Morocco quits Libya treaty over criticism

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II said in a letter released Friday that he was abrogating a 1984 treaty of union with Libya because of Col. Moammar Gadhafi's criticism of a meeting last month between Hassan and Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

Hassan said in the letter written Thursday to Gadhafi that the criticism contained in a joint Libyan-Syrian statement issued the day before had reached "the threshold of the intolerable."

He said it was not possible to express the bitterness that he or the Moroccan people felt about abrogating the treaty.

The Libyan-Syrian statement published Wednesday in Tripoli, the Libyan capital, denounced the "treason of Ifrane," a reference to Hassan's meeting July 22-23 in Ifrane with Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

"The terms of the Syrian-Libyan communique, published ... at the end of the visit of (Syrian) President Hafez el-Assad to Libya, do not allow our country to continue on the path of the union of states instituted with you, country," Hassan said in the letter.

Hassan became the only Arab head of state outside Egypt to meet publicly with the head of the Jewish nation. Libya and other hardline Arab states that oppose Israel have sharply criticized the Ifrane meeting.

The Moroccan-Libyan treaty was signed Aug. 13, 1984 in Oujda, Morocco, and was described at the time as a move toward the eventual union of the two North African states.

The treaty subsequently was ratified by referendums in both countries and took effect the following Sept. 1, the 15th anniversary of the coup that brought Gadhafi to power.

It was Gadhafi's seventh attempt to merge with another Arab or African nation. The late Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser first proposed a "Pan Arab Union," and in 1958, Egypt and Syria joined to form the United Arab Republic. The union collapsed three years later, but Gadhafi continued to push the idea after he came to power in 1969.

Since then, Gadhafi has announced mergers with Egypt, Algeria, Sudan, Syria, Chad and Tunisia, but none materialized. His offer to unite with Malta also was rebuffed.

"Without taking into account the inconvenience — real or suggested — that our union of states was likely to generate, we attached importance mainly ... to its positive and constructive aspect in the way it could notably serve as an example ... to the whole of our Arab-African community, which needs so much to combine its forces to face the multiple challenges met internally and externally," Hassan wrote Gadhafi.

"It unfortunately happens that in this field, as well as in others, the threshold of the intolerable is attained," the monarch said.

"And it is, alas, what we are compelled to note in this moment," he wrote. "Your declarations made it, unfortunately, ineluctable."

In a nationwide radio and television address explaining his action, Hassan said Morocco had been "loyal to the spirit of the Treaty of Union." He criticized the countries that accused Morocco of treason for meeting with Peres.

The king said Gadhafi had twice refused to see Moroccan emissaries, adding: "I don't wish any harm to the Libyan people. I respect its aspirations."

Claims get tough scrutiny

Insurance crisis endangers town

By George Loyno
Herald Reporter

When a Glastonbury couple notified the town of Manchester earlier this month that they intended to sue over injuries their teenage son suffered while using a rope swing at the Buckingham Reservoir, it made some officials angry.

The boy, Matthew Lawrence, was trespassing when the incident occurred in July, the officials said. Signs were posted saying that swimming is not allowed, yet the youth apparently ignored the warnings and injured himself while trying to swing over the water on a rope.

A number of town officials were surprised that the boy's parents planned to bring suit and have vowed to fight any claim. The threat in this instance comes on the heels of other cases in which thousands of dollars in municipal funds have been paid out for damage claims.

Since the issue of the suit arose, attention has been focused on how claims against the town are handled, and whether the town has aggressively challenged claims it considers to be unjustified. In interviews with the Manchester Herald, town officials said the municipality has taken to investigating claims against it with special diligence.

If the town pays a large damage award, residents' taxes could conceivably increase. In Manchester, claims settlements below $500,000 come directly out of municipal coffers because of the town's self-insurance program.

While the town currently has a $1.1 million fund to pay claims, taxpayers will be called on to replenish it if it is depleted. So far, Manchester has saved "tens of thousands of dollars" in premiums through the self-insurance program, according to Finance Director Boyce Spindle.

But the financial liability for municipalities is greater today as a result of the "insurance crisis," officials have warned. Whether towns are more likely to lose in court is a question still being debated, but the perception that it's easier to win has sparked more claims. That, in turn, has led to more out-of-court settlements.

"People who sit on juries have a tendency to look at poor people who have injuries ... and feel, 'Oh, give them a million or two,'" said Manchester Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg. "Is that a gamble you want to take?"

Often, the town will not take the gamble and will settle out of court, said Town Attorney John W. Cooney, who officially assumed

Test set for SDI satellites

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Two "Star Wars" satellites that will perform an orbital ballet will be launched here next week aboard a Delta rocket, sources reported Friday.

The launch, expected next Thursday or Friday, will mark the first flight of a Delta since it was grounded after a failure in May. It also will be the first major space mission for the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, which manages President Reagan's missile defense program, popularly known as Star Wars.

The agency had hoped to keep the launch secret until a few hours before liftoff, but word leaked Friday.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said that after the three-stage Delta places the two satellites in a low orbit they will separate and fly an intricate set of maneuvers as they circle each other, using small thrusters to maneuver.

The objectives, they said, are to obtain data and to test guidance and navigation systems.

One element of the Star Wars defense system envisions scores of space-based satellites equipped with lasers and other anti-missile devices. Presumably the satellites will track each other.

A Delta lost first-stage thrust 71 seconds after liftoff here on May 3 and was blown up by the range safety officer when it went out of control. Destroyed with the rocket was a $57.5 million weather satellite.

Crackdown nets irate trucker

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A trucker who apparently was fed up with Connecticut's crackdown on unsafe truckers and speeders abandoned his rig in the express lane of an interstate highway Friday, while Gov. William O'Neill proclaimed the week-old effort a success.

"We don't intend to harass anybody, but we do intend to make sure that people obey the law. We intend to continue to crack down,"

O'Neill said Friday during a state Capitol news conference.

The governor announced the traffic effort Aug. 22, one day after five tractor-trailer accidents killed one driver and injured five others.

Since June 3, seven people have been killed in tractor-trailer accidents in Connecticut.

"I think it has been effective," O'Neill said of the crackdown. "All of the people in the state know something's taking place out there. This is nothing new, this is a more intensified campaign than we have been running in the past."

Apparently, though, the frustration of driving through Connecticut was too much for James D. Simeoni, 39, a tractor-trailer driver from Salem, N.H.

After being pursued by a state trooper on Interstate 91 in North Haven for following a car too closely, Simeoni parked his truck in the southbound, express lane at 9 a.m. during rush hour, locked the brakes, left the vehicle and refused

Across the Nation

Rain returned to the Southeast on Friday and parts of Texas were under a flash flood watch after several days of rain, and unseasonably cool air spread over much of the eastern half of the nation.

A stationary front reaching across northern Florida produced rain and thunderstorms from the northern half of Florida across southeastern Georgia and southern South Carolina.

High pressure dominated the rest of the eastern half of the country, producing clear to partly cloudy skies and unseasonably cool temperatures with highs mostly in the 60s and 70s. A frost warning was posted over parts of northwestern and north-central Pennsylvania.

Early Friday, low-temperature records were broken or tied in more than 50 cities in Louisiana, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, New Jersey, Maryland, Arkansas, South Carolina, West Virginia, Massachusetts, Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois, Ohio, New Hampshire, Texas, Iowa, Indiana, Alabama, Missouri, Virginia, New York, Rhode Island, Georgia, and the District of Columbia.

Some cities had their coolest morning on record for anytime in August.

In southwestern Texas, where some flooding occurred Thursday, a flash flood watch was issued for Val Verde, Crockett, Schleicher and Sutton counties because of saturated ground and a chance of more thunderstorms.

In the west, showers and thunderstorms were scattered over Washington and the Rockies. Hole in the Rock, just south of Moab, Utah, got 1.25 inches of rain during the morning.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 54 degrees at Caribou, Maine, to 102 at both Palm Springs and Imperial, Calif. The low for the day was 25 degrees at Bradford, Pa.

For Saturday, thunderstorms were forecast over the southern Atlantic Coast states, with scattered showers and thunderstorms from southern Texas across the central Gulf Coast region and over the Rockies and the high Plains.

Sunny skies and mild temperatures will prevail over the midwest and the northern and mid-Atlantic Coast.

Highs in the 60s were predicted along the northern and central Pacific Coast; in the 70s or 80s over most of the nation; in the low 90s over southern Florida; in the 90s or 100s over the high Plains, and interior valleys of California; and in the mid-90s to near 110 across the desert Southwest.

Vietnam comic book

This is the cover of a new comic book entitled, "The Nam," which addresses the topic of U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia from 1965 to 1974. Due in late August from Marvel Comics, the monthly series chronicles the experience of several young servicemen as they leave family and friends behind to confront fighting and fear on foreign shores. "The Nam," is written by Doug Murray, a bank officer who served two tours of duty in Vietnam.

Drug kingpin gets a royal send-off

By Laura Costaneda The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Friends cheered and snapped pictures Friday as convicted drug kingpin Felix Mitchell was carried in an ornate bronze caisson to his funeral in an eight-mile procession of limousines and Rolls-Royces.

The caisson was carried by a horse-drawn carriage driven by a man in top hat and tails. Tuxedoed ushers and relatives and friends dressed in red and black took photographs of the final tribute to a man police say was responsible for turning thousands of Oakland residents into drug addicts.

As flashy in life as he was in death, Mitchell, who grew up in Oakland housing projects, amassed a fortune as leader of the "69 Mob" and was given to fancy cars and gold jewelry.

The 32-year-old drug czar was stabbed 10 times in the chest last week at Leavenworth Penitentiary in Kansas, where he was serving a life sentence without possibility of parole for conspiracy to sell heroin and operating a continuing criminal enterprise.

His family scheduled the funeral parade, which passed through neighborhoods Mitchell's gang once claimed as turf, despite the complaints of city officials and leaders who said the event glorified someone better forgotten.

"I think it's wrong," said Daniel Gonzalez of Oakland, whose grandmother lives across the street from the yellow wood-frame house that is the Mitchell family's home. "It's going to make the kids think it's OK to become a drug dealer. They're making him out to be a king."

"But people respect money and they've got a lot of it," the Mitchells do.

"It's a Mafia glorification process," said City Council member Wilson Riley. "There's nothing the city can do. It's a continuation of a message put to young people in this city that there is hero status in drug dealing."

Council member Leo Bazile called the two-hour procession "hero worship of a murdering thug."

Candidate hoping they won't forget

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — George Haley thinks his campaign is a little too lumbering, so he's going to start riding an elephant at campaign appearances and hope voters will never forget he's a Republican running for U.S. Senate.

"This whole business is to get people's attention to the seriousness of our candidacy," Haley said. "We do intend to project some real substance in this campaign. But people have to know I'm running, and that's the main objective with the elephant."

Haley, 61, is the brother of "Roots" author Alex Haley and a former Kansas lawmaker. He announced the elephant strategy Thursday.

Campaign manager Steve Ellisworth said he dreamed up the elephant stunt because weeks of appearances at political forums have failed to arouse interest in Haley.

"The voter interest level is about a minus 10 right now," he said. "George is a long-shot challenger."

Stable MCC gears up to begin the new year

By John Mitchell Herald Reporter

New students at Manchester Community College won't be the only fresh faces on campus when classes resume next week.

Five new teachers have been added to the faculty roster of 200 according to Judy Geis, coordinator of media relations. The school has also hired seven new staff members, she said.

Although students are still in the process of registering, it looks like enrollment will hold at about last year's figure of 7,960, said Andrew A. Paterna, director of admissions. Paterna said the lack of growth didn't bother him.

"A lot of schools are dropping away down," he said, calling MCC's even situation a "major achievement."

Geis said the fees for college services have gone down from $18 last year to $17 for 1986-87. The total cost for a three-credit-hour course, she said, is $66.50.

The state school, located off Bidwell Street in southern Manchester, is currently in the preliminary stages of developing new programs and courses for students, Paterna said. Also in the preliminary stage is the MCC career center of Academic Affairs Luene Corwin, who will be forming and improving courses as demands indicate. Corwin comes to MCC from a similar position at a community college in New Jersey.

She said Friday her biggest emphasis will be on computer upgrading, noting that MCC has received grant money for 33 new computers to add to its existing collection of 75. The new computers won't be in place until spring, she said.

In addition, Corwin said, MCC plans to look into and improve several departments, including retention support services, which provide assistance to students with learning difficulties. She said a new position will be added in the fall for that department.

MCC will do a study on what careers in the field are being missed by the school in an effort to upgrade the offerings of the career-placement service, she said.

"That will be a substantial boost for us," Corwin said.

The five new teachers on MCC's faculty are Michelle Bokoros, instructor of data processing; Stephen Fries, instructor of hotel-motel management; Francis James, instructor of culinary arts; Angelo Messari, instructor of economics and political science; and Wayne Westbrook, instructor of business communication.

Geis said that as of the fall, the community service program has also been revamped. Thirty new courses have been added to the non-degree program's existing offering of 30, including "Restaurant Management," "Why You Need a Will," and "Introduction to Professional Modeling."

She said the additions were made as the result of the growing number of people who are changing careers in mid-career. The new, basic courses can help make the change easier, she said.

"Some of the classes are full and closed," warned Corwin.

Claims vs. town get tough scrutiny

control of Manchester's legal staff Friday. "There is a range of value a case has where (an out-of-court) settlement might be reasonable," he said.

The legal system, Cooney said, gives both sides an incentive to settle a civil claim before a trial begins. Partly because of the size of the claim, he eventually supported the settlement, and said in an interview Friday he is satisfied the town is doing a good job in countering claims against it.

Penny and Weinberg both said officials are more aware of the claims being filed against the town because the self-insurance program began three years ago — requires town officials to do the work that used to often be quietly handled by insurance companies.

As for the incident involving the boat at the Backingham Reservoir, no lawsuit has yet been filed yet against the town. Robert J. Shluger, the lawyer listed on the notice of intent, has declined comment, and efforts to reach the parents were unsuccessful.

If and when a suit actually is filed, though, Weinberg said the town will seriously consider fighting the case in court. "We are going to strenuously look at that," she vowed.

This past week, the town Board of Directors agreed to a recommendation by Cooney that it pay a North Main Street woman $35,000 for injuries she suffered in April 1983 when a police cruiser collided with her car. The board is required to approve all settlements over $1,000, and its decision in this case came only after the directors discussed the matter behind closed doors for 20 minutes or so.

Stephen T. Penny, the lawyer who leads the Democratic majority on the board, had requested the executive session because of the size of the claim. He eventually supported the settlement, and said in an interview Friday he is satisfied the town is doing a good job in countering claims against it.

Exact statistics on the number of claims settled and the amount of dollars Manchester has paid out to claimants are not readily available, Spinelli said. He said the town is currently compiling a report on self-insurance program, which should be ready in a few weeks.

However, he said the town has not been readily paying claims without fully investigating them. "We don't want to pay out on anything we're not liable for," Spinelli said.

"Our purse strings are tight," said Cooney. But he said the town will settle a claim upon its merits. "It's a case of looking at each case separately, agreed Weinberg.

"Our intent is to move ahead on renegotiations and go after that money. Our teachers need that," Edmund Steingagel, chairman of the Education Association of Coventry, said Friday.

Coventry educators are entering the final year of a three-year contract this year. Renegotiations were slated for this fall, and that subject was on the table at the school board's meeting at Coventry High School Thursday night.

School board Chairman Judy Halvorson said it is the intent of the board to go after the enhancement funds by including salaries in the renegotiations.

The union's Steingagel did not attend the meeting Thursday, but said he had notified the board that the EAC would favor such a move. Steingagel said he and other teachers had been working over the summer on a distribution plan for the money, provided under a bill passed by the General Assembly in June, and would like to address that issue with the board in early September.

The current starting salary for Coventry teachers is $14,500. Among those with advanced degrees, the highest pay is $30,000, Steingagel said. Despite a 10.25 percent across-the-board pay raise approved by the board earlier this year, Coventry teachers remain among the lowest paid in the state.

The compromise education package agreed to by state legislators aims to raise starting salaries for teachers to $23,000 with a three-year induction plan that offers reward money to towns that voluntarily increase teachers' pay.

On Aug. 18, Halvorson won unanimous support from the Town Council to pursue the funding by reopening negotiations with the teachers. At that time, Halvorson said the town had been offered two options.

One was to bring starting salaries to $20,000 within three years with 100 percent reimbursement from the state. That plan would include state funding of nearly $1,000,500 to be divided over the three-year period to increase salaries above the minimum.

The second option was to raise the minimum to $20,000 within two years so the town would qualify for full reimbursement plus bonus money.

In other matters Thursday, the board considered requests from two families to educate their children at home. It also reviewed the possible realignment of school districts.

The sun was out at times, but cool temperatures kept the water empty at Manchester's Globe Hollow swimming pool Thursday and Friday. The unseasonable temperatures have prompted residents to put on sweaters instead of bathing suits. Globe Hollow will be open until next Saturday, but the town's four other pools are closing after Labor Day weekend, which many hope proves warm enough for a final dip.

Not so fair

Pop star Whitney Houston didn't get to play before the New York State Fair's biggest grandstand crowd ever when rain made the stage too dangerous and the concert was canceled.

The 16,000 Syracuse concert-goers who were turned away Thursday would have been the biggest crowd ever to attend a concert at the fair's grandstand, said spokesman Joseph LaGuardia. Houston's tour manager, Tony Bulluck, said the singer was disappointed. "She feels very badly about having to cancel and move out of here," he said.

Fair Director Joseph O'Hara said rain left a large puddle on the stage, a dangerous situation with thousands of watts of power surging through the sound and light systems. He said the fair is trying to arrange a new concert date, possibly sometime next week.

Sinatra in Italy

Frank Sinatra will give a concert in Milan on Sept. 27, his first performance in Italy in 23 years, his Italian manager announced Friday.

The American singer will travel to this northern Italian city after a two-day performance in the Bernabeu soccer stadium of Madrid, Spain, manager Pierquinto Carliaggi said.

Sinatra will be accompanied by a 40-member orchestra, he said.

Suit over 'Crimes'

Film director Ken Russell has gone to court seeking more than $1 million from New World Productions, which he contends failed to pay him for directing the 1984 film "Crimes of Passion."

According to the lawsuit filed in federal court in Los Angeles Thursday, Russell had an agreement with the Los Angeles company to direct the film, starring Kathleen Turner, for $578,514 and 20 percent of the profits.

The suit said the agreement called for Russell to be paid $68,514 during the production and for the company to retain $500,000 as Russell's investment in the picture.

The suit, filed by attorney Richard A. Rosen, seeks unspecified compensation and $1 million in punitive damages.

Calls to New World after business hours Thursday went unanswered.

The British director's other films include "Women in Love," "The Music Lovers" and "Tommy."

Lauderdale reunion

A stellar cast of favorites from the 1950s and 1960s, including Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello, has agreed to a Spring Break Reunion in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., says a producer of the planned television special.

About a dozen acts will perform on four theme weekends next June for the two-hour show, which would air late the following fall, said Grant Gravitt, president of Tel-Air Interests, a Miami-based production company.

Gravitt said the broadcast is to include the Beach Boys, Jan and Dean, the Everly Brothers, Chuck Berry and Blood, Sweat and Tears.

He said the idea is to persuade people who took spring break years ago to return to their old haunts.

The Broward Tourist Development Council voted Thursday to contribute up to $500,000 toward the costs of producing the broadcast.

Gold receives 25 years to life

WATERBURY (AP) — A former New York stockbroker, tried four times for killing his ex-wife's parents, Friday was sentenced to 25 years to life in prison for the 12-year-old murders. Murray R. Gold, 53, was convicted July 24 of stabbing to death Irving and Rhoda Pasternak at their Waterbury home on Sept. 26, 1974. He married Barbara Pasternak in 1963, but divorced her a year later. Defense attorneys asked for mercy, noting Gold was a survivor of the Auschwitz concentration camp. Gold escaped in 1941 and migrated to the United States in 1948. He married Barbara Pasternak in 1963, but divorced her a year later. But Judge William J. Lavery sentenced Gold to 25 years to life in each murder and ordered that the sentences be served concurrently. Lavery told the court that he had no choice but to give Gold the same sentence received during his second trial in 1976. "Murder is wrong in 1974. It's wrong in 1986. The passage of time makes no difference," Lavery said.

The state court was later upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court. Gold's third trial began Jan. 8, 1985. However, after a series of courtroom outbursts and the firing of his lawyer in open court, the judge ruled that Gold was not competent to stand trial and ordered him committed to Whiting Forensic Institute in Middletown. On June 23, 1986, Gold's fourth trial began in Waterbury Superior Court. ASSISTANT STATE'S Attorney Walter Scanlon referred to Gold's health during his remarks before the court. He said Gold "brutally killed the Pasternaks. I hope the court will sentence him to 25 years to life. But I hope Mr. Pasternak receives the treatment I believe he needs." Before handing down the sentence, Lavery asked for comment and Gold's ex-wife, Barbara Pasternak, stood and addressed the court. "Please don't ever let him loose again," she said. She had said last month that Gold was being treated for paranoia at the time the murders were committed. "My hands are tied by law," Lavery said, meaning he couldn't exceed the penalty given Gold in 1976 by Judge George A. Saden. Lavery said he wished he could sentence Gold to at least 50 years in prison. "I understand that," Pasternak answered. "That's why we've been going through this for 12 years, because the law provides so much for the defendant." Pasternak said outside the courtroom that she would come out of hiding now that Gold is behind bars. She said she had feared being attacked by Gold. "I'M HOPING THIS is the end of it," she said. One of Gold's two attorneys, Nicholas Scriggese, outside the courtroom that it was possible an appeal would be filed. Gold has 20 days in which to file an appeal. But Scriggese said Gold was exhausted from the 12-year fight and on Friday had no intention of filing an appeal. He said, though, Gold maintains his innocence.

Lyme disease victims seek state help

LYME (AP) — Polly Murray remembers suffering from near-cramping pains 10 years ago that doctors first passed off as complications resulting from an ordinary illness. Her disease finally was diagnosed as Lyme disease, an illness resulting from the bite of a deer tick, Ixodes dammini. But knowledge of the cause of her suffering has not eased Murray's frustration. She and others believe not enough is being done to protect them from the tick's annual July-August onslaught, despite medical advances in battling the malady. "We're all very frustrated being sick, and the doctors don't seem to know much about it," said Marilyn Reynolds, a registered nurse who suspects she has the disease. "Every day, it seems like somebody says they have it." Townspeople have started a petition, calling for state help. Begun at a Lyme fair nearly two weeks ago and now bearing more than 700 signatures, the petition asks the General Assembly to supply money for increased research and education on Lyme disease. Among other things, the petition asks legislators to consider: • Requiring the state to keep better statistics on the number of cases of Lyme disease. • Paying for a local Lyme disease clinic that could provide state-of-the-art treatment and research into the disease. • Creating a 24-hour Lyme disease hot line for information and treatment referral service. • And researching better ways to test for the disease. "There is an ongoing problem with Lyme disease in southeastern Connecticut, and each summer it appears to be spreading. We need further research and education, so we can not only learn more about it as it keeps expanding, but we also need to teach people more about it," says Dr. Allen Steere, a Yale University physician who now travels worldwide lecturing on Lyme disease. The disease is usually detected in the early stages by a telltale red, circular rash around the bite. The rash does not itch but is warm to the touch. Sometimes occurring before the rash, but usually found in patients who have had the disease for more than two weeks, are flu-like symptoms, including headaches, dizziness, nausea and diarrhea. In severe cases, joint pain and partial facial paralysis can occur and develop into long-term, repeated attacks of arthritis. Since it was first diagnosed 10 years ago, Lyme disease has been detected in 24 states, from Delaware to Minnesota. The most recent figures from the Connecticut health department show that of 1,290 people who submitted blood samples for Lyme disease tests in 1984, 460 people were found to have the disease. In 1985, out of 1,808 people whose blood was tested, 689 were found to have the disease. The blood test is used, along with identification of a characteristic rash and other symptoms, for a diagnosis. It is not a certain indicator of Lyme disease.

Belaga has worst attendance record

HARTFORD (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Julie Belaga had the worst attendance record of any legislator in the 1986 General Assembly session, legislative records show. Figures compiled by the Office of Legislative Management show that Belaga missed 43 percent of the votes in the House, where she is Deputy Majority Leader. Belaga is one of three Republican candidates for governor. A summary of the figures was released earlier this month by the OMB. Clerks report that the second-worst attendance record in the House belongs to Rep. Maurice Mosley, D-Waterbury, who missed 29 percent of the votes. "Our comment on that is really quite simple. Julie is running for governor," said Belaga campaign spokesman Gene Shub. "She was the only one of the three candidates — there were four candidates at that time — who was in the General Assembly this year. At the time most of the votes were being taken she was involved in six primaries in the Hartford area. That was when many of the votes were taken in late April." Shub noted that Belaga was present for major votes on education, the budget, tort reform and taxes and "made sure she was present for every vote that directly affected her district." Shub said Belaga's attendance record in 1986 was much lower than during her previous nine years in the legislature. Mosley was also a candidate for the state treasurer's office at the same time. He lost his bid to former Hartford Deputy Mayor Francisco Borges. Other House members with low attendance rates were state Reps. Michael Helgott, D-Willington, and David J. Wenc, D-Windsor Locks, who were absent for 23 percent of the 591 votes. Wenc blamed his attendance record on his law practice, saying he had a busy court schedule. He bowed out of a fourth term, saying, "It's not fair to shortchange constituents, and it's not fair to shortchange clients." Helgott's home telephone was unanswered on Friday evening. Sen. Margaret Morton, D-Bridgeport, had the worst record in the Senate — where 30 of the 36 senators missed less than 5 percent of the votes. Morton missed 30 percent of the votes. A Senate clerk said that her absence was due to her mother's illness.

Stable caretaker charged with arson SOUTHURY — A junior firefighter was charged Friday with setting a blaze that destroyed a stable where he worked and resulted in the deaths of 15 horses, state police said. Stephen V. Tooth, 17, of Woodbury was held on $50,000 bond pending arraignment Tuesday in Waterbury Superior Court on a charge of first-degree arson, said Sgt. Daniel Lewis, a state police spokesman. Thirteen horses, some valued at more than $30,000 each, were killed in the fire early Wednesday at the River Meadow Horse Park where Tooth had been employed for about a year, Lewis said. Two other horses were killed as the stable's owner struck them with his truck as he drove toward his burning barn. Lewis said state police detectives believe that Tooth, a member of the Woodbury Junior Fire Department, lit a small pile of hay in a storage area. Lewis said detectives don't think Tooth meant the fire to spread. "He wanted to fill the barn with smoke so he could be a hero and let the horses out," Lewis said. Court rejects search ruling appeal HARTFORD — A federal appeals court Friday rejected a bid by state police to make indiscriminate searches at this weekend's Ku Klux Klan rally in East Windsor. The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected without comment Connecticut's challenge of a lower court order barring searches of all those attending the rally. State police spokesman Sgt. Daniel Lewis said law enforcement officials had no comment on the ruling. "There's no reaction," he said. "We use what's available. We'll plan for the worst and hope for the best." On June 30, U.S. District Judge Jose Cabranes in New Haven told authorities to stop mass pat-down searches at meetings of the white-supremist group were illegal. On Aug. 19, Cabranes refused the state's request that he delay enforcement of his decision while it appealed. The judge also denied the state's request that police be allowed to use metal detectors to search all rally participants for weapons.

Eddy says SDI a boon for state

HARTFORD — Republican U.S. Senate candidate Roger W. Eddy said Friday that even if the Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars," proposal doesn't end up being a shield against enemy missiles, it's already proven a boon to the state economy. He criticized his opponent, Democratic Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, for voting against research funding for the project. "Whether or not SDI will provide a protective shield against enemy missiles has not been determined and won't be for some time," Eddy said. "Nonetheless, extraordinary commercial opportunities are unfolding as a by-product of this government research." He said Connecticut companies, including Kaman Corp., Perkin-Elmer Corp. and United Technologies Corp., have received contracts for SDI research totaling $10.9 million this year and $8.6 million last year. Eddy said new applications of SDI research will include faster computers, better disease diagnosis, new tools against pollution and even better weather forecasting.

Chlorine fire destroys warehouse

THOMASTON — A fire fueled by powdered and liquid chlorine destroyed a swimming pool company warehouse Friday, sending one firefighter to the hospital suffering from inhalation of chemical fumes, officials said. Five other firefighters were treated for smoke inhalation at the scene of the fire that started around 9 p.m. at the Clearwater Pool Co. fire department spokesman Paul Pronovost said. Exit 38 of Route 8 was shut down around 9:30 p.m. as smoke billowing from the fire blew southeasterly away from any residences in the sparsely populated section of town. Firefighter Craig Palmer of Watertown was taken to St. Mary's Hospital for treatment of smoke inhalation. There were no reports of evacuations or other injuries. Authorities said the fire was brought under control at 10 p.m. Thomaston fire crews were aided by those from Watertown, Litchfield and Morris. Fire officials said they did not know how the fire began. They estimated it caused up to $2 million worth of damage at Clearwater Pools, which employs about 30 people.

Law school is teaching wrong lesson

While it might not be perfect, the judicial system in the United States is one of the soundest and fairest in the world.

Unlike judicial methods used in many countries, the American system affords citizens and the accused of crimes protections aimed at preventing one of the most grievous forms of injustice possible in a free society — the imprisonment of an innocent man or woman.

At the core of these protections is the notion that anyone accused of a crime is innocent until found guilty by a jury of his or her peers.

Unfortunately, that notion sometimes gets lost amid the respect for authority that most people are brought up with, and an arrest is often regarded as proof that a suspect is guilty.

The potential for the system to fail was illustrated recently by a would-be law student's bid to attend classes while awaiting disposition of rape and larceny charges pending against him.

The student, Michael R. Hoffman, was accepted to law school in April by Western New England College in Springfield. He paid an admissions fee that same month, and all was well until July, when Hoffman was charged with raping a woman and stealing her purse. The school decided to bar him from classes.

Hoffman sought a court order to force the school to admit him, but a superior court judge this week refused. The judge gave no reason for his decision.

The school, however, tried to dispel accusations that it was barring Hoffman from class because it felt he was guilty — charges that obviously are embarrassing to a school whose function is to teach students the principles of American law.

The school's attorney said the decision to bar Hoffman was made for liability reasons. "If something else were to happen, you can bet that the school would be blamed," he said.

A female faculty member also refused to teach Hoffman, citing safety concerns.

It doesn't take much reading between the lines to realize that, regardless of how their arguments are couched, some faculty members and administrators at Western New England College are ignoring one of the most basic principles of law.

If the rape case goes to trial, Hoffman may be found guilty. But until he is, he should be allowed to attend classes at Western New England.

The school is setting an extremely poor example for those who may be charged in the future with seeing that justice is done.

Labor adapts to a changing economy

By Gerald W. McEntee

Over the past year, union membership as a percentage of the overall workforce has remained the same. That puts a halt to a four-year slide by organized labor.

As we celebrate Labor Day on Monday, I believe we're beginning to see the broad outlines of a comeback by organized labor. Further, I believe that labor's ability to renew itself will be based on its ability to recruit new, unorganized workers into its ranks.

Labor is taking extraordinary steps to revitalize itself. To my mind, the most crucial part of that effort is in reaching out to workers and letting them know that unions do not exist of and for themselves, that the purpose of a union is to give working people a way to defend themselves against workplace abuse and to help those with no power toward a better life.

A key element in the changing demographics of this country might be working for American unions. The explosive growth of service industries has brought unprecedented changes in the work force. The largely unorganized service sector has been whipsawed by technological change. This restructuring has created many jobs which have become repetitive, requiring less skill and lower wages. For unions that recognize these changes, a sophisticated response to on-the-job worker problems presents an opportunity to offer themselves as a vehicle for redress of grievances.

THIS EMERGING work force currently accounts for 15 percent of the population. It's the fastest growing element in society. These workers are neither traditional blue-collar workers nor ## Cycle gangs selling wares outside U.S.

WASHINGTON — The United States may be losing the trade war with Asian nations, but there's at least one product America is exporting to the Far East in abundant quantities: motorcycle thugs and their drugs.

"Outlaw motorcycle gangs, with their dangerous drugs, trafficking expertise and established distribution networks in the United States, are broadening their sphere of influence from the United States to Japan and Australia," states one confidential Justice Department report seen by our associate Donald Goldberg.

The major drug that the motorcycle gangs have taken with them to the Orient is methamphetamine, commonly known as "speed." It has long been their drug of choice in the United States.

This nation's largest and most notorious motorcycle gang, the Hells Angels, is one of the most active in the Far East. And they may attempt to take advantage of the large supply and low price of speed in Asia. Declares the report: "There are indications that the Hells Angels are attempting to expand their sphere of influence from the United States to Japan. It would not be unreasonable to assume that given their active involvement in the U.S. methamphetamine trafficking situation, they would take advantage of the Japanese supply and price benefits to further their distribution activities in the United States."

Klan rally mars workers' holiday

The presence of the Ku Klux Klan in East Windsor during the Labor Day weekend will mar this celebration of American workers and labor union activists. Members of this white supremacist group will be convening in a building near the home of Edward Thrall.

The tactics of the Klan have not changed too much, but some members wear tie-piece suits and use computers to update enrollment. Their racist rhetoric of blaming non-white people for economic, political and racial problems and the race wars of the future is disgusting to me.

All people have the right to live with dignity and with respect. One race should not hold a monopoly on human achievements because it will cause cultural, religious and social genocide.

I am still appalled that Klan groups are very active in Connecticut in the state in which the U.S. Constitution was drafted.

President Reagan should speak out more against the internal threats from left- and right-wing extremist groups such as Pose Comitatus. The public should view news-magazine programs about hate groups, and the 1981 documentary, "The Ku Klux Klan: Legacy of Hate," which is narrated by actor James Whitmore.

Extremist groups become dangerous when innocent civilians are killed or maimed in gun or bombing attacks. Members should be punished by the court system according to the crimes they commit.

My message to Grand Dragon Farrands of Shelton is that most young blacks like myself, Hispanics, Arabs and native Americans are not intimidated by your worn out messages of white rights. These young men and women will fight you equally in the courts and the streets if necessary.

The Ku Klux Klan was once called the scum of the land. Members should work toward positive goals to make the U.S. a just society.

Astronaut's family plans lawsuit

SPACE CENTER, Houston — The family of Challenger astronaut Ron McNair will file suit against the maker of the solid rocket boosters blamed for the explosion that killed its seven crew members, an attorney said Friday.

Ronald D. Krist said he will file the suit next week in U.S. District Court in Houston contending Morton Thiokol Inc. "is probably the sole culprit" in the space shuttle accident and will request unspecified damages.

McNair, 35, was killed in the Jan. 28 accident. The suit will be the first filed against Morton Thiokol, although the family of the Challenger pilot has filed a claim against the government.

Libyan groups vote to merge

MILWAUKEE — Three Libyan bodies voted overwhelmingly Friday to merge and create what one leader called "an American church," a 5.3 million-member church that brings together all the ethnic strands of American Lutheranism.

The new Evangelical Lutheran Church in America will be the nation's fourth-largest Protestant church, taking in the 2.9 million-member Lutheran Church in America, the 2.3 million-member American Lutheran Church and the 110,000-member Association of Lutheran Churches in America.

The AELC vote was unanimous, and no more than 7 percent of the other conventions were opposed to the new church.

"My friends, there will be a new church!" exclaimed Bishop James R. Crumley Jr. to the LCA convention. The announcement was greeted with applause, cheers and a round of "Amen."

Researcher proclaims innocence

LOS ANGELES — A researcher accused of hacking anthropologist Dian Fossey to death in Africa declared his innocence Friday, and his lawyer said the United States was trying to make his client a scapegoat.

"I want to respond to the outrageous charge of the Rwandan government that I murdered Dr. Dian Fossey," said Wayne Richard McGuire, a doctoral candidate who spent most of last year with Fossey, studying gorillas in Rwanda in East Africa.

"I had absolutely nothing to do with Dian's tragic death," said McGuire. "She was my friend and one of my mentors. I had everything to lose and nothing to gain by her death. I am shocked and outraged by these false allegations."

McGuire, 35, of Hazlet, N.J., invited the Justice Department to question him at any time about the Dec. 27 slaying. His lawyer, Michael Mayock, said he called the news conference to clear McGuire's name.

Soviet candor impresses experts

VIENNA, Austria — Western experts said Friday they were impressed by the unusual candor of Soviet officials in describing the Chernobyl nuclear disaster and their determination to prevent future accidents.

"The Soviets were very free in providing answers and comments on the many questions we had," said Richard Kennedy, U.S. ambassador at large for nuclear affairs. "I rate their candor highly. We probably heard more than we expected to hear, and we've now greatly increased our understanding."

He spoke at the end of a five-day international conference on the causes and consequences of the April 26 reactor accident at the Ukrainian plant, which released radioactivity that spread over Europe and much of the world.

The conference was arranged by the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency, which said in a closing statement that nearly 600 nuclear and health experts from 62 countries participated.

Blimp offer is withdrawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Customs Service has withdrawn its offer to help the government's fight its war on drugs, by blimp, saying that nightfall, Goodyear withdrew the offer.

In a statement from Goodyear's headquarters in Akron, Ohio, Thomas B. Riley, manager of airship operations, said the company wanted no part of any test of the effectiveness of aerial surveillance of drugs by its blimp, saying premature publicity compromised the experiment.

Spokesmen for the U.S. Customs Service had no immediate comment on the statement late Friday by Goodyear.

But earlier, the federal agency said it had been trying to keep the Goodyear test a secret.

The Goodyear dirigible "America," stationed 30 miles north of Houston, was to be put through its paces with Customs Service agents aboard to monitor the craft's performance, Riley said earlier.

U.S./World In Brief

Group claims credit for kidnapping

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A previously unknown group believed to be made up of Shiite Muslim extremists claimed Friday it was responsible for the kidnapping in May of an 85-year-old Frenchman in Beirut.

The handwritten statement given by the independent newspaper Al-Nahar said the United Forces of Justice had kidnapped Camille Sontag on May 7 to force France to stop "following the great Satan, America." The statement was written in Arabic.

There has been no previous claim of responsibility for Sontag's kidnapping. The retired automobile dealer, a longtime Beirut resident, was seized as he drove with his wife in Moslem west Beirut. At the time, they were preparing to leave Lebanon.

Soviets to withdraw 8,000 soldiers

MOSCOW — A senior official said Friday the limited Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan will involve 8,000 soldiers and will begin this fall.

Further limited pullouts "are not excluded" by the Kremlin, said Yelena Falin, chairman of the government news agency Novosti and a non-voting member of the Communist Party Central Committee.

But he declined to say when additional withdrawals might be carried out, he said.

Falin, in an interview with The Associated Press, was the first Soviet official to detail the number of soldiers to leave Afghanistan under the withdrawal announced by Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in a nationally televised speech July 28.

Asked if the pullout had begun, Falin said, "It has not yet started, it begins this fall. It will be conducted so that everyone sees what was withdrawn, what kind of forces, and journalists will be invited."

Volcano expert warns of further gas

YAOUNDE, Cameroon — Lake N'Goué may emit more lethal gas and those who survived the cloud that killed more than 1,500 people last week must not be allowed to return home, a volcano expert said Friday.

French volcanologist Haroun Tazieff said it was possible that the pocket beneath the once-placid volcanic lake had not been emptied entirely by the blast that sent the pocket into the air the night of Aug. 21.

The explosion was caused by a thrust of steam at very high pressure, he said. "Today, there is no more steam under the lake, but some gas undoubtedly remains. For that reason, return of the population to the site is absolutely to be prohibited."

Tazieff is in Bamenda, capital of the remote northwestern volcanic region, trying to determine the disaster's cause. The area has about 20 lakes similar to N'Goué, which the people who lived on the fertile land around it called "the good lake."

The Ministry of Cooperation in Paris said in a statement that the first results analyzing gas and water from the lake, brought back by a French mission of scientific experts, indicated "carbonic gas and carbon dioxide... caused the instantaneous death of more than

Libya restructures military after raid

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya has been reorganizing its military since the U.S. air strike last April 15 and has appealed for increased military aid from Eastern nations, sources here said Friday.

The bombing, which Libyan officials said heavily damaged Tripoli and Benghazi and killed 20 people, apparently took Libya by surprise despite a reported warning by Maltaese air controllers 45 minutes before the attack.

Diplomats in Tripoli, the capital of Libya, said an Eastern European analyst of Libya's response concluded that its air force didn't react swiftly enough and its air defense system was poorly coordinated.

Military advisers from Syria, which like Libya has Soviet-made S.A.S. missiles, helped in the air defense, according to U.S. government officials and sources in Tripoli. One U.S. plane used in the raid was shot down.

The United States has warned that further evidence of alleged Libyan support of international terrorism could result in another military attack.

The result has been a drive to reorganize the Libyan military and get more military aid.

(Libya warned Friday that West European countries "will be the first to pay the price" should a new U.S. attack against Libya reportedly take place, the official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, in a dispatch from Tripoli.)

Group claims credit for kidnapping

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A previously unknown group believed to be made up of Shiite Muslim extremists claimed Friday it was responsible for the kidnapping in May of an 85-year-old Frenchman in Beirut.

The handwritten statement given by the independent newspaper Al-Nahar said the United Forces of Justice had kidnapped Camille Sontag on May 7 to force France to stop "following the great Satan, America." The statement was written in Arabic.

There has been no previous claim of responsibility for Sontag's kidnapping. The retired automobile dealer, a longtime Beirut resident, was seized as he drove with his wife in Moslem west Beirut. At the time, they were preparing to leave Lebanon.

Soviets to withdraw 8,000 soldiers

MOSCOW — A senior official said Friday the limited Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan will involve 8,000 soldiers and will begin this fall.

Further limited pullouts "are not excluded" by the Kremlin, said Yelena Falin, chairman of the government news agency Novosti and a non-voting member of the Communist Party Central Committee.

But he declined to say when additional withdrawals might be carried out, he said.

Falin, in an interview with The Associated Press, was the first Soviet official to detail the number of soldiers to leave Afghanistan under the withdrawal announced by Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in a nationally televised speech July 28.

Asked if the pullout had begun, Falin said, "It has not yet started, it begins this fall. It will be conducted so that everyone sees what was withdrawn, what kind of forces, and journalists will be invited."

Volcano expert warns of further gas

YAOUNDE, Cameroon — Lake N'Goué may emit more lethal gas and those who survived the cloud that killed more than 1,500 people last week must not be allowed to return home, a volcano expert said Friday.

French volcanologist Haroun Tazieff said it was possible that the pocket beneath the once-placid volcanic lake had not been emptied entirely by the blast that sent the pocket into the air the night of Aug. 21.

The explosion was caused by a thrust of steam at very high pressure, he said. "Today, there is no more steam under the lake, but some gas undoubtedly remains. For that reason, return of the population to the site is absolutely to be prohibited."

Tazieff is in Bamenda, capital of the remote northwestern volcanic region, trying to determine the disaster's cause. The area has about 20 lakes similar to N'Goué, which the people who lived on the fertile land around it called "the good lake."

The Ministry of Cooperation in Paris said in a statement that the first results analyzing gas and water from the lake, brought back by a French mission of scientific experts, indicated "carbonic gas and carbon dioxide... caused the instantaneous death of more than

Libya restructures military after raid

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya has been reorganizing its military since the U.S. air strike last April 15 and has appealed for increased military aid from Eastern nations, sources here said Friday.

The bombing, which Libyan officials said heavily damaged Tripoli and Benghazi and killed 20 people, apparently took Libya by surprise despite a reported warning by Maltaese air controllers 45 minutes before the attack.

Diplomats in Tripoli, the capital of Libya, said an Eastern European analyst of Libya's response concluded that its air force didn't react swiftly enough and its air defense system was poorly coordinated.

Military advisers from Syria, which like Libya has Soviet-made S.A.S. missiles, helped in the air defense, according to U.S. government officials and sources in Tripoli. One U.S. plane used in the raid was shot down.

The United States has warned that further evidence of alleged Libyan support of international terrorism could result in another military attack.

The result has been a drive to reorganize the Libyan military and get more military aid.

Soviets offer to open test sites

By Barry Schwed, The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union, stepping up its pro-summit campaign, offered Thursday to open nuclear test sites to American inspectors and accused the Reagan administration of secret "Star Wars" explosions.

In a rare embassy news conference, Deputy Ambassador Oleg M. Sokolov dismissed as "cynical" the administration's refusal to join the moratorium that General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev has imposed on Soviet tests until January.

The Soviet diplomat said Moscow was ready to accept "every conceivable form of agreement" to monitor a test ban once the United States lifted the suspension.

"Broadly, we do not see an obstacle toward reaching an accord on the cessation of nuclear tests," Sokolov said.

Gorbachev imposed the moratorium last August and has extended it three times. The United States has refused to join, arguing that U.S. weapons must be tested for reliability and safety and that there were no assurances the Soviets would observe a ban.

Sokolov said, "There is no rational basis for the United States not joining our moratorium except maybe for the cynical argument that nuclear tests are needed to continue the nuclear arms race."

ON VERIFYING a test ban, he said "as far as the Soviet Union is concerned the problem of verification of halting all nuclear tests does not exist. We have put forward practically every conceivable form of verification."

Soviet Col. Vitaly Kotuzhansky, appearing with Sokolov, said under no circumstances could be detected even below the single kiloton level with current seismic measurements and satellite observation from space.

Kotuzhansky, who was described as a verification expert, said the United States conducted three tests, probably related to the "Star Wars" program, since Gorbachev announced the Soviet moratorium last summer.

The colonel said one was set off last August, another in the fall and the third last April. Kotuzhansky said these were in addition to the 15 announced by the U.S. government.

"They are probably oriented to the Star Wars program, and it is one of the dangerous aspects of that program," he said.

From 1980 to 1984, Kotuzhansky said, the United States set off 12 to 19 nuclear weapons explosions without publishing them.

A Pentagon spokesman, Maj. Randy Morger, said "we do not discuss the objectives of the nuclear tests that are conducted." Otherwise, he declined to respond to the Soviet assertion.

But Deputy Foreign Minister Anatoly Adamishin, winding up two days of preparatory talks on regional issues at the State Department, said Thursday "a lot of progress" was not achieved.

"We have to decide yet whether the summit would take place because it has to be productive," he said.

Foreign trade deficit hits record high $18 billion

Deferring tax is a smart move

QUESTION: We had a substantial capital gain on a payment received this year. As a result, our 1986 income tax bill will be quite large and I would like to keep it from getting even larger.

ANSWER: Because many brokerages have been stuck by sharpies with stolen bearer bonds, unlike a "registered bond," which has the owner's name printed on it and on the record books of the issuer, a bearer bond has no permanent record of ownership.

Without the court protection, Hunt assets, including the brothers' downtown Dallas office tower, would have been auctioned off.

QUESTION: I have two U.S. Treasury bonds in "bearer" form. Wanting to sell them, I went to the local office of a very large brokerage firm. The broker I spoke to refused to sell the bonds for me.

GM rate means war among U.S. car giants

GM dealers reported a crush of customers after the No. 1 automaker stunned the industry Thursday by announcing new car financing rates as low as 2.9 percent on 36-month loans in an effort to reduce its unusually large inventory of 1986 cars.

Backers and foes prepare for battle over charter vote

By George Lovyn Herald Reporter

Labor Day weekend is the traditional start of the fall political campaign, but it will be another week or so before townspeople sparring over removal of the Eighth District's power to veto a merger with the town are geared up for the November election.

William H. Sleith, head of the Committee for Charter Revision, said Friday the group's three-man speakers' bureau should be in operation in about 10 days. The bureau — which will include Democratic Majority Leader Stephen T. Penny, former town Public Works Director Jay Gilroy and former Board of Education Chairman Philip Susag — will speak to various organizations in support of changing the Town Charter to remove the district's veto power.

If approved by voters, an item on the Nov. 4 ballot would require only one favorable township vote before consolidation could occur — a political subdivision that has provided fire protection and sewer service to most of northern Manchester for almost 100 years.

Under the existing charter, district residents must approve a merger in a separate vote. If the charter is changed, observers say it will make consolidation easier to achieve because those living outside the district outnumber district residents three to one and would presumably vote for a merger, which is favored by the Democrats who control the Board of Directors and lead in voter registration.

Opponents of changing the charter plan to kick off their campaign Sept. 10. The pro-district group STEAL, Stop Tampering with the Eighth's American Liberties — has scheduled a rally for that day at Whittier Memorial Library.

Attorney Robert Bletchman, who heads STEAL, has challenged Sleith and Penny to a debate. Penny has not yet agreed to debate, but Sleith said Friday he would not personally debate because he wants his group's speakers' bureau to handle the task.

side, and an impartial moderator. Sleith said he hopes to televise the forum on the local cable television station's access channel and would invite members of the press. However, he said there would be no audience.

The purpose of the debate would be to "simply" respond to Bletchman's challenge, Sleith said. "We don't see any great advantage to our cause," he said, adding though that he hoped the debate would help townspeople come to their own conclusion on the heated and controversial matter.

What will likely be at the center of the debate is the question of self-determination. District supporters have argued that changing the Town Charter to eliminate a separate vote for the district would prevent district residents from determining their future.

However, district opponents have contended that the people of Manchester as a whole have the right to determine whether or not the Town Charter provision in question should be changed. They have said that since the provision was created by the entire town when the charter was approved in 1947, it is the entire town's right to remove it.

Murder victims forgotten

By Judie Glove The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Five New Yorkers were murdered Tuesday and one of them, a preppy, well-to-do teenager named Jennifer Levin, made headlines. The other four moved in different worlds and their deaths got little public attention.

In some ways the five cases are similar. Like Levin, Rachel Pajoh, Rosa Dueno, Vincent Matthews and Danny Alvarez, all allegedly were killed by people they knew. As in Levin's case, quick arrests were made.

But Levin, 18, died in Central Park, behind the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The other killings in the city that day were in housing projects in the Bronx, the borough north of Manhattan.

Other than a brief story in a local newspaper about Pajoh, the Bronx murders were all but forgotten.

That does not surprise Lt. Louis Delano, who works in one of the borough's high-crime areas. "Unfortunately, no one cares about the Bronx," he said.

But police do not believe their cases were overlooked just because they lacked the sensational details of the Levin case: sex, and a group of wealthy teens who liked to party at the trendy Dorrian's Red Hand bar in Manhattan.

Part of the reason, they say, is simple geography: the media and top police brass are in Manhattan.

"We have murders involving bars all the time," said Lt. John Schering, who heads the detective squad in the drug-ravaged 41st Precinct, known as "Fort Apache."

"But who wants to know about the San Juan or the Alpaca? The Dorrian, trendy, upscale, whatever you want to call it, is much more interesting," he said.

Capt. Michael Julian of the department's Public Information Office said only one detective and his partner were assigned to the Levin case. "Fortunately for us we hit paydirt very early and didn't have to call in additional help," Julian said.

"But we would have if we had to," he said, because "a murder in Central Park affects so many people."

The tree-filled park is New Yorkers' "haven from urban life," Julian said. "We're naturally concerned that people would get scared and feel they can't use the park without fear."

A day after Levin's death, police arrested Robert Chambers, 19, and charged him with second-degree murder.

Authorities said Chambers and Levin had dated several times and left Dorrian's, which caters to a jet-setting group of young wealthy college students, around 4 a.m. Tuesday.

Defense attorney Jack Littman admits Chambers strangled Levin. But Littman contends the killing was accidental and occurred while the teenagers were engaged in rough sex in the park.

About the time Levin left the Manhattan bar, Rosa Dueno, 44, an ex-bee-keeper, was shot by John Enriquez, 33, being quarreling.

The argument occurred only six miles north of where Miss Levin and Chambers walked in Central Park, but as Delano said, "In social distance, they were worlds apart."

During the argument, Enriquez, an unemployed construction worker with a record of drug arrests, allegedly plunged a knife into Dueno's chest.

Neighbors took up a collection to help pay for Dueno's funeral.

to move it, state police said. When a wrecker arrived at the scene, Simeoni got into his truck and slowly moved it across three lanes of traffic, nearly colliding with an ambulance, state police said.

"I just think he was having a bad day," said state police spokesman Trooper Jim Barnes. "He jumped out and said, 'I've had it. You can't pick on us truckers any longer.'"

Simeoni was charged with intimidation for following too closely, illegal use of the left lane, hazardous parking, reckless driving, failure to obey an officer and failure to grant the right of way to an ambulance, state police said. He was later released on $5,000 bond.

Simeoni was driving for Westlyn Creamery of Lynn, Mass. The truck was loaded with 30,000 pounds of orange juice, state police said.

State police working overtime have used three airplanes, trucks and unmarked sports cars, such as a Corvette Stingray, to catch speeders and unsafe trucks.

Navy moves to foreign ships

The Navy sued the firm, Rainbow Navigation Inc. of Red Bank, N.J., last year, claiming the line charged "excessive or otherwise unreasonable" tariffs — currently the only circumstance where U.S. military cargo can be shifted to foreign flag vessels.

But a federal appeals court, in a decision written by Supreme Court Justice-designate Antonin Scalia, upheld Rainbow's right to enjoy the time-honored preference.

After weighing arguments, including a written affidavit from Secretary of State George Shultz, Scalia rejected the government's contention that foreign policy would be harmed by the act's absolute advantage to U.S. shipping lines.

Under the new rule, proposed last month to ease the provisions of the act, the secretary of the Navy — represented by cost-cutting Pentagon contracting officers — would have a wider berth in deciding whether U.S. shippers are priced unfairly.

Club President Ballard Smith said the suspension was effective immediately and was brought on by Gossage's repeated "personal attacks" against team owner Joan Kroc and Smith.

Gossage, who has a 5-7 record with a 4.31 earned run average, told Newsday this week that he "doesn't know anything and doesn't care" about baseball.

The former New York Yankees' reliever said he missed playing in New York.

"I'd rather have a guy like George (Shester) (Yankees owner) who wants you every game than have the guy we have here who doesn't know anything and doesn't care," Gossage was quoted as saying. "He (Smith) cares more about our citizenship than winning. He wants choir boys and not winning players. What is in this game for, to show what good people we are or to win games?"

"I never sang in a choir. I didn't know you had to go to church before you could play baseball," Gossage said.

In a statement read by team spokeswoman Be Barnes, Smith said he was suspending Gossage under Major League Rule 20, which gives owners the right to discipline players for "repeated and continuing insubordination and similar player behavior that is

SAN DIEGO — Relief pitcher Goose Gossage was suspended without pay for the rest of the 1986 season by the San Diego Padres Friday.

Mattingly might play hot corner

By The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Who's on third? No matter that he's left-handed, it could be Don Mattingly, an All-Star first baseman, playing third base for the New York Yankees on Saturday.

Mattingly, the regular third baseman, has been hampered by a hamstring pull and it's questionable whether he'll be ready.

"If Pags can't play Saturday, Yankee Manager Lou Piniella said after Thursday night's 4-2 victory over Seattle, "Mattingly's going to play third base."

Left-handed throwing third basemen are a rarity in the major leagues. Mike Squires, who played 13 games for the Chicago White Sox in 1984, was the last lefty to play third.

"Don't look at me as if I'm crazy, I need offense," Piniella said. "If we jump out to a lead (with Mattingly at third), we can reorganize."

Mattingly, who learned of Piniella's plan before Thursday night's game, took some infield practice at shortstop.

Mattingly, a 38-hitter this season and last year's most valuable player in the American League, seemed to like the idea of the switch.

Although he's ambidextrous, Mattingly said he wouldn't attempt to throw right-handed as he would borrow a fielder's mitt.

"I can still throw right-handed," he said. "But I don't know if I can do it in a game."

Mattingly hit his 28th home run in the Boston eighth, but Carter homered again in the ninth.

Jacoby snapped an 0-for-21 slump with two doubles and a single, and Tabler added three singles.

Carter opened the ninth with a homer off the Yankees. Carter has hit 24 home runs this season, seven against the Red Sox.

Boston scored in the first when Wade Boggs singled and later came home on Bill Buckner's sacrifice fly. Carter's homer put the Indians ahead in the third, but the Red Sox tied it in their half on Jim Rice's 13th home run.

Snyder put Cleveland in front to stay in the fourth with his 17th homer into the screen in left. The Indians added two more runs in the inning on an RBI single by Chris Bander and Tony Bernard's sacrifice fly.

Don Baylor hit his 26th home run in the Boston eighth, but Carter homered again in the ninth.

Jacoby snapped an 0-for-21 slump with two doubles and a single, and Tabler added three singles.

Carter clobbers slipping Sox

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — Joe Carter hit three home runs and went 5-for-5 Friday night, powering the Cleveland Indians past the Boston Red Sox 7-3.

Carter, who also singled twice, drove in four runs. He became the first Cleveland player to hit three homers in a game since George Hendrick on June 19, 1973, and first to accomplish the feat on the road since Bill Glynn on July 5, 1954.

Boston lost for the fifth time in six games.

Rookie Cory Snyder homered and Brook Jacoby and Pat Tabler rapped three hits apiece in the Indians' 16-hit attack against four pitchers.

Tom Candiotti, 13-9, pitched a six-inning game for the Red Sox for the second time in a week. Tom Seaver, 7-11, took the loss, giving up five runs on nine hits in 4 1/3 innings.

Carter got an infield single in the first inning and then hit a two-run homer in the third. Carter singled again in the fifth, and then connected against Sammy Stewart for a leadoff home run in the seventh.

Carter opened the ninth with a homer off the Yankees. Carter has hit 24 home runs this season, seven against the Red Sox.

Indians slugger Joe Carter slapped plenty of hands Friday when he wasn't slapping the Red Sox. Carter cranked three home runs and went 5-for-5 to lift the Tribe, 7-3.

A's 4, Orioles 3

At Oakland, Mike Davis homered twice and went 4-for-4, leading the Oakland A's past the Baltimore Orioles 4-3 in the first game of a two-night doubleheader Friday.

The victory was the third straight for Oakland while the Orioles lost their sixth consecutive game. The A's swept a doubleheader from Baltimore on Thursday.

With the score 2-2, Davis led off the sixth with a single and took second on a groundout. He then scored the go-ahead run when he stole third base and continued home on catcher John Stefro's throwing error.

Eric Plunk, 4-7, allowed five hits over six innings to get the victory with help from Jay Howell, who tossed the final three innings for his 13th save. Storm Davis, 9-12, took the loss.

Carney Lansford's RBI single put Oakland ahead in the third. Davis' leadoff homer in the fourth made it 2-0.

The Orioles tied it in the sixth on Jim Traber's two-run homer, his 11th.

Davis led off the eighth with his 17th home run, his third in two games. Baltimore scored in the ninth on a double-play grounder.

New York Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor looks primed to regain his status this year as the NFL's dominant defensive player.

The statistics were still impressive. "The former North Carolina star made 83 solo tackles, assisted on 21 others and registered a career-high 13½ sacks as the Giants finished 10-6 and won Super Bowl XXII in a wild-card game before being knocked out of the playoffs by the Chicago Bears.

L.T. is geared to be great again

By Tom Canavan
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Mervyn Lawrence Taylor and the New York Giants take a deep breath and speak in measured words. "The next guy who asks me about him is going to have trouble setting up," Coach Bill Parcells warned reporters a few weeks ago. "I'm just a ballplayer this year, not an interview," Taylor says, responding to requests to talk with a firm "no."

For Taylor, this is "The Year After." His first season back following treatment for substance abuse. The substance was never revealed. It's no ordinary year for his teammates, either. After an outstanding 1985 season, the Giants are burdened with preseason predictions of possible Super Bowl appearance next January.

If they are worried about Taylor, they shouldn't be after his performance last weekend against the New York Jets. "If you viewed Lawrence on the practice field in the preseason, I would think that would remove all doubt from your mind," said defensive end George Martin, the team's player representative. He added that only "outsiders" have questions about Taylor. "Lawrence Taylor is definitely in a class by himself and I am proud as hell to play with a person who I think is going to be considered a legend."

An All-Pro in each of his five NFL seasons, the 27-year-old inside linebacker is often called the best defensive player in the National Football League and is seen as a certain Hall of Famer. But even as he was making All-Pro last season, he didn't seem to exhibit the dominance he had in previous years. He had one outstanding mid-season game against Washington, announced that he had put his problems behind him and then continued his ordinary play.

"He didn't have a Lawrence Taylor-type of year," said John Madden, the CBS sportscaster and former Los Angeles Raiders coach. "A couple of years ago, I thought and I said that Lawrence Taylor is the best defensive player in the NFL, a dominant player who by himself can win a game, and he did. Last year, he wasn't that guy," Madden said.

Advice

Foes of drug testing argue that rules are often violated

DEAR ABBY: Dr. Robert L. DuPont, president of the Center for Behavioral Medicine in Rockville, Md., insists that everyone who tests positive for drugs in a testing program is guilty. This is utter nonsense. For example, the use of urine specimens in the collective and subsequent handling of urine specimens. In dealing with several hundred Navy urine analysis cases, I have never yet seen a single case in which that regulation was not violated. As a result, specimens are often mislabeled, contaminated or lost before they ever reach the laboratory. We have been able to prove, repeatedly, that a urine specimen attributed to our client was in fact someone else's. If this occurs in the Navy, where the service member is protected by the right to counsel, what will happen in private industry where there are no such protections?

Dear Abby

case, and in the American system of justice, civilian or military, an accused person is not supposed to be convicted, or punished, on the basis of statistical inference, but rather on the basis of individual guilt, proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

No responsible person advocates the use of dangerous drugs or alcohol in the workplace. But we should not permit careers, lives and families to be destroyed by programs as rife with error as the urine testing programs. In this country, we believe in the rule of fundamental fairness. Apparently, Dr. DuPont does not.

CHARLES T. BUMER
ATTORNEY AT LAW
SAN DIEGO

DEAR ABBY: The company I work for is starting a drug testing program. At the moment, they will only test people who are acting oddly (a lot of people act "oddy," which doesn't mean a thing). Also, they could change this policy at any time to testing everyone as they are already testing new employees. They already spot-check Abby Carter at Hoover. I go out gate searching for drugs, liquor or guns. They also can search your purse. If we refuse, we can be let go. I feel this is also a violation of my civil rights. I do not take drugs, drink or carry a gun.

The younger generation I talk to who are not involved with drugs say, "So what, let them test me. I have nothing to hide." They do not realize how many freedoms we have already lost, for they have never known the freedom the rest of us have experienced.

Please don't use my name or city. I could lose my job.

No vaccine for common cold

DEAR DR. GOTT: Fifteen years ago, my husband left me stranded in the middle of the worst winter in history. I had to walk three miles to work. I contracted pneumonia, and after weeks of trying to get help, I was able to get treatment at a hospital. Since then, I seem to be more susceptible than anyone I know to colds and virus infections. Is there any sort of preventive medicine I could take to help me ward off these illnesses?

stripped. We would like to have at least two more children. Should I have the surgery done now, or would I just have to have more veins stripped than anyone I know? Am I a candidate to have the injections that dissolve the veins?

DEAR READER: At this time, there is no commercial, available preventative for the common cold. One is in the works, however, and might be ready for release in the near future. I suggest that, for now, you have annual influenza shots and ask your doctor to give you the pneumonia inoculation. You should take good care of yourself and eat properly, but there probably is nothing specific you can do to avoid virus infections until other anti-virus vaccines are developed.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 27, have three children and have very bad varicose veins. One is the size of a garden hose! Two vascular surgeons suggest that I have the veins

DEAR READER: You bet. I think you need to find a specialist who will be more sensitive to your concerns. The doctor really should sit down with you, discuss your problem and help you develop a plan for future treatment or medical follow-up.

Although you present doctor may be jovial in an attempt to reassure you, this type of levity can easily be interpreted as depreciation. Health problems are nothing to laugh at. I believe that young patients deserve just as much respect and courtesy as grown-up, bill-paying adults. Ask your parents to seek out a bone specialist who will take your problem more seriously, and with whom you feel more comfortable.

Learn the facts about osteoarthritis. Send for Dr. Gott's new Health Report on the subject. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 441013428. Be sure to ask for the Health Report titled, Understanding Osteoarthritis.

Ask many questions in deals with discount security broker

Can you really save as much as 50 percent on commissions if you trade your securities through discount brokers? That's what the ads claim: what some promotion literature suggests, what many of the discount brokers themselves want you to believe.

Well, maybe, but be sleazy. Trade, if you wish, through a discount broker. You may get all the service you need, but do so with your eyes wide open. What is the basis of the comparative savings? The date on which the savings are calculated? How much of your own money must be involved to permit you to save such astonishing totals? What is the minimum amount you can save in contrast to these maximums?

As an overall rule, discount brokers do not have research departments, nor do they provide investment advice. These are just two of the prime reasons for the lower commission fees — but as an investor you must be fully aware of them or you can lead yourself into trouble. The National Association of Securities Dealers reviewed the advertising practices of 19 discount brokers earlier this year and concluded that its guidelines needed tightening. It followed through and changes have been made.

YOU MAY BE misled because some claims of outstanding savings compare current discount commission rates to those offered by full-service brokers, which they compare their own rates. Or the claims may compare today's discount commission rates with rates charged before the Securities and Exchange Commission abolished fixed commission rates in the mid-1970s. Or your choice may become even more complex because the advertisers may use a range of standards (unknown to you) against which they compare their own rates.

The core of this matter is your ignorance about commissions in general. This factor alone may determine whether you are making a profit or absorbing a loss on what appears a simple transaction.

Among the pointers of which you should be fully aware:

- What totals you must have in any transaction to obtain the maximum commission savings.
- Some firms fail to disclose (without your demanding the information) that your transaction must total at least $50,000 — in one instance, it was $300,000 — to achieve the greatest savings.
- The minimum savings are omitted so you can contrast this commission total against the maximum. Most firms fail to state this, so you cannot consider the full range of commissions. But the fact is that the only way to calculate your own savings is to apply your own trading volume to different fee schedules.
- Some firms may require an initial deposit. Expect to pay this deposit if you want to trade options or open a margin account.
- Many firms stay open after hours, but you can consider the full range of commissions. But the fact is that the only way to calculate your own savings is to apply your own trading volume to different fee schedules.

In addition, the senior center will offer a driver's education course in conjunction with the AARP entitled "55 Alive." Individuals 62 years of age and older completing the course receive a minimum 5 percent reduction on their insurance premiums per year. The class is scheduled Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 from 12:30 to 4 p.m. Individuals must attend both sessions for the discount. The fee for the course is $7. Applications may be picked up at the senior center.

CONCERNING TRIPS, there are openings for the following:

Sept. 9 — Belle of Brattleboro; canceled.

Sept. 9 and 10 — Atlantic City; $89 per person (double occupancy); 2 days, 1 night at the Claridge Casino Hotel, includes transportation, hotel, dinner, show and $5 in coins. Call Daniels at 646-3012.

Sept. 10 — Eastern State's Exposition; $13; includes transportation and admission. Leaves the center at 9 a.m. and returns at 6 p.m. If interested, call Daniels Travel at 646-3012.

Sept. 12 to 14 — Cape Cod; $157.50, three days and two nights; includes transportation, five meals, hotel and sightseeing. Call Daniels at 646-3012 if interested in being put on the waiting list.

Oct. 10 — Fall Foliage trip to Wilmington, Vt.; $37; includes tour, shopping time, lunch and entertainment. Register in the office.

Oct. 27 to 29 — Kelly's in the Pocono Mountains, Pa.; $189; includes transportation, hotel, five meals, entertainment and tours. Contact the center to register.

CONGRATULATIONS to the winners of the Arizona Scramble this past Monday at Twin Hills Golf Course. They are as follows:

Elmer Odell, Mike Massaro, Irv Gartside and Phil Dupont. The team registered a 3 under par score.

Men golfers interested in participating in a Senior Citizens Golf Tour at Rockledge Country Club in West Hartford on Sept. 18 should contact me or the golf league officers for an application and details.

Lady golfers are reminded to pay their entry fee for the mixed Arizona Scramble Tourney at Red Rock Golf Course on Sept. 16. If you have any questions, please contact Flo Miele.

Big thanks to the following gentlemen who helped out the past two weeks with all the painting chores: Ed Janack, Bill Valente, Al Surprenant, Sobby DiMarco, George Blake and Cliff Williams.

Best wishes to James Nason, our bus driver for the past 17 years, who retired this month. Jim has been a faithful and dedicated employee and certainly will be missed by all. The senior center will have a retirement party for Jim this fall. Watch the column for further details.

Lastly, just a reminder the senior center meals program will resume on Sept. 8.

MACC News

Telephone comes in time to show that neighbors care

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr MAAC Director

The phone was installed for less than a day when she began to hemorrhage. Certainly the reports back to MACC from the hospital helped MACC staff answer the question: when does a phone become a "basic human need?"

garded as necessities in the MACC office. In this case a question was posed. The visiting health nurse who called our office was clearly concerned about her client.

FRIDAY MORNING our client suffered a massive hemorrhage and thanks to all of you, she was able to call for help. In spite of the phone, she won't be returning home. Even though the ambulance got her to the hospital in time, she still lingered another few days.

That's really what the Human Needs Fund is all about - reaching out in advance to be there for a neighbor in trouble. Come to think of it, we've paid for the installation of two phones this past month, most unusual.

The installation of the second phone was also the result of advocacy on the part of a visiting health nurse (wonderful people in the YNA) whose frail, elderly and poor patient needed a phone in addition to diabetes and impaired breathing. In her case, also, a phone was a necessity.

A VERY DIFFERENT medical situation faced a family a few weeks back when the head of the household was injured while on the job. Although he is eligible for workers' compensation, bills come in much more promptly than settlements. We were able to help with food for the family and with a needed medication.

ELDERLY OUTREACH WORKERS recently came to MACC for help for a client who they found living in a threatening and abusive situation. Thanks to your donations and their good work, we were able to pay the security deposit on a safer living arrangement.

druggist, phone company in these cases, never to the client. And it's not that we don't trust this particular young mother or elderly citizen. It's a general and long standing MACC policy to exercise all due care with your money.

When we're a huggy family to begin with," said Hill, who raised his four children after he and his wife were divorced 12 years ago. "I thought, what we need is a hug we can leave with somebody when we can't be with them. Or maybe a hug we could send to somebody we can't be with."

He cut the prototype from an old bucket. The self-hugger can be rolled up into a small bag and mailed to whoever the sender thinks needs an embrace.

He envisions the self-hugger being sold by florists along with a bouquet of plants.

The story behind the story

By Josie

Falco

Q. Could you please tell me about the singer Falco? I think he's sensational. Cynthia Mata, Wailuku, Hawaii

A. Johann Holzel was born in Vienna on February 19, 1957 to an engineer father and a traveling salesperson mother. Both parents wanted their son to become a doctor; he, on the other hand, started to play the piano at the age of 4 and wanted to become a musician. After high school, he moved to West Berlin, where he sang with a jazz-rock band and did all the things his parents wouldn't like.

At the same time, he decided that his name wasn't appropriate for someone destined to become a rock 'n' roll star, so he appropriated the first name of an East German skier named Falco Weissflog, changed the "k" to a "c" and began hanging out in the bars around town as Falco Sturmer and Falco Gutteher before deciding simply on Falco.

He spent some time performing with a band called Drahdwaberl and in 1980, released a song on his own called "Ganz Wien." It became a cult favorite partly because it was banned from the radio. (It contained a line, "All Vienna is on heroin today," that was not too popular with authorities.)

The following year he released "Der Kommissar," a rap song that went on to become an international hit followed by his first album, "Einzelhaft" (Incarcerated) which also became a hit.

His second album, "Junge Roemer" (Young Romans), was released in 1984 and bombed, a situation that prompted him to journey to Thailand in a state of depression looking to find inner peace. Somehow he did, and, rejuvenated, returned to Vienna and put together "Rock Me Amadeus," the song that has in the last few months made him an even bigger international star.

It was followed by another hit, "Vienna Calling," and a third single, "Jeanny." Since his record company thinks there are more hits on his album "Falco 3," you can expect to hear more singles from it. His next album will probably not be released for a while.

He and girlfriend Isabella Vitkovic have a baby daughter Katharina-Bianca.

Arlo Guthrie

Q. I've always been a fan of Arlo Guthrie. Is he still doing live shows? Yvette Cisneros, Clovis, Calif.

A. Indeed he is. He's on a concert tour right now, in fact, which should cover the Midwest. He also performs frequently in the Northeast; he and his wife and four children live in Massachusetts.

Q. Are Tawny Little and John Schneider still together? Also, what is she doing? I used to see her twice a day on TV. Now I don't see her at all. L.D. Taylor, Ontario, Canada

A. No, they split up but apparently are still friendly; they were at a party together at Los Angeles' station KABC recently. The reason for her appearance is her forthcoming return to the station. She left in January 1985 proclaiming that she was bored with her hosting jobs on "The Love Report," "A.M. Los Angeles" and "Eye on Hollywood" and that she wanted to become an actress.

She auditioned for an ABC pilot but didn't get the role. ABC was interested enough in her, though, to give her a one-year "holding contract" while other roles were sought. None were found, so she's going back to hosting. Look for her on a show called "Eye on L.A." that is now in development.

Q. Please tell me what Joyce DeWitt of "Three's Company" has been doing lately. I haven't seen her in anything. W.R., Scranton, Pa.

A. She hasn't been too visible because, as her agent explains it, "She's been busy developing properties for herself. TV mostly, primarily movies of the week." Nothing, though, has come to fruition.

Q. Please help us settle a bet. How old is Mitzi Gaynor? Everyone I know says she's in her 60s. Bob, Beach Haven, N.J.

A. Francesca Marlene Gerber was born on September 4, 1931, which puts her close to 55. She lied about her age when she started working professionally with the Los Angeles Light Opera Company — she was 13 at the time — which may account for the perception of being older. She looks pretty good for any age, however.

Whitney Houston

new modeling agency. Covers and spreads in magazines such as Cosmo and Glamour resulted.

She really wanted to sing, however, and by 18 was singing backup on other artists' albums. Later that year, she signed her own recording contract, and her first album, "Whitney Houston," has been a phenomenon. It has sold in the multimillions and earlier this year earned her a Grammy as best female pop vocalist.

Currently, she's recording her followup album which could be released as this fall but probably will come out, according to a rep at her record company, early next year. She's also on the road touring, a tour that should continue through the fall. She had plans for a special for HBO but had to push back its taping in Paris in May. A new date has not yet been set.

Package designers: have pity!

By Jean Schaefer

My paring knife was missing. Again. Apparently I had repeated my absent-minded trick of wrapping it with the garbage and tossing it out. No problem. I would pick up a new paring knife when I stopped for groceries at my neighborhood supermarket.

The problem arose when I brought my new paring knife home. Have you ever tried to get at something packaged in a plastic "bubble" mounted on a rectangle of cardboard? I clawed at the tough plastic in an effort to free my knife. No luck. I tore at the cardboard. Still the knife eluded me. What I really needed was a paring knife to stab open the plastic bubble. A classic Catch-22.

I have been the victim of far too many thoughtless package designers. My trust in such words as "push in and tear flap back" has been destroyed, along with my fingernails, bits of my flesh and chips of my tooth enamel.

I think it's time package designers started thinking about me. Have those anonymous designers ever actually tried to "press in, pull up" on a box of laundry detergent? It takes a thumb with far greater muscle power than mine to "press in" on that sturdy cardboard with any significant results. Help, package designer!

Ready-to-eat cereal boxes are another problem. Many seem to come in only two sizes, Giant and Gargantuan. Some of these monsters are too tall to stand upright on a kitchen shelf. Many small families get mighty tired of breakfasting on Krinkled Wheaties morning after morning. How about a smaller package size so they can enjoy a little variety? Oh, I know you make individual-serving sized boxes, but those are too costly for the average household to use on a regular basis.

And while your cereal packages are back at the drawing board, could you solve another problem for me? Please do something about that wax-paper bag inside your cereal box. It does a fine job of keeping my Krackly Krunchies fresh. But must you add that infuriating little dab of glue that holds the bag upright?

Isn't there a better way? Everything's great until I've poured out the first bowl or two of cereal. Then, when I try to roll down the top of the bag in order to seal the rest, I invariably tear a hole in the side of the bag just where the glue holds it fast. I'll bet you do too, Mr. or Ms. Package Designer. Admit it. Pretty frustrating, isn't it?

Before we leave the cereal makers to wrestle with these problems, one more thing. My kids love the little tuck-in surprises you sometimes put in your cereals. But must they be at the very bottom of the wax-paper bag? Couldn't you slip them in at the side, between the box and the bag?

Have you ever watched a small boy mangle open a fresh box of ready-to-eat cereal, thrust his grubby fist to the bottom and grapple around for the sheet of stickers or toy he knows is in there somewhere? And does he ever actually eat a bowl full of that particular cereal? "Yuck," he cries as he runs off with his prize, leaving the ravished cereal box behind. "I hate Branny Buddies."

There are packages that open easily as promised. When they mean just that. You press and pull up. The box opens smoothly. But wait! Don't be fooled by this false display of sincerity. Because once opened, these packages can never be closed again.

Right at this moment, standing on my cupboard shelf in blowsy disarray, are boxes of barley, corn starch, rice, pancake flour and macaroni, all with box tops agape. No amount of coaxing will induce these unruly packages to "shut up."

Some types of packaging have endured for decades with no need for improvement. Toilet tissue comes to mind. A fine, no-nonsense packaging for a fine, no-nonsense product. Just rip off the flimsy paper or plastic wrapping, and you're all set. Nothing fancy.

A packaging award should be presented to the innovator of the twister seal, that ingenious little three-inch length of wire encased in a strip of plastic or paper. The twister seal is the greatest thing to come along since Uneeda Biscuit took the crackers out of the barrel and packed them in airtight containers. ■

Meet Mister Band Shell

Ralph Maccarone keeps 'em coming

Erica Wilbur, 2, looks over a poster Maccarone holds up before another performance at the Manchester Bicentennial Band Shell. Erica's mother, Teresa Wilbur, sits beside her.

Young musicians march around on the outdoor stage at Manchester Community College while the lawn nearby fills up with people, chairs and playpens. In the middle of all the activity, a youthful-looking white-haired man hurries about, smiling and talking.

"Here's Mr. Fowler. I've got to go over and talk to him," says Ralph Maccarone, who's known to many Manchester Bicentennial Band Shell regulars as "Mr. Band Shell."

After greeting his friends in the audience, Maccarone talks to Dave Fairbanks, to see if the sound system is set up. "I'm going to call up Mrs. Hostetter and Mrs. Lippincott to say a few words before the performance," he tells Fairbanks.

He runs backstage to check with the director of the Cadet Brass Band of Reims, France, and tells the director what Maccarone walks among the audience on the band shell lawn, greeting the people. Making new friends is a fringe benefit of running the band shell, he says.

Ralph Maccarone introduces every band shell performance. He often asks the audience to give him suggestions on other entertainers they would like to see in the future.

. . . Continued

introductions he'll make for the band.

"I'm ready to start if you are," Maccarone tells the director.

Then Maccarone hops up on stage as if he were 14 and delivers his usual band-shell greeting:

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. Welcome to the Manchester Bicentennial Band Shell."

Maccarone then spends the next few minutes extending thank yous to the sponsors of the show. The Moriarty Bros., and to the "two young ladies who have done all the work to get this program here."

But Patience Hostetter, who arranged all the housing for the French visitors, is as modest as Maccarone and passes the plaudits on to others. "I want to thank the real heroes, the ladies and gentlemen in the audience who opened their hearts and homes to these young people," she says.

Although no one seems to want to take credit for putting on the variety of entertainment that has appeared at the band shell for the past nine summers, it is clear when one attends any band-shell performance that the force and energy behind the endeavor is Maccarone. He seems to be everywhere at once.

The band shell has operated for nine summers. In its first year it offered 10 performances. This year the band shell's June-to-September schedule included 43 performances. On some nights more than 5,000 people show up.

Although it is difficult to get this 62-year-old retired junior high music teacher to talk about himself, his enthusiasm for talking about the band shell is unlimited.

"Everybody doesn't go to the ball games. They come to the band shell," he says without a trace of modesty.

"Every day is filled, with either a performance or a rain date," he says proudly, holding up the master band shell schedule.

He blocks out only four days—his wife, Jane's, birthday, and the dates when the three Sunset Sounds concerts are scheduled. He says he figures he doesn't want to compete with these events.

Although many performing groups are repeated year after year—some have been on the schedule for nine summers—Maccarone says he is always looking for new entertainment. This year there were 14 new shows, even though he cut back the total number of shows to 42.

Maccarone is often busiest when the band shell is empty. He spends many winter hours pursuing leads on potential band-shell performers. He gets suggestions for shows from other performers and people connected with music and arts organizations and from his audience. When he introduces each performance, he often asks the audience to tell him about groups within a 50-mile radius "with a price tag not too high."

He also gets calls directly from groups asking to perform at the shell. These are often smaller area performing groups who welcome the exposure, says Maccarone.

The July 11 performance by the French cadet brass band was an example of how the referrals happen.

Arlette Lippincott, a French teacher at Glastonbury High School, is a member of the Advisory Commission on American and Franco Foreign Affairs, which brought the French band to Connecticut.

"The first thing I thought of was Ralph's band shell," said Lippincott before the French band's performance in July. "This group is perfect for this," she commented as she watched the young people getting into formation for the performance.

But Maccarone's "job" involves far more than scheduling. He's also the one who knocks on the doors of local businessmen and corporation presidents, seeking donations for individual performances.

If he cannot get a complete sponsorship for an expensive show, he tries to get partial funds from several sources.

His pride was evident as he explained how he finally got a commitment from Southern New England Telephone Co. to fund half of the Orchestra of New England performance, the most expensive of the year at $3,500. The Connecticut Commission on the Arts paid another fraction of that performance, he said.

The money Maccarone gets from sponsors is for the performances only. "All the money goes to the performers. There is no profit, and in some cases we're losing," Maccarone says.

Maccarone had to turn down one group that wanted to perform this year because its price tag was too high.

Maccarone has also learned a lot about budgeting since the summer of 1977 when the band shell's budget was at absolute zero. Last year the band shell's budget was $33,457. He has learned how to juggle the funds to pay for the ongoing expenses, such as $15,000 for advertising, programs, moving and tuning the piano; more than $2,600 for security officers; $1,000 for sound equipment; and even $700 to Roto-Rooter for the portable toilets behind the shell.

The band shell idea actually started with a suggestion to Maccarone from Town Manager Robert Weiss to do something on the local level as a permanent living memorial for the nation's Bicentennial celebration in 1976. Maccarone had been involved in the town's successful Sesquicentennial celebration in 1975, so Weiss asked him to form a Bicentennial Committee.

"I guess he asked me because I was involved in music," says Maccarone, a veteran of 33 years of music teaching who has played and performed in many musical groups.

Maccarone does not take credit for the band shell idea. "Ken Morgester, an area big band leader, came up with the idea and called me up," he says.

"It was a lot of talking to a lot of different people." What he doesn't say is that he probably did most of the talking.

Maccarone admits that it's not all rosy running the band shell. "I knew last year we had to cut back." He says he has started to feel burnout during the last couple of years because of the lack of volunteers.

Continued . . .

Crowds can vary from a few dozen to 5,000 at the band shell.

Maccarone sits poised with his camera in hand on the edge of the band shell stage during a performance of the U.S. Military Academy Concert Band. Maccarone often takes photographs during performances.

Backstage at the band shell, Maccarone shows Catherine Casalino, 5, left, of 512 E. Center St., and Jessica Monty, 8, of Bolton, how the Bennington Puppets work at a July 16 performance.

... Continued

He does have a loyal corps of workers he can rely on weekly, such as Dave Fairbanks, who arrives 45 minutes before each performance to set up the sound system. But there are simply not enough of them. In fact, one of the reasons he had to cut down on the number of performances this year was because of the lack of volunteers, he says.

Perhaps to bolster his spirits, the band shell corporation recently voted him a $3,000 yearly stipend.

Weather can be Maccarone's worst enemy.

"If the weather forecaster is wrong, I'm in trouble," Maccarone says, pulling out the long list of people he has to call in case of rain. But the task does not seem to faze him.

He recalls one performance that went on during the rain, when all 50 people who showed up went up on stage with the performers and became part of the program.

When performances "bomb" because of the weather, Maccarone says he consoles himself that it was the weather. But betting on the audience's response to performances is always risky. Size of the audiences at the band shell have ranged from 400 to 5,600, Maccarone says.

"No program has embarrassed me," he says. If a program isn't well received, Maccarone says there are choices to be made. "We always have the option of not getting it next year."

Despite all the pitfalls of running the band shell operations, Maccarone clearly loves the job.

"I enjoy it because people show up," he says, walking through the growing crowd before the cadet band performance.

He says he has no problems with crowd control. The band shell audience, he says, "shows its appreciation by not littering."

Despite the demands of the band shell operation, Maccarone also directs the choir and sings at the masses at St. James Church, where his wife is organist. For relaxation, he has a bi-weekly golf game with a regular foursome during the summer and even has time to putter in the garden and babysit for his grandchildren.

"There is never a dull moment," says the ever-smiling Maccarone, watching as the cadet band show gets under way. ■

'The Fly' is a fine gross out

By Lee Siegel

"The Fly" may be the most disgusting well-made movie of the summer, with a series of gross-out scenes that are bound to induce nausea in some viewers.

The horror of director David Cronenberg's remake is of a magnitude greater than the original 1958 sci-fi film. The production values are impressive, except for a few surprisingly stupid lines in the otherwise witty script by Cronenberg and Charles Edward Pogue.

But the special effects wizards who made "The Fly" simply overwhelm the audience, and the film's attributes, with gruesome scenes of an inside-out baboon, a bloody arm-wrestling contest, an incredibly tacky abortion and amazingly repulsive insect regeneration.

Jeff Goldblum uses his usual humor and sensitivity to portray maverick scientist Seth Brundle.

Lee Siegel writes on entertainment for the Associated Press.

Cinema Review

He, who has developed a new method of transportation in which a person, animal or object is broken into atoms, zapped to a new location and then reconstituted.

But when Brundle tries teleporting himself, there's a fly in the teletop, and their molecules get mixed up. Our hero soon becomes obsessed with frequent sex and sugar consumption, grows strange hair and develops an increasingly nasty complexion.

This is disturbing, of course, to science reporter Veronica Quaife (Geena Davis), who abandoned her editor-lover (John Getz) and her journalistic objectivity to fall in love with Brundle during his pre-fly days.

Brundle's gradual transformation is awesome to behold. "The Fly" is quite thrilling to anyone who can tolerate the gristly parts. However, Cronenberg's camera finds it necessary to linger on one particularly nasty scene of a hand being dissolved by an acid-like substance. Viewers then are treated to the same performance by the victim's foot.

If you see "The Fly," do so on an empty stomach or you may regret it.

Meanwhile, where's the Raid? A 20th Century-Fox release produced by Stuart Sorenfeld, "The Fly" is rated R. Running time: 100 minutes. ■

Zeffirelli defends classics

By Bob Thomas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "These are monumental works and they need to be kept alive," says filmmaker Franco Zeffirelli. "I would like to be able to pass them along to the next generation, which, I hope, will not be as materialistic as this one."

The multi-talented Italian was explaining why he, alone among world-class directors, has devoted much of his career to filming classics such as "Romeo and Juliet," "The Taming of the Shrew," "La Traviata" and now Verdi's "Otello," starring Placido Domingo, Katia Ricciarelli and Justino Diaz.

Not that he has neglected more popular entertainments, as witness "The Champ" (Jon Voight, Ricky Schroder) "Endless Love" (Brooke Shields) and the TV mini-series "Jesus of Nazareth." Zeffirelli was here for test screenings of "Otello," which Cannon Films is releasing in September.

"I showed it to a young audience, and I was amazed by the reaction," the director reported. "They were absolutely shattered by the story; one kid was even sobbing. Most of them didn't even know of 'Otello.' I feel proud to be one of the few left to revive works of the past. These kids have grown up on 'The Planet of the Apes.' They deserve something better."

Zeffirelli, 63, can be as dramatic as his films, and he observed that "Otello" is "the turning point, the end of an era for me. It combines all the fields I have worked in: opera, theater and film. It was one of the last plays for Shakespeare. It was one of the last operas for Verdi. I hope it is not the last for me, but I feel that it is an art work of my maturity."

Expectably, Zeffirelli has scant regard for today's music ("People have been banged on the head by the same music for 35 years") and movies ("trashy little stories that make $6 million on the first weekend with 1,800 prints — that's all they care about").

He also deploras the Hollywood companies: "They make money and invest in real estate; they don't put it back into the movie business. What happened to MGM is a shame to civilization. They had everything at that studio, everything that was needed to make films. Now you couldn't make a costume picture there." He referred to the purchase of MGM by cable TV pioneer Ted Turner, who kept the film library and sold off the studio and other assets.

With "Otello," Zeffirelli is dealing with a new breed of movie tycoon, Menahem Golan and Yoram Globus, the free-wheeling operators of Cannon Films. The opera contrasts with their usual product, relying heavily on the macho doings of Sylvester Stallone, Chuck Norris and Charles Bronson.

"Cannon didn't take my film to make money, but to broaden their scope," said Zeffirelli. "In the end, they will show a profit, because 'Otello' will be a perennial." He reported the cost at $10 million — "a miracle because it looks like $25 million on the screen."

Zeffirelli has recently completed his autobiography. While it may not tell all — "I must leave something to my biographers" — it should be a remarkable account of an amazingly varied life and career. ■

Film capsules

Aliens (R) — Sigourney Weaver, Carrie Henn, Paul Reiser, Michael Biehn (Thriller) Even if you try and follow the plot — Warrant Officer Ripley, after a 57-year nap in outer space, goes back into combat with those slimy extraterrestrials — you'll soon tire from clutching your seat in fear. This film continues the screams that were instigated by 1979's "Alien." Director James Cameron has created perfect summer fodder to keep us hoarse for days, but Weaver is a problem. Running around in her underwear playing Ramboette, she needs to hone her acting. Luckily, the success of "Aliens" rests on the special effects, and not Weaver's histrionics. Grade: B-plus.

Malcolm (PG-13) Colin Friels, John Hargreaves, Lindy Davies (Comedy) This Australian comedy features a childlike adult character named Malcolm, whose mechanical wizardry sharply contrasts with his social maturity. He builds an array of magnificent gadgets, including a car that splits in two (and keeps on running) and cardboard scale models of Australian trams. But what excitement develops when Malcolm rents a room to a humbling bank robber, played with verve by John Hargreaves! Colin Friels brings tenderness and an ingenuity to Malcolm. The music, by the Penguin Cafe Orchestra, is the finest film accompaniment in many seasons. Grade: B-plus.

Vamp (R) — Chris Makepeace, Sandy Baron, Robert Rusler, Dedee Pfaffler, Grace Jones (Horror Drama) "I wanted the film to be funny," says producer Donald Borchers. "But always within the confines of a situation based in reality." Borchers had failed. This plotless exercise in inanity features: a hissing Grace Jones covered by nothing but breast coils and body paint (courtesy of Keith Haring); dialogue fit only for the dead; and stale humor. Imagine the scripts that Hollywood rejects! Without a doubt, the worst film of the year. Grade: F-minus.

About Last Night ... (R) — Rob Lowe, Demi Moore, James Belushi, Elizabeth Perkins (Drama) What seems like a one-night stand — two Yuppies meet in a bar, then race home to display their ample sexual gymnastics — is actually a poignant tale. This couple wants to be in love, despite interference by friends who insist commitment is an '80s faux pas. Ed Zwick has made a self-assured feature film debut, but what makes the film real is the acting. Lowe sheds in his Brat Packer image and turns in an unabashed performance, but Demi Moore steals the film. Baring her soul (when not baring her breasts), Moore proves that the talents she exhibited in "St. Elmo's Fire" were not fluke. Grade: B.

At Close Range (R) — Sean Penn, Christopher Walken, Mary Stuart Masterson (Drama) Sean Penn lives in the rural South with his tired grandmother, broken-down mother and foolish brother. Then one day, dad comes back to town — with money, flashy cars and the promise of success. But there is one small problem: Dad is a thief. Walken infuses his role with a delicious evil, and Penn, who must make some rather brutal decisions, has never been better. The last 20 minutes are devastating. Not for the entire family. Grade: B.

Big Trouble in Little China (PG-13) — Kurt Russell, Kim Cattrall, Dennis Dun, James Hong, Victor Wong (Comedy Adventure) Twentieth Century-Fox bills this as a "mystical action adventure comedy kung-fu monster ghost story." Sounds like trouble? You bet. Russell plays pig salesman Jack Burton who, caught among underworld Chinatown ghosts, battles creatures with such forbidding names as The Sewer Monster, One Ear and Neddies. There are special effects, inane dialogue and more special effects. John Carpenter has too much to work with here; he compensates by directing with a manic pace. If there was more focus — and less frenzy — "Big Trouble" would have been a big, fun film. Grade: C.

Club Paradise (PG-13) — Robin Williams, Peter O'Toole, Rick Moranis, Jimmy Cliff (Comedy) This is a Club Med for the big boys: Dope, drink, women donning and doffing their bikinis. This is also bad comedy. Director Harold Ramis ("Caddyshack") fails to ignite this tale of Chicago fireman Jack Moniker who, suffering from burnout, invests his pension and disability money into rejuvenating a tacky island colony into a Garden of Eden. What could have been a funny movie is simply a bland stretch of amusing one-liners and many unfunny moments. Williams' vapid character forces him to act manic, and '80s icon Twiggy graces the landscape in a thankless role. Grade: C.

MTV making its 5th a bash

By Ethlie Ann Vare

MTV is pulling out all the stops for its fifth anniversary edition of the Video Music Awards, airing Friday at 9 p.m. from New York and Los Angeles. Performers scheduled to appear during the satellite-linked broadcast include Tina Turner, Whitney Houston, Mr. Mister, Genesis, the Monkees, Simply Red, Van Halen and the Hooters. Presenters will include "Miami Vice" hunk Don Johnson, horror hunkette Elvira, Rod Stewart, the Bangles, Motley Crue and comedian Steven Wright.

The nominees for Video of the Year — weeded out from 717 entries in three separate rounds of voting by industry professionals — are: "Take On Me" (a-Ha), "Money for Nothing" (Dire Straits), "Cry" (Godley and Creme), "Addicted to Love" (Robert Palmer) and "Road to Nowhere" (Talking Heads).

Viacom, the TV distribution giant that recently bought MTV Networks, will be syndicating the mega-event and a pre-awards special starring Huey Lewis to non-cable stations.

Director Taylor Hackford ("Against All Odds," "White Nights") is reportedly working Ethlie Ann Vare tunes in to rock for Newspaper Enterprise Association.

Video Beat

on a film biography of '50s rocker Ritchie Valens, to be titled after the late singer's best-known tune, "La Bamba." Rumored to be appearing in the film as other deceased rock idols are Marshall Crenshaw as Buddy Holly, Klique's Howard Huntsberry as Jackie Wilson, and — in an unusual bit of casting — Brian Setzer as the Big Bopper. (The Big Bopper, aka J. P. Richardson, was dark-haired and rotund. The Stray Cats' Setzer is blond and skinny).

Alison Moyet flew from her home in England to work up some tunes with singer/songwriter Dan Hartman at his place in Connecticut. The first-time collaboration went well, according to Hartman, but for one thing: Miss Moyet brought her new baby along. "We had to rent a high chair," he laughed.

The recent super-stardom of John Cougar Mellencamp has led to the re-release of his early, unsuccessful album "Chestnut Street Incident," made when Mellencamp was still just plain Cougar and when he was trying to release like a young David Bowie (with Springsteen overtones). Mellencamp himself was not overly fond of the record, which features covers of the Lovin' Spoonful's "Do You Believe in Magic" and Roy Orbison's "Pretty Woman," along with one track ("The Kid Inside"), which has never been available in America until now.

You see a lot of press releases announcing that so-and-so has kicked off a new tour; seldom do you see one crowing that a band has been kicked off a tour. But that's the information that Island Records sent around about its new group Blue in Heaven.

IRS Records came up with an unusual gimmick to promote the new self-titled single by American Girls. They've printed the bandmates' home phone numbers on the record sleeve. Well, not exactly their home phone numbers — dialers are connected to answering machines and get a taped response from one of the musicians. ■

17 The Curious Shopper

Processed cheese

It's just a matter of taste

By Sonja Heinze

Would you explain the difference between processed cheese and natural cheese, and why processed cheese is not good in the diet? Emily Winnewisser, Stamford, Conn.

Basically, there's nothing wrong with eating processed cheese as part of one's diet. It's a dairy food and therefore nutritious. Many small children won't eat any other kind of cheese. It doesn't have much taste and is often pre-sliced or in a jar or even a tube.

Processed cheese is simply that—cheese which has been put through a process. Several natural cheeses are blended together with other ingredients including vegetable oils, butter, emulsifiers, artificial preservatives and flavorings, and then blended into a plastic mass.

On the other hand, natural, unprocessed cheeses are made directly from milk and treated by a variety of age-old methods, temperature and humidity controls. Nothing is added except perhaps some coloring.

Processed cheese is usually the first thing to go when one begins to develop a sense of taste. In an early edition of "Joy of Cooking" by Rombauer and Becker, the authors declare processed cheeses to be the triumph of technology over conscience.

"Processed cheeses," they state, "are a convenience to a desensitized housewife—to say nothing of a profit-minded manufacturer. If you are willing to condone the gummy texture and the insipid taste of processed cheeses, you are still advised to read the list of ingredients on the package."

In the "Pocket Guide to Cheese," author Sandy Carr states, "Processed cheese is virtually indestructible, a measure perhaps of its awfulness."

TANNIC ACID IN BEER
 I understand that beer contains tannic acid. Isn't this the stuff that you use to tan leather?

There is a protein material in beer which, if not removed during the brewing process, will result in a cloudy beer that has a tendency to gush or overflow when the bottle or can is opened. Therefore a highly purified form of tannic acid, which is extracted from the leaves of the sumac plant, is added to beer. It reacts to the protein, causing it to settle out. Nearly all of the tannic acid is removed from the beer when it settles down.

If any remains, it is only a trace, about one part per million. Another way to comprehend one part per million would be to think of one minute to two years, or one cent in $10,000.

Occurring naturally in beer, without any help from man, are formaldehyde and nitrosamines, about 700 parts per billion in each beer. To visualize this, imagine 700 drops of vermouth in 500 barrels of gin.

CHLORINATOR HARMING LAWN CHAIRS?
 I have an in-ground swimming pool in which I use Olin HTH dry chlorinator granules. I would like to know if the chlorine, when it evaporates, could possibly be eating up the webbing on my lawn chairs. I find that I have to replace them every year, or two years at the most. Steve Froncek, Throop, Pa.

S.J. Furs, a technical representative from the Olin Research Center advises that the dry chlorinator does not evaporate. Under certain conditions, such as low pool pH, or when the water temperature is very warm, some chlorine can dissipate. This means that it's sort of scattered around. "We do not believe," writes Furs, "that this is the cause of lawn chair webbing degradation."

If the chairs are exposed to intense and long hours of daily sunlight, Olin thinks that ultraviolet radiation may be a key cause of the webbing deterioration. It may be causing embrittlement and fading of the material. The company suggests that you provide some shade for the lawn chairs or store them when not in use.

When households join

The Johnsons pooled their resources

By Susan Plesse

When Ralph Johnson bought the tidy stone-front ranch on Brookfield Street 12 years ago, the owner told him it was "a house full of love." That statement turned out to be prophetic.

Just nine months later, Johnson, a widower, brought a new bride home, a widow he met on a Caribbean cruise. Together they have furnished the house in a comfortable arrangement, proving that it is, indeed, possible to combine households in a way complimentary to both. Johnson's wife, Adrienne, is quick to point out that the home is neither large nor expensive. A six-room ranch with about 1,500 square feet, it was built in 1948 by the late George Fish. A deeply sloping roof tucked under massive trees, fieldstone front and clean blue-and-white trim make it look like a cottage one might stumble upon in the woods.

The decor inside is traditional. The large living room is furnished with a beige-print sofa and several upholstered easy chairs. An Anglo-Persian carpet in beige, rust, and blue tones covers the floor.

The carpet was one of his acquisitions — Johnson bought it from the former owner's wife. It was manufactured, he says, to celebrate the 100th anniversary of General Electric. If one looks carefully, it is possible to pick out the stylized image of a light bulb woven into the pattern of the carpet.

The focal point of the room is the fireplace, topped with wooden mantle and decorated with a wooden Canada goose.

The goose is one of dozens of birds hand carved and painted by Johnson as a hobby. On the hearth is an intricately painted tin box, sent to Adrienne from Germany.

A formal dining room is just in back of the living room. Wallpaper in an aqua, rust and deep blue is echoed in matching drapes that frame a graceful bay window. African violets drink in sun from the deep sill. A cherry dining table and matching captain's chairs complement an antique dresser Adrienne uses for serving and storing linens.

"It was in the attic," she says. "He said, 'we don't have room for it.'" But her wishes prevailed, and "now makes it."

A sunporch on the back of the house was recently remodeled. "I gutted the whole thing, insulated it and put new sheetrock inside," Johnson says. The improvements make the room usable "almost through the winter," he notes.

On a shelf above the windows, Johnson, retired from Arrow-Hart, showcases many more of his carved birds. There are geese, as well as a perfectly fashioned blue jay, a cardinal and a bluebird perched on a dogwood branch.

Johnson uses bass wood for his creations, and the average bird may take him as long as 80 hours. He works in his basement wood shop.

The Johnsons are proudest of their newly remodeled kitchen. The cabinets are original, the color of maize, and the builder was able to copy the color and style of the originals almost perfectly. A round table in the center of the kitchen is surrounded with chairs Johnson caned himself.

The Johnsons have a master bedroom and guest room. The master bedroom is done in shades of blue. White sheer curtains are topped with fine European style lace valances.

The crocheted "popcorn" bedspread was handmade by Johnson's former mother-in-law in 1932. The older woman gave it to the newlyweds when they were married.

Another nice touch is a baby shawl Adrienne uses as a cover for a round occasional table set in the corner of the room. She is mother of four, grandmother of 10 and great-grandmother of five. He has no children.

"Isn't he lucky? He's got 'em all raised," Adrienne jokes. Members of her family are frequent visitors.

In fact, it was the anticipated gatherings of the clan that spurred Johnson to another of his projects — a new bath.

"With family coming we needed another bath," he says. "So I took a walk-in closet and made a half bath in the master bedroom." He was able to do all the work himself.

Perhaps Johnson is most gratified by the work he has done outside, in his garden. Late summer finds flower beds crammed with color — pink impatiens, purple phlox, scarlet cockscomb. He just completed a stone fountain at one end of the garden, a pretty focal point. A stone cherub poses at the fountain.

In fact, visitors to the neighborhood often stop, when he is outside working, Adrienne says, to compliment him on his gardens. Sometimes the impromptu conversations are followed by an invitation to see the rest of the house. "I say, 'come on in.' We've been giving tours," Adrienne says, laughing. ■

Erection difficulties follow accident

Head-injury experts report that a loss of libido is common

By June M. Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am a 39-year-old male and I have had trouble with my sex life for about 10 years. Ten years ago I was in a car accident, had brain damage (aphasia), was in a coma for 2 1/2 months and my right side was paralyzed. I can still feel a distinct difference between my right and left sides. Now I have trouble getting and keeping an erection and coming to climax. I have no feeling in my penis and am hardly ever in the mood for sex. I can't even masturbate. I can only have intercourse when my partner touches my penis or when we have oral sex. I have been to four urologists, two psychologists and now am seeing a psychiatrist. They say it is a result of the accident, but I disagree. I took Valium and Inderal for 2 1/2 years, and then Librium and Inderal for another 2 1/2 years. Could the drugs have caused my trouble?

DEAR READER: Both Librium and Valium are anti-anxiety drugs and have been linked to decreased ejaculatory ability in some cases. Inderal, a drug used to treat hypertension and heart disease, has been linked to decreased desire in a few cases and to decreased erectile ability, which may affect as many as 28 percent of patients. You do not say whether you still take these drugs; however, you must not stop taking them without the advice of a qualified physician. Any sexual side effects of these drugs are thought to be reversible by reducing or eliminating the drug or by changing to some other medication. In other words, these drugs are not thought to cause permanent dysfunctions. However, you should not automatically reject your physicians' opinion that your sexual difficulties are related to your accident. Experts in the field of head injuries report that a loss of libido — a lack of interest in sex — is not unusual, especially for those who are in a coma for six or more hours. One study of head-injured patients reported that erection problems, lowered sexual desire and sexual depression were common. The brain is the most wife and I are in our 70s and have been married for 53 years. We still have sexual activity. Recently I read about a woman's clitoris and what an important part it is supposed to be in the sex act. I was unaware of this organ and am unsure as to its location. My wife is reluctant to find out more about this, as she says she is probably too old to reap any benefits. What is this area, and are we too old?

crucial sexual organ. If the sexual signals are disrupted or scrambled, desire and genital functioning can be altered. It is not unusual for any man to require direct stimulation of the genitals to achieve an erection. Many 39-year-old males who are not head-injured require more physical and psychological stimulation to obtain and keep erections than they needed when they were younger.

Many physical and psychological factors could be involved, so ask your psychiatrist to recommend a clinic that specializes in assessing male sexual dysfunctions. You might be experiencing the effects of a combination of physical, pharmacological and psychological factors, and a team of specialists with a combination of expertise might be able to tailor a treatment program to your needs.

Tubes tied

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I had my tubes tied when my daughter was born. Since then, I have two periods a month. I bleed heavily for six or seven days, and 17 days later I start again. In addition, my genitals ache if I'm on my feet for even just long enough to wash dishes. Could this be normal for me?

DEAR READER: Only a physician can answer your questions, after a thorough examination. Make an appointment with a gynecologist immediately.

Although a few women do report having menstrual problems after a tubal ligation, the vast majority do not have changes in their menstrual patterns.

Not too old

DEAR DR. REINISCH: My

“ You should not automatically reject your physicians' opinion that your sexual difficulties are related to your accident. Experts in the field of head injuries report that a loss of libido — a lack of interest in sex — is not unusual, especially for those who are in a coma for six or more hours. ”

DEAR READER: Very little, although researchers and law-enforcement officials estimate that between 500 and 1,000 people, most of them young men, die from this activity each year.

Sexual asphyxia (deliberately reducing the amount of oxygen going to the brain — a temporary suffocation) is very dangerous and can cause brain damage and death. It is rumored to enhance or gasm, but this effect has never been verified by researchers.

This behavior usually involves masturbation and often includes use of visual materials or dressing in clothing related to the person's fantasy. Methods of depriving oneself of oxygen include hanging by ropes or chains, passing electrical current through the body and inhaling toxic gases or chemicals.

One study of 132 cases of death caused by this practice found that victims constructed elaborate escape mechanisms that failed when the individual miscalculated the speed and the effects of the suffocation.

Most victims are found by family members, who are devastated by the loss, embarrassed by the sexual activities surrounding the death and shocked because the victim did not act suicidal or depressed.

If you suspect that this behavior is occurring, arrange for the individual to receive counseling from a sex therapist trained to work with young people and their sensitive sexual issues, or from a therapist who is familiar with sexual problems of adolescents.

Alcohol 'helps'

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I have read many times that alcohol causes sexual dysfunction, decreases arousal and hampers erection. My problem is the opposite.

My 42-year-old husband claims that his sexual drive has disappeared completely. We go for weeks or months without any sexual intimacy, even hugging and kissing. But when he's very intoxicated (which is seldom), he becomes a fantastic lover! I find myself either wishing he would get drunk or daydreaming about having an affair. He's a good husband and father, but I don't want to live the next 20 years with no intimacy — or is it unrealistic to think that sexual love can go on in marriage?

DEAR READER: Alcohol relaxes sexual inhibitions in some people, so that they feel freer to express sexual desire and engage in sexual activity. However, for the vast majority of people, alcohol has a depressant effect on the physical aspects of sexual functioning.

Research has shown that some couples remain sexually active into their 80s and 90s. Others cease having intercourse because of health or medication effects, but still share love, affection and manual and oral stimulation to orgasm.

It will take a medical and perhaps a psychological evaluation to evaluate your husband's situation. Call the sex-dysfunctions clinic at the nearest medical school or large hospital and make a joint appointment for both of you at the same time.

If he refuses to go, keep the appointment yourself so that you can get some support in dealing with this situation. In fact, your going alone may encourage him to accompany you later. ■

Send questions to Dr. Reinisch in care of The Kinsey Report, P.O. Box 48, Bloomington, Ind. 47402. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest may be discussed in future columns.

Deadly practice

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I work at a juvenile detention center. Some of the teenage males are practicing oxygen deprivation, which I am told is a popular behavior. Is there any research on this topic?

“ The brain is the most crucial sexual organ. If the sexual signals are disrupted or scrambled, desire and genital functioning can be altered. ”

Quest for suds changes history

By Ted Larsen

If it hadn't been for a crucial shortage of beer, the early history of this country might have been very different. As most school kids know, the Pilgrims were headed for Virginia, but a lack of supplies changed that plan, and their direction, toward the Massachusetts Bay Colonies.

Students are generally led to believe the vittles lacking in the Mayflower galley were the prosaic but important items: flour, beans and pork.

Well, the truth reads clear in this passage from a Puritan chronicler: "We could not now take time for further search or consideration, our victuals being spent, especially our beer." Those sin-damning Big Hats turned for Plymouth Rock because they were out of suds! Ever since, the quest for quaffage has been No. 1 on the side-trip excuse list.

Beer and Western civilization do go hand in hand, with evidence of Babylonian brew at least 8,000 years ago. The ancient Egyptians, Chinese and Indians all made beer, as did the Peruvian Incas, here in the West.

Around the year 750 A.D. someone threw hops into a vat, giving beer its now-characteristic bitterness. The word itself stems from the Latin, "bibere," "to drink," by way of the Middle English, "bere."

The Dutch get credit for the first American breweries in New Amsterdam in 1612 and 1632, prior production being limited to small batches of home-brew. Beer was an entirely respectable beverage, enjoyed by all members of the family, even children. Men of status such as William Penn, Jefferson, Madison and Adams all had interests in breweries. Malt-loving George Washington even had his own at Mount Vernon.

Early beers must have been rather unusual, with their dizzying array of ingredients such as corn, pumpkins, saffras and pine. By the Revolution, American beer tastes had settled down to a recognizable few varieties, all heavy and bitter, in the English tradition.

Lighter, more modern brews would await the arrival of German immigrants to Philadelphia in the 1840s, with their "lager" and "Pilsner" recipes. At first dismissed as "a woman's drink," these are the styles that have survived until today. Recall how the Pilgrims had to build a new nation for their beer. How far we've come! Here's an American classic updated for the '80s. A perfect companion for a leisurely beach picnic.

COLESLAW WITH BEER CELERY DRESSING
 1/2 cup mayonnaise
 1/2 cup light beer
 1/4 cup sour cream
 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
 1 tablespoon honey
 2 tablespoons onion, finely minced
 6 cups white cabbage, shredded
 3 cups red cabbage, shredded
 1 teaspoon celery seeds
 salt
 pepper

To make dressing, whisk together mayonnaise, beer, sour cream, vinegar, honey and onion. In a large serving bowl toss together cabbages and celery seeds. Pour the dressing over mixture and season with salt and pepper to taste. Refrigerate well before serving. Serves 6.

HINTS

Like most chilled salads, this one tastes much better made a day ahead.

Those new non-alcoholic beers can be substituted for the traditional variety.

There is no beating fresh-made mayonnaise. Make yours by placing in a blender 1 egg, 5 teaspoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard, 1/4 teaspoon white pepper. With blender running, slowly add 1 cup vegetable oil in a stream, until thick and creamy. Makes 1 cup.

Talk about all-American, maybe even more so than apple pie. Try these yummy mouthfuls on your guests.

ONION RINGS, MUSTARD BEER BATTER
 2 large Bermuda onions, sliced thick
 1 cup flour
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon black pepper, fresh ground
 3 tablespoons prepared yellow mustard
 1 cup lager beer
 vegetable oil

Those sin-damning Pilgrims changed the course of history and turned for Plymouth Rock because they were out of beer!

Separate onion slices and soak in ice water for 20 minutes. Preheat 4 inches oil in deep fryer to 375F. While rings are in water and oil is heating, make batter. Whisk together dry ingredients and mustard. Slowly add beer, whisking constantly until batter is smooth.

Dry onion rings and dip in batter. Coat well and place on a cake rack, allowing excess to drip off. Place small batches in preheated deep fryer and cook until golden brown, approximately 3 minutes. Drain on paper towels and lightly salt, if desired. Serves 4.

Here's a recipe that would make Emma Lazarus grin. It's the best of Northern Italian and German cuisine. No wretched refuse here!

SHRIMP & SCALLOP FETTUCCINE, MUNICH STYLE
 1 pound fettuccine noodles
 1 cup scallions, sliced (including green tops)
 1/2 cup mushrooms, thinly sliced
 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
 1 cup bay scallops (about 1/2 pound)
 1/2 cup buttermilk
 1/2 cup heavy cream
 1/2 beer
 1/2 bay leaf
 1/2 cup shrimp, cooked
 3 tablespoons fresh

parsley, minced
 salt
 pepper
 1/4 cup Parmesan cheese, grated

Cook fettuccine noodles as per maker's directions, or to taste. Melt butter in a large saute pan. Cook scallions and mushrooms over high heat, until all liquid is evaporated. Add scallops and cook for about 90 seconds, or until scallops have just firm.

Add all other ingredients except cheese and toss well, until heated through and beer stops foaming. Season with salt and pepper, to taste. Remove bay leaf and serve. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. ■

Sho-Gun

By Sondra Astor Stave

Sho-Gun, located in the Glen Lochen Mall in Glastonbury, is the only authentic Japanese restaurant in the Greater Hartford area. Situated in the mall's lower restaurant area, it replaced a Chinese eatery. The basic red decor remains, augmented by Japanese screens.

A waitress in elaborate and colorful kimono showed us to a table set with a white paper covering, cloth napkins and disposable chopsticks. The absence of knives and forks underlines the attempt to bring Japanese cuisine to Connecticut in as pure a state as possible.

Although it is not noted on the menu, a salad and one of the two miso (bean paste) based soups is included in the price of the entrees. While the texture of the aka-miso (red bean paste) was pleasant, the flavoring was perhaps excessively mild.

The appetizer choices are limited to tempura (batter-fried vegetables and fish), sushi (raw fish, vegetable and rice rolls) and sashimi (chunks of raw fish). Since we intended to have the latter two as entrees, we opted for the combination tempura as a starter.

We were most surprised at the diminutive portion considering the $8.95 price tag. Artfully arranged on a plate were one piece each of shrimp, fish, sweet potato, broccoli, onion, celery and mushroom. While the batter was light, the dish did not have the fresh taste that can make tempura a delight. It was a poor value.

Main dish portions, on the other hand, are extremely large and generally quite good. Teriyaki can be enjoyed either as beef, chicken or shrimp. A large chicken breast was well marinated and attractively served in a partitioned, lacquered box that also included rice, salad and Japanese pickles. The salad was a veritable garden of fresh vegetables served with a creamy mustard dressing. The relishes included spinach with sesame seeds and marinated carrots and celery.

Shabu-shabu gets its name from the sound that the food makes as it cooks in a broth on the table. Many cuisines have some kind of hotpot and this is the Japanese version.

In Sho-Gun's presentation, a large platter is totally covered with huge wedges of celery, cabbage, slices of onion, chunks of tofu and a generous portion of thinly sliced raw steak on a bed of thick noodles. Only the excessive section of fat on the meat could be faulted.

Sho-Gun has a sushi bar where sushi and/or sashimi can be ordered either by the piece, as an appetizer or entree. We decided to try the moriwase plate which combines both the sushi (slices of raw fish with seasoned rice) and the sashimi (slices of raw fish served with pickled ginger and wasabi, a fiery hot Japanese horseradish).

Few Westerners appear to have neutral feelings about eating raw fish — we either love it or we hate it. For those who are partisans, and I count myself in that number, all would agree that the fish must be absolutely fresh.

The raw fish served at Sho-Gun passed the test. Tuna, salmon, mackerel, octopus or any of the other denizens of the deep that we tried were all excellent. The main dish portion included eight large sushi and more than a dozen pieces of sashimi, easily enough for the largest appetites. These raw seafood dishes will be brought to you in the dining room. If you do not choose to sit at the lacquered bar.

Also on the menu are sukiyaki (meat and vegetables cooked in a wok), tonkatsu (a deep fried, crumb-covered pork cutlet) and nabemono, another dish cooked tableside.

Desserts are limited to ice cream and a sweet stiff bean paste called yo-kan. The coconut ice cream had a fresh taste which one cannot always find.

Main dishes range from $9.50 to $16.60 with beef dishes generally at the upper end. Considering the size of the portions, the main dishes, in comparison to the tempura appetizer, were reasonably priced.

Sho-Gun is an appropriate destination for those who seek a relatively authentic Japanese eating experience. But because of the nature of the ingredients, the final bill is comparatively high for a meal that in total lacks a festive or elegant touch. ■

How to pick the number one newspaper in a multiple paper town.

In a town like Manchester, you might as well start with readership. In a most recent survey conducted by First Market Research of Boston, the Manchester Herald holds the overall local readership lead. According to the study, the Manchester Herald is the leader for local news, local happenings and local sports, with three quarters of the readers saying the coverage is the most extensive.

Next, the number one newspaper should provide readers with a depth of information needed to make valued and reasonable decisions regarding key local issues that may impact on their lives today, or in the future. Well that same study shows that the Manchester Herald is rated quite highly in terms of space devoted to selected issues in its Opinion pages. Nearly eight in ten readers find that the space devoted to viewpoints on local issues to be more than sufficient in explaining the issues.

The number one newspaper should also provide a service to its subscribers. The Manchester Herald is found to be a good community newspaper by over nine in ten readers, with over one third rating it as very good. The Manchester Herald is also a very effective advertising tool for reaching the Manchester Area public and it is preferred over most other forms of printed advertising.

Caring about its readers should also be a priority with the number one newspaper. The Manchester Herald feels it is their responsibility to listen to what residents in Manchester have to say. They want to hear about readers views on the news — what they think is important, what should go into the paper and what shouldn't. They're especially interested in hearing any comments you may have about the service you get from the Herald. They guarantee prompt delivery and courteous, efficient service on all billing matters. If you're not satisfied, they want to know about it.

If you're still trying to figure out which is the number one newspaper in Manchester, the facts are obvious. Your choice will be the same paper more and more readers in Manchester choose every day. The Manchester Herald — your voice in Manchester.
