Manchester - A City of Village Charm

Wednesday, July 30, 1986 25 Cents

Tom Neale, 13, and Steve Tkaczuk, 16, both of Manchester, ride their bicycles along a section of the bikeway that runs through the Burr Corners Commuter Parking Lot. Another link of the trail is being built along Interstate 84, and plans call for the entire network to stretch nearly 20 miles from Vernon to Hartford.

Bikeway could ease recreation war

By George Lovno
Herald Reporter

Some sections of the long-planned "bikeway" have already been completed, while others are under construction or are in the works. If all goes according to plan, the 19.7-mile path would stretch from Vernon Circle to South Windsor, Manchester, East Hartford and across the Connecticut River into Hartford.

But if the project stalls, what has already been completed may become nothing more than a "white elephant," according to William O'Neill, one of the project's promoters.

O'Neill, a former Manchester public works director who is now president of Fuss and O'Neill Consulting Engineers and a member of the town's Advisory Park and Recreation Commission, said recently that if the bikeway is not finished, those sections that exist or will be completed in the next few years might be forgotten and missed.

Undeterred, O'Neill said he will

Instead of offering a safe path through town, the asphalt trail might become a dead-end hangout for people to drink alcohol, take drugs and get into trouble, O'Neill said.

The path already suffered one major setback this spring when the General Assembly killed a proposal, introduced by state Sen. Carl Zinsner, R-Manchester, to provide state funding to build one link through southern Manchester from Charter Oak Park along Interstate 84 to Spencer Street.

The bill, which asked for $750,000, also included funds for a study of ways the path could be extended into Hartford over the Charter Oak Bridge. Despite support from Manchester officials, including Town Manager Robert Weiss, local state legislators and biking and running groups, the proposal was defeated in the Legislature's Finance Committee.

Foremost among these is money. "Does the state want to spend that kind of money when we have potholes all over the place? That's what it comes down to," Zinsner said. He said legislators from other towns would rather see the money be spent on projects that have a greater impact on more people.

However, Zinsner said funding for the project might be found in the state's growing budget surplus. Since a section of it is already being built in conjunction with the widening of Interstate 84, now is the logical time to complete the work, he said.

Panel seeks to relieve parched South

By Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Members of Congress, saying volunteer hay shipments into the parched Southeast will not meet long-term needs for drought relief, today put legislation on a fast track to offer surplus government-owned grain to the region's farmers.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, said his panel would act on the bill immediately, and similar legislation was being moved through the Senate.

"This is everything we can do short of making it rain, which the good Lord can do," de la Garza said at a Capitol Hill news conference with a bipartisan group of House members.

The group had mild criticism for the drought relief efforts thus far of the Agriculture Department, saying administration officials are not fully using the authority they have to provide aid to farmers in affected areas.

The House bill would require that the department donate surplus feed grains - or commodity certificates that could be sold or exchanged for hay - to farmers in counties where livestock and poultry feed is in critical shortage.

It also would require use of current authority the department has to offer half-price emergency feed to farmers in other disaster areas, and would allow producers to make use of hay growing on acres they had agreed to idle under crop price-support programs.

Other provisions would pay up to 80 percent of transportation costs for moving hay from surplus areas to places where it is needed, and would allow distressed dairy farmers to delay the assessments they otherwise would have to pay under the milk price support program.

"Why let a person suffer when you have already paid for the commodities?" de la Garza said of the proposal, which would for the most part not count as spending for budget purposes.

He said moving the grain to Southeastern farmers could also relieve another problem, that of tight storage space in Midwestern grain elevators. Storage is 93 percent full nationwide with a bumper crop of corn less than six weeks from harvest.

White the Agriculture Department is declaring some counties disaster areas, making them eligible for low-interest loans, the lawmakers said that aid would be of little use to many farmers.

"My farmers probably wouldn't even apply for new loans, because they can't even service the loans they already have," said Rep. Charles Hatcher, D-Ga., adding that outright grants to farmers are what is needed.

"The crop's destroyed," said Rep. Alex McMillan, R-N.C., of the burned-up hayfields in his livestock producing district. "It's time for the government to come forward."

In the Senate, Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., has proposed an amendment to an unrelated bill before the lawmakers that would require similar federal relief actions, including making available to farmers at least 75 percent of the loans and other crop benefits they would have gotten had their crops not been damaged by drought.

State Republicans are expected to return to court this week in an effort to open their Sept. 9 primary to unaffiliated voters. In a motion to be filed in federal court this week, the party will argue that opening the primary would not cause the major administrative problems claimed by state officials opposing the move. Some car buyers find state laws taxing

By The Associated Press

When Connecticut's sales tax of 7 1/2 percent is added to the car's price, it's enough to drive some customers away, Thibodeau said.

Robert Marconi, a sales manager of Barco Motors in Stafford, said he is feeling the law's effects, too. He even had one customer who had to pay taxes on the same car to both Connecticut and Massachusetts.

A Mercury Lynx bought by Maureen H. DeDominicis added $346 to Massachusetts's coffers and $396 to Connecticut's, despite her protests.

"I was quite upset," DeDominicis said. "I wasn't going to pay it, but I also didn't want to wait and go through the courts." DeDominicis lives in Southbridge, Mass., and works in Stafford, where she bought her car.

She had already paid the Massachusetts tax on the car when she was billed about five months later by the state of Connecticut, she said. The tax bill was split between DeDominicis and her car dealer and paid.

Paquale Barbato, deputy commissioner of the state Department of Revenue Services, said people who don't live in Connecticut, but who buy and use their cars here can be taxed. But Barbato said there is no crackdown on out-of-state car sales.

"It's not new," Barbato said of the enforcement. "We're not going after shoppers or people who are here casually. We're just trying to protect Connecticut taxpayers."

Meanwhile, the Connecticut legislature is taking steps to tax commuters directly. A bill was passed this spring aimed at finding out how much commuters use state roads and how much damage they cause.

"We don't know how much wear and tear they're inflicting on our roads and how much they're using our facilities," said Richard Mattoon, a staff attorney for the legislature's Finance Committee.

So now engineers are counting the cars that go back and forth, trying to figure out how much Connecticut can tax the out-of-state commuters.

Variable cloudiness Thursday with a 30 percent chance of a shower or thunderstorm today and tonight.

Across the nation

A blanket of hot air fueled a record-breaking heat wave from the Southeast to the southern Plains, while rain was scattered today from the East to the nation's midsection. Severe thunderstorms rumbled ahead of a cold front moving across the northern Plains while showers and thunderstorms were scattered along the northern and mid-Atlantic Coast and across New York, Pennsylvania and the Mississippi Valley. Hot and humid conditions prevailed across the southern Plains and lower Mississippi Valley, with early morning temperatures in the 80s. The mass of hot air from the Southeast coast to Kansas led to high temperature records in 16 cities Tuesday, including Tulsa, Okla., 110 degrees, and Dodge City, Kan., where the 109-degree reading broke a 110-year-old record by one degree. Temperatures were on the low side in much of New England, the Great Lakes region and from the northwest Plains to the Pacific Northwest, with early morning readings in the 50s to 60s. Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms over the upper Mississippi Valley, the northwest Great Lakes region and from New England across New York, eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Today in history

In 1975, former Teamsters President Jimmy Hoffa disappeared as he was trying to recapture control of the union he once headed. His exact fate remains a mystery.

Almanac

Today is Wednesday, July 30, the 211th day of 1986. There are 154 days left in the year. Today's Highlight in History: On July 30th, 1792, the French national anthem "La Marseillaise" was first sung in Paris. On this date: In 1619, the first representative assembly in America convened in Jamestown, Va. In 1729, Baltimore was founded. In 1864, during the Civil War, Union forces tried to take Petersburg, Va., by first exploding a mine under Confederate defense lines that left a huge crater. The attack failed. In 1916, German saboteurs blew up a munitions plant on Black Tom Island near Jersey City, N.J. In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a bill creating a women's auxiliary agency in the Navy. The legislation was called Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service, or "WAVES." In 1965, President Lyndon Johnson signed Medicare into law. In 1975, former Teamsters President Jimmy Hoffa disappeared as he was trying to recapture control of the union he once headed. His exact fate remains a mystery. Ten years ago: Bruce Jenner won the gold medal in the decathlon at the Montreal Summer Olympics, beating out Guido Kratschmer of West Germany and Nikolai Avilov of the Soviet Union.

Tarca wages primary for high sheriff's post

By George Lovig Herald Reporter

Deputy Sheriff John Tarca of Plainville has decided to wage a September primary against Alfred Rioux of Newton for the Democratic nomination for Hartford County high sheriff. Tarca, 36, has filed papers with the secretary of the state's office that will allow him to compete in the Sept. 9 runoff. Although Tarca was beaten by Rioux by almost 100 votes at last Wednesday's nomination convention, he earned the support of 20 percent of the delegates needed to force a primary. "I think the voters should decide on it," Tarca said Tuesday.

Although he has been accused of being the "handpicked" successor of retiring High Sheriff Patrick Hogan, Tarca Tuesday turned the tables on the delegates from larger towns who supported Rioux, calling them "handpicked." Tarca vowed the outcome would be different in the primary because rank-and-file Democrats would vote for him — especially in light of his 25 years of experience as a deputy sheriff. Rioux, Newton's Democratic town chairman, has never worked for the sheriff's office, Tarca notes. However, Rioux — who has vowed to reform what he sees as a system of political patronage — claims to have studied the department's operations and developed a detailed plan for revamping its operations. His plans include hiring sheriffs based on qualifications rather than political affiliations, conducting annual audits, instituting continuing in-service training for deputies and a dress code, and the creation of a manual that would outline the job's duties. In Connecticut, the sheriff's office is one of the last vestiges of the government at the county level. Deputies work on a commission basis, serving court papers for attorneys and providing court security.

Rioux said if elected, he would carefully review the background and experience of the current deputy sheriffs to see if they should be reappointed to new one-year terms. Tarca said one reason he decided to challenge Rioux for the party's backing was to make sure present deputy sheriffs would not lose their jobs. He said when he won the endorsement of the Hartford County Sheriffs Association earlier this year, he promised to wage a primary if he lost the nomination. Rioux, who in 1982 qualified for a primary against Hogan but decided Tuesday he was not angry with Tarca for challenging him.

"If I was in his position, I'd do the same thing," he said. Rioux said he decided not to primary against Hogan in 1982 because he planned to run again this year. He also said he does not think the primary will divide the party and improve the chances of Republican candidate Stephen Nick Polts of Hartford. "I'm not concerned at all, to tell you the truth," said Rioux. "I'd like to avoid the primary if I can. I'd rather campaign as the Democratic candidate against the Republican candidate."

Rioux, who was the choice of Manchester's delegation, also said Tarca may still decide not to primary. He said Tarca has until Aug. 20 to drop out and noted that in 1982, he also filed the necessary papers to challenge Hogan in a primary but decided against it. However, Tarca said he was definitely going to primary and vowed to work hard for the support of the 29 towns that are in Hartford County. Rioux also vowed to put in long hours on the campaign trail, and said he will meet Thursday with his supporters to organize a finance committee and appoint local coordinators in each town. Hogan is retiring after 25 years in office and is scheduled to retire in July 1987.

Bikeway's final path remains in question

If the bikeway-walkway proposed for Manchester and surrounding towns is completed, it would be the longest of its kind in the state, even the toughest of athletes will be challenged by its 19.8 miles of twists and turns. However, only 2 1/2 miles has thus far been built, and another 3 1/2 miles is under construction. The remaining distance is either slated for completion by 1990 or is awaiting approval. The section that exists originally was the Burr Corners Commuter Parking Lot in northwest Manchester, from which paths extend in two directions. One runs south along Broad Street to the intersection with Tolland Turnpike. The other stretches west near Pleasant Valley Road and Burnham Street, turns south and goes along Chapel Street to Wickham Park. The total distance is 2.7 miles. But in order for this section to be built, additional money is necessary. A request for funding was turned down by the General Assembly this spring. Three other sections of the network are scheduled to be built, including an extension of the existing section of the bike path on Chapel Road north about 1 1/2 miles into South Windsor. The work should be completed in two to three years. Another leg, measuring about 1 1/4 miles, is included in Manchester's preliminary plans for widening Tolland Turnpike. The blueprints provide for an eight-foot-wide path along the northern side of the road up to Deming Street, according to acting Town Engineer William Comosel. Comosel said the plans are subject to a public hearing that will be held before the end of the year. If approved, the section should be completed by 1990, he said. The third leg would pick up the trail where it ended on Deming Street, and continue east along Route 85 into Talcootville and Vernon Circle — a total distance of about two miles. O'Neill said he hopes the state will build the path as part of its project to widen and resurface Route 82. The final section would stretch west along Interstate 84 in East Hartford into Hartford over the Charter Oak Bridge.

Manchester, 1990: exercise, no war

The project was first proposed in 1973 by town officials who saw the growing interest in biking, jogging and walking, according to O'Neill. Originally, plans called for the path to extend from Charter Oak Park to MCC along I-384. However, as the oil crisis struck the country in the early 1970s, planners also saw the project as a way of helping commuters. Other links were added to the blueprints, until a network was created on paper that could allow people to bike to work. The first section of the network connects to the Burr Corners commuter parking lot in northwest Manchester. Another is currently being built along Interstate 84 from East Hartford to Manchester. Links would also extend into South Windsor, along Route 83 to Vernon Circle, and in what the bikeway's promoters see as perhaps its major attraction, over the Connecticut River into Hartford. Critics have said the path could create a number of problems. Instead of being used by bikers and joggers, opponents fear motorists will take over the trail and risk injuring other users.

Manchester In Brief

Public school spending in local towns has gone up almost 9 percent in the 1984-85 school year, according to a recently released report. Manchester schools, which have seen a drop of students over the past five years from 8,100 to 7,000, spent an average of $5,281 for each pupil in 1984-85, according to a report by the Connecticut Public Expenditure Council. The figure is over $300 more per student than in the previous year. Andover, which had 400 pupils in 1984-85, spent $3,305 for each student, nearly $400 more than the year before. Bolton spent $2,910 for each of its 707 pupils, a $200 increase, and Coventry went from $2,702 to $3,047. Coventry has 1,621 students. In statewide ranking, Manchester was 100 among the 169 towns in total per-pupil spending. Andover was 64, Bolton 154 and Coventry 106. Total spending for public schools in Connecticut reached $1.88 billion in 1984-85, over $4,000 for each pupil, according to the report. Officials attribute the increase to communities that raised teacher salaries and to the grants the state government offered. UConn luncheon honors Seger. A former Democratic state representative from Manchester was honored Tuesday for his contributions in helping to establish the University of Connecticut as a state school. Edward D. Seger, who has lived in Manchester since 1973, was honored during a luncheon at the university's Faculty-Alumni Center. Featured guests included Rep. Jonathan Pelto, D-Manfield. Seger, then one of the youngest legislators in the state, also established the School of Pharmacy at UConn.

Republicans to seek open primary

HARTFORD (AP) — State Republicans are expected to return to court this week in an effort to open their Sept. 9 primary to unaffiliated voters.

In a motion to be filed in federal court this week, the party will argue that opening the primary would not cause the major administrative problems claimed by state officials opposing the move.

Under the Republican rules, unaffiliated voters could vote only for statewide offices, not in General Assembly contests.

Bozzuto calls for speedy ballot probe

HARTFORD (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Richard C. Bozzuto is calling on Gov. William O'Neill to intervene and speed up an investigation into absentee ballot abuse in the May 20 delegate primary in Waterbury.

O'Neill defeated challenger Toby Moffett in the delegate primary by 43 votes to win Waterbury's 48 delegates to the Democratic state convention July 18-19.

Bozzuto said he expects to spend $300,000 to win his party's endorsement in the Sept. 9 primary.

Red tape stalls college repair projects

HARTFORD (AP) — More than 100 college building and renovation projects are being delayed by a maze of reviews, delaying the start of projects and driving up costs.

Officials at UConn put together a chart in an effort to trace the procedure. They mapped out a 52-step process involving nine state agencies.

Director of management services, agrees the process is cumbersome. He said the steps are checks and balances "so the public and General Assembly can have assurance and confidence in what we are doing with state money."

Morrison hits loans to Chile

WASHINGTON — Chile has such a poor human rights record the United States is required by law to oppose international development bank loans to the South American nation, says Rep. Bruce Morrison.

Morrison, a member of the House Banking subcommittee that oversees international loans, led a delegation to Chile in April on a six-day fact-finding trip sponsored by the Washington Office on Latin America.

He released a report from the delegation that he said showed human rights violations were so severe as to justify a cutoff of international loans.

Nation's 1st AIDS hospital formed

HOUSTON — The nation's first hospital dedicated solely to research and treatment of AIDS was created Tuesday and officials said it should advance the search for a drug to combat the dreaded disease.

Officials of American Medical International Inc. signed an agreement Tuesday with the University of Texas to set up the hospital, to be known as the Institute for Immunological Disorders.

Under the agreement, American Medical International is providing the hospital, management and staff of 100 to 150 people, while the University of Texas System supplies faculty staffing and direction.

Pretoria pact means textile trouble

By Mike Robinson
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Critics of Reagan administration trade policy say a newly disclosed agreement with South Africa will fuel their drive to override a presidential veto in the House next week.

The June 27 agreement, limiting South Africa to 4 percent annual growth in textile shipments to the United States for five years, leaked on Capitol Hill and was published in the Washington Post Tuesday.

The Reagan administration defended its action, with White House spokesman Larry Speakes saying the agreement was needed to put a lid on burgeoning imports of textiles from South Africa.

Health care bite keeps on growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health care's highest consumer, $425 billion last year, the highest level in history and equivalent to 10.7 percent of all goods and services produced by the U.S. economy, the government said Tuesday.

Administration, said the slower rate of medical spending was due largely to "the improved economic climate under the Reagan administration."

Private insurance paid 31 percent of the bills, while direct payments by consumers covered 28 percent.

Tax bargaining produces Senate offer

WASHINGTON — Congressional negotiations on revising the federal estate tax produced a House bargainers' proposal — a first sign of progress after Senate tax writers offered $30 billion in revenue-raising proposals — that House bargainers called a positive step.

House negotiators planned to make a counteroffer, but it was unclear whether the 22 House and Senate conferees trying to draft a final version of tax-overhaul legislation would meet face-to-face today.

House conferees are very serious about getting a bill, said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the negotiations. "The Senate has made a very, very interesting and challenging offer to the House. It's very positive."

Bank panel gets Volcker warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, saying he's not forecasting the start of another recession, nonetheless warned that a soaring trade deficit put the United States in a "difficult and dangerous situation."

The foreign capital has helped the United States finance its huge federal budget deficit, but Volcker said this situation could not be sustained forever and that time to deal with the problem was running out.

The Reagen administration has tried to fight the trade deficit by pushing the value of the dollar higher against foreign currencies.

Off the tracks

Sixteen cars loaded with hazardous chemicals lie in the Des Moines River near Boone, Iowa, on Tuesday. The cars were apparently blown off the 106-foot-high bridge during a fierce storm Monday night.

The Federal Reserve, working to keep the American recovery going, has three times this year cut a key bank lending rate in hopes of pushing interest rates lower and stimulating the economy.

Volcker said this strategy will help but won't be able to correct the problem unless foreign governments push for faster growth in their economies.

Volcker reiterated a plea he made last week before the Senate Banking subcommittee that America's major trading partners in Japan and Western Europe do more to stimulate their growth rates to expand markets for U.S. products and thus narrow the trade imbalance.

Volcker refused to say whether the Fed was considering a fourth cut in its discount rate, the fee it charges to make bank loans, but he repeated his belief that an easier credit policy would be a desirable option to expand the economy.

Your Birthday July 31, 1986 Some splendid opportunities will be offered you in the year ahead, both through business and social contacts. You will reap success, provided you exercise your best judgment. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Others aren't apt to help you in the year ahead, both through business and social contacts. You will reap success, provided you exercise your best judgment. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Duties that you sweep under the rug today in order to take an early weekend are going to catch up with you sooner or later. It may not be worth it. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be on your very best behavior at social gatherings. If you make a spectacle of yourself, you'll be the topic of conversation all next week. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Take nothing for granted where business is concerned today. You may not be as lucky as usual in situations that normally come off without a hitch. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Thoughtless statements you make today could be blown out of proportion and later cause you unnecessary mental anguish. Weigh every word. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Investment proposals must be thoroughly examined in every detail today. What looks good on the surface may be ridden with decay below. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In partnership arrangements today, each partner must be able to contribute what the other lacks. Without this balance the enterprise could crumble. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against tendencies today to think that duties that require attention will somehow take care of themselves. Unfortunately, they won't. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Conditions in your friendships are a trifle unusual today. Both you and your chums may expect more from one another than you should. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Sparks from that domestic fire that started yesterday are still smoldering. Be careful you're not the one who fans the flames. Smith echo in action: The Smith echo is a defensive signal enabling defenders to show enthusiasm for the opening-lead suit. The signaller is given in the suit that the declarer first attacks. A high spot by a defender tells his partner to continue the suit initially led by the declarer. A low spot-card would suggest a shift. Let's see how this would apply today. After the standard fourth-best lead, declarer wins East's heart jack with the king and plays a diamond to dummy. Using Smith signals, West plays the nine and East plays the 10. Each defender is showing strength in the suit of the opening lead - hearts. Declarer now loses the club finesse. Knowing that East liked the opening lead, West plays a low heart to East's J. Borch, who wedged the two jacks together.

Jointly owned CD can be cashed without penalty

Investors' Guide William A. Doyle

QUESTION: I plan to renew a certificate of deposit in this month. Since I am 70, I want to be sure my two children can cash the CD without penalty in the event of my death. How should I have the CD made out? ANSWER: You can have it registered in your name alone or in joint ownership. Either way, there will be no early withdrawal penalty if you join the choir silent before the CD matures. If it's in your name alone, the authorized representative of your estate can redeem the CD without penalty. If it's in joint ownership - in your name "or" one or more other names - any surviving owner can cash the CD without penalty.

owner or joint owner of a CD dies. Joint ownership might be the most convenient registration. Then, if you leave this vale of tears before the CD's maturity date, a joint owner will be able to cash the CD, penalty-free, by presenting your death certificate and proving his or her identity. A word of caution, here: Do not rely on joint ownership of CDs or a substitute for a will. For a lot of complicated reasons, every adult should have a will. QUESTION: A commentator on television recently claimed that certificates of deposit now can be cashed prematurely, without penalty, at the discretion of each financial institution. Our local bank denies knowledge of any such change in the applicable federal regulation. Do you have any information on this? If not, what is the penalty for early redemption? ANSWER: Effective April 1, 1985, federally insured banks and savings and loan associations have not been required to set early withdrawal penalties on newly issued CDs. Banks and S&Ls are still required to charge the "minimum" penalties set by federal regulations on CDs issued before that date. So, if you redeem a CD issued before April 1, your bank or S&L has to charge a penalty. The minimum penalties on older CDs vary, depending on when each CD was issued. Many banks and S&Ls set penalties higher than the federally required minimum. Even now that minimum penalties are not required on new CDs, it's unlikely you'll find a bank or S&L issuing CDs without penalty provisions. Summed up, if you bought a CD with a penalty provision, you'll have to pay that penalty when you redeem early. QUESTION: You have often assured readers that their money in banks and savings and loan associations with federal deposit insurance is safe. I am enclosing a newsletter with an article entitled "Bank Crisis Threatens Your Savings." It states that both the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. have small reserves - not enough to cover many bank and S&L failures. It also tells a "horror story" of one man who lost his business and his livelihood when the bank at which he had deposits failed. It says, "He eventually got his money back - far too late. He waited, but his creditors didn't."

Business In Brief

AMAX posts second-quarter gain GREENWICH - AMAX Inc. reported second-quarter earnings of $8 million after recording a $394.9 million loss in the same quarter last year. Last year's second-quarter loss, which included a provision of $315 million for losses on continuing business segments, has been reversed in part by AMAX's sale of businesses that are losing money. Alton Born, the company's president and chief executive officer, said Tuesday. "AMAX's financial condition continues to improve as the company reduces costs and sheds unprofitable businesses," Born said. "This is evident not only in the improved operating results but also in the reduction of debt and preferred stock by $203 million." Second-quarter net earnings were equivalent to 7 cents per common share after preferred dividends, compared with a $5.78 loss per common share last year. AMAX had earnings from operations of $40 million in the second quarter of 1986, compared with earnings of $9 million in the second quarter of 1985, before the provision for losses on properties and investments was included.

Armstrong scales back tire operations

By Susan Okulo The Associated Press NEW HAVEN - The Armstrong Rubber Co., the nation's sixth largest tire maker, has announced a restructuring plan that involves the closing of at least one tire manufacturing plant and acquiring a fourth business segment. The moves will "get us out of our recent earnings slump and get us back on the strong earnings track that we enjoyed from 1981 to 1984," said Frank R. O'Keefe, Jr., who took over as company chairman in April. O'Keefe said Tuesday that Armstrong plans to close the Natchez, Miss. tire plant, affecting about 440 hourly and salaried employees. The company is considering closing one more of its remaining three tire plants in Hanford, Calif., Nashville, Tenn., and Des Moines, Iowa, he said. Armstrong closed its West Haven plant in 1981.

Travelers earnings are up 17%

HARTFORD (AP) - The Travelers Corp. reports a 17 percent increase in its second quarter operating earnings, up from $78.5 million in the quarter last year to $91.9 million this year. Earnings per share for the second quarter rose 6 percent to 83 cents, compared with 88 cents in the second quarter of 1985. Travelers' earnings for the first 6 months of this year rose 13 percent, from $151.6 million in the first half of 1985 to $170.9 million this year. The company reported Tuesday that new pension accounting standards added $9.8 million to the second quarter's operating income. Travelers' total revenues for the second quarter rose 5 percent to $3.7 billion, compared with $3.5 billion a year ago. Premiums paid also rose 5 percent, from $2.7 billion in the second quarter of 1985 to $2.8 billion this year. Edward H. Budd, chairman and chief executive officer, said improvements in the company's commercial property and casualty business helped second-quarter earnings. "Compared with the second quarter last year, operating income for this business improved $4.8 million, with higher prices and tighter underwriting programs responsible for the performance," Budd said. Budd said he expects the commercial property and casualty earnings to continue improving. Last year, Travelers' commercial property and casualty lines lost $16.1 million in the second quarter, compared to profits of $31.7 million for this year's second quarter.

Woman sues GE over discharge

BRIDGEPORT - A former General Electric Co. employee has filed a lawsuit against the corporation, seeking $1.2 million on a claim that she was wrongfully discharged and denied benefits given to her male counterparts. The lawsuit was filed in federal court in Bridgeport by Barry Boorman, a Stamford lawyer, on behalf of Luminiza Sava of New York. It came just weeks after a jury awarded a Westport man $10.2 million in a wrongful discharge and fraud case brought against the Exxon Corp. The company is challenging the verdict. GE spokesman Bruce Bunch said it was company policy not to comment on pending legal matters. Sava maintains she began working for General Electric on Jan. 7, 1975, as a power project engineer in its International Sales Division in New York. Six years later, she transferred to the Bridgeport office, where she was named manager of business development affiliates. In that position, she was responsible for locating international sales markets for General Electric products, according to the suit. The suit alleges that from July 27, 1981, to the date of her transfer on July 29, 1985, Sava was denied incentive compensation awards while men with fewer qualifications and less seniority received the awards.

The decision could prove academic in light of recent developments surrounding both malls.

Earlier this month, the developers of the Buckland Hills Mall — the Homart Development Co. of Chicago and the New York-based Manchester I-84 Associates — and the Winchester developers announced they had agreed in principle to build only one mall in the area.

The announcement came after more than a year of competing between the two to break ground for a massive mall in the potentially profitable Interstate 84 corridor. Because the two sites are across the street from each other, both developers agreed only one mall could be built.

The developers have not released details of their agreement, but other sources have said it is likely that the Manchester site will be the location of the mall because it has more state and town permits needed for the project. South Windsor, the sources said, would probably get a smaller development, including a possible strip shopping center like the Manchester Parkade.

Hutensky said Tuesday that the judge's decision only temporarily blocks commercial construction at the Winchester site. He said the developers could reapply for a change of zone later, providing some action is taken to make the necessary road improvements in the area.

But Beck disagreed, adding that it wouldn't be that easy to get a second zone change for the land. "Based on this decision," Beck said, "I think the Planning and Zoning Commission will take a long, hard look at the traffic problem before granting a zone change."

Low bid likely winner in IOH pool competition

Officials working to construct a pool at Manchester High School for handicapped people said this morning they see no reason why the low bidder shouldn't be awarded the contract.

"I would be very surprised for us not to go with the lowest bid," said David C. Moyer, who is on the Board of Directors of Instructors for the Handicapped, IOH, a non-profit organization that has been working to build the shallow pool for 20 years. Its 12-member board will study the bids and may make a decision at a meeting tonight.

The Aldrich Construction Co. of Manchester, Tuesday submitted the low bid of $334,900 to build the special pool, which will be built in an addition next to the pool the high school currently uses.

Moyer said the next lowest bid was $30,000 higher than the one submitted by Aldrich. The lowest bid "came in very close to what we had been anticipating," he said. A total of five contractors bid on the project.

Richard Lawrence, architect for the project, said checks were being done on Aldrich Construction and he had a "suspicion" the bid would be accepted.

"(Aldrich) has a good reputation," he said. "I don't think there is any problem in that respect." IOH recently estimated the cost of the pool at $350,000, not including contingency and architect's fees. Moyer said the organization has raised about $275,000, and foundation grants have been promised when the organization raises a certain amount of money.

The group has been working for 20 years to build the pool, which will be about one-third the size of the regular MHS pool. Construction could start in late summer or early fall if plans are on schedule with completion estimated at seven months from the start of work, Moyer said.

Lawrence had asked that all bidders keep to their prices for 60 days to allow time for negotiations. Because IOH is a non-profit company, it doesn't have to choose the low bidder to do the work.

"I hesitate to predict their behavior," Moyer said. "Even as a psychologist, I hesitate to predict."

THANKSGIVING NOVENA TO ST. JUDE

O holy St. Jude, Apostle and martyr, bring in virtue and strength in miracle, near Kinman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need. To you I have recourse and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent petition. In return I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked. Say three "Our Fathers, Three Hail Marys and Glorias." Publication must be promised. St. Jude pray for us and all who invoke your aid. Amen. This novena has never been known to fail. I have had my request granted. K.B.

GOP mum on 12th District choice

By Alex Girelli
Associate Editor

A Republican candidate was selected Tuesday night to run in the 12th Assembly District, but Republican leaders declined this morning to disclose the party's choice.

E. Steve Pearl, the only Republican who has publicly expressed interest in the post, said he doesn't know if he was endorsed by a five-member committee that met Tuesday night and is unable to find out.

Four members of that committee contacted this morning declined to say who they had picked, though one said the candidate is a man. They said Republican Town Chairman Donald Kuehl would issue a press release this afternoon.

Kuehl, who was out of town this morning, could not be reached for comment.

Pearl, an Eighth Utilities District supporter who is president of the Connecticut Taxpayers Association, said Kuehl told him yesterday that he would be away this morning. He said he did not expect to learn the decision until tonight.

A number of prominent Republicans contacted this morning said they do not know who the candidate is and expressed surprise that the information is being kept under wraps.

The Democratic candidate for the position, incumbent James McCavanagh, said this morning he had not heard who was selected to oppose him.

The committee that met Tuesday night consisted of the leaders of the five voting districts in the 12th Assembly District. They were Mary Willhide, who is Republican registrar of voters, and Jonathan Mercier, Sheila Godola, Betty

Sadloski and Nancy Taylor.

Mercier, who ran for the seat in 1984 after winning a primary against Sadloski, said this morning he was not the one endorsed by the committee. Sadloski is not the candidate either, her husband said.

The five-member committee is charged with selecting the party-endorsed candidate at this point because Frederick Peck, the candidate who was endorsed by a caucus Wednesday, withdrew from the race immediately after the endorsement.

At the caucus Wednesday, 11 members of the Republican Town Committee from the 12th Assembly District voted for Peck, a former Republican registrar of voters, but one caucus participant, Louise Cronin, abstained from voting. She told Peck later that he was "strange."

Offended, Peck made his surprise withdrawal from the race, throwing the choice of a replacement to the five voting district leaders who constitute the GOP Town Committee group that fills vacancies.

Peck, who is living in a nursing home, was unable to attend the meeting.

Man nabbed in burglary

A Manchester man was arrested while in the act of burglarizing a Center Street boarding house this morning, according to police.

Essaid Mezrioui, 28, of 2-D St. James St., was charged with second-degree burglary in the incident, which occurred at around 2:16 a.m.

Police said Mezrioui was caught in a bedroom when the occupants at the home, at 281 Center St., woke up and saw him. Police said there was evidence that Mezrioui came in through a window screen. The screaming started screaming and Mezrioui fled, police said.

A couple of neighbors who heard the screaming ran to the apartment and were able to hold him until the police could arrive, police said. Mezrioui was held on a $2,500 bond and was arraigned at Manchester Superior Court this morning.

FOCUS/Food

Turn Summer's Sunny Bounty Into Delicious Supper Dishes

There they are, popping out all over the vegetable garden, overflowing from the bushel baskets at the farm stand... the delicious harvest of summer. Plump scarlet tomatoes, brilliant red and green peppers, polished purple eggplant and squash galore — emerald zucchini and yellow crooknecks, in sizes from midget to giant. The herbs are there, too — basil, chives, dillweed, parsley and more — shooting up in carefully tended garden plots or window boxes, thriving in pots at roadside stands and tied up in generous bundles at the supermarket produce section.

Chef Kathleen Sanderson, anticipating all this plenty, has put her creative talents to work to come up with dishes that use these wonderful vegetables to best advantage. Her recipes are innovative and delicious, combining summer vegetables in wonderful ways with herbs and Post cereals to bring out all their goodness. Here, her versatile quintet of summer vegetable dishes.

Curried Stuffed Zucchini

Summer's plentiful zucchini becomes a favorite, done this simple but spectacular way.

- 2 large (or 3 medium) zucchini
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 medium onion, diced
- 2 medium tomatoes, cored and diced
- 1 cup whole wheat and bran cereal with raisins, pincapple, peanuts and coconut
- 1-1/2 teaspoons curry powder*
- 1/4 cup chopped parsley*
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

*Or use 4 teaspoons parsley flakes.

• Halve zucchini lengthwise and remove seeds; brush with a little olive oil and place on a 15x10x1-inch baking pan.

• Saute onion in remaining olive oil until tender; add tomatoes and cook until mixture is dry. Crush cereal and add with curry powder, parsley, salt and pepper; mix well and cool.

• Divide stuffing among zucchini halves. Pour 1/4 cup water into pan around zucchini; cover tightly with foil. (This will help steam the zucchini.) Bake at 375° for 10 to 12 minutes; then remove foil and bake 10 minutes longer.

• Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Herb Stuffed Mushrooms

An elegant first course or a flavorful side dish for summer meals, mushrooms with a savory cereal-wine-and-herb stuffing.

- 16 large mushrooms
- 1 medium onion, diced
- 4 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1/4 cup sherry or Madeira wine
- 1 cup whole wheat and bran cereal, any variety
- 1/4 cup chopped parsley*
- 2 tablespoons chopped chives*
- 1 tablespoon chopped dillweed*
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

*Or use 4 teaspoons parsley flakes, 2 teaspoons freeze-dried chives and 1 teaspoon dried dillweed.

• Remove stems from mushrooms and chop finely. Saute onion and mushroom stems in 2 tablespoons butter for 2 to 3 minutes. Add sherry and cook until mushrooms are tender and mixture is dry. Crush cereal and combine with herbs, pepper and cheese. Add to mushroom stems and mix well.

• Melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter; brush over mushroom caps. Place 1-1/2 to 2 tablespoons of mixture in each mushroom and place on baking sheet. Bake at 375° for 10 to 12 minutes; then broil 1 minute or until browned.

• Makes 16 mushrooms or 4 servings.

Summer Bounty Notes

Bigger is not necessarily better... when it comes to summer vegetables, and herbs, as well. The mammoth zucchini, the oversized tomato, may look impressive but will probably not have as delicious a flavor as smaller varieties. Herbs, too, may thrive and have luxuriant foliage, but may have less flavor than scrawny specimens. Herbs, in fact, need just average, not rich, soil, but lots of sun; highly fertilized soil produces herbs with lush leaves, but scant flavor.

About olive oil... Note that Chef Sanderson uses olive oil in most of these recipes, because of the special mellow flavor it imparts to these particular summer vegetables. But, olive oil, though a mono-unsaturated oil and better for you than most fats, is still a fat; she uses it judiciously, since hers is a light approach to food preparation. In the Ratatouille recipe, for example, she uses olive oil for sauteing the eggplant (a notorious absorber of oil), but then suggests adding water rather than more oil to continue cooking the eggplant after the first oil is absorbed. In the Stuffed Zucchini recipe, the zucchini halves are brushed with oil, rather than sauteed in it, then steamed in the pan with water to make them tender.

Out-of-season alternatives... If fresh herbs are not available, Chef Sanderson has suggested dried alternatives. Note that whenever substituting dry herbs for fresh, you should use considerably less, about one-third the amount, as the dried variety has more intense flavor.

• 1 cup natural bran flakes

• 1/4 cup chopped parsley

• 1 tablespoon fresh chopped basil

• 1 teaspoon fresh oregano

• 1 small eggplant, cut into 1-inch cubes

• 5 tablespoons olive oil

• 3 tablespoons water

• 1 small onion, sliced

• 1 large green pepper, cut into 1/2-inch cubes

Tomatoes Persile

When the thought of another tomato salad calls, try tomatoes this way, topped with cereal, herbs and cheese and lightly baked.

- 1 cup natural bran flakes
- 1/4 cup chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil
- 1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 4 or 5 large tomatoes
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- Black pepper to taste

Ratatouille Au Gratin

A new way with the traditional Mediterranean medley... the vegetables are baked in a crunchy cereal topping.

- 1 cup natural bran flakes
- 1/4 cup chopped parsley
- 1 tablespoon fresh chopped basil
- 1 teaspoon fresh oregano
- 1 small eggplant, cut into 1-inch cubes
- 5 tablespoons olive oil
- 3 tablespoons water
- 1 small onion, sliced
- 1 large green pepper, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 2 medium zucchini, sliced 1/4 inch thick
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1 can (15 oz.) tomato sauce
- 4 ounces grated Parmesan cheese

Or use 4 teaspoons parsley flakes, 1 teaspoon dried basil or 1/4 teaspoon dried oregano.

• Crush cereal and combine with herbs, mixing well. Set aside.

• Saute eggplant in 2 tablespoons of oil. When oil has been absorbed, add water and continue to cook until eggplant is tender. Remove from pan.

• In remaining 3 tablespoons oil, saute onion and green pepper for 2 to 3 minutes. Add zucchini and cook until tender. Add eggplant, pepper and tomato sauce.

• Pour into 2-1/2- to 3-quart casserole. Sprinkle with cereal mixture and top with grated cheese. Bake at 375° for 20 to 25 minutes, until browned and bubbly.

• Makes 6 servings.

Herbed Garden Tart

Fresh dillweed adds a distinctive flavor note to this quiche-like tart; crushed cereal makes an easy and delicious crust.

- 2 cups natural bran flakes
- 6 tablespoons unsalted butter or margarine, melted
- 4 tablespoons fresh chopped dillweed
- 1 medium onion, diced
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 2 cups broccoli florets
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 5 eggs
- 1-1/2 cups half and half
- 1/8 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 cup grated cheddar cheese

Or use 4 teaspoons dried dillweed.

• Crush cereal and combine with 5 tablespoons melted butter and 2 tablespoons dillweed. Mix well and press into bottom and halfway up the side of a 9-inch springform pan or a 9-inch square pan.

• Saute onion in remaining 1 tablespoon butter and the olive oil for 2 to 3 minutes. Add broccoli and continue to saute until tender, 3 to 4 minutes. Season with salt, pepper and remaining dillweed. Cool slightly.

• Combine eggs, half and half and nutmeg; mix well.

• Layer vegetables and grated cheese in pan; pour in egg mixture and place pan on baking sheet. Bake at 350° for 1 hour. Remove from oven and let stand 5 to 10 minutes. Run knife around the edge of pan before removing side.

• Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Keep cool by using microwave along with refrigerator

If you want to keep cool this summer, your microwave can help you do exactly that. Meals can be prepared in minutes, and the only thing that will be heated is the food.

Microwave Kitchen

Marge Churchill

When you use a microwave in combination with your refrigerator, you can prepare food ahead of time and heat it at the last minute. Sometimes you will want to prepare a dish the day before, serving it, leaving only some last minute steps and the final cooking for the next day. The refrigerator provides an excellent companion for these combination recipes, and methods.

Salad Pie After dissolving the lime-flavored gelatin in the microwave oven, you need to chill the gelatin mixture in the refrigerator before adding the shredded carrot and zucchini and cottage cheese layers.

Garden Salad Pie

1 package (3 ounces) lime

1 cup water
1/2 cup (1/2 ounce) applesauce
1 teaspoon finely shredded fresh lemon peel, set aside
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/4 cup shredded zucchini
1/4 cup carrot
2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons thinly sliced green onion
1 cup dry cottage cheese
1/4 cup dairy sour cream
1/4 teaspoon salt
Dash white pepper
Shredded zucchini for garnish
Shredded carrot for garnish

Flavored gelatin
1 cup water
1/2 cup (1/2 ounce) applesauce
1 teaspoon finely shredded fresh lemon peel, set aside
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/4 cup shredded zucchini
1/4 cup carrot
2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons thinly sliced green onion
1 cup dry cottage cheese
1/4 cup dairy sour cream
1/4 teaspoon salt
Dash white pepper
Shredded zucchini for garnish
Shredded carrot for garnish

2 teaspoons instant beef bouillon granules
1/2 cup vinegar
1/2 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
1/2 cup dairy sour cream
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup finely chopped cabbage
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon prepared horseradish
1 can (12 ounce) corned beef, flaked
1/4 cup finely chopped green pepper
Wash and prick potato, place on paper toweling in microwave. Cook uncovered, on high power for 3 to 4 minutes. Let stand for 5 minutes. Peel and chop.
In a 4 cup glass measure, soften gelatin in 1 cup of warm water. Stir in sugar and bouillon granules. Microwave, uncovered, on high for 2 to 2 1/2 minutes, or until dissolved, stirring once. Stir in 2 cups of water and the vinegar. Reserve 2 cups of the gelatin mixture; do not chill. In a mixing bowl, combine the mayonnaise or salad dressing, sour cream, and salt; gradually stir in the remaining gelatin mixture. In the refrigerator, chill mayonnaise mixture until it is partially set.

Fold in cabbage, onion and potato into the mayonnaise mixture. Spoon into 1 one cup molds, or one seven cup mold. Chill in the refrigerator until almost firm.
For the second layer, stir horseradish into the reserved 2 cups of gelatin mixture; chill until partially set. Fold in corned beef and green pepper; carefully spoon on top of the mayonnaise mixture. Refrigerate for several hours or overnight. Unmold and garnish with shredded cabbage, if desired.

Corned Beef and Cabbage Molds

Nelson's Yankee ingenuity adapted to European food

By Margaret Hayden Herald Reporter

Norine Nelson of 24 Bryan Drive has created Yankee versions of some European specialties.

"I'm Yankee from my mother's father's side," she said. Ancestors on that side of the family arrived on American shores before the Revolutionary War. Her ancestors on her father's side came from Germany in the 1920s, she said.

Yankee Greek dressing
1/2 cup corn or olive oil
1/4 cup wine vinegar
2 tablespoon juice from jar of Greek olives
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
Salt and pepper to taste
Mix ingredients together. Pour over salad greens and onions just before serving. Add tomato sections and olives on top.

Mock veal parmesan
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
1/2 cup parmesan cheese
1 pound package of turkey cutlets
1 egg, beaten
2 tablespoons cooking oil, more if necessary
1/2 pound provolone cheese
Sauce to cover (recipe below)
Mix crumbs and parmesan. Dip cutlets in crumb mixture, then, in egg, and in the mixture again. Brown in hot oil. Place in shallow baking dish and cover with sauce. Cover pan with foil and bake in a 350-degree oven for 25 minutes. Add provolone slices to cover and bake uncovered for five minutes.

Rhubarb crisp squares
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup chopped nuts, optional
1 tablespoon melted margarine, optional
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 cups brown sugar
1/4 cup shortening
1 egg
2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup sour cream
1/4 cup rhubarb
Mix white sugar, nuts, margarine and cinnamon until crumbly. Set aside.
Cream together brown sugar and shortening. Add egg and mix stir together baking powder and salt and add to creamed mixture alternately with sour cream. Stir together. Cut rhubarb into half-inch pieces. Stir into batter. Pour into greased and floured 13- by 9- by 2-inch pan. Sprinkle with cinnamon mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 to 50 minutes.

Her mock veal parmesan, which substitutes turkey for veal, is on the table ready for the oven or the freezer.

Norine Nelson stirs her homemade dressing into her Yankee version of a Greek salad in her 24 Bryan Drive home.

Cavey's broccoli soup

For David Kamerer of South Main Street, the best things in life include the broccoli soups which he served every few weeks at Cavey's Restaurants. Tim Grills, who has been second-in-command in the kitchen there for several years, was more than willing to share this recipe:

Peel and dice onions and carrot. Clean and dice celery. Sauté these vegetables in a wide, shallow frying pan until onion is transparent. Regulate the heat so that the vegetables do not brown. Season with all four of the herbs, and transfer to a stock pot. Pour in the chicken stock. Simmer until there is a total of just three quarts of soup. This is called reducing; it intensifies the flavor.

Use a slotted spoon or sieve to strain all vegetables out of the soup. Puree in a blender or food processor and return to the soup pot. Blanch the broccoli flowers by immersing them briefly in boiling water. This "sets" the color, ensuring that it will remain green in the soup. When they are blanched, set aside. Add cream to the soup pot. Bring to a gentle simmer and cook, reducing, for 15 minutes.

Broccoli soup
1 bunch broccoli
1 onion
1 large carrot
3 ribs celery
2 to 3 tablespoons olive oil
Sprig fresh basil or 1/4 teaspoon dried
Sprig fresh oregano or 1/2 teaspoon dried
Sprig fresh thyme or 1/4 teaspoon dried
1 bay leaf
1 quart chicken stock
2 cups heavy cream
2 tablespoons butter
Salt and white pepper to taste
Cut buds off broccoli and set aside. Peel stalks and dice them.

Several minutes, so that the flour will lose its raw taste.
Scrape this roux into a mixing bowl. Ladle in a cup or two of the soup and whisk rapidly, so that the consistency is like paste. Ladle in more of the soup, whisk again, so that there are no lumps.
Return the contents of the bowl to the soup pot. Simmer gently, so that the soup will "thicken," which means to thicken slightly. Add reserved broccoli flowers, season with salt and pepper, and serve. Serves about 12.

Many households remote controlled
PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) - More than 10 million households have two or more remote control units and 2.5 million have at least three, according to General Electric.
But, says the firm, remote control units for audio and video components may soon be a thing of the past. It says it has a new system which will command up to four audio and video products from a single unit, eliminating remote control clutter.

New Crisco containers cause consumer consternation

By Morfin Sloane

In a recent column, I published letters from readers who experienced problems with the new Crisco containers. For more than 75 years, one of Procter & Gamble's most popular brands, was packed in tin containers, but recently a change was made to a less expensive foil-and-fiber container.

"Even one complaint is important to us," added Tessone. "Please tell your readers that we are always evaluating packaging improvements for our products. They won't necessarily see them tomorrow, but we are working on them. We have built our success on listening to consumers and knowing what they want."

Insider trading: What is it really?

With ever-increasing regularity, "insider trading" is hitting the headlines. Do you really know what it is? Do you consider this type of trading a sinister evil or a red herring?

In simplest terms, insider trading is the use of confidential information by those in the know to buy or sell securities to gain a profit. That you (an ordinary citizen) couldn't be expected to know the essential "grapevine" connections to get the information first on the trends likely to happen next.

Insider trading is unfair - in the sense that it gives the insider a windfall he/she didn't earn by, "honest hard work." It may also be unfair to the takeovers which doesn't want his target stock to go up in price until he has finished his own buying and selling at a lower price.

But what about you and me, the public? We are not hurt by insider trading although we may be the victims of the insiders. Actually, we were not even aware of or outraged by it until a minor government official was tagged for the infraction a few years ago.

A typical insider trade works like this: Mr. Condon, Sharkfin (beautiful name, yes?) decides to buy control of Americapple Pie, which has a rich treasury of cash. He borrows $19.7 million from seven banks by pledging that, once in control, he will use Americapple's cash to pay off part of the loan and issue junk bonds for the balance. The seven banks cannot now use any part of that $19.7 million to help Mrs. Murphy buy a U.S.-made car, and the shortage of credit helps push up interest rates. Nor can the $19.7 million be used to look at Treasury bills, and the cost of carrying our swollen national debt also is pushed up.

Meanwhile, Sharkfin ups off a couple of friends and they arrange with an understanding broker to load up on Americapple - raising Americapple's price from $10 to $50 on the NYSE. Then Sharkfin offers a takeover at $55. Who loses in this whole affair?

Bomb house a mystery

Golway Street cache found after shooting incident

By John Mitchell and George Lyons Herald Reporters

A Golway Street man arrested Wednesday morning after he allegedly fired a gun near a group of teenagers may face federal charges as a result of a search of his home that turned up an arsenal of weapons and explosives.

John A. Lawler Jr., 38, of 30 Golway St., was charged by Manchester police with the manufacture of bombs, possession of a machine gun and three counts of possession of a silencer after Wednesday's search.

The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms is conducting its own investigation into the incident, and federal charges could also be filed against Lawler, special agent Louis Velasco said. Velasco said this morning he did not know when the ATF investigation would be completed.

State police said they have no leads as to why Lawler was stockpiling the materials.

Weapons found at the home included parts of three inert hand grenades, a machine gun, five pipe bombs, almost a dozen rifles and pistols, explosive chemicals and two crossbows with arrows, police said.

The amount of explosives found at the residence was enough to "level" the house and possibly others around it if the material had been used, according to Daniel D. Bomb Technician with the Connecticut State Police Hazardous Devices Division.

"This was not the normal type of fireworks," Lewis said Wednesday as the material was being removed. "It's hard to say what the intent was."

Although neighbors in the area for about a year, Manchester police spokesman Gary Wood said Lawler has no similar prior arrests. Wood said, however, that many complaints about the neighborhood explosions have been filed.

Police obtained the search warrant after they learned Lawler around midnight Wednesday on charges of breach of peace, reckless endangerment and unlawful discharge of a firearm.

Town police officers investigating a complaint of an explosion arrived at Lawler's home about midnight and saw an explosion, according to reports.

During a quick inspection of the premises, police said they found a rifle with a scope leaning against the wall by a gun case.

Lawler questioned Lawler, who said he didn't know about the explosion.

Police said Lawler appeared intoxicated and began to complain about youths in the area. Just then, officers on the scene was called to direct traffic at North Main and Williams Streets, where a water main had broken.

While there, the officer heard another, larger explosion and saw a flash and smoke coming from Lawler's home, police said. He arrested Wood said, but reported no other explosions.

Police obtained a warrant to search Lawler's home, where they suspected he may have stored more explosive materials.

Velasco said incidents similar to the one on Golway Street have been on the rise throughout the state and country. He said a variety of factors may be behind the increase, but singled out the movie "Rambo" as a possible major cause.

"Ever since the movie 'Rambo' ... it has become more common than it used to be," he said.

Rainy day hay loading godsend for the South

Dave Buscaglia throws hay to Tom Peracchio at the Hytone Farm on Route 44. The two were loading the bales Wednesday onto a donated truck that transported the much-needed commodity to Southeastern farmers suffering through a drought.

By John Mitchell Herald Reporter

COVENTRY - A light rain fell in spurts on Anthony Peracchio's cornfield Wednesday morning, threatening to become a downpour. The mist generated from the water made loading bales of hay for the men at Peracchio's Hytone Farm a small annoyance, as strands stuck to their clothing and sweat-soaked faces.

But what might have been a nuisance to some was being put on the trucks in Coventry because concerned farmers had pitched in and joined the nationwide relief effort to move needed feed to their drought-stricken counterparts in the Southeast, who are still suffering from a heat wave that forecasters predict won't end soon.

Until Wednesday, the effort had been stilled by a lack of trucks to transport the bales, each one of which can be used to feed about three head of cattle for one day. The hay's trip south finally began Tuesday night, after trucking companies and independent drivers from across the state gladly offered their rigs.

Companies and farmers weren't the only ones helping the effort. The New England Trailer and Trailer Training Inc. of Somers, for instance, helped pull together drivers and destinations beginning over a week ago.

Bill Vendetta, owner of Barrieau Moving and Storage, has donated two trucks in the last couple of days, including the one loaded Wednesday at the Peracchio farm on Route 44. That truck took "maybe just a hair over 500 bales" to Chester, South Carolina, according to George Kingsbury Jr., a predict won't end soon.

Panel says Marcos behind acquittals

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - A special commission today said ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos orchestrated last year's acquittal of 26 men charged in the assassination of his rival, Benigno Aquino.

The panel of three retired judges recommended the trial be reopened, saying it was "abundantly clear" Marcos not only told prosecutors and judges how to acquit the trial, but also made sure his orders were obeyed.

In its report to the Supreme Court, the commission accused the prosecution of fabricating evidence and said "witnesses were harassed, cajoled, perjured or threatened" to ensure the acquittal of former armed forces chief Gen. Faber C. Ver. 23 other soldiers and a civilian.

The commission, appointed by the Supreme Court, asked the high court to declare a mistrial in the assassination of Aquino.

Aquino, an opposition leader during Marcos' 20-year rule, was gunned down at Manila's airport on Aug. 21, 1983, the day he returned to the Philippines after three years of voluntary exile in the United States.

The killing triggered a two-year political crisis that ended in Marcos' overthrow in a Roman Catholic Church-backed military revolt in February and the installation of Aquino's widow, Corazon, as president.
