Democrats face challenging weekend

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Connecticut Democrats headed to Hartford today to begin what promises to be two days of raw politicking as Gov. William A. O'Neill tries to fend off the challenge of former Congressman Toby Moffett for the gubernatorial nomination.

O'Neill was supported by 483, or 75 percent and Moffett had 150, or 23 percent. The other 13, or 2 percent, said they were undecided.

O'Neill will be nominated by former Gov. John N. Dempsey Moffett said Thursday that if there is a primary for the treasurer's nomination he will support the candidate winning the convention endorsement.

There are two candidates vying for the treasurer's nomination: state Rep. Maurice E. Mosley of Waterbury and former Hartford Deputy Mayor Francisco L. Borges. O'Neill has remained neutral in that contest but said Thursday that if there is a primary for the treasurer's nomination he will support the candidate winning the convention endorsement.

O'Neill signs surplus distribution bill

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill has signed into law a bill distributing $83 million of the state's budget surplus, most of it to cities and towns to help them hold the line on local property taxes.

Weicker talk may spur GOP walkout

HARTFORD (AP) — Some delegates to next week's Republican State Convention are talking about staging a walkout on Sen. Lowell Weicker if he delivers the convention's keynote address, and state Sen. Thomas Scott says he is one of the best speakers for the job.

The maverick senator, who has a reputation for bucking his party's mainstream, said he did not feel up to making a traditional "rah-rah" show from the three contenders for the gubernatorial endorsement.

Workers ratify CL&P contract

WATERBURY — A Connecticut Light & Power Co. contract has been ratified by 196 workers who had rejected it last week when a similar contract covering 1,661 workers in another local was approved, a union official said.

Moffett delegate is charged in vote

WATERBURY (AP) — A member of the slate organized by Democratic gubernatorial challenger Toby Moffett was charged with absentee-ballot abuse in the city's May 20 Democratic delegate primary.

Frank DeBlasio, 49, was charged Thursday with four counts of illegal possession of absentee ballots and released on a written promise to appear today in Waterbury Superior Court, said Jules Lloyd, a detective at the Waterbury state's attorney's office.

Colombian charged in cocaine bust

GREENWICH — A Colombian national was arrested after authorities seized 4.4 pounds of cocaine in a parking lot, U.S. Attorney Stanley Twardy Jr. said.

Beach march

Summer campers move along Thursday during a hike from the center of Milford to the beach. Their trek was led by a group of several hundred campers who had walked 46 miles from The Gunner School in Washington.

The office does not plan to bring any charges in connection with the election he said. The absentee balloting strongly favored Gov. William A. O'Neill, who captured 99 of the 105 votes cast by mail.

AIDS protein for sale

By Susan Okulo
The Associated Press

WEST HAVEN — A biotechnology company says it will manufacture AIDS virus protein for commercial sale to researchers looking for a vaccine for the deadly disease.

Franklin Volovitz, president of MicroGeneSys Inc., said Thursday his company can grow the virus part by using technology that involves the use of gene splicing.

Dr. Warren Andiman, the medical director of the AIDS care program at Yale-New Haven Hospital, said the general idea behind the company's production technique is not unique in the production of protein.

Signs of vandalism remain at East Lyme's Christ Lutheran Church Thursday afternoon. Vandals also ransacked through the East Lyme Junior High School, and damage is estimated at more than $75,000.

'Demonic' vandals hit church, school

EAST LYME (AP) — Damage is estimated at $75,000 for a junior high school and a church where vandals apparently wielding sledgehammers left behind a path of destruction officials called senseless and demonic.

Early Thursday, the vandals smashed windows, destroyed bathroom fixtures, knocked over an altar, and tossed about computers and other office equipment at East Lyme Junior High School and the Christ Lutheran Church, located across the street from each other.

A dozen state and East Lyme police combed through the debris in a search for clues, but no arrest had been made as of late Thursday.

"There's a tremendous amount of damage," said Victor Lenda, the town's resident state trooper.

Parish secretary Harriet Young-claus, among the first to witness the vandalism, could only call it "demonic."

The church altar and baptismal font were tipped over, a hole was poked through the pulpit, a stained glass window was broken and a downstairs lavatory was flooded when the toilet was smashed.

Dodd says treaty means U.S. is no longer refuge

By Daniel Beegan
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., says he voted against a U.S.-British extradition treaty he once supported because it jumps all political violence in one category.

The treaty, approved 87-10 Thursday, makes it easier for Britain to win extradition of suspected Irish terrorists from the United States.

Dodd had voted for the treaty when it was approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but said in the end he could not support it.

"I do not happen to believe the words 'political violence' and 'terrorist' are synonymous," Dodd said in an interview. "Not all political violence is terrorism."

Under the previous extradition treaty between the United States and Great Britain, a person could have raised a political defense in federal court by arguing that their actions were motivated by political considerations, instead of crime.

Originally the new treaty would have left it up to the State Department, not the courts, to determine whether a political defense against extradition would be permitted in an individual case.

The final version approved by the committee retained some role for the courts, allowing a federal judge to block extradition if it was determined a person would face an unfair trial or punishment "by reason of his race, religion, nationality or political opinion."

But Dodd said he feared that court inquiry would be narrow, dealing only with whether there was reason to believe the person had committed a crime, and not with the reasons for it.

"What we have done here is to make it impossible to raise the political exception doctrine except in a very narrow way," Dodd said. Dodd said the treaty is a sign that America no longer will be a haven for the oppressed of the world.

Woman joins Catholic 'team'

NORTH BRANFORD (AP) — In what is believed to be a first, the Roman Catholic Church has appointed a lay woman to share a ministry of an established parish, the priest who will work with her said.

Elaine Blondin Kriedel, a Yale Divinity School graduate, and the Rev. Daniel F. McSheffery will work together at the 1,100-family St. Augustine's parish in North Branford starting Aug. 1, McSheffery said Thursday.

The two will form the first "designated ministry team" at an established Catholic parish, he said.

The appointment grew out of a program established in 1981 by the Most Rev. John F. Whealon, archbishop of Hartford, McSheffery said.

The designated ministry team concept was designed "to open parish administration not only to men but to women as well. This is not specifically directed to women," he said.

The team concept may eventually help address a shortage of Catholic priests, McSheffery said. The Catholic Church does not allow women to be priests, nor does it allow its priests to marry.

"As a small child, I dreamed of flying and I had dreamed of ministry," she said.

McSheffery said that a similar designated ministry team of a priest, male deacon and nun is working in Rocky Hill in a mission, an offshoot of a local parish. The new appointment marks the first time the team approach will be tried in an existing parish, he said.

Whealon made the appointments after consulting with St. Augustine parishioners, McSheffery said.

McSheffery is finishing a 12-year stay as pastor of St. George Church in Guilford. Kriedel is a 1981 graduate of the Yale Divinity School. Before attending Yale, she was director of religious education at St. Helena's Church in West Hartford and she also taught at Northwest Catholic High School.

The present pastor at St. Augustine's is retiring and the assistant pastor is being transferred, McSheffery said Kriedel will serve a six-year term.

McSheffery said he will move into St. Augustine's rectory, while Kriedel will continue to live in the West Hartford home she shares with her two sons.

The voters should decide

The governor's spokesman may well be correct to say that Toby Moffett is "whistling in the wind" as he claims to have enough convention delegates to force an electoral primary in September.

But if he is, it's just one more indication that something is rotten in the state of Connecticut.

Thursday morning, Moffett said his campaign was "there on paper." He was referring, of course, to having won the support of enough delegates to this weekend's Democratic State Convention to put the question of who should be the party nominee for governor this November before the voters.

O'Neill spokesman Charles Monagan quickly responded that Moffett's claim was "ridiculous."

"He's got 240 at the most," Monagan said scornfully.

If that's true, it isn't because the incumbent, Gov. William A. O'Neill, has won the hearts and minds of the people of Connecticut. Rather, it is so because the governor has called in every favor and oiled every cog in the party establishment in order to make the best use of a system scandalously weighted toward incumbents.

The final piece of the puzzle fell into place this week, when Moffett's lawsuit over the Waterbury delegate primary, which was marred by absentee ballot fraud, was tossed out of court on a technicality. Because the former Sixth District congressman and his attorneys failed to file within three days after the primary, a judge ruled the suit could not be heard on its merits. He handed down that ruling in spite of the fact that Moffett won at Waterbury's voting machines and would be over the primary threshold if he were to gain the support of the 49 delegates the city will send to the convention.

Laws are laws, O'Neill and his Democrats are quick to say, and they're right.

But in this case, the laws are keeping the rank and file Democrats of the state from having a proper say in the selection of their candidate for governor. They would do the same to the Republicans if given the chance.

More clearly than any in recent memory, the events of this campaign season have shown why Connecticut's election statutes — including the one setting the unrealistic requirement that evidence be gathered to indicate the need for a court to consider Republican irregularities within three days — need to be changed.

Because of those laws, a candidate who won almost 50 percent of the vote statewide during the May 20 delegate primaries can't even count on 20 percent of the 1,349 delegates who will attend the convention that opens tonight in Hartford. And because of those laws, an incumbent governor who fears to face a viable challenger at the polls might not have to.

If a sufficient number of the delegates who head for the Hartford Civic Center tonight really care about democracy, the party will give Toby Moffett his primary. Then, if enough of the voters care about their right to participate in the political process, they'll elect a Legislature this November that will give top priority to reforming Connecticut's archaic and unfair election laws.

A buzz on Capitol Hill?

By Lawrence L. Knutson

WASHINGTON — Fifty years ago this summer, Congress was struggling to adjourn for the year and presidential bees and partisan insects were buzzing about the heads of senators.

The Roosevelt administration was in its fourth year and facing a re-election contest in the fall and the programs of the New Deal were under attack.

Rising in full voice to the defense of those programs, Sen. Tom Connally, D-Texas, found himself fending off attacks from Republican colleagues described by him as "little pat-faceted anaemic politicians."

The attacks that caused Connally to vent his spleen involved accusations of alleged corruption in the management of a New Deal farm program, including the allegation that some farmers had received improper payments.

CONNALLY ROARED that some of the Republican senators attacking the program had voted for it in the first place, seeing the New Deal as the only port in the storm of the Great Depression.

IN 1936, said Connally, "with bees buzzing all around, a statesman's vision must expand as his opportunities to serve expand."

IN THESE CASES the justices agreed by a 7-2 majority that affirmative action goals and quotas may be used by employers to help any member of a minority group harmed by past discrimination.

So Connally said he understood the "mental processes" of New Deal opponents who had originally voted for major components of New Deal programs.

And he said of one opponent: "What changed his views from 1933 to 1936 except this great broadening expansion of the statesman's viewpoint when the bees begin to buzz around political cars."

When he saw a little flicker of light, a little ray coming up over the horizon, that offered political victory against the New Deal, against the present administration, then he began to think of politics again when he heard that little bee buzzing around and whispering in his ear.

It is 1986. Fifty years have passed. The 99th Congress has returned from the first of two summer vacations. Democrats have a chance in the fall to recapture the Senate from the Republicans who took control in 1980.

IN 1936, said Connally, "with bees buzzing all around, a statesman's vision must expand as his opportunities to serve expand."

IN THESE CASES the justices agreed by a 7-2 majority that affirmative action goals and quotas may be used by employers to help any member of a minority group harmed by past discrimination.

Diplomacy (sometimes) is profitable

WASHINGTON — By long tradition, American diplomats' wives — no matter how professionally talented they may be — have been expected to stifle any personal ambitions and serve as unpaid hostesses to their husbands' overseas posts.

Recently, though, some Foreign Service wives have urged that diplomatic spouses be put on the payroll for the "unofficial" duties they perform.

This reasonable proposal is being put into practice in Washington — but at such a high and selective level that it has aroused grumbling on Capitol Hill about "nepotism."

The employment of high-ranking State Department officials' family members smells like favoritism to some congressional staffers — and who could be more expert on the subject of jobs obtained by friends or relatives of influential persons?

"Even if it is not illegal it is surely unethical," griped one Senate aide. "It clearly indicates bias, even if it is done on a merit basis."

Senate sources gave our associate Lucette Laguard these examples of big shots' relatives who have landed well-paying jobs in Foggy Bottom:

Phyllis Habib, daughter of special envoy Philip Habib, the shuttle diplomat, is a support services officer in the State Department's family liaison office.

Sheppie Abramowitz, wife of Morton Abramowitz, assistant secretary for intelligence and research, is a GS-14 in the department's office of emergency operations, earning $48,000 a year.

Marlynn Holmes is the wife of assistant secretary Allen Holmes, who heads the bureau of politico-military affairs. She produces training films for the Foreign Service, and is paid about $58,000 a year to make movies that help Foreign Service families cope with terrorism and other problems they'll face overseas.

Sheila Platt, a trained social worker, is the wife of Nicholas Platt, the department's executive secretary. She works in the overseas briefing center of the Foreign Service Institute.

State Department people, the Senate aide said, "think they are special."

Troops arrive in Bolivia for raids

By Peter McFarren The Associated Press TRINIDAD, Bolivia — At least 100 U.S. troops arrived here Thursday and were making preparations with Bolivian police in what has been called the first time U.S. soldiers have been deployed abroad to fight the illegal drug trade.

The three C-130 Hercules U.S. transport planes carrying the troops arrived at the airport in this tropical city 360 miles northeast of La Paz from Howard Air Force Base in Panama.

Bolivian officials would not allow an Associated Press reporter to interview the U.S. servicemen. By noon, about 60 U.S. soldiers, some heavily armed and wearing helmets and knapsacks, boarded the Black Hawk helicopters that arrived aboard a Galaxy C-5A transport plane on Monday.

The helicopters were believed headed for the Jossani ranch, once the property of prosperous cocaine traffickers and now the base for the U.S.-Bolivian attempt to disrupt cocaine production and trafficking.

The base, set up by U.S. soldiers and Bolivian "Leopards" narcotics police, is about 70 miles northwest of Trinidad, in the midst of what is known as the Beni flatlands.

WASHINGTON — The House approved a $12.3 billion appropriation bill to run a variety of federal agencies in the 1987 fiscal year while abolishing the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

The scale-back appropriation bill, which would cut $450 million from the bill's original total of $12.8 billion, in effect freezing spending for the agencies at 1986 fiscal year levels.

The reduction was adopted after the House rejected a series of Republican amendments to cut programs such as the Legal Services Corp. and the Small Business Administration.

The bill stipulates that the $1.2 million earmarked for the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights be used only to close down the agency by Dec. 31.

Civil rights groups and critics in Congress have feuded with the commission's conservative majority, which reflects Reagan administration opposition to affirmative action programs to end job discrimination.

House critics, who argue the 29-year-old commission has become a "political instrument" of the Reagan administration, have proposed replacing it with a congressional civil rights office.

The House also agreed to cut the U.S. contribution to the United Nations from $299.1 million to $280.6 million.

U.S. servicemen stand next to a Blackhawk helicopter in Trinidad, Bolivia. At least 100 U.S. troops, including medical personnel and technicians, arrived Thursday as Bolivian police and U.S. pilots prepare to raid jungle cocaine factories.

Hawk helicopters would be used directly in the raids. "The U.S. forces will not participate in any way in the actions of repression," Barthelemy said. "It is not foreseen that the helicopters will act in combat. It is expected they will be used only to transport personnel."

Information Minister Herman Antelo, who appeared with Barthelmy at a news conference, denied reports that the jungle raids were already under way.

"There have not been any operations yet," he said.

Both Antelo and Barthelemy refused to say when the raids would begin. They said such a disclosure would be a tip-off to cocaine producers.

A bad court season for the administration

WASHINGTON — Although no one at the White House or the Justice Department will admit it publicly, members of both are glad this year's Supreme Court term has come to an end.

They are eagerly looking forward to the court's reconvening in September when William Rehnquist will preside and Antonin Scalia will take his place on the bench.

Time after time in the term just ended, the government's positions — that is, the Reagan administration's positions — have been rejected. Some longtime Supreme Court observers say they can't remember a term in which the government lost so many important decisions.

Going into the just-completed 1985-86 term the Justice Department had three major issues on its agenda regarding the Supreme Court: to have it reverse its prior ruling legalizing abortion, to rule that voluntary prayers in public schools are constitutional and to end minority job quotas attached to so-called affirmative action programs. On these issues the Justice Department went 0-3.

of a race that should be discriminated against in the past, should receive preferential treatment. It is on this basis the administration has argued that affirmative action programs, which give hiring or promotional preferences because of past discrimination, are wrong — that they amount to reverse discrimination. But this contention was rejected by the Supreme Court in two key affirmative action cases this term.

IN THESE CASES the justices agreed by a 7-2 majority that affirmative action goals and quotas may be used by employers to help any member of a minority group harmed by past discrimination.

any reason for doing so. But the court ruled that such disqualifications are unconstitutional if the disqualification of potential jurors is based on their race.

PUBLICLY, ALL Solicitor General Charles Fried, the government's lawyer in Supreme Court cases, will say about this term is "We've won quite a lot of cases, but we're not keeping score."

Privately, however, Fried and other administration officials are sounding a bit like losing baseball managers with their "wait till next year" pronouncements.

The entire 17 years of the Burger Court have been marked by narrow majorities on key cases, and continual inconsistencies as the court's rulings have been dictated by a shifting center that leans one day to the left, the next to the right, depending upon the individual case.

For instance, in this term, while it was decided that criminal prosecutors could not attempt to shape a jury by rejecting potential members for racial reasons, the court ruled it was constitutional to keep ardent death-penalty foes off juries, despite evidence that doing so makes juries more conviction-prone.

Much of the blame for this inconsistency is placed on Burger, whose imperious style has alienated several justices in the philosophical center of the court and has not allowed for the kind of consensus building that makes for clear, decisive and consistent rulings.

The administration's hope is that with the elevation of Rehnquist and the addition of Scalia, they, along with Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, will form a conservative nucleus which will attract enough votes from the court's center — Justices John Paul Stevens, Lewis Powell and Byron White — to give conservatives a consistent majority. This would give the administration the kind of court victories it has been predicting, but has not seen materialize, over the past several years.

IN ONE OF ITS MAJOR opinions of the term, the Supreme Court reaffirmed, by a 5-4 vote, the landmark 1973 decision legalizing abortion by striking down a set of Pennsylvania regulations that would have made abortions more difficult to obtain. The Justice Department had urged the Supreme Court to use the case to overturn the previous abortion ruling.

Likewise, by the same 5-4 margin, the justices ducked a decision that would have affirmed the right of a public high school in Williamsport, Pa., to allow students to meet during school activity periods for prayer and religious worship. The administration had argued that students should be allowed to conduct such meetings.

At the center of the Reagan administration's civil rights program is the idea that all laws should be "color blind." Any law that gives preference based on race is wrong, and any people who can show they have been personally discriminated against — as opposed to merely

Shuttle crew unaware of trouble, tapes show

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crew members of the space shuttle Challenger were unaware they were in danger in the final moments before their spacecraft exploded, according to NASA's preliminary analysis of a newly restored tape recording from the flight.

The tape, recovered from the ocean floor with the orbiter crew cabin six weeks after the Jan. 28 accident, gives no indication the seven astronauts knew the shuttle was in trouble, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said in a statement Thursday.

The statement marked the first time the space agency had addressed anything associated with the last moments of the shuttle, all of whom were killed when the ship exploded in a fireball 73 seconds after launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

"Preliminary analysis of the tape shows the crew was unaware of the events associated with the tragedy and the internal communications were being maintained as would be expected during a normal ascent," NASA said.

It has been a subject of speculation since the accident whether, in the moments before their deaths, the crew knew something was Corralling a bum steer By James Jacoby Today's declarer has to make some decisions early. Should he duck the opening heart lead all around, for example? Then he can win the second heart in dummy and force out the ace of clubs. After that, he can play diamonds by leading the queen, intending to play the suit to keep West off lead. But what if West switches to the spade jack after being allowed to hold the first heart trick? That could be dangerous, right? Because there is no easy answer, it seems OK for South to win the first heart trick with the ace and lead a low diamond. That is what happened, and it worked out very well. West played the 10, dummy's jack winning the trick. Now a club was played to West's ace, and West led another heart to dummy's king. Declarer returned to hand with a club and tabbed the diamond queen. When the king appeared, declarer had 11 tricks. So what's the problem? West missed a chance to steer South wrong. When the low diamond is led at trick two, let West put up the king. What will declarer then think? If he decides that West has the king alone, he will finesse back in diamonds against the presumed 10 in East's hand. West will win the 10, clear the heart suit and set the hand when he wins the club ace. It's true that South doesn't need all five diamond tricks for his contract after the king has appeared, but it would not be unusual for declarer to be a little greedy under these circumstances. Stephen Sondheim and James Lapine won the 1985 Pulitzer Prize for drama with their 'Sunday in the Park with George.'

William A. Doyle correct, until that last step. But you're wrong in assuming you subtract your reinvested tax-free dividends from your profit to determine your taxable profit. The calculation of the basis and the profit from redemption is done the same way on both types of mutual funds. Reinvested dividends increase your basis and, as a result, reduce your profit when you redeem - whether those dividends are taxable or tax-free. Doing the calculation the way you propose would use tax-free dividends to reduce your profit twice. Mutual funds holding municipal bonds are called "tax-free" funds because they collect tax-free interest from those bonds and pass that money along to fund shareholders as dividends, also tax free. You have a choice of taking mutual fund dividends by check or reinvesting them. When you reinvest, you're adding to your investment just as you would do by sending more money to the fund. Then, there's the "average cost" method, through which you total up your cost and divide by the number of shares you own. The resulting number is your basis per share. If you do it that way, it's called the "single-category" average cost method. You can also use the "double-category" average cost method and figure your average cost for shares owned for six months or less and for shares owned for more than six months. Under present tax law, profit from the sale of shares in the first group is fully taxable, while only 40 percent of the profit from the sale of "long-term" shares is taxable. QUESTION: If I redeem some - not all - of my mutual fund shares, how do I calculate my cost basis for tax purposes? Can I apply the first-in-first-out "FIFO" method I was taught in high school? ANSWER: You can use FIFO, under which the shares you redeem will be those you have held the longest. There are two other methods - "specific identification" and "average cost." With the specific identification method, also called the "identified share" method, you select the shares you purchase at a certain time, either by purchase or reinvestment - and instruct the fund to redeem those shares. This method comes in handy if you want to redeem your highest cost shares, thereby producing the lowest taxable profit - or even a loss. QUESTION: If I switch from one mutual fund to another, within the same "family of funds," how is that treated for tax purposes? ANSWER: As a sale and a purchase. If you had a profit on the shares redeemed in the first fund, that profit is taxable as a capital gain - either long or short term, depending on how long you owned the shares. QUESTION: If I switch from one mutual fund to another, within the same "family of funds," how is that treated for tax purposes? ANSWER: As a sale and a purchase. Figuring taxable profits on mutual funds is tricky

QUESTION: I have investments in two mutual funds. One holds stocks and pays dividends and pays dividends to income tax. The other holds municipal bonds and pays tax-free dividends. I reinvest my dividends in both funds to buy additional shares. I'll probably redeem all the shares in both funds when I retire and will then have to figure out my profit for tax purposes. You explained that calculation should be done by adding up all the money an investor put into a mutual fund, plus all reinvested dividends and capital gains distributions. That total is the investor's "basis." The difference between that basis and the amount received

Business In Brief

Aetna to keep auto rates steady HARTFORD - Aetna Life & Casualty announced it will freeze car insurance rates for the rest of the year, saying new legislative reforms in the civil justice system made a planned September increase unnecessary. The move will save drivers and businesses more than $1 million, the company said in a prepared statement released Thursday. Present rates were found to be adequate in light of the state Legislature's approval this session of reforms in how liability judgments are awarded and apportioned, said company spokesman Albert Abend. Aetna is the state's second-largest provider of private automobile insurance and underwrites more than 100,000 car insurance policies in Connecticut, the company said.

Machine dispenses investment advice

By John Yearwood The Associated Press WINDSOR LOCKS - George Teems was just killing some time at Bradley International Airport when he decided to consult a tall, gray machine about financing his 11-year-old daughter's future college education. The device Teems consulted is known as "The Money Making Machine" and is installed and operated by Advest Inc., a Hartford-based brokerage firm. The company has two additional terminals at Boston's Logan Airport and believes it is the only firm to have such devices. Hundreds of people have used the machines since they were introduced earlier this month, said Mel Schilloni, senior vice president and director of marketing at Advest. He said the company would have exact figures on how many people have consulted the machines and how much new business they have generated in about a month. "The results so far have been very encouraging," Schilloni said. Designed by Advest and Digital Techniques Inc. of Burlington, Mass., the computer-linked terminals have animation and sound effects, but are not video games. They are free to operate, and travelers can consult them for financial advice ranging from getting a loan to making investments. "They don't make investment decisions. It doesn't point to specific investments," Schilloni said. "It gives you investment choices. For example, 'What would a mortgage cost me?'" Schilloni said someone looking for mortgage information would provide the machine with answers to various questions that appear on its screen, such as his or her salary range. The answers are given by touching one of several buttons on the screen. The machine will compute a repayment plan based on current interest rates and 20 years of market history. "It may be that the machine would answer, 'Get a larger salary,'" Schilloni said. "It may say, 'You can't afford it.'" He said the machines don't make specific recommendations, because it would be unethical for Advest to do so without knowing the users. Travelers wanting more information are provided three ways to contact Advest. They can put their names and addresses into the machines, drop their business cards into a slot, or take an Advest brochure with a mail-in reply form. "I don't have to do anything now, they will get in touch with me," Teems said before catching his flight. Teems provides the computer with his name and home address. Schilloni said his firm's next step was to install similar machines at other airports within its service area, which includes 13 states and the District of Columbia. Advest's 82 offices are located in Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire, Virginia, Maine, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Ohio and Florida. "Other locations are under consideration," he said, although he couldn't say when any decision on additional terminals would be made.

American Can dedicates Ohio plant

BELLEUE, Ohio - American Can Co.'s new $15.9 million plant here will employ 160 workers in another year, a spokesman said. The plant was dedicated Thursday. Production on two lines began several weeks ago, American spokesman Norm Whately said, adding that five other lines will be added in the next year. The plant, on the Huron-Sandusky county line about 20 miles south of Sandusky, produces lightweight plastic containers for the H. Heinz Co. and Welch Foods. American Can operates packaging plants in Cleveland and the Toledo suburb of Whitehouse. Sale of the company's packaging business to Triangle Industries Inc. was announced Thursday in New York. Triangle owns National Can Corp. American Can, based in Greenwich, Conn., operates financial services and specialty retailing businesses.

Exxon to appeal federal award

BRIDGEPORT - Exxon Corp. says it will appeal a federal jury award of $10.1 million to a man who claimed the company renege on promises it made when it recruited him as an executive. Tuesday's award in U.S. District Court in Bridgeport to Ian J. Dowie of Westport was "totally unjustified" and Exxon will pursue the case at the trial court level and "if necessary, in the appellate court," Exxon spokeswoman Sarah Johnson said Wednesday.

Coleco reports lower earnings

WEST HARTFORD (AP) - Coleco Industries Inc. reported Thursday its second-quarter profit plunged 93 percent to $1.1 million or 6 cents a share compared to $17.5 million or 88 cents a share in the same period of 1985. Second-quarter sales dropped 32 percent to $127.4 million, compared with $197.9 million a year ago when Cabbage Patch Kids products alone were selling at an annual pace of $600 million, the company said in a statement. Coleco Chairman Arnold Greenberg said Cabbage Patch Kids sales for 1986 will be "well below" the 1985 level. For the six months ended June 28, Coleco posted a profit of $6.8 million, or 40 cents a share, off 81.6 percent from the profit of $36.9 million, or $1.88 a share, reported in the first half of 1985. First-half sales of $242.3 million were 36.9 percent below comparable 1985 sales of $382 million. Greenberg called 1986 "an important transitional year for Coleco," which he said is investing heavily "to facilitate the evolution of the Cabbage Patch Kids into an important and enduring brand, to strengthen our internal creative and development staffs and to acquire licenses, product lines and product opportunities for the future." As a result, he said operating results for the remainder of 1986 will compare "very unfavorably with those for the respective 1985 periods." On July 1, Coleco completed acquisition of Selchow & Righter Co. for $69 million. Earlier in 1986 Coleco acquired Lakeside Industries.

Bolton gets lesson on school bill

BOLTON — About 15 officials and teachers listened Thursday as members of the Board of Education outlined the education enhancement act passed by the General Assembly and its ramifications for their town.

With the bill, School Superintendent Richard Packman said, "Connecticut will be producing the highest-paid teachers in the country." Packman, who recently attended a seminar in order to understand the bill more thoroughly, gave most of the presentation at the board's summer meeting.

Calling the document a "massive piece of legislation," Packman said that the town now must consider reopening teacher contract talks — something that involves the Board of Education, the Bolton Education Association and the town's fiscal authority, considered to be either the Board of Finance, a town meeting or combination of the two. Teachers currently are in the third of a three-year contract, so the town would be reopening anyway, Packman said.

Bolton is eligible to receive a bonus of $152,260 over three years for enhancement of salaries if it meets requirements that include participating in the minimum aid grant program and negotiating teacher pay increases above the salary levels. The extra funds, according to Packman, would be treated as revenue to the school system.

The town will have to participate in the minimum aid program because, according to Packman, 29 of its teachers are below the state trigger minimum of about $20,000.

The town would also receive part of a general education grant if the board and union agreed to the three-year minimum salary plan that meets state requirements. The money would go to the school board teacher's salary account, according to T. Dye Hooper, a member of the board who also attended the seminar.

"This is not going to take us any further than we are anyway but the state is going to fund us," board member Barry Stearns said.

Packman speculated that the money would come to the town in the spring after teacher negotiations. He said that Dec. 1 is the deadline for applying for the grant and estimated that the money would come after negotiations take place.

Tobacco ad ban has unlikely allies

George M. O'Brien, Illinois representative

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. George M. O'Brien, R-Ill., died Thursday. He had been suffering from prostate cancer and died at the National Cancer Institute in nearby Bethesda, Md., said Ted Cormane, the congressman's press secretary.

O'Brien died around 5:30 p.m., Hyde said. He had been suffering from prostate cancer and died at the National Cancer Institute in nearby Bethesda, Md., said Ted Cormane, the congressman's press secretary.

O'Brien announced his retirement in May after doctors discovered a new cancerous growth. He was admitted to the hospital on May 16 but was later sent home, Cormane said. O'Brien was re-admitted to the cancer institute's intensive-care ward on Sunday, the spokesman added.

O'Brien withdrew from the 4th District congressional race May 16 because of health problems, including the prostate cancer and severe arthritis. He was replaced on the Nov. 4 ballot by state Rep. Jack Davis of New Lenox, Ill.

A native of Chicago, O'Brien was elected to the House in 1972. He was a member of the House Appropriations Committee and the ranking Republican on the panel's Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary subcommittee.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., called O'Brien "an honorable and superb public servant," adding, "He was kind and he was genuine. He had a good sense of where partisanship gives way to cooperation."

Hyde made the announcement of O'Brien's death on the House floor while members were debating a $12.8 billion appropriation bill to finance the Commerce, Justice, and State departments.

WASHINGTON — Captain Kangaroo and the son of the late tobacco magnate R.J. Reynolds are joining the medical establishment in urging Congress to ban all advertising of tobacco products.

Bob Keeshan, a longtime cigarette smoker who created the Captain Kangaroo television character, and Patrick Reynolds, an actor who no longer owns stock in the tobacco empire begun by his family in 1913, were to testify before a House subcommittee today.

Also set to appear was Victoria Brynner, the daughter of actor Yul Brynner, a heavy smoker who before he died of lung cancer made an anti-smoking television commercial being broadcast now.

One notable absentee is Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, a longtime foe of cigarette smoking who supports a ban on tobacco advertising.

The Washington Post reported Thursday that White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan had killed Koop's testimony, which would have favored the ban. A White House spokesman said the Reagan administration objects to having its officials appear in tandem with outside witnesses.

Spokesman Albert B. Brashear said the administration has not decided whether to support the bill. When it does present its views, "We prefer it be done with the administration testifying on its own," he said.

Congressional committees often schedule panels of witnesses representing various organizations, who present their prepared testimony in written form and then are questioned by committee members.

Brashear said Koop may testify later. The subcommittee on health and the environment already has scheduled a second hearing for Aug. 1. The panel, chaired by Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., is considering the best congressional approach to tobacco advertising.

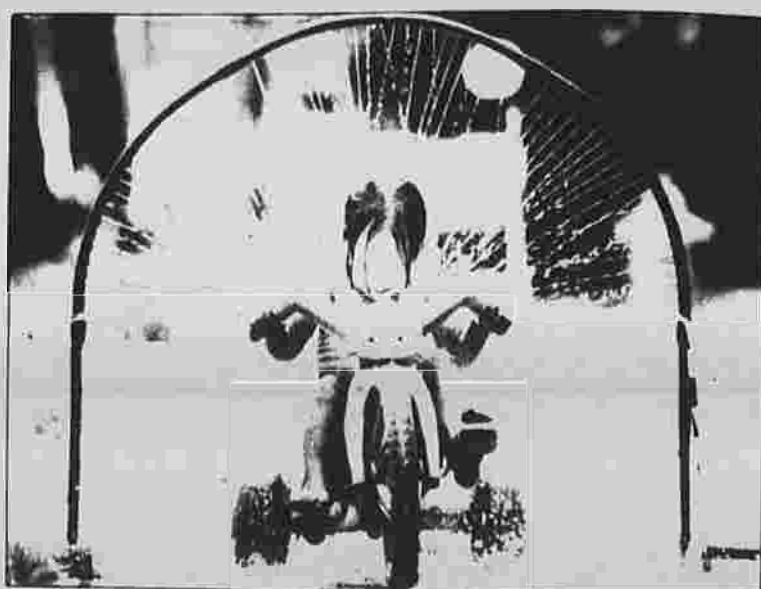

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., last month introduced a bill that would outlaw all promotion and advertising of tobacco products — in newspapers and magazines, on billboards and even as part of sales displays.

The measure is supported by the American Medical Association, whose representatives also were scheduled to testify today. Other physician groups also were expected to support the bill.

Synar and representatives of the advertising and tobacco industry, who oppose his bill, are expected to testify at the Aug. 1 hearing.

Congress banned cigarette advertising from the airwaves 15 years ago and prohibited the broadcast of ads for smokeless tobacco products earlier this year. But to date, no federal restrictions on printed advertising of tobacco products have been imposed.

In 1939, some 75,000 people gathered at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington to hear black singer Marian Anderson after she was barred from performing at Constitution Hall.

'Psychic' juror right

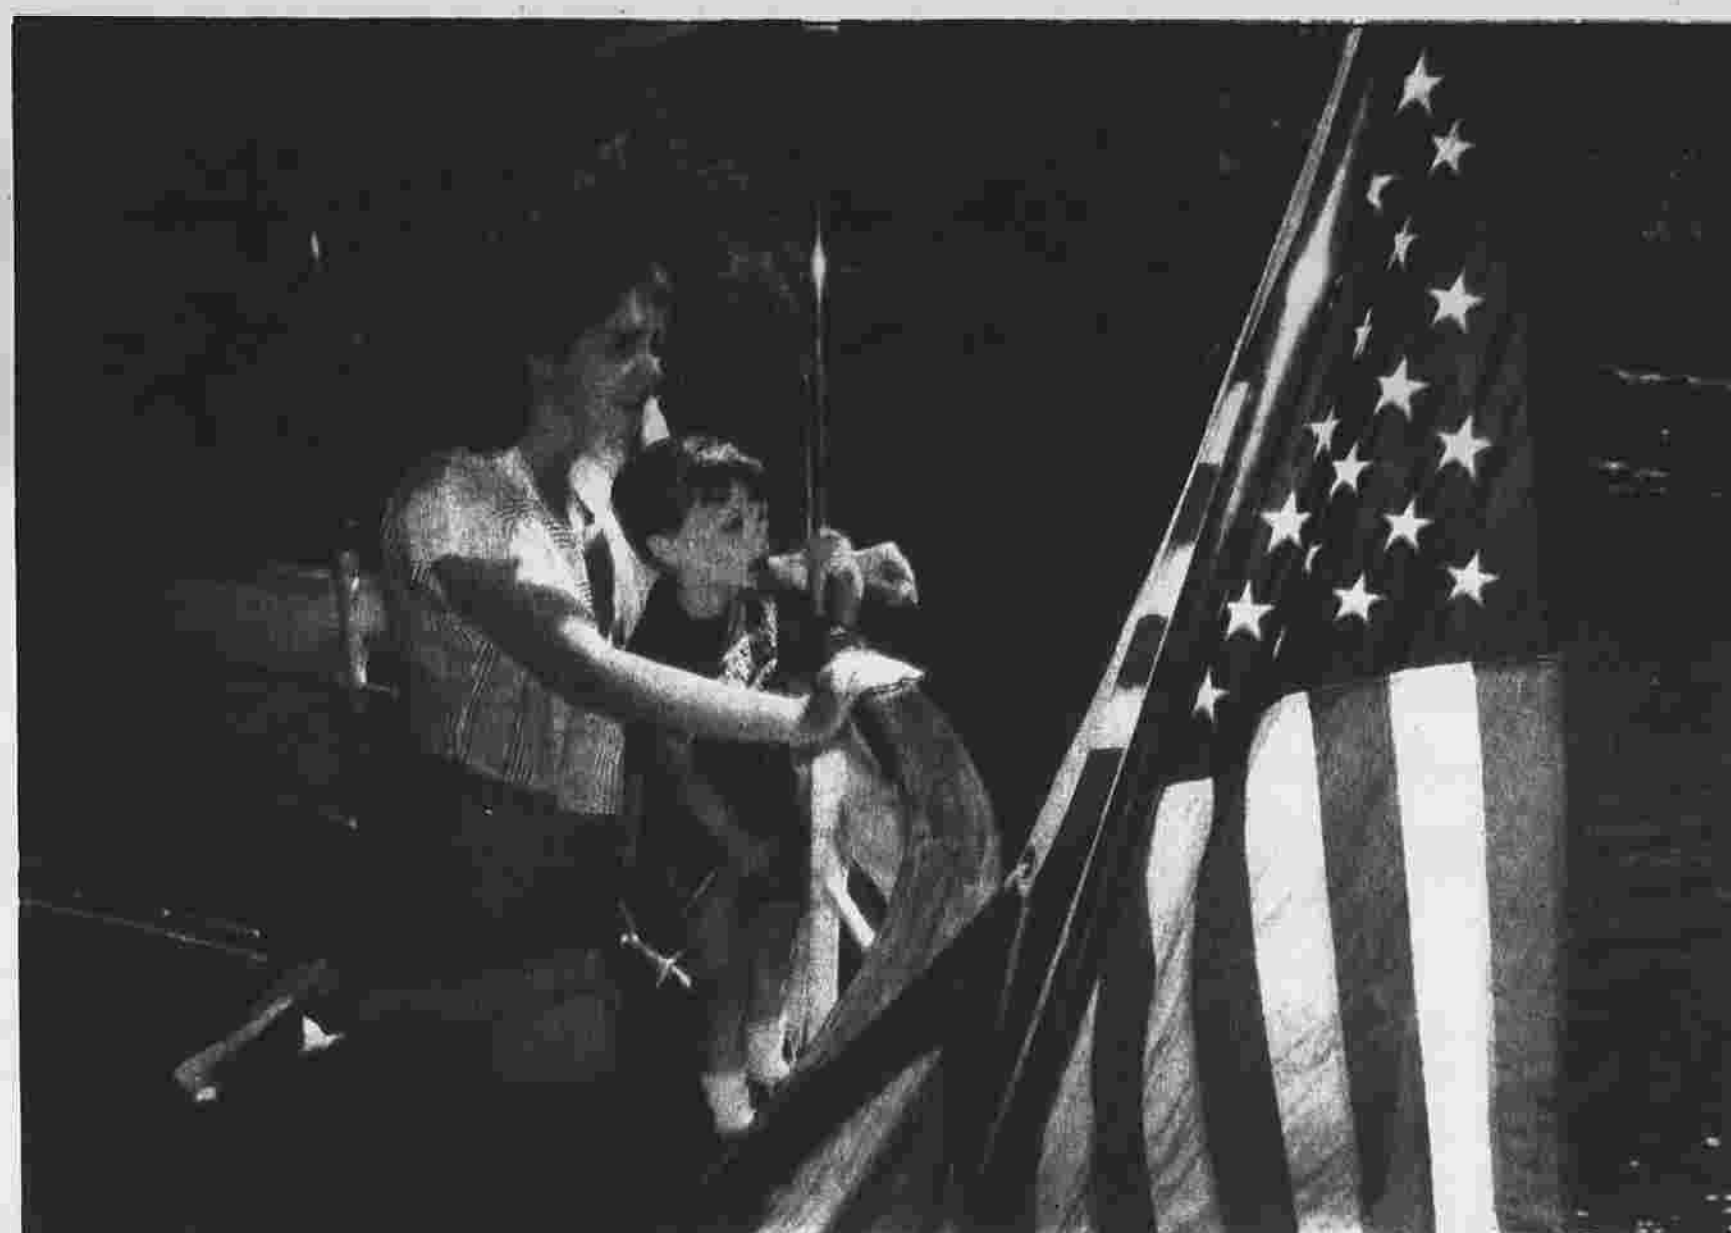

DENVER (AP) — A woman who described herself as a psychic was excused from a jury after announcing she already knew the verdict predicted in a sealed note to the judge that the defendant would be found guilty, and he was.

Daryl Keith Pitts, 18, was convicted Thursday of burglary, two days after District Judge Robert Fullerton released Lynette Todd from jury duty. Todd, in a note that Fullerton kept sealed in his desk, predicted the outcome.

Fullerton opened the note in chambers, watched by lawyers on both sides and all 12 jurors, who learned of the note only after returning their own verdict. "I believe Mr. Pitts did commit the crime," Todd wrote.

Todd, told of the news at her job as a secretary at St. Joseph Hospital, said she knew as soon as she saw Pitts, even before knowing the charges against him, that he was guilty. She said she has taken and taught classes on psychic powers but doesn't use her abilities professionally. "I think everyone has psychic ability," she said.

Cruisin' on the river

An hour's ride aboard Lady Fenwick is just long enough

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter

You don't need a foggy day to hear a foghorn on a steamship. That's obvious when you take a ride on the antique-style steam cruiser known as the Lady Fenwick, docked in Hartford on the Connecticut River.

Captain Steven Lee startles his passengers with a blast of his foghorn each time he leaves his mooring.

"You always do that when you leave a dock," said Lee, in response to a questioning glance from a passenger. "It doesn't matter what the weather is like."

The boat pulled away from a new dock called Charter Oak Landing, which sits on a rectangle of wooded land bounded by the Connecticut River, Interstate 91 and the Founders Bridge.

THE DOCK IS so new, in fact, that the Deep River Navigation Co. hasn't yet put up a sign which will reassure visitors that they've come to the right spot.

Hourly cruises out of Hartford on the Lady Fenwick began in mid-June. Many passengers still pull into the parking lot, and ask each other, "Is this it?" "Have we come to the right place?"

It's a logical question, since access to the Charter Oak Landing is circuitous. From east of the river, for example, visitors must take Interstate Route 84 to Exit 52, then make an immediate left onto the dyke where the landing has been constructed.

Columbus Boulevard, and then another left onto Sheldon Street, an unmarked street which is the first left after the overpass.

"It's so difficult to get to the riverfront. Most people have no idea how to get over here, or what's really down here," said Julie Braun of Riverfront Recapture, the non-profit agency which wants to make it easier for people to enjoy the shores of the Connecticut River.

RIVERFRONT RECAPTURE, which coordinates many of Hartford's July 4th events, was instrumental in persuading Deep River Navigation to establish steamer service out of Hartford. "We felt it was an important step in attracting more people to the shore area," Braun said.

It's the first such service offered in the area since 1931, said Lee. Back then, Lee told his passengers over a loudspeaker on a recent cruise, passengers were charged a quarter for a trip by steamer from Hartford to a dock near Wall Street in Manhattan. The price included the 18-hour ride, a corned-beef-and-cabbage dinner, and a bunk for the night.

These days, no dinners are offered on the Lady Fenwick.

though passengers are welcome to bring picnic lunches and there's a snack bar. The price is now $3.50 for an hour's cruise, which turns around at Wethersfield Cove and returns to Hartford.

THE BOAT TRIP is long enough to satisfy the small fry, who outnumbered the adults on a recent afternoon cruise. Toward the end of the hour's ride, the children seemed anxious to get off the boat — or at least, to soothe their restlessness with a trip to the boat's ornate snack bar. An assortment of refreshments, including wine, beer and candy boxes, is sold from a gleaming mahogany counter.

"Although the Lady Fenwick is less than five years old, she is built to look like a Victorian steamer," explained Henry Thorpe, Deep River's general manager. The deckhouse is gleaming mahogany; the passengers' benches are cast from Victorian molds, and the seats are made of rosewood.

"But below the water line, the antique appearance completely disappears," Thorpe said. "It's got everything required to meet modern stability requirements." In spite of thunderstorms that recently passed through the region, the waters during a recent trip seemed calm as Lee took his passengers down the river, then into Wethersfield Cove.

A FEW PINT-SIZED passengers smiled and waved to the fishermen sitting on wooden pilings or rocky ledges beneath 1-91. The men, though, did not return the greetings. The youngsters' attention soon turned elsewhere. They were distracted by small aircraft zooming overhead and landing at nearby Brainard Airport. The return trip to Hartford saw most small passengers scanning the skies for low-flying planes, as the grownups looked over the Hartford Electric and United Technologies buildings along the shoreline.

The view of the Hartford skyline was arresting. "I've lived in this town all my life, but I never saw it looking like that," said one mother, herding three children together. "That's worth the trip. Really."

One-hour cruises from Charter Oak Landing on the Lady Fenwick are offered seven days a week, from noon until 4 p.m. Adults $3.50, children $2. 90-minute cocktail cruises, with Dixieland banjo music, are offered at 5:30 and 7:30 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays. Adults $6, children $3. On weekend evenings, the boat is available for private rentals.

BEVERLY DEAR POLLY: This is for the mother of the 18-month-old son who would rather play than eat. My son at 18 months was the same except that all he would eat was dry Cheerios and hot dogs. After weeks of this, I called the doctor and he said if that's all he'll eat, give it to him three times a day. Eventually, he will eat other things, don't force him. So I did just that for six months. Every so often I gave him scrambled eggs or mashed potatoes.

Advice

Drug testing draws readers' reviews

DEAR ABBY: I totally agree with your objections to mandatory drug testing for everyone. I am in the military, and we take urinalysis tests at least once a month. Since I have never used drugs and I never plan to, I was not afraid of these tests. That is until recently.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Abby, I am one of the unlucky 10 percent who have never used drugs but came up positive on the test for the use of marijuana, and you would not believe what I have been going through. I had planned to make the military my career, but my chances are ruined. I have lost the respect of my seniors in command and lost some of my so-called friends. My family and I have been harassed. And I have been branded a liar.

The military is very strict on drugs, and they should be. However, when innocent people are found "guilty" of something they never dreamed of doing, there is something wrong with the system. I came up positive in March. It's now July, and I am still fighting the charge. I was told it would be resolved in six months. Meanwhile, I am up for special court-martial, and if convicted I will have a federal record and go to jail. They can take my rank, my pay and I will be discharged under less than honorable conditions.

I was always proud to be a Marine, but how can I be proud when I am terrified of losing everything I have worked for?

HEARTSICK IN HAWAII

DEAR HEARTSICK: I, too, am heartsick. However, in the interest of fairness, I present an opposing view:

DEAR ABBY: Your recent column on urine testing for drugs in the workplace repeats a common and dangerous myth: The unreliability of urine testing. While it is true that a single unconfirmed urine test can be wrong as long as the reasons, such errors are not common and they are in any well-run program, irrelevant. A few years ago, when some companies did use unconfirmed tests to discharge employees, there was a serious problem. Today virtually all companies using urine testing have improved their techniques to assure reliability. First, positive tests are confirmed using a different method of analysis, the possibility of some non-drug substance causing a "false" positive under such circumstances is virtually zero. In addition, companies routinely keep samples which test positive for subsequent analysis so that if an employee protests that his test results were in error, the company can retest the same sample. Thus when urine tests for drugs are done correctly, there is no problem with reliability.

Another problem has sometimes been used by opponents of testing to undermine public support for urine testing at work: the fact that drug use off the job can show up as a positive test in urine samples taken on the job. The fact that a urine sample taken on the job contains a prohibited drug or its breakdown product shows conclusively that the employee brought the drug to work in his body. In other words, urinalysis does not test for "past use" — it tests for drugs present in the body at the time of the testing.

There is no alternative to urine testing to ensure that the workplace is drug-free. Testing does not serve your understanding and support.

Two treatments for muscle weakness

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had myasthenia gravis off and on for about 12 years. Is there anything new in the treatment for this disease?

Dr. Gott Peter Gott, M.D.

Myasthenia gravis is a chronic disease of muscle weakness caused by a defect in transmission of nerve signals from nerves to muscles. There are two basic forms of treatment.

Certain drugs (in the anticholinesterase group) improve electrical conduction from nerves to muscles. These medicines act quickly and are safe, but — by themselves — rarely restore completely normal function. They are used temporarily to relieve symptoms. Neostigmine and pyridostigmine are the most commonly administered medications. Most patients (and doctors) are more interested in treatment that is curative and permanent. Cortisone has been shown to produce long-term beneficial effects in up to 80 percent of patients. Its method of action is unclear and, unfortunately, the drug has side effects when used for long periods.

During the past few years, specialists have become more enthusiastic about surgical treatment of myasthenia. During surgery, the thymus gland is removed. This technique is quite safe and is said to produce remission or significant improvement in about 85 percent of cases. The operation is not recommended for children, the elderly or those who have a mild form of the disease.

In most medical cases, each case of myasthenia is judged individually. Initially, anticholinesterase drugs may be used to control the disease. Then, depending on the severity of the condition, cortisone may be considered. Finally, thymectomy may be judged to be the most appropriate permanent solution.

More information about this disease can be obtained from the Myasthenia Gravis Foundation, 15 East 20th St., Suite 1603, New York, NY 10010.

Make your spatula when in a scrape

DEAR POLLY: I thought up this idea one day when my rubber spatula broke. Take a plastic snap-on lid such as that from a coffee can or margarine tub. Cut off just the rim from half of it (but leave the lid whole). Hold it using the rimmed edge for a grip and the rimless edge for a scraping surface. This will scrape out batter, cookie dough and other items from bowls nicely.

Pointers Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY: Here's my method for avoiding twisted sheets in the washer. My washer instructions suggest you pick up the sheet from the middle and let it hang.

then fold it over lightly and put in the washer. Balance the load with another sheet or other items. I haven't had a problem with this method. This is a good idea for tablecloths also.

EMMA

DEAR POLLY: Don't throw away those plastic shoe boxes you bought years ago. They are ideal for storing cancelled checks.

Thoughts

"You are illegitimate children" (He 12:8). What type of person would the Bible label as such? The one who is "left without discipline" (He 12:7). According to the author of Hebrews, if you are not disciplined it means you are not loved (He 12:6). There are many teens today who long to be disciplined, for in it they would know they are loved, and by it their self-esteem would improve. Perhaps this is one reason why many students enjoy team sports for it takes a certain amount of discipline which leads to the making of a better person. Discipline can reflect a genuine love.

Drug abuse is the biggest problem facing teenagers today (Gallop Youth Survey, 1983) as two out of three teens will have tried drugs prior to graduation. In many cases this reflects a lack of discipline among other things. It is a tested low self-esteem and therefore greater self-destructive actions. Remember, lack of discipline, according to Hebrews 12, is tested to lack of love. When one does not experience the giving and recep-ing of love, then one feels "homeless," "worthless," or perhaps "illegitimate."

There is some good news. God loves you. God cares enough about you to discipline you. God's ways of discipline are easily found in scripture. God's discipline will make you feel better about yourself and others. It will help you work through problems. Like good coaching, it will help you set goals and strive toward them. It will enable you to know love — to give and receive it. God is your "parent" who wants you to realize that you are God's child. Therefore, no one is illegitimate, except by one's own choice, because God always loves all of us to discipline us in a way that leads to life abundant, together, and eternal. Let God love you. No one who is part of God's family is illegitimate.

DEAR POLLY: I thought up this idea one day when my rubber spatula broke. Take a plastic snap-on lid such as that from a coffee can or margarine tub. Cut off just the rim from half of it (but leave the lid whole). Hold it using the rimmed edge for a grip and the rimless edge for a scraping surface. This will scrape out batter, cookie dough and other items from bowls nicely.

DEAR POLLY: Don't throw away those plastic shoe boxes you bought years ago. They are ideal for storing cancelled checks.

MRS. MARY D.

DEAR POLLY: Here's my method for avoiding twisted sheets in the washer. My washer instructions suggest you pick up the sheet from the middle and let it hang.

PHILADELPHIA — The paintings of the late abstract expressionist Franz Kline are becoming more and more fragile as the years pass, and the current traveling retrospective just may be the last major gathering of the artist's works. There are 75 paintings and 25 works on paper in the exhibit. "The Vital Gesture: Franz Kline in Retrospect," which runs through Sept. 28 at the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts. This is the last stop, and the only one on the East Coast, for the show organized by the Cincinnati Art Museum. SPORTS Red Sox slammed

SEATTLE (AP) — Jim Presley hit an 11th-inning grand slam to mount winners of pitcher Pete Ladd and the Seattle Mariners and the Seattle reliever wanted to donate his victory to starter Mark Langston. Presley connected off Boston reliever Bob Stanley for his second grand slam of the season to lead Seattle to a 5-1 win over the Red Sox Thursday. He allowed just four hits, struck out 11 and allowed just one unearned run. "Mark was just outstanding tonight. Just like he has been for the last two months," said Ladd. Seattle's winning rally started with two outs in the 11th. Harold Reynolds reached first on a throwing error by Red Sox shortstop Rey Quinones. He then stole second. Stanley, 5-3, intentionally walked John Moses, but followed by walking Phil Bradley to load the bases. Presley took a 2-2 slider from Stanley and belted it 50 rows deep in the left field stands for his 19th homer. "I threw him a hanging slider. It was right in his wheel house," admitted the Boston reliever. "When I give one up, it isn't a cheap one." "When I heard the crack of the bat, it reminded me of the first game of the season," said Ladd of Presley's homer. The Seattle All-

Wealth in hands of few

By Martin Crutsinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Census Bureau, in its first-ever assessment of wealth in America, said Friday that the top 12 percent of American families control almost 40 percent of household wealth, while the typical black family has less than one-tenth of the assets of a white family.

The report showed a wide gap between the wealthiest families and the poorest, with the two groups differing significantly in terms of race and education.

The study said that the typical American family had a net worth of $22,687 when the statistics were gathered in late 1984, with by far the biggest portion of this wealth, 41 percent, accounted for by equity in the home.

Another 17 percent of the median family's net worth was deposited in interest-bearing accounts in banks and other financial institutions while stocks and mutual funds accounted for 7 percent of total household wealth.

The study found that the typical black household had a net worth of just $3,397, less than one-tenth of the typical white family, which had a median net worth of $29,135. Hispanic families fared only slightly better with a median net worth of $4,913.

At the very top, the report said the wealthiest 12 percent of American families had a median net worth of $128,474 and accounted for 38 percent of all household wealth in the country. This group controlled 89 percent of all stocks and 83 percent of all bonds and money market funds.

This top 12 percent, which earned $48,000 or more in income each year, was predominantly white, well-educated and employed in white-collar jobs or owners of their own businesses.

Newport News gets Trident work

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Navy, in a step toward finding a second producer for Trident missile submarines, awarded a $4-million maintenance contract Friday to the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. for a submarine that was built by the General Dynamics Corp.

The contract, valued at $4 million, will allow Newport News to become familiar with the Trident submarine and the Navy hopes, make a final commitment to begin bidding to build the giant submarine from scratch.

The nuclear-powered Tridents are now made solely by General Dynamics' Electric Boat Division in Groton, Conn. The only other American shipyard capable of building the boats is Newport News, which currently makes nuclear-powered attack submarines and aircraft carriers.

Newport News Shipbuilding is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Newport News Corp., and is headquartered in Newport News, Va.

The Navy, in a brief contract announcement, said Friday it was awarding Newport News a contract worth $3,981,760 for "post-shakedown availability work" on the Nevada.

"Work will be performed in Newport News, Va., and is expected to be completed Jan. 26, 1987," the Navy said.

The Nevada is the nation's eighth Trident submarine and began its sea trials earlier this summer. The two 8-year-olds, both from Manchester, look over a tiddy bar constructed from cotton balls, one of many craft activities offered at the Girl Scout day camp. Story, more photos in today's Weekend Plus magazine.

Brain tumor puts Dick Houser out

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD - Hundreds of boisterous Connecticut Democrats on Friday night opened their two-day state convention, where the gubernatorial challenge of former U.S. Rep. Toby Moffett against Gov. William A. O'Neill is on the line.

Moffett was fighting for the support of 270, or 20 percent of the convention delegates, the level he needs to qualify for a primary against O'Neill in September.

Friday's convention schedule was chiefly ceremonial and lasted only 90 minutes. Former U.S. Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., delivered the keynote address and made no attempt to sound neutral.

"Bill O'Neill brings to the bid for re-election an unassailable record of accomplishment," Ribicoff said, as O'Neill supporters burst into applause.

Moffett loyalists began chanting "Toby! Toby!" and later, "Primary! Primary!"

Ribicoff did depart from his prepared remarks as the chanting continued to say, "Toby Moffett was a great congressman who served the 8th District with great leadership. He is a credit to the state of Connecticut whether he wins or loses at any time. He is a man who made history in the state of Connecticut."

The Moffett crowd erupted with applause and resumed their chant. State Party Chairman Timothy J. Moynihan had to repeatedly hand the gavel to bring the raucous Moffett delegates to order. Many Moffett sympathizers were angry that Moffett was not introduced at the opening of the convention.

Ribicoff ticked off several of O'Neill's accomplishments and made a point of noting the state's healthy fiscal status.

Moffett said he was too busy working on delegates to listen to Ribicoff's speech and said he didn't care about it. He said he wasn't surprised by Ribicoff's endorsement of O'Neill, noting that Ribicoff was on O'Neill's campaign committee.

O'Neill said he was confident he could fend off Moffett's challenge. While Moffett said Friday afternoon that he was "hovering at the 270 mark," He needs the support of 270 of the 1,348 delegates to force a primary.

"I think we're over the top, 274, 275 (delegates)," Moffett said. "We're here to do one thing: get qualified, get the heck out of here and head to September."

State Rep. Jonathan Peltz, a key O'Neill strategist, said Moffett was far short of 270. "He's 34 short. He's still significantly short."

"Toby Moffett is certainly not close to 20 percent. He's engaged in political meandering ... (and) wishful thinking," he added.

The roll call Saturday will mark the culmination of months of sometimes bitter campaigning between the two. Moffett's campaign theme has been that O'Neill is simply an "ordinary governor in an extraordinary state" and that Connecticut deserves better.

O'Neill has campaigned on his record, frequently pointing to the state of Connecticut's economy; unemployment is half the national average, 3.5 percent, and income is so strong that the state has been able to put $208 million into a "rainy day fund" at the same time it has cut taxes by almost $300 million in the past two years.

Also to be nominated Saturday is U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd, who is seeking a second term and is not being challenged. There also will be nominations for lieutenant governor, secretary of state, treasurer, attorney general and comptroller.

Manicure turns out in force

By George Lovino

HARTFORD - Manchester Mayor Barbara Weinberg will give the nominating speech today for gubernatorial challenger Toby Moffett's choice for lieutenant governor - Richard Sontag of Stamford.

Weinberg, who headed a slate of Moffett delegates that unsuccessfully challenged the slate of 23 delegates Manchester sent to the convention, said she was asked Friday afternoon by Moffett campaign manager Marc Capner to deliver the speech.

Weinberg said she had never met Sontag before, but was honored to be chosen.

O'Neill delegates had cleared the auditorium Friday night, she chatted with Sontag in the middle of a sea of empty chairs. Only a security guard covering Sontag was present during their discussion. While talking to Sontag, she was preparing her speech.

Weinberg, who wore a royal blue baseball cap with a "Toby" sticker on the front, denied she was asked to make the speech a trade-off for not being chosen to run for the post of secretary of the state on the Moffett ticket.

Although some people might have considered it a compliment, Democratic Town Director Peter DiRosa said he was surprised and a little taken aback by having been mistaken for Toby Moffett.
