Trade deficit heading for worst year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's foreign trade deficit, soaring toward its worst year ever, surged to a monthly record of $18 billion in July, the government reported today.

Even U.S. agriculture, long a bright spot in an otherwise dreary trade picture, suffered its third straight monthly deficit.

And imports of manufactured goods were up in almost every category measured, despite this year's decline in the value of the dollar, which had been expected to help manufacturing trade.

The deficit for the first seven months of the year now stands at $101.96 billion — a pace that would bring a 1986 total of $175 billion, far above last year's record $148.48 billion.

July's total deficit was the biggest since the $16.5 billion of January, today's report said.

Imports totaled $35.7 billion, up $3.5 billion from June, while exports were $17.7 billion, down $1.4 billion.

Trade in agricultural goods showed a deficit of $348 million following deficits of $348.7 million and $71.2 million in May and June respectively.

Officials said that, before May, there was no record of a farm deficit in the current series of figures that goes back 20 years.

Trade in manufactured goods showed a $16.1 billion deficit in July, far above the $12.7 billion the previous month.

Heavy contributors included imports of $4.3 billion in foreign cars, including $2.5 billion from Japan; $2.7 billion in clothing and footwear, and $2 billion in electrical machinery.

With oil prices still relatively low, trade in petroleum and related products showed a $2.8 billion deficit, a bit better than June's $3.1 billion.

The U.S. deficit reached $5.5 billion with Japan, up from $3.7 billion in June; $4.2 billion with Western Europe, up from $3.8 billion, and $2.3 billion with Canada, up from $1.9 billion.

The overall trade deficit had been $14.2 billion in both May and June.

Nation's school bill to reach $278 billion

WASHINGTON — The nation's school bill will reach $278.8 billion this year, with taxpayers spending an average of $4,263 for each child in public school and $10,462 for each public college student, the government says.

About 57.4 million students will answer the school bill this fall from kindergarten to graduate school, according to the annual back-to-school forecast released Thursday by the U.S. Department of Education's Center for Statistics. That is 89,000 more students than last year.

Elementary schools will gain 328,000 pupils, bringing their population to 21.6 million, while the high school head count will fall by 156,000 to 13.7 million. College enrollments are expected to drop by 83,000 to 12.16 million.

"Almost one out of every four Americans is in school," Secretary of Education William J. Bennett said in a statement. "They are the future, and the goal for them is excellence. We want it in the grasp of every student."

The record public school expenditure of $4,263 per pupil is up from $4,651 last year. Those sums include the costs of school construction, debts and other capital expenditures.

But the overall figure masks wide disparities among the states. The federal Center for Statistics gave no state-by-state breakdown, but the National Education Association has reported previously that current expenditures ranged last year from lows of $2,297 in Utah and $2,305 in Mississippi to highs of $5,616 in New York and $8,044 in Alaska.

Many states have poured more money into their public schools in recent years to raise standards and improve teacher salaries. Many experts say both sagged during the 1970s.

Bennett's agency predicted the average public teacher will get a 5.5 percent pay raise this fall to $26,650. Teacher salaries rose last year by 7 percent to $25,257, according to the NEA. Six years ago, the average salary was $17,644.

But teacher salaries comprise less than half the total school costs, and their share has shrunk over the years as many districts expanded central office staffs and hired specialists with no classroom duties. Bennett has questioned how effectively schools are spending that money.

The costs of public elementary and secondary schools have risen 18.3 percent, after inflation, since 1980-81, when per pupil spending averaged $2,762.

The total school bill is up by $15.4 billion, or 5.8 percent, from last year. By comparison, consumer prices rose just 1.6 percent in the 12 months ending July 31.

Most private schools operate on leaner budgets than public schools, in large part by paying teachers less and operating fewer programs and facilities. Private enrollment is expected to hold steady at 5.7 million.

The center said the elementary enrollment spurt reflects the upward turn in U.S. births that started in 1977. Elementary enrollments are expected to grow through the early 1990s, and high schools will feel the impact in the late 1990s.

Municipal golf courses differ

By John F. Kirch and George Lovno
 Herald Reporters

Should the town take over the operation of the Manchester Country Club or employ a private firm to run it?

Those questions were raised anew this week as the controversial issues surrounding the town's lease with the current management caught fire again and prompted officials to begin reviewing the club's legal obligations to Manchester residents.

Townpeople who called for the termination of the lease during Tuesday's Board of Directors meeting pointed to other municipally owned golf courses, saying they are more profitable to the towns they serve and more accessible to residents than the Manchester Country Club.

For their part, supporters of allowing the club to continue operating as it has since 1966 said the arrangement spares the town maintenance costs while allowing a large number of people to play.

An informal survey of 18-hole golf courses in the area Thursday found that town-owned country clubs either break even or bring thousands of dollars into municipal coffers.

One thing the survey showed was that Newington — which has a leasing arrangement similar to Manchester's — receives more than twice the money. Newington will pull in $82,500 this year from the Indian Hills Country Club, a private organization that leases the land from the town.

Yet whether Manchester can improve its financial picture and accessibility for golfers by changing the current arrangement with the Manchester Country Club is Playing fees in the area

Manchester Country Club's greens fees and membership dues are comparable to others around the state, according to an informal survey conducted Thursday.

Some clubs do not have special members, but instead issue season tickets.

Here is a list of the fees for 18 holes of play:

Manchester: Resident greens fee $10 on weekdays, $12 on weekends; non-resident $15. Single membership $480; family $720.

Indian Hills, Newington: Resident $14 on weekends; non-resident $16. Membership fee $1,272; residents get 25 percent discount.

Century Hills, Rocky Hill: Weekdays $10, weekends $12. Senior citizens pay $8 on weekdays. Season pass for men $495; women $473; senior citizens $297.

George Hunter Course, Meriden: Greens fee $8. Resident single membership $175; family $225. Non-resident single $250; family $300.

Simsbury Farms, Simsbury: Residents pay $8 weekdays, $10 on weekends. Non-residents pay $10 weekdays, $13 on weekends. Single season pass $300; senior season pass $110. Residents get some privileges.

East Hartford: Residents $9.50; non-residents $14; seniors $3.50 on weekdays. No membership.

Blackledge, Hebron: Greens fee $13. No membership.

between 45,000 and 50,000 players each year who are expected to pay $310,000 in greens fees. There are no members.

It also expects to make about $70,000 in cart rental fees and $19,000 from a lease with a privately owned restaurant on the grounds.

The town has budgeted $268,424 this fiscal year for operating costs, said Rick Maynard, East Hartford director of parks and recreation. Maynard said the course has made money every year since 1972, when the town first assumed ownership.

Low loan rate helps GM sales in area

By John Mitchell

Sales of General Motors automobiles in the Manchester area have heated up since the corporation introduced its lowest finance rate in history Thursday, dealers said this morning.

"We're deluged with telephone calls and customers," said Dick Rosillo, manager of Scranton Motors Inc. in Vernon. Rosillo said the dealership sold 17 cars in 3½ hours Thursday, compared to its normal six or seven automobiles a day.

"It's a bargain," said Tom Duff, vice president of Carter Chevrolet on Manchester's Main Street. He said there weren't enough salesmen at the dealership to meet the demand, which forced them to work two hours late Thursday night. "I have been in business for

"I have been in business for 33 years and have never seen anything like this low," he said.

"It's been excellent," said Donald Piretti, general manager of Cardinal Buick on Adams Street. "We had a super day yesterday."

The response is the result of General Motors Corp.'s announcement of a 2.9 percent annual financing rate on new 1986 cars and trucks. The rate is good on all loans of up to 36 months, with a 4.8 percent financing rate on those of up to 48 months. Previously, dealers said, the rates have been running from 5.9 percent on up.

The new rates were announced in order to move a stockpile of unsold 1986 models, dealers said.

"There's a lot of stock out there in the field," said Duff, who added that the low rates would continue until Oct. 8, when the 1987 cars arrive at dealers' lots. GM has delayed introducing the 1987 models so dealers can clear 1986 models.

Piretti said he thought demand would increase even more after Labor Day, when potential buyers return from trips. Despite a lack of holiday lookers, he said, "People have been calling like crazy to find out about the program."

A state police car blocks traffic from passing on Interstate 95 in Westbrook Wednesday afternoon as officials check out leaking propane containers that were being transported by truck. The leaking containers and trailer were held at the state police barracks in Westbrook.

Truck stopped on I-95 ready to explode, fire official says

WESTBROOK (AP) — A tractor-trailer filled with cylinders leaking propane gas was more dangerous than first thought and could easily have exploded, an official with the state fire marshal's office said Thursday.

The two companies that own the truck and the cylinders, which were supposed to be empty, were cited Wednesday for six violations of state regulations on transporting hazardous materials. An inspection of 438 cylinders in the trailer found that five were at least half-filled with propane, and that 36 others had propane residue and were leaking, said Trooper Henry Renfrew, a specialist in hazardous materials with the state fire marshal's office.

Meanwhile Thursday, two women were critically injured when a cargo of hazardous materials slid off a tractor-trailer. The tractor-trailer was on Interstate 95 near Exit 34 in Newtown, police said. The support cable holding the metal container of hazardous materials onto the tractor-trailer snapped, sending the container off the westbound truck, police said. The car's driver, Julia Grossner, 44, of Newtown and her mother, Rose Rogg of Ansonia, were taken to Danbury Hospital, where they were listed in critical condition Thursday night.

The box 24 feet long, contained a mixed load of low-grade insecticides and crushed chemical containers from Unirox Corp. of Naugatuck. It struck the woman's vehicle head-on near Old Mill Road, police Officer Richard Stok said.

At the time of the accident, the low-level hazardous materials were being transported to an Ohio waste disposal site.

The truck, owned by Certified Cylinder Inc. of Crossville, Tenn., was transporting the cylinders to the Tennessee company to be refilled and then recertified as free of leaks.

The state issued Petrolane summons for three violations of the state's hazardous materials transportation regulations and one violation of the state fire protection standard regarding the storage and handling of propane cylinders, Renfrew said.

The carrier, Certified Cylinder, was charged with two violations for improper shipping papers and failing to display placards on the truck stating the contents.

GOP hopes for repeat of history in primary

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Connecticut Republicans are hoping history will repeat itself as they head into the final days before a three-way September gubernatorial primary.

The last time there was a GOP primary for the top spot on the ticket, in 1970, Republican Thomas J. Meskill won the governor's office. The GOP hasn't won it since.

"Whoever comes out of this thing is going to be the strongest candidate that we could put forward," said state GOP Chairman Thomas J. D'Amore Jr., who's remaining neutral.

In the Sept. 9 contest are Deputy House Majority Leader Julie D. Belaga and a pair of former state senators, Richard C. Bozzuto and Gerald Labriola.

The winner will face Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill in November. O'Neill, who is seeking his second full term, fended off a bitter intra-party challenge from former Rep. Toby Moffett, who was just short of the convention support necessary to qualify for a primary against the governor.

RECENT POLLS HAVE shown O'Neill the favorite. None of the three Republicans scored higher than 35 percent in a theoretical matchup against the incumbent in a July poll by the University of Connecticut.

The work to unload and inspect the cylinders took until 5 a.m. Thursday.

The cylinders were being shipped by Petrolane Northeast Gas Service of Hyannis, Mass. The company must arrange for the cylinders to be emptied before they can leave the state, Renfrew said.

violations by allies of O'Neill had been honest mistakes.

"It really does stretch one's imagination to the point of snapping," D'Amore said. "I don't know how anybody could possibly imagine that this was done without knowledge."

In its ruling the commission said Democrats For Victory broke campaign laws in accepting excessive contributions from individuals and political action committees.

"I think it's ludicrous that they expect us and the general public to believe for one minute that they didn't understand what was going on. It's science fiction," D'Amore said.

Although Bozzuto won the party endorsement at the July nominating convention, he was unable to keep Labriola and Belaga off the ballot. None of the three could now be classified as the clear front-runner.

Belaga is the first woman ever to make a serious bid for the Connecticut gubernatorial nomination. Although she has downplayed it, she acknowledges that with the memory of the late Democratic Gov. Ella T. Grasso still very much alive in Connecticut, being a woman can't hurt.

The feisty Bozzuto is fond of talking about being the son of immigrants and appeals strongly to Connecticut's large Italian-American population.

"We won the convention, we'll win the primary," Bozzuto flatly predicts.

LABRIOLA, 54, also made a bid for the gubernatorial nomination four years ago. When it became clear that he couldn't win it, he teamed up with Rome and became his candidate for lieutenant governor. Rome and Labriola lost later that year to O'Neill.

The clear conservative in the race, Labriola has shown broad support among Connecticut Republicans opposed to abortion, although abortion itself has not been a major campaign issue.

A basketball star while at Yale, Labriola is a pediatrician and former chief of staff at Waterbury Hospital, one of the state's largest.

His record has been moderate. He espouses the traditional Republican values of maintaining a good business climate and holding the line on taxes.

Erkelens said Thursday that his staff inspectors will carry guns so that "in the event that they are cornered... they have some means of protecting themselves."

Erkelens said at a state Capitol news conference that his agents "are not empowered to enforce the laws. (The guns are for) personal protection only, purely survival."

"They're all trained in weapons," he said. "They're not going to go around spraying the public."

Erkelens said the guns would not be carried in the Capitol as a state law bars guns in the Capitol except those carried by Capitol security officials and the state police.

Police gear up for holiday weekend

Cheap gasoline abounds in Connecticut for the summer season's holiday finale, and plenty of state police troopers are out to watch for speeders as the three-day Labor Day weekend officially begins at 6 p.m. today.

State police said Thursday they will increase their patrols on all the state's major highways as they have for the past several holidays. Patrols already have been increased in some areas under Gov. William O'Neill's order to crack down on speeders and law-breaking truckers.

Over the 1985 Labor Day weekend, state police made 1,946 motor vehicle arrests, including 1,323 for speeding.

The Automobile Club of Hartford said the state's motorists can expect to find plenty of gasoline, and at prices much lower than last year.

For instance, the average price for a gallon of unleaded gas this year is 98 cents, compared to $1.31 a gallon in 1985 and $1.29 a gallon in 1984. The average price for premium unleaded is $1.10 a gallon, compared to $1.45 a gallon last year and $1.31 a gallon in 1984, the auto club reported.

Connecticut In Brief

Seven charged in alleged drug sale

HAMDEN — Seven people were arrested and nearly $90,000 worth of drugs and cash seized when narcotics agents broke up a parking lot drug deal and raided homes in Hamden and East Haven, authorities said.

Five of those arrested were members of an all-women cocaine ring. Detective Sgt. Jack Kennedy said Thursday in announcing the raids.

Detectives started the sweep at 9 p.m. Wednesday with the arrest of four women and a man in a Hamden parking lot, interrupting a transaction involving 4 ounces of cocaine worth $10,000, Kennedy said.

State police identified those arrested as alleged ring members Kathleen Viviani, 31, and Denise A. Zelenki, 21, both of Hamden; Susan J. Mulqueen, 24, of North Haven and Crystal Smith, 34, of Cheshire.

Kennedy said police then raided the Viviani's home where they seized $50,000 worth of cocaine, $25,000 worth of hashish and $3,000 in cash. Also seized were records of cocaine sales, according to Kennedy.

During the search a fifth woman, identified as Donna Williams, 27, of Woodbury, was arrested when she arrived at the home to deliver one-eighth ounce of cocaine, state police said.

Tirozzi plans fight for pay standards

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — State Education Commissioner Gerald N. Tirozzi said Thursday he was ready to fight again for mandatory minimum starting teacher salaries if a new law making them voluntary doesn't work.

"I still support the concept of the mandate," Tirozzi said at his annual back-to-school news conference.

"However, I think the (voluntary) bill can work for two reasons. One: There are enough carrots and sticks to ensure that most communities in the state are going to participate."

"Two: If we determine that a good percentage of the towns are not participating, especially the poorer towns, I believe we'll have all the ammunition in the world to go back to the General Assembly and argue for a mandate," he said.

The fight over making salary levels voluntary or mandatory was the key sticking point between the Republican-controlled legislature and Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill. The Republicans prevailed and the measure makes the salaries voluntary.

Under the $8.1 million bill, towns would be given financial incentives to boost the starting teacher salary to $20,000 after a three-year phase-in period and provide raises for teachers already on the job.

If a school district's minimum salary is less than $16,000, the town would receive a state grant equal to 200 percent of the amount necessary to bring the minimum up to $20,000 within two years. If the current minimum is between $16,000 and $18,000, a town would receive 150 percent of the amount needed to boost it to $20,000 within two years. The bill also includes incentive grants to improve teacher development programs and hire more staff in districts with high teacher-student ratios.

Because of the legislation, Tirozzi said Connecticut is "on the threshold of a new era in public education."

On another issue, Deputy Education Commissioner Lorraine M. Aronson told reporters she could not estimate how many children with AIDS would be entering classes this fall in Connecticut.

But she said "the way to stop the spread of AIDS is not to bar students from classrooms, it is rather to teach students the dangers of drug abuse, the dangers of sexually transmitted diseases, and that's going to be our focus for the coming year."

State's school spending among highest

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut's per-pupil expenditure will remain in the top four or five in the country for the coming school year, according to the Connecticut Public Expenditure Council.

The U.S. Department of Education's Center for Statistics reported Thursday that it will cost an average of $4,263 to educate each of the nation's nearly 40 million public school students this year.

This record figure is up by $212 or 5.2 percent from last year, education officials said.

Michael Levin of CPEC said in 1985-86, Connecticut's average per-pupil spending was $3,578 — but that did not include transportation and debt service, capital outlay and other costs used in compiling the national figure.

Connecticut always ranks high in per-pupil spending, Levin said. "Last year they were fifth. The ranking will be quite high."

Nationwide, teacher salaries have spurred ahead after lagging behind inflation in the 1970s, officials said. Six years ago, the average salary was $17,644, federal officials said. The National Education Association says that last year the average teacher's salary rose 7 percent to $25,257.

The U.S. Education Department predicted the average teacher will get a 5.5 percent pay raise this year to $26,650. In Connecticut, education officials say the average teacher salary this year will be $27,035.

The Public Expenditure Council reports that despite vast differences in size and wealth — Westport schools paid $5,316 per pupil last year and New Fairfield paid $2,886 — Connecticut's school districts are "surprisingly similar" in emphasizing the basics.

A study of the 165 state school districts found that more than 53 percent of public school spending went for basic instruction, which includes teacher salaries. The next largest category is plant operation and maintenance, 14 percent, and special instruction, 11 percent.

The study found that the poorest districts, based on property and personal income, are not the lowest spending districts. The poorest districts are relatively close in per-pupil spending to the richest, because poor districts can get extra money for remedial programs.

CPEC also found that larger systems spend more of their money on bilingual programs and programs for the culturally disadvantaged.

Hartford, New Haven and Bridgeport spend between 8.2 percent and 10.2 percent of their school budgets on those programs, compared to the 0.3 percent to 1.4 percent budgeted by Greenwich, Fairfield and West Hartford.

CPEC also found that larger

GOP and Moffett question fine

HARTFORD (AP) — Former Congressman Toby Moffett said Thursday the state Elections Enforcement Commission was "trying to help Bill O'Neill" by dragging its feet on his complaint about campaign violations.

The commission on Wednesday fined a political ally of Gov. William O'Neill $900 and ordered Democrats For Victory to forfeit $12,200 in improper campaign donations.

But the commission decided that Democrats For Victory was not a front for the O'Neill campaign, rather a fund-raising outfit for Democratic election races in general.

O'Neill, who eliminated Moffett from the gubernatorial sweepstakes last month has his own election committee. State law says each candidate may have only one such committee.

"They didn't need to take days, weeks or months. They could have ruled on this in four minutes," Moffett said. "Obviously they (the elections commission) are trying to help Bill O'Neill."

He also disagreed with the commission's finding that the Democrats For Victory was not a front for O'Neill.

Meanwhile Thursday, state Republican Chairman Thomas J. D'Amore Jr. said it was "mind-boggling" that the commission concluded that campaign law violations by allies of O'Neill had been honest mistakes.

"It really does stretch one's imagination to the point of snapping," D'Amore said. "I don't know how anybody could possibly imagine that this was done without knowledge."

In its ruling the commission said Democrats For Victory broke campaign laws in accepting excessive contributions from individuals and political action committees.

"I think it's ludicrous that they expect us and the general public to believe for one minute that they didn't understand what was going on. It's science fiction," D'Amore said.

OPINION

Facilities must be kept open to all

Steven R. Werbner, Manchester's assistant town manager, has been given a task that's far from enviable.

Using the suggestions of an ad-hoc panel, his knowledge of Manchester's insurance strategy and a bit of common sense, Werbner has to figure out how the town can protect itself from major damage claims while still permitting local groups to use its facilities.

Given the widely touted "insurance crisis," that won't be easy.

In recent years, insurance companies have used the excuse of escalated awards in personal injury cases to sharply raise rates and to deny coverage altogether in many instances. They've gotten lots of help in the courts, where liability law has been almost completely reinterpreted by juries and judges.

Nonetheless, the problem in Manchester must be addressed with the average citizen in mind.

While eliminating municipal risk will be impossible, the town's facilities must remain available to responsible people who want to use them — even if they can't come up with the $500,000 in coverage that is currently required. That means any worthwhile change will not come for free, but it should not limit discussion of the options.

At the close of a meeting of the ad-hoc panel Wednesday afternoon, a number were on the table. Most were designed to keep costs down for smaller groups, and the best among them may have been the idea of requiring payments into a kind of self-insurance fund. But none would alleviate the problem without either costing the town more or exposing it to greater risk.

Werbner, who must come up with an answer to the dilemma, should have a good deal of latitude as he seeks to balance the two needs — including the freedom to suggest a solution that would cost the town more. Manchester, which has long taken a creative approach to insurance problems, must be prepared to do so again in order to keep facilities open equally to groups that can afford its current requirement and those that can't.

In the long run, it is certain that legislators will have to address the insurance problem again before the situation stabilizes. But until that happens, innovation and the willingness to spend a few dollars more will have to fill the gap, making commonly owned facilities available to the father-son team as well as the organized league.

Protectionism gave sanctions a boost

The senators, sitting under their dome in Washington, seldom get a chance to combine high idealism and mundane money-grubbery in one bill, but they did on their South African sanctions vote. It was this satisfactory meld of pelf and principle which generated an 84-to-14, veto-proof majority for the measure.

Beside throwing America into the onward and upward march of toiling humanity toward perfect freedom, the South African sanctions bill is exactly the kind of protectionist legislation senators campaigning for re-election can't wait to take home and wave in front of the folks that vote. This bill would bar the importation of steel, coal, textiles and agriculture products, including but not limited to tobacco, beets, rice, honey and corn. Is it any wonder that all but a corporal's guard of free traders and/or Negrophobes like Strom Thurmond and Steve Symmes voted for the thing?

UNBELIEVABLY, at the same time and in the same bill these crazy whine men voted an amendment to the bill empowering the president to sell subsidized, yes, that's right, subsidized American grain to the very same South Africans who will henceforth not be allowed to export their textiles or their sugar to the U.S. Of course, the sums involved in all this are small, but here, in the miniature, we have the outlines of what some people think should be America's ideal foreign trade policy: keep out all foreign goods and commodities while selling our subsidized surpluses to people who won't buy them.

Unhappily for us, we can only get away with this gag when we can get away with it on. While the news of the Senate's action was received, with at least tepid satisfaction almost everywhere, the White House announcement that the United States would be selling a relatively

Praying for justice to die

By Anthony T. Podesta

Six years ago, radical right preachers splashed into the political arena, bringing with them a bizarre new style of debate. They acted as if they were all co-chairmen of the Lord's political action committee and that anyone who disagreed with them was siding with Satan over God.

Today, even this intolerant style of debate does not go far enough for some politicians and political preachers. Springing up across the nation are even more extremists who, of all things, pray for your death if you disagree with their political views. Instead of charging you're siding with Satan, they want you to join him — now.

In Georgia, Joe Morecraft, the pastor of the Chaldean Presbyterian Church in Dunwoody, and a John Birch Society member, is the Republican Party's nominee to challenge Democratic Rep. Buddy Darden in Georgia's seventh congressional district. Morecraft recently asked that God remove Supreme Court justices "in any way He sees fit" to get constitutional interpretations more in line with the pastor's thinking. "I've prayed God would remove the Supreme Court justices ... who have consistently voted for the legalization of abortion ... and I'll do it in the future, but I'll leave it to God to determine how He wants to do it," Morecraft said.

Unfortunately, Morecraft is not alone. For instance, the Rev. W.N. Ottwell of Fort Worth, Tex., also doesn't like the courts. A state court denied his Community Baptist Church boys' home a license for educational instruction because he refused to meet at least minimum standards.

Ottwell responded by conducting a mock trial on the steps of a local courthouse, finding Texas Attorney General Jim Maddox guilty of "the murder of religious freedom in Texas."

The attorney general's "sentence" was delivered by another extremist, the Rev. Greg Dixon, an Indianapolis pastor and a former national secretary for the Moral Majority. He placed Maddox at the top of his rather unique prayer "hit list," and asked God to remove Maddox by "whatever method, whether it be illness or death."

In Los Angeles, Robert Hymer, pastor of the Fundamental Baptist Tabernacle, has launched his own death-prayer campaign against the "Hitler-like" Supreme Court. He ordered a banner reading "Pray for Death: Baby-Killer Brennan" be flown over Loyola Marymount University, where Justice William Brennan was delivering the commencement address. Later, he led his congregation in prayer under another banner, "Pray for the Death of Pro-Death Court."

Even national figures are getting into the act. PAT ROBERTSON, the television evangelist and prospective presidential candidate, has raised the stakes in this own war on the courts. He recently told anti-abortion activists they could look to the "wonderful process of the mortality tables" to reverse the Supreme Court's 1973 decision legalizing abortion. He also lashed the court's justices, calling them "despots" who have turned the Constitution into "a sentence of death."

Robertson's fellow televangelist, Jimmy Swaggart, also has joined the ranks of those praying for the departure of Supreme Court justices. Swaggart, who is television's top-rated preacher, blessed the justices and declared: "I pray that God will remove those men and give us men with righteousness that will abide by the laws of God, and get down on their knees, and ask God's counsel and guidance when they make the laws of this nation."

Another prominent televangelist, Jerry Falwell, two years ago came and strike down all Supreme Court decisions in one fell swoop. "Today, the new breed of extremists want Jesus to strike down the Supreme Court's justices as well. Saving your opponent sides with Satan shows religious and political intolerance. Praying for someone else's death takes intolerance to a whole new — and ugly — extreme. But an even greater danger resulting from these death-prayer campaigns is that someone may take this extremism one step further and kill a public official."

Some questions will never be fully resolved in this world, but I, for one, doubt that God answers death prayers. I just hope — and pray — no one else will. Anthony T. Podesta is president of People For the American Way, a quarter-million-member constitutional liberties organization.

relationship with Japan, South Korea and the other growing industrial powers of the Asian-Pacific basin. Trade questions are no more purely economic than diplomatic and military questions are purely political. The United States occupies the position of dominance which it does in the Free World for a number of reasons, one of which is that it pays for the privilege by allowing open access to our economy to our friends and allies. Those friends will be considerably less friendly should the day ever return when those markets are blocked to them as they were prior to World War II.

UNLESS AMERICAN BUSINESS can learn how to outcompete the rest of the world on both price and quality — an impossibility — it follows that we aren't going to see much of a change in the unfavorable balance of trade through the operation of an open international free market. It was just such a market which brought on the huge imbalances.

Significant protectionist measures are possible to negotiate. We could do it, but, as Ronald Reagan and his followers use the expression, we would no longer be the Numero Uno. For trade protection we would have to swap away a considerable amount of our power to make unilateral moves. There would be no more deciding to bomb Libya with or without the allies' approval. No more Mr. Tough Guy, and that, as far as now, is too large a price for policy makers in the importation of South African macadamia nuts, if, of course, they grow them there.

Cambodian helped U.S. for nothing

WASHINGTON — As American diplomats prepared to helicopter out of Phnom Penh in April 1975, barely ahead of invading guerrillas, a Cambodian contractor furiously erected barricades to protect the embassy compound against communist bullets.

Only after the Americans were safely gone did he gather up his family and begin a brutal trek that would take him to safety in Saigon.

Eleven years later, the Cambodian is trying to collect the modest sum that the U.S. government owes him for his labors. With our help, he is close to having his case documented. But there's a catch: Even if his claim is honored, he would have to be paid in a currency that no longer exists.

The Cambodian's name is Chan Sambo. Now 50, he lives with his wife and seven children in West Germany. He is looking for work, existing on his wife's salary and government assistance, and he is in sore need of the money — $3,000 to $4,000 — that he says the U.S. government owes him.

Chan began to get entangled in American red tape when Khmer Rouge guerrillas laid siege to Phnom Penh and U.S. diplomatic personnel scrambled to fortify the embassy compound with boxes and bags filled with sand. Among those hired to help was Chan Sambo.

THE COMMUNISTS OVERRAN the city, Chan says, before he got paid. Fearful that he would be killed if he were known that he had worked for the Americans, he destroyed all his records. He then packed up his family and headed east on foot. Sixty arduous days later, they arrived in Saigon.

When Chan first requested payment from the U.S. government, the State Department passed the buck to the comptroller general who, in addition to being the head of the General Accounting Office, arbitrates financial claims. He refused Chan's appeal on the grounds that the Cambodian could not produce evidence.

Chan then reconstructed the documents from memory, but the comptroller general was unimpressed. He ruled in 1980 that the records were not "clear and satisfactory evidence of the validity of his claims."

But Chan persisted. Last year, he forwarded the names of several people he had worked with in the American Embassy. Two of them were located by an attorney in the comptroller general's office, but they could not verify Chan's claim. Again the Cambodian was turned down.

But an even greater danger resulting from these death-prayer campaigns is that someone may take this extremism one step further and kill a public official.

Others who remember Chan's association with the embassy — but who could not recall whether he was contracted to fill sandbags — included Ambassador Thomas Enders, recently retired from the Foreign Service; Gen. John Cleland, now living in retirement in Florida; and a general's wife who said Chan may have done carpentry work in her home.

GIVEN THE NEW information we have dug up, Chan will probably ask the comptroller general to reopen the case. But even if the Cambodian wins, he'll probably lose. The comptroller general has already stated that Chan would have to be paid in Cambodian riels, a currency that was abolished when the Khmer Rouge assumed power. The Khmer riel is not recognized by the United States.

Stated the comptroller general: "Since the Cambodian riel has no present value, even if Chan proved the existence of a contract, any judgment would have no monetary value."

Lockheed accused of overcharges

WASHINGTON — Pentagon auditors, in the largest case of its kind, are accusing the Lockheed Corp. of inflating a $7.8 billion Air Force contract for the new C-5B cargo plane by as much as $500 million.

The allegation was disclosed Thursday by the Air Force, which vowed to immediately "initiate action... to obtain an appropriate price adjustment."

If negotiations with the company do not produce agreement, the Air Force said it had the authority to unilaterally reduce its contractual payments and force Lockheed to take the matter to an appeals board or claims court.

The company, meantime, denied any misconduct and said it would contest the matter.

David Crowther, Lockheed's vice president for corporate communications, confirmed Air Force statements that the company had not agreed to any price adjustments on the C-5 contract.

Experts say death figures inflated

VIENNA, Austria — Long-range predictions that the Chernobyl disaster may cause 20,000 or more cancer deaths in the Soviet Union were based on worst-case scenarios and were much too high, some nuclear experts said.

A Soviet nuclear scientist, meanwhile, said today that the comments of experts from 50 nations at a weeklong conference reviewing the April 26 accident were "most useful."

"The further development of atomic energy requires many more efforts at raising safety standards and achieving a better international exchange of information," said Valery A. Legasov, a deputy chairman of the Soviet Union's main atomic energy institute.

Earlier this week, some Western officials attending the conference under the auspices of the International Atomic Energy Agency said up to 25,000 people might die over the next 70 years in the western Soviet Union because of the nuclear power plant accident.

Federal workers may get raise

LOS ANGELES — More than 1 million federal workers, who have not received a pay raise since 1985, will see a 2 percent increase in their paychecks if Congress goes along with President Reagan's recommendation.

Overruled on Capitol Hill, the pay hike for 1.4 million federal workers will take effect Jan. 1.

Both the House and Senate, however, have approved resolutions calling for a 3 percent hike.

Reagan, who is vacationing here, also signed legislation Thursday banning the production or importation of so-called "cop-killer bullets."

In a statement released by the White House, Reagan said such ammunition has posed "an unreasonable threat to law enforcement officers who use soft body armor." The bullets can penetrate bullet-resistant vests worn by police officers.

"This bill... recognizes that certain forms of ammunition have no legitimate sporting, recreational, or self-defense use and thus should be prohibited," the president said.

South Africa to investigate deaths

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government promised to hold a public investigation into the deaths of 20 blacks shot by police in Soweto, but said the police had acted in self-defense after being ambushed.

Deputy Information Minister Louis Nel did not set a date for the inquiry, but told a news conference Thursday. "It will not be delayed."

Soweto, a sprawling black township near Johannesburg, was reported quiet Thursday after the bloody riots Tuesday night and Wednesday, but students at the University of the Witwatersrand clashed with police after holding a meeting to protest the shooting deaths.

Nel claimed the Soweto riots were part of an organized campaign to sabotage the 11-week-old national state of emergency and that police acted to defend themselves.

Bomber modifications delayed

WASHINGTON — Modification work on a B-52 bomber that would put the United States above the limits of the SALT II arms accord has been delayed probably until late December, Pentagon sources say.

The sources, who spoke Thursday night on condition of anonymity, said the modification work on the plane — the 131st B-52 to be so modified — has been moving more slowly than expected because of technical problems.

Nevertheless, the delay raises the possibility that President Reagan will fail to make good on his decision to abandon SALT II before a hoped-for summit meeting this year with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reagan announced in May he was preparing to abandon the 1979 SALT II accord because of Soviet violations of the pact.

Convicted spy receives 365 years

By Bob Egelko
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Convicted spy Jerry Whitworth is a man who "believes in nothing," said the federal judge who sentenced Whitworth to 365 years in prison, the harshest espionage sentence since the 1953 execution of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg.

Whitworth, 47, would not be eligible for parole for 60 years, 50 years after John Walker, the spy master who worked out a plea bargain agreement and testified against Whitworth.

In imposing the sentence Thursday, U.S. District Judge John Vukasin called Whitworth "one of the most spectacular spies of the century" and a man who "believes in nothing."

The gaunt, bearded defendant, who had been silent throughout his 11-week trial, spoke only once during his sentencing, saying in a choked voice: "I just want to say I'm very, very sorry."

Vukasin, who sentenced Whitworth to 365 years instead of the seven life terms he could have received, also specified that Whitworth would be ineligible for parole for 60 years, and fined him $10,000. A sentence involving any number of life terms would have made him eligible for parole in 10 years.

WHITWORTH WAS CONVICTED July 24 of selling Navy code secrets to John Walker's Soviet-controlled spy ring for nearly a decade. Walker was the star witness against Whitworth, who did not testify.

Walker, confessed leader of the spy ring for 17 years, faced a lesser sentence than Whitworth's. Walker's plea-bargain called for two life terms, with parole possible in 10 years.

"Justice is now going to be turned on her head," said defense lawyer Tony Tamburello.

Military and intelligence officials testified at the trial that the spy ring had revealed the Navy's most precious secrets.

Noting that testimony Vukasin said Whitworth "furnished (the Soviets) with the very blueprint of our most coveted and guarded communications."

"We would ask for the death penalty here if it were available," Assistant U.S. Attorney William Farmer told Vukasin. The judge had ruled earlier that a 1972 Supreme Court decision had the effect of overturning the federal death penalty for espionage.

Defense lawyers quoted Whitworth as saying afterward, "I'm going to be stoic about this" and as being hopeful the sentence would be reduced on appeal.

Urging the longer sentence for Whitworth, prosecutors maintained he was actually the central figure in the spy ring, since he had access to secret material for a longer period than did Walker.

VUKASIN SAID Walker's eventual sentence was "not for this court to judge," but added that it would be "a travesty of justice if Mr. Walker spent less time (in prison) than Mr. Whitworth."

Walker's plea-bargain may be re-evaluated, however, before he and his son Michael, who also pleaded guilty, are sentenced in Baltimore on Oct. 3. Walker's brother Arthur was convicted of spying by a federal judge in August and sentenced to life in prison.

Whitworth, who retired from the Navy in 1983 after 18 years as a radioman with a top security clearance, was convicted of seven counts of espionage and five counts of evading taxes on the $332,000 Walker paid him.

The jury found that Whitworth sold to Walker, his longtime friend, the secrets of Navy decoding equipment, code keys and communications systems that he photographed with a Soviet-supplied miniature camera.

Your Birthday
Aug. 30, 1986
Someone close who always seems to bring fortuitous circumstances into your life will be even luckier for you in the year ahead.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today, try to avoid associating with a clique that contains an abrasive individual who always tries to run the show. Pat around with understanding types. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Today, resign yourself to see through to completion what you begin. Gratifying end results can be achieved if you're tenacious enough.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone you encounter socially today, might arouse your ire and you'll feel tempted to tell him off. However, your better judgment will prevail, and peace will reign.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sometimes you have to spend a little money in order to make money. Don't be afraid to prime the pump today if your instincts direct you to do so.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Guard against tendencies today to take a negative view on the outcome of events. You are luckier than you realize, so let nature run its course.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The tasks that you have to contend with today could be vexing. Keep your mind focused on your rewards, and the workload won't seem so heavy.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A person with whom you never feel completely at ease might be at a special gathering you attend today. However, this time his presence will be enjoyable.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today, you have plenty of friends, so today select only amicable companions and ignore acquaintances who tend to make waves.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today, if you make a major purchase and later discover that you can buy it more cheaply elsewhere, don't hesitate to go back and demand an adjustment.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) You and your mate might not be in agreement on minor issues today, but in matters that are truly important, you'll both be on the same wavelength.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Because of another's problems, you too may suffer some inconvenience today. However, you're not apt to mind it too much, because this person would do the same for you.

There is nothing wrong with playing a suit combination against percent-ages if you need the cards to be that way to make your contract. In today's West turned up with the diamond king, hand from the Epton World Pairs, declarer made four spades.
South was propelled into four spades by competitive bidding. West's jump centage? It was against A-K-x in to three hearts seems strange, but East's hand, but loses when East holds East-West's defensive bidding meth- more times than it wins. But a bridge of overalls. East, for his part, bid deal isn't one suit; it's all 52 cards.
Licorice
According to one of civilization's earliest medical records, licorice was recommended as a tonic for aging men concerned about their virility. Religious manuscripts indicate that the Brahman caste of India applied licorice as a skin-nourishing agent.

Manchester In Brief

Gerber may expand to town site

Gerber Scientific Inc. of South Windsor may seek to expand into another plant in Manchester, planning officials said today. Gerber, a manufacturer of high-technology products, has been looking at a 40-acre site off Spencer Street near the East Hartford town line for a couple of months. Planning Director Mark Pellegrini said. However, the company has not filed a zoning application. Pellegrini said, adding that he does not know of any time table for developing the parcel.

Stanley Leven, Gerber's senior vice president and general counsel, declined to comment on any plans. But there have been reports that the company, which operates a division on Batson Drive, may be interested in building a light industrial plant at the site.

The site is zoned Rural Residence, Pellegrini said. Depending on Gerber's plans, the parcel would have to be changed to either a business or industrial classification, he said.

Any zone change request would require a public hearing before the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Students need physical exams

Thirty-two Manchester students in grades 6 through 10 won't be admitted to classes next week unless they take physical examinations required by the state, the school superintendent said.

The amount of students "is a little bit higher than we expect" for this time of year. Superintendent James P. Kennedy said Monday. He said proof of examination or verification that the exam is scheduled will be needed for the students to attend classes.

"It'll save students problems the first day of school," Kennedy said.

The exams, required by state law, include a hemoglobin test, updating of immunizations, and a tuberculin test for children entering school.

Richard Cormier, director of special education, said Tuesday that the physician must fill out a standard form indicating that the student has been checked. Forms are available in doctor's offices, he said. Cormier said completed forms should be returned to the school that students plan to attend or the central office on North School Street.

Town man charged in family assault

A Manchester man was arrested Thursday morning on charges he hit members of his family, police said this morning.

Raul Rivera Colon, 44, of 141 W. Center St., was charged with two counts of third-degree assault and one count of trespassing in connection with the incident, which occurred at 12:55 a.m., a police report said.

Police said they responded to a domestic disturbance call and were met by Colon in front of his house. He told officers he had a problem with his daughter and admitted to striking her, police said.

Colon told police his daughter had locked him out of his house. Police said Colon's daughter told them later at her home that her stepmother had asked her to come over.

A police report said Colon's wife was found huddled in neighbor's shrubbery with her 10-year-old daughter. She told police she fled from the scene after trying to intervene in the incident.

The daughter and the stepmother refused to give sworn statements, the police report said.

Colon was released on a $1,000 bond and faces a Sept. 3 appearance in Manchester Superior Court.

Obituaries

William J. Neubauer

William J. Neubauer, 71, of 383 Hilliard St., formerly of Summer Street, died Thursday evening at Manchester Memorial Hospital. He was the husband of the late Alice M. (Hutton) Neubauer.

Born in Manchester, Oct. 3, 1914, he had lived in Manchester all his life. For many years he played baseball with the former Manchester Bluefields. Before he retired in 1977, he was a lead man and general foreman at Hamilton Standard, division of United Technologies in Windsor Locks, where he had been employed for more than 40 years.

He is survived by two sons, Ronald W. Neubauer of Manchester and Wayne K. Neubauer of Manchester, with whom he made his home for the past three years; four grandchildren.

The funeral will be Tuesday at 11 a.m. at the Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St. Burial will be in East Cemetery. Calling hours are Monday from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. Memorial donations may be made to the American Diabetes Association, 17 Oakwood Ave., West Hartford 06119.

THANKSGIVING NOVENA TO ST. JUDE

Weiss recommends TIP trust fund

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

The town Board of Directors is being asked to place nearly $492,376 that Manchester is receiving from the state into a special trust fund to be used later to pay for public improvements.

The recommendation is being made by Town Manager Robert B. Weiss, who said the town has the option of allocating the money immediately or putting it into the trust fund, where it would collect interest.

Weiss said he would like to see it put into the fund — where it can stay for as long as the town wants — rather than spent as a result of hasty decisions. The state program requires a decision by Sept. 30.

The measure is scheduled to come before the directors at their meeting Tuesday in Lincoln Center, which begins at 8 p.m.

The money is part of the state's Town Improvement Program — or TIP. The program, which passed General Assembly June 30, distributes part of the state surplus as grants to Connecticut's municipalities.

Each town has an allocation committee comprising state legislators or their designees. The committees help decide how towns spend the money for local improvements.

In Manchester, the Local Allocation Council was to be made up of Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, R-Manchester, and Reps. James R. McCavanagh, D-Manchester, Elsie "Biz" Swenson, R-Manchester, J. Peter Fusco, R-Marlborough and Donald F. Bates, D-East Hartford.

However, Zinsser, McCavanagh and Bates have designated other people to fill their posts, saying that local leaders should decide how to spend money locally.

Under the state's program, also known as the Alaska Plan, allocation councils are required to make a decision on the use of the funds by Sept. 30. To help Manchester make its decision, a subcommittee of three town directors was named to form a list of where the money should be spent. Their recommendations will go to the allocation council.

If the directors approve Weiss's trust fund recommendation, the allocation subcommittee would not have to make a decision immediately, Weiss said.

Trio escapes East Germany amid gunfire

BERLIN (AP) — A speeding truck driver swerved through East German police gunfire and crashed through the Berlin Wall's Checkpoint Charlie early today with a woman and a baby huddled on the floor of the dump truck, West Berlin police said.

The East German gunfire drew an immediate protest from the Western Allies. France, Britain and the United States, which labeled such shootings "inhuman practices."

The three East Berliners escaped into West Berlin without injury at 12:05 a.m., said police duty officer Guenter Gadaschewski.

He said East German guards fired at least three shots at the speeding vehicle, a 7½-ton East

German dump truck filled with gravel.

Police said the driver made his escape by swerving into the lane of oncoming traffic when an automatic barrier came down in front of the truck.

The windshield on the driver's side of the blue dump truck was shattered. Part of the driver's side of the truck had been smashed in by what authorities said was a collision with other barriers on the way through the checkpoint.

Gadaschewski said the driver of the truck continued speeding away from the wall after crossing into the West, and did not stop until he was more than a half-mile into West Berlin.

"Such nerves!" Gadaschewski said of the driver.

FOCUS/Weekend

Last fling

Bicyclists get off to a good start at the 1984 Coors Light-Exposition Wheelmen in the Manchester Industrial Park. This year's race starts Sunday at 9 a.m.

Get ready, get set — there's plenty to do this weekend

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter

You can have a great cheap time this weekend — the grand finale to the summer — if only you give a look around. There are free events galore, and all within a 30-minute radius of Manchester.

First, let's start in our own back yard. On Sunday, New England's top men and women bicycle racers will meet on Progress Drive in the Manchester Industrial Park for the fourth annual Coors Light-Exposition Wheelmen Critérium. The event is free for spectators.

A criterium is a high-speed race around an enclosed loop, explained Steve Tompkins of the race committee. The Labor Day criterium is run over a half-mile D-shaped course. Races start at 9 a.m., with the junior division boys and girls, who peddle around the course 10 times.

Races continue throughout the day. At 1:30 p.m., the senior division racers will zoom around this course 60 times, for the Joe Tosi Memorial Race. Tosi was considered the dean of Connecticut racing and was the founder of the Exposition Wheelmen.

The races are expected to draw 400 cyclists, and at least three times that many spectators. The criterium is an ideal race from the fan's point of view, said Tompkins. "With a road race, you're lucky if you get to see a cyclist twice. Even that requires getting into your car and zooming ahead. But with a loop like this, you see the cyclists come around often. You can start picking out favorites and really cheering for them."

The race committee will have refreshment booths for spectators. Signs will be posted on Monday along Parker Street, Colonial Drive and Progress Drive. The race course itself will be closed to traffic.

For more information about either watching or entering the race, call Manchester Cycle Shop, 649-BIKE.

Tonight, for example, you can head to the carousel in Hartford's Bushnell Park. No, you needn't spin round and round. Instead, you can take in two science fiction films, "The Day the Earth Stood Still," and "Forbidden Planet."

After this, there's to be a documentary about the Pompidou Centre for the Arts in Paris, with the unlikely title of "Godzilla Meets Mona Lisa."

If these flicks make you long for refreshments, however, you'll have to dig into your pockets. There will be wine, beer and ethnic snacks sold. Saturday brings the Riverside Festival, sponsored by Riverfront Recapture, in — where else? — Riverside Park. The fair is free, with concerts of the Brazilian sounds of Espada at 1 p.m., Fort Apache Band from New York at 3 and Street Temperature, a jazz band, at 5. There will be cricket matches, boat and canoe rides, a hot-air balloon race, volleyball, double Dutch rope jumping, a fishing derby and more. You'll pay only for amusement rides and ethnic foods. The fair is open from noon to 7 p.m.

BUT THE RACE doesn't start until Sunday and there's plenty to do in the meantime.

ALSO ON SATURDAY, you can enjoy a variety of free performances in Bushnell Park, including electronic music at 11:30 a.m., a performance by Puppets Unlimited at 1 p.m., and the Winnie Johnson Dance & Music Montage at 6:15 p.m.

These performances are part of Jubilee 350 in honor of the 350th birthday of the city of Hartford. On Sunday, the city continues its celebration with two birthday parties.

In Elizabeth Park, on the border between Hartford and West Hartford, the clock will be turned back to the beginning of this century. The party opens at 11 a.m. with a family fun run, open to anyone who's at least 5 years old. The race is a little more than a mile, and everyone will receive a medalion simply for completing it. The race starts at the corner of Asylum and Whitney avenues and goes to the pond.

That's the spot for the teddy bear picnic at noon, featuring mimes, jugglers, clowns and storyteller Gertrude Blanks telling tales about bears. Everyone who comes bearing bears will get a teddy bear lollipop.

THROUGH THE AFTER-NOON, there will be a tea dance and croquet games in the rose garden; lawn bowling on the Asylum Avenue side of the park; a display of antique cars; guided tours of the gardens; and old-fashioned children's games near the playground on the Whitney Avenue side of the park.

At 3 p.m. the Governor's Foot Guard Band will march into the playground for a concert and birthday party. After happy birthday is sung to the city, an enormous cake will be distributed to all present. The afternoon ends with a hot-air balloon race. In case of rain, the party will be Monday.

The party in Keney Park starts at 9 a.m., with sporting events being the primary emphasis. There will be horseshoe matches, volleyball and tennis. At 11 a.m., the NBA All-Stars will play an exhibition basketball game and sign autographs.

At noon, an elaborate clown show gets under way, followed at 1:30 p.m. by a marching band performance. At 2 p.m., Gertrude Blanks will tell folk tales of North Hartford, and at 2:20, a horse show will begin. There will be a fashion show of clothes from the 1940s and 1950s at 3 p.m., followed by free cake and punch for all.

CAN'T STAND the thought of doing anything so thoroughly organized on a Labor Day weekend? Here are a few outdoor suggestions for you: Admission to the Holland Brook Connecticut Audubon Center, 1361 Main St., Glastonbury, is free. There are 38 acres of forest and trails in the adjacent park. It will be open Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday afternoon from 10 to 5.

Manchester pools and Indian Notch park in Bolton will be open through the weekend. And, if you don't object to a fee of $2 per car, the state's Department of Tourism has these suggestions for state park swimming: Gay City, Route 85, Hebron; Wharton Brook, Route 5, Wallingford; and Quaddick, Route 44, Thompson.

David Frost and puppets knock celebs on NBC

By Robert Barr
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ever since Watergate, or maybe even a year or two before, American politics has defied satire.

Sylvester Stallone for president? Why not? Would anyone be shocked if the Democrats nominated a populist former window washer? Nah.

No, a country that has survived G. Gordon Liddy, Billy Carter and young Ron Reagan isn't going to collapse laughing at "Splitting Image: Down and Out at the White House," a two-part special appearing on consecutive Saturdays, Aug. 30 and Sept. 6, on NBC.

Despite its marvelous life-size puppets, this British import is disappointingly easy on the funny bone. It has a nasty and occasionally tasteless edge, portraying President Reagan as a senile resident of Fantasyland and making a crude reference to Sen. Edward Kennedy's auto accident at Chappaquiddick.

IT'S TOO BAD, because with a better script these puppets would be natural winners.

The story is that the United States is secretly controlled by a board of celebrities called The Famous Corp., chaired by Ed McMahon.

The Famous Corp. decides who is in and who is out, who makes the cover of People and who can't even get on "Hollywood Squares," and who runs for president. Stallone is given the nod to succeed Reagan, and the Democrats are ordered to nominate a loser. Again.

When Stallone drops out, the Famous Corp. kidnaps Reagan and substitutes Dustin Hoffman in the White House. Richard Nixon figures in this caper, and probably because no caricaturist can resist that face.

It's silly rather than trenchant, taking the easiest and cheapest shots.

To portray Reagan as a fuddled dimbulb ignores the basis of his vast popularity, which isn't built on an image of brittleness. Effective satire would have to take on his rhetorical skill, his vision of America or the policies of his administration. Instead, the program gets lost in the same confusion between celebrity and substance that it set out to ridicule.

BASHING ED MCMAHON would be funny if you were the first or even the 31st to do it, but it's become old hat.

Some jokes are not for the squeamish, such as the game show "Saw Your Head Off," in which contestants race the clock to decapitate themselves.

Other jokes are hopelessly dumb, as when host and co-executive producer David Frost says the Famous Corp. "knows things which even the president does not know, such as how to spell 'yogurt.'"

Pop quiz: Why is David Frost famous?
a) Don't know
b) Used to date someone famous
c) There really is a Famous Corp.

Frost unwittingly becomes the show's most effective attack on celebrity. Nine years ago he presented himself as a serious, probing journalist in his interviews with Nixon in exile. Now he's making fun of those interviews.

It's a sad case of fame for hire, but they had to use him live. Nobody would have recognized a David Frost puppet.

THE PUPPETS, though, are terrific. The Reagan puppet has a crazy gleam in its eye, the Jack Nicholson puppet has the toothy leer down pat, and the Stallone puppet is equal parts menace and mental density.

The Dustin Hoffman puppet is the consummate method actor. Growing anxious after breaking into the White House, he groans, "I don't think my character would like this."

A Tom Brokaw puppet breaks in with "Newsweek" updates from a laundromat, which nicely skewers those busy "newsroom" sets.

"Splitting Image" came to NBC after negotiations for a weekly spot on CBS' "West 57th Street" came to naught.

NBC was interested in developing a series, said network publicist Rob Maynor in Los Angeles, but the puppets weren't. NBC does have an option for future specials.

"We didn't want to be forced to make a series," executive producer Jon Blair said in an interview from London. "In our experience, very few people understand just how difficult it is."

"Splitting Image" with a cast of 550 puppets to call on, is a top 10 show in Britain, despite airing at 10 p.m. Sunday. Blair said. It has spun off a British hit record, "The Chicken Song," which can be heard in the background in party scenes.

Weekenders

A fair-ly full weekend

It's a good weekend for those who are attracted to country fairs. There are fairs in Woodstock, East Hampton, Goshen, and Northampton, Mass.

Of these, the oldest is the Three County Fair in Northampton, Mass., which has been filling the fairgrounds off Route 9 for 168 consecutive years. This fair features horse and oxen draws, parimutuel racing, baking, amusements, rides and more. It is open today through next Saturday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

One of the liveliest fairs is the Goshen Fair on Route 63, with arts and crafts, flowers and vegetables, a frog jumping contest and a few which are even more unusual — like a rolling pin throwing contest. Admission is $3 general, children under 12 free, and parking is free. It is open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., today through Monday.

The Haddam Neck Fair in East Hampton is open for the same days and hours. Admission is $2.50 general, $2 for senior citizens, children under 12 free, parking free. You'll see a carriage rally, the state's sanctioned baking contest, flea market, music, rides and livestock exhibits.

At the Woodstock Fair, there will be a fiddlers' contest, a show of antique cars, square dancing, a chicken barbecue and much more. This fair is open from 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturday through Monday. Admission is $3 general, children under 12 free, parking $1.

Taylored to fit

Although his brother James may be the more famous entertainer, singer Livingston Taylor has certainly made a name of his own. Taylor's music, which blends rhythm and blues with jazz and folk, has been popular for more than 10 years. He will be in Hartford tonight, playing at Lilyd's Restaurant, 60 Washington St. The cover charge is $8. Call 549-4322 to assure yourself of a seat.

Walk on the beach

If you're down at Hammonasset Beach State Park anyway, you may enjoy the family nature walks offered this weekend. The guided nature walks will leave from the park's nature center at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., Saturday and Sunday. The programs are free with park admission, which is $4 per carload. The walks are scheduled, rain or shine.

Arts in the park

Admission is free to the arts and crafts show on Sunday in Somers, sponsored by the Friends of the Somers Library. The show will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the park near the town hall, Route 190, Somers.

Winery is open

The Nutmeg Vineyard on Bunker Hill Road in Andover is open for tours from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Wine tasting is also offered. Admission is free.

Clubs offer music free

Area clubs are taking no breaks this weekend — they'll still be offering music. The following clubs have no cover charges: At Kelly's Pub and Steak House, 69 North St., Paul Serra and Country Gold entertain tonight and Saturday; Hungry Tiger Cafe, 128 Charter Oak St., has Logan and McCarthy tonight; Gaslight Cafe, 30 Oak St., has Caribou tonight and Saturday; Cavey's will have Charles Gigliotti tonight and Saturday, with the addition of bass accompaniment on Saturday; Three Penny Pub in the Manchester Parkade will have David Abington tonight.

Antiquin' we will go

Whether you're hunting for a Toby Jug or a fine deacon's bench like the one above, you're likely to find it at the Farmington Antiques Weekend on the Farmington Polo Grounds. The goods from more than 500 shops will be exhibited, including teddy bears imported from Germany and furniture brought in from England and Canada. The show is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sunday, rain or shine. Admission is $3 for adults and is free for children. If you're determined to get in early, you'll pay $7.50 for the privilege of entering the grounds at 8 a.m., Saturday.

Births

Bycholski, Aimee Janet, daughter of Robert and Linda (Paul) Bycholski of 118H McKee St., was born Aug. 9 at Manchester Memorial Hospital. The maternal grandparents are Antoinette Paul of 296 School St. and the late Richard Paul. The paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Chester Bycholski of 45 Diane Drive. The baby has a sister, Beri Bycholski, 11.

Lyon, Julie Victoria, daughter of Alan R. and Debra (Higginum) Lyon of 290 Richmond Road, Coventry, was born Aug. 10 at Manchester Hospital. THE KUEHLS OF 74 MOUNTAIN ROAD celebrate 35th anniversary

Kuehls observe 35th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Donald K. Kuehl of 74 Mountain Road observed their 35th wedding anniversary on Monday. They were married Aug. 25, 1951 at First Church of Christ, Congregational, Springfield, Mass.

He is president of Composite Inc. of Manchester and she is owner of Candids by Carol photo studio in Manchester. He is chairman of the Republican Town Committee and she is a member. Donald Kuehl also is a member of the Exchange Club of Manchester and vice president of the Cheney Hall Foundation. She belongs to the Downtown Merchants Association and the Connecticut and the New England Professional Photographers associations.

The couple has three children, Mrs. Paul (Allison) deKanel of Scotia, N.Y., Wayne Kuehl of Allentown, Pa., and Claudia Kuehl of Portland, Ore.

Quishes surprised on anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. James Quish of Glastonbury, former Manchester residents, recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at a surprise party at Willie's Steak House with 120 guests.

Among the guests was Domenic "Ding" Farr of Manchester, longtime postal worker, who was best man at the wedding in St. John's Church in the Kingsbridge section of the Bronx, New York, on June 28, 1936. Marion Stanley, the maid of honor, was unable to attend the anniversary party, given by the couple's children, James J. Quish and Arline Virginia Ellis.

Before his retirement, James Quish was a plasterer and a longtime employee of the Andrew Ansaldi Co. The Quishes have four grandchildren, James Harrell, who lives with them, and Colleen, James and Craig Quish, all of Danbury.

Advice

Girl seeks understanding after rape

DEAR ABBY: A year and a half ago I met my first love. I was 16 and he was 17. In the beginning everything was fine. Then he started to slap me around. Since he was my first love, I thought I couldn't live without him. So I just took it and said nothing. This went on for about a year, then I found out that he was having sex with another girl, too. It tore me apart, but I told him that I wanted no more to do with him and he should leave me alone. He said he would leave me alone if I would have sex with him one more time for old times sake. I said no, I didn't want him to even touch me. Then before I knew what was happening, he pinned me down and raped me.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

raped? BROKENHEARTED

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: Don't allow your mother to lay a guilt trip on you. You were raped. It makes no difference how many times you willingly had sex with him, if he forced you to have sex with him, it was rape! Since your mother is obviously unsympathetic, I urge you to contact your nearest rape crisis center. The people there can put your mind at ease and advise you.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing for an opinion only. I do not intend to say or do anything. Besides, you will probably tell us to mind our own business, but we all feel sorry for this poor lady I'll call Agnes. This is the situation: I work in a public school administration office with Agnes, a lovely woman who is the secretary for two administrators, which in itself is a heavy workload.

However, one of the administrators brings her two children to work for Agnes to take care of. Agnes has been asked to take these children to their swimming lessons, etc., and if she's not chauffeur them somewhere, they are leaving in her office or going up and down the halls. They are not here every day, but they have been here two and three times a week since summer began. I have to send my children to day care, as do all the other secretaries who work here, and we don't make nearly as much as administrators.

Don't you think Agnes is being taken advantage of? And isn't the administrator's behavior in poor taste?

SORRY FOR AGNES

DEAR SORRY: "Yes" to both questions. A couple of unsupervised children going "up and down the halls" should be a distraction to everyone in the workplace. But let me point out that no one can be taken advantage of without his or her cooperation.

DEAR ABBY: A cat was destroyed yesterday. He was a stray that had been hanging around our house since January. We felt sorry for it, so we fed it. We wouldn't have minded, but the cat wasn't neutered (our two cats are), and he bullied our cats so much they were afraid to go into their own back yard. He also sprayed to mark his "territory," leaving a very unpleasant odor that attracted more unneutered cats who would fight on our porch.

Since he was too wild to allow us to touch him, neither our vet nor the Humane Society would neuter him. It was very upsetting to us, but in the end there was nothing left but to have him caught and destroyed. Since he was a stray, the county did the job for free, but we paid a price emotionally.

Abby, please tell your readers that responsible pet ownership entails more than feeding an animal once a day. Unless they are raised for breeding purposes, pets should be neutered. My husband and I resent that we had to do someone else's dirty work. Change this any way you wish, but convey my message: "Neuter and spay — it's the kindest way."

CAT WOMAN, LOMBARD, ILL.

DEAR CAT WOMAN: I didn't change a word. Your message was purrfect.

Positive attitude needed to kick habit

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am male, 5 feet 10 and weigh 150 pounds. Two years ago I went on a diet and lost 75 pounds. The bad thing is that my smoking increased from four packs a day.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

one pack or to be in my present state?

DEAR READER: Neither. You are limiting your options too much. Smoking is clearly harmful, and at 150 pounds, smoking four packs of cigarettes a day is guaranteed to bring you one or another problem in the future. Similarly, weighing 225 and smoking one pack is not a good option; your risk for disease is still high.

You seem to have licked one problem: the weight. Now you can get after the other: the cigarettes. Try nicotine gum or patches. But let everyone in the workplace teaching centers. Your doctors may be able to help. Rather than thinking "either/or," try to view the problem more positively. You have lost weight, so you also can decrease or stop smoking. With help you have the power to change your habits. Viewing yourself as fat or unable to stop smoking is being a loser. You can be a winner.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My friend has been a very heavy drinker all his life and doesn't eat enough to keep a bird alive. He's in his 60s and has developed large bleached-out spots all over his body. What should he do?

DEAR READER: The bleached-out spots may be from a nutritional deficiency or may be a common skin affliction called vitiligo. Your friend needs a medical examination for diagnosis and to see to what extent his drinking is affecting his health.

You can suggest to him that he stop drinking and see a doctor, but until he is motivated to do so, your pleas may fall on deaf ears. If you are concerned and believe that he has a problem, I recommend that you go to Al-Anon meetings.

POLLY

Milk lasts long in new boxes

DEAR POLLY: The store where I shop recently started selling milk in boxes on the refrigerated shelves. How is this possible? How long can the milk be stored this way?

Pointers

Polly Fisher

DEAR L.C.U.: The packaging is known as aseptic packaging and it's been available in Europe for many years. The specially constructed and treated boxes are filled with milk that has been sterilized so it is bacteria-free before being poured into the sterilized containers. The container is sealed airtight. Since no bacteria is allowed to remain in the milk or in the packaging, the milk does not spoil for a long time.

Aseptically packaged milk may be stored as long as six months at room temperature. Once the package is opened, however, the milk should be refrigerated and used as quickly as regular milk.

Thoughts

Our world is a noisy one. Cars, machines, airplanes, overhead. But perhaps the loudest noise is the sound of our own voices. We are a society of talkers, and often we listen to the person who talks the fastest and loudest. We value talking in people and tend to be suspicious of those who don't have a lot to say. We wonder if they are snobbish or stupid. We assume that if nothing is coming out of their mouths, there must be nothing going on in their heads. And we think that if we want to give a friend comfort or support, we need to say something. When we go to visit a sick friend or someone who has just been bereaved, we often feel uncomfortable because we don't know what to say.

What we need to learn, for our own sakes and the sake of others, is the art of silence. To be silent would mean learning to listen to others — really to listen without listening to what we are going to say in response while the other person is talking — and it would mean really hearing what they have to say. To be silent would mean to silence the chatter that goes on in our own minds, to quiet all the little conversations we have with ourselves about what we would have said, could have said, should have said. And finally, the art of silence would mean being quiet long enough to hear the voice of God speaking in our hearts. We could then hear the "still small voice" that speaks when the noisy racket of the world is quieted.

Martin Buber tells the story of Rabbi Mehabem Mendel, who was greatly gifted in the art of silence. Someone asked him how he had learned the art, and he was on the verge of answering the question, but then he changed his mind and practiced his art. That wise rabbi gives us an example to follow.

Traffic tieups irk motorists

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — "A traffic jam is like a haunted house — it changes a normal citizen into a monster," says Raymond W. Novaco, associate professor at the University of California at Irvine.

Novaco, who is an authority on transportation and the behavior of drivers and who had just had his first ride through Tucson, talked about "Traffic Congestion and Commuter Stress" here during a recent carpooling meeting.

And he told his audience that traffic congestion has been a worldwide problem, since the Romans first used horse-drawn carts. Rome and Mexico City, he added, are the most dangerous cities for vehicle traffic.

"In Rome, a red light is merely a suggestion," Novaco quipped.

He said his studies have verified a relationship between exposure to rush-hour traffic and adverse physiological reactions, including chest pain and alteration in the rhythm of the heart beat.

"YOUR VOICE IN MANCHESTER"

Lendl is nigh invincible

NEW YORK - Ivan Lendl won't use the word invincible when talking about himself. Maybe he should.
"I believe if I play my best, I can beat anybody," Lendl said Thursday.
"Anybody" this time was Robert Seguso, whom the top-seed at the U.S. Open routed 6-3, 6-1, 6-2 in the first set.
Thierry Tzuc of Romania has won the French Open among his seven tournament victories this year. He lost to Boris Becker in the Wimbledon final, his first little showing on grass. He is a heavy favorite here with a 57-4 record.

Defending U.S. Open champion Ivan Lendl demolished second-round opponent Robert Seguso, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2 on Thursday in New York.

The featured matches today had No. 4 Stefan Edberg of Sweden against Kevin Curren, No. 6 Jimmy Connors vs. Claudio Panatta of Italy, Boris Becker of West Germany, the third seed against Cassio Motta of Brazil, and No. 2 Mats Wilander of Sweden vs. Thierry Tzuc of Romania.
The women's schedule has defending champion Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, the fourth seed, against countrywoman Iva Budarova and No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd opposing another Czechoslovak, Regina Marsikova.
Lendl credits his victory here last year - after three straight losses in the finals - with boosting him above the field.
"Winning last year helped, no question," he said. "It was one of the things I wanted to achieve - it gave me courage. It gave me the feeling I want to work even harder because the work was paying off and it was worth it."

NEW YORK JETS—The 5th Annual Coventry Lions Run will be held on Sunday, October 5. The 10K race starts at 11 a.m. and the 5K race starts at noon. Classes included Junior, High School, Open, Sub-Masters, Masters and Grand Masters (for both sexes). Beginning this year, both races are TAC sanctioned. Races begin and end at Coventry Kings on Route 31. Registration begins at 9:30 a.m. on the day of the race. Dressing rooms and showers are available. The 5K race is over a relatively flat course; the 10K race is over a scenic course around Coventry Lake. Prizes will be awarded in a random drawing for all participants following the race—with a special drawing for a TV to be given to one of the pre-registrants.

The entry fee is $5.50, with all proceeds going to club projects. Free T-shirts will be given to all who pre-register (received by Oct. 3). As in past years, Highland Park Motor of Coventry is the major sponsor of the Run. For registration forms, write David Leete at 603 Silver Street, Coventry, 06238 or call at 742-5737.

MAYOTTE, GILBERT NAMED TO DAVIS CUP—NEW YORK—Tim Mayotte and Brad Gilbert, both of whom were selected to the U.S. Open, have been named to the American Davis Cup team for its match-up with Australia, team captain Tom Gorman announced Thursday.

Mayotte, the 14th seed in the Open, lost in the opening round of the third round of the tournament.

Also named to the squad for the semifinal meeting on Oct. 3-5 were Robert Seguso and Ken Flach, the top doubles team in the United States, and Paul Ancone, who eliminated John McEnroe from the Open in the first round.

FOOTBALL

BIGGS AND BRELAND ON SAME CARD—WEST PATTERSON, N.J.—Olympic champion Tyrell Biggs and Mark Breland, both untested as pros, will fight scheduled 16-round bouts Sunday, Sept. 14, at Harral's Marino in Atlantic City, N.J., promoter Dan Dava announced Thursday.

Biggs, 19-0, with seven knockouts, will meet Purcell Davis of Detroit, 13-4, with nine knockouts, in a heavyweight bout.

Breland, 13-0, with eight knockouts, will fight a welterweight match with Reggie Miller of Lake Charles, La., 18-5, with 11 knockouts.

Both fights will be televised live by ESPN.

CZECH FANS HAVE BURNING DESIRE—BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia—Two men have admitted setting fire to railway cars to vent their anger when their favorite soccer team failed to qualify for Czechoslovakia's top league.

The two men, aged 27 and 31, were identified in the official newspaper's report. CTK said the men were living on pensions for physical disabilities, but it did not say what they were.

Ation Melis, a committee member of Slovan (CHZJD), the team which failed to qualify, told The Associated Press he was not aware of the fire. He added: "Slovak fans have never before behaved violently."

FOOTBALL

SOFTBALL SEASON NOW JUST A MEMORY, but some teams are still savoring a successful summer. One of Manchester's best, the Main Pub, enjoyed a spectacular year by winning the regular season 'A' Central League pennant and finishing runners-up in the 'A' Tournament. One main man for Main Pub was steady shortstop Scott Haney, who played solid in the field and rapped two singles in Tuesday's final, 13-7 loss to playoff champion Nassiff Arms.
