Politics, peaches can mix

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter
Can peaches and politics mix? During one of the best-attended peach festivals in the Eighth District's history, politics ran as widely through the crowd of 3,500 as the peach shortage that was served by the district fire department.

Eric Gagne, 4, of Manchester, dips into some peach shortsake during Friday night's Eighth District peach festival on Main Street. Gagne was with his mother, Peggy, and joined nearly 3,500 people who danced, ate and were merry at the annual event. More pictures on page 3.

And there was STEAL, an organization opposed to town-district consolidation, whose members combed the area, taking donations and talking to people about their cause.

WEATHER

Sunny, then cloudy, then rainy

Weekend forecast: Sunny today with increasing clouds in the afternoon; high around 80. Cloudy tonight with a 70 percent chance of showers; low 60 to 65. A chance of morning showers Sunday, then clearing in the afternoon; high in the 70s. Chance of rain 30 percent. Today's weather picture was drawn by Amy Lunta, who attends Bolton Elementary School.

National forecast

The National Weather Service's Saturday forecast calls for showers from parts of Kentucky northeast in a wide band to Vermont.

Connecticut forecast

Central, eastern interior; southwest interior: Saturday, sunny, with increasing clouds in the afternoon, high around 80. Saturday night, cloudy, with a 70 percent chance of showers, low 60 to 65. Sunday, a chance of morning showers, clearing in the afternoon, high in the 70s. Chance of rain 30 percent. Coastal: Saturday, sunny, with increasing clouds in the afternoon, high in the mid-70s. Saturday night, cloudy with a 60 percent chance of showers, high in the 70s. Sunday, a chance of showers, then clearing in the afternoon, high in the mid-70s. Chance of rain 30 percent. Northwest hills: Saturday, sunny, but becoming cloudy in the afternoon, with an 80 percent chance of showers Saturday night. High in the mid-70s. Low Saturday night in the 60s. Sunday, a chance of morning showers, partly sunny in the afternoon, high 70 to 75.

Across the nation

Much of the nation had sunny, tranquil weather Friday, while scattered showers and thunderstorms were found in parts of the Plains and Rockies, and in Florida and the lower Gulf Coast region. Fair skies prevailed from New England into the Southeast, and also to parts of the Ohio and Mississippi valleys. Clouds and a few showers moved into the central and northern Plains. But sunny weather stretched from Montana across the northern Rockies and the Pacific Northwest into interior parts of California. Scattered showers and thunderstorms were found in the central and southern Rockies, across the Great Basin and the southern Plateau region. Scattered showers and thunderstorms were over the western Great Lakes.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 54 degrees at Duluth and Hibbing, Minn., to 111 degrees at Palm Springs, Calif. The nation's low Friday morning was 34 degrees, at Truckee, Calif. Corpus Christi, Texas, tied its low temperature record for the date with a reading of 67 degrees. The temperature also fell to 67 degrees on the same date in 1946.

Saturday's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms from New York and western Pennsylvania across the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and eastern Iowa into Missouri. A few showers and thunderstorms should be found from Florida across the lower Gulf Coast region, and from south Texas and New Mexico across eastern Arizona and through the northern Rockies.

Highs in the 70s should reach from coastal parts of California and Oregon across western Washington, and from Minnesota across the Great Lakes and New York through New England. Temperatures of 100 to 115 degrees should extend from interior parts of central California through the desert Southwest. Much of the rest of the nation should have highs in the 80s and 90s.

Today in history

Among those born on this date was actor-singer Rick Springfield, who is 37.

Almanac

Today is Saturday, Aug. 23, the 235th day of 1985. There are 130 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In the early morning hours of Aug. 23, 1927, Italian-born anarchists Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were executed in Boston for the murders of two men during a 1920 payroll robbery. The case had drawn widespread controversy, with many convinced Sacco and Vanzetti had been condemned because of their political beliefs.

On this date: In 1838, one of the first colleges for women, Mount Holyoke Female Seminary in South Hadley, Mass., graduated its first students. In 1914, Japan declared war on Germany in World War I. In 1926, silent film star Rudolph Valentino died at age 31. In 1939, Germany and the Soviet Union signed a non-aggression pact. In 1947, an audience at the Hollywood Bowl heard President Harry S. Truman's daughter, Margaret, give her first public concert as a singer.

On the Light Side

He never loses

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Victor has a record any other wrestler would envy: He's never been pinned in 20 years of competition. He'd be a bear if anyone ever did it. But then he's a bear all the time.

The 650-pound Victor climbs into the wrestling ring three times a day at the Kentucky State Fair to take on his challengers.

"Once he gets on top of you, that's it. There's no way you're going to get up again," said Gary Stalcup, one of four men who lost to Victor on Wednesday. "It's like wrestling a Saint Bernard, only the bear is about five times bigger," said George Allen, Victor's trainer.

The muzzled bear has been declawed and his four canine teeth pulled, and Allen and fair officials say they make sure the bear is not mistreated.

But the Kentucky Humane Society says it has received more than 30 complaints.

School castoffs are up for sale at Waddell gym

The town of Manchester will sponsor a tag sale today from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in the Waddell School gymnasium, 163 Broad St. The sale will include typewriters, copiers, tables, chairs, adding machines — and even a trampoline. Gerald Dupont, the town's director of general services, said the sale will include surplus, obsolete or damaged furniture and pieces of equipment from the town's public schools. Last year, Dupont said the sale raised about $1,000, which he called "about average" for the day. He estimated that 150 people attended the sale. Raymond E. Demers, business manager for Manchester's public schools, said he gets recommendations from the staff about what to sell in the year progresses. Items, some of which are 15 to 20 years old, are kept until the town has its sale. Demers said, "If an item is not sold, it's saved for another year. We keep going until we get rid of it," he said. The Board of Education gets nothing from the sale, said Demers, except the opportunity to clear out equipment and make way for extra space. "The money goes back to the General Fund," said Dupont.

He said this year's sale may not be as crowded because the town won't be selling any student desks or chairs, items which have been popular in the past. "Most of the material is in rough shape," he said. As with any sale, beauty is in the eye of the browser, he added. "For the amount of time spent on it, it's not a fruitful morning," said Dupont. "It is a way to get rid of the stuff — and that's what we've got to do."

Town bikers join a protest in Springfield

Manchester motorcyclists will join a statewide effort this afternoon to help demonstrate against a Massachusetts law requiring the use of helmets for riders, a rally organizer said Friday. "We were asked to assist by the Modified Motorcycle Association of Massachusetts," said the Rev. W. "Kaiser" Hershberger of the Mission Church of Bikers, an organization based in Manchester. Hershberger, who has worked for the repeal of various motorcycle laws in Connecticut, said he and others will meet at the Burr Corners parking lot, "gassed up and ready to go," at 10:30 a.m. The group will join other area motorcyclists for an afternoon rally on the steps of the Superior Court in Springfield, Mass.

What the group is fighting for is freedom of choice, said Hershberger, who helped to organize the event. In 1975, a helmet law in Connecticut was repealed after being in effect for about 10 years. Hershberger said, and several efforts to restore it have failed. Hershberger, who doesn't wear a helmet, said the group hopes the rally in Springfield "will take the message to the general public." He said what will probably happen is "the people of Massachusetts will forget it for another year."

Proposed rule discourages common drives

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

A new zoning regulation that would allow rear-lot subdivisions but discourage private common drives is being drafted by planning officials and could be ready for a public hearing by October, a planning official said Friday.

The regulation, which is being drafted by Principal Planner Elisa Silverstein, is still in the preliminary stages. However, Silverstein said the regulation would probably allow rear lots in new subdivision proposals and in subdivisions that existed previously, while prohibiting common drives. A common drive serves more than one lot in a subdivision. A rear lot is created when a developer subdivides one lot that has more than the required area and street frontage. The area of the new, second lot is mostly at the rear of the property, but the rear lot must have some street frontage. The frontage could be less than required by zoning regulations but it would provide access to the rear lot.

"The main reason we're investigating this is because there are a lot of areas in the rural parts of town with odd shape (parcels)," Silverstein said. She said the rear lot regulation would allow developers to be more creative with developments, while also adding some flexibility to zoning regulations. Current regulations do not address rear lots, but planning officials have said that more requests are being made and the town must develop a policy. The new Comprehensive Plan of Development, approved by the Planning and Zoning Commission July 21, also recommends that rear-lot subdivisions be addressed in the zoning regulations. "There would be at least one public hearing on the new regulation before it could take effect."

"We're shooting for a public hearing in October," Silverstein said. In her study, Silverstein has interviewed planning officials in other municipalities that have rear-lot and common-drive policies, including Farmington, West Hartford and Hebron. She found that other Connecticut towns prohibit common drives, while limiting rear-lot subdivisions.

Silverstein said the town will probably limit the size of rear lots, while she will also push for a no-common-drive policy. However, she pointed out that nothing is final at this time. "We're still in the incubator stages right now," she said. PZC members have already given Silverstein the nod to draft the ordinance, but many stressed that they would like to prohibit common drives in Manchester.

"A common drive is more like a street," Silverstein said. "It's often hard to tell whether the town or the owners of the drive are responsible for its upkeep, she said. She also pointed out that some developers misuse the common drive privilege to build a small private road that does not conform to town standards. If the road is not wide enough, emergency vehicles such as fire trucks might have problems getting to the houses on the lots, she said.

A peach of the action

Crowds enjoy the 29th annual Eighth Utilities District peach festival Friday night. Morgan Flagg of 40 Pine St. wears an "I love the 8th" sticker on her forehead. Below, Robert Bletchman hangs a "Don't tread on me" poster. Bletchman is president of STEAL, which stands for Stop Tampering with the Eighth's American Liberties. Below right, peach shortcake boats wait for customers. A story on the festival on page 1.

William Schroff gets 60 years in girl's death

MIDDLETOWN (AP) — William B. Schroff III has been sentenced to a prison term of 60 years in connection with the death of a 20-year-old woman, his second sentencing for murder this year. A 12-member jury returned a guilty verdict against Schroff, 32, on Aug. 11 in connection with the death of Laura A. Hill. Hill's remains were found under a pile of rocks in East Haddam in 1984. She had been reported missing in 1982 from the West Haven Veterans' Administration Medical Center where she was receiving treatment.

"Laura Hill was a young 20-year-old woman who may not have been influential or powerful," Corradino said. "No one should die without someone taking note. I now take note of the death of Laura Hill. Mr. Schroff, I sentence you to 60 years in prison consecutive to the term you currently are serving."

PEOPLE

He's doing well

The son of country music star Ricky Skaggs was doing well after a second operation to repair damage from a gunshot wound, Roanoke (Va.) Memorial Hospitals said. Seven-year-old Andrew Lee Skaggs was listed in satisfactory condition Friday in the pediatric intensive care unit, and no complications had surfaced from Thursday's surgery to repair the lining of the carotid artery in his neck, said spokeswoman Sally Ramey.

Doctors predicted he will remain in the hospital another five to seven days, she said. The surgery was the second in five days for the boy, who was brought into the hospital Sunday night with the wound suffered when a trucker allegedly fired a shot through the window of the car in which the youngster was riding with his mother, Brenda Skaggs. The first operation was to remove the bullet from the boy's throat.

Skaggs joined his first wife at the hospital Thursday during the surgery. Mrs. Skaggs said hospital personnel told her the bullet just missed her son's jugular vein. "It was a miracle that it hit exactly where it did," she said.

Trucker Edward Dean Duebiring, 36, of Germantown, Md., was arrested about two hours after the shooting. He is charged with malicious wounding, shooting into an occupied vehicle, possession of a stolen weapon, possession of cocaine, methamphetamine and marijuana, and use of a firearm in the commission of a felony. He is being held on $125,000 bond.

Concert reunion

Singer David Crosby, recently paroled from a Texas prison on narcotics and weapons charges, joined his former partner, Graham Nash, for an emotional concert reunion at a Houston nightclub. "Thinking about this is what kept me going," Crosby told the enthusiastic audience Thursday after he came on stage midway through Nash's set. "I've been waiting for this for almost a year," Nash replied.

Crosby, who gained fame as a member of the Byrds in the mid-1960s, later teamed with Nash as part of another hit group, Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. They sang several songs from their past. Crosby also sang a song he composed during his five months in prison. He was convicted in 1983 after being arrested in Dallas on charges of possession of cocaine and possession of a firearm. "I don't regret any of it," Crosby said told the crowd Thursday.

"But don't do it again," one audience member answered. "Not as long as I have this," Crosby said. Crosby was released Friday from a Houston halfway house where he had been staying after California officials granted him permission to return there, Texas officials said.

'Dallas' auction

Actor Ken Kercheval was along to encourage the bidders as 400 people thronged to his mother's yard in Clinton, Ind., for a chance to bid on items that the "Dallas" star had touched.

Kercheval, who plays Cliff Barnes on the television show, worked the auction-day crowd, signing autographs on everything that was shoved in front of him. "I ate Jell-O out of every one of those ... bowls out there," he said, trying to pump more interest into the bidding Tuesday.

He and his mother, Christine Kercheval, needn't have worried. Everything from pitchers with no handles to chairs with no arms was snapped up.

Winning is fabulous

The new Miss U.S. Teen, Chris Zukaukas, says winning the pageant was fabulous. "It hasn't sunk in yet," said the 18-year-old winner from Elizabeth, Pa., whose prizes include a $5,200 cash scholarship and a Caribbean vacation.

First runner-up in Thursday night's event, billed as a "scholarship pageant," was Miss Mississippi, Johanna Plummer; second runner-up, Miss Florida, Laura Rogers; third runner-up, Miss Alaska, Karly Waeloff; and fourth runner-up, Miss Texas, Julie Condra.

The talent winner was Miss Indiana, Terri Salmon, who performed a Middle Eastern belly dance.

Zukaukas' prizes also include a four-year tuition scholarship to Indiana University, Livingstone State University in Florida, or Jacksonville University in Florida; a watch; a fox fur coat; and a typewriter. The pageant was held in Merrillville, Ind.

Current quotations

"Master recordings of films, or books, exotic nut plantations, gold mines in New Jersey and orange groves in Alaska. Those things are dead and gone and good riddance. — David A. Berenson, adjunct professor of taxation at New York University, saying his nation has stockpiled strategic goods as protection against sanctions. "Literally, the ball in arranging a timetable for a summit of arranging agreements is in the Soviet court." — White House spokesman Larry Speakes, criticizing the lack of progress in arms control.

School field runway for small plane

WEST HARTFORD (AP) — A pilot was forced to make an emergency landing on a high school athletic field after his single-engine Cessna airplane developed engine trouble Friday.

Police said Joseph Roberts, 42, and his wife Linda, 40, of South Windsor, were on their way from Skylark Airport in East Windsor to Danbury Airport when his engine malfunctioned.

Mary Jo Byberg of the Federal Aviation Administration in Burlington, Mass., said Roberts radioed a Mayday that his engine had quit.

Police said Roberts attempted to land his Cessna Skyhawk 182 on the golf course of the Rockledge Country Club, but elected to land elsewhere when he saw people on the course. Police said Roberts was able to make an emergency landing at around 3:30 p.m. on the soccer field of Conard High School.

A light plane rests on the soccer field at Conard High School in West Hartford after an emergency landing Friday. The plane was bound from East Windsor to Danbury when it developed engine trouble. The pilot and his wife, a passenger, suffered minor injuries.

O'Neill opens war to fight for lives on state highways

HARTFORD (AP) — In the wake of the latest rash of tractor-trailer crashes on Connecticut highways, Gov. William A. O'Neill vowed Friday to spend whatever it takes to cut speeding and other reckless driving.

"Make no mistake about it: this is a war," O'Neill told reporters in his office. "We're fighting for our lives on our highways."

O'Neill declared a state of emergency on the state's roads and said state police would be put on overtime, as a stop-gap measure, so that more patrolling could be done. For the long term, O'Neill said he would propose the hiring of more state police in next year's budget.

Accidents on Thursday left one man dead, five other people injured and started traffic on Interstates 85 and 84 for hours. There were two more accidents involving tractor-trailers on state highways on Friday, state police said.

A tractor-trailer and two cars were involved in a minor accident on I-85 in Stamford at shortly before 1 p.m., with no injuries resulting, state police in Westport said.

Another rig was involved in an accident on I-84 in East Hartford, state police said.

O'Neill said that during the first six months of the year truck traffic on I-95 has increased 46 percent compared to last year and that truck accidents were up 20 percent over the same period, despite increased state police enforcement efforts.

Tolls were removed on the highway last year.

"The increase in accidents is unacceptable. We have to put a stop to this problem, and we have to do it now," the governor said. "I have had it with truck accidents on our highways."

The governor said state police, the DOT and the Department of Motor Vehicles, together with the Office of Police and Management would coordinate a new crackdown on the state's roads.

The crackdown includes an authorization to state police to increase its manpower to whatever level officials deem necessary and an increase in spot truck inspectors.

I-84 runs diagonally through the state, from Danbury through Hartford, to the Massachusetts border. I-95 runs along Connecticut's coast and is a major connector to New York City and Boston.

State Sen. Thomas Scott, R-Middleford, whose district is bisected by I-95, said the truck weighing station should be built closer to the New York border, not in Westport.

Drugs no problem on some campuses

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Despite statistics that show that almost one out of three college students tries cocaine, several private universities, including Yale and Wesleyan, say that there have been no drug-related arrests on their campuses in at least the last year.

Wesleyan University Security Chief Harry Kinne attributed the lack of such arrests in recent years to the "high visibility" of Wesleyan's special constables.

"If they commit a crime, they don't do it in front of us," Kinne said recently.

Yale spokesman Walter D. Little also said there have been no drug-related arrests at Yale in recent years. He estimated that the last such arrest was four or five years ago and stemmed from an investigation by the U.S. Postal Service.

"We don't consider drugs a major problem on campus," Little said. Yale College Dean Sidney Altman sent out a letter about drugs to students last month that was tougher than similar letters of previous years, Little said. The letter warns students of the possible penalties for drug violations.

The Yale letter states that students who possess, use, manufacture or distribute controlled drugs including marijuana are "subject to the same liability as all other members of the New Haven community whether they live on or off the Yale campus."

The New Haven Register said in a recent story that Harvard, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Columbia were other universities that reported no drug-related arrests in the last year.

But the newspaper did report that University of Connecticut Police made 11 drug arrests in 1985 connected to 18 drug offenses involving marijuana and pills.

UConn Director of Public Safety William Massett contends that UConn, with a rural campus in eastern Connecticut, has less of a drug problem than an urban university has. He said police vigilantly enforce drug infractions.

A University of Michigan study found 30 percent of college students sample cocaine before they graduate. More than half of the 1,100 students polled said cocaine was easy to get while half said they had friends using cocaine.

The study found that marijuana remained the most popular illegal drug on campus, with 42 percent of the students reporting they had used marijuana in the past year.

Ads by abortion foes called misleading

HARTFORD (AP) — Pro-choice groups asked the telephone company Friday to clamp down on abortion foes whose Yellow Pages ads allegedly misled women who want abortions.

"The members of the Connecticut Coalition of Abortion Providers have all had experiences with women who attempted to obtain abortion referrals through the Yellow Pages and were duped into calling an anti-abortion agency," CCAP spokeswoman Lucy Nolan said.

"In many cases these women were given incorrect and distorted information about abortion services," she told a news conference.

At issue are ads placed in the Yellow Pages by organizations that oppose abortions but whose ads give the appearance of referring women to abortion providers, said Leslie Wright, spokeswoman for Planned Parenthood of Connecticut.

For example, under Planned Parenthood's ad in the Stamford Yellow Pages is an ad for Problem Pregnancy of Connecticut which says: "Are You Considering ABORTION?" in bold-face type.

"Call for free pregnancy test, complete follow up, low cost, compassionate," the ad goes on.

It lists a toll-free telephone number in Fresno, Calif.

Friday, a man there answered the phone by saying "Hotline" and acknowledged he could provide referrals in Connecticut for pregnancy tests and related services.

However, the man, who would not identify himself, said he personally does not espouse abortion but declined to say whether "Hotline" would make abortion referrals.

Planned Parenthood of Connecticut, one of 12 member groups in the CCAP, this summer surveyed 11 of 25 advertisers in the Yellow Pages under categories of "birth control" and "clinics," trying to determine what they were advertising.

"Most of them were either sponsored by Birthright or Catholic Charities or Catholic Family Services or by the Christian Action Council," said Wright.

False alarm is no prank

Pulling a fire alarm or falsely reporting a fire or other emergency has long been considered a prank — something that may cause an annoyance or embarrassment, but generally does little harm.

A tragic incident last year in Bristol, however, should make anyone considering such an act think again.

In that incident, two 14-year-old girls were killed when the car they were riding in was struck by a fire engine responding to reports of a house fire. Firefighters not involved in the accident arrived to find no fire.

A neighbor had apparently reported the fire after having a dispute with the home's owners.

This week a Superior Court jury convicted Donald Gauthier of falsely reporting an emergency in the incident.

He now faces a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Although the driver of the fire engine was also found to be at fault because he drove through a red light without stopping, those who falsely report emergencies must bear the brunt of the blame for whatever disasters befall emergency personnel responding to the calls and bystanders.

Whatever role the negligence of the driver in Bristol played, the fact is that he would not have been at the intersection were it not for a false alarm, and two young girls might still be alive today.

And had a 57-year-old man displayed a little better judgment, he would not be looking at the possibility of spending five years in prison — and a lifetime full of guilt for causing two deaths.

Making a false report might seem harmless enough, but things don't always go as planned, as the Bristol accident showed.

"It's good to get away from the pressures of Washington, Right, senator?"

By David Egner

ALBANY, N.Y. — A colorful millionaire known for wearing a Lone Ranger mask and a former Nader's raider who bills himself as a political Mr. Clean are waging a bitter battle for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination in New York.

"There's clearly no love lost between these two," state Democratic Party Executive Director William Cunningham said of John Dyson and Mark Green, who face each other in the Sept. 9 Democratic Senate primary.

Cunningham complained that the pair spent half of a recent debate "backbiting and snapping at each other," instead of attacking Alfonse D'Amato, the incumbent Republican opponent.

D'Amato, 48, was a little-known town supervisor from Long Island when elected to the Senate with a 1 percent victory margin in a three-way race in 1980. This year the GOP conservative is well-known, popular and well-financed.

Although he has no primary opponents, D'Amato has already spent $4 million on his re-election campaign and had another $3.2 million in his campaign war chest at the end of June. Democratic Party leaders acknowledge he will be tough to beat in November.

Cunningham said he fears the Dyson-Green fight will hand D'Amato an easy re-election victory.

Dyson, 43, campaigns on his record of 10 years' service in state government, beginning in 1975 as agriculture commissioner and later as commerce commissioner and New York Power Authority chairman.

The millionaire Democrat, who raises grapes and makes wine on his 200-acre Dutchess County farm, contends his record of public service proves he "can help real people solve real problems" and has given him name recognition among voters. Dyson made headlines with his Lone Ranger impersonation while commerce commissioner. Republican state senators had criticized him for appearing in television commercials for the state and had accused him of being mainly interested in personal publicity. Dyson responded by donning the Lone Ranger mask for an appearance at a Senate hearing, prompting Republicans to storm out in protest.

Green, 41, is a New York City lawyer who worked for consumer activist Ralph Nader from 1970 to 1980 and has written 12 books. He is issues adviser and chief speechwriter for Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado in Hart's 1984 presidential campaign.

"Mark Green is clean," Green said, stressing that he won't take contributions from special interest groups and that he will continue his self-styled role as a crusader for the public interest.

Dyson, whose father has a fortune estimated at $500 million, has also pledged not to take money from political action committees. D'Amato collected $673,000 from PACs in the 18-month-period ending June 30.

The battle between Dyson and Green could continue past the Sept. 9 primary because Dyson earlier won the Senate nomination of the tiny Liberal Party.

Dyson says he will run on the Liberal ticket even if he doesn't get the Democratic nomination, so a Green victory in the Democratic primary would create a Green-Dyson-D'Amato race in November that could badly split the Democratic vote.

Dyson's wealth gives him the money to bankroll a campaign even without major party support.

A prolonged contest between

Green and Dyson would be "kind of like the Iran-Iraq war," in which both sides are losers, D'Amato spokesman Gary Lewi said with a laugh.

Gov. Mario Cuomo, himself up for re-election, remains officially neutral in the Dyson-Green contest. However, Cuomo has said he encouraged Dyson to seek the nomination because he felt Dyson had the money to beat D'Amato.

Dyson so far has loaned his campaign $2.5 million, virtually all the money he has. Much of the money has been used for a TV advertising campaign that features a statement of praise from Cuomo.

Green has reported raising $330,000 and hopes to spend $1 million in the primary. For publicity, Green is relying on news coverage and a TV advertising campaign that will begin in the last 10 days of the race.

Dyson, stressing that his fortune is a key asset for beating D'Amato, insists that Green "hasn't got the (financial) resources."

"There's no wealth test in the United States Constitution to run for the U.S. Senate," countered Green in his first debate with Dyson.

Dyson belittled Green during their debate as "an unproven person whose ideas are still green" because Green has never worked in government.

"It is typically elitist that John Dyson should say that only an appointed bureaucrat should run for office," shot back Green.

Webster Parpley, a follower of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, is fighting in federal court to be placed on the Democratic U.S. Senate primary petitions were rejected by a state court.

David Egner writes for The Associated Press.

Bargain land is poisonous

WASHINGTON — Six years ago the city of Jacksonville, Fla., sold seven acres of land it knew to be saturated with toxic waste to a virtually penniless veteran for $92.74. Now the state is insisting that the 56-year-old landowner clean up his poisoned property — a task that could cost $225 million.

The land in Duval County, commonly known as the Whitehouse Oil Pits, is ranked worse than New York's infamous Love Canal and Times Beach, Mo., on the EPA's National Priorities List of hazardous waste sites to be cleaned up by Superfund. From 1958 to 1967, Allied Petroleum Products Inc. used the seven acres as a dump for toxic sludge containing PCBs, heavy metals and organic compounds.

The state of Florida described the site with such terms as "high concentrations of heavy metals including PCBs," and "acute toxicity to animal organisms," and concluded grimly: "The Whitehouse Oil Pits constitute an imminent hazard because the leachate plume of toxic contaminants and the potential collapse of weakened dikes threaten human health and safety as well as the environment."

YET WHEN RICHARD D. PETERS walked in off the street in March 1980, the city sold him the land for $92.74 in back taxes with only a verbal warning that it was contaminated. Allied had gone into bankruptcy in 1968 and the city had taken title.

Peters, who on occasion styles himself "Reverend," has filed a $724,824,000 suit against Jacksonville for the estimated costs of cleaning up the site, plus the "hardship and despair" he has suffered. He recently traveled to Washington in an unsuccessful effort to serve a copy of the lawsuit on President Reagan.

Why did he buy the dump? "They only wanted $92 for it," he explained to our reporter David Davis. "Wouldn't you buy it?" He said he had been looking for a few acres of trees, and wasn't worried about a "little" contamination, which was the impression of the property he got from city officials.

"He was going to build him a house out there, and he went out there and it was toxic," said Carl Swanson, Peters' attorney. "It was killing the fish in the creek. It still kills the fish in the creek."

"Was the city (legally) prevented from selling it? I don't think so," said Jacksonville general counsel Gerry Schneider. Even if it broke no law, however, the question remains why the city would sell an imminent hazard that threatens human health and safety "in the hands of a penniless man."

STATE OFFICIALS SUSPECT THAT Jacksonville may have sold the land to get out from under its share of cleanup costs. The city fathers deny any such base motive, though sale of the land may have saved Jacksonville millions of dollars.

The city has had its share of expensive troubles with the land. In 1976, a dike broke and 200,000 gallons of poisonous sludge oozed into nearby McGirts Creek, threatening the community's drinking water as PCBs leached into the water table.

The city covered the oil pits with a layer of shredded metal, with disastrous results as the metal reacted with the acids to brew still more poison. When no buyers bit at subsequent tax auctions, the city graded the property and covered it with soil in 1980. Then Peters bought it.

When environmental officials arrived to study the site for a Superfund cleanup in 1982, Peters threw them off his land. The state went to court that year and asked for a mandatory injunction requiring Peters to clean up the property. The EPA estimated cleanup costs at $225 million. The state has chosen an alternative solution that would cost only $3,049,000. Peters can't afford either one.

Beauticians Federal investigators have caught several beauty school operators for mishandling government loans and grants. For example:

• A Cocoa Beach, Fla., beauty school owner pleaded guilty and was ordered to repay $73,350 in grants he awarded to students who dropped out or never attended class.

• In Colorado a beauty school chain vice president pleaded guilty to falsifying test scores so more students qualified for aid — and then tried to alter exam scores to reduce the amount owed to the government. Caught again, he had to pay $82,000.

Hair today, gone tomorrow Attorney General Edwin Meese strode into the barber shop the other day and found his balding counselor, Kenneth Cribb, in the barber's chair.

"Do you have to pay full price for a haircut?" asked Meese mockingly. Cribb retorted: "In my case, it's a finder's fee."

Kremlin makes overtures to China

MOSCOW — Soviet officials disclosed Friday that the Kremlin has made overtures to China, the West and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in an apparent effort to broaden economic ties with the outside world.

Ivan D. Ivanov, the Foreign Ministry official recently named to oversee international economic relations, told a news conference that the Kremlin is studying China's economic reforms and looking into possible joint business ventures with Western nations.

Ivanov also confirmed that the Soviet Union has asked to participate as an observer in negotiations next month under the general Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. He said the Kremlin wants to become a "full-fledged member" of the Geneva-based organization, which seeks to reduce trade barriers.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said at the same briefing that Moscow has agreed at Iran's request to cut oil exports to the West by 100,000 barrels a day for the next two months to help stabilize world oil prices.

Teens from Lebanon discover peace

FRESNO, Calif. — For one of the 16 Lebanese Moslem and Christian teenagers who lived together for a summer with American families, the experience has been a "revelation of what peace really is."

During his six weeks in California, Nicolas Rebez, 19, found "another kind of life where you don't have to worry about yourself or others if they do something as simple as cross the street and are 15 minutes late coming back."

"Life in Lebanon is continuous fear," a fear to which the young people return this weekend when they leave for home in Beirut. Nicolas, a Greek Orthodox, and Adel Ouinty, 16, a Sunni Moslem, stayed with George and Barbara Wade, first generation Lebanese-Americans. Each host family opened their home to one Moslem and one Christian.

"Those teenagers are no different than our own, except they live in constant fear," Wade said. "That's no legacy to leave any children."

Pan Am agrees to pay FAA fines

WASHINGTON — Pan American World Airways, the country's sixth-largest airline, agreed Friday to pay nearly $2 million in penalties for safety violations uncovered by government inspectors earlier this year.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the agency and Pan Am settled on the fine after Pan Am reorganized and strengthened its maintenance operation where most of the violations were concentrated.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen said Pan Am has taken prompt action to correct the deficiencies, including expanding its maintenance force by about 200 people. He said the airline is operating safely.

Pan Am spokesman James Arey said about half the fine already has been paid and the airline would issue a statement on the settlement later in the day.

Write-in effort possible in Alabama

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Attorney General Charlie Graddick told jubilant supporters Friday he will run as a write-in candidate for governor of Alabama if court appeals fail to win him another chance at the Democratic nomination.

"We're going to be on the ballot in November one way or the other," Graddick said after a week of hearings on his campaign headquarters. "We're going to go out and face them."

The Democratic Party already has a nominee for governor, Lt. Gov. Bill Baxley, who was chosen by a five-member party subcommittee after a week of hearings.

Baxley contested the June 24 primary runoff, which Graddick led by 8,756 votes. The party selected Baxley after a panel of three federal judges ruled Aug. 1 that Graddick had flagrantly misused his office by calling for GOP crossover voting.

S. Africa government under attack

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government came under a two-pronged attack Friday, with the opposition in Parliament demanding its resignation and Bishop Desmond Tutu accusing it of "Tutu bashing" to make him a political scapegoat.

South Africa's Roman Catholic bishops meanwhile filed an urgent application at the Supreme Court in Pretoria seeking to restrain police from assaulting or torturing the Rev. Smaniso Mkhatswa, general secretary of the bishops' conference.

The application, to be heard Monday, did not say how Mkhatswa might have been mistreated since he was detained without charge on June 12. However, the jailed cleric's lawyer, Brian Currin, said he and two doctors visited Mkhatswa late Friday and decided to proceed with the application.

In Parliament, a no-confidence motion by the Progressive Federal Party calling on the Cabinet to resign was defeated on a party-line vote after a three-hour debate. A motion supporting the government was then adopted by a vote of 77-38.

Garn tested for kidney donation

SALT LAKE CITY — Sen. Jake Garn underwent extensive tests Friday to help doctors determine whether he is a suitable candidate to donate a kidney to a diabetic daughter whose own kidneys are failing.

Garn, seeking a third term as Utah's senior senator, reported to the University of Utah Health Sciences Center after being informed that the condition of his daughter, Susan, had worsened, said aide Jeff Bingham.

The Republican senator, who was the first civilian to ride the space shuttle last year, was to be released Friday evening and begin a vacation with family members on Saturday in Sun Valley, Idaho, aides said.

Press secretary Lauric Snow said Garn's daughter, Susan Garn Horn, 27, suffers from progressive kidney failure and is being treated at Georgetown Hospital in Washington, where the transplant would take place.

Black bears return to Duluth

DULUTH, Minn. — It's August, and the black bears are wandering around this northeastern Minnesota city. Duluth police have received about 100 calls in the last week, down sharply from last year at this time when police often received that many bear calls a day.

Complaints in and around Duluth, which has a population of about 100,000, are running at one-quarter of last year's, according to Dave Garaballa, bear project leader for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

U.S./World In Brief

'Big-ticket' orders jump in July

WASHINGTON — Orders to U.S. factories for "big-ticket" durable goods jumped 4.3 percent in July for the biggest one-month gain since 1984, the government said Friday.

However, analysts greeted the news with skepticism, promising for the sluggish national economy as it might have seemed at first glance.

On the positive side, Douglas Handler, an economist with the Philadelphia forecasting firm Wharton Econometrics, said: "In these figures, perhaps we might be seeing signs of the good times ahead that economists have been forecasting for six or eight months."

But Michael Evans, president of Evans Economics in Washington, said details in the report disappointed him after his first reaction of "Oh boy!" when he saw the total increase for durable goods, which are those expected to last three years or longer.

Kremlin makes overtures to China

MOSCOW — Soviet officials disclosed Friday that the Kremlin has made overtures to China, the West and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in an apparent effort to broaden economic ties with the outside world.

Ivan D. Ivanov, the Foreign Ministry official recently named to oversee international economic relations, told a news conference that the Kremlin is studying China's economic reforms and looking into possible joint business ventures with Western nations.

Ivanov also confirmed that the Soviet Union has asked to participate as an observer in negotiations next month under the general Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. He said the Kremlin wants to become a "full-fledged member" of the Geneva-based organization, which seeks to reduce trade barriers.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said at the same briefing that Moscow has agreed at Iran's request to cut oil exports to the West by 100,000 barrels a day for the next two months to help stabilize world oil prices.

Teens from Lebanon discover peace

FRESNO, Calif. — For one of the 16 Lebanese Moslem and Christian teenagers who lived together for a summer with American families, the experience has been a "revelation of what peace really is."

During his six weeks in California, Nicolas Rebez, 19, found "another kind of life where you don't have to worry about yourself or others if they do something as simple as cross the street and are 15 minutes late coming back."

"Life in Lebanon is continuous fear," a fear to which the young people return this weekend when they leave for home in Beirut. Nicolas, a Greek Orthodox, and Adel Ouinty, 16, a Sunni Moslem, stayed with George and Barbara Wade, first generation Lebanese-Americans. Each host family opened their home to one Moslem and one Christian.

"Those teenagers are no different than our own, except they live in constant fear," Wade said. "That's no legacy to leave any children."

Pan Am agrees to pay FAA fines

WASHINGTON — Pan American World Airways, the country's sixth-largest airline, agreed Friday to pay nearly $2 million in penalties for safety violations uncovered by government inspectors earlier this year.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the agency and Pan Am settled on the fine after Pan Am reorganized and strengthened its maintenance operation where most of the violations were concentrated.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen said Pan Am has taken prompt action to correct the deficiencies, including expanding its maintenance force by about 200 people. He said the airline is operating safely.

Pan Am spokesman James Arey said about half the fine already has been paid and the airline would issue a statement on the settlement later in the day.

Write-in effort possible in Alabama

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Attorney General Charlie Graddick told jubilant supporters Friday he will run as a write-in candidate for governor of Alabama if court appeals fail to win him another chance at the Democratic nomination.

"We're going to be on the ballot in November one way or the other," Graddick said after a week of hearings on his campaign headquarters. "We're going to go out and face them."

The Democratic Party already has a nominee for governor, Lt. Gov. Bill Baxley, who was chosen by a five-member party subcommittee after a week of hearings.

Baxley contested the June 24 primary runoff, which Graddick led by 8,756 votes. The party selected Baxley after a panel of three federal judges ruled Aug. 1 that Graddick had flagrantly misused his office by calling for GOP crossover voting.

S. Africa government under attack

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government came under a two-pronged attack Friday, with the opposition in Parliament demanding its resignation and Bishop Desmond Tutu accusing it of "Tutu bashing" to make him a political scapegoat.

South Africa's Roman Catholic bishops meanwhile filed an urgent application at the Supreme Court in Pretoria seeking to restrain police from assaulting or torturing the Rev. Smaniso Mkhatswa, general secretary of the bishops' conference.

The application, to be heard Monday, did not say how Mkhatswa might have been mistreated since he was detained without charge on June 12. However, the jailed cleric's lawyer, Brian Currin, said he and two doctors visited Mkhatswa late Friday and decided to proceed with the application.

Feds block harbor to nab smugglers

NEW YORK (AP) — The crackdown on crack prompted the first blockade of New York Harbor since the War of 1812, but federal agents who halted scores of vessels recovered no illegal drugs and made just one unrelated arrest, a spokesman said Friday.

"I can tell you, anyone trying to bring drugs into New York will be arrested," said Coast Guard Capt. Arthur Henn, who headed Operation Glass Eye. "We're out to catch those people bringing drugs into the port and poisoning our children."

But the blockade produced just one suspect from the first 78 ships boarded. Thomas Hall, 27, of Asbury Park, N.J., was arrested when a computer check turned up an outstanding warrant for armed robbery. Despite 45-minute stern-to-stern searches of pleasure boats and commercial vessels, no drugs were found.

In two years, the Coast Guard has made only five drug-related arrests in the New York harbor, said Guard spokesman Loren Bullard.

Mayor Edward I. Koch blamed Bullard for the lack of results. The search "wasn't a very well-kept secret on the part of the Coast Guard, because everybody I met Thursday told me about it," Koch said. "That's no way to run an operation. That's got to be done very quietly."

Bullard said the blockade was merely the start of intensified efforts to stop drugs from coming into the harbor. He said random searches and blockades would occur in the future.

"The primary focus of this operation is to let people know that we're going to be out there looking for them and they won't know where or when," he said. "We may not get you tomorrow, but we're going to get you."

Fifteen Coast Guard boats and cutters, joined by four city police boats and two from U.S. Customs, stopped each boat as it entered the harbor through the Verrazano Narrows between the boroughs of Staten Island and Brooklyn. Searches were conducted at Coast Guard piers on Staten Island.

The program started about 8:45 p.m. Thursday, and was to continue until sundown Friday. Henn, calling every craft that enters the harbor a potential smuggler, said the program was sending a message to drug runners.

Pat Scully, Oklahoma National Guard spokesman, said it was only because Sherrill was a member of the marksmanship team that he was able to have the pistols issued to him. "We're very, very accurately-conscious when it comes to issuing weapons," Scully said.

In Lawton, family members and friends of Mrs. Welch were joined at the First Baptist Church by scores of postal workers, many wearing their blue uniforms.

Postal workers join mourners in Oklahoma

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Postal workers filled a dozen church pews Friday as they joined hundreds of mourners at the first of five funerals for some of their co-workers shot dead in a rampage at the post office.

"We are realizing now, as we never have before, how great a gift we have in life," the Rev. Del Hamrick said at the funeral in Lawton for Patti Lou Welch.

No one had claimed the body of Patrick Henry Sherrill, a part-time postal worker who killed himself after Wednesday morning's assault, according to the state medical examiner's office in Oklahoma City.

Five of the six postal employees wounded in the massacre remained hospitalized Friday, all in stable condition. Sherrill, 44, was a top marksman in the Oklahoma National Guard and had checked out the two Colt .45-caliber pistols he used in the shooting from the Oklahoma City gunnery club, officials confirmed Friday.

Major Gen. Robert Morgan, adjutant general for the Oklahoma National Guard, said Sherrill was a member of the guard's marksmanship team and was to compete later this month in a national contest in Little Rock, Ark.

Morgan said Sherrill competed Saturday in a National Rifle Association match near Edmond. He checked out 200 rounds of ammunition for that competition and also was issued 300 rounds on Sunday evening for practice in preparation for the national competition. Morgan said.

Morgan would not speculate whether the estimated 50 rounds fired inside the Edmond Post Office were from those checked out by Sherrill.

Pat Scully, Oklahoma National Guard spokesman, said it was only because Sherrill was a member of the marksmanship team that he was able to have the pistols issued to him. "We're very, very accurately-conscious when it comes to issuing weapons," Scully said.

In Lawton, family members and friends of Mrs. Welch were joined at the First Baptist Church by scores of postal workers, many wearing their blue uniforms.

BUSINESS 'Street name' stocks no obstacle

QUESTION: I have a "self-directed" retirement account through which I buy two stocks. Both stocks have dividend reinvestment plans, which permit stockholders to use their dividends to automatically buy additional full and fractional shares. My broker says I cannot use the dividend reinvestment plan in my IRA because my stocks are held in "street name" — registered in the brokerage house's name. As a result, my dividends go into a money market mutual fund, which presently pays low dividends. The broker says that their way I can reinvest the dividends by giving him an order to buy more of those shares with the cash available in the money market mutual fund. The money market means paying more commissions. Is there any way I can beat this system?

Market doesn't respond to the Fed

NEW YORK — The stock market lately has had trouble responding when the Federal Reserve cuts its discount rate. On Wednesday, when the Fed lowered the rate on charges on loans to private financial institutions from 6 percent to 5.5 percent, it marked the fourth time it has taken such a step this year. The first two, several months ago, drew an enthusiastic response from investors as the stock market set record highs after record highs. But the reductions in July and this past week produced only sluggish reactions at most after they were announced. The difference, many analysts agree, lies in changed perceptions by investors of the economic background against which the cuts occurred. Earlier in the year, the central bank's moves were interpreted as a likely harbinger of a strengthening economy by midsummer. Those hopes, as it turned out, went unfulfilled. "We remain convinced that gradualism in monetary policy — i.e., modest interest rate cuts such as the Fed has been making — will at best keep the U.S. economy muddling and will not generate a really vigorous rebound," said Greg Smith at Prudential-Bache Securities. Smith and other analysts maintain that lower rates are needed in order to keep the U.S. as well as the United States is going to keep attracting foreign investors to finance its budget deficit. The most recent discount rate cut came immediately on the heels of a downward reduction in the Commerce Department's estimate of economic growth in the second quarter, and word of the third straight monthly decline in housing starts. "The Federal Reserve has ample economic justification to hope that those reductions will sooner or later be realized."

Pharmacist opens own store Monday

Katz, 29, has worked as a pharmacist at Brooks Drug in Bristol, at Finch's Drug in Port Chester, N.Y., and was the store manager at Whitaker Pharmacy & Surgical in Hartsdale, N.Y. He has experience operating retail outlets since 1981, will open The Medicine Shoppe pharmacy next week at 348 Main St. — at the corner of Main and Hyatt streets. It is a business he can run all by himself, for himself. "The chains are very unprofitable," he said about other pharmacies. "In The Medicine Shoppe I'm doing what I did for someone else, except that I'm doing it for myself."

Labor shortage creeps up on economy

NEW YORK — The evidence of it is more easily seen in fast-food outlets and supermarkets than in the Labor Department statistics, but it is making an appearance in the numbers as well before very long. It is a developing labor shortage, and it is relentlessly creeping up on the economy. It shows up now in the supermarket help-wanted sign: "Full-time part-time work your own hours." And it can be seen at the local hamburger shop where former retirees return to work with the kids. It is likely to spread to many more areas of economic life in the next decade. The Morgan Economic Quarterly expects the unemployment rate to reach a peak in the early 1990s as fewer and fewer workers enter the labor force. The causes are clear: a slowdown in the birth rate that began in the early 1960s and which is steadily lowering the number of Americans age 16 years or more; and a slowing of the rate at which women enter the labor force. In the 1970s, the number of people 16 years or older rose at an annual rate of 2 percent. Since 1980 the annual growth rate has been 1.3 percent. It is destined, according to the Census Bureau, to drop under 1 percent before 1990. Simultaneously, the surge of women workers during the 1970s has already slowed. The rate of female participation in the work force has continued to grow, but at a slower rate than in the 1970s. A third factor, the evolution of the industrial economy to one that relies more on services, seems to be involved also. Service industries generally are labor-intensive; that is, they are less easily automated. For several reasons — among them social, geographical and educational — popular jobless statistics sometimes fail to reflect the true situation. Clean quarters: An employee of the National Semiconductor Corp. of Santa Clara, Calif., examines silicon wafers that are used to manufacture integrated circuits or "chips." The employee is protected by clean-room attire known as a "bunny suit," which allows clean rooms to be 100 times as dust-free as a hospital operating room, according to National Semiconductor Corp. The clean room must be kept absolutely clean, since one particle of dust would ruin a chip.

Business In Brief

Savings Bank promotes two: B. Jane Brown and Joyce Trainer, both Savings Bank of Manchester employees, have been promoted to officers of the bank. Each has earned the title of assistant treasurer. The appointments were announced by William R. Johnson, president of SBM. Brown works in the commercial loan department where her responsibilities are concentrated in business development and lending. She joined SBM in 1985 following a student internship at completed there as part of her degree studies at the University of Connecticut. She lives with her family in Tolland. Trainer is the bank's personnel administrator. She joined SBM in 1980 in the Savings Bank Life Insurance Department and in 1983 moved into her current role handling employee benefits. Trainer is chairman of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce beautification and conservation committee, serves on the board of directors of the Parks and Recreation committee in Manchester and is president of a local garden club. She lives with her family in Manchester.

Colt, union exchange proposals

HARTFORD — Negotiators for Colt Firearms Division and 1,000 striking blue-collar workers exchanged contract proposals on Friday and agreed to a five-day recess, a state Labor Department spokesman said. Local 376 of the United Auto Workers offered a contract proposal during the morning session and management offered a counter-proposal in the afternoon before the break. Labor Department spokesman Richard Ficks said. Both sides caucused and at mid-afternoon agreed to recess until Wednesday at 10 a.m., Ficks said. The bargaining sessions Thursday and Friday were the first in the 7-month-old labor dispute since May 13. Seven hundred workers have been hired by the company to replace the workers who went on strike Jan. 24.

Politics, peaches can mix

know the issues. People are not being able to use their right of self determination," she said.

THE MESSAGE seemed to have gotten through. Many at the event said they enjoyed coming each year, but did so this year to help the district fight what they said could be the biggest threat to its existence since it was formed nearly 100 years ago.

"It's nice and it's for a good cause," said Candy Ostrout of Coleman Road, who ate peaches with her husband, Larry Ostrout. "I'm originally from Wethersfield. Wethersfield has an all-volunteer fire department, so I can sympathize with the fight."

A proposed change in the Town Charter, scheduled for a November referendum, would eliminate a provision which requires separate, favorable votes in both the town and district to achieve consolidation. Instead, a single town-wide vote could bring about a merger of the town government and that of the district, which provides fire protection and sewer service to northern Manchester.

Robert Bletchman had little good to say about the newly formed Committee for Charter Revision, which favors the charter change. The new committee, which officially organized Thursday, contends it supports changes in the charter, but is not necessary for consolidation. Bletchman does not agree.

"It's not consolidation, it's annihilation," Bletchman said.

TOGETHRE ideas across, an information table was set up at the peach festival's entrance. Some STEAL members were giving away bumper stickers supporting the district, while others were answering questions. Large red-and-white buckets rested in clear view for people to deposit donations. Many did.

Another STEAL member stood on a nearby street corner, handing out leaflets about an upcoming STEAL meeting, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in Whiton Memorial Library. The meeting was called to discuss a strategy to fight the consolidation effort.

"It's not going to be the last peach festival," O'Marra said. "We've been doing this for 29 years and we'll be doing it for another 29 years."

Jim Sarles, a member of STEAL, periodically got up on the stage where he played and voiced support for the district.

There is a shadow hanging over this tonight because it could be the last peach festival. A crowd of people who (donated money), thank you. We'll try to stay alive. I hope to see you again next year."

There was politicking at the festival beyond that involving town-district relations. Several candidates in the November state election attended the event, including Rep. James R. McCannagh, D-Manchester, Rep. Elsie L. Swenson, R-Manchester, and Sen. Carl A. Zimser, R-Manchester. Pidge Bozzuto was on the grounds campaigning for her husband, Republican gubernatorial candidate Richard Bozzuto.

REGARDLESS of the politics, there were many who attended the festival just for the fun of it.

As Frytko's polka band played music, Pat O'League of Woodland Street and her daughter, Lynn Wilson of Oakland Street, danced with each other on the side.

"Do you know how to do the polka?" O'League said. "It's easy, just one step."

"The music, the people, the food, I like everything," Wilson said.

"Everything I've said will happen has happened," says Republican gubernatorial candidate Richard Bozzuto. In an interview at the Manchester Herald Friday, Bozzuto noted that he predicted he would win the GOP

Bozzuto sets goals for state, self

If Bozzuto is victorious, then incumbent Democrat William A. O'Neill will be his next opponent. Again, Bozzuto said he was confident he could persuade voters to replace O'Neill. The governor, Bozzuto said, has not provided strong leadership for the state.

"The people in this state are doing well," Bozzuto said, referring to Connecticut's low unemployment rate and growing state budget surpluses. "But is the state doing well?" he asked.

Bozzuto doesn't think so. He pointed to the many scandals involving state employees as evidence that O'Neill does not have control of state government.

"I am convinced this administration is a veneer over rotten wood," he said.

If he were governor, Bozzuto said he would reorganize every department, especially the Department of Motor Vehicles and the Department of Transportation.

He said he'd set goals for each department.

And there's an appreciation of that," he said.

"I think I'm number one in eastern Connecticut," said Bozzuto.

Bozzuto is competing against Gerald Labriola of Naugatuck and Julie Belaga of Westport for the right to face incumbent Democrat William A. O'Neill in the November general election.

Bozzuto outlined a plan he hopes will help boost the economy of towns in the region. This plan is based on rebuilding and extending the state's highways — what he called "the linchpin" of the economy.

This includes building the proposed Route 6 expressway from Bolton Notch to Windham. Labriola said he also supports the project, but Bozzuto called for extending the expressway to the Rhode Island border — something not planned by the state Department of Transportation.

Bozzuto said it is also important to create tax incentives so that businesses will locate in the eastern half of the state.

Bozzuto said he was not overly concerned about negative effects of developing the region, contending that there is still plenty of open space. Labriola had said he would try to preserve and increase the amount of land set aside for parks and recreation facilities.

"There's so much that can be developed in eastern Connecticut," said Bozzuto.

convention's nomination in July, and he did. He's equally confident about the Sept. 9 primary against the two other Republican candidates — Gerald Labriola of Naugatuck and Julie Belaga of Westport.

Bozzuto says he's tops in the region

And evaluate the departments as they tried to meet their goals. Changes would be made to make state agencies more efficient, he said.

Taxes would become less a worry because people would pay for what they needed from state government, he said. A reorganization might also allow some taxes to be cut once it becomes clear certain levies are regressive, he said.

In particular, he said, taxes on utility companies are harmful because consumers end up paying higher rates. Taking aim at Labriola's call for a $175 million tax cut, Bozzuto said the proposal was "totally ludicrous" because Labriola is also planning to fund expensive education, road repair and light rail transportation programs.

"I want to be a bit more honest," he said.

Bozzuto said it is important that the dangers of drugs be taught to youngsters at an early age. Labriola has suggested that drug education be postponed until the seventh or eighth grades when youngsters become more aware of themselves and are more inclined to experiment with drugs.

However, Bozzuto said children in fourth and fifth grades have been victims of drug abuse. He said he would also set up regional task forces to crack down on the supply of drugs. He said he'd also impose stiffer penalties on those convicted of selling narcotics.

In 1982, Bozzuto was the leading contender for the GOP gubernatorial nomination, but a surprise deal with his opponents left him out in the cold. Labriola agreed to become the running mate of Lewis Rome, which propelled the two to a convention victory over Bozzuto.

Bozzuto said he was not obsessed with winning this time around to redeem himself. Yet he admitted to having a "burning desire" that fuels his campaign.

"There's always the sense of urgency," he said. That urgency is evident in the confidence he tries to project, as if he is saying this election year there will be no surprise defeats and unfulfilled goals.

Bozzuto is certain he will be the Republican choice for governor of Connecticut in 1986.

Nassiff, Lawns lone unbeaten

Only three teams remain in each the Town 'A' and 'B' Softball Tournaments, with only one unbeaten in each. Nassiff Arms moved into the 'A' championship game Tuesday night with a 16-5 victory over previously unbeaten Pagan Caterers at Fitzgerald Field.

Evergreen Lawn remained the lone unbeaten squad in the 'B' tourney with a 7-0 blanking of previously unbeaten Tierney's, also at Fitzgerald Field.

Over at Robertson Park, Main Pub scored a run in the bottom of the seventh inning to oust MAK Company, 5-4, in 'A' play while Jim's Arco drilled Elmore Associates, 16-5, in 'B' action.

The lineup Monday night has Jim's vs. Tierney's at 7:30 p.m., both games at Fitzgerald Field. If both Nassiff's and Evergreen win on Tuesday, it's all over. If either one, or both, loses, a deciding game or games would be needed Wednesday evening.

Nassiff's unloaded a 5-1 attack to whip Pagan's. Paul Frenette had four hits including a three-run homer to lead Arco with Kevin Comeau and Rick Nicola chipping in four hits as well. Rick Beikewicz and Mark Canegallo three apiece and Ken Bavier, Ron Frenette and Jeff Johnson two each. Steve Crispino had three hits including a two-run homer and Jeff Holt and Mark Pagan two safeties apiece for the losers.

Lawns 7, Tierney's 0

Hank Stuellet spun a five-hit shutout at Tierney's to pin the Funerals into the loser's bracket in the double-elimination tourney. Bob Quaglia, Mark Morris, Mark Bowman and Carl Hunt each collected two hits for Evergreen, the Pagan League champ during the regular season. Five different players struck out five in Tierney's.

Pub 5, MAK 4

John Madden's safety in the bottom of the seventh won it for Main Pub, the 'A' Central League regular season champs. Jack Frascarelli had three hits and Scott Garman a pair for the winners' while Brian Presbice homered for MAK.

Jim's 16, Elmore 5

Mark Foster had four hits and Greg Freeman and Dan Jones three apiece as Jim's Bob Palozzi socked two hits for the Associates.

Yanks, Bosox victorious

NEW YORK — Willie Randolph's eighth-inning single knocked in Rickey Henderson with the winning run Friday night, lifting Dennis Rasmussen and the New York Yankees to a 3-2 victory over the Oakland A's.

Henderson's run settled a pitching duel between Rasmussen, 13-4, and Joaquin Andujar, 7-6. Henderson led off the eighth by reaching safely on a fielding error by A's first baseman Carney Lansford. Henderson stole second and after bluffing a move to third, was balked to third by Andujar. Henderson scored when Randolph hit an opposite-field bloop single.

Rasmussen allowed four hits, walked one and struck out five in eight innings.

Dave Righetti pitched the ninth and became the first in the majors with 30 saves this season. Righetti retired Jose Canseco on a pop-up for the final out, extending his save streak to 6-for-37.

Andujar, who has lost four of his last five, gave up seven hits, walked three and struck out four. Andujar's homer was an opposite-field shot to left, his 27th of the season. The homer was only the third to the opposite field this season by the left-handed hitting Pagliarulo.

Lenn Sakata singled before Larry Dierker homered Rasmussen, who has given up eight homers in his last seven games.

With two outs in the Yankees fourth, Dan Pasqua doubled off the wall at the 411-foot mark in left-center and scored the tying run on a single by Winslow.

Red Sox 6, Indians 3

At Cleveland — Bill Buckner's two-run single in the seventh inning lifted the Boston Red Sox ahead 4-3 and they went on to defeat Cleveland 6-3 Friday night, giving them victories in all eight games against the Indians this season.

The Red Sox routed Cleveland 2-5 Thursday night and have taken the lead in the American League East with a 4-2 record in consecutive contests over two seasons.

Bruce Hurst, 8-6, gained the victory as he yielded three runs, including a home run, in 6 2/3 innings. Calvin Schiraldi gained his sixth save with 2-3 innings of one-hit relief, retiring the final eight batters he faced. Schiraldi has five saves and one win in his last six appearances.

With Cleveland ahead 3-2, Wade Boggs singled leading off the seventh and moved to second on Jerry Barrett's sacrifice. Losing pitcher Ken Schube, 11-5, then hit Mike Rice with a pitch.

After Don Baylor fled out, Dwight Evans walked to load the bases. Scott Bailes relieved Schrom and Buckner lined an 0-2 pitch into right field for the tying and winning runs.

The Red Sox scored a run in the third without the benefit of a hit. Rich Gedman, leading off, reached first as Pat Tabler misplayed George's grounder for an error. Spike Owen sacrificed and Gedman moved to third and Owen Ryan intentionally walked Mike LaValiere to pitch to Tudor.

Pirates 16, Braves 5

At Pittsburgh, Sid Bream went 5-for-5 and drove in five runs Friday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates rapped out 19 hits in their biggest offensive showing in three years and defeated the Atlanta Braves 16-5.

Bream hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning, his 14th, and had a two-run single in Pittsburgh's eight-run sixth. R.J. Reynolds and Jim Morrison drove in three runs each as Pittsburgh had its biggest outburst since a 16-2 victory over the Cardinals on May 3, 1983.

At St. Louis, John Tudor scattered nine hits over seven innings and drove in two runs with a pair of singles to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 6-5 victory over the Houston Astros Friday night.

Tudor, 13-6, struck out seven and allowed one earned run in helping the Cardinals snap a four-game losing streak. Todd Worrel earned his 28th save by stopping the Astros, despite allowing a three-run pinch homer to Denny Walling in the ninth.

Chicago took a 3-0 lead in the fourth inning. Terry Francona singled and Mike Martin and Meyer drew two-out walks to load the bases. Murphy followed with his three-run triple to center.

The Reds scored twice in the seventh. With two outs, Bo Diaz walked, pinch-hitter Eddie Minner singled and both advanced a base on reliever Ron Davis' error covering first base. Then Nick Esasky delivered a two-run single to left field.

Boostered Giants are the pick in the East

By Dove Goldberg
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jack Kent Cooke thinks the signing of Kevin Bryant for the USFL puts his Washington Redskins in the Super Bowl. Football-crazy Dallas thinks Herschel Walker will do the same for the Cowboys.

But listen to George Young, general manager and architect of the New York Giants, preseason favorite in the division Bryant and Walker will enter — the NFC East. "We," he says, "had our USFL transfusion a year ago."

Indeed, when the other NFC East coaches unanimously chose the Giants to win the division title, they were choosing a team that has improved step-by-step the last five years. The last steps came from the USFL — center Hart Oates and guard Chris Godfrey, two unsung members of an unsung offensive line that may be one of the NFL's best.

Add to them punter Sean Landeta and fullback Maurice Carthon, a devastating blocker who had a lot to do with Walker's 2,411 yards with the New Jersey Generals. Give all but Godfrey — a 1984 signing — a full six months off after back-to-back USFL-NFL seasons and expect even greater impact this year.

Walker and Bryant, meanwhile, have just three weeks to acclimate themselves to new offenses after a year off from football and as Dallas defensive back Dennis Thurman pointed out after three preseason games: "We haven't even won an exhibition game yet and people are putting us in the Super Bowl."

Good as they are, as running backs they may be less important in building a champion winner than a center, guard, blocker, fullback and a punter. Walter Payton never played in a Super Bowl until he found himself on a team with the league's best defense and Eric Dickerson has't been able to carry the Los Angeles Rams to a title.

Al Davis, whose Oakland-Los Angeles Raiders have been the most successful franchise in pro football, offers his insight on the big-name signings: "You don't win Super Bowls with halfbacks."

Patriots must prove themselves all over again

By Dove Goldberg
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The first 19 games of the 1985 season were a dream for the New England Patriots. The Super Bowl and its aftermath were a nightmare.

A team with a reputation as talented underachievers, the Patriots finished 11-5 and beat the Jets, Raiders and Dolphins to become just the second wild-card team to reach the Super Bowl.

Then came the 46-10 loss to the Rams and, a day later, the disclosure of drug problems. The residue lingers.

"I personally don't think we have to prove ourselves," said quarterback Steve Grogan, who split duties last season with Tony Eason. "But I think that's probably the way a lot of people are thinking about us."

"People think of us as a drug addict team now," said running back Tony Collins, one of six players identified as drug users in published reports.

general manager of the Washington Redskins said last year when New York outgained all but two of its 18 regular-season and playoff opponents, yet lost six times largely because of let-downs by the defense in key situations.

This year, they add six rookies taken in the first three rounds of the draft to a defense that was second only to Chicago's last year. Four of them are women: Eric Rouseon, Phil Simms, with tight end Zeke Mowatt apparently healthy after missing all last year with a knee injury, seems primed for his best year.

Even with Joe Morris's holdout, the Giants are adequately protected at running back by second-year men George Adams and Lee Rouseon. Phil Simms, with tight end Zeke Mowatt apparently healthy after missing all last year with a knee injury, seems primed for his best year.

Of the two big USFL signees, Bryant may have the more immediate impact because he's joining what seems to be a more solid team. The Redskins also added receivers Derek Holloway, Ricky Sanders and Clarence Verdin, plus quarterback Doug Williams as insurance for Jay Schroeder at quarterback.

Schroeder, who won five of six starts after taking over for the injured Joe Theismann last year is the key. If he can repeat his success of last year, the Redskins may fulfill Cooke's prediction: if he can't, they may be sitting home and watching the playoffs again.

In Dallas, Walker will either alternate with Tony Dorsett or spell him. But the Cowboys might have been better off if Walker had been an offensive lineman — Kurt Peterson, probably the best member of the unit, already has been lost to injury. They've also lost second-year man Kevin Brooks, who was scheduled to provide a transfusion for an aging defensive unit that statistically was just 20th in the NFL last year.

Philadelphia went 7-9 last year against a schedule far easier than the one the Eagles face this season. Still, new coach Buddy Ryan is projecting a division title.

It's difficult to see how Ryan himself is the major new face and it may take his team a full season to pick up the intricacies of his "46 defense." When and if first-round pick Keith Byars is healthy, the running attack will be improved immeasurably, but that doesn't seem enough in one of the NFL's two toughest divisions.

St. Louis, one of the favorites to win the division title instead of the Eagles, has lost its first-round pick Ken O'Brien, brittle running back Freeman McNeil and second-year receiver Al Tonre the stands.

Defensively, and Mark Gastineau nose tackle Joe Klecko and inside linebacker Lance Mehl are dominant enough to compensate for questions in the secondary and at outside linebacker.

have to play the AFC West, a head-to-head face off with the other tough division that could cost teams in both a wild-card shot.

PREDICTION: Giants 11-5, Redskins 11-5, Cowboys 8-8, Eagles 7-9, Cards 7-9.

CENTRAL
No team has won consecutive Super Bowls this decade and only the 1962-83 Redskins have even gone to the championship game twice in a row. But the Chicago Bears have a start on breaking that jinx.

The Bears, probably won't go 15-1 again, but they have a schedule that contains only two teams that were better than .500 last year and they play in a division where none of their four rivals is better than mediocre.

Coach Mike Ditka has been complaining about quarterback Jim McMahon's excess weight, and he needs to replace wide receiver Dennis McKinnon and cornerback Leslie Frazier, gone for the season with knee injuries. But there's no way a team with players like Walter Payton, Mike Singletary, Richard Dent and Dan Hampton is going to lose enough to make the division interesting.

The major question may be how many positions William Perry plays. Minnesota (7-9) is probably the best of the rest. Jerry Burns is the third new coach in three years, returning after Bud Grant came out of retirement to return the Vikings to mediocrity following the 3-13 Les Steckel disaster. Burns has some assets, like a quick offense geared to Tommy Kramer's short passing, but the defense, which registered just 33 sacks last season, needs major help.

Green Bay has finished 8-8 the last four years there has been a full NFL season. They probably won't be this season. The Packers are adequate on defense, but far less than that offensively. Their major impact player is wide receiver James Lofton, but it's Randy Wright really, the quarterback, who can utilize Lofton's talent. Rookie Robbie Bosco may be a long-term answer.

Detroit's biggest asset may be the Pontiac Silverdome, where last year the Lions beat teams like the Dolphins, Cowboys, 49ers and Jets in an 8-8 season. But this year's a holding action, with Eric Hipple hanging in at quarterback until Chuck Long develops.

Tampa Bay (2-14) doesn't even have Bo Jackson to develop — the first pick in the NFL draft opted for baseball over football leaving the Bucs to hope for improvement from quarterback Steve Young.

San Francisco fell into the post-Super Bowl funk last year, losing six times, then getting blown out of the playoffs by the Giants. The shers might be a good bet to rebound this season if its secondary is not in disarray.

The big loss is All-Pro cornerback Bo Jackson to develop — the first pick in the NFL draft opted for baseball over football leaving the Bucs to hope for improvement from quarterback Steve Young.

Herschel Walker (left) and Tony Dorsett may prove to be quite a force in the Dallas Cowboy backfield this season, but the New York Giants are still the pick in the NFC East Division.

But Young may have to give way to perennial stand-in Steve DeBerg for a while.

PREDICTION: Bears 13-3, Vikings 8-8, Packers 6-10, Bucs 5-11, Lions 5-11.

WEST

Despite the cocaine-related death of safety Don Rogers and the holdout of linebacker Chip Banks, Cleveland remains the favorite in a still-weak division.

Lindy Infante, new offensive coordinator, has jazzed up the offense and quarterback Bernie Kosar will throw more in his second season than he did in his first, which he spent handing off to Earnest Byner and Kevin Mack, who gained 1,000 yards each.

Cincinnati, 7-9, needs a good start after opening 1-6 and 2-5 the last two years. But the most pressing problem is defense.

Led by second-year quarterback Boomer Esiason, one of the NFL's emerging stars, the Bengals scored a club-record 441 points last year, third-best in the league. They gave up 437, third worst.

The story behind the story

By Josie

Prince

Q. Give me any information on the rock star Prince, P.J. Carter, Davenport, Iowa.
A. Prince Roger Nelson is 28 (born June 7, 1958), from Minneapolis, the son of jazz musician/composer John L. Nelson and his wife, Mattie Shaw, a singer. (Prince was named after the Prince Roger Trio, a jazz group in which the two appeared.)

His parents split up when he was 10 and the shy, withdrawn child began to teach himself to play the piano that his father had left behind. He also learned to play drums, guitar and keyboards, and with a friend formed a band called Grand Central while in junior high school.

His mother remarried and his new stepfather tried to put an end to his music, however, prompting him to leave home and move in with his father. He and his father fought frequently, so he left and moved in with an aunt, but she asked him to leave because he played his guitar at ear-splitting levels.

Finally, he was unofficially adopted by a friend's mother who encouraged him to keep up with his music as long as he kept up his grades. He did, and after graduating from Central High School, he began to write songs and perform them with his band, now called Champagne.

In 1976, he met Chris Moon, the owner of a small recording studio, and produced a demo tape of his songs, on which he played all of the instruments. He then hired a manager who took the tape to Los Angeles. A number of record companies were interested, but only Warner Brothers gave in to his demand that he be allowed to produce his first album. That album, "For You," was released in 1978.

His second, "Prince," came out a year later but it was his third, "Dirty Mind," in 1980 that established him as a performer suggestive to the point of soft core pornography, an image that was reinforced when he appeared in concert.

His outfit consisted of a pair of black bikini briefs, legwarmers and an open trenchcoat.

Jerry Lewis

Q. Please answer this question; there's a sizable bet resting on it. Do Jerry Lewis and his wife San Dee have a child? Are they even still married? Mrs. Robin Endow, Las Vegas, Nev.

A. They are still married, but they don't have any children. "Unless you count the dog. He loves that dog like it was his child," says his agent.

Right now he's also involved in preproduction for his next movie, "The Nutty Professor II," which starts filming in September. He is starring in it as well as directing. In addition, he's always working on behalf of the Muscular Dystrophy Foundation and is planning for his upcoming annual telethon.

Q. I would like to know about Ed Harris. I'm so impressed with his acting. G. Mitchell, Santa Maria, Calif.

A. He's 35, from Tenafly, N.J., a former Ivy League (he spent two years at Columbia University) who decided to quit academia for acting. His father, a former singer on "The Kraft Music Hall," knew someone who was running a summer repertory theater at the University of Oklahoma, so he went there for training.

He did well, and his next stop was California, where he attended the California Institute of the Arts for two years and started performing onstage in Los Angeles in plays such as "Sweet Bird of Youth" and Sam Shepard's "True West."

He also made two films, "Borderline" and "Knightriders." His career really started to roll, though, after appearing in Sam Shepard's play "Fool for Love," in New York in 1983.

A nonstop string of top movie roles followed: as Goldie Hawn's husband in "Swing Shift"; the mercenary in "Under Fire"; astronaut John Glenn in "The Right Stuff"; the reporter in "A Flash of Green"; the philandering brother-in-law in "Place in the Heart"; the redneck hero in "Alamo Bay" and Charlie Dick, Patsy Cline's husband in "Sweet Dreams." (Another film, "Emerald," is in limited release.)

Recently, he won raves and a Tony Award nomination for his performance in the Broadway play "Precious Sons."

Currently, according to a rep, he's making up his mind what to do next, but it will be a movie. He's married to actress Amy Madigan; they were married on the last day of filming of "Place in the Heart," in which they co-starred.

Ed Harris

Q. I would like to know what Rod McKuen is doing — any new books, records, personal appearances? F.D.S., North Wildwood, N.J.

A. He's been pretty busy, just not visible. He has a new book of poetry, "Intervals," due out in September and has been writing songs with former collaborator Anita Kerr for an album which he'll begin recording at the end of the year.

He and Kerr are also planning a video "mood piece" which should also begin production at the end of the year, as well as a Broadway musical and a concert tour for next year.

Q. What has happened to Jodie Foster, personally and professionally? We saw her in an HBO movie and she had really put on weight. Also, is she making any more movies? Anne T., Scranton, Pa.

A. What happened was school food. She gained about 20 pounds during her freshman year at Yale. She graduated last year, though, and while that doesn't guarantee any weight reductions, it does allow more moviemaking. She's deciding between a couple of offers right now, and has a completed film, "Mesmerized."

Q. My husband and I think that the Bartles and Jaymes commercials are some of the best on TV. Are the two men really Bartles and Jaymes? Georgene Blair, Chino, Calif.

A. There's been quite a veil of secrecy over the identities of the two men but no, they are not Bartles and Jaymes. Frank Bartles is actually Dave Ruffkahr, a farmer from the Bend, Ore., area and Ed Jaymes is Richard Maugg, a Santa Rosa, Calif., real estate developer.

My baby pictures even turned out bad

By Charles Saltzman

I have seldom looked good in photographs. On my driver's license, my picture has always looked like that of some character in a horror movie, a relative of Dracula, or like pictures in the Rogues' Gallery of most-wanted criminals posted by the FBI in federal buildings.

Of course, that is not absolute proof that I do not photograph well, because almost everyone else has similar results on their driver's licenses. I am not alone.

Yet, some people take good pictures most of the time, and some do not. One of the boys in my old neighborhood was tough looking, a vandal and a future syndicate hoodlum; yet in his photos he always looked like the clean-cut, all-American boy. My sister was attractive, but not remarkably so; yet in her pictures she always came out looking like a winner of a Miss America contest.

Even my baby pictures did not come out well, and that is rare for baby pictures. There is hardly an infant or a picture of one that does not bring raves from viewers. They ooh and aah about it and say how cute and darling it is.

From what I have been told, no such comments were ever made about me, even when I lay small and naked on a bearskin rug. I am the only one I ever heard of, maybe one of the few babies in all history, who did not bring forth adoring remarks. The viewers would look at me and say nothing.

The lack of comment was itself a comment. Silence in such a case is not an absence of opinion but is itself an opinion as much as if it were shouted. Since people go into raptures about any baby, even the most plain looking, not saying anything about one means that they think it is pretty awful.

I have been told that there were times when people tried hard to say something nice but that the words stuck in the speaker's throat and could not come out. They found it impossible to give a compliment that was not believable.

Most of my other photos came out poorly also. When people looked through the family album and came to my photo, they would stare a while, then ask "Who is that?" in a tone of voice as if the query were "What is that?" My folks were not quick to reply, as if they were reluctant to admit that that was their child.

I remember one photo of me that came out well. It made me look handsome. For many years my father carried that rare one in his wallet among other family snapshots. He put in later pictures of other members of the family as time went along, but he never replaced mine with one that was more recent.

He held on to that one for dear life, as if there could never be another. When he showed people the photo of his son, they thought that was the way I looked at that time, not 10 years before. It was the only picture of me he wanted to show.

I think that the cameraman is partly to blame for poor pictures because he always tells his subject to smile. Usually I try. That advice may help the result in some cases, but it can ruin others. If one does not feel like smiling and the expression is forced, the artificial smile makes one look worse than if one kept a straight face.

I think that most smiles do not look good unless they are spontaneous and natural. When I force one, all I manage to do is lift the corners of my mouth, making an expression that looks like one of pain or a grimace.

When I was photographed for my local paper, I said jokingly that the photographer should try to improve on the face, touch the photo up a bit here and there. He took about 10 different pictures and said he would use the one that was best. I have wondered, if that was the best, how the others were. ■

A world champ takes aim

Archer Eric Hall isn't one to brag

COLUMBIA — His name is the biggest in his field, yet he is a prime candidate for an American Express commercial. "Hi, you may not know me, but I'm the world champion." It's safe to say he can walk the streets of his hometown and not be mobbed by throngs of adoring fans pleading for his autograph.

There are those in Columbia who probably don't even know what he does.

But Eric Hall, whose dream at one point was to make it big in professional basketball, is the No. 1 archer in the world today. Hall earned that distinction by shattering all records at the World Field Archery Championships in Blaire-Atholl, Scotland, the week of Aug. 4.

"His nickname is the 'Sledgehammer' because he pounds everyone under," said his father, Art, owner of Hall's Indoor Archery Range, the largest indoor facility (21 lanes) in the country. "He's breaking records no one dreamed could be broken. No one dreamed someone could shoot a bow and arrow like that."

The five-day competition in Scotland consisted of two field rounds, two hunter rounds and one animal round. The hunter and field rounds are shot at targets, while the animal round is just as it sounds — the targets are animal images. Hall, as a 250-pound black bear trophy on the wall at Hall's Arrow attests, can hit the real thing as well.

The targets were from 10 to 80 yards and the course was not easy. "The world championships are held every two years and each host tries to outdo the other," Hall said. "The course was very, very tough. There were places if you stepped three feet to the side of the platform, you were going down 50 to 60 feet." A competitor fired four arrows at each target, with each course consisting of 28 targets.

In the archery world, new records are set by one or two points. The difference between winning and second place is also in that range.

"I won by 86 points," said the 26-year-old archer. He had rounds of 532 and 528 in the hunter class, 536 and 535 in the field rounds and a perfect 560 score in the animal round. All were new world records in the Pro Fingers category in which Hall has no equal today.

And just think, Hall at one point hung up his bow and arrow in favor of the roundball game. The Hall family has been involved in archery for nearly 30 years. The range was opened by Art and his wife, Marcia, in 1964 and has been the family business since. "I started shooting as soon as I could pick up a bow, maybe when I was 5 years old," Eric said, testing his memory.

He continued at it until he discovered basketball. "I shot until the seventh grade. Then I started playing basketball and I put it (bow) away for six years. I didn't step in here during that entire time."

He played basketball at Windham High School for two years before transferring to East Catholic High School for his junior and senior years. The 6-foot-2 Hall was a double figure scorer for the Eagle quintet, averaging a team-leading 11.3 points per game in 1977-78. He had every intent of going on to college — and maybe beyond.

But fate had other designs for him.

"I hurt my leg in a summer league game in New Haven and they said I wouldn't be ready for the fall. So what I decided to do was take a year off. I didn't want to lose a year of eligibility."

He still has it, and the other three as well.

"In that year what I did was start working here for my father again. I started shooting again and I found myself enjoying archery and the work. Looking at it realistically, I felt myself more gifted in archery. It seemed to be my calling. So rather than going to college for four years, and come right back here and lose four years, I figured to start right off. My father made me a good offer."

Hall turned professional in 1979. He won his first state championship that year and won the title every year since.

The bullseye outdoors is 2 to 4 inches in diameter. The indoor bullseye is 1 1/2 inches in diameter with the targets at 20 yards. Hall's competition Hoyt bow looks like something out of Star Wars. It has pulleys, cables, levers, a stabilizer and a four-power telescopic lens. It weighs 6 pounds and costs roughly $500. The bow is set at 70 pounds of stress and when Hall pulls back on the bowstring and releases an arrow, it whizzes away at 160-175 miles per hour. And many, many more times than not, winds up smack in the middle of the bulls-eye.

Hall: 'I hate to lose'

"A lot of it is practice. I've always believed practice makes perfect," Hall said he practices three hours a day, "four if I'm really trying to get into shape. Other than that, it's a lot of mental preparation. Two days before a tournament, I get myself mentally prepared. I concentrate on what I have to do at the tournament."

Hall believes his prowess comes from his aggressiveness and his concentration. "I'm a more aggressive archer than the others. I shoot at a heavier weight." The aggressiveness was acquired from his association with basketball and his coaches there. "I hate to lose," he adds.

His concentration is another factor. "I tend to be able to block most anything out, especially during a tournament. You can shoot a shotgun off behind me, and if I'm in full draw, I may not realize it went off."

Hall celebrated his marriage to the former Cynthia Fournier of Andover in August of 1984 by winning his first Professional Archers Association National Championship. That's just one of his many accomplishments.

He has won a class, either Pro Fingers or Pro Release, in each of the last four New England Open Indoor Championships, hosted by Hall's Arrow. He has won every major shoot there in this year, winning in Las Vegas, Atlantic City, the Indoor and Outdoor Nationals and Mike's Pro-Am in Illinois. His reward — about $20,000 in prize money, bonus money and that from his sponsor, Hoyt/Easton Inc. "If I was a pro golfer, and I did what I did, I'd be retired. But the money is getting better."

Hall isn't sure what's ahead. He's toying with the idea of concentrating in the Pro Release category. Pro Fingers is just as it sounds. An archer releases the bowstring with his fingers. In Pro Release, a mechanical device is used. "I may shoot Pro Release just to see if I put my mind to it how competitive I can be." He's not sure if he wants to, though. "In the release class, you have to be perfect and I don't believe people were made to be perfect."

Hall said he doesn't miss the limelight offered by other sports. "I don't miss it because in the archery world I am known. I'm not one to worry about signing autographs. I get a kick out of it, but at times it can be embarrassing," he said.

Being a world champion does have its responsibilities. For one thing, he has to keep up with his full-time job at the range. "It's 50 to 60 hours a week. It's from selling archery equipment to (giving lessons) to purchasing to cleaning the floors."

And when Hall came back from Scotland, he did have something waiting for him — the lawn. It needed mowing.

Eric Hal examines equipment at Hall's Indoor Archery Range. He works full time at the range.

'Flight of the Navigator'

By Lee Siegel

"Flight of the Navigator" won't earn a place among Disney's classics, but it's a perfectly entertaining sci-fi movie that does a creditable job with the stale human-meets-alien theme.

The film's 12-year-old hero, David Freeman (newcomer Joey Cramer), is sent to the woods near his Fort Lauderdale, Fla., home to fetch his smart-alecky, 8-year-old brother (Albie Whitaker). But David takes a tumble and is knocked out cold.

After David awakes, he runs home and is shocked to find strangers living in his house. While David hasn't aged a bit, eight years have elapsed. His parents (Cliff De Young and Veronica Cartwright) have moved and his younger brother is now 16 (played by Matt Adler).

The suspense over David's whereabouts for eight years builds nicely, thanks to screenwriters Michael Burton and Matt MacManus and the original story by Mark Baker. But their efforts were sabotaged by Walt Disney Pictures' advertising, which gives away the outer space theme that dominates the second half of the picture.

Lee Siegel writes for The Associated Press.

Cinema Review

Nevertheless, most adults should find the plot adequately interesting. The kiddies should be enthralled by the special effects, including a spaceship ride, a fuzzy and gloopy variety of pint-sized aliens and the spacecraft's robot commander Max. The latter's voice apparently was provided without credit by Paul Reubens of Pee-Wee Herman fame.

Most of the characters are pretty one-dimensional, and Howard Hesseman's performance as NASA's conniving, manipulative Dr. Faraday will seem somewhat lame to anyone used to him as disc jockey Johnny Fever on the old

"WKRP in Cincinnati" television show.

"Flight of the Navigator" is rated PG, presumably for a few harsh words between brothers and David's fear he has been abandoned by his parents. But if children could deal with Disney killing off Bambi's mommy, they won't have any problem with this movie.

Directed by Randal Kleiser ("Grease," "The Blue Lagoon") and produced by Robby Wald and Dimitri Villard, Disney's latest flight of fancy has a 90-minute running time.

Film commitment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedy writer Bob Kaufman says all of his movies are about commitment, even "Love at First Bite."

"The moral of that was that love is better with a monster who'll make a commitment than with a nebbish who won't," he said.

His next effort will be "Soldiers of Fortune," a spoof of the "Rambo" school of filmmaking. It's about three housewives who gear up to find their missing husbands with the help of an instructor they find through a magazine ad.

Film capsules

Aliens (R) — Sigourney Weaver, Carrie Henn, Paul Reiser, Michael Biehn (Thriller) Even if you try and follow the plot — Warrant Officer Ripley, after a 57-year nap in outer space, goes back into combat with those slimy extraterrestrials — you'll soon tire from clutching your seat in fear. This film continues the screams that were instigated by 1979's "Alien." Director James Cameron has created perfect summer fodder to keep us hoarse for days, but Weaver is a problem. Running around in her underwear playing Ramboette, she needs to hone her acting. Luckily, the success of "Aliens" rests on the special effects, and not Weaver's histrionics. Grade: B-plus.

Malcolm (PG-13) Colin Field, John Hargreaves, Lindy Davies (Comedy) This Australian comedy features a childlike adult character named Malcolm, whose mechanical wizardry sharply contrasts with his social maturity. He builds an array of magnificent gadgets, including a car that splits in two (and keeps on running) and cardboard scale models of Australian trams. But what excitement develops when Malcolm rents a room to a humbling bank robber, played with verve by John Hargreaves? Colin Fields brings tenderness and an ingenuously Malcolm. The music, by the Penguin Cafe Orchestra, is the finest film accompaniment in many seasons. Grade: B-plus.

Vamp (R) — Chris Makepeace, Sandy Baron, Robert Rusler, Deede Pfeiffer, Grace Jones (Horror Drama) "I wanted the film to be funny," says producer Donald Borchers. "But always within the confines of a situation based in reality." Borchers had failed. This plotless exercise in inanity features: a hissing Grace Jones covered by nothing but breast coils and body paint (courtesy of Keith Haring); dialogue fit only for the dead; and stale humor. Imagine the scripts that Hollywood rejected. Without a doubt, the worst film of the year. Grade: F-minus.

About Last Night... (R) — Rob Lowe, Demi Moore, James Belushi, Elizabeth Perkins. (Drama) What seems like a one-night stand — two Yuppies meet in a bar, then race home to display their ample sexual gymnastics — is actually a poignant tale. This couple wants to be in love, despite interference by friends who insist commitment is an '80s faux pas. Ed Zwick has made a self-assured feature film debut, but what makes the film real is the acting. Lowe sheds in his Brat Packer image and turns in an unabashed performance, but Demi Moore steals the film. Baring her soul (when not baring her breasts), Moore proves that the talents she exhibited in "St. Elmo's Fire" were no fluke. Grade: B.

At Close Range (R) — Sean Penn, Christopher Walken, Mary Stuart Masterson. (Drama) Sean Penn lives in the rural South with his tired grandmother, broken-down mother and foolish brother. Then one day, dad comes back to town — with money, flashy cars and the promise of success. But there is one small problem: Dad is a thief. Walken infuses his role with a delicious evil, and Penn, who must make some rather brutal decisions, has never been better. The last 20 minutes are devastating. Not for the entire family. Grade: B.

Big Trouble in Little China (PG-13) — Kurt Russell, Kim Cattrall, Dennis Dun, James Hong, Victor Wong. (Comedy Adventure) Twentieth Century-Fox bills this as a "mystical action adventure comedy kung-fu monster ghost story." Sounds like trouble? You bet. Russell plays pig salesman Jack Burton who, caught among underworld Chinatown ghosts, battles creatures with such foreboding names as The Sewer Monster, One Ear and Noddies. There are special effects, inane dialogue and more special effects. John Carpenter has too much to work with here; he compensates by directing with a manic pace. If there was more focus — and less frenzy — "Big Trouble" would have been a big, fun film. Grade: C.

Club Paradise (PG-13) — Robin Williams, Peter O'Toole, Rick Moranis, Jimmy Cliff. (Comedy) This is a Club Med for the big boys: Dope, drink, women donning and doffing their bikinis. This is also bad comedy. Director Harold Ramis ("Caddyshack") fails to ignite this tale of Chicago fireman Jack Moniker who, suffering from burnout, invests his pension and disability money into rejuvenating a tacky island colony into a Garden of Eden. What could have been a funny movie is simply a bland stretch of amusing one-liners and many unfunny moments. Williams' vapid character forces him to act manic, and '80s icon Twiggy graces the land, cape in a "ankleless role." Grade: C.

Toma plays himself

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Toma, the former detective who was the model for the ABC series "Toma" and "Baretta," will play himself in the CBS special "The Drug Knot." The one-hour show, which focuses on teen-age drug abuse, will be telecast in prime time on Wednesday, Sept. 10.

Anything possible in America

By Bob Thomas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Even though he won an Academy Award nomination for his acting, Pat Morita still can't forget his show business beginnings as a standup comedian.

"Since I became a quote actor unquote, I've devoted more and more time to that aspect of my career," says Morita. "I haven't really worked as a comedian for eight years, but I'm thinking of doing some college concerts if I can work up some material. I've got 12 to 15 minutes so far...."

"Right now I'm working on a routine I call 'The World's Only Annual Kamikaze Reunion.' One guy shows up. He's a graduate of the Benihana Kamikaze School and Funeral Home. When reporters ask him how he managed to appear at the reunion, he says, 'I always turned to the guy who was in line behind me and said, 'You go....'"

Morita, 54, talked about his remarkable life and career at his compact mid-Hollywood offices of his production company. The room is dominated by American and foreign posters for "The Karate Kid," which list him as Noriyuki (Pat) Morita. The billing was the idea of producer Jerry Weintraub, who wanted Pat to sound more ethnic in the role Miyogi, the kung fu sage who trains young Ralph Macchio.

"I'll keep the Noriyuki for the 'Karate Kids,'" said Morita. "It's the only name my parents gave me, and I consider it my good luck sign."

Miyogi is the role that brought the Oscar nomination, and Morita repeats it in "The Karate Kid II," again with his protege, Macchio. The Columbia Pictures release, filmed in Hawaii, takes Miyogi back to his Okinawa homeland where he is menaced by native thugs.

Morita's own life story would make a fascinating movie. He was born in northern California, the son of migrant fruit pickers. He spent most of his early years in the hospital with spinal tuberculosis and recovered in time to be interned with his family in a Japanese-American relocation camp in Arizona during World War II.

He claims that he was so happy to be able to walk that he didn't think too much about being interned.

"I have many memories of those days at the camp, but no scars.... I think more about today and tomorrow, and how far we have come since those war times."

The actor first tried standup comedy at the restaurant his family opened after the war, but he wound up with steadier work at Aerojet General. However, inside the computer specialist was a comedian trying to get out, and he entered show business full time at age 30.

"Only in America could you get away with the kind of comedy I did," he said. "...I worked up routines about how on Dec. 8, 1941, I became black. It wasn't easy to do a tap dance in thongs."

Along the way he picked up some minor screen credits and made television appearances on "The Odd Couple," "Green Acres" and "Happy Days." He also had his own short-lived series, "Mr. T and Tina."

"Now I've done a pilot for ABC called 'Ohara,' about a detective family," Morita reported. "If it sells, it sells."

Whitney Houston No. 1

By Ethile Ann Vare

Whitney Houston's new videocassette, "The No. 1 Hits," lived up to its name when it became the first tape to enter the fledgling music-video charts at No. 1. Among the videos included in the collection are "How Will I Know," "The Greatest Love of All" and "You Give Good Love."

The LP "Whitney Houston," meanwhile, is likely to surpass Cindi Lauper's "She's So Unusual" as the best-selling LP by a female artist in history.

Coming to the home video market: "Close Classics," a compilation of MTV's popular videoclips featuring (mainly) '60s rock star acts.

Included in the hour-long reel — due from Vestron Video in September at a $29.95 tag — are The Who, the Grateful Dead, the Moody Blues and Yes.

Even as Quiet Riot are making video hay by satirizing the anti-rock crusaders of the religious right (in the clever new clip "The Wild and the Young"), life imitates art.

The latest spectacle has an 800-location department store chain, Wal-Mart, pulling rock and teen magazines from its shelves because some conservative activists find them "objectionable." Included on the no-no list are Rolling Stone, Hit Parade and Tiger Beat — among a total of 32 publications.

File under strange bedfellows: Kurtis Blow's next album, "Kingdom Blown" features a guest rap on the track "Street Rock" by none other than Bob Dylan. Apparently the two met when Dylan borrowed Blow's backup singers for work on his own LP.

Dave Stewart of Eurythmics has been collaborating on some songs with actor Jack Nicholson — via telephone. Nicholson dictates the lyrics long distance.

Joe Montana, Dwight Clark and other stars of the San Francisco 49ers football team make up the backing chorus on "I Know What I Like," a cut from the upcoming — and long overdue — new album by Huey Lewis and the News.

Upbeat singing siblings the Jets have been appointed to the advisory council of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. They do their part by printing the organization's hotline number on all their record sleeves. You can do your part by calling it if you have information about a missing child: 1-800-THE LOST.

Also getting in the act are the Jets' MCA labelmates, Keel, who will perform a benefit concert for missing children on Aug. 30 in Beaumont, Texas. Keel's video, "Tears of Fire," is a series of documentary vignettes showing the group on the road, and it's an honest overview, according to lead singer Ron Keel. "The only thing missing are scenes of us having our regular food fights at McDonalds and Taco Bell," he laughs.

Rock production company Showco, Inc. expects to get into the Guinness Book of World Records, thanks to its remarkable performance (metaphorically speaking) at Farm Aid II. Showco crew members completed 85 set changes in a single day during the event. They're waiting for Guinness experts to verify that as a new high.

Rumor has it that Lincoln-Mercury is negotiating with Rod Stewart to become the car company's new TV commercial spokesman. Those Motown songs that Lincoln-Mercury has been using in its current spots must be reaching the audience it wants.

Dancing in the studio with John Eddie

By Larry McShane

NEW YORK (AP) — John Eddie built his reputation — and earned his record contract — through five years of playing in bars, clubs and any other place where they'd let him in the door. But when he finally started recording his debut album, the rocker ran into a problem. "I know it sounds crazy, but in the studio I had to relearn how to sing. The first recordings I did, I'd act like I was on stage, dancing all around the studio," confesses Eddie, his quick laugh following. "The guys in the sound booth would stand, yell and clap, and then I'd hear the tapes and, man, they'd sound lousy."

"You can get away with a lot on stage that doesn't work in the studio. You can wiggle your butt and the singing sounds a lot better in the first 10 rows, but in the studio it's just sound. You have to put a lot really in each word, each sentence."

Eddie, who was born in Virginia but moved to Cherry Hill, N.J., when he was 12, had been putting it into his performances with his band, the Front Street Runners, throughout the Philadelphia area and around New Jersey.

"I always concentrated on the live shows, because you only get so many chances with the record companies, and I never liked the sound of our demos," said Eddie, who was signed to Columbia Records after playing live for company executives in New York.

After getting his vocal problems straight, the 27-year-old singer-songwriter took his band in the studio to record "John Eddie" but encountered another problem: He didn't like the results.

"That was actually why I used different people on the album. We weren't getting the excitement of the live show, and I wanted that kind of enthusiasm," Eddie said. "I always remember the early J. Geils Band. The reviews of the albums always said, 'Not as good as the live shows.'"

He quickly assembled a crack studio band, with E Street Band drummer Max Weinberg and bassist Phil Chen and keyboardist Ian McLagan, a pair of former Rod Stewart associates. E Street guitarist Nils Lofgren makes several appearances, and keyboards wizard Greg Phillinganes also joins in.

The resulting album — recorded in just five days — is slightly irregular, ranging from the blistering "Pretty Little Rebel," featuring a wicked Lofgren guitar lead, to "Buster," a country-flavored tune with veteran Jackson Browne sideman David Lindley on dobro and violin. But it's a solid debut for someone whose recording experience was limited to "mostly some demos the record company paid for."

The wicked tango sets fire to U.S.

By Phyllis Zauner

They're doing the tango again. Seductive, lascivious, sleek and passionate, the tango has turned into the surprise dance hit of 1986. From New York to San Francisco, Minneapolis to Miami, at private parties, public dances and supper clubs, the insinuating rhythms of "Jalousie" and "La Comparsita" are again working their magic, calling couples out on the floor to engage in a dance that is dazzlingly sexy.

As danced by professionals in Latin tango clubs, it is downright incendiary. The man, dressed to suggest power and domination, begins with back slightly arched and his face impassive and hard, much the way a matador faces a bull.

The woman, her skimpy dress slashed up to the waist, also wears a blank expression. They join in a tight embrace and begin the intricate steps and glides of the dance.

As the music drives relentlessly, the dancers move critically to the beat, their hips touching, her leg curling around his hip as they turn. The dance often ends with the man leaning over the submissive form of his partner.

The tango is Argentina's national dance. But for Americans, it is not an easy dance, says Margie Tozer, a San Francisco tango instructor. "Americans have a fear of intimacy, are shy about being so openly sensual and showing sexuality in public."

So what's brought them out of their shells?

Although the origin of the wave is difficult to pinpoint with certainty, it seems likely that the Broadway show "Tango Argentino" was the major catalyst in bringing back a dance that has been virtually moribund in this country since Fred and Ginger gave it up.

This elite company of 15 dancers, four singers and a dozen musicians was formed in Argentina by Claudio Segovia and Hector Orezzoli, who combed dance halls and clubs all over their country to find the best tango teams. Having then produced a solid hit at home, they took the cabaret-style revue to Paris and New York.

"Tango Argentino" arrived on the Broadway scene in October 1985 for a five-week engagement and turned out to be the season's surprise smash hit — or as Variety put it, "a genuine sleeper doing prairie-fire business."

What these dancers do is certainly not the basic American tango once performed seriously by Rudolph Valentino and satirically by Groucho Marx, later polished by Fred Astaire, and popularized by Arthur Murray in his 1920s radio dance lessons.

This is the rough and tortuous tango that got its start in the bordellos of Buenos Aires a century ago, where flashing legs were sometimes joined by flashing knives. This was the lusty dance of the lower element.

The New York run of "Tango Argentino," awash in rave reviews, was extended for an additional eight weeks. Since then, the company has been on North American tour, playing to standing ovations.

And at each new city, another wave of tango excitement follows in the wake of performances, like a beach ball bouncing along on the crest of an incoming tide.

As George Theiss, director of Arthur Murray headquarters in Miami, is pleased to report, Argentina's national dance is not an easy one for Americans who have a fear of intimacy and are shy about showing sexuality in public, say tango instructors.

"These dancers have stimulated a tremendous interest in the tango wherever they've appeared — and even where they haven't appeared but their fame has reached."

In the Arthur Murray studios in Minneapolis (where the dancers haven't appeared) manager Gary Stephens says about one-fourth of the telephone inquiries he receives now ask if the tango is included in the dance lesson package.

Lately he's been touting the tango on TV talk shows. "I'm also putting together a show for cable TV, demonstrating the tango steps. We even brought in Vicki Regan from New York to choreograph the dances for a professional couple."

So far, no one is willing to hazard a guess as to how long this tango fad will last. Some indicators suggest we may be in for another craze like the one that began before World War I and lasted into the late 1930s. "But tango may not hold up in the long run," Leone fears, "because people don't hear enough of the music. When Leroy Anderson wrote 'Blue Tango' in the 1950s, people loved it. But no new tango music has been written, and disc jockeys seldom play it. The dance will last only as long as people are compelled by the music."

Compelled by music, or whatever force, Americans are at least momentarily caught up in a new dance that is certainly nothing less than macho, according to Cesar Ascarrunz, owner of Cesar's Latin Palace in San Francisco. ■

Back to the soaps

NEW YORK (AP) — Joel Higgins, Ken Kercheval, Don Knotts, Hal Linden and Robert Mandan will return to the NBC soap opera "Search for Tomorrow" to help celebrate its 35th anniversary.

The actors, all of whom previously worked on the show, are taping one-minute segments that will be telecast at the conclusion of each episode from Aug. 27-Sept. 3.

"Search for Tomorrow," the longest-running soap in television history, will devote the Wednesday, Sept. 3, telecast to a retrospective of the serials' landmark events. They will be seen through the eyes of Jo Tourneur (Mary Stuart) and Stu Bergman (Larry Haines). Miss

Stuart has been with the show since its premiere on Sept. 3, 1951, and Haines joined it two months later.

Higgins played Jo's adopted son Bruce Carson from 1975-78. Kercheval was the wild, fun-loving Dr. Nick Hunter from 1965-67 and returned to the role in 1972-73. Mandan from 1964-69 played elegant business tycoon Sam Reynolds. Jo's great romance who couldn't free himself from his ruthless, estranged wife. That woman's affair with Larry Carter, played by Hal Linden in 1969, was at the root of her problems. From 1953-55, Don Knotts was Wilbur Peabody, a young man unable to speak or hear because of a childhood trauma.

These warts are highly contagious

She's embarrassed that her husband might have VD

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Last fall, my husband contracted condyloma. In January, he had outpatient surgery at a urologist's office. I was told by a friend that this is considered a venereal disease.

Is this true? How contagious is condyloma? Can I be exposed to this disease even though he had the surgery done?

I am embarrassed about this and really do not want to ask my family doctor.

DEAR READER: I assume you are asking about condylomata acuminata, also called anogenital warts. This is one of the most common of the many STDs (sexually transmitted diseases, which used to be called venereal diseases).

These warts are highly contagious, and anyone who has had sexual contact with a person who has been diagnosed as having anogenital warts must be checked to see if he or she has contracted the disease. If you had sex with your husband between the time he contracted anogenital warts and the time they were treated, there is a good chance that you were exposed to this disease.

In addition, a single treatment is not always sufficient to eradicate the warts. Before assuming that he is no longer contagious, your husband needs to be carefully checked to make sure that all of the warts were removed in January and that none have reappeared.

Although these warts usually appear in easy-to-see locations (on the penis or scrotum in men and the vulva in women), they also can occur inside the urethra in men, deep inside the vagina or on the cervix in women, or inside the anal canal in both sexes.

This means that you will need a thorough examination before you can be certain that you do not have this disease. Many patients probably have asked your family doctor or gynecologist to check for condylomata acuminata. However, if you would rather seek medical attention elsewhere, contact a specialist in sexually transmitted diseases. Most communities have an STD clinic (which may still be called a VD clinic) that will suggest local specialists. Your husband should either see the same person or see his urologist. Until it is determined that neither you nor your husband are contagious, refrain from sexual interaction, or at least use a condom to reduce the amount of contact between genital areas. You might both need to be treated simultaneously to avoid passing this disease back and forth.

Slight bend

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 19, and when I have an erection, my penis gets a slight curve in it. This is very embarrassing. Is there a special doctor I should see for this problem? Can this be corrected?

DEAR READER: It is not unusual for there to be a curve in an erect penis. If the curve makes penetration difficult or is painful, you should consult a urologist.

A few men are born with penile structural problems. For example, a short urethra (the tube that carries urine out of the bladder) can cause the penis to bend. This type of bend is called chordee and can be surgically corrected if severe. This and other structural problems present from birth are different from penile curves that suddenly appear much later in life. These curves are usually associated with a disease and are more difficult to treat.

If the curve is not noticeable when your penis is flaccid, it's important that you tell the physician exactly what happens during erections. Or, if it embarrasses you to describe it, you might take along Polaroid snapshots so the specialist can see what your penis looks like when it is erect.

She's allergic

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I have been taking the recommended dosage of estrogen for 25 days, plus progesterone from day 16 through 25, to treat menopause symptoms.

I found I was allergic to progesterone and asked my doctor if I could stop progesterone, but continue taking estrogen to avoid hot flashes and prevent osteoporosis. He said yes. But I've read that estrogen alone may be dangerous. How safe is estrogen?

DEAR READER: Medical science does not yet have a complete answer to your question, but it's clearly safer to take small amounts of estrogen for 21 or 25 days a month (and nothing the remaining days) than to follow the former method, which involved taking a higher amount of estrogen every day of every month.

The risk differs, depending on which disease you're concerned about. For example, in one study, women taking estrogen had a breast cancer rate of 142 cases per 100,000 women, while women who used no replacement hormones had a rate of 343 cases per 100,000. However, the risk rate of endometrial cancer (the endometrium is the lining of the uterus or womb) was higher among women who took estrogen than among women who took no hormones.

The area of greatest concern appears to be an increased risk of endometrial cancer when progesterone is not used with estrogen. Therefore, you and your physician should establish a checkup schedule that includes an evaluation of any endometrial changes. This may involve having biopsies of endometrial tissue.

Because using progesterone in combination with estrogen is still a relatively recent therapy, experts are not certain what dosage of progesterone is needed to provide protection to the endometrium. Therefore, you might want to talk with your physician about greatly reducing the usual dosage to see if you can take a small amount without experiencing allergic symptoms.

Since synthetic progestins also come in several different forms, you could ask about trying a different drug or a different delivery system, such as suppositories.

"A single treatment is not always sufficient to eradicate the warts. Before assuming that he is no longer contagious, your husband needs to be carefully checked to make sure that all of the warts were removed in January and that none have reappeared."

Pregnancy delay

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 19 and have been trying to conceive for about a year, when I stopped taking my contraceptives. I had an abortion when I was 16, but have had three checkups since then and was told everything is OK.

My boyfriend says nothing is wrong with him, even though he hasn't had a checkup for a couple of years. What could be keeping me from getting pregnant?

DEAR READER: If you have been trying to get pregnant for a full year (having intercourse regularly and not using any contraceptive method), it's time for a fertility evaluation. Tracking down exactly what is causing a couple's fertility problems involves a more lengthy and complicated process than a standard checkup.

For example, a pelvic exam and Pap test don't indicate whether a woman's ovaries are releasing mature eggs or whether her Fallopian tubes are open to provide a passageway between the ovaries and the uterus. In the same way, a man's general physical exam doesn't indicate whether his testicles are producing healthy sperm.

If you don't already do so, begin to keep accurate records of your monthly menstrual cycles and the times when you have intercourse. A family-planning clinic can show you how to take your basal temperature each morning and can explain ways in which you can monitor and record your cycles at home. It also can help you to interpret the records so that you can better predict when you're likely to be most fertile each month.

Call a fertility specialist or clinic to begin an evaluation if these methods do not work for you. Take your cycle records with you to the first appointment.

Hot flashes

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 33 and have recently begun to have irregular periods and hot flashes. Could I be starting the menopause? A recent gynecological exam and Pap test showed nothing abnormal.

DEAR READER: It is possible that you are undergoing a change in the levels of hormones you are producing. A few women do begin experiencing the side effects of lowered estrogen production, such as hot flashes, in their early 30s. In fact, recent research has acknowledged that estrogen can drop many years before the actual menopause, or last menstrual flow.

Make an appointment to see an endocrinologist for an evaluation of your condition. If low estrogen is diagnosed by the tests, make sure you ask the physician about hormone-replacement therapy to protect your bone mass from osteoporosis.

Taking replacement estrogen and progestin in a monthly cycle similar to that found in pre-menopausal women has been shown effective in reducing hot flashes in nearly all women who tried these pills in tests. Taking hormone-replacement drugs is also an effective way to preserve the calcium built up in a woman's bones during her younger years.

Who's in charge here?

Management styles may begin in the sandbox

By Fred Rogers
with Barry Head

Have you ever complained about your boss or about anyone who was in a position to give you orders? Where do "management styles" come from... and our responses to different kinds of management?

It was a group of children at the beach that brought bosses to mind the other day. They were between 4 and 6 years old, and as they sorted out their play and their games, they seemed to be parodying the kind of office life so familiar to many of their parents.

Three of them were standing on a bench, bouncing up and down in rhythm as they chanted. "We're the captain of the ship! We're the captain of the ship!" Suddenly the oldest stopped and said disdainfully, "We can't all be captain of the ship. I'm the captain of the ship, and you're the sailors."

With that, their play fell apart. No one challenged this seizure of authority, but there was nothing to chant anymore, nothing to hold the group together. It seemed that the oldest had identified the commonplace management problem of "too many chiefs and not enough Indians" and determined that seniority was the answer. It was as though he had issued a memo outlining a new chain of command, and no one was clear about his or her new role in the organization.

In another group, the issue became the building of a sand castle. "That's gotta be a turret!" one boy said to a girl who was scooping out a corner of the pile of sand. "Why's it gotta be a turret?" the scooper asked. "'Cause I said so." The boy replied as if to say, "And that's an order!"

But it didn't work; the scooper went on sulkily scooping as though she hadn't heard a thing. So the self-appointed architect tried another approach: "Look," he said, "castles always got to have turrets."

Here, clearly, he was making an appeal to company policy. That didn't work either. "I don't want to make turrets," his playmate said.

The boy went on building for a while but quickly grew frustrated that one side of the castle wasn't taking shape at all. What's more, his opponent was joined by two of her friends and they'd decided that what they were making was a cake.

Now there was an undercurrent of male-female hostility in the group. The boy, outnumbered and on the defensive, tried once more. "Look," he said, brushing the sand off his hands, "are we gonna make a castle or not?" The answer was definitely "not." He didn't have any "team players" in his division.

So he issued Pink Slips. "Well, I'm not going to play with you anymore," he said disgustedly, getting up and giving the cake side of the castle an "accidental" kick.

"I'm gonna tell my mommy what you did!" one of the cake builders threatened. "Tattle-tattle!" the boy sneered, but he looked uncertain about his threat to report him to a superior. Sensing this uncertainty, one of the girls launched a final barb: "Anyway," she taunted,

"you're my sister's boyfriend!" and with that she stuck out her tongue. The boy glared and walked away.

She might just as well have been saying, "And don't forget I know about that little dinner item on your expense account!"

Children, of course, grow up with different models of authority in their families, and it's likely to be these (at least the ones that seem to work) that they first try out in their play. But other children have other models, and so the clashes and negotiations of "office politics" begin.

It seemed at first glance that those children at the beach were parodying our adult world, but a little thought made that notion unlikely: They couldn't, at that age, know our world well enough to parody it.

That left another possibility, one that was much likelier but hard for some of us to accept: Far from the children parodying our world, it is we who act out in our adult offices the management techniques and responses we've brought with us all the way from early childhood. ■

" Suddenly the oldest stopped and said disdainfully, 'We can't all be captain of the ship. I'm the captain of the ship, and you're the sailors.' "

How much salt do we need?

By Sonja Heinze

INCREASED SALT AND SUGAR CRAVINGS
I've noticed that recipes calling for sugar and salt used by our grandmothers required less than what we use today. It seems that our cravings for salt and sugar have increased over the years. Has anyone determined just what one teaspoon of salt equals in milligrams of sodium? If the public knew this answer, we might be able to cut back when cooking from scratch.
Mrs. A. Kasperski, Columbia, Mo.

so that meat is "puffed" and almost spongy in texture. At the table, brandy is poured over it and ignited, maybe for flavor or perhaps for the spectacle. How is the liver prepared so as to make it so very tender and palatable? Helen Naismith, Costa Mesa, Calif.

Ruth, my cooking consultant, advises that you use only young and very fresh liver. Remove the membranes, which are tough and disagreeable to chew. Steep the liver in brandy, or a combination of brandy and Madeira, for several hours. The liver may then be sauteed or oven-baked. To saute: Saute in very hot butter or oil to form a crust on the meat. Never crowd in a pan. Cook only until pink inside. Overcooking ruins it. If a coating is used, be certain to shake off all excess.

For oven baking: Wrap in thin slices of pork fat and bake in a hot oven for 18 to 20 minutes. To flame the liver: Cool the meat, put in flame-proof casserole or chafing dish, ignite, shake the dish and baste a few seconds until flame subsides.

The texture should be spongy, light and puffy.

ROASTING PIGS
I'm seeking information covering equipment and/or preparation of meat for outside spit roasting of a whole pig. This information is hard to come by. Blaine Anderson, Salt Lake City, Utah

How can I get information on how to roast a suckling pig? At what age are they slaughtered? Where does one buy them? I've never seen any for sale. For information on the procedures for roasting a whole pig or a suckling pig, write National Pork Producers Council, P.O. Box 10383, Des Moines, Iowa 50306. A paper entitled "Pig Roast" will give you all the information you need on roasting a mature, whole pig. Suckling pigs are slaughtered at the age of 6 to 8 weeks when they weigh 20 to 35 pounds. The Pork Council does not have a list of suppliers of suckling pigs and suggests you contact a local retail meat manager, a local meat locker or a local farm bureau organization for a source.

Old recipes show that salt and sugar cravings have increased since grandmother's day.

Ask the Pork Council for their paper entitled "How to Roast a Suckling Pig." The little pigs come with their heads attached. According to the directions, "Place a block of wood in the pig's mouth to brace it if an apple is to be placed in the mouth after roasting. Cover the ears with aluminum foil to keep them from browning too much. "When done, remove the pig from the pan, place a red apple in the mouth, cranberries or cherries in the eye sockets and serve on a bed of parsley or watercress."

READER'S SUGGESTION: BUGS IN PANTRY
Mrs. Lillian Darden, Annapolis, Md.: "I have a suggestion for readers with recurrent problems with bugs in their pantry invading the food. After cleaning storage areas thoroughly, before putting any new boxes or bags into the cabinets, put the product in the freezer for 24 hours.

"This means pancake flour, biscuit mix, piecrust mix, any kind of flour, dry dog food and cat food, etc. I have done this for a number of years and it works. If any insect eggs are in the glue of the package or seams, it kills them."

Radishes add spicy variety to cooking 'round the world

By Ted Larsen

"Hey, Jones," screamed the foreman, "I've got another vegetable for you to design, and this time the Big Man is demanding some impossible specifications. Doubt you'll be able to pull it off." So began a conversation, once upon a time, back when things were just getting started on Earth.

A tough assignment it was, too. The product must cut across every major culture and come in a rainbow of colors, shapes and tastes, from fiery hot to hints of sweetness. The final version must taste equally good, served raw, cooked, in salads, soups or as a dinner vegetable.

To make the job even tougher, the winner must be an early spring crop, capable of producing a harvest right through the fall. The foreman was shocked when Jones succeeded in developing the radish. The Big Man was pleased.

No pun intended, but the radish has (or is) a Latin root, taking its name from "radix" ("root" in Caesar's tongue). Just how radish popularity spread is not clear, but it certainly is an international favorite.

The French savor them thinly sliced at breakfast with well-buttered bread. Some German beer halls offer snacks of red and white radishes with their foamy steins. Danes decorate their famed open sandwiches with radishes.

In Italy they are often served with a piquant hot anchovy sauce. Oriental cookery suggests almost endless variations, from fresh, to cooked, to pickled. In Sri Lanka "Rabuk Kollie Mallung" is a popular soup made from shredded radish leaves. Did one of you just scream, "Enough already?"

Uses aside, I can't think of another vegetable that exhibits so much variety. Radishes come in plump round globes or in long lanky spears. You can find them in colors ranging from pink to white; black to purple. Some radishes have the fire of feisty peppers (from a mustard oil complex, just under the skin), others can be so bland that a hefty shake of salt is needed to awaken any hint of flavor.

The most important reason radishes turn peppery is temperature. If you like them fiery, make sure they mature in hot weather. Warm weather fosters a more mellow flavor. You see, Jones thought of everything. It's like that when you work for the Big Man.

If you don't think radishes are especially interesting in salads, try this combination. It's a great, simple mating of two favorites.

RADISH SALAD WITH STRAWBERRIES

1/2 cup fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup strawberries
1 bunch red radishes
1 head Boston or red leaf lettuce

Mix sugar, salt and lemon juice together in a bowl until solids dissolve. Trim strawberries and remove cores. Cut strawberries into quarters, lengthwise. Grate radishes very coarsely. Tear apart lettuce into individual leaves. Wash well and dry.

Make a bed of lettuce on each serving plate. Arrange strawberry sections on lettuce and top with the grated radish. Gently pour over the sugar and lemon dressing. Refrigerate before serving to chill well. Serves 4.

HINTS

Some people prefer a hint of curry or cumin added to the dressing.

Try using tangerines, peaches or even pears in this most unusual salad.

White radishes also work well, but you lose some of the sharp contrast between the sweet fruit and the spicy red radishes.

Radishes seem to have their strongest connection with appetizers, so here are two excellent and quick canapes. One is American, the other Italian.

RADISHES WITH SOUR CREAM AND ONION

4 medium radishes
1 small onion
2 tablespoons sour cream
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
salt
white pepper

Mince both radishes and onion until very fine. Combine with rest of the ingredients. Season with salt and white pepper to taste. To serve, spread on thin slices of party pumpernickel.

HINTS

If you use a food processor, this recipe takes scant moments. You may prefer yogurt to sour cream.

Try a variety of radishes such as white or black.

RADISH BAGNA CAUDA

1 cup radishes, washed

and trimmed
1/2 cup olive oil
1 1/2 teaspoons unsalted butter
1 teaspoon garlic, finely chopped
4 anchovy fillets
1/2 teaspoon salt (optional)

Heat oil and butter until butter begins to foam slightly. While butter is foaming, add garlic and cook briefly. This entire procedure is done over low heat because the garlic must not take on any color.

Add the anchovies and continue cooking at a low temperature until the fillets dissolve into a paste, about 10 minutes. If the anchovies need more help, use a blender at the end of the 10 minutes. Season with salt, if needed. Place sauce in a bowl and serve slightly warm. Use as a dipping sauce for trimmed radishes.

HINTS

Leave the radish tops attached and use a "handle" for dipping. Bagna cauda sauce is an excellent medium for dipping all kinds of raw vegetables such as broccoli, zucchini and summer squash or cauliflower.

With most anchovies, additional salt will not be needed.

Dancing again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Travolta is putting on his dancing shoes again, this time for a remake with Anthony Quinn of the 1964 movie "Zorba the Greek."

Travolta, who danced in "Saturday Night Fever," "Staying Alive," "Grease" and "Urban Cowboy," will play Niko. That's the role Alan Bates played in the original. He's the uptight American (English in the original) who travels to Crete after inheriting a mine and benefits from Zorba's zest for life.

Quinn said that Travolta is "just like the son Zorba lost — and he even says I remind him of his father." Quinn played Zorba in the movie and in the musical stage version.

The movie goes into production in February in Crete and Israel, with Robert Wise directing for Cannon Films.

Danbarry & Co.

By Sondra Astor Stave

Some very good ideas went into, and some very fine food comes out of Danbarry & Company. But unfortunately, some unpleasant surprises interfere with total enjoyment of one's meal at this restaurant located on Route 6 across from Windham Airport.

The building was designed rather like a greenhouse, with an enormous window on the west wall. The view of the highway does not justify its presence. But it was not until this visit, an hour before sunset, that we experienced its full heat-absorbing effect.

Coupled with an ineffective air conditioner (which the manager informed us did not work too well because it runs on well water), the room remained uncomfortably hot during our meal. This was particularly unfortunate as the decor of hanging plants, oak chairs and green tablecloths is natural and rather attractive.

Appetizers started our meal on a high note. Nine small slices of steak, cooked rare as ordered, were billed as succulent sirloin and this proved to be no exaggeration. An apple horseradish sauce served with the steak was also excellent, but the meat was so good it was almost unnecessary.

Tater skins, ordered with chili and cheese, were barely hollowed out. But with only three to a portion, it seemed a little skimpy at $4.25. However, what was there was good, especially the well-flavored chili, which is also available on its own.

The house salad was a mix of greens and tomato served in an attractively shaped glass bowl. When we learned that the French dressing was orange in color, we realized it was to be avoided. Fortunately, the house dressing, described as peach poppyseed, was not as sweet as it sounded. Fresh bread appeared on the menu but none ever arrived at our table.

The fish special of the day was grilled salmon served with a mornay sauce. The portion was comparatively small, and the fish was a bit drier than our ideal. The mornay sauce, while tasty, was somewhat lumpy. However, the lattice cut french fries were, as usual, excellent. They went a long way, along with a price of less than $10, to make the dish seem generally enjoyable.

Sole fillet consisted of two small fillets sautéed in lemon and white wine and covered with a dijon mustard sauce. Again, both portion size and price were modest, creating a mood of mild satisfaction if not euphoria.

Main dishes on previous visits have elicited greater enthu-

asm. Cranberry chicken Kiev, stuffed with cranberries and maple syrup, sounds like a kitchen challenge. It is difficult to achieve a balance between sweet flavors and savory, but the kitchen has triumphed. At less than $7, it is a bargain and a delight.

Also generally admirable are Danbarry's "Better Burgers." Served plain or with peppers, bacon or chili, they have been among the best in the area.

Eight interesting combination sandwiches, named for neighboring towns, make an appearance on the menu. At about $4.50, they provide good value.

Although our waitress extolled the virtues of the cheesecake, there was none available when it came time for dessert. The only sweet remaining in the kitchen was a single piece of cherry pie. My dining companion, who is not a cherry pie fancier, found it better than the usual.

During dinner, the restaurant manager was busy moving tables and chairs in preparation for a live music group that was to perform later in the evening. Perhaps attention to this was responsible for this meal being less enjoyable than those we have had there previously. Certainly, the manager's enthusiasm and energy had to be extended to the kitchen as well under more normal circumstances.

With appetizers between $2.25 and $4.25 and almost all main dishes under $10, Danbarry & Company offers some very good food in small portions at small prices. If you happen to be in the Windham Airport area, it is well worth a visit.

How to pick the number one newspaper in a multiple paper town.

In a town like Manchester, you might as well start with readership. In a most recent survey conducted by First Market Research of Boston, the Manchester Herald holds the overall local readership lead. According to the study, the Manchester Herald is the leader for local news, local happenings and local sports, with three quarters of the readers saying the coverage is the most extensive.

Next, the number one newspaper should provide readers with a depth of information needed to make valued and reasonable decisions regarding key local issues that may impact on their lives today, or in the future. Well that same study shows that the Manchester Herald is rated quite highly in terms of space devoted to selected issues in its Opinion pages. Nearly eight in ten readers find that the space devoted to viewpoints on local issues to be more than sufficient in explaining the issues.

The number one newspaper should also provide a service to its subscribers. The Manchester Herald is found to be a good community newspaper by over nine in ten readers, with over one third rating it as very good. The Manchester Herald is also a very effective advertising tool for reaching the Manchester Area public and it is preferred over most other forms of printed advertising.

Caring about its readers should also be a priority with the number one newspaper. The Manchester Herald feels it is their responsibility to listen to what residents in Manchester have to say. They want to hear about readers views on the news — what they think is important, what should go into the paper and what shouldn't. They're especially interested in hearing any comments you may have about the service you get from the Herald. They guarantee prompt delivery and courteous, efficient service on all billing matters. If you're not satisfied, they want to know about it.

If you're still trying to figure out which is the number one newspaper in Manchester, the facts are obvious. Your choice will be the same paper more and more readers in Manchester choose every day. The Manchester Herald — your voice in Manchester.
