Rewriting history

Clint Eastwood's decision to alter the film "Heartbreak Ridge" was praised by the Spanish royal family since Thursday.

Among those on board the royal yacht Britannia were Charles' brother Andrew and his wife, the newlywed Duke and Duchess of York, as well as Prince Edward, youngest of the queen's children.

"I certainly am satisfied," Bill Temple, coordinator of the Veterans for a National Korean War Memorial, said Tuesday.

Some veterans of the 23rd Infantry Regiment of the 2nd Army Division had protested that the original script rewrote history. They said no Marine unit fought in the bloody 1951 battle for Heartbreak Ridge.

A line in the Warner Bros. film has been dubbed to show Eastwood's character, a Marine gunnery sergeant, was in the Army when he won a medal for a bloody 1951 battle.

Tolland Tpk. reconstruction involves 1200 lots

By Alex Grell Associate Editor

Parts of about 120 properties, mostly strips about five feet wide, would have to be taken for the proposed reconstruction of Tolland Turnpike under preliminary plans drawn by the town engineering staff.

The project, with an estimated construction cost of $4.1 million and an overall estimated cost of about $5.5 million, will be the subject of a public hearing Sept. 17 at 7:30 p.m. at the Senior Citizens' Center, 349 E. Middle Turnpike.

One of the properties, the home of Minnie Blanche Webb at 755 N. Main St., is directly in the path of the proposed relocation of the Tolland Turnpike and North Main Street intersection. It would have to be demolished or moved to make way for the road, according to the plan.

Acting Town Engineer William Camosci said Tuesday that Webb has expressed an interest in having the house moved to another location on her property. That possibility is being considered, Camosci said.

Eighty-five percent of the cost of the work would come from federal highway trade-in funds, with the town and the state sharing the rest of the cost equally, Camosci said. Trade-in funds are funds originally designated for non-access highways but not used for that purpose, he said.

Reconstruction would begin at a point near the Buckland post office and continue to Deming Street, about 10,000 feet. About 400 feet of North Main Street near Tolland Turnpike would also be reconstructed, the plans show.

North Main Street almost to a right angle directly across from a driveway into the Georgia Pacific warehouse and an adjacent shopping center under construction, according to Camosci. He said the intersection would have a traffic signal. The roadway would provide two lanes in each direction from the junction of Tolland Turnpike and Buckland Street to a point about 350 east of the Georgia Pacific driveway on North Main Street. East of that point, North Main Street would remain one lane in each direction. Tolland Turnpike from North Main Street east would also remain one lane each way.

Concrete sidewalks would be installed on the south side of North Main Street and on the south side of Tolland Turnpike from North Main Street to the Jester's Court restaurant. The plan also calls for an 8-foot-wide bituminous concrete bicycle path along the north side of Tolland Turnpike from Deming Street west to join an existing stretch of bicycle path that begins at Buckland Street. Granite curbs would be installed on both sides of the reconstructed portions of both streets.

The right-of-way for Tolland Turnpike would be widened from 50 feet to 60 feet, Camosci said. The work would come from federal highway trade-in funds, with the town and the state sharing the rest of the cost equally, Camosci said.

Camosci said it will be necessary to fill in a small portion of a pond north of Tolland Turnpike. He said he also proposes dredging the pond to clean it out.

Camosci said two 60-inch-diameter storm drain pipes that will be extended southward about 1,700 feet across Tolland Turnpike and into Union Pond.

Approval involves obtaining environmental permits from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Four days after Cabranes issued his decision on July 21, the ECCAG asked the judge to amend his decision, allow a new trial and reargument, and issue an injunction against property acquisitions pending an appeal. Those motions were ruled Monday.

Mobley said Tuesday the state also received word Monday from last month — that the state was inappropriate because no work has begun on the proposed $170 million highway that would connect Bolton Notch and Windham.

Opponents of the project, led by the Eastern Connecticut Citizen Action Group, filed the lawsuit in March hoping to stop the state Department of Transportation from purchasing property in the path of the highway until the alternatives to the project were explored and an in-depth environmental study was conducted.

The Corps of Engineers is reviewing an Environmental Impact Statement submitted by the DOT. The Corps must approve the document before the highway can be built.

Officials at the DEP said this morning they have not received the application yet. However, Dr. Ragendra Jain, who handles air quality permits for the DEP, said a decision on an air quality permit could take between two and three months.

Douglas Cooper, of the DEP's inland wetlands section, said the DOT's application to fill wetlands could take between six and nine months.

Marshall, who can call the special meeting, said he has spoken with Jackson, but has no plans to call a meeting at this time.

In the past, men were allowed to draw potluck lots to see who could tee off between 8 and 11:30 a.m. on Saturday and Sundays, while women members had to wait until after 11:30 a.m. to tee off.

A small handful of women protested the policy last year, and in June the Board of Governors voted to grant female members the same privileges.

Almost immediately the men complained, and filed a petition with 70 signatures.

This house at 755 North Main St. near Tolland Turnpike will have to be moved or demolished to make way for revamping the intersection under a plan for reconstruction of the turnpike. Minnie Blanche Webb, who has lived in the house for 66 years, hopes it can be moved to another site on her property. The plaque, (inset), was posted on the house by the Manchester Historical Society.

Homeowners oppose turnpike plans

"I hate to see it go," Minnie Blanche Webb said this morning of her old house at 755 N. Main St.

The Webb property is one of 120 that will be affected by the proposed widening of the Tolland Turnpike right-of-way from 50 feet to 60 feet.

For many of those property owners, the widening would mean loss of about a five-foot-deep strip along their frontages. However, Webb's property is in the middle of the proposed path of the road and might have to be demolished.

Webb, 86, explained simply and with no trace of bitterness in her voice that she has lived in the house since she was 20 years old.

Another property owner, Deborah Decker of 734 Tolland Turnpike, said this morning that she is opposed to the widening.

"My house sits close to road... she said. "The street is quite busy now; it will be busier when they widen it."

Webb said she gave the town permission to survey the property in connection with the road reconstruction project. Later, when she saw the stakes that had been driven into the ground, she realized the house was in the middle of the proposed path of the road. She went to see Camosci to get more information.

Bozzuto calls on O'Neill to order full divestment

HARTFORD (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Richard C. Bozzuto says Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill doesn't have to wait until next year to have the state sell its pension-fund investments in companies doing business with white-ruled South Africa.

O'Neill had said last week he would ask the 1987 General Assembly to approve a full-divestment program. "He doesn't need to wait for legislation next year," Bozzuto said. "He can begin to instruct the treasurer as to what steps he wishes to take... and that's exactly what he ought to be doing."

Bozzuto joined Tuesday in the call for a sale of all state investments in companies doing business with South Africa. Connecticut already has a law forbidding state investment in companies doing business with South Africa unless those companies meet strict equal opportunity guidelines.

He said it was important to act quickly because "the economic and human rights conditions in that country are deteriorating. The time to act is now, while our action will still mean something and while we can still make lucrative investments elsewhere."

He estimated that of the state's $3.5 billion pension investment portfolio, $52.5 million is invested in companies doing business with South Africa. "The people of Connecticut want out of South Africa," said Gary Franks, the Republican candidate for comptroller who was with Bozzuto at his news conference.

Bozzuto said disinvestment would send a strong message that the state's system of racial separation will not be tolerated. He said he disagreed with President Reagan's opposition to strong economic sanctions.

without destroying its economy and creating further hardship for South African blacks. Eddy criticized his opponent, Democratic incumbent Sen. Christopher J. Dodd for favoring tough sanctions against South Africa. Dodd, seeking a second term this year, gave the Democrats' response to President Reagan's South African proposals made over the weekend.

Eddy said he favored only those sanctions aimed specifically at the white minority government and its agencies that enforce apartheid. He proposed bans on loans to the government, a stronger role for the United Nations and mandatory compliance with equal opportunity guidelines by companies doing business with South Africa.

He also proposed that the U.S. give money to South African institutions and organizations that promote housing, education and health care for blacks. "Those who dare to suggest that there is a middle ground, that devastating the South African economy is counterproductive and will only result in greater suffering for both blacks and whites, they are branded as defenders of apartheid, even racists," Eddy said in a prepared statement.

Connecticut In Brief

Murder witness is killed in Texas

MILFORD — A man who was a potential witness for the second murder trial of a defendant accused of raping and killing a 5-year-old girl has been shot to death in Texas, authorities said. Paul A. Rehmann, 35, formerly of Stratford, was shot in the chest and shoulder on Saturday night outside a trailer home in Valley View, Texas, said Sheriff John Aston of Cook County, Texas.

No arrests have been made in the shooting, a spokeswoman for Aston said Tuesday. The girl, Constance Roberts, was found beaten, sexually assaulted and strangled near a school in June 1982. Daniel Stuart was convicted in June 1983 in Milford Superior Court of raping and killing her and is serving a life sentence for capital felony murder.

A Superior Court judge ordered a second trial for Stuart last fall, on the basis of two notes of a 24-year-old Milford man, the late Joseph Salomone, who was found hanged while the jury was deliberating in Stuart's case. The notes appeared to apologize for beating and raping an unidentified girl.

Ex-Bristol mayor qualifies for ballot

HARTFORD — A state elections official says that gubernatorial hopeful and former Bristol Mayor Frank J. Longo had collected enough petition signatures to get on the November ballot.

Dolly Roth of the secretary of the state's office said Tuesday that Longo had gathered thousands of signatures more than the 10,842 he needed to qualify for the ballot.

Longo, who was Bristol's Democratic mayor from 1971 to 1975, is running on the "Unaffiliated Party" line and has candidates running with him for other state offices.

He said he was running because Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill has presided over "the most corrupt administration in the state of Connecticut. He has shown no leadership. He never knows what's going on."

Worker suspended after giving tour

NEW HAVEN — A city Housing Authority worker has been suspended for a week without pay after he took a reporter through a housing project where he worked, officials said. Housing Authority Executive Director David Echols said Ed Sherman was suspended on Monday in part because he led his work post without notifying his supervisor.

Sherman said he was performing his normal tasks as a maintenance worker when he brought Josh Kovner, a reporter for the Jackson Newspapers, with him on Aug. 5. "After a fire at the nearby vacant Elm Haven 10-story building, Kovner 'asked me what I thought caused such a big fire,'" Sherman said. "I told him people leave things in vacant apartments, then I showed him some of the apartments."

Echols said Sherman was suspended because "he has a specific assigned job which he is hired to perform. He's hired to take care of building 100. That means keeping hallways and various other apartments cleaned up."

Lieberman praises jail ruling

HARTFORD — Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman is praising this week's state Supreme Court ruling barring prisoners from getting double credit for jail time served before being sentenced.

"If the court had not overturned a trial court ruling on this issue, many hundreds of Connecticut prisoners would potentially have been released from prison months and even years earlier than scheduled," Lieberman said Tuesday.

At issue was the interpretation of two statutes dealing with the calculation of pre-sentence jail time. One says that time spent in jail because the person could not post bail or because bail was not set get credit for such time if later sentenced to jail.

The second law states that time spent in jail because of an order from the court that the person charged be held in jail be credited to the person's eventual sentence.

Gejdenson optimistic on Trident funds

By Daniel Beagon, The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., says he's still optimistic Congress will approve money for a 14th Trident submarine this year, despite opposition from a senior Republican member of the House Armed Services Committee.

Rep. Bill Dickinson, R-Ala., ranking GOP member of the Armed Services Committee, said Tuesday he expected Congress would delay the Trident program for a year.

Dickinson, who led opposition Monday night to a Gejdenson amendment that would have restored the $1.5 billion Trident to the 1987 House defense authorization bill, said the lack of support for defense spending by Connecticut's congressmen helped jeopardize the ballistic missile submarine.

"I would have felt a little bit more sympathetic to their plaintive cries if they were a bit more supportive instead of putting something in their pockets back home," Dickinson said. Tridents are built by the Electric Boat division of General Dynamics Corp., located at Groton, Conn.

Authorization for a 14th Trident submarine was excluded from the defense authorization bill reported by the Armed Services Committee, because of spending targets set to meet the deficit reduction requirements.

Dickinson said Monday's vote puts the submarine in jeopardy, even though it is included in the Senate's version of the authorization bill and a House appropriations subcommittee has provided money for it. "I don't think it's got any chance at all in this year's budget cycle," Dickinson said in an interview. He said he felt the Trident program could be delayed for a year without jeopardizing national security by putting off the decommissioning of an older Polaris ballistic missile submarine. He said budget considerations were the only reason for the delay and that Congress and the Navy were happy with the submarine's performance.

Dickinson said Gejdenson was one of the backers of lower defense spending and wanted to restore the Trident only because "it affects his political interest."

Dickinson said he felt freshman Rep. John Rowland, R-Conn., was the only member of the state's House delegation with a consistent record of supporting defense spending. "But Gejdenson, in a separate interview, said he remained optimistic.

"I am confident we are going to win this fight," he said. Dickinson also complained that the move to restore the Trident was a backdoor attempt to cut President Reagan's "Star Wars" program.

"It was a cute little trick my liberal friends tried to pull," Dickinson said. "It was just an end run that was attempted by the liberals to get at the big programs, like SDI, that they don't approve and soak it up in the Trident."

The Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) is the formal name of the "Star Wars" missile defense program. Gejdenson said, however, that the Trident is more important to national security than SDI.

"Mr. Dickinson has never seen a weapons system he doesn't like," Gejdenson said. "Mr. Dickinson wants to hang onto SDI, which is a pie-in-the-sky waste of defense dollars. In the end, we will pass a budget that meets the spending targets and includes the Trident."

But one of Gejdenson's supporters in the Monday amendment fight, Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., chairman of the Armed Services seapower subcommittee, also predicted the fight to save the Trident would be tough.

"I favor putting it back if we get the money to do it," said Bennett. "There is nothing wrong with the interview, said he remained optimistic.

"I am confident we are going to win this fight," he said. Dickinson also complained that the move to restore the Trident was a backdoor attempt to cut President Reagan's "Star Wars" program.

Hospital employees approve contract

WATERBURY — Blue-collar workers who had been on strike from Waterbury Hospital since June 2 have voted unanimously to approve a new contract, and striking nurses are continuing their negotiations, officials said. Approximately 400 of the 545 striking service and maintenance workers approved by voice vote Tuesday night a contract hammered out by union officials and representatives from the hospital on Monday night.

"We are satisfied with the overall settlement, but it is unfortunate that it took this long to reach an agreement," said hospital spokesman Rich Bulat.

The new contract calls for wage increases of 3 percent this year, 3 percent next year, and 2 1/2 percent the third year, and a $100 bonus the first year, said Merilee Minstein, an official with the New England Health Care Employees Union, District 1199. She said that most workers had made about $8 per hour before the new contract, and that over three years, the new agreement is the equivalent of a 9 percent raise.

Bulat said hospital officials were pleased that the overall increase is less than 10 percent. "That was one of our original objectives," he said.

"We wanted to negotiate cost containment of health insurance costs. The union has agreed to reduce the hospital's contribution from 12 1/2 percent of gross payroll to 12 percent," Bulat said. But despite the fact the blue-collar workers voted to approve the new contract, that doesn't mean they'll be going back to work.

The service and maintenance workers won't cross picket lines while nurses are still striking Waterbury Hospital, Minstein said. The hospital's 147 licensed practical nurses and 429 registered nurses walked off the job on June 4 when they could not arrive at a new contract.

Unwelcome to playoffs

Manchester can be proud of its entry in the Greater Hartford Twilight League, even though the local Moriarty Bros. team didn't make it to tonight's championship game in the amateur baseball playoffs.

And Manchester can be proud that the town's Moriarty Field at Mount Nebo was the host diamond for much of the playoff series. The playoffs leading up to tonight's finale, also at Moriarty Field, have brought scores of players and hundreds of spectators to Manchester.

But Manchester should be ashamed of the way it greeted the players and the fans.

Moriarty Field's electric scoreboard was out of commission. Nobody had the control panel to work it. Nobody knew whether it would work; vandalism may have damaged it.

And the bathroom facilities at the field, the subject of many complaints about their condition anyway, weren't open. The gate to the rest rooms was locked, and nobody had the key. Nobody knew where to get it.

Manchester prides itself on the recreation programs and facilities available to its residents. It can do better when it comes to Moriarty Field.

Bring back the potholes

Today's mail brings an announcement by the state Department of Transportation that repaving will begin Friday on Charter Oak Street, Highland Street and Camp Meeting Road.

It's about time.

For nearly a month, motorists have been dodging the ever-growing potholes, above-grade manholes and washed-out sections of roadway along the heavily traveled route. Those hazards weren't there before mid-July when the DOT, preparing for the resurfacing, stripped away the top layers of pavement in two busy sections of the road.

One state legislator, asked earlier this week why the DOT left the road stripped for so long, merely shrugged. Drivers will appreciate the new surface more after putting up with the hazards, the legislator suggested.

A few blocks north, there's a lot of state money going into the proposal for Main Street reconstruction and the creation of a new downtown access road, another state-funded project. Last week, a consulting traffic engineer said that the new downtown roadway must be safe, convenient and efficient.

It's unfortunate that those three qualities are not considered when the state undertakes projects to improve or maintain existing roads.

Shape up; this guy means business

In the days following Toby Moffett's exit as a candidate for governor, a lot of our friends in the media have been obsessed with the question of where he goes from here.

We haven't made the seemingly obligatory mission to Branford to gaze into his eyes and ask in a political context, "How now, brown cow?" The more pertinent question — we think Toby would agree — is what lasting impact, if any, will his struggle have on the Democratic party in this state. Has this restless, ambitious liberal run out the string for the movement he has headed as folk hero? What will the fallout be for Democrats who stuck with him throughout his doomed campaign? In the short range, will the Moffett people heed his plea for unity behind the endorsed Democratic slate in the upcoming state election? By urging that they do exactly that, Moffett did the proper thing if he expects to have any future as a Democrat. Surely he had to swallow hard when he came to the name of Gov. Bill O'Neill as one to support. But it was the wise course for Moffett to take.

Jim Wade, the Slimsbury attorney who is one of O'Neill's inner political troika (with George Hannon of Glastonbury and Jack Mahoney of Waterbury), said weeks ago that Moffett's challenge had spurred the O'Neill campaign to sharpen up.

That was the assessment of Moffett's political impact. Shape up, in other words; this guy means business. State Rep. Irene Favreau of New Britain, a Moffett loyalist to the end, had another slant on it. Moffett's campaign, she told a reporter, had made

Imperfect plans for Main Street

To the Editor: People of Manchester: Were you there? I attended the Board of Directors' meeting at Lincoln Center last Tuesday, Aug. 5, to hear the latest topics on the agenda, and the possible outcome of that meeting.

Among the topics, two were of interest to me — not for any personal gain or because I was involved in any other way, but because I am interested as to what happens for the overall good of Manchester. The topic of developing the land on North Elm Street into senior housing was a good idea, in my estimation, as otherwise the land, due to trust restrictions, would have to be used for park purposes. I believe we have enough parks to maintain and keep attractive to neighbors.

The topic which held my attention was that of developing and restructuring Main Street. People of Manchester: Do you know that our traffic situation is practically on a par with that of Boston, Massachusetts? That is the impression I got when I listened to the experts. Really! I sat and listened to how the flow of traffic should be directed to Purnell Place in back of the Main Street stores (at a loss of six small ongoing businesses) because the heavy volume on Main Street would interfere with the restructuring! And the sight line from Purnell Place into Oak Street was dangerous because of limited vision.

Of course, all these years we have not had any major catastrophes with present sight lines and any idiot who pulls into traffic in a blind area without thoroughly looking deserves to get clobbered.

Mr. Ginter of Fuss & O'Neill gave a very concise picture of what should be done to Purnell Place for increasing traffic.

WASHINGTON — House and Senate negotiators, reaching a dead end in efforts to draft a tax-overhaul compromise, are turning the chore over to the chairmen of the two congressional tax-writing committees.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, will try to accomplish what the 22 congressional tax writers were unable to do in 19 days of bargaining.

Rostenkowski and Packwood began meeting privately Tuesday afternoon and continued their talks late into the night before taking a break to resume the effort today.

Neither man would discuss the details of their talks, which are aimed at salvaging the unofficial goal of reaching a compromise on tax-overhaul legislation by the end of the week, when Congress begins a three-week recess.

WASHINGTON — Few relationships between two countries are of greater mutual concern — and more potentially rancorous — than that between the United States and Mexico. That's what makes today's discussion between President Reagan and President Miguel de la Madrid at the White House so important to both countries.

De la Madrid, who studied at Harvard and speaks admirable English, called Dale Van Atta from Mexico City the other day to talk about today's meeting with Reagan.

"As you know," he said, "Mexico has been in a very difficult situation from the economic point of view because of decreased prices in oil." This was putting it mildly: In the first six weeks of this year, oil prices dropped by 50 percent, devastating Mexico's oil-dependent economy.

"This has been the principal and paramount economic problem for Mexico," de la Madrid said. "We have lost one-third of our total export revenues. We have also lost 15 percent of public income."

"And we are facing a very big challenge from the economic standpoint. And we need collaboration from the United States on the financial side and in commercial matters."

DE LA MADRID EXPRESSED high hopes for today's summit. "I have always found in President Reagan a very constructive and a very positive attitude toward Mexican problems," he said.

The two men first met in 1982, when de la Madrid was president-elect, and have met three times since. "We have an excellent personal relationship," de la Madrid told us. "He calls me 'Miguel' and I call him 'Ron.' He's very gentle with me. And he has shown, always, a very positive attitude toward strengthening the relationship between Mexico and the United States."

Angry student shoots boss, 4 others

NEW YORK — A trade school work-study student angered over money went on a shooting rampage, killing his boss and wounding four other people in a half-hour of terror, police said.

Authorities said Van Anthony Hull, a 29-year-old civil technology student at New York Technical College in Brooklyn, kept police and rescue workers at bay for 30 minutes Tuesday while his victims lay bleeding.

When finally captured, he was carrying an empty .38-caliber handgun and a 9mm automatic, police said. Hull was charged early today with four counts each of attempted murder and first-degree assault and two counts each of felony and misdemeanor possession of a weapon, said Sgt. John Venetucci, a police spokesman.

A murder charge remained under investigation, Venetucci said. The conditions of the four others shot and one person injured in the affray ranged from guarded to critical early today.

In a news conference Tuesday night, police Capt. Michael Julian said the episode stemmed from a dispute with the school concerning finances. Hull apparently thought he was due a $700 check, Julian said.

Michigan workers join phone strike

DETROIT — Michigan Bell Telephone Co. employees represented by the Communications Workers of America walked off their jobs at midnight Tuesday, bringing to 52,000 the number of phone workers on strike nationwide.

CWA spokesman Dave Kohler said members left work at 11:59 p.m. EDT when an agreement extending the old contract expired. He said pickets would be set up at 40 Detroit-area locations immediately and expanded to most Michigan Bell facilities Wednesday morning.

a better governor of O'Neill. That, we are sure, would offer Moffett some feeling of accomplishment because one of his main themes was that Connecticut deserved better than O'Neill was giving. But what of the outlook for the Moffett people?

Already some Democrats are saying two of their party's top leaders should review their usefulness in the wake of Moffett's fall. They are John Flynn of Avon and Mary Sullivan of Greenwich, two members of the Democratic National Committee. Flynn has been the labor activist, Sullivan, long associated with the party's liberal wing, won her seat two years ago in a contest with Maureen Sattl of New London, an O'Neill backer.

Flynn is also an official with the United Auto Workers, where Moffett had considerable strength. But the UAW has had hard times because of the domino effect of plant closings and flights to other states. Its political clout isn't what it used to be.

Report says Deaver was warned

WASHINGTON — Lobbyist Michael K. Deaver and members of his company were warned at least three times by Reagan administration officials that their activities could be improper, a House subcommittee report shows.

In addition, the report revealed, the Deaver firm continued lobbying to retain tax credits for businesses investing in Puerto Rico — even though it knew the Reagan administration opposed the program.

According to the subcommittee, the continued lobbying was contrary to Deaver's testimony to the panel that he would "cancel" a contract rather than act against U.S. interests.

The disclosures were included in a report released Tuesday by the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee. It concluded Deaver "knowingly and willfully testified falsely" before the panel about his lobbying activities.

The committee adopted the report Feb. 8, and asked a court-appointed independent counsel to investigate whether Deaver should be prosecuted for possible perjury, false statements and obstruction of a congressional investigation.

Reagan anticipates summit, gains

By Terence Hunt The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan says problems gripping the Soviet Union bolster chances that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev will be interested in making progress at the next superpower summit.

Reagan, who flew home from Chicago late Tuesday after a rare, out-of-town news conference, also expressed interest in South African President P. W. Botha's offer for limited talks with Western allies and neighboring countries.

He said such a meeting might determine "if we couldn't bring about some coming together of these responsible leaders of the black community" in South Africa. Fielding a wide array of questions from White House and Chicago reporters, Reagan defended his call for voluntary drug tests as a step that poses no threat of punishment or job loss for drug users.

And, he said the United States has believed many times that the release of the American hostages in Lebanon was imminent, only to have hopes dashed. "We've had some broken hearts," the president added.

The news conference came as a top-level team of American negotiators flew home from two days of talks in the Soviet Union on key arms control issues.

While saying he had not received any report from his negotiators, Reagan said he was hopeful about a summit.

"Yes, I am optimistic," Reagan said. "And I'm optimistic that we're going to make more progress than probably has been made in a number of years because of some of the problems that are concerning the general secretary at this time."

He did not elaborate. Gorbachev has been struggling with a faltering economy and the political and environmental damage from the world's worst nuclear accident, at Chernobyl.

Discussing South Africa, Reagan said "some of the most prominent of the black leaders" are "all solidly opposed to sanctions" designed to punish the white-minority government for its system of racial segregation, known as apartheid.

He said the one group in South Africa that supports imposition of sanctions — the outlawed African National Congress — was "the most radical" and had been infiltrated by the Communist Party.

At the same time, Reagan said he did not mean to suggest that only radical groups want sanctions to be imposed. In particular, he exempted Bishop Desmond Tutu, the black South African cleric who won the Nobel Peace Prize and has been outspoken in his criticism of Reagan's policy toward South Africa.

While expressing continued opposition to sanctions, Reagan noted Botha's suggestion for meetings involving the United States, West Germany, Britain and France, along with countries bordering South Africa.

But in his speech Tuesday in Durban, South Africa, Botha said the Pretoria government would not be forced into negotiations with radical elements, a reference to calls from the Commonwealth and the European Community to lift the ban on the African National Congress.

Canada gives entry to boat refugees

By Jeff Bradley The Associated Press

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland — Canada has granted entry to 152 Sri Lankans rescued from two open lifeboats off Newfoundland, but one police official expressed skepticism at accounts given by the refugees of their odyssey.

Groggy but well-dressed, the Sri Lankans, 144 men, three women and five children, arrived Tuesday aboard a Canadian fisheries patrol vessel after being rescued by fishing boats 6 miles from Newfoundland's southeastern coast.

They said they had paid the equivalent of $3,000 to $5,000 in cash and jewelry to an Indian agency that promised to smuggle them into Canada, and had been put into lifeboats after voyaging halfway around the world in a freighter.

"We thought we'd missed the place and would die," said Kandasamy Lingaratnam, self-appointed spokesman for the Sri Lankans, who have asked Canadian authorities for refugee status.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police Inspector Jack Lavars said the Sri Lankans were members of the Tamil minority who claimed to be fleeing persecution by the ethnic Sinhalese majority in the troubled island nation off southern India.

The refugees described a 35-day odyssey they said began under cover of night off India. They said they boarded an unidentified freighter crewed by Chinese or Koreans, and were kept below decks and given meager provisions until they arrived at Canada.

Lingaratnam said the Tamils were crowded into the lifeboats at dusk last week, and said, "We were all very scared."

When land didn't appear, he said, those on board "cried and shouted, all the time praying to God. Some people vomited."

Lingaratnam said each of the lifeboats carried three three-gallon barrels of fresh water that was sipped carefully. Some of the Sri Lankans had brought biscuits, he said, but said there was no food left when the rescuers arrived five days later.

"There is some consistency in their story, but some inconsistencies in the facts," he told a news conference Tuesday after questioning the Sri Lankans.

Officials were also trying to determine the name and whereabouts of the delivery vessel, and the refugees' point of origin.

"The captain and crew of the vessel probably put them off at the first view of Canadian land and then beat it back to international waters," Lavars said.

The Toronto Star today quoted Rod Singarayer, a Sri Lankan who helped police interview the refugees, as saying he believed they had begun their voyage in West Germany.

"I don't think they are telling the truth at all," Singarayer was quoted as saying.

Opposition likely on fuel aid plans

By Alex Girelli
Associate Editor

State Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester, expects to hear some opposition from oil dealers to a proposed state fuel assistance program at a public hearing in Manchester next week.

Zinsser said this morning he has received calls from oil dealers who object to a provision in Gov. William O'Neill's program that would permit the state's Office of Policy and Management to set the price of fuel oil delivered under the assistance program at a fixed percentage above the market price at the New Haven Harbor.

The program provides $52 million for low-income energy assistance and weatherization efforts. It will be the subject of a hearing at 7 p.m. Aug. 20 in the hearing room of Lincoln Center.

A spokesman for a major fuel dealer in the area, who preferred not to be identified, said today that if the OPM sets the price at a small amount above the harbor price, "They are going to wipe out the little guy."

The spokesman said that his firm has established a good working relationship with the Community Renewal Team and other agencies that administer the program and the price limit will damage that.

Zinsser said he feels that some control is necessary, however. He said he has heard reports of oil dealers adding as much 15 cents to the price of a gallon of fuel oil.

Zinsser said that some 20 million gallons of oil are delivered under the program and at even a penny a gallon an overcharge would be serious.

Zinsser is co-chairman of the General Assembly's Energy and Public Utilities Committee which will hold the hearing.

Bolton zoners back project

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — The Chairman of the Zoning Commission said in a letter to the Public Building Commission Monday that a building permit for a lighting project at Herrick Park should be approved and suggested that another public hearing be held before the work begins.

Zoning Chairman Philip G. Dooley said that he "saw no basis for denying a permit which is primarily for structure and electrical."

The PBC had asked for Dooley's opinion on the matter, according to Chairman Ron Heim because there is no zoning ordinance for the project, which involves the installation of new floodlights at two ballfields at Herrick Memorial Park. Dooley also suggested in the letter that residents should discuss the light's height and brightness before the project begins. "It should have the visibility of a public hearing as I have told (First Selectman) Doug Cheney," the letter stated.

This morning, Dooley clarified his request for a town meeting. "It is the type of structure you would find zoning regulations against in many places," he said, noting the height and size of the structures. "If it shines in somebody's bedroom window, somebody's not going to like it."

However, members of the PBC saw no need for town input. "I don't see any reason for a further public hearing," said Joseph Loersch, Philip A. Pineo agreed, adding that "these meetings are open to the public."

At a July public hearing, voters approved plans to use $18,000 in federal revenue funds for the extra cost of the project.

Plans to renovate the ballfields have been in the works for three years. The original project was abandoned after it was deemed too expensive. Plans to enlarge the existing field were rejected by voters last year after the cost estimate rose to nearly twice the amount the town had allocated.

Water main break interrupts service

By George Lovyn
Herald Reporter

A water main break this morning at the corner of Hartford Road and Elm Street flooded a quarter-mile section of Hartford Road, nearly injured three construction workers and left residents in southeastern Manchester with low water pressure.

The break occurred at about 10:15 a.m. about 30 yards east of the intersection near Cheney Hall. Workers with the Milton C. Beebe Co. of Storrs were trying to upgrade the connection of an eight-inch water main that runs north with a 12-inch main that runs along Hartford Road, according to town Water Operations Manager Kevin Walsh.

Walsh said a cave-in broke the valve that connects the two pipes, sending a rush of water into a seven-foot-deep trench workers had excavated. Three workers immediately jumped out of the hole, avoiding being covered by the water, he said.

The break depleted water reserves kept in tanks at the Nike site and on Forest Street, Walsh said. The department was flooded with calls from town water customers from as far away as Spring Street and Carriage Drive, Walsh said.

Customers were left without water for about 30 minutes until valves on either side of the break were closed, he said. The amount of water lost, and the cost of the break were unknown, Walsh said.

"It's quite a bit," he said. "Traffic along Hartford Road was detoured around the site onto the parking lot at the former Manchester Community College building. Water was flowing west down Hartford Road toward the intersection with Goslee Drive because crews were pumping water out of the trench.

Walsh and Town Fire Department Deputy Chief Peter Beckwith said the department was concerned a utility pole near the hole might fall because of the cave-in. Crews from Northeast Utilities were nearby, but no trouble was reported as of 11 a.m.

The construction work was being done as part of the public improvements being made to the Cheney Historic District, which includes the widening of Hartford Road.

Police roundup

Hartford men charged with burglary

Police arrested two men who fled on foot Tuesday after being caught in the act of burglarizing a Manchester apartment, police said. Edwin Padilla, 30, and Marcos R. DeJesus, 43, both of Hartford, were charged with third-degree burglary. Police said they also charged DeJesus with criminal impersonation after he gave them a false name. The incident was reported around 2:54 p.m. by a rental agent at the office of Damato Enterprises, and tenants at the apartment complex, located at 240 New State Road, according to police.

Police said witnesses had observed two suspicious men hanging around the complex. Police said that witnesses later saw the men, holding what looked like tools, near the window of an apartment.

When the rental agent yelled at them, the two men fled into a cornfield, heading for Adams Street, police said. Police found the apartment's first-floor window had been forced open, but nothing was taken. Police said they found Padilla under a Hockanum River bridge overpass. DeJesus, police said, was discovered coming out of the field back onto New State Road.

Both were held on $50,000 bonds and were presented at Manchester Superior Court this morning.

Supermarket Shopper

It's parents' responsibility to watch kids while shopping

By Martin Sloane
DEAR MARTIN: I'm glad you stuck up for mothers who have no choice but to bring their children along when they go shopping. I am one of them.

DEAR MARTIN: I wondered why there were so few refund forms displayed in the supermarkets in my area. I asked the store managers about this.

DEAR ANNETTE: I'm glad your daughter is such a good shopping companion and I appreciate the problem mothers have when they must bring their children to the supermarket.

DEAR YOLAND: I am convinced that there is only one effective way to distribute refund forms in supermarkets, and that is for store personnel to display samples of available forms, and then distribute them, one at a time, to shoppers who request them.

Those who must restrict their salt intake have a friend

Microwave cooking is a great help to people who want to limit the intake of salt. The microwave intensifies flavors of foods. Microwave recipes call for much less salt and other seasonings than recipes developed for other cooking methods.

Microwave Kitchen
Marge Churchill
In microwave cooking, salt causes the skin to dry and split. It is generally thought that salting meat draws out its moisture and toughens it. There is some difference of opinion about this, but if you're trying to limit salt intake, we see no reason to add salt anyway.

1 medium tomato, cut into wedges
2 tablespoons white wine
1/2 teaspoon dill
Place steaks on roasting rack. Microwave at high for 6 to 8 minutes, or until meat is no longer pink, rearranging after half the cooking time.

Vegetables prepared in the microwave should never be salted before cooking. The salt will adhere to the vegetables, causing dark spots or "freckles." Surface salt also has a tendency to distort the zig-zag pattern of microwave energy, causing an uneven cooking pattern.

Processed or prepackaged foods contain more salt than fresh foods. If you are limiting salt intake, read the labels and look for the words "sodium," "monosodium glutamate" and "combination words," such as "sodium nitrate," containing the word "sodium," also mean "salt."

combine crumbled ground beef, onion, tomato, rice and horseradish. Mix well. Fill green peppers with meat mixture.
Place a few wooden picks around the bottom of peppers to hold upright, if needed. Place on a roasting rack. Cover with wax paper. Microwave at high for 13 to 17 minutes, or until meat is no longer pink and peppers are tender, rearranging after half the cooking time.

Līga Jahnke of Porter Street prepares traditional Latvian dishes.

Your Neighbor's Kitchen
Jahnke inspired by native Latvia

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter
Līga Jahnke of Porter Street is a refugee from Latvia, a small Baltic Sea country in the U.S.S.R. Though she feels strong ties to her native land, she has absolutely no memories of her homeland.

There were two primary ties to her European roots as she was growing up in New York. Jahnke recalls. One was the language, Latvian, spoken in her home. The other was the Latvian food her mother prepared for the family.

Jahnke remembers the days when her mother would take a subway home from her pediatric practice, enter the house at 6 o'clock and have a traditional meal on the table by 7. "It was an important time for us. No matter how busy we were, we all sat down together for dinner," Jahnke says.

As a working mother herself, she heads the gifted education program for the town of Columbia - Jahnke has tried to preserve this tradition in her own life. "My friends see me starting a big meal always from scratch, late in the afternoon, and they ask me why I'm doing it," she says. "I guess it goes back to the values I got from my mother."

The meals served at the Jahnke home are not always Latvian, however. That cuisine leans heavily on cream, sour cream, salted meats and smoked fish. Thick slices of bread, spread generously with butter, were served with every meal in Jahnke's childhood home.

"You can't afford to eat like that today," she says. "But it's still wonderful for special occasions." Here are some traditional favorites which Jahnke, her husband and her daughter especially enjoy. The first two, stuffed cabbage with boiled potatoes and salad, form a typical Latvian dinner. Pastries, such as the pirags, would traditionally be served at birthdays, funerals and Christmas.

Combine beef, rice, egg, onion, pepper and salt. Knead slightly and place a portion into the center of each cabbage leaf. Roll and secure with a toothpick. Melt butter in a heavy Dutch oven and brown the cabbage rolls, five or six at a time. Do not crowd in the pot, or they will steam rather than brown.

Twilight League playoffs serving up good baseball

The Jack Rose Memorial Twilight League will conclude tonight at Moriarty Field with regular season champ Matten Jewellers facing Katz Sports Shop for the playoff crown. Moriarty Brothers, the dominant team in the league for years, was sent to the sidelines Monday night by Katz for Savings' Dave Moriarty. The Bankers' bid for a championship berth was spoiled Tuesday night by Katz, 7-6. Moriarty, as it turns out, happens to be the varsity baseball coach at Iting Junior High School and a social studies teacher at the school.

Thoughts ApLEnty

Len Auster, Sports Editor

It's safe to say the varsity players there do learn something about the game of baseball. Although the host team, Moriarty's, is not in the championship game, it should not preclude baseball fans from getting in a game up close and personal. Where else can you see some top-flight ball, all for two bucks?

While Moriarty's wasn't hitting the baseball, it showed it could field it. The infield turned over four double plays and all were of major league caliber. There were some outstanding individual defensive plays as well. Second baseman Mike Johnson, who was in the Texas Ranger organization for awhile, showed his prowess with outstanding plays against the New York Yankees and the Newington Capitals the previous afternoon. And shortstop Ray Sullivan showed why he was of Major League potential with his work with the leather.

The play, itself, should bring out the fans. There are, however, some negatives as well. The Twilight League does get usage of Moriarty Field for a lot of prices — nothing — but there are items in and out of the league's control that need attention. For example, the umpiring, especially in the game on Sunday, left something to be desired. It was a career move. Also, the scoreboard was not in operation. It should have been, particularly Monday night when a sizeable crowd was on hand to keep a close eye on Moriarty's. Other than some nuisance items such as these, keeping track of inning and score is not always easy. And thirdly, lavatory facilities should have been made available. Those were locked up.

Damarjian wins women's links title

HARTFORD — Nicole Damarjian, representing Tallwood Country Club, won the 1986 Southern New England Women's Golf Association Championship last week with a two-day total of 160 at Kenney Park Golf Course.

Flo Ramsey and Kathy Dimlow, both of Tallwood, were back among the finishers with totals of 175 and 190, respectively.

Young Berube standout swimmer

QUESTON, Fla. — Ryan Berube, son of Susan and Richard Berube, former Manchester residents, had the highest point total in his 11-12 year age group at the Florida Golf Coast Junior Olympics swimming competition recently.

The young Berube won four events, took three third placements and a fourth in garnering the highest total in his class. He also competed with three teammates from the North Palm Beach Swim Club and combined to take three firsts and a second-place finish. He was among seven swimmers selected to compete in a three-day Southern Zone All-Star Meet in Ft. Lauderdale. He is a seventh grader at the Benjamin School in North Palm Beach.

Richard Berube competed in swimming and diving while at Manchester High School in the early 1960s and also gave lessons at Globe Hollow, Verplanck and Saulters.

Ryan's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Donahue and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Berube, are Manchester residents.

Angels retire Carew's uniform

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The California Angels honored Rod Carew Tuesday night at Anaheim Stadium by retiring his No. 29 jersey. The ceremony took place prior to the Angels' game against the Minnesota Twins, with whom the seven-time American League batting champion began his career as the 1974 A.L. Rookie of the Year.

Carew, the first Angels' player to have his number discontinued, joined them in 1979, two years after he was named A.L. Most Valuable Player, and helped lead them to division titles in '79 and 1982.

He climaxed his career last Aug. 4 when he reached the 3,000-hit plateau with a single against the Twins' Frank Viola.

Bo Jackson suffers injured right leg

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson removed himself from the lineup Tuesday night after injuring his right leg while running out a ground ball.

"I fell a twinge, my upper hamstring," said Jackson, who turned down a multimillion-dollar contract with the National Football League Tampa Bay Buccaneers to sign with the Kansas City Royals.

Jackson was injured in the fifth inning of the Memphis Chickies' Southern League game against the Jacksonville Expos. He slowed to a trot and then to a walk after hitting a ground ball to shortstop.

Jackson had a single in two at-bats as Memphis beat Jacksonville 8-4.

Grand jury continues Bias probe

UPPER MERLBORO, Md. — A grand jury investigation of intercollegiate sports at the University of Maryland appears to be focusing on allegations of drug use by athletes.

The grand jury today reached the midpoint of its second full week of meetings on the death of Len Bias and questions about the athletic program that have arisen since the death of the basketball star from cocaine intoxication.

Most of Tuesday's session was taken up with testimony about the drug testing program instituted at the College Park campus last year.

NL roundup

Ryan is far from disabled

By Dick Brinker
The Associated Press

While there were no visions of a no-hitter dancing in Nolan Ryan's head, the celebration of his return from the disabled list had the Los Angeles Dodgers shaking theirs.

Ryan, the all-time major league leader with five no-hitters, pitched 5 1/3 innings of hitless ball Tuesday night as the Astros blanked the Dodgers 3-0. But the 39-year-old Ryan, who left after six innings with a two-hitter, wouldn't have had the opportunity to add to his no-hitter list regardless.

It was predetermined that Ryan would throw no more than 100 pitches in his first start since July 27.

"He was coming out regardless. I need him in September, but he's not coming out until he's ready to go back to work," said Manager Hal Lanier, who permitted Ryan to throw 99 pitches.

Ryan's feat, which included six strikeouts to bring his all-time major-league-leading total to 4,215, was amazing in the eyes of Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda.

"Go ask him what his secret is and come back and tell me," Lasorda said when asked how a pitcher who has pitched 100 no-hitters can continue to throw extremely hard.

Elsewhere in the National League, it was Philadelphia's New York 1; San Francisco 2; Cincinnati 1; San Diego 4; Atlanta 3; and Chicago's Pittsburgh 1.

Phillies 3, Mets 1

Philadelphia's Kevin Gross got himself into some trouble, but found a unique way of escaping — retiring New York's clutch-hitting Keith Hernandez three times to end an inning.

Hernandez, 3-for-5 against Gross this season, went 6-for-4 and left six runners stranded.

"I just gave him good stuff," Gross said. "I think I outguessed him."

Gross, 39, allowed six hits, struck out more than 100 and walked three in pitching his sixth complete game. The only blemish was Len Dykstra's game-opening home run.

Giants 2, Reds 1

San Francisco third baseman Bob Brenly felt empathy for Cincinnati's rookie shortstop Kurt Stillwell, who booted Dan Gladden's bases-loaded grand slam to allow the winning run to score in the sixth inning.

"I was as surprised as anyone that my control was as good as it was," said Ryan, 8-7, who walked two batters. "Most times after a layoff, I struggle with my delivery. But I guess you'd have to say the layoff didn't set me back."

The victory, Houston's second in as many nights in the four-game series with Los Angeles, left the third-place Dodgers nine games behind the pacesetter Astros in the NL West.

Tax on inherited and avoidable

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

My husband bought some property 37 years ago, before he emigrated to the United States. The property was in his name until his recent death, when I inherited it. I sold the property for $130,000 and would like to share this with my three adult children, giving each $30,000.

What is the best way to handle this? Are there any special taxes I or the children would have to pay?

ANSWER: There are three federal tax situations of which you should be aware. However, by handling things properly, no tax will be due.

First, there's the estate tax, which you don't have to pay. Since Jan. 1, 1982, one spouse can leave to the other everything he or she owns, free of federal estate tax. Then, there's the capital gains tax. If the $130,000 you received from the sale was higher than the property's "basis," you had a profit. Because the profit from the sale of inherited real estate, stocks or any other capital asset is always counted as a long-term capital gain, only 40 percent of the profit is taxable.

The basis of an inherited capital asset is the value put on it when the estate is settled. That's the value on the date of death, unless an alternative valuation date is used.

You are required to report the sale of that property and list the capital gain or capital loss on Schedule D of your federal income tax return.

So, you can make gifts of $10,000 to each of your three children for three years in a row. You'll duck all gift tax return filing requirements and won't have to pay any gift tax.

QUESTION: My son needs about $5,000 to buy a vehicle and I plan to make him a loan of that amount. He will pay me interest, which I will report as income on my income tax return and which he will take as an interest deduction in his return.

Judge Wapner says, "Do it in writing." My son and I agree we should draw up a loan agreement. Other than the amount of the loan, the interest rate and the length of time of the loan, can you advise how the agreement should be written?

ANSWER: Besides the items you mention, the agreement should list the date the loan is made, the date it is due and the terms under which the interest and principal are to be paid.

There's a very easy way to do this. Get a promissory note form and fill it out. You can buy that form at a stationery store or go to your public library and make a photocopy from a book containing various documents. Your librarian will know the book to use.

QUESTION: Back in 1950, I bought 25 shares of stock at $12.50 a share. As the result of additional purchases, I now own 1,000 shares, presently worth $28 per share. If I were to sell, it would be a monumental task to determine the stock's basis for tax purposes.

ANSWER: Nope. You're stuck with that "monumental task," whether you sell the stock or give it to your children. They will have to know your basis.

When stock is sold at a profit, the recipient's basis is the donor's basis. When gift stock is sold at a loss, the recipient's basis is either the donor's basis or the market value on the date of the gift — whichever is lower.

You're learning, the hard way, that it's mighty important to keep accurate records on the basis of stocks and other capital assets.

If you keep that stock until you die, the basis will "step out" to its value when your estate is settled. But that step-up applies to inherited stock, not gift stock.

Small businesses are not optimistic

NEW YORK (AP) — Small-business attitudes offer little support for White House expectations that the economy will reach a 4 percent growth rate in the second half of the year.

Dunkelberg, who conducts the study on a continuing basis, noted in his July survey "a major fall-off in spending and hiring plans, and a deterioration in confidence about the strength of the economy by year-end."

Town looks to club to resolve dispute

Town Attorney Kevin O'Brien has concluded that the Manchester Country Club is violating its lease with the town and two courts and has sent his formal opinion to the Manchester Board of Directors for action. Town Director Stephen T. Penny, who asked O'Brien to investigate the possible violations, said this morning that the matter has been placed on the agenda for the board's Aug. 26 meeting. "If the issue is not resolved by the club's Board of Governors by its own motion," Penny said, "I will recommend that the town's executive committee meet with the club's board to discuss the matter."

Resident undeterred by Irish violence

They went back to the kitchen thinking the worst had passed. "We thought everything was all right," she said Wednesday from Portland, which is located about 30 miles west of Belfast. But two minutes later, a deafening explosion threw Maxwell and her relatives to the floor and shattered their windows with broken glass. Maxwell injured her hip and suffered a cut on her head. Maxwell, 42, who was born and raised in Manchester and resides at 80 Fairfield St., became another casualty of the "Troubles," a sectarian violence that has taken over 2,000 lives in Northern Ireland since 1969.

Bridge firm cleared Plans to appeal

A Superior Court jury today cleared a New York engineering firm of negligence in the 1982 collapse of the Mianus River bridge, rejecting state claims that the design caused the span's failure. The state had filed a lawsuit against Tippetts-Abbett-McCarthy-Stratton, the bridge's designer, contending the angle at which the span was constructed caused its failure. Story on page 4.

Senate panel backs court nominations

WASHINGTON - The Senate Judiciary Committee today approved and sent to the full Senate President Reagan's nominations of William H. Rehnquist as chief justice and Antonin Scalia as Rehnquist's replacement on the Supreme Court. The vote on Scalia, 16-0. Five Democrats opposed the Rehnquist nomination: Joseph R. Biden of Delaware, Patrick J. Leahy of Vermont, Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, Paul Simon of Illinois and Howard M. Metzenbaum of Ohio. There Democratic leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., voted with the majority but said his vote was intended only in favor of permitting a roll call by the full Senate. Byrd said he is reserving final judgment on Rehnquist's confirmation to succeed the retiring Warren E. Burger. A few supporters of Rehnquist expressed reservations about his fitness to be chief justice. Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., said, "It was not possible for a senator to ignore several issues that clouded the nomination of this nominee."

Bombing kills at least 19

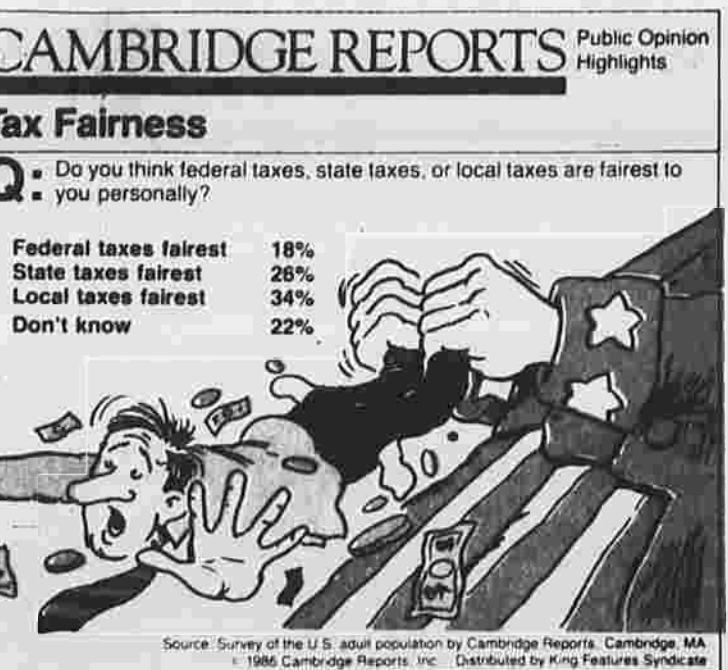

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - A blue Mercedes-Benz sedan packed with explosives blew up next to a coffee shop today, devastating a neighborhood in Beirut. Police said 19 people were killed and 90 were wounded. The Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio station quoted unidentified witnesses as saying they saw a driver in the car escape before it blew up. Police said they could not confirm the report. The car bombing, the fourth in the capital in 18 days, set two apartment buildings on fire, including one owned by President Amin Gemayel's family, police said. Rescuers used ladders to evacuate tenants trapped by the flames in the Gemayel's seventh-story building. "We had to evacuate tenants trapped by the flames in the Gemayel's seventh-story building," police said. "No member of the president's family lived in the building, police said. The blast, which occurred about 100 yards from St. Joseph Hospital, wrecked 30 shops and 27 cars. Seven bodies removed from the cars were charred beyond recognition, police said. Five other buildings were heavily damaged in the 10 a.m. explosion. Civil defense rescuers, fire engines and ambulances raced to the scene, and hospitals broadcast radio appeals for blood donations.

U.S., Mexico plan trade discussions

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan and Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid announced today that their two governments will open negotiations on a new agreement aimed at expanding cross-border trade and investment. After a meeting at the White House of more than 2 1/2 hours, Reagan said he and de la Madrid set a target date of 1987 for reaching an agreement. Reagan also announced that a six-year ban on imports of tuna from Mexico had been lifted. The restrictions had been imposed following a dispute over fishing rights between the two countries. With de la Madrid standing at his side on the south lawn of the White House, Reagan called the meeting one of the most constructive he has had with the Mexican leader. He praised Mexico's "courageous efforts" to come to grips with the country's worst economic crisis in half a century.
