Manchester — A City of Village Charm

STEAL wants debate

By George Lovno Herald Reporter

Eight Utilities District advocate Robert Blechman charged Thursday the real goal of the newly formed Committee for Charter Revision is to consolidate the district with the town of Manchester. The group has said its purpose is merely to change the Town Charter so that the district could not veto consolidation.

"A stunk by any other name smells the same," said Blechman, an attorney who heads the group STEAL — Stop Tampering with the Eighth's American Liberties. He said the Committee for Charter Revision is the "son of the Committee for One Manchester," a group that actively urged consolidation during the last merger push in the late 1970s.

The Committee for Charter Revision was unveiled Thursday by its chairman William H. Sleith, the former head of the Iona Manufacturing Co. Sleith admitted that some of the group's members were members of the Committee for One Manchester.

However, Sleith stressed that the purpose of the new group was to urge the people of Manchester in November to vote "yes" on a referendum question which hopefully will remove from the charter the impediment which has prevented a rational and reasoned solution to the embarrassing dissonance that has existed between the two parts of our town for many years.

The ballot item, if approved by voters, would require only one townwide vote to achieve consolidation. Under current provisions a merger must be approved by a separate vote of district residents — a requirement that district opponents say gives the independent utilities authority the power to stop any merger effort.

However, Blechman said Thursday the district does not have any special veto power. He argued that the town and the district have reciprocal powers that allow either party to approve or reject consolidation.

Blechman added that to alter this arrangement would deprive district residents of the right of self-determination, something he said was "sacrosanct" in American politics.

But Democratic town Director Stephen Penny, a member of the Committee for Charter Revision, argued Thursday that the people of the entire town of Manchester also have the right of self-determination under the Town Charter. Penny explained that the people can eliminate the charter provision just as they created it.

Blechman said he was not convinced and challenged Penny or Sleith to a debate on the question of self-determination.

Sleith said this morning he would

Although it was raining Thursday, the weather didn't stop a friendly game of basketball at Charter Oak Park. At left, Mike Davey of Vernon tries to dribble toward the hoop, while Keith Lane of East Hartford tries to stop him from scoring. The two should be able to play on drier courts this weekend because the forecast calls for partly sunny skies.

O'Neill calls state's roads an emergency

By Corole Thompson The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill today declared a state of emergency on the state's roads and vowed that every step possible would be taken to halt truck accidents in Connecticut.

"I have had it with truck accidents on our highways," O'Neill said during a news conference in his state Capitol office.

"I am ordering a stepped-up safety enforcement program that I promise will be our most aggressive ever."

Tractor-trailer trucks were involved in four separate accidents on Connecticut highways on Thursday that left one man dead, five others injured, and brought traffic to a standstill on Interstates 84 and 88.

The most serious accident was on I-84 near exit 40 in Milford, where a tractor-trailer overturned on its side, blocking traffic for hours. The driver, Jose Perez, 25, a Bronx, N.Y., resident, was seriously injured.

Since June 3, there have been at least 19 major tractor-trailer accidents in the state, killing seven people.

Gov. William A. O'Neill scheduled a news conference today, and he was expected to reveal his plans for dealing with the safety problem.

"There is no doubt that some of the roads have gone beyond the capacity that the road was intended to hold," state police

Fighting death is way of life for cancer victim

By John Mitchell Herald Reporter

BARRY SYLVAIN ... courageous fight

It was this attitude that Manchester Memorial Hospital recognized earlier this summer. Sylvain was named by staff members as one of only seven recipients of the 1986 Connecticut Courage Award given by the state chapter of the American Cancer Society. Sylvain was the only recipient from Manchester.

"They said as soon as he heard of the award, I popped into his mind," Sylvain said with a laugh. "He's given so much hope to other people," said Gertrude Sutcliffe, director of the cancer society's Manchester unit.

Sutcliffe told of the awards ceremony in New Haven, where U.S. Rep. Bruce Morrison D. Conn. gave Sylvain his award. "I was touched," he said. "It meant a lot to them."

The award salutes Sylvain "for personal courage in his battle against cancer and for the hope and inspiration he has given all of us in the fight for life and health."

Sylvain said he enjoys visiting with other patients, letting them know they aren't alone in their struggles.

"You can't tell anybody it's all right, because it's not," Sylvain said. "I'll just listen."

Sylvain's battle with cancer started in 1979, when he had a pain in his midsection. "I thought I had a hernia," he recalled. He was diagnosed as having testicular cancer.

Surgery was considered successful — until the cancer crept to his right lung.

A long series of chemotherapy treatments forced the spread into remission, and Sylvain was told the cancer was gone.

"I couldn't believe it," he recalled. "I thought there was no hope for me at that time."

Twenty months of maintenance chemotherapy followed, while doctors closely monitored his condition. Sylvain's hair grew back, and he was able to return to work. Sylvain said that he and Brenda were overjoyed until he began coughing up blood one day.

Doctors confirmed that the cancer was still in him, and in 1984 he went to the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Institute in New York. Experimental surgery resulted in the loss of his right lung, and again doctors told him that he had gotten all the cancer. But after the second time, Sylvain wasn't ready to get excited quickly.

"We had learned," said Brenda. Sylvain spent the entire winter of 1985-86 as a patient at Manchester Memorial Hospital, and he got to know the staff members well. He said that they have been especially caring toward him.

Kathy Wirtalla, an oncology nurse in the home care department of the hospital, said Sylvain was chosen for the state award because he's always looking for the positive and takes the initiative to try and be supportive to other people. "He has been an example for all of us," Wirtalla said.

Sylvain doesn't work any more but continues to indulge in a few hobbies, such as his collection of antique toys. Sylvain said he would

Burials begin

The shocked community of Edmond, Okla., today began burying 14 victims of a mail carrier's post office rampage and counselors worked with survivors as police sought to learn why the man killed his co-workers and himself. Story on page 3.

PEOPLE

Love to lawsuits

Musicians Paul Kantner and Grace Slick shared the stage and private lives for years as part of the Jefferson Airplane and the Jefferson Starship rock band, but now they are squaring off in court.

Kantner, 45, is suing Slick, 46, and her husband and manager, Skip Johnson, saying they taped confidential telephone talks with Kantner between 1984 and 1985 without his permission.

The suit, filed Monday in San Francisco Superior Court, alleges that Slick and Johnson played parts of the conversations for others. The court ordered the lawsuit file sealed Wednesday.

Before Slick and Johnson married in 1976, she lived with Kantner and the two had a daughter.

Phone messages left for Kantner and Slick seeking comment Thursday were not answered.

Kantner's attorney, Phillip Ryan, said the couple do not speak to each other any more, "but surprisingly, there still is a lot of love there."

receive the Ignatius Medal, the highest honor at Boston College, when she visits the campus next month.

Aquino and her assassinated husband, Benigno, were neighbors of the campus when they lived in Boston, and their daughter, Victoria, graduated from the college in 1983.

The couple were parishioners at St. Ignatius Church, where Aquino will receive the Ignatius Medal Sept. 21, the university announced Thursday.

Past recipients are former General Motors Chairman Thomas Aquinas Murphy, Dolores Hope, wife of Bob Hope, and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

Taxing trek

Hilda Crooks, the 90-year-old Californian who came within two miles of the summit of Mount Whitney on her 23rd climb, is still resting after coming back down the mountain.

Crooks said she became exhausted by last week's taxing trek and by all the notoriety about it.

"All the publicity and all the television crews and all the picture taking, I think that drained me too," she said Thursday in Loma Linda, Calif. On the day before the climb, "My telephone just rang constantly. I could hardly eat my dinner."

Merv says goodbye

Veteran television talk show host Merv Griffin has filmed his 5,520th and final show. "It's tough to say goodbye," Griffin said Wednesday as he put together an evening of nostalgia. The last "Merv Griffin Show" — minus an audience — looked back at clips of shows that reflected changing newsmakers and stars from the time of John F. Kennedy to Ronald Reagan.

Griffin talked on the air with more than 25,000 guests over nearly 24 years.

"It's been on my mind about a year to end the show," Griffin said after taping the 90-minute show. "But I felt if you're going to leave, it's better to leave when you're on top."

The final show, which will be telecast Sept. 5, marks the passing of an era. Griffin began his first talk show on NBC on Oct. 1, 1962, on the same day and in the same studio that Johnny Carson did his first "Tonight Show."

Within a year after the NBC afternoon show, he had his own syndicated talk series. In 1969, he went to CBS and became a late-night rival to Carson until 1972, when he left and went back to syndication.

Griffin said he will begin a new big band show called "The Coconut Ballroom" in prime time later this year on one of the three major networks. He declined to say which.

Briefcase relays

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than 200 businessmen brandishing briefcases tore through the streets of San Francisco in an urban alternative to the sack race and watermelon-eating contest.

"This town gets weirder by the minute," shrugged Gary Lawrence, a 38-year-old construction worker whose crew ate lunch while watching the women scurry by on the sidewalk Thursday.

The idea for the whimsical relay competition, one of 36 events of this year's San Francisco Fair testing urban skills, was hatched two years ago by a local comedy writer. Other events include foghorn-calling, lip-synching and a parking competition.

Those of you with runny noses and itchy eyes know all too well how nasty some of these innocent-looking spheres can be — especially at this time of year. These are grains of pollen. Only 25 per cubic yard can start many hay-fever sufferers sneezing.

Town hopes to use Exxon cash for Cheney Hall study

By George Lovvo
Herald Reporter

The town of Manchester is hoping to apply for some of the $37 million the state has given as part of a federal lawsuit settlement from the Exxon Corp. to conduct an energy efficiency study of Cheney Hall.

Under a plan proposed by Gov. William A. O'Neill the state would set aside $3 million of the Exxon windfall for studies of municipal buildings, schools and hospitals. However, state Sen. Carl Zinsner, R-Manchester, who is Senate chairman of the General Assembly's Energy and Public Utilities Committee, has said he is opposed to the measure.

In a public hearing Zinsner held Wednesday in Lincoln Center, he said he agreed with Manchester resident J. Russell Smyth, who said the money should instead be used to help low-income families weatherize their homes.

But at a Thursday meeting of the building subcommittee of the Cheney Hall Foundation Inc., the panel prepared an application in expectation that the governor's plan will be approved. The group is hoping that a state inspector will point out ways in which the historic Cheney Hall can be made more energy efficient.

Subcommittee member Mary Blish said the town is also hoping to have studies done on the Manchester Historical Society Museum of Local History and the Mary Cheney Library. The cost of the studies is not known yet.

Zinsner said this morning that he would rather use the Exxon money for weatherization efforts under the state's low-income energy assistance program because federal funding for the program might be cut. Zinsner said that those on the Cheney Foundation subcommittee should have testified at his Wednesday public hearing if they favored using the money for energy studies.

He added, though, that money for the study might be available from the state Department of Housing.

The governor's plan will be approved automatically if it is not changed by the General Assembly by Sept. 15. If revisions are made, they would have to be done by the Legislature's energy and appropriations committees. The energy panel is scheduled to meet on the matter Sept. 4 or 5, Zinsner said.

In other action Thursday, the Cheney Foundation subcommittee proposed that $33,000 in grant money received from the state Department of Economic Development be spent to install conduits for electricity, water, telephone and fire-alarm lines leading into the building. It still remains to be whether the hall, and to replace mortar that has fallen from between some of the brick walls. The utility lines would run from the northeast corner of the Cheney Hall property on Elm Street to the rear of the building.

However, the proposal hinges on whether a sewer line must also be run to the building from either a sewer main on the east side or one on the west side of the property. Lamson said he would check with the grant money may have to be spent on the sewer line (one has to be approved by the town Board of Directors before being sent to the state. She said the board is scheduled to consider the matter at its Tuesday meeting.

MHS sets 10th grade meeting

An informal orientation for students entering Grade 10 will be held Tuesday in the Manchester High School cafeteria Tuesday. Principal Jacob Ludes, guidance chairman David Frost and student government co-presidents Matthew Flynn and Kris Cool will address the new students.

Members of the student government will be available after the orientation to conduct tours of the building and answer questions. The orientation, which begins at 10:30 a.m., is optional. Transfer students are also invited.

Construction to close roadway

GLASTONBURY — A section of Main Street will be closed Monday and Tuesday for construction, police said Wednesday.

A block-long section of Main Street, from Griswold Street to Route 3, will be closed from 8 a.m. to noon both days to allow for installation of six steel girders as part of the Route 2 connector project, said a police spokesman.

That section of Main Street provides direct access to Route 3, and the construction could cause delays, the spokesman said. He suggested an alternate route: the Naubuc Avenue access to Route 3.

Bolton to collect bulk waste

BOLTON — Bulk-waste pickup is scheduled for the week of Sept. 15 to 19, according to a notice by the town.

Bolton's refuse contractor has one week to collect all the bulk waste in town. The contractor will send three trucks — one for weekly refuse, one for bulk waste and a third to collect materials. Residents should call the selectmen's office if their bulk waste is not picked up by the end of the week.

Bulk waste includes household appliances with doors removed, furniture, automotive parts weighing less than 100 pounds, and trees less than 6 inches in diameter and less than 3 feet in length. Hazardous materials and construction, roofing or other building materials will not be picked up. For more information, call 643-4805.

Coventry needs substitute teachers

COVENTRY — The town's schools need substitute teachers for the 1986-87 school year, according to a news release by the school superintendent.

Candidates must be graduates of a four-year college and must be at least 21 years old. Candidates should contact one of the schools for an application and an interview with the principal.

Any substitutes from last year who would like to continue should call the superintendent's office at 742-7317 before Sept. 15. The schools also need registered nurses. For more information, call 742-8913.

District sewer plan approved

The Eighth Utilities District's plan to sewer northwest Manchester was approved from the state Department of Environmental Protection Thursday, clearing the way for bids to be invited on the controversial project.

Walter Simoni, DEP senior sanitary engineer, said this morning the department approved the project after reviewing plans for the past month. However, he said the approval stipulated that the town of Manchester control a valve that will determine whether sewage will flow into the district's North Main Street line or into the town's Adams Street line.

The direction of the sewage flow has been a controversial matter because of the outlet fees that can be collected by the party that handles the waste. The town announced last month that the district and the town agreed that the town would control the valve, and consequently direct the sewage into its line.

District officials have disputed that, and have said that in order for the sewerage to be channeled into the town's line, the district Board of Directors must approve the plan. The DEP's action though appears to overrule the district's contention.

District President Walter Joyner could not be reached for comment this morning.

Simoni said that before construction can begin the district must also decide whether it wants to dig under a section of railroad track to lay part of its sewer line, or to cut the track. The section in question is northwest of Margaret Road, Simoni said.

He explained that the district is very close to getting approval from the owner of the railroad line, Conrail, to dig under the track. However, Simoni said the district may want to cut the track because that method is cheaper.

At a district Board of Directors meeting this week, the panel said it would call a special meeting as well as its sewer plans were approved by the DEP so that the bid specifications for the work can be completed. Officials have said they hope to award a contract this fall for the estimated $1.4 million project.

Cops have vandal suspect

Manchester police said they questioned a 15-year-old Manchester boy this week about the April vandalism of about 65 gravestones at St. James Cemetery on Broad Street.

No charges have been filed in the incident, said police spokesman Gary Wood, and the case is still under investigation.

Police said they received a report on Aug. 8 that the boy might have been responsible for the April 9 incident in which 65 tombstones were overturned.

The boy, whose name was withheld because he is a minor, told police that he was at St. James Cemetery in "an upset state of mind" several months ago. He told police that he started knocking over "a lot" of the tombstones for about 10 minutes, but he wasn't sure how many he knocked over.

Police said they compared the boy's fingerprints with pictures of footprints taken after the incident. They matched, police said.

An official at the cemetery said this morning that all the stones have been put back in position, and the cost of the work is not yet known. He said there are still some broken tombstones, and whether they will be repaired or replaced is up to the individual owners.

Earlier in April, five other tombstones had been knocked down at the cemetery.

Second panel OKs oil plan

A state plan that would help low-income residents pay for their heating oil cleared the second of three hurdles by winning approval of the General Assembly's Human Services Committee on Thursday, state Sen. Carl Zinsner, R-Manchester, said this morning.

Earlier Thursday, the plan was approved by the Energy and Public Utilities Committee, on which Zinsner serves as co-chairman. The Appropriations Committee, which is the last panel that must OK the plan before it becomes final, will vote on Monday.

The original proposal put forth by Gov. William O'Neill drew criticism from oil dealers at a public hearing conducted by Zinsner on Wednesday in Manchester. The oil dealers objected to O'Neill's plan to have the state set the price of heating oil sold to residents participating in the state program.

That provision was removed by Zinsner and other panel members. The purpose behind the measure was to stop oil firms from overcharging the state for oil they deliver to residents participating in the program, but Zinsner said a state fraud investigator should be able to crack down on such abuses.

GOP loses bid to open primary

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Republican Chairman Thomas J. D'Amore Jr. says Connecticut's 600 non-affiliated voters should remember that it was the administration of Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill that prevented them from taking part in primaries this fall.

With the stay intact, GOP primaries of 1987 and 1988, including ones for governor and lieutenant governor, will be open only to Republicans.

The federal courts have affirmed the right of the Republican Party to open its primaries to independent voters. But the O'Neill administration is appealing the rulings to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The administration had won the stay, which barred the lower court rulings from taking effect. Arguments before the Supreme Court are scheduled Oct. 8.

Report blames I-84 crashes on layout

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A confusing layout of ramps and curves on Interstate 84 coupled with heavy traffic and high speeds are factors in the rash of crashes on the highway between Hartford and Farmington, according to a new report.

"If you do drive at 45, everybody's either torturing their brain or trying to force you off the road," the report says.

The report was prompted by a series of three-truck accidents between June 3 and June 9 on a single curve in the eastbound portion of I-84 in West Hartford.

The layout of the highway, designed to preserve land already developed when it was first built, included curves and a frequency of exits such that it inherently has an expected accident rate higher than a road with more evenly spaced exits.

Agency suspects new GNP leak

By Morfin Crutinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Commerce Department, after firing one employee and reprimanding several others following leaks of sensitive financial data, says it is investigating whether another leak occurred this week.

The department said one employee has been fired, another has resigned and three others reprimanded following an investigation into premature release of a gross national product report last September.

Commerce spokesman Malcolm Barr said.

None of the individuals' identities have been released, and Barr said the department would provide no details on which discipline was imposed against those mentioned in the report.

That leak resulted in major changes in the way the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis reports the security of its information and also the disciplinary action disclosed Thursday.

The actions that were proposed were carefully considered in the light of employee responses.

Barr said the three employees receiving written reprimands and the one employee fired will have the right to appeal those actions.

South Africa stockpiles for sanctions

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa has stockpiled "thousands of items" of strategic goods over the past decade as protection against international anti-apartheid sanctions.

Manpower Minister Pietie du Plessis said Thursday.

In a speech to an industrial group in Phalaborwa, a mining town in northern Transvaal, he confirmed that the government was attempting to circumvent sanctions, which he described as economic war.

He said it is sufficient for me to emphasize that over the years there have been taken to ensure the continuation of our trade, irrespective of looming sanctions," he said.

Bill would extend debt ceiling further

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A measure signed by President Reagan will allow the government to borrow $32 billion more money through next month, but additional credit legislation will be needed soon.

Reagan on Thursday signed a measure that increases the national debt ceiling from its previous level of $2,679 trillion. The bill was approved by Congress last week.

Earlier Thursday, the Treasury Department reported that the federal budget deficit soared to $2.2 billion in July, putting the country well on the way to a record deficit for the year.

The deficit shrank to $1 billion as government tax revenues rose sharply. However, revenues dipped in July to $63 billion, 11 percent below the June level. For the year, revenues total $634.5 billion, 5 percent ahead of the same period last year.

OPINION

Travel risks not so great

For years, Americans loved to visit Europe — but that doesn't seem to be the case anymore.

An informal survey conducted recently by the Manchester Herald showed that Manchester residents — like most Americans — have cut back drastically on trips to Europe.

As some local travel agents pointed out, although business to Europe has picked up slightly since the spring, it still remains far below the average for the summer months — usually the peak season for European travel. Some agents said business had dropped by almost 50 percent from last year.

The reason, of course, is terrorism. Even though terrorist attacks against Americans have decreased since U.S. jets bombed Libya in April, Americans still hesitate to make plans for vacations in the Old World.

It seems the image of terrorism abroad has overshadowed the reality of it. For the most part, Americans are safe when they travel to London, Paris and even Athens. A recent article in the Christian Science Monitor pointed out that only 23 Americans were killed by terrorists last year, while about 100 died after being struck by lightning.

More Americans are murdered in New York or Chicago than almost any European or Middle Eastern city. Statistics show that 1,384 people were murdered in New York last year. Yet we tend to feel safer in more dangerous American cities than we do in foreign lands.

Why? The only answer that comes to mind is our familiarity with America. Even though most people might realize that taking a subway in Washington, D.C., at 11 p.m. is more dangerous than taking an airplane to Athens, they will shy away from the perceived terrorist threat more quickly.

It is true that terrorism is a problem and something that should not be taken lightly. But Americans should not let exaggerated fears cause them to cancel a European trip that has been planned for years.

What gets into much of the media is the unusual — and terrorist hijackings are still unusual. The press does not report every flight that makes it safely in and out of Cairo, nor does it tell much about the thousands of Americans who have safely visited the Middle East.

The bottom line is that terrorism should not dictate what Americans do. Traveling abroad can be a rewarding experience. Let's not allow terrorism to clip our wings.

Nation's governors go back to school

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — "Nobody can remember the governors doing anything like this before," explained Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander. "We're setting the agenda for the entire nation for the next 10 years."

That ambitious assessment was offered during the recent annual meeting here of the Southern Governors' Association as Alexander prepared to unveil the results of a year-long study of the future of American public education.

The study won't be released until the annual meeting of the National Governors' Association, which opens Sunday in Hilton Head, S.C. But the wording of many of the questions the governors have been considering suggests the nature of the answers.

Are there better ways to help poor children with weak preparation to get ready to learn and succeed in school? Why not let parents choose the public schools their children attend? Are there better ways to pay teachers more for teaching well? Should there be new paths into the classroom for people who should be teaching?

How can we measure how well the students in our colleges and universities are learning? What new technologies can schools use best? What can be done to attract, train and encourage good school leaders?

ALEXANDER'S COMMITMENT to educational reform dates back several years to the establishment of Tennessee's Better Schools Program, which involves $1.2 billion in new spending during a three-year period.

Support Belaga in GOP primary

To the Editor:

In a few weeks Republican voters will pick their candidate for governor.

There are two reasons why I am supporting Julie Belaga in the primary. First, of the three candidates, she offers the cleanest, clearest contrast to the back-room, cronies-ridden politics of Bill O'Neill. Second, Julie Belaga offers us the best opportunity for Connecticut to get the quality government it deserves.

For too many years Connecticut has witnessed unending scandals involving Bill O'Neill and his appointees. Some have involved fraud and other criminal charges. Some merely reflected gross incompetence and mismanagement. But the constant source of all of these scandals is Bill O'Neill's reliance on his political pals and cronies. He puts them into key positions and then ignores what they do until it is reflected on the front pages of our newspapers.

Julie Belaga's first priority is to staff the key top positions in our state with the best available individuals. She is committed to meeting regularly with her senior appointees, so that they can work to solve Connecticut's problems before they become public scandals.

Connecticut is a first-class state with a third-rate government. Julie Belaga is the only candidate who has clearly focused on what is needed to change this. Julie is a vibrant and dynamic lady. She will attract quality talent to the upper echelon of our state's government. Julie will provide the leadership needed to move away from the back-room politics we are all so tired of.

Please join me in voting for Julie Belaga.

What happened to make page 1?

To the Editor:

What happened in Manchester on Monday Aug. 18 1986 that was important enough to make the front page of the Herald?

The Church of the Nazarene of Manchester seeks to build a school on land that was recently a gift-sale by one of its parishioners, Mr. Donald Fish of D.W. Fish Realty.

That sounds fine except for the fact that the land in question was promised by Mr. Fish to remain undeveloped for 10 years. The 10 years would not be up until 1995.

Somehow, with a whole community trusting him, Mr. Fish has very craftily and neatly broken his promise, not only by putting the land in the name of the Church of the Nazarene, the church will now violate the moral code of honesty, quite the opposite of what it would want to teach its students.

The land involved is located on Mile Hill and Reed roads in Tolland. It is particularly beautiful land which the community believed would remain in its present state. To quote Mr. Fish's attorney Mr. Joseph Caposella, "for ten years."

FBI probes Vietnamese crime gangs

WASHINGTON — A special kind of terrorism has afflicted many Vietnamese refugees in the United States in recent years: violence and intimidation instigated not by Hanoi, but by virulently anti-communist Vietnamese groups in this country.

Some outspoken refugees have been murdered, apparently to silence their advocacy of normalizing relations with the communist Vietnamese regime. These attacks have been compared to the murderous vigilante operations of right-wing "death squads" in Central America, whose thousands of victims have included suspected communists, leftists and moderates who criticized the military regimes of their countries.

Now our associates Donald Goldberg and Corky Johnson have learned that the FBI has found links between Vietnamese anti-communist organizations and anti-Castro Cuban groups. The G-men have gathered evidence that the collaboration might extend to the establishment of secret military training camps in this country.

The FBI disclosed its interest in the Cuban-Vietnamese connection in a response to questions from Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., ranking minority member of a Senate subcommittee on terrorism.

The FBI has no information relating to the exact location of "secret" training camps," the bureau told Leahy. "However, there are indications of collaboration between the anti-Castro group 'Alpha Sixty-Six' and the 'Associates' in the Southeastern United States."

"Associates" is the loose term used by law enforcement officials to designate a group of former South Vietnamese military officers who fled to this country following the collapse of the Saigon government in 1975.

In his inquiry to the FBI, Leahy cited earlier columns in which we first disclosed the ties between anti-Castro Cubans and anti-Hanoi Vietnamese in this country.

The FBI also identifies 10 Vietnamese criminal gangs known to be operating in the United States. They sport such colorful names as "The Frogmen" and "The Pink Knights," and operate in major cities, including New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles and New Orleans.

ALTHOUGH THE VIETNAMESE gangs' membership totals only about 200 nationwide, they often work with the notorious Chinese criminal gang, "The Ghost Shadows," and have become a significant part of what lawmen describe as a growing force of Asian organized-crime groups across the country. The FBI has identified at least 14 Asian gangs that are of "investigative interest," most of them with a membership of about 30.

Noting recent crackdowns on Asian gangs in New York City — which included prosecution of the Ghost Shadows and another Chinese gang, United Bamboo — the FBI disclosed that it has current investigations under way in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Honolulu, Boston and Washington, D.C.

"The Asian gangs are highly violent, well-armed and predisposed to open fire on law enforcement personnel in arrest situations," the FBI told Leahy. "In addition to the high-risk arrest problems, investigations are difficult to pursue due to the lack of numbers of native-speaking law enforcement personnel."

Regarding another Asian criminal group, the FBI said it has no reliable estimates on the number of Japanese "Yakuza" gang members who have set up shop in this country. The bureau said it is investigating suspected Yakuza activities in Hawaii, California, New York, Guam and the Pacific Trust Territories.

Star wars slippage
While Congress worries about a ceiling on spending for President Reagan's "Star Wars" program, the Pentagon used some of the money for a new roof. And it was some roof. The General Accounting Office reports that $1 million of Strategic Defense Initiative testing and research funds went to replace a roof at the Kwajalein Missile Range last year, even though the range won't be used for the SDI program until 1988. The auditors said military construction funds should have been used instead, and recommended tighter controls over Star Wars spending.

Factory orders jump 4.3 percent

WASHINGTON — Orders to U.S. factories for "big ticket" durable manufacturing goods jumped 4.3 percent last month in the biggest increase since 1984, the government reported today.

Military orders, a historically volatile category, accounted for much of the gain, according to the figures from the Commerce Department.

However, there were also healthy gains for non-defense orders — a possible sign of revival for the sluggish national economy.

There have been few such optimistic signs in the last half-year, and the government reported earlier this week that the overall economy grew at a barely discernible 0.6 percent annual rate in the spring quarter of the year.

Last month, the new report said, orders for durable goods, those expected to last three years or longer, totaled $107.2 billion after adjustment for seasonal variation.

The increase followed a June gain of 0.1 percent preceded by three straight declines.

Office blast injures at least 15

CINCINNATI — A short circuit in an electrical panel caused an explosion in a downtown office building Thursday, injuring at least 15 people and forcing the evacuation of much of the building, officials said.

Two electricians who may have had wires in their hands were severely burned, said Fire Chief Norman Wells.

The explosion occurred on the seventh floor, which contains offices of Great American Insurance Companies.

Wells said every floor above the seventh floor of the 14-story building was evacuated, although most office workers had already left for the day.

The injured electricians were working on the high-voltage power unit about 5:20 p.m., Wells said. Some of the others injured were about 6 feet away.

An arc of approximately 440 volts of electricity shot from the power unit, Wells said.

Fire, panic break out on flight

DENVER — An engine of a TWA plane caught fire as it landed Thursday night, slightly injuring seven people during a panicked evacuation, authorities said.

"When the plane stopped, I saw smoke on the side," said passenger Joe McCormick of Ireland. "The stewardess told us not to panic. With that, everybody panicked. Everybody was jumping from the life three different chutes off the plane."

"Everybody was terrified — so frightened we were laughing," he said.

TWA spokesman Todd Amos in Chicago said there would be no company comment until Friday morning.

Kevin Fleming of the International Airport operations said Flight 753 arrived from St. Louis with 228 passengers and 11 crewmembers.

Panel head backs Deaver testimony

WASHINGTON — A congressional staff report that concluded former White House aide Michael K. Deaver lied to a House subcommittee investigating his lobbying activities may have been partly in error, the subcommittee's chairman says.

In a letter made public Thursday by Deaver's attorney, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., acknowledged the possible error to independent counsel Whitney Seymour Jr., named by a federal court to investigate Deaver.

The controversial section of the subcommittee report concluded Deaver falsely testified that he informed officials of Rockwell International Corp., a client, that he planned to meet with a top federal official about Rockwell's B-1 bomber.

Dingell informed Seymour that he has learned from company officials that Deaver may indeed have informed them in advance of his meeting with James C. Miller III, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

By a vote of 17-0 on Aug. 12, Dingell's House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee adopted staff findings concluding Deaver "knowingly and willfully" lied to the panel in testimony earlier this year.

Rebels say Soviets use chemicals

JAMBA, Angola — Angolan guerrillas use chemical that Soviet-led government troops have begun to use as chemical weapons in the country's 10-year civil war.

The weapons have killed three rebel fighters, blinded several others and turned leaves on trees "totally dark," Brig. Isidro Perseguido Chindondo, intelligence chief of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, or UNITA, said Thursday.

He said government air and ground units used a "toxic agent" in battles at Bie in June, at Lucusse in July and at Cuito Cuanavale in August.

The chemical bombs and grenades emit a yellow and green vapor, Chindondo said.

Rehnquist doesn't recall spying memo

By Larry Margosak
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice-designate William H. Rehnquist says he had no first-hand knowledge of military spying against anti-war protesters and cannot remember writing a 1969 draft memo for the Justice Department that proposed such a policy.

"I have no recollection of any participation in the formulation of policy on use of the military to conduct surveillance or collect intelligence concerning domestic civilian activities," Rehnquist wrote Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md.

Mathias had sent Rehnquist written questions about his March 25, 1969, memorandum, which detailed a military response to potential disturbances at a time of hearings by Rehnquist's opponents, who still hope to stop his confirmation before the full Senate next month.

The senator also sought to learn what Rehnquist knew generally about the military surveillance program while he was an assistant attorney general in the Nixon administration.

Rehnquist's responses, obtained by The Associated Press, were generally that he recalled little about the subject or the memo.

The nominee's knowledge of the surveillance is related to an issue brought up during confirmation hearings by Rehnquist's opponents, who still hope to stop his confirmation before the full Senate next month.

These senators have hammered on the nominee's failure to disqualify himself from a Supreme Court case involving the surveillance, Laird vs. Tatum.

The case involved a legal challenge to the intelligence program by its civilian targets. Rehnquist cast a crucial vote in the 5-4 case, telling senators during his confirmation hearings that he remained in the case because he had little knowledge beforehand of the facts in dispute.

The draft 1969 memo was among internal Justice Department documents written by Rehnquist and given the Judiciary Committee.

U.S. priest faces further punishment

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A U.S. priest barred from teaching theology because of his views on sex could face further punishment, and action may be taken against other American members of the Roman Catholic clergy, Vatican officials said.

The Rev. Charles E. Curran, ordered by the Vatican this week to end a 20-year teaching career, could also be stripped of his right to perform duties as a priest, Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said Thursday.

"The best thing for him to do now is to reflect and, hopefully, change his mind," Navarro told The Associated Press.

Another Vatican official said further "housecleaning" might be ordered when two Vatican-appointed panels complete a review of Catholic clergy and institutions in the United States.

Told of Navarro's warning, Curran said Thursday in a telephone interview: "That would be totally unfair... but I still couldn't change my positions."

Curran has taught moral theology for 20 years at the Catholic University in Washington, D.C. Despite repeated Vatican criticism, he has taken issue with the church's strict opposition to artificial birth control, abortion, divorce and homosexual acts.

Pan Am fined for safety violations

By H. Josef Hebert
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration announced today it has penalized Pan American World Airways nearly $2 million for a variety of safety violations found during an in-depth inspection.

The FAA said in a statement that Pan Am, the country's sixth largest airline, has agreed to pay defective brakes, and operating in violation of regulations, police said.

Also on I-94 in Southington, a 29-year-old Waterbury man was injured after his car left the roadway and drove underneath a bridge abutment, police said.

The Norwalk crash occurred at 1:25 p.m. when a New Jersey-registered tractor-trailer traveling northbound crossed the center divider and through the metal rails, police said. The truck hit a United Parcel Service tractor-trailer truck driven by David Chellis, 43, of Cornwall, N.Y., and the van that Perez was driving, police said.

The two tractor-trailers burst into flames and the UPS truck then hit another car, squeezing it into the bridge abutment, police said.

Feliciano died at the scene and his body was removed by Collins Funeral Home at around 4 p.m. Perez was listed in critical but stable condition at Norwalk Hospital Thursday night, where he was admitted to the intensive care unit, police said. Stephen W. Venezia, 61, of Fairfield and his wife, Emma, 60, were in the car and neither was injured, police said.

Another UPS-owned tractor-trailer jackknifed behind the pile-up while trying to avoid the four vehicles ahead, police said. The driver, Albert Dembschack, 56, of Fairfield was not injured.

The fire was extinguished by the Norwalk Fire Department. All southbound lanes at Exit 16 were closed as crews worked to remove the wreckage. Traffic was backed up for miles, and the wreckage was not cleared away until almost midnight, police said.

the fine and has reorganized its maintenance operation to correct the problems.

Pan Am spokesman James Arey confirmed that the airline had reached a settlement with the FAA on its enforcement action, but provided no further details. He said Pan Am would issue a statement later in the day.

The FAA spokesman Bob Buckhorn said that Pan Am has agreed to pay $1.95 million "in full settlement of the enforcement action," which stemmed from violations found by FAA inspectors during a two-month inspection of the airline last spring.

According to FAA officials, the inspectors found that Pan Am had operated planes that needed repairs, had installed parts that exceeded their approved service life and had failed to inspect airlines within required time limits.

For example, according to the FAA, Pan Am in one case flew an aircraft for 37 flights beyond the scheduled overhaul of one of its landing gears. In another case, a Boeing 747 was flown 18 times even through one of its control surfaces, which determine a plane's direction and movement, was out of alignment, officials said.

The inspectors also found the airline did not keep adequate maintenance records.

Bolton fire panel corrects violations

BOLTON — Steps are being taken to correct health and safety violations which were named in three citations against the fire department by the state Labor Department's Division of Occupational Safety and Health, Henry "Hank" Kelsey, chairman of the Board of Fire Commissioners, said this morning.

Kelsey said the fire department is working on guidelines for the areas cited by the safety division. He said the guidelines should be completed and ready for review by the Board of Fire Commissioners by Oct. 20, which is the deadline set by the state.

C. Richard Ficks, a spokesman for the Labor Department, said the violations involved the failure to have documentation of monthly inspections of self-contained breathing apparatus, allowing firefighters with beards to use the apparatus, and failure to annually inspect the department's engine and tank truck.

Ficks said the citations, which carry no penalty, were the result of an Aug. 1 routine inspection. He said the infractions were not considered serious.

Ficks noted that other towns have also been cited for allowing bearded firefighters to use breathing apparatus. He said the practice can be dangerous because a beard can prevent a face mask from sealing out dangerous fumes during a fire.

Kelsey characterized the citations as minor, and said they did not pertain to the actual workings of firefighters or their equipment, only the maintenance of the equipment. "It's just to maintain the safety that they do have," he said.

Kelsey said safety inspections are usually very thorough, and he was not surprised that some areas were cited. "Knowing how OSHA inspections are carried out, the fire department came out with a clean bill of health," he said.

Penny said this morning he would be happy to debate Blechman. Blechman said that when the Town Charter was drafted in 1947, the district was allowed to continue its existence because town leaders thought the district — which has provided fire protection and sewer service for almost 100 years to northern Manchester — would be a burden to assume.

However, former town Public Works Director Jay Giles, another member of the Committee for Charter Revision, argued Thursday that the district was given the power to veto a merger so that district residents would be more likely to approve the new charter in 1947.

and SR-71 spy planes were developed and built. On July 11, an Air Force plane crashed in a heavily wooded area near Bakersfield, Calif., and service officials immediately sealed off the ground area and airspace around the site.

The Air Force refused to release any details about the crash, contrary to normal service policy, but sources said the plane was a Stealth fighter.

While the service has refused to discuss Stealth technology, Air Force officials have told Congress that they are very happy thus far with the ability of the planes to evade radar.

That optimism about the future of Stealth planes has led the Air Force to oppose congressional moves that would permit the later purchase of more B-1B bombers, the plane designed as a successor to Stealth bombers.

The Air Force has received a go-ahead for 100 B-1Bs, but supporters of the plane have said the production line should be maintained in case the Stealth plane turn out to be less than advertised.

A boy poses for his picture in the cockpit of Vought F-8K Crusader, a Naval fighter plane used from the late 1950s through the Vietnam War, at the New England Air Museum while other children line up for their turn. Three times a year, the museum provides the opportunity for visitors to get a close-up look at its many vintage airplanes.

Flights of fantasy

New England Air Museum offers earthbound trips for all ages

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter

A visit to the New England Air Museum in Windsor Locks will ignite the fantasies of anyone who has ever dreamed of going for a quick spin among the clouds.

The tourist with a vivid imagination stands in the museum's enormous hangar and envisions spinning the single propeller of the cherry-red Gee Bee biplane, then hurrying to climb into the open cockpit before the plane, built in 1930, takes off.

Alas, such flights of fantasy must remain in the imagination. The 80 planes the museum displays are earth-bound. "Static," the museum staff calls them, which simply means that they sit still.

But in a strange way, this air museum has turned "static" into an advantage. While you cannot observe the planes' flights through the sky, you can walk up and see the aircraft at close range. Several weekends each year, you can also climb into the cockpits of about 20 of the planes. (The next opportunity will be Oct. 18 and 19.)

"WHAT WE'RE attempting to do is to show the entire history of aviation, from the Wright Brothers to the present," said Chuck Horner, the museum's operations director. "It's all been done in a single lifetime. There are still people, at least a few, who remember when flying was just something that man would do, might do, someday. We must remember how compressed our experience with flight has been."

It's abundantly clear how far the science of flight has come when you compare two of the museum's own funds are used to acquire the planes. It is ironic, perhaps, that some free planes offered to the museum are simply too expensive to accept. "I'll give you one extreme example," said Horner. "We got a call about a 'free' military airplane—one we'd have liked to have. But it was going to cost more than $20,000 to fly it, and then to demilitarize it."

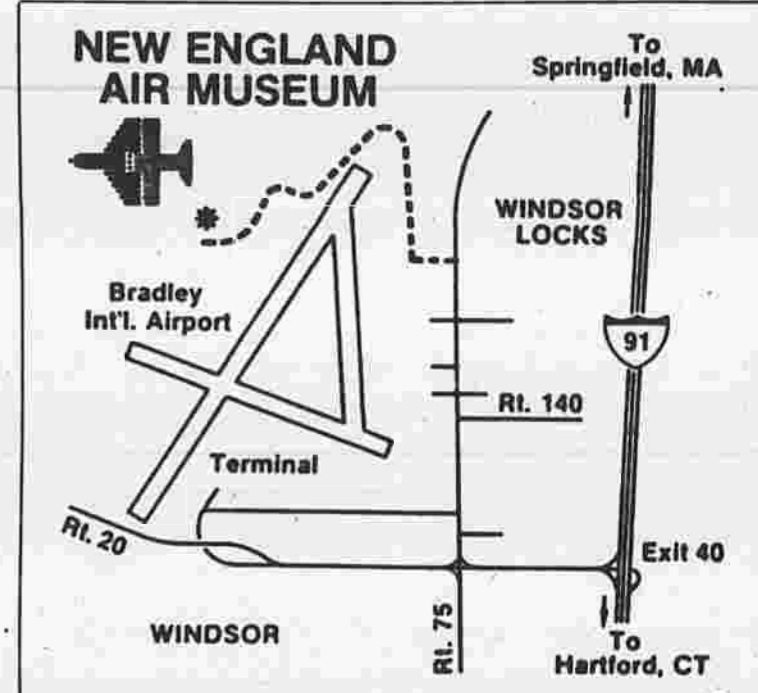

Demilitarizing involves dismantling weapons and ejection seats. He explained that the museum's executive director, the day we visited, youngsters seemed to enjoy running among the planes, picking out what kind of plane Grandpa—or even Daddy—might have flown in the war. There is no museum hush at this facility, so children announce their discoveries right out loud. Another favorite with the small fry is the flight simulator, which the museum staff turns on for a portion of each hour of the day. It's a cockpit, complete with dials, gauges and levers that was, at one time, used to hone the skills of jet pilots. After each "flight" the kids are presented with a certificate indicating that they've successfully flown a simulator.

In contrast, it was the adults who seemed to enjoy a museum corner where the history of flight is shown through panels of sketches.

THE PLANES ARE donated to the museum from the various branches of the military, from storage warehouses waiting to be restored, said Horner. "In some cases, they're completely unrecognizable as aircraft," he said. "They're just so badly beaten up."

Elizabeth Squier says she is proud of her nickname, the "Inn Creeper." The Ivoryton resident is the author of the "Guide to the Recommended Country Inns of New England."

Ivoryton's Elizabeth Squier 'Inn creeper' on the road again

By Susan Okulo
The Associated Press

IVORYTON — Elizabeth Squier is very fond of her nickname, the "inn creeper," and says it is quite accurate considering her line of work for the past 13 years.

Squier is the author of the "Guide to the Recommended Country Inns of New England," now in its ninth edition and soon to be in its tenth. The ninth edition contains descriptions of 202 inns from Maine to Connecticut.

She says she is known as the inn creeper "because I creep into all the corners, I'm into the attics and the wine cellars... I love it."

In the past three months, Squier has visited more than 200 inns, sampling their food and touring their rooms, as she prepares the new edition of her book. To be published by The Globe Pequot Press, if an inn meets her standards, it gets a two-page description and a line drawing in the guide.

COUNTRY INNS have a more personal quality than motels or hotels, Squier says. Inns are usually smaller and decorated like a well-appointed home and are run by innkeepers who play the roles of the indulgent, concerned host. Room prices, which can include meals, run from under $50 to more than $100 for a night.

Readers of Squier's guidebook find out where the inn is and how much it costs. She writes several paragraphs of easy prose on each establishment, pointing out features like home-baked bread, down pillows or the history of the building.

"If I can't recommend it any longer, I take it out of the next edition," Squier said in a recent interview at her home.

Squier began work on the guidebook in 1973 with a friend, Suzy Chapin. She said her ski trips into New England pointed out a need for a guide book on inns. She also knew the publisher of the Pequot Press, who liked the idea.

SQUIER AND CHAPIN set off with a letter of introduction from the press in search of inns. She recalled one of their early experiences.

"We were looking for a particular inn called Zack's on the Rocks, near the Canadian border in Montgomery Center, Vermont, and we were approaching it from the wrong direction... on a dirt road... All of a sudden we saw fresh water coming out of the mountain and we stopped the car and got a cup out and had some of that beautiful mountain water... Eventually we found the inn."

Chapin dropped out of the guidebook work, but Squier kept going, producing an updated version about every two years. About 220,000 copies of the book, including past editions, have been printed.

Squier says she cannot maintain anonymity while reviewing inns, in part because she has become well-known among innkeepers. She also wants to see every part of an establishment and said an innkeeper might not be as accommodating if she didn't reveal what she was doing.

"When you make the stops that I do, up and down mountains and around curves — you name it — it's long, and I would like to give my steering wheel away. And my pen," she says, laughing.

When she's not inn-creeper, Squier spends time gardening and cooking gourmet meals. She's also known to get away to one of her favorite inns — The Hermitage in Wilmington, Vt.

Squier says she has thought more than once about opening her own inn.

"In the long run I find it is a lot easier to write about the inns than get involved in one," she says.

But Squier says she will arrive at an inn unannounced. Sometimes she will reject a

Sodom and Gomorrah image begins to wane in Sweden

By Bengt Ljung The Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Here in the world capital of permissiveness, the tide of sexual revolution has begun to ebb.

Attitudes are still relatively permissive, notes sex expert Maj Fant but they are enlightened by sex education and more and more Swedes seem to cherish faithful and close relationships.

"Sweden was regarded a bit like Sodom and Gomorrah, with free sex and easy girls," said Fant, secretary of the government-sponsored National Association for Sexual Information.

THE GOVERNMENT undersecretary of social affairs, Monica Andersson, says Sweden "has a general consensus on sex and living situations" — a consensus, she says, that good sex does not necessarily mean free sex.

Motivated by this message, Swedish youth seems to deal with other countries' sexual mores. The study by the Alan Guttmacher Institute is a non-profit Washington-based research foundation affiliated with Planned Parenthood.

Abortions here declined 12 percent from 1980 to 1985, and the teen-age pregnancy rate was only one-third what it was in the United States in the same period, the study shows.

traceptives have been important.

but I also think fidelity is a factor in handling sexual relationships maturely. I've noticed a great difference when I've visited schools, labor unions, libraries and elsewhere, and deals with other people's problems through correspondence.

Fant said fear of AIDS — the sexually transmitted disease Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — also has played a role in discouraging promiscuity, although the disease has not been nearly as widespread here as in the United States. As of Aug. 1, AIDS had struck 62 Swedes and killed 35 of them, the government's bacteriological laboratory says.

The sexual revolution of the 1960s and 1970s, spurred by cheap and available contraceptives, rocked the institution of marriage here. By the early 1980s about 20 percent of all couples living together were not married. But that proportion is now holding steady, while in 1985 the number of marriages shot up by 6 percent.
