Drop in price of gas keeps costs steady

Retail prices falling at annual rate of 0.2%

By Martin Crutsinger The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The first drop in gasoline prices since April made up for the steepest rise in food costs in more than two years to hold retail prices steady in July, the government said today.

More good news for consumers: So far this year, prices have fallen 0.2 percent, at an annual rate, their best showing since 1949.

But analysts warn that the July report could mark the end of the best news on inflation. Yet no economist was predicting that prices would begin rising rapidly.

The belief that prices will turn upward is based in part on the OPEC agreement earlier this month to temporarily cut oil production in an effort to boost sagging world oil prices.

As for last month, however, gasoline prices fell 6.6 percent, more than offsetting gains posted in May and June and their fourth drop this year.

Indeed, for the first seven months of 1986, gasoline prices have declined 27.4 percent and now stand 35.7 percent below their peak level of March 1981.

Food costs, however, rose a sharp 0.8 percent in July, their biggest gain since January 1984. All major food categories showed substantial increases, with beef prices rising for the second straight month after falling for the first five months of the year.

Poultry prices were up 7.4 percent, the Labor Department said, reflecting in part the Southeastern heat and drought, which killed thousands of chickens. Fruit and vegetable prices also turned around in July, rising 0.8 percent after falling a sharp 2.8 percent in June. Prices for fish and eggs also rose last month. Housing costs, which had risen 0.5 percent in June, held steady last month, largely a reflection of declines in the costs of electricity and natural gas. Prices for both energy sources had surged in June after declining in the three preceding months.

Fuel oil prices fell 5.8 percent. the seventh straight decline. Those costs were 39.0 percent under their 1981 peak. Energy prices overall fell 4.1 percent last month. Charges for telephone services. which had jumped 1.9 percent in June, were unchanged in July as an increase in local service costs was offset by continuing declines in long distance charges.

PENNY SIEFFERT , back at the Herald

The good news on gasoline prices, analysts cautioned, may soon end. They said the OPEC pact could mean a 10-cent-a-gallon boost in pump prices. On Aug. 5, after months of wrangling, the 13-member cartel reached an agreement to reduce production from a level of 20.5 million barrels a day to 16.7 million barrels daily.

For all of 1986, analysts are predicting that consumer prices will rise by just 2 percent, the best inflation performance in more than two decades.

Through the first seven months of the year, the news has been even better as the 0.2 percent rate of decline was the best price news for the first seven months of the year since retail costs fell 2.4 percent from January through July 1949. As recently as 1980, prices soared 12.4 percent.

Supporters of plans to change the Town Charter so that the Eighth Utilities District will not have the power to veto a merger with the town unveiled the Committee for Charter Revision this morning. Members said the new group is for the charter change but not necessarily for consolidation.

"Consolidation is not what this committee is all about." said William H. Sleith, committee president. He said the group will urge residents to approve a referendum question this November that removes a Town Charter provision that allows the district to stop a merger by voting against it in a separate vote.

However, members left little doubt that they favor changes that would increase the authority of the town to oversee sewer service and fire protection in the northern part of Manchester - tasks the district has provided for almost 100 years.

"We believe that it is unfair to the large majority of Manchester citizens to place in the hands of a few the power of veto directly pertaining to town management functions involving planning, asset allocation, and safety," said

Other members present this morning were Democratic town Director Stephen Penny, Roy Conyers president of Conyers Construction Co. of Manchester. former town Public Works Director Jay Giles and Richard Carter. who will serve as the group's treasurer. Sleith said Board of Education member Philip Susag. Advisory Park and Recreation Commission Chairman Joel Janenda, and Matthew Bronisz are also members. He said the group contains members of both political parties and residents who either live or work in both the town and the district. Sleith, the retired head of the Iona Manufacturing Co., said the group was organized two to three weeks ago and has about 15 members. He said he expects the group to grow. He said papers will be filed with the secretary of state's office today listing the organization as a political group.

Sleith said the group plans to distribute pamphlets, put up signs. run ads in newspapers and form a speakers' bureau that will feature Penny, Giles and Susag. He said no money has been raised for these efforts yet, but that private donations will be solicited.

Giles said the group contains members of the former Committee for One Manchester, a proconsolidation group active in late 1970s during the last attempt to force a merger. However, Giles said the Committee for Charter Revision is not a rebirth of the Committee for One.

Democratic Town Chairman Theodore Cummings has said the Committee for One Manchester will revive this year, but it has not done so yet. Cummings could not be reached for comment this Reversing herself. Republican Registrar of Voters Mary Willhide said today she has decided to allow GOP town Director Thomas H. Ferguson to remain as moderator for the Sept. 9 primary election. Willhide on Wednesday said she was replacing Ferguson as a moderator for voting district 6 at Nathan Hale School because Ferguson had been arrested in July on a charge that he allegedly mi-

However, this morning Willhide said she and Ferguson agreed Wednesday afternoon not to replace him. Willhide - who said she was "a little disturbed" after reading the story in Wednesday's Manchester Herald about her decision to replace Ferguson - said she was not misquoted, and reiterated that her original decision was "basically for appearance's sake.

While saying the decision was connected to Ferguson's arrest in July, she would not explain her action any further. She said she has confidence in Ferguson's ability as a moderator.

Sieffert becomes publisher

Marie "Penny" Sieffert has been appointed publisher of the Manchester Herald, effective today. The announcement was made by Richard M. Diamond, New England regional vice president of Scripps League Newspapers, the parent company of the Herald.

Sieffert, formerly associate publisher and advertising director of the Herald, succeeds Richard W. Cosgrove, who has resigned to accept a publishing opportunity in the West.

Sieffert becomes the first woman publisher in the Scripps League organization, which publishes 32 daily and non-daily

"I am delighted that Penny Sieffert was available to take over the reins of the Herald." Diamond said. "I have every confidence that under her leadership the Herald will continue to prosper and serve the needs of the greater Manchester area." he said.

Sieffert is rejoining the Herald after a short venture in the real estate profession. She had left the Herald in June after a rapid rise to leadership positions with the newspaper.

Her newspaper career began in 1978, when she responded to a "help wanted" advertisement for an advertising sales representative at the Herald. After a few years in that position, she was promoted to retail advertising manager, and then advertising director. She was named associate publisher in 1983.

i in pleased to be back at the Herald," Sieffert said, "I look forward to continuing and expanding upon the improvements made in the Herald within the last year, and our readers can look forward to some exciting changes for the better," she said.

Sieffert, 43, is a native of Hartford and was raised in Manchester. She is a graduate of local schools and has long been involved in community affairs. She and her husband, Alfred W. Sieffert Sr., live in Manchester.

Cosgrove, who is leaving the Herald after nearly a year as publisher, said he is moving to the West to be closer to his family. "I will miss the many friends I have made in Manchester," Cosgrove

Oil price plan is modified by Zinsser panel

Few ideas raised for Exxon funds

While many people dream about how they would spend millions of dollars won from the Connecticut lottery, only one person had a suggestion Wednesday on how the state could spend some $37 million won as a result of a federal lawsuit against Exxon Corp.

Manchester resident J. Russell Smyth said that instead of spending $3 million of the windfall for energy-efficiency studies at facilities such as schools, hospitals and town-owned buildings - as Gov. William A. O'Neill is proposing the money should be used to help low-income families weatherize their homes.

State Sen. Carl Zinsser. R-Manchester, said he agreed with Smyth, the only person to voice his opinions at a public hearing held in Lincoln Center on Wednesday. The hearing was lead by Zinsser. the Senate chairman of the Legislature's Energy and Public Utilities Committee, who was seeking suggestions on ways the money from Exxon could be spent The $37 million is part of some $2 billion the giant energy company was required to give to states as a result of a settlement arising from charges that the company overcharged its customers. O'Neill has submitted a plan for spending Connecticut's share, and the energy and appropriations committee must come up with an alternative by Sept. 15 or the governor's plan will automatically

Zinsser said he had a number of criticisms of O'Neill's proposal. Foremost of these is that it is too vague, he said.

Zinsser said he also disagreed with a measure that calls for giving money to the state's Ride-Share program. He said the program already receives some $4 million from other sources, and would instead like to see the money be used for more energy-related

Man found guilty in town hall arson

LITCHFIELD - A 28-year-old Salisbury man has been found guilty of aiding and abetting third-degree arson in the fire that eveled Salisbury Town Hall last year.

The verdict came Wednesday after a jury of three men and three women had deliberated five hours Tuesday and Wednesday before convicting Earl Morey. The charge carries a maximum penalty of one to 10 years in prison, compared with the 10- to 25-year prison term he could have received if convicted of first-degree aiding and abetting Superior Court Judge Walter M. Pickett Jr. set sentencing for Morey is expected to be the state's key witness in the coming trial of Roy Duntz, 35, of Sharon, who has pleaded not guilty to first-degree arson in the fire that destroyed the historic landmark the morning of Aug. 5, 1985. On Tuesday, Pickett dismissed a charge of conspiracy in first-degree arson after Riccio argued that the state had failed to prove Morey conspired to burn down the Town Hall.

Activist wants judge to lose license

MANCHESTER - The president of a statewide anti-drunkendriving group has asked the Motor Vehicles Department to suspend Enfield Probate Judge John K. Raissi's license to drive for six months for refusing to take a breath-alcohol test. Raissi was stopped by a Suffield police officer in November 1985 when he refused to take the test. He pleaded guilty to reduced charges in the case.

Nancy Ricci, state president of Remove Intoxicated Drivers. complained in a letter to the MVD this week about the "totally ridiculous" plea-bargaining agreement that allowed Raissi to plead to the reduced charges.

Kezer urges unaffiliated to join

HARTFORD - State Rep. Pauline R. Kezer, the Republican candidate for secretary of the state, urged unaffiliated voters to join the GOP so they can vote in the three-way Republican gubernatorial primary on Sept. 9. "For more than two years, our party ... has been trying to allow unaffiliated voters to participate in our primaries," the Plainville lawmaker said Wednesday. "It's been in and out of court ... and it's still being challenged by the Democratic administration. Two federal courts have affirmed the right of the Connecticut GOP to open its primaries to the state's 600,000 independent voters. But the O'Neill administration is appealing the most recent ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The lower court's rulings have been delayed from taking effect until the high court decides the issue. The GOP was trying to get the stay lifted so that unaffiliated voters could take part in this year's primaries but has been unsuccessful so far.

Lebanon when it hit the wire, police said. Dunham was burned on both hands and was treated at the hospital and released, a hospital spokeswoman said. Police said the men were working for a painting company when the accident, which is under investigation, occurred.

Gejdenson says tax bill unfair

WASHINGTON - A Connecticut congressman, saying residents of his state and others that use the sales tax as their chief revenue source are being discriminated against, is urging Congress to take another look at its tax overhaul Rep. Sam Gejdenson, a Demo-

Under the compromise plan

reached by House and Senate

conferees last weekend, sale tax payments would not longer be income by people itemizing deductions on their federal returns. State income taxes and state and local property taxes would continue to be deductable, however.

Geidenson said the tax bill as it is written now could force states such as Connecticut to impose a state income tax "regardless of how effective and progressive their current system of taxation may ntent of the conference and believe that an adjustment should be made for states that are in this special category," he said.

Gejdenson said Connecticut receives 47 percent of its revenue from the 7.5 percent sales tax and that the levy is progressive be cause it exempts necessities such is food, medicine, utility bills and clothing purchases under $75.

Gejdenson said keeping the deduction for states without an income tax or an energy severence tax as a prime source of revenue would not cost much in terms of lost revenue, but would make the

Irish officer killed in Beirut blast

BEIRUT, Lebanon - A roadside bomb exploded in southern Lebanon today, killing an Irish officer serving with the United Nations peacekeeping force and wounding two other soldiers, a U.N. spokesman said.

The Irishmen were on a foot patrol on a dirt road between the villages of Taire and Haddata at the time of the 7 a.m. explosion, spokesman Timur Goksel said.

He said the name of the dead officer would not be disclosed until his relatives were notified. The two wounded Irishmen were 'doing well," Goksel said.

In Dublin, Irish state radio identified the officer as Lt. Angus Murphy, 25, of Tuam in County Galway. The roadside bomb was probably triggered by remote control, according to Goksel.

U.S. researcher suspect in murder

NAIROBI, Kenya - An international arrest warrant was issued for a U.S. wildlife researcher in the murder of gorilla expert Dian Fossey, found hacked to death last year at her remote mountain camp, a Rwandan government publication said today

Actualites Nationales, a daily French-language newsletter published by the Rwandan Ministry of Information, identified the suspect as Wayne Richard McGuire of Hoboken, N.J. McGuire, 34, was a research assistant for Ms. Fossey in her study of the rare mountain gorillas that live on the slopes of Mount Visoke, a 12,175-foot dormant volcano in Rwanda. The newsletter said the Rwandan government had issued an international warrant for McGuire's arrest and that he was

"suspected of being implicated in the murder." The publication said five Rwandans, whom it did not identify, also were suspects. The newsletter said McGuire left the central African country July 27, but did not say where he went.

Japanese scholar is allowed to stay

NEW YORK - A Japanese scholar says more than six weeks he spent in jail awaiting deportation were "a nightmare," but he's savoring freedom and planning to renew his studies now that authorities have changed their minds.

Federal officials agreed late Wednesday to drop charges against Choichiro Yatani and let him complete his doctorate in psychology at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. Yatani, freed from an Immigration and Naturalization Service lockup where he'd been confined since returning July 7 from the Netherlands, said he planned first to return to his Long Island home and deliver "a big hug to my wife."

"It was a nightmare, just a nightmare. Some people in the U.S. government believe I'm a communist or I'm a terrible person, but I'm not," he said.

Yatani arrived in the United States in 1977. According to officials and his lawyer, he was detained for three days then after the State Department said he had lied by telling U.S. officials he had never been associated with communist activities. The department has refused to say why it believed Yatani was lying.

Congressional aide charged in blast

ARLINGTON, Va. - Federal authorities are trying to discover why two men had a homemade 30mm anti-tank cannon in a gasoline station when the weapon accidentally fired, igniting an explosion that injured four people. Robert G. Dilger, 54, of Xenia, Ohio, and Joseph R. Donahue, 40, of Killeen, Texas, were arraigned Wednesday and charged with possession of an explosive device Dilger, a retired Air Force colonel, had been been working part time in the office of Rep. Denny Smith, R-Ore., since May 1985. according to Greg Walden, a Smith spokesman. Donahue is a retired Army warrant officer who won the Bronze Star while stationed in Vietnam, military officials sai A published report quoted a friend of the two men as saying Dilger has said he tried to sell the gun to the government for use by anti-Soviet rebels overseas.

Lightning sparks new forest fires

A major Idaho forest fire that has charred nearly 17,000 acres burned out of control and new blazes broke out in Washington as weary firefighters in other fire-plagued states got help from rain and lower temperatures.

Officials said about 18,800 firefighters were still trying to tame out-of-control fires that have burned more than 88,850 acres in nine Western states. Since Aug. 1, 710,685 acres have burned in the Northwest, including almost 417,000 since the most severe of a series of lightning storms hit Aug. 10. About 255 fires, down from 260 Tuesday, burned Wednesday in northeastern Oregon, said Jim Fisher, a spokesman at the Unified Fire Command Center in Salem. The fires were about 80 percent contained, up from 60 percent Tuesday Firefighting officials reported new lightning storms and fires across eastern Oregon on Wednesday night, and a fire that started in the Cascade Mountains burned out of control. The new developments came as firefighters encircled the last of the fires that had ravaged 87,000 acres of timber and brush in northeastern Oregon since a lightning storm touched off the

FOSTORIA, Ohio - City officials are concerned about traffic jams caused by hundreds of motorists who have been lining up to see a purported image of Christ on a soybean oil storage tank. MOSCOW - Top Soviet atomic energy officials said today the Chernobyl disaster severely damaged the country's nuclear power program, caused 31 deaths and forced the evacuation of 135,000 people. "The accident at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant has hurt the Soviet nuclear energy program badly," Andranik Petrosydid not elaborate. Petrosyants reiterated that the accident forced consideration of changes in the location and output of Soviet nuclear reactors, and whether more safety systems were needed. No decisions have been made,

Valery Legasov, first deputy director of the nation's leading nuclear power institute, said two explosions occurred in the No. 4 reactor at Chernobyl on April 26, one caused by a huge concentration of steam and the other a chemical blast.

The accident at the Ukrainian plant 80 miles north of Kiev could be blamed almost entirely on human error during an experiment in which workers tried to determine how long a turbine could keep operating in a total power failure, he said.

"It may sound paradoxical today, but they (plant workers) were concerned precisely about the safety of the plant," Legasov said. The last official word on casualties was a Politburo statement issued July 19 which said 28 were dead. Since then, reporters had seen three new graves at a special Moscow cemetery plot for Chernobyl victims. Petrosyants, who called the deaths a 'great misfortune," said the 31 dead dum made public Wednesday by Stephen B. Comley, a Rowley, Mass., businessman fighting the planned startup of the Seabrook, N.H. nuclear power plant. Comley met with Asselstine last week and released a copy of a memo the NRC commissioner prepared for him, answering questions raised at the meeting.

"I believe that in some cases, the NRC has acted more as the protector of the nuclear industry than the protector of the public," said Asselstine, a frequent dissenter in NRC decisions considered favorable to the industry. Asselstine gave as examples the NRC's decision last year to allow the restart of Three Mile Island Unit 1. The Middletown, Pa., plant, closed since the 1979 accident at its twin Unit II, resumed operation last fall. Asselstine also cited the NRC's decision to illow operation of the Indian Point plants in New York state, despite what he said were "continued significant deficiencies in emergency planning." Asselstine said it was the commission itself, not its staff, that has sometimes failed to regulate the nuclear power industry properly. "If given the proper policy direction from the top, I am confident that the agency could pursue its regulatory responsibilities in a manner that would restore public confidence in the NRC as an objective and fair regulator that puts the interests of the public foremost." Asselstine said

One of Manchester's proudest parks is rapidly becoming an

On a recent weekday morning, the grounds of Center Park were dotted with discarded brown paper bags, ice-cream wrappers and cigarette butts. A beer can and empty plastic coffee cups sat on the stone steps.

Though the park's lawns are mowed, it is obvious that the town parks department is fighting a losing battle against those who ignore the trash cans which are placed around the park.

It's too bad that the people who have made the park a hangout and some recreational users have little respect for it.

Adding to the overall neglected look of the park is the badly overgrown brick area which surrounds the monument and flagpole. It appears that the grass is winning out over the bricks.

The town could stand to pay a little more attention to maintenance of the park.

People who litter parks are inconsiderate and are unlikely to be reformed by the addition of trash cans or town employees to pick up after them. They might, however, alter their behavior with a little public persuasion.

Residents who see their parks being treated like garbage should speak up. Center Park is everybody's park — let's try to keep it that way.

In her case, she was given $200 a week initially for two children. plus $75 weekly alimony and mortgage payments by her ex-husband, a dentist, who was reportedly earning $60,000.

He appealed, and a judge slashed her payments from $275 to $160, then made her pay the mortgage! "This was done without a hearing. without any testimony in a five-minute meeting in the judge's chambers with the attorneys." she recalled. At the time, she was earning $114 a week. So she went bankrupt. "My heat and electricity were cut off," she said. "I had to go on food stamps, get Medicaid, and energy assistance." And she was forced to fight for three more

Only after her husband's lawyer's fees ran up to $21,000 did he have a change of heart, and settled out of court amicably. Now she gets $255 a week from him (plus her own salary), and has the title to the house.

But how much money is that for a family? California had over a million families to split up that $305 million. In other words, the average child support is $300 a year!

In Pennsylvania, 609,000 families divided up the $371 million. That's $615 a year. Big deal. In fact. 275.000 of those families are on welfare, and they split up $62.8 million, which is exactly $228 a year or a miserable $4.38 a week.

People who are not on welfare share the rest. Divide $308 million by 334,000 families, and the average payment is $904 per year - or a pathetic

$17.38 a week This is scandalous. It is supposed to be enough to support two children, on average. It is barely enough to feed two kids for one day. And Pennsylvania is the nation's most generous state. Across the nation, there are 8.7 million families with 15 million kids headed by a single parent. In only half of those cases are the pittances that are ordered being paid in full. The average payment for both court-ordered settlements, and those arrived at voluntarily, is only $1,000 per year. A quarter of the cases only get partial payments.

HOWEVER, A MAJOR CHANGE is under way. thanks to the National Child Support Enforcement Act passed by Congress in 1984. The law was Reps. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., and Barbara Kennelly, D-Conn. The law requires all 50 states to pass compatible legislation that will strengthen child support enforcement: 1. Mandatory wage-withholding from absent parents who fall only a month behind in child support payments. "This will force parents to realize that child support is not a voluntary commitment." said Roukema. Only a dozen states had wage-withholding laws in 1984. 2. Child enforcement processes are to be equally available to welfare and non-welfare familes. Most states had put their whole effort on child support for welfare families to cut state welfare

3. Expedited process to establish eligibility with only a report to a child enforcement agency. It is no longer necessary to go to court.

4. Capacity to capture state or federal tax refunds for delinquency. 5. Interstate enforcement of wage and tax withholding is now possible. ## Defining the middle-income taxpayer

By Elleen Shanahan

WASHINGTON - Just about everybody who's been involved in writing the final version of the big tax-overhaul bill has agreed on one thing: It has to provide a significant tax cut for middle-income families and individuals. But what is middle income?

There are plenty of figures from the Census Bureau, from the Internal Revenue Service and other organizations. But the figures members of Congress use when relying on their own sense of what constitutes middle income are almost invariably too high. compared with any of the official statistics. By the same token, official statistics seem to be much too low both at the bottom of the middle-income range and at the top House Ways and Means

kowski. D-III., who is also chairman of the House-Senate conference committee on the tax bill, has put the upper edge of middle income at $50,000. His estimate is fairly typical. Many members of Congress have half (55 percent) of all households and nearly half (46 percent) of the

Looked at this way. "middle " income" barely touches the group for which the conferees have expressed the most concern: those with incomes from $30,000 to $40,000 Everett Carll Ladd, a professor of political science at the University of Connecticut, who also directs the Social Science Data Center at Storrs

An entire industry, its expertise being a knowledge of the tax code and the loopholes in it, grew up to support the quest of Americans for deductions, with its practitioners advertising that a tax dollar saved was a dollar earned.

The alleged purpose of the incentives was to steer money to what were considered socially

Raiders gain the services of Navy's McCallum

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Raiders aren't sure how frequently they'll have the services of Napleon McCallum. although a special dispensation by the Navy will permit the running back to be available to practice and play most weekends. Coach Tom Flores, when asked Wednesday how McCallum might be used, said he could not comment until he knew more details about

"There have been so many rumors that have been coming down for so many days now. Now we need a clarification of that decision to see how it will affect us." Flores said.

Navy Secretary John Lehman said Wednesday that McCallum. who holds 26 Naval Academy records, will be allowed to play and practice on weekends as long as it doesn't interfere with his duties. McCallum is a supply officer push in the late 1970s. The Committee for Charter Revision was unveiled Thursday by its chairman. William H. Sleith. the former head of the Iona Manufacturing Co. Sleith admitted that some of the group's members were members of the Committee for One Manchester

However, Sleith stressed that the purpose of the new group was to urge the people of Manchester in November to vote 'yes' on a referendum question which hopefully will remove from the charter the impediment which has pre vented a rational and reasone solution to the embarrassing dissension that has existed between the two parts of our town for many

The ballot item, if approved by voters, would require only one townwide vote to achieve consoli dation. Under current provisions. a merger must be approved by a separate vote of district residents - a requirement that district opponents say gives the independent utilities authority the power to stop any merger effort.

However, Bletchman said Thursday the district does not have any special veto power. He argued that the town and the district have reciprical powers that allow either party to approve or reject consolidation

Bletchman added that to alter this arrangment would deprive district residents of the right of self-determination, something he said was "sacrosanct" in American politics.

But Democratic town Director Stephen Penny, a member of the Committee for Charter Revision argued Thursday that the people of the entire town of Manchester also have the right of selfdetermination under the Town Charter. Penny explained that the people can eliminate the charter provision, just as they created it. Bletchman said he was not convinced, and challenged Penny or Sleith to a debate on the question of self-determination. Sleith said this morning he would
