has not yet been formally nominated, but no Democratic challenger has emerged. If, as expected, he is nominated next Thursday, he will be seeking a third term in November.

Several other potential candidates in the district, which includes most of northern Manchester, have also said they will not run.

However, Kuehl said there are a number of other people the party will be considering. He declined to say how many are being considered, or who they are, because some have not been approached about running.

Kuehl said that as an incentive to a potential candidate, the town committee will devote more effort to the races in the 12th and 13th districts, which are both entirely in Manchester, than to the other campaigns. Kuehl, who ruled out his own candidacy, said he is confident a nominee will be chosen when the caucusers are held next Wednesday.

Kuehl stressed that he wants to see an "eager candidate" instead of somebody who decides to run because the party could find no one else. However, he said the party will definitely nominate someone to oppose McCavanagh because "I think we can win."

Helping the GOP candidate will be the popularity of state Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester, who is running for a fourth term. Kuehl said.

Do you make your heating system work in hot weather?

If your hot water is heated off the boiler, your heating system has to work 12 months a year... even when it's 90 degrees in the shade. And that's a waste of valuable energy and money.

So give your heating system the summer vacation it deserves by installing a free standing water heater that works independently of your boiler. It will:

- Make more hot water at a lower cost than heating water off the boiler.
- Pay for itself in energy savings.
- Keep your house cooler, because it keeps your heating system from working in hot weather.

A modern free standing water heater. It doesn't work through your heating system. So it won't drain your energy budget.

Gold case a trial of wits, patience

By Brent Lovvorn
The Associated Press

WATERBURY — As a law student in 1977, John A. Connelly studied one of the most celebrated murder cases of the time: State of Connecticut vs. Murray R. Gold.

Nine years later, Connelly is Waterbury state's attorney and prosecuting Gold in an unprecedented fourth trial after two mistrials and a conviction overturned on appeal.

A former New York stockbroker and NASA engineer, Gold is charged with the 1974 stabbing deaths of his former in-laws, Irving Pasternak, a 71-year-old Waterbury attorney, and his 66-year-old wife, Rhoda.

"These were very heinous crimes," Connelly said recently as the latest trial entered its fourth week. "I wasn't going to take the attitude, 'Hey, you wore us out, so we're going to drop the charges.'"

Gold, who survived the Nazi death camp at Auschwitz as a child, was divorced from the Pasternaks' daughter, Barbara, after a brief marriage 10 years before the murders.

NOW 54, GOLD served four years in the state prison at Somers after his only conviction in 1976. It was overturned in 1980. He has also been in and out of a mental hospital since he was found incompetent to stand for his third trial last year after firing his attorney and trying to handle his own defense.

On Sept. 28, 1974, the Pasternaks returned home after observing Yom Kippur — the Jewish day of atonement — with their daughter Myrna Kahan and her husband, Robert Kahan, shortly after 9 p.m., while on the phone with Myrna Kahan, Mrs. Pasternak heard an intruder downstairs.

Mrs. Kahan later testified that her mother told her, "Somebody is yelling at Daddy. Then Mrs. Pasternak relayed her husband's next words: 'Get away from me, get out of my house.' She did not recognize the intruder's voice.

By the time police arrived, both Pasternaks were dead, stabbed more than 20 times each with a hunting knife found later in the bedroom. The prosecution claims that, days before the murders, Gold saw a woman who resembled his former wife on a New York street, rekindling resentment toward the family he blamed for the breakup of his marriage.

WILLIAM KUNSTLER, the flamboyant New York defense attorney whose other clients have included the Chicago Seven, represented Gold at his first two trials. He calls the decision to bring Gold to trial again "an outrage ...

beyond any standard of decency that I know."

"He's a broken man," Kunstler said. "What difference does it make whether he's acquitted or convicted? He's lost everything."

Reporters who covered the first trial remember Gold, who has steadily maintained his innocence, as a trim man who vigorously stalked the corridors during court recesses. Today, Gold moves slowly and sometimes appears dazed during testimony. His once dark hair is completely gray, his skin ashen.

Relatives of the victims say the case has drained them too and call it an outrage that it has dragged on for 12 years.

"It's written in the Bible that he who commits murder destroys a world," said Robert Kahan. "Not only did (the Pasternaks) suffer, but my wife, her sister, their children. It goes on and on and on."

KAHAN SAID Barbara Pasternak does not wish to speak with reporters. While testifying recently about her brief marriage to Gold, she appeared nervous and avoided looking at him. "Murray was very jealous of any of my friends and very critical of me," she testified.

The current trial also included testimony from a physical anthropologist who linked bloody shoeprints at the Pasternaks' home to Gold. It was the first time testimony about shoeprints was admitted in a Connecticut courtroom, Connelly said.

But no witness has ever put Gold near the scene the day of the crime, although a neighbor told police she saw a car that resembled Gold's, a man with a bushy mustache behind the wheel, parked outside the house three days earlier. And Myrna Kahan has testified that Gold visited her for the first time in a decade 10 days before the killings and asked if the Pasternaks still lived on Fern Street.

THE CASE TOOK a bizarre turn in 1976 when two people claimed that a Waterbury motorcycle club member, Bruce Sanford, admitted murdering the Pasternaks before committing suicide three months after their deaths. Although both later said they lied, the state Supreme Court ruled their testimony was improperly excluded and threw out the conviction from Gold's second trial.

Reactor shuts down for repairs

HADDAM NECK — The Connecticut Yankee nuclear power plant will be shut down for about three weeks to make repairs on plant pumps, a spokesman for Northeast Utilities said Tuesday. The plant was shut down on Friday with the expectation that it would be back on line this week, said spokesman Tony Castagno. "We will be doing some additional repairs to tubes and steam generators," Castagno said. Castagno said that when Connecticut Yankee was shut down earlier this year for refueling, a computerized test revealed "unusual signals" in some of the tubes that carry water through the plant. He explained the repairs process by comparing it to "just sticking a plug in the end of the tube." He said that 71 of the plant's 15,000 water tubes were involved. "It shouldn't have an effect on our ability to supply electricity," Castagno said. All three divisions of the Millstone nuclear power plant in Waterford are operating, he said.

Eddy nomination to open convention

HARTFORD — The Rules Committee for the Republican State Convention has voted to allow the nomination of Roger W. Eddy for the U.S. Senate on the opening night of the July 25-26 GOP convention in Hartford. The nomination was to have taken place on the 26th, but Eddy, badly in need of publicity in his uphill fight against Democratic Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, had wanted it scheduled for opening night on the 25th to avoid being overshadowed by the gubernatorial nominations. Eddy's campaign has so far been obscured because of the attention being paid to the three-way fight for the nomination for governor among Deputy House Majority Leader Julie D. Belaga and former state Sens. Richard C. Bozzuto and Gerald Labriola.

Neighbor charged in shooting death

HARTFORD — A neighbor of a 13-year-old Hartford girl who was shot and killed in what police called a feud between several families was charged with murder Tuesday night, police said. Angel Morales, 20, turned himself into Hartford police as a warrant for his arrest was being issued, police said. He was charged with the fatal shooting of Lydia G. Ortiz who was found shot in the upper chest by police at about 11 p.m. Monday night. Police said Morales lived about two blocks from the girl. He was being held on a $100,000 bond pending arraignment on Wednesday, police said. The shooting investigation is continuing, police said.

Archbishop scheduled for surgery

HARTFORD — Hartford Roman Catholic Archbishop John F. Whealon was scheduled to undergo hip replacement surgery today at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, church officials say. Dr. William Harris, chief of orthopedics at the hospital, was scheduled to perform the surgery to replace Whealon's right hip, officials said. The operation has an 85 percent success rate. Whealon will spend two weeks recuperating at the hospital and return to Connecticut for several weeks of convalescence, according to Father Edmund O'Brien, spokesman for the Hartford Archdiocese. Whealon, 65, has already had both hips operated on and has had three operations for intestinal cancer.

Domestic dispute leads to arrest

STAMFORD — A North Stamford man was arrested when officers investigating a domestic dispute found a cache of drugs, including nearly 2,000 barbiturate tablets, in his car, police said. Jay M. Rosen and his wife, Madeline Rosen, were each charged with third-degree assault in connection with the domestic dispute at their home Tuesday afternoon, police said. Jay Rosen was additionally charged with possession of marijuana, possession of marijuana with intent to sell, possession of a controlled substance, possession of a controlled substance with intent to sell, possession of hashish, possession of drug paraphernalia and breach of peace, police said. His bond was set at $200,000. Officers found 1,984 barbiturate tablets, 140 grams of high-grade marijuana, $43,382 in cash, $200 worth of hashish and a large quantity of drug records in the car registered to Jay Rosen, Sgt. Charles Walkley said. Madeline Rosen was released on a written promise to appear at Superior Court on July 25.

Dodd picks press secretary

HARTFORD — Sen. Christopher J. Dodd has announced the appointment of Lise Stone Heintz as press secretary for his 1986 re-election campaign. Dodd, a Democrat, is being challenged by Republican Roger Eddy. Heintz, who lives in East Haddam, was spokeswoman for the Connecticut Department of Education for 2½ years.

DOT head admits inspection problems

By Lindo Stowell
The Associated Press

NORWALK — The state's transportation commissioner says there were deficiencies in Connecticut's bridge inspection program prior to the collapse of the Mianus River bridge.

But J. William Burns said Tuesday that the deficiencies did not cause the tragedy. "I reject the suggestion that the lack of maintenance caused the collapse of the Mianus River bridge," Burns said in Norwalk Superior Court. "But I don't reject that there were deficiencies in the bridge inspection program."

Burns' testimony began the second week of the trial to determine responsibility for the bridge's collapse June 28, 1983. The state is seeking to recover damages from the firm that designed the Interstate 85 bridge, claiming a design flaw caused the collapse.

Three people died and three others were injured when a 100-foot section of the bridge fell into the Mianus River in Greenwich. Tippetts-Abbett-McCarthy-Stratton, the bridge's designers, contend the bridge collapsed because the state failed to maintain it properly.

Under cross-examination from the engineer's attorney, William

Rush, Burns said he agreed with the results of an internal review of the bridge inspection program. Some of the conclusions in the committee's report were:

• Training sessions for the state's bridge inspectors, held every three years, were too infrequent.

• Prior to the collapse, the design plans for new bridges didn't include directions on how to inspect them.

• And inspectors had excessive work loads. The report found that six two-man teams had to inspect 400 bridges a year, and the same two-man teams inspected the same bridges every year.

Burns emphasized that none of the problems the committee uncovered "caused or contributed" to the bridge's collapse.

Burns said that the department rated every bridge and that the Mianus River bridge was not rated poorly.

Burns also testified that there had been "inadequate maintenance of roads and bridges for several years" prior to the collapse because of a lack of funds. He said although the department had manpower shortages, it never reduced the staff of bridge inspectors.

The trial is scheduled to continue Wednesday.

How to pick the number one newspaper in a multiple paper town.

In a town like Manchester, you might as well start with readership. In a most recent survey conducted by First Market Research of Boston, the Manchester Herald holds the overall local readership lead. According to the study, the Manchester Herald is the leader for local news, local happenings and local sports, with three quarters of the readers saying the coverage is the most extensive.

Next, the number one newspaper should provide readers with a depth of information needed to make valued and reasonable decisions regarding key local issues that may impact on their lives today, or in the future. Well that same study shows that the Manchester Herald is rated quite highly in terms of space devoted to selected issues in its Opinion pages. Nearly eight in ten readers find that the space devoted to viewpoints on local issues to be more than sufficient in explaining the issues.

The number one newspaper should also provide a service to its subscribers. The Manchester Herald is found to be a good community newspaper by over nine in ten readers, with over one third rating it as very good. The Manchester Herald is also a very effective advertising tool for reaching the Manchester Area public and it is preferred over most other forms of printed advertising.

Caring about its readers should also be a priority with the number one newspaper. The Manchester Herald feels it is their responsibility to listen to what residents in Manchester have to say. They want to hear about readers views on the news — what they think is important, what should go into the paper and what shouldn't. They're especially interested in hearing any comments you may have about the service you get from the Herald. They guarantee prompt delivery and courteous, efficient service on all billing matters. If you're not satisfied, they want to know about it.

If you're still trying to figure out which is the number one newspaper in Manchester, the facts are obvious. Your choice will be the same paper more and more readers in Manchester choose every day. The Manchester Herald — your voice in Manchester.

State pesticide sales drop 27 percent in 1985, study shows

By Susan Okule
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — A growing aversion to contaminating groundwater probably is responsible for a drop in the statewide sales of particularly hazardous pesticides last year, a Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station scientist said. A study showed a 27 percent drop in the Connecticut sales of restricted pesticides from 1984 to 1985. Paul E. Waggoner, the station director and co-author of the study, said Tuesday. Sales dropped from 103 tons in 1984 to 75 tons in 1985, he said.

Waggoner also found that sales of the most hazardous of the dangerous pesticides dropped about a third, or faster than the overall rate.

Two-thirds of the tonnage drop came in the sales of soil pesticides, he said. Those pesticides account for more than half of the total sales, he said.

The recent discovery of the soil pesticide EDB, or ethylene dibromide, in groundwater in the Connecticut River valley probably spurred a new caution in using hazardous pesticides, he said. Waggoner said he and station scientist Lester Hankin examined state records of the sale of restricted pesticides, a class of compounds that can only be purchased by state-licensed users. Those chemicals include the soil insecticides aldicarb and Vortex and methylparathion, which is scattered on plants in pellet form. Licensed users of the substances include farmers, lawn-care companies, commercial shrub growers and rodent- and termite-control operators, he said. Between 1979 and 1984, annual sales of the chemicals fluctuated around 100 tons, and then there was the 25 percent tonnage drop, Waggoner said.

"The evidence is there that this is not a fluctuation," he said. "One may conclude that it (the downward trend) may well continue." Waggoner said people were turning to practices other than using the hazardous pesticides. "One is to simply let the pest take its toll," he said. "Another thing is to be more precise in determining if you really need the compound. Another one is to use more laborious methods of control."

Waggoner said he was happy to see the drop.

OPINION

Pluralism belongs in the schools

A trial currently under way in Tennessee deserves the attention of every American who cares about the future of public education.

Technically, what's at stake in the Greenville federal court proceeding is the right of a single school district to use children's books that touch upon diverse ideas and themes.

But the result of the trial could significantly affect the quality of education nationwide. The public schools, which already have more than their share of faults, might well become a mockery if the plaintiffs succeed.

The suit before the court was filed by Vicki Frost, a Hawkins County mother who was upset by the schoolbooks her daughter brought home, and several parents who joined her cause.

The books should not have been used, Frost testified Monday, because they didn't pay homage to her own religion, fundamentalist Christianity. Some of the subjects they covered included the Renaissance and pollution of the environment, and the authors sought to engage the imaginations of their readers by storytelling.

Any parent, of course, has a valid right to object to materials used in the public schools. That particularly applies if they seek to incite hatred or achieve a similar goal.

But in a society where government and religion are Constitutionally separated, the public schools are bound to use some worthwhile materials that will draw some objections from some people. It is at such times that balance must be the guiding principle.

In this case, the concept of balance seems foreign to the plaintiffs. Should they win their way, textbooks would be watered down to little more than religious tracts.

Frost, for instance, found it objectionable that one book said of the Renaissance: "The painters of this time glorified or elevated the human form in paintings." God must be glorified, she said, and not man.

The complaints go on and on. And predictably, they have attracted support from the New Right organizations that have long seen censorship as an answer to the "moral" problems in the schools.

It is to be hoped that the court puts such arguments in their place. This is not an instance of parents who, upon careful study, have found disturbing elements in a curriculum. Rather, it is a case where opponents of pluralism in education are using the fantasy of a "humanist conspiracy" as a foil in seeking to bar analytical thought and the instruction of history from the public schools.

Frost's most telling statement as the trial opened was that "We cannot be tolerant of religious views on the basis of accepting other religions as equal to our own."

If public education lends any support to views of that sort, it will no longer be worthy of the name.

Pauline Kezer has several tickets to ride

Republicans cannot be sure who will be running for any office in the state election this fall as they prepare for their big convention in Hartford next week. But there is one notable exception.

Pauline Kezer of Plainville is sitting pretty as the likely nominee for secretary of the state. All three candidates for governor like the idea of having her on their slate. No one else has surfaced as a possibility to give her a hard time. And in six months of heavy campaigning, Kezer has gained the kind of statewide recognition a candidate needs to enter the home stretch — the real campaign after Labor Day.

The one hitch that could affect her plans is this: Candidates for governor traditionally have a lot to say about who shares the slate with them, and for what office. While the three who want to head the GOP ticket have been warmly receptive to Kezer, they want to stay a little looser about who goes where on their slates. Kezer has already felt pressure to settle for something other than secretary of the state. And that is where she digs in. She wants that nomination, and nothing else.

KEZER, A FOUR-TERM state representative from a district that takes in all of her hometown and parts of New Britain and Southington, has been awfully careful to stay neutral in the three-way race for the gubernatorial nomination.

So she is in good shape with all three. Dick Bozzuto of Waterbury, the acknowledged leader in pledged delegates, has her high on his short list of names for his slate — and probably for her choice. Gerry Labriola of Naugatuck, who is assured of qualifying for a September primary, says "absolutely" when he is asked about including her on his team. Julie Belaga of Westport says "I've told her that" when she is hit with the same

Abortion may be the real reason

To the Editor:

The four Manchester residents recently arrested in regard to technicalities give one reason to consider why highly respected members of the community with many long years of volunteer service should suddenly be caught in legal problems.

The people of our town who are more closely attuned to the situation and political infighting are well aware that Bill Diana, Tom Ferguson and Ed Wilson supported Dr. Labriola, who is against abortion, in his quest for the governor's seat.

They met violent opposition from the Bozzuto (who is strongly for abortion) group of the Willhide, Swenson and their followers. Are the Bozzuto followers aware that 4,000 babies are put to death each day in their country?

Ed Wilson told me that he personally attacked Bozzuto during a town committee meeting for his pro-abortion advocacy and in addition wrote letters to newspapers condemning Bozzuto and his local followers for their abortionist cause.

Wilson also went to television to further bring the message to the people, thus involving the Willhide-Swenson group to a fury.

Ed Wilson resigned from the Republican Town Committee because he did not want to be associated with the abortionists, and let us not forget that Wilson was assistant state comptroller, one of a very few Manchester residents who has ever held such high political office.

If Diana, Ferguson and Wilson had supported Bozzuto, Willhide and Swenson, they would not be in such trouble today, but then again they would have to renounce their faith, their principles and their philosophy and become a part of the abortionist group of Bozzuto.

I hold these individuals, Diana, Ferguson and Wilson, in the highest esteem for their adherence to the American way of life, for abortion is not the American way.

As the facts emerge in this drama, the well-educated and fair people of Manchester may begin to see that the real issue may very well be that of abortion.

Ad lobbyist plugs cause in disguise

WASHINGTON — A billboard lobbyist who claims to be an environmentalist is trying to recruit state officials in the fight against a Senate bill that would toughen federal regulation of billboards.

Supporters of the tougher billboard rules believe George F. McInturff III is masquerading as an environmentalist in an effort to confuse states about the merits of the bill.

McInturff sent out a letter on June 2 to state highway officials, warning them about "extremely restrictive and punitive provisions" of the Senate bill. It would deny federal highway funds to states that fail to remove non-conforming billboards along federal roads.

"I suggest that you advise your senators as to your department's recommendations concerning this bill," McInturff wrote. The letterhead identifies him only as a "consultant on environmental affairs."

Although he admits to working for billboard interests, McInturff assured our associate Stewart Harris that his credentials as an environmentalist are solid: He belongs to five environmental groups and lives on the Chesapeake Bay. "I have a mallard mother on nine eggs under my porch," he said.

MCINTURFF ALSO SPENT eight years in charge of the Federal Highway Administration's controversial billboard removal project, which has not exactly denuded the landscape of outdoor advertising.

Nowadays, McInturff is better known for his work on behalf of the billboard industry. He describes himself as a "longtime consultant to the outdoor advertising industry." In a Jan. 18 memo advising industry lawyers how to challenge testimony offered by University of Georgia Professor Dr. Charles F. Floyd, McInturff described Floyd as "the most active and vocal critic of the outdoor advertising industry."

And in a Feb. 19 report to billboard company executives, chief industry lobbyist Vernon A. Clark said McInturff devotes a large part of his time "to state and local legislative issues where there are also matters of great concern" to the outdoor advertising industry.

"Maybe I shouldn't call myself an environmentalist," McInturff conceded. "I don't know. But I think I'm as much an environmentalist as anyone."

IN AN ANGRY June 27 letter to highway officials of all 50 states, Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., author of the billboard bill, defended the legislation, which has the support of environmental groups and Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole — and added: "I would also like to set the record straight as to Mr. McInturff's identity... Mr. McInturff does not represent the views of the environmental community."

Sens. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, and Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., have put an informal "hold" on Gorton's bill. Both have collected modest campaign contributions from the industry, and Symms was paid $2,000 for a speech to Gannett billboard executives.

In addition to rewarding its friends, the billboard industry tries to punish its enemies. Gorton's challenger this fall, Democrat Brock Adams, transportation secretary in the Carter administration, received $6,000 in billboard donations in the first three months of this year, including $5,000 from billboard baron Barry Ackley of Seattle, and his associates.

Gorton said he also suspects that the billboard industry pressured co-sponsors of the bill, Sens. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., and Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, to remove their names from the proposed legislation.

Footnote: The billboard industry paid out $100,664 in speaking fees to members of Congress last year. Only the top 10 defense contractors and the tobacco industry paid out more in honoraria, according to a recent study by Common Cause.

Marlo miffed

Political bigwigs in New York for the Statue of Liberty celebration found Gov. Mario Cuomo moody and distant, even ignoring some of the fund-raisers and power brokers who could help him get the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988. Friends said Cuomo's nose was out of joint because the attention being lavished on President Reagan, Lee Iacocca (a longtime potential rival) and Big Apple Mayor Ed Koch kept the governor from what he had hoped would be a shot at the national spotlight. "The statue is part of New York state," griped one Cuomo loyalist.

Philippine abductors release hostage tape

By Ruben G. Alabastro
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — A U.S. missionary abducted by armed Muslims in the southern Philippines says he has been treated well, is praying and sometimes sings and talks with his captors, according to a tape transcript made public today.

The text of the taped message was made public by the military officer in charge of efforts to free Brian Lawrence, a 30-year-old Presbyterian evangelist from Madison, Wis., and 10 Filipino Roman Catholic nuns kidnapped on the island of Mindanao.

Col. Raul Aquino, army brigade commander in charge of operations to recover the kidnap victims, gave The Associated Press the transcript after the tape was broadcast on a local radio station in Ligan, 500 miles south of Manila.

He said he was convinced of the authenticity of the taped message, which he said government emissaries sent to negotiate for the victims' release obtained from the kidnappers.

In the message, Lawrence, who the military believes is being held somewhere in the forests of Lanao del Sur province on southern Mindanao, said he was instructed by his kidnappers to say that he was being held by a group fighting for the island's independence.

He identified the group as the Mindanao Independence Movement.

The 10-minute tape recording begins: "This is Brian Lawrence. It is now Tuesday afternoon."

In the message, the missionary asks for "some pairs of winter clothing" and other items he said he had mentioned in a letter to his wife, Carol. He said they would be "nice" to have here where "I'm being held."

He added, "I think God is taking care of me... Sometimes I am praying, sometimes I am singing songs and talking with my captors."

Lawrence assured his family that he was being treated well, had plenty of food, had not been harmed and hoped to be released soon.

Col. Aquino said the emissaries assured him Lawrence will not be harmed. "I hope before the weekend is over he will be released," he said.

Lawrence was kidnapped by a Muslim band on Saturday from his apartment in Marawi, 510 miles south of Manila, a day after the 18 Catholic nuns were abducted from their Marawi convent.

The Carmelite nuns were not mentioned in the message and it was unclear whether they were being held by the same group holding Lawrence.

In Manila, Muslim Affairs Minister Canda Musrip told a Cabinet meeting presided over by President Corason Aquino that the kidnappers were not genuine rebels but "partisan groups" previously used by politicians to promote their political ambitions.

Families moved away from Chernobyl

MOSCOW (AP) — The newspaper Izvestia, contradicting previous reports that the radiation danger from the Chernobyl accident had lessened, said thousands of families evacuated from the area of the power plant will be moved farther away.

The Ukrainian atomic power station's No. 4 reactor exploded and burned April 26, releasing radiation that spread over Europe and eventually around the world.

According to the most recent official report, issued early last month, 26 people died in the accident and its aftermath.

Izvestia, the Soviet government daily, said Tuesday that new houses for evacuees will be built not in areas just north of the evacuation zone, where the people now live, but in regions farther from the power plant.

"At this time, perhaps the main problem is living space," Izvestia said, adding that some evacuees were unhappy about the decision to move them. "Every family that was evacuated from the 30-kilometer (18-mile) zone should receive an individual house or apartment by winter."

Izvestia did not say how long the evacuees would be in their new homes, but suggested the relocation would be lengthy, if not permanent.

It quoted Yuri A. Puplikov, a spokesman for the state construction agency, as saying: "We are not just building houses, we are building people's lives."

"The kind of life this will be depends to a large extent on us. We would like it if people would forget quickly the unhappy events connected with the accident."

Officials said after the disaster that more than 100,000 people were evacuated from the 18-mile zone around the plant 80 miles north of Kiev, a city of 2.4 million that is the Ukraine's capital.

Subsequent reports indicated many were sent to new homes and jobs in distant regions of the Soviet Union, but many remained in temporary housing near the zone.

Litton division indicted

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A subsidiary of Litton Industries Inc. faces what a prosecutor said is one of the largest penalties ever assessed against a military contractor after agreeing to plead guilty to charges of defrauding the government of $6.3 million.

Clifton Precision, Special Devices Division, of Springfield, Pa., agreed to plead guilty to all 321 counts on which it was indicted and to pay $15 million in criminal and civil fines and restitution, U.S. Attorney Edward S.G. Dennis Jr. said.

Dennis said he believed the sum would be one of the largest settlements ever paid by a military contractor accused of wrongdoing.

Named in the federal grand jury indictment besides the Litton division were Michael J. Mills, former vice president of finance and administration, and Joseph Diliberto, former purchasing manager.

The indictment accuses the suburban Philadelphia company of defrauding the government on contracts to make instrument, aircraft and other military hardware.

Dennis said the company had "grossly inflated prices intentionally" on about 45 contracts from 1975 to 1984.

Authorities said the company would plead guilty within the next two weeks to 300 counts of making false claims, 20 of mail fraud and one count of concealing material facts from a U.S. agent.

Gary Glazer, chief of the fraud division of the U.S. attorney's office, said the company, in agreeing to pay $6.3 million in restitution and fines of about $4.7 million, was accepting the maximum penalty that it could have received.

Mills, who faces a possible 12-year prison term if convicted on all charges, and Diliberto, who could face 15 years in prison, are scheduled for arraignment next week.

Specifically, the indictment alleged the Litton unit defrauded the Pentagon on contracts for radar equipment and other instruments for the F-16, F-100, F-4 and B-52 aircraft, Cobra jet helicopters, Navy destroyers and other warships.

The company inflated costs and pricing data and sought to conceal the scheme from government auditors and investigators, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Harbit. The inflated figures were known inside the unit as "chicken fat," authorities said.

Harbit said the investigation was continuing. Litton, in a statement from its Beverly Hills, Calif., headquarters, said it "will take whatever specific additional actions are necessary to reassure the Defense Department that it is a responsible company fully committed to do business with the U.S. government."

A good neighbor—pursuing the best interests of the community, always there, always caring. Since 1919, Manchester Memorial Hospital has consistently worked towards these ideals, while striving to meet the unique needs of the East-of-the-River community with innovative, sophisticated, responsive care.

INNOVATIVE Part of being a good neighbor is always looking for new ways to help. Manchester Memorial has a long tradition of innovative care. A family-centered labor and delivery suite in a hospital setting was instituted here, when it was just an experiment at other hospitals.

Continuing commitment to innovation has gained Manchester Memorial regional and national attention as a hospital that provides a superior level of progressive services and programs. Manchester Memorial even innovated with food. Before it was fashionable, we introduced a restaurant style menu with gourmet items like lobster, elevating our food to a status worthy of review by Parade Magazine.

SOPHISTICATED As part of our sophisticated, high-quality services, Manchester Memorial Hospital provides the community with programs like The Family Birthing Center, family-centered pediatrics, parenting services, one day surgery center, nutrition counseling, a cardiac rehabilitation program, cancer support groups, medical support for the local paramedic team, a comprehensive inpatient and outpatient psychiatric programs, and diabetes education. We also have an active medical staff of 150 highly skilled physicians representing a full array of medical and surgical specialties and sub-specialties.

RESPONSIVE At Manchester Memorial we work hard to achieve our goals. Part of that job is being able to read the pulse of the community.

In response to your need for quality walk-in medical care, Manchester Memorial created PromptCare, where over 7000 of you have received care in seven months of operation. We also sponsor services like community health education classes, blood pressure clinics and a speakers bureau. These services are tailored to your needs and designed to improve the quality of life in the community.

But possibly the biggest advantage Manchester Memorial has is our closeness to the community. We know our neighbors better than anyone and understand their needs. Many of our staff live right here and have a special commitment to the East-of-the-River area. The sense of closeness and neighborliness at Manchester Memorial is something you won't find just anywhere. And best of all, we're here anytime you need us.

Selectmen's choice for panel reluctant

BOLTON — The Board of Selectmen Tuesday named a chairman for a volunteer committee that will recommend improvements to Community Hall, but the man picked said this morning that he doesn't want the responsibility.

Ernest A. Shepard, a former Republican selectman, said he would not be able to serve as the committee's chairman, despite the fact that First Selectman Douglas Thayer assured the board that the two had talked and Shepard had expressed an interest.

The committee is being created to investigate and advise the town's selectmen on changes that can be made to alleviate cramped work space, lack of proper handicapped facilities, a shortage of parking spaces and other problems at the Community Hall.

HRC action condemns town's hiring of white

A three-member subcommittee of the HRC is currently reviewing the town's proposed affirmative action plan, which calls for the hiring of 14 minority-group members and four females in its top jobs during the next five years.

The resolution has no other significance other than it is a stand by the HRC, an advisory panel to the town Board of Directors. However, it sparked a debate on the town's proposed affirmative action plan among citizens who listened from the sidelines.

Frank Smith, a black Manchester resident who said he is seeking to expand the subcommittee, working on the plan to include more whites and affirmative action experts.

HRC Chairman Robert Faucher said he did not assign people to the subcommittee because of the "color of their hair."

Mixed feelings result from primary arrests explained on the petition sheets, and that she personally would like to see laws with one of the circulators.

"Besides that, they've all done it before," she said.

One leading Republican, who asked that his name not be used, said sloppiness occurred and was allowed because the circulators were pressured to lead the primary.

Agostinelli — a top statewide coordinator in Labriola's campaign — wanted revenge, the source said, for a loss in the March state vote that led to the state favoring Bozuto, Diana and Ferguson, while committed to Labriola, did not want to become involved in the primary effort, the source said.

The two waged an active campaign to try to win the straw vote, the source said, but they only managed to lead the primary effort after being pressured by Agostinelli.

Agostinelli has not returned phone calls from reporters since the arrests occurred. Nor have any of the four suspects.

SPORTS Surprise — American League wins

By Ben Walker The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Roger Clemens breezed and Dwight Gooden struggled. Fernando Valenzuela was fantastic and Don Asse saved the day.

Tuesday night's All-Star Game looked just like the first half of the 1986 season.

And, in the Year of the Home Run, Lou Whitaker and Frank White connected as the American League beat the National League 3-2.

"We all know what we did. Our satisfaction is that we did our job," Whitaker said after the AL won for just the second time in the past 15 games.

Clemens, showing no ill effects of pitching on only two days rest, was perfect — as he was in winning his first 14 games this year.

Clemens, leading the majors with 15 victories, retired all nine batters he faced and became the first AL pitcher to get the Most Valuable Player award. He threw 25 pitches, 21 for strikes.

"I'm usually around the plate," he said. "They always ask me about my control and being a power pitcher. They say the two dimes you can't see."

He did just fine, according to the NL batters.

Clemens is going to be one of the stars in the game," said Darryl Strawberry, one of Clemens' two strikeout victims.

"His velocity is pretty much like Doc's (Gooden)," Clemens said. "There was a lot of anticipation tonight knowing we were facing a guy like him."

Teddy Higuera relieved Clemens and kept the NL without a baserunner until Strawberry singled with one out on the fifth.

The NL shut out on one hit through seven innings, scored twice in the eighth against the lurching knuckleball of Charlie Hough. Then, after the NL put runners on first and third with one out in the ninth against Dave Righetti, Asse was summoned.

The man who leads the majors in saves got another when Chris Brown grounded into a checked-swing double play.

"I figured he knew more about me than I knew about him — that I was a fastball pitcher," Asse said. "So I figured I could fool him by throwing a slider."

It was only the second AL victory in the last 23 meetings, and marked the first time the Americans had won in an NL park since 1962 at Wrigley Field. The NL now leads the series 36-20 with one tie.

Valenzuela continued his All-Star success, this time spectacularly. He fanned the first five hitters he faced, tying Carl Hubbell's record for most consecutive strikeouts.

Valenzuela struck out Don Mattingly, Cal Ripken, Jesse Barfield, Lou Whitaker and Higuera before Kirby Puckett ended the string by grounding out. In 1984, Hubbell, a Hall of Famer, struck out future Hall of Famers Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmie Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin.

"I was not aware I was going for a record," Valenzuela said. "I don't know about Carl Hubbell — I was born in 1960."

An unusual sight. American League MVP Roger Clemens (15), Frank White (center) and Tony Fernandez exchange congratulations after the American League topped the National League, 3-2, Tuesday night in the annual All-Star Game at the Astrodome in Houston.

Home-run totals are up throughout the majors this season and the AL had hoped its power-packed lineup, with 266 at the All-Star break, would be able to break loose even at the Astrodome, considered the worst hitters' park in the majors. The same was true in 1982, when a slugger-led AL team was held to three hits in a 1-0 loss at Houston.

This time, White admitted, not many people expected he and Whitaker to supply the punch.

"You never know who the guy is going to be," White said. "Going in, you have some ideas who it might be. But it usually turns out that it is someone else."

Said Whitaker: "We don't go out there looking for singles. Both Frank and I have the type of swings that enable you to hit the ball out of the park."

Even with a 3-0 lead, the AL was not home free. In years past, the NL has found a way to win, and it made its move in the eighth.

Brown opened with a double off Hough and took third when Chili Davis fanned, but had to be thrown out at first base when the third strike bounced past catcher Rich

Edmonds. Whitaker said he had been rubbing it in their faces, saying the National League dominates every year, "Boston's Willie Boggs, leading the majors in hitting, said after going 1-for-3. 'But the American League dominates the World Series.'"

And, for the first year, the All-Star Game, too.

"I know we were serious," said Hough, who chose his replacement carefully, not using powerful rookie Jose Canseco, the top home-run hitter in the majors, or Eddie Murray. "You saw what happened."

Whitaker said the pitch was a curveball that just didn't break.

"I just managed to get it out," Whitaker said. "I don't have any illusions. I am not a home run star."

"Dwight Gooden is one of the few pitchers in this game you can truly call great and it is a thrill and an honor for me to hit a home run against him in an All-Star Game."

Whitaker said when he approached the plate, the thought occurred to him Herzog might order the intentional walk.

In a regular-season game, he would have taken the intentional walk in an All-Star Game," he said.

Gooden said his pitch to Whitaker was symptomatic of his problems this year.

"He wasn't going to give me anything to hit," Whitaker said of Gooden. "But in the All-Star Game everybody comes to play. There are no free passes."

Herzog decided against having Gooden issue a free pass, and Whitaker responded by drilling an 8-2 pitch over the right-field wall.

"I might have let my heart manage over my brain," Herzog said, second-guessing his decision.

"I let him pitch. I didn't think he'd (Whitaker) get a hit."

"I've got a lot of confidence in Gooden. If he'd been behind 2-0, I'd have walked Whitaker."

"In a regular-season game, I'd have walked Whitaker."

Whitaker said when he approached the plate, the thought occurred to him Herzog might order the intentional walk.

In a regular-season game, he would have taken the intentional walk in an All-Star Game," he said.

Gooden said his pitch to Whitaker was symptomatic of his problems this year.

"He wasn't going to give me anything to hit," Whitaker said of Gooden. "But in the All-Star Game everybody comes to play. There are no free passes."

Herzog decided against having Gooden issue a free pass, and Whitaker responded by drilling an 8-2 pitch over the right-field wall.

"I might have let my heart manage over my brain," Herzog said, second-guessing his decision.

"I let him pitch. I didn't think he'd (Whitaker) get a hit."

"I've got a lot of confidence in Gooden. If he'd been behind 2-0, I'd have walked Whitaker."

"In a regular-season game, I'd have walked Whitaker."

Whitaker said the pitch was a curveball that just didn't break.

"I just managed to get it out," Whitaker said. "I don't have any illusions. I am not a home run star."

"Dwight Gooden is one of the few pitchers in this game you can truly call great and it is a thrill and an honor for me to hit a home run against him in an All-Star Game."

Economist says USFL owes money to NFL

NEW YORK (AP) — An NFL-hired economist says, in effect, that the USFL owes the older league money and not the other way around.

The allegations were made Tuesday by Dr. Bruce Owen, called by the NFL to counter testimony by the USFL's expert, Dr. Nina Cornell.

Cornell had testified that NFL actions had allegedly cost the USFL between $301 million and $565 million in past and future earnings — which tripled as is the rule in antitrust cases, would come to the $1.69 billion the USFL is seeking.

The testimony came as part of the NFL's last week in its defense of the NFL, which may go to the jury next week. The NFL is expected to wind up its case at the end of this week with Commissioner Pete Rozelle and rebuttal testimony will take place Monday and Tuesday.

In his testimony Tuesday, Owen said that Cornell, who testified for the USFL a month ago, hadn't taken into account the USFL's increased costs when it moved to a fall schedule and exaggerated the younger league's receipts, wiping out what Cornell claimed were NFL-imposed damages on the league. The player salaries, irrespective of the NFL, would cost the USFL $407 million between 1987 and 1992 and the gate receipts would bring in $201 million, he said, causing what he called "negative damages."

"It's not reasonable to assume that the USFL would continue to pay one-quarter of NFL salaries," Owen said. "If the USFL were playing in the fall, the increased revenues would have been exceeded by their increased costs."

Owen criticized the AFL analogy and was also critical of Cornell's use of just two cities — New York and Oakland — to make it. But he acknowledged under cross-examination by USFL lawyer Harvey Myerson that he had used only one city in making his analysis.

"You can't correct for the demand factor of the '60s when in the '80s there's a glut," Owen said, referring to testimony by network officials that they denied the USFL a contract because they already had too much college and professional football on the air.

He also was critical of Cornell's analysis of attendance. By 1992, under her scenario, the New Jersey Generals could have had a season attendance of 2 million, although they only had enough seats for 540,000.

NFL camp roundup

Bears shuffle into camp; signing pace is slow

By Dick Brinster
The Associated Press

As the Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears shuffled into training camp, the pace for the signing of first-round National Football League draft choices was considerably slower with just two of the top 28 selections under contract.

The Bears arrived Tuesday in Platteville, Wis., to the sound of "The Super Bowl Shuffle," the theme song they rode to an 18-1 record and the NFL championship last season.

"I'm doing great," Coach Mike Ditka told a group of reporters and autograph seekers on his arrival. "I just hope you're all back here next year," he added, alluding to the rarity of teams repeating as Super Bowl champions.

There also was an upbeat mood in Suwanee, Ga., just up the road from Atlanta, as the Falcons came to terms with Oklahoma nose tackle Tony Casillas in what his attorney called "a victory for the league and the Falcons."

Neither Casillas, the second player chosen in the draft, nor his attorney, John Maloney, would disclose the amount of the contract. But a published report put the value at $2.35 million, including a $1.45-million signing bonus. The 6-foot-3, 240-pound Casillas also would receive a $1 million loan.

Casillas joined Rod Jones of the Tampa Bay Bucs as the only signed first-round picks. Jones was the Bucs' second pick in the first round. The first choice, Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson of Auburn, opted for a career in professional baseball.

"I think it would have been devastating for the NFL to not sign him," Maloney said of Casillas. "For the team to lose the second player drafted would have been really catastrophic."

Casillas had been courted by the Arizona Outlaws of the United States Football League.

The Bears got good news when defensive end Richard Dent, the Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl, agreed to report to camp while negotiations continued on a new contract. Dent, who had threatened to sit out the 1985 playoffs and the 1986 season, was paid $55,000 last season.

All-Pro safety Dave Duerson and six draft choices also agreed to contract terms, Bears spokesman Ken Valdisserri said. The highest pick was third-rounder David Williams, a wide receiver from Illinois.

With six camps open — mostly for rookies — about 80 of the 333 drafted players had agreed to terms. Few were prime draft choices, however.

New York Giants General Manager George Young called the signing drought "a game of chicken by both sides" with teams trying to reduce costs for the second straight year after two years of salary escalation caused by competition from the USFL.

"This may break the logjam of what looked like the biggest non-reporting year ever," agent Leigh Steinberg — who represents two first-rounders — said in reaction to the signing by Casillas.

The USFL, suing the NFL, for $1.69 billion in an antitrust case, lost another signing battle when veteran running back Stump Mitchell came to terms with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Mitchell, who gained 1,006 yards last season, had reached a verbal agreement with Arizona before changing his mind.

After returning from Phoenix, Mitchell said he signed the contract at Lambert-St. Louis Airport at 5:45 a.m.

"We went in the lounge and we signed the contract for three years," Mitchell said. "I'm definitely happy to be back here. I think this is where I was meant to be."

On Monday, Mitchell had been in the office of Bill Tatham Jr., president of the Outlaws. He said he was about to sign a three-year deal worth a reported $1.5 million when his agent, Harold Lewis, told him to wait a minute.

Lewis left the office to call the Cardinals, who offered a reported $1.2 million.

"I'm glad Harold made that last phone call," Mitchell said. "I was awfully close to signing that USFL contract."

The Miami Dolphins expect All-Pro quarterback Dan Marino — a 37-day holdout during training camp last season — to report with the rest of the veterans, even though his contract is still being negotiated. Also unsigned by the Dolphins are defensive end Doug Betters and guard Ed Newman, who missed all of 1985 with a knee injury.

One of Steinberg's clients, wide receiver Mark Sherrard, is seeking a four-year contract from the Dallas Cowboys. There have been no talks for more than a week.

Sherrard wants $1.76 million over four years while the Cowboys are offering $1.2 million.

"When they dropped their offer, at that point they said unless we wanted to accept, we were not to bother to call back," Steinberg said. "I have not called since then."

Philadelphia Eagles' owner Norman Braman — whose team has 21 unsigned players, blamed the "stupidity and greed" of agents.

"I don't think there's any question that these players are being victimized by agents who really aren't concerned about their clients," Braman said. "There are too many hallplayers who really are having their whole careers destroyed by the stupidity and greed of agents who don't understand what the realities are in the marketplace."

The Indianapolis Colts have given second-round pick Jack Truadeau of Illinois until Friday to sign before they seek a veteran quarterback to back up Gary Hogeboom.

Truadeau's agent, Greg Lustig, has threatened to have his client sit out the upcoming NFL season or sign with the USFL.

"If they want to fool themselves, fine," Lustig said. "But you can't build a team by fooling yourself."

Chuck Long of Iowa, another quarterback chosen in the first round, is unsigned by the Detroit Lions. Long reportedly is talking to the Baltimore Stars of the USFL.

New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells said draft choices are making a mistake by holding out.

"These guys, especially the high-round guys, are all defensive players," said Parcells, whose defense was ranked second in the NFL last season. "I don't think they are going to wait in here and perform."

Kansas City running back Theotis Brown, who missed the 1985 season after suffering a heart attack, announced his retirement.

"I can't have them up in the stands wondering," the 29-year-old Brown said in reference to his wife and young son. "That's just not fair to them."

Accident claims Haughton

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Haughton, whose rides won over $40 million in a 40-year harness racing career that ended in a fatal track accident on July 5, will be buried on Friday.

Haughton, who died Tuesday at the age of 62, had been in a coma for 10 days after being thrown from his sulky in a three-horse spill at Yonkers Raceway.

The trainer and driver, a member of the Harness Racing Hall of Fame, was the fourth leading driver in career victories with 4,910.

His rides earned $40.2 million and in a record 19 of those years, he topped the $1 million mark.

Haughton won almost every major stakes, including four Hambletonians, five Little Brown Jugs and seven Messengers. At the beginning of 1986, his stable was the biggest in North America.

Among the horses he trained was the brilliant pacer Nihilator.

For the Record

Manchester Soccer Club tryouts for boys born in 1974 and 1975 will be held Saturday at Kennedy Road soccer field from 1:30 p.m. It was incorrectly stated in Tuesday's paper.

Calling all blueberry pickers

Try these Italian favorites

Desserts are an important part of Italian cuisine. The firm Italian hand of culinary dessert artists has been apparent since the 17th century when Pope Alexander VII ended his banquet for Queen Christina of Sweden with marzipan tarts and ornamental displays of status done in sugar and spices.

Here are four wonderful Italian-inspired desserts that are easy to make and gastronomical triumphs. The ancient Romans didn't have native blueberries to work with, but if they had had them, this is how they would have prepared them.

They would use classic dessert ingredients familiar to Italians for centuries and combine them with something very special—the marvelous fresh blueberries that give such imperial flavor to summertime desserts. The Roman Emperors might have given us a small piece of the world for just a taste of the blueberries everybody in America can enjoy today.

ITALIAN BLUEBERRY CREAM PIE

1 unbaked 9-inch pie shell 1/4 teaspoon salt
4 cups fresh blueberries, rinsed and drained 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
2/3 cup sugar 1 cup (1/2 pt.) heavy cream
1/4 cup flour 1 teaspoon vanilla

Fill pie shell with blueberries. Combine remaining ingredients and blend well. Pour over berries. Bake in a preheated hot oven (400°F) for 45 minutes or until top is lightly browned. Cool and then chill. Serve garnished with uncooked blueberries and rosettes of sweetened whipped cream. Yield: 1 9-inch pie.

BLUEBERRY ORANGES

6 large navel oranges 1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 cups fresh blueberries, rinsed and drained 1/2 teaspoon Stevia, or other orange-flavored liquid
1/4 cup sugar

Cut the tops off oranges and scoop out the pulp and membrane. Cut the pulp into sections and mix with blueberries. Sprinkle with sugar. Let fruit marinate for a few hours in the refrigerator. Reserve orange shells and notch edges of shells decoratively. Drain juice from fruit and mix with cornstarch. Cook while stirring until thick. Cool. Stir in Stevia. Fold sauce into fruit. Fill the orange shells with the fruit. Chill until ready to serve. Yield: 6 servings.

BLUEBERRY SOPHIA

1/2 cup butter or margarine 1/2 cup confectioners' sugar
1 pkg. (8-oz.) cream cheese 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1-1/2 cups all-purpose flour 1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon baking powder 2 teaspoons grated orange rind
4 cups fresh blueberries, rinsed and drained 2 cups (1 pt.) heavy cream

Mash butter until soft and fluffy. Add cheese and mix until smooth and well blended. Stir in flour and baking powder. Shape dough into a ball, wrap in foil and chill for 1 hour. Roll out 1/8 inch thick on a floured board. Cut into 12 (3-1/2 inch) rounds using a floured cookie cutter. Place rounds on a cookie sheet and prick well with a fork. Bake in a preheated hot oven (400°F) 10 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool on a rack. Sprinkle blueberries with sugar. Combine remaining ingredients and beat until stiff. Arrange 6 pastry rounds on a serving platter, top each with a generous spoon of flavored whipped cream and some of the sugared berries. Top with a second pastry round, more whipped cream and sugared berries. Yield: 6 Sophias

ITALIAN BLUEBERRY PUDDING

3 tablespoons cornstarch 1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash salt 1 square (1 oz.) semi-sweet chocolate, grated
1/3 cup sugar 1/4 cup chopped mixed candied fruits
1-1/2 cups milk 2 tablespoons sherry
1 cup (1/2 pt.) light cream 2 cups fresh blueberries, rinsed and drained

Mix cornstarch, salt and sugar. Gradually stir in milk and light cream. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until pudding bubbles and thickens. Stir in sherry. Spoon into 5 minutes. Remove from heat and cool. Stir in vanilla. Chill. Combine pudding, chocolate, fruit and sherry. Spoon alternating layers of pudding and blueberries into dessert glasses. Chill until ready to serve. Yield: 4 servings.

Note: Dry-pick frozen blueberries can be substituted for fresh.

Grandma taught her there's 'one right way'

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

"Feeding people makes me feel connected," said Mary Wellemeyer of 135 Green Road. "When things are a little hectic, I like to think about my grandmother."

Wellemeyer acquired her love of cooking from her grandmother, Jane Blair Hill. When she was a young girl, Wellemeyer lived only two blocks away from her grandmother in the tiny settlement of Tauxemont in Fairfax County, Va.

"It's not far from Mount Vernon," Wellemeyer said.

She and her grandmother used to make pies together. "Grandmother had exactly one right way to make a pie crust," Wellemeyer said. She learned later from her mother that the "one right way" changed frequently at Grandma's whim.

"Now I have my own right way," Wellemeyer said. Instead of using only unbleached flour for the crust as her grandmother did, she uses half unbleached flour and half whole wheat. She also learned that she could substitute a stick of margarine for shortening.

Formerly a field representative for the Connecticut Citizen Action Group, Wellemeyer has recently become a community organizer for a new organization in Norwich called the Rose City Community Land Trust for Housing. She is excited about helping poor people find old housing they can afford and renovate themselves. She said she has finally found a way to work in the field which used to be a hobby.

Wellemeyer said she still finds cooking relaxing, even with three active boys in the house. She has some shortcuts for easy suppers, such as fettuccini with spinach and cream sauce, which she offers in this column. Along with her grandmother's blueberry pie recipe, Wellemeyer offers Grandma's favorite party recipe which came from "Marian Tracy Caserole Cookery." "It may no longer be in print," she said.

"Grandma served the chicken with brown rice and fresh green beans with plenty of butter," Wellemeyer said. Her grandmother based much of her cooking on what was in season, she added.

Crust for lattice-top pie

1 1/2 cups of flour, half whole wheat and half unbleached
1 stick of margarine
About 2 tablespoons of water

Put flour and margarine into a bowl and cut margarine into pastry with pastry cutter. Add water until the crust sticks together. Gather into a ball and divide into two unequal pieces for the bottom crust and lattice top. Roll out bottom crust and place in 9-inch pie pan.

Filling for berry pie

4 cups of berries (or rhubarb)
2 tablespoons of tapioca
1/2 cup sugar
Wash and prepare berries in a bowl. Stir in sugar and tapioca. Let it stand while making the pie crust. Fill shell and place the lattice crust over top. Sprinkle with sugar. Start baking in 400-degree oven for 10 minutes. Lower heat to 350 degrees for about 40 minutes or until filling starts to bubble.

Italian-style chicken

2 cloves garlic, minced
4 tablespoons olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste
1 2 1/2-pound chicken, cut up for frying
1 bay leaf, crumbled
1 tablespoon chopped fresh basil
1/4 cup wine vinegar
Brown garlic in oil in heavy skillet, then remove. Rub salt and pepper on chicken and brown in oil. Then transfer to a shallow casserole. Add herbs and vinegar. Cook with a cover for the first 25 minutes, then uncover, basting occasionally with oil at 350 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes or until chicken is tender. Serves 4.

Spinach fettuccini

1 pound fettuccini
10 ounces fresh spinach
5 or 6 fresh mushrooms
1 small yellow onion
Small amount olive oil
1 cup white sauce
Grated parmesan cheese
Make the white sauce first and set aside. Put on pot of water for fettuccini. Wash spinach. Slice onion and mushrooms and saute together in small amount of olive oil. Add spinach, cover and cook until spinach is limp. Set aside. Cook noodles and drain. Mix noodles, spinach mixture and sauce and serve.

Mary Wellemeyer rolls out the dough for her favorite pie crust for a blueberry pie that she adapted from a recipe of her grandmother.

Consider your microwave a full partner in making salads

Salads in the microwave? We're not suggesting that you cook the lettuce. You can, however, use the microwave for many salad-making tasks.

Microwave Kitchen

Marge Churchill

Stir while adding gelatin and until dissolved. Immediately add ice cubes until the liquid level reaches the 2-cup mark. Stir until ice melts. Refrigerate and use as desired. By using ice to chill gelatin rapidly, it will be set in about 30 minutes. This quick set method is especially helpful for layered salads.

Many recipes require sauteed vegetables, such as onions, green pepper or mushrooms. Ingredients such as these can be microwaved with or without butter. Use a glass measuring cup and cover with plastic wrap. Microwave on high power to desired tenderness. Add to recipe as directed.

Many salads use frozen vegetables, such as peas or snow peas. Microwave these in their cardboard boxes on high power for about 2 to 3 minutes. Add to salads.

Packages of gelatin that make four servings can be microwaved and chilled in a 2-cup glass measure. Fill it with one cup of water and microwave on high for 2 1/2 to 3 minutes, or until boiling.

1/3 cup red wine vinegar
Dash of Tabasco
1 cup ground cooked, peeled and diced
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup chopped celery
Sprinkle gelatin over 1 cup of tomato juice in a 4-cup glass measure. Blend well. Microwave on high for 2 1/2 to 3 minutes, or until boiling. Blend in remaining tomato juice, vinegar and Tabasco. Chill until partially set.

Avocado dressing
1 ripe avocado
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Several dashes Tabasco sauce
1/4 cup light cream
1/4 cup sour cream

South Africa panel voids some bans

DURBAN, South Africa — A three-judge panel today declared void all or parts of five of the six definitions of "subversive statements" banned under the national emergency decree on grounds of vagueness.

However, the Natal province Supreme Court rejected a black union's argument that the entire state of emergency was illegal. Justice John Didcott told a crowded courtroom that several aspects of the definitions under the law were "hopelessly uncertain."

Reagan pledges help for Pakistan

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, welcoming Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo of Pakistan, praised that country today for moving toward democracy after years of martial law, and pledged to continue helping Pakistan solve its economic and military problems.

Reagan greeted Junejo, head of a civilian government that has been granted substantial powers after years of military rule, at a ceremony on the south lawn of the White House.

In a welcoming statement following the traditional 19-gun salute for a visiting head of government, Reagan lauded the Pakistan government for its peaceful transition from martial law that was imposed in the late 1970s.

Naval workers exposed to PCB

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii — At least 180 naval shipyard workers may have been exposed to the suspected cancer-causing agent PCB after an electrical transformer exploded, a Navy spokesman said.

Lt. Cmdr. Ron Morse, public affairs officer for the shipyard, said the workers were examined and cleaned up at the Pearl Harbor Dispensary after the accident Tuesday, and there apparently were no medical problems related to the exposure.

Doctors say external exposure to the chemical is not a particular problem. They say the greater problem would have been if the PCB exposure had been internal and as the result of a fire, Morse said. In this case, he said, there was no fire.

The transformer, behind the shipyard cafeteria, showered oil on some workers and other equipment when it exploded, PCB, or polychlorinated biphenyl, was in the oil coolant, he said.

The level of PCB in the oil was not immediately determined, he said.

Democrats won't delay nominations

WASHINGTON — A top Senate Democrat said opponents of judicial nominee Daniel A. Manion may try to hold up Senate action on 38 judicial appointees, but backed off a threat to delay votes on the two Supreme Court nominees.

Sen. Alan Cranston, the Democratic whip, said opponents of Manion still hope to force Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas to call another vote on Manion.

"We should consider all our options, but it would be less likely we'd apply it to Supreme Court nominees," Cranston told reporters Tuesday after a weekly caucus of Democratic senators.

Cranston, of California, said the caucus did not formally adopt a position on strategy, but generally agreed it would be best to apply pressure on the Republicans through the other judicial nominations.

Cranston had said a day earlier that Democrats might consider delaying Senate votes on all judicial nominations, including Justice William Rehnquist as chief justice and Antonin Scalia for Rehnquist's seat on the Supreme Court.

Greece pushes for Syria's help

ATHENS, Greece — A Foreign Ministry official today told the sister of an American reporter kidnapped in Lebanon that Greece is encouraging Syria to intervene for the release of the reporter and four other American hostages.

"Because of its close ties with Syria and the personal link between Greek Premier (Kostas) Karamanlis and (Syrian) President (Hafez) Assad, the government is trying to do its best so that Syria intervenes for the release of the hostages," said Constantine Georgiou, secretary general of the ministry.

Georgiou met for 25 minutes with Peggy Say, whose brother, Terry Anderson, was kidnapped in Beirut, Lebanon, in March 1985. Anderson, 38, is chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

Say, 45, of Batavia, N.Y., was in Athens at the invitation of Margaret Papanicolaou, the U.S.-born wife of the Greek premier. Mrs. Papanicolaou visited Syria last week and discussed the hostages with Assad.

Nixon, Dobrynin meet on relations

MOSCOW — Former President Richard M. Nixon and Anatoly F. Dobrynin, the Kremlin's top adviser on U.S.-Soviet affairs, met today for two hours to discuss superpower relations, according to Nixon's spokesman.

Spokesman Joseph DeLorenzo declined to give any other details on the meeting, which he described as a working lunch in a Moscow hotel.

Nixon and Dobrynin, the Soviet ambassador to Washington from 1962-66, were expected to continue their conversation Friday, Taylor said.

Nixon arrived in Moscow on Saturday on what Taylor described as a private fact-finding visit. It was his first visit since the waning days of his presidency in 1974, when he met with then-Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

On Tuesday, Nixon met with President Andrei A. Gromyko and Georgi Arbatov, a Kremlin adviser on U.S.-Soviet affairs.

The former president has declined requests for interviews or photo sessions. He has been staying at a government guest house in the Lenin hills just outside central Moscow.

Zoo curator convicted of cruelty

GROVE, Pa. — A former zoo curator has been convicted of cruelty to animals charges stemming from the discovery of hundreds of dead and dying animals, including 150 burned puppies, on his farm.

Joseph W. Marchese, 46, of Norristown, was sentenced Tuesday to 90 days in jail and fined $5,300 after District Justice Elaine Berkoff found him guilty on 221 counts of cruelty to animals.

"These animals weren't just neglected. Many of them died and apparently suffered very much," the judge said.

Marchese, operator of an animal-exchange business and former curator of Norristown's Elmwood Park Zoo, could have received up to 90 days in jail and a $300 fine on each count.

He has 30 days to request a trial or begin serving his sentence.

Typhoon called one of China's worst
PEKING — Typhoon Peggy killed 172 people in Guangdong province, provincial officials said today. They called it the worst disaster to hit the southern coastal province in nearly four decades.

The officials at the provincial disaster prevention office, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said in telephone interviews that Typhoon Peggy also left 1,250 injured, destroyed 214,000 homes and damaged or washed away 2,200 bridges and 2,542 miles of electric power lines.

They estimated damages at $470 million and said about 1.35 million acres of farmland were flooded after the typhoon hit last Friday.

The officials said 3.67 million people were affected by the typhoon, which also killed at least 93 in the northern Philippines before hitting China. The official Xinhua News Agency reported earlier that soldiers had rescued more than 300,000 people trapped by floods.

Reagan asks panel to head off strike

By Matt Yoncy
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Heading off a possible nationwide railroad strike next week, President Reagan is directing an emergency panel to investigate the industry of the industry and six unions to agree to a new labor contract.

The creation of the three-member panel was announced by the White House late Tuesday, just 10 days before approximately 100,000 workers belonging to the six unions could strike the industry under law and trigger a nationwide walkout by 200,000 other rail workers honoring their picket lines.

Reagan's action effectively orders a 60-day cooling-off period. During that time the unions and the railroad cannot take any action against each other.

The White House said Reagan appointed the panel "on the recommendation of the National Mediation Board, which has notified the president that the situation appears critical."

In a statement, the administration said a nationwide strike would halt the flow of $700 million in goods daily and result in layoffs within a month of 1.1 million workers in industries dependent on rail transportation.

"In addition, railroads are one of the primary transporters of Department of Defense freight traffic, and a strike... could severely

Theater roof collapses

NEW YORK (AP) — The ceiling of a theater collapsed on moviegoers during the climax of "Psycho III," injuring three people, police said as cleanup crews cut through the debris today.

About a third of the Murray Hill theater's ceiling hit the balcony Tuesday night and fell into the orchestra section, said Charles Smith, city commissioner of buildings.

Department inspectors would examine the building today in an attempt to find out what caused the collapse, Smith said.

Picture yourself running your own business.

If you've been thinking about earning some money, you might want to consider coming to work for this newspaper as a carrier.

It's a lot like being in business for yourself. You do some selling. You deliver the product. You collect the money, and keep your records up to date. We show you the ropes, but after that you're on your own most of the time.

You learn a lot about how to handle various things — people, money, sometimes dogs. But, most of all, you get to help and handle yourself. And that's good to know, whatever you plan to do in life.

Interested? Call our circulation department, or stop by in person. During the week we can go into business together.

Detroit city workers picket in front of the City-County Building in downtown Detroit early Wednesday morning after nearly 40 percent of the city's workers went on strike shortly after midnight.

Detroit employees strike over dispute

DETROIT (AP) — City supervisors were placed in charge of water and sewage treatment plants as officials waited to see if other municipal workers would honor picket lines set up today by 7,000 city employees.

The workers struck at midnight Tuesday after bargainers for the city and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees failed to settle on a new contract.

The union subject to Reagan's order Tuesday represent carmen, firemen and others, electrical workers, machinists, signalmen and track layers.

The locomotive engineers are among five unions who have already reached agreement on new contracts with the industry in this round of bargaining.

The unions subject to Reagan's order Tuesday represent carmen, firemen and others, electrical workers, machinists, signalmen and track layers.

The strike was the second since 1980 in the nation's sixth-largest city. Meanwhile, workers in Philadelphia, the fifth-largest city, continued their strike for a third week.

Officials on both sides said talks Tuesday night produced no willingness to budge from earlier, widely varying wage proposals.

AFSCME Council 25, bargaining agent for 18 locals representing 7,000 of Detroit's 18,000 employees, insisted on a three-year contract offering wage increases of 12 percent, 7 percent and 7 percent, officials said.

Roger Cheek, chief Detroit negotiator, said the city could afford no more than a 2 percent pay boost the first year, but future wage adjustments would be tied to a formula based on the city's financial health.

That formula could provide AFSCME members with wage boosts of up to 6 percent on the contract's second and third years, Cheek said.

Rhode Island mill city plays host to busy cocaine trade

CENTRAL FALLS, R.I. — In this run-down mill city that federal agents call the cocaine capital of New England, the price of an ounce of some of the purest coke sold in the United States is down to $1,000.

"That means," says Detective Lt. Rudy J. Legenza, "there's a glut."

Legenza, 38, should know. He tests the undercover market whenever he can wheedle the price of a snort from the city budget of Mayor Carlos A. Silva Jr.

While an ounce of 80 to 90 percent coke sells for $1,000 in Central Falls, cocaine that is 90 percent diluted with lactose or quinine — "swill," Legenza calls it — sells for between $2,500 to $2,800 in Boston, 60 miles to the north.

Legenza insists that since there is no shortage of buyers in Central Falls, the present price indicates the city is flooded with cocaine.

Legenza estimates the illegal drug trade in Central Falls amounts to about $100 million a year, in a town of 17,500 residents where the opening of a new drug store makes news.

"The word is out," says Legenza. "You want good coke. You come to Central Falls."

LAW ENFORCEMENT officials are frustrated. "It's like putting your finger on mercury," says Lincoln Almond, the U.S. attorney for Rhode Island.

Mayor Silva, 42, a former fifth-grade teacher and life-long resident, reflects the town's anger over federal claims the city is a drug capital.

"They're free with their comments about our being No. 1," he says. "But when it comes to allocating federal money to fight drugs, we have to stand in line with everybody else."

Immigrants from the Andes mountain city of Medellin in Colombia control the cocaine traffic, says Paul Brown, assistant chief agent of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency's Boston office.

An estimated 4,500 to 9,000 Colombians, many in the United States illegally, now live in Central Falls, a poor, 90-year-old city built by French, Polish, Irish and Syrian immigrants. The Colombians began arriving 15 years ago when they were recruited to work in nearby textile mills, making Central Falls the third largest U.S. Colombian community after Hialeah, Fla., and Queens, N.Y., Brown says.

COLOMBIAN COMMUNITY leaders bristle at what they regard as a blanket accusation of their people. But the Rev. Dennis Brown says:

First Stelway was built in 1836

NEW YORK (AP) — The first Stelway piano was built by cabinet-maker Henry Engelhard Stelway in his kitchen in Seesen, Germany, in 1836.

It is on view at the Metropolitan Museum of Art as part of an exhibit representing pianos made during the years 1720 to 1872.

Today, the piano firm uses 12,000 parts to build a Stelway grand piano. The entire process takes one year. The Stelway factories in New York and Germany produce 3,000 pianos a year.

U.S. troops in Bolivia to aid fight vs. drugs

By Peter McFarren
The Associated Press

LA PAZ, Bolivia — About 180 U.S. Army troops, along with helicopters and transport planes, have begun arriving in Bolivia to aid the country's drug agents in a campaign to wipe out dozens of clandestine jungle-based cocaine labs, officials said.

U.S. officials who spoke Tuesday on condition of anonymity said the narcotics raids will be staged with the help of six U.S. Army Black Hawk assault helicopters, which were airlifted with their pilots Monday to Santa Cruz, about 200 miles east of La Paz.

The operation is being conducted at the invitation of the Bolivian government, said Mark Jacobs, press attache for the U.S. Embassy. He confirmed late Tuesday the arrival of the U.S. helicopters, four transport planes, and an unspecified number of "support personnel."

In Washington, White House deputy press secretary Edward Djerejian today put the number of Army personnel taking part at 160, and confirmed that six Black Hawk helicopters were involved.

He said the operation was approved by President Reagan.

The U.S. troops "will not participate in the actual operation, per se," Djerejian said. "They're in a support role, and I have to underline that. Every effort is being made to avoid placing U.S. personnel in situations where they might become involved in a confrontation."

The spokesman said that U.S. pilots would fly the helicopters, but that the Bolivian national police would direct the operation.

American officials in Bolivia, speaking on condition of anonymity, had said Tuesday that the raids would be coordinated by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration. Djerejian did not comment on the agency's role.

About 15 DEA officers are in Bolivia, and the American officials in Bolivia said they are expected to fly aboard the helicopters to coordinate the actions of Bolivian drug agents on the raids begin.

The U.S. pilots have been ordered to shoot back if fired upon, said one of the U.S. officials. A U.S. Embassy source said the American military personnel involved had been given diplomatic immunity.

Vivisection is a barbarous practice

Dear Abby: Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am across something you wrote some time ago and I must say God bless you for your stand on vivisection. It took great courage to speak out against inflicting endless torture...

Sometimes it is chanced to "No vivisection will be observed," but it means the same thing—the family does not wish to have people come to the funeral home...

DEAR ALICE: I think it's worth repeating. DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about vivisection, which is defined as "the cutting or operation on a living animal, usually for physiological or pathological investigation..."

ings perfectly when he said: "You do not settle whether an experiment is justified or not by merely showing that it is of some use. The distinction is not between useful and useless experiments but between barbarous and civilized behavior. Vivisection is a social evil because if it advances human knowledge it does so at the expense of human character."

Travelers said Tuesday that after it acquires Dillon Read, which is expected to occur early this fall, the firm would continue operating as an independent unit under the leadership of Nicholas Brady and John Birkelund, Dillon Read's co-chief executives.

New products flood shelves in record numbers in 1986

By Skis Wollenberg The Associated Press NEW YORK — New products ranging from cola-flavored bubble gum and veal hot dogs to a lemon-flavored beer showed up on grocery and drugstore shelves in record numbers in the first half of 1986, a study says.

Food manufacturers said they have been responding to the demands of increasingly health-conscious consumers who are willing to pay premium prices for a combination of convenience and high quality at mealtime. Industry analysts said the surge shows that foodmakers are driven to come up with new products or variations on products they have already successfully introduced in response to real or expected challenges from their competitors.

Lottery wins out over lunch

Town woman in 'joker' game

While most Manchester residents munched on lunch or tried to make a dent in that overgrown pile of office work early this afternoon, Mary Gessay was in New London thinking the Lord and raking in the money.

Gessay, 68, who lives on North School Street, was one of 20 finalists competing for a grand prize of $50,000 every year for 20 years in the "Joker's Wild" $1 Million drawing, which was held at noon today. Because there are 20 cash prizes in the drawing, the first of two, Gessay is guaranteed at least $5,000.

The 20 finalists were drawn by the South Windsor Seniors earlier this month from among the instant winning tickets submitted to the state. The second drawing will be held in the fall, according to lottery officials.

"I just can't believe I'm one of the finalists," Gessay said Wednesday. She attributed the selection of her name over millions of other "Joker's Wild" winners to God. A deeply religious person, she said that "if the Lord wants me to win it, I'll win it."

Gessay said she purchased the picked ticket at Andy's of Manchester on North Main Street - the only place to buy them. When the notification letter came in the mail, Gessay said she and her husband, Charles, were scared that it contained news of Social Security check problems.

Nothing like this has ever happened to her before, although Gessay noted that she had won her share of the $2 instant winner prizes.

Early today, a daughter who is familiar with the New London area took her to Ocean Beach Park, where the drawing was held.

Gessay said that the $5,000 she's assured of getting will help pay for siding that she's being put on her house.

"I'm not even thinking of that," Gessay said.

Controversial ex-registrar mulls run in 12th

By George Lyong Herald Reporter

Former Republican Registrar of Voters Frederick Peck, who was forced out of his job in 1984 after a dispute with party leaders, said this morning he is seriously considering running for the party's nomination in the 12th Assembly District.

Peck, 61, who was the GOP registrar for more than 30 years, said he would run against Democratic incumbent James R. McCavanaugh if Republican leaders asked him to. While saying that he would need financial support to

Moslems free Filipino nuns; American held

By Ruben G. Alabastro The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines - Moslem militiamen today released unharmed 10 Filipino nuns they had abducted six days ago, and one freed hostage told friends she felt like she had returned from "a picnic," a church official said.

"They were misty-eyed. They were crying out of joy that they have returned," Roman Catholic Bishop Fernando Capalla, who met the nuns upon their release, said in a telephone interview from his office in southern Iligan city.

The bishop said the nuns were from the Carmelite sisters were freed without any ransom being paid.

Enrile's spokesman, Ed Panglitan, said negotiations continued to obtain the release of Brian Lawrence, a 30-year-old Presbyterian evangelist from Madison, Wis., who was kidnapped by Moslems a day after the nuns' abduction on Friday.

The abductions took place in the Moslem city of Marawi, 15 miles south of Iligan and miles south of Manila on Mindano island.

Capalla, who helped negotiate the release of the hostages, said the kidnappers made three demands. He said they demanded no criminal charges be filed against them and that their leader, Juan Ponce Enrile, who first broke the Carmelite sisters were freed without any ransom being paid.

Bomber strikes Lebanon

By Holo Jobor The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - A suicide car bomber today blew up an explosive-laden BMW in the main square of Beirut, the largest Christian town in southern Lebanon, police reported.

The car was driven by a woman, and that she died in the 11:45 a.m. blast, which also wounded three civilians. Two cars were demolished and several shops were wrecked, police said.

The Syrian Social Nationalist Party, a leftist Lebanese faction backed by Syria, claimed responsibility for the attack.
