Ticket fear costs sleep and a home

Blind woman moves over dog complaint

By George Lovins
Herald Reporter

For 69-year-old Gertrude DeLeo, the choice came down to moving from her Falkner Drive home of 31 years or risking a $40 fine and the loss of her seeing eye dog and three others who keeps as pets.

After two or three days of worrying over a complaint by a neighbor to the Manchester dog warden about the barking of one dog, during which she ate little and slept even less, DeLeo made her decision. She would sell her home and move to Vernon.

"I just had to do something. I was literally sick," she said in an interview with the Manchester Herald this morning. DeLeo, a retired teacher who lives alone with her four dogs, said she is upset and angry with the town for not treating her cordially and fairly.

"If they'd only give me a chance to talk to (the complainant), but it was all 'You don't have any rights in the world,'" she said. In particular, she was critical of the dog warden, Officer Richard Rand, who was "cruelly polite" when she called him to ask about the warning she had been given.

DeLeo's trouble started on Saturday, Aug. 16, when a neighbor complained to police that one of her dogs was barking too loud. The time was just before 9 a.m.

One of Rand's assistants warned DeLeo to keep her dogs quiet, or she might be fined $40, she said. DeLeo asked who had complained, but as is the department's policy, the identity was kept confidential.

DeLeo, who used to teach music at the Mansfield Training School and has been blind since birth, said some 20 years ago a similar complaint arose. But she was able to work out an arrangement with the person who complained, she said.

She tried to do the same this time, beginning with a call to Rand.

DeLeo asked the warden to come out to her home, but he refused, and treated her without "decency and respect." She said she got the impression from Rand that there was nothing she could do if someone complained about her dogs.

Rand denied today that he was mean with DeLeo. "As far as being aggressive, I'm just the opposite. I'm a pussycat," he said.

Rand said it was unlikely he would have fined DeLeo. For one thing, he said, he would have taken her blindness into account. For another, it is a time-consuming process to issue a ticket, he said. Two neighbors must sign sworn statements that someone's dog has been barking too loud at a specific time, he explained.

He said such an investigation occurs only if there are repeated complaints, something that has not happened in DeLeo's case. In addition, he said, only a judge could remove the dogs from her if repeated warnings were issued. Rand said DeLeo has over-reacted to what happened.

Hijackers open fire on passengers

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Four gunmen holding a hijacked Pan Am jumbo jet opened fire on the passengers without warning today, and first reports said at least 100 people were wounded.

Associated Press correspondent Iqbal Jaffery reported from the airport that passengers and security forces were taken completely by surprise when the gunmen began firing inside the cabin with automatic weapons.

At least 28 ambulances rushed out to the Boeing 747 as terrified and wounded passengers streamed off the jetliner. The wounded included many women and children.

There was no immediate word on any deaths.

Pakistani army commandos who had been on standby at the airport rushed to the plane, but it was not immediately clear if they had clashed with the hijackers.

A wounded passenger said he was lifted into an ambulance. "All of a sudden they started firing. Nobody was expecting it."

At midday in Washington, the State Department confirmed that a naturalized U.S. citizen had been shot and killed by the hijackers of the Pan Am jumbo jet.

Spokesman Peter Martinis identified the dead man as Rajesh Kumar, who Martinis said lived in California. Martinis said Kumar had been born in Kenya.

The hijackers, four Arabs armed with machine guns and explosives, had seized the jet with about 400 people aboard at Karachi airport and demanded an American crew fly them to Cyprus. Pakistani officials said the gunmen killed an American passenger and wounded three airport workers.

The gunmen, who security officials said were Palestinians, told Pakistani officials by radio they had planted explosives on the plane.

"No American should approach the aircraft. Otherwise we will give the aircraft a rough ride. We will not permit suicide," said the hijacker leader, identified only as Mustafa.

Civil Aviation Administration director general Khurshid Anwar Mirza, who was negotiating with the hijackers from the control tower, said they demanded an American flight crew come aboard and fly the plane to Cyprus.

In exchange, they offered to release "at least the women and children and perhaps more."

Mirza said the hijackers were saying the gunmen wanted to free Palestinian hijackers jailed in Larnaca. In Cyprus and Lebanon, conflicting claims were made linking the gunmen to pro-Libyan and pro-Iranian groups.

The three-member Pan Am flight crew escaped through an emergency hatch when the gunmen seized the plane. Mirza said the hijackers set a deadline of 7 p.m. (10 a.m. EDT) for a flight crew to come on board, but did not specify what they would do if the demand was not met.

The deadline later was extended twice, eventually to 11 p.m. (2 p.m. EDT). Pakistani officials said the plane was seized at about 5 a.m.

Mirza said the gunmen wanted the American crew to include someone who spoke Arabic. Officials had said earlier that the hijackers wanted an Arabic-speaking flight crew.

Mirza said he told the hijackers that Pakistan was discussing the matter with the United States, and asked them to be patient, telling them, "We are doing our best to get you a crew, but we have to depend on others for this."

In Washington, the Pentagon official said the aircraft carrier Forrestal and an unspecified number of smaller warships today cut short a port call in Naples, Italy, and set out for the central Mediterranean as a precaution in case the hijackers should fly to Cyprus.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, did not say how long the carrier would stay in the area.

Jobless rate down to 6.8%

By Matt Yancey
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Civilian joblessness, falling for the third straight month, dropped to 6.8 percent in August as a six-month slide in manufacturing employment ended, the government said today.

Employment rose to a record 110,135,000 as 240,000 to 275,000 jobs were created last month, the Labor Department said.

That sent the unemployment rate down 0.1 percentage point to its lowest level since January. The unemployment rate has fallen 0.5 percentage point since May.

The largest job gains last month were recorded for business and health care services, where 65,000 jobs were created. Construction jobs were up 35,000, a figure that matched the July gain.

But the best news was in manufacturing jobs. The department's monthly survey of business establishments showed such employment rising for the first time since January, adding 19,000 jobs to bring total factory employment to 19,135,000. Some 350,000 factory jobs had been lost through July.

"This is a welcome change from the string of successive job losses we experienced" earlier in the year, Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics, said in testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

Mott's closing turnpike store

By Alex Girelli
Associate Editor

The Mott's Shop Rite Supermarket on East Middle Turnpike will close Sept. 13 after about 25 years of operation at that location, leaving dozens of employees jobless.

Barry Baskind, president of the Mott's Shop Rite chain, said this morning that the food firm's lease at 587 E. Middle Turnpike has terminated.

Asked if Shop Rite had sought an extension of the lease, Baskind said it was agreed in negotiations that the lease would not be extended beyond this time.

"Frankly," Baskind said, "a small store of that size is a competitive disadvantage in the current food market."

He said the store lived a "valiant life," but the time has come to close it.

Baskind said the closing of the store on East Middle Turnpike "can only have a positive effect" on Shop Rite's other Manchester store at 214 Spencer St., which will remain open for business.

He described the Spencer Street store as "today's kind of store," saying it includes such facilities as a bakery and salad bar, things the store on East Middle Turnpike was never able to accommodate.

About 60 people are employed at the store on East Middle Turnpike, many of them part-time workers. Baskind said it is possible that some of them will be employed at the Spencer Street store, but the company does not have a specific transfer policy, he said.

Job openings in Shop Rite have been posted and the employees from the East Middle Turnpike store will be able to apply for them, Baskind said he did not know how many openings there are at Spencer Street, but he said the turnover, particularly in part-time workers, is high.

Baskind said the company will try to assist the employees in finding other jobs where necessary.

The loss of the Shop Rite on East Middle Turnpike leaves only one large market in the eastern section of Manchester, the independent Highland Park Market on Highland Street.

Two other large food markets in Manchester have closed recently, the Food Mart at the Manchester Parkade and Crispino's on Hartford Road.

Stop and Shop closed its store on West Middle Turnpike, but later opened a much larger one in the Parkade.

The East Middle Turnpike property is owned by United States Life Insurance Co. of New York City, according to records of the Manchester assessor. Company officials could not be reached for comment.

Shop Rite employees not surprised

Employees of the Mott's Shop Rite Supermarket on East Middle Turnpike weren't surprised to hear their store would be going out of business a week from Saturday, they said this morning. But the news came as a shock to at least some customers.

"I never thought I'd see this place close," said Loretta Menard of Avondale Road as he was purchasing a few items. He said he has been shopping either at the Shop Rite or the market that was there before for about 40 years.

"This is crazy," said Menard, who added he did all of his food shopping at the store.

Another customer, who lives on Scarborough Road and asked that her name not be used, said she learned about the closing as she walked into the store to shop this morning.

"I'm devastated," she said. "I can't understand it," she added, explaining that it would be an inconvenience for her to shop somewhere else. She said she does not know what store she will patronize when Shop Rite closes.

Ray Jewell, of Slater Street, said the impending closing surprised him. He said he has been shopping at Shop Rite for about 13 years, and prefers it over the other stores in the area.

"I hate to see the store go," said Jewell.

One employee, who refused to give his last name but said he worked in the dairy department, said the news was not a shock.

"We knew the lease was up," he said, adding that he is one of the

Life as a hostage

For months, the Americans held hostage in Lebanon were confined to a 12-by-15-foot room. By day, they ate exercised, played cards and sometimes argued; by night they slept on mats in the same room. The Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco told that story of life as a hostage Thursday in his first news interview since being freed on July 23 after 19 months. Story on page 9.

PEOPLE

The way Rather is
 Dan Rather has been giving Americans some advice when signing off the "CBS Evening News" — courage.
 Rather's previous salutation was: "For CBS News, Dan Rather, Thank you for joining us Good night." This week, he added "courage" before the "Good night."
 "Don't overanalyze it. There's no deep, hidden meaning," Rather told The Associated Press on Thursday. "It's a greeting and salutation that I've been using with friends for years. It's not a preachment. I just like the sound of the word."
 Rather admits he went too far on Wednesday, when he followed Bill Moyers' report on the Texas-Mexico border by using the Spanish version, "coraje."
 "It was an ill-advised lark," he said.
 "There's been no decision on whether the signoff will be permanent, but in the meantime, that's the way it is."

Goldberg ties knot
 Whoopi Goldberg, star of "The Color Purple," has married cinematographer David Classen, her publicist said.
 Goldberg was married Monday evening in Las Vegas, Nan Leonard said Thursday. But she didn't know where in Las Vegas the couple wed.
 Her personal manager, Sandy Gallin, and agent, Ron Meyer, will be hosts at a small party this weekend in Beverly Hills to celebrate the wedding, she said.
 Goldberg, who has a 12-year-old daughter, Alexandria, by a previous marriage, is filming the Warner Bros. movie "Burglar" in Los Angeles, Leonard said.

ON THE SET — Pee-wee Herman sits on the set of the new CBS television show "Pee-wee's Playhouse" in New York Thursday. The show will debut Sept. 13 at 11 a.m.

Across the nation

Rain doted broad sections of the nation today as more thunderstorms rumbled into West Texas, where floodwaters are blamed for two deaths.
 Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across the Northeast, Southeast, Florida and the lower Mississippi Valley into Oklahoma and Texas as well as southern South Dakota and northern Wyoming.
 A high pressure across the West provided fair weather from the Pacific Northwest into California.
 Flash flood watches were posted from southern Oklahoma across northern and western Texas. West Texas was getting more thunderstorms from a storm system moving in from New Mexico.
 In Odessa, where more than 3 inches of rain were reported Thursday, the Red Cross evacuated 120 families from the north side of town where up to 5 feet of water was reported standing in some homes.
 Today's forecast called for thunderstorms scattered across the southern Plains, lower Mississippi Valley, Tennessee and Alabama; showers and thunderstorms scattered across the southern and middle Atlantic Coast states; and rain scattered from Montana across the central High Plains and from New York across New England.
 Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 44 degrees at Dickinson, N.D., to 91 at Yuma, Ariz.

FOCUS

Back to the Grind
 These and other lawmakers will be back at work. But not every member of Congress will show up for each and every session. In 1972, Congress passed a law that deprived senators and representatives of a day's salary for each day's absence, except in the case of illness. The law, however, has only been enforced twice. The year after Congress passed this unfenored no-pay law, it quietly gave members a 50-percent salary raise, retroactive for two years.

Almanac

Today is Friday, Sept. 5, the 248th day of 1986. There are 117 days left in the year.
 Today's highlight in history: On Sept. 5, 1836, Sam Houston was elected president of the Republic of Texas.
 In 1698, Russia's Peter the Great imposed a tax on beards.
 In 1774, the first Continental Congress assembled in Philadelphia.
 In 1882, the nation's first Labor Day parade was held in New York.
 In 1905, the Treaty of Portsmouth ending the Russo-Japanese War was signed in New Hampshire, after President Theodore Roosevelt mediated the settlement.
 In 1939, the United States proclaimed its neutrality in World War II.
 In 1945, Iva Toguri D'Aquino, a Japanese-American suspected of being a radio broadcaster, "Tokyo Rose," was arrested in Yokohama. She was convicted of treason in 1949, served six years in prison, and was pardoned in 1977 by President Gerald R. Ford.
 In 1972, 11 Israeli athletes and the five Arab terrorists who had taken them hostage were killed in a shootout with West German police during the Munich Olympics.
 Ten years ago: Three Palestinians who had hijacked a Dutch airliner with 80 people aboard shortly after the plane departed from Nice, France, freed their hostages in Cyprus.
 Five years ago: Iran's revolutionary prosecutor general was killed in Tehran by a bomb, the day after Iran's police chief, injured in another bombing a week earlier, died of his wounds.
 One year ago: Crowds of black and mixed-race youths in South Africa hurled rocks and gasoline bombs at white-owned residences near Cape Town and East London.
 Today's birthdays: Former Attorney General John Mitchell is 73. The president of the Motion Picture Association of America, Jack Valenti, is 65. Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker is 58. Comedian actor Bob Newhart is 57. Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., is 50.
 Thought for today: "The people who are the most bigoted are the people who have no convictions at all." — C. K. Chesterton, English author (1874-1935)

Martin School's new principal has plenty to do

By Nancy Pappo
 Herald Reporter

Ray Whinnem is a man who looks forward to having only two full-time jobs this year. In addition to being the new principal of Martin School, he is the town public school system's first elementary mathematics coordinator.
 On paper, both are part-time commitments. But that isn't how they're seen by the man who has to fulfill them.
 Whinnem, 42, replaces Douglas Townsend as the principal of the smallest school in the Manchester system.
 With fewer than 250 students, Martin School merits only a part-time principal in the eyes of the school board. For the past six years, the school on Dartmouth Road has had a principal on site for only part of each week.
 Last spring, a vocal committee of parents won its fight to get a principal headquartered at Martin, even if his duties reached beyond that campus. So the remainder of Whinnem's time is to be spent as an administrator for the mathematics program.
 He'll put out a periodic math newsletter, ensure that the schools implement the town's new mathematics curriculum in a uniform fashion, and offer "math evenings" for parents and elementary school children. He'll get a call early in the morning to say that a new kid had moved into town, and I was the only one who could help with the bus route. Finally this kind of curriculum in the classroom this year.

LET'S FACE IT

Whinnem said when he arrived at Martin two weeks ago. "Realistically, either of those jobs could be full-time commitments. Parents here (at Martin) were promised that I'd be full time, almost. The people who lobbied for a math coordinator were promised that they'd get someone almost full time as well. Well, it just doesn't compute out to be a single full-time commitment."
 But for Whinnem, wearing just two education hats will come as something of a relief.
 For the past nine and a half years he has been principal of Chaplin Elementary School, a few miles north of Windham. "There was just that one school in the entire system. Anything that needed to be done, you did it yourself," Whinnem explained.
 As a result, he said, the principal was also the special education coordinator, the business manager, the purchasing director, the program coordinator, the transportation engineer and the supervisor of maintenance.
 For a while he enjoyed the challenge, Whinnem said. "But I'd be down in the boiler room at 3 in the morning because I'd get a call early in the morning to say that a new kid had moved into town, and I was the only one who could help with the bus route. Finally this kind of one-man show began to lose its appeal."

HIS GREATEST STRENGTHS

he believes, include enthusiasm and creativity. Thus, in his own estimation, his prime contribution to the town of Chaplin was to improve the programs and then do some image enhancement. "That school had an inferiority complex that you wouldn't have believed," Whinnem said.
 He organized the first competitive math bowl, based on the old television show College Bowl. He gave youngsters a chance to win lunch with the principal for good deeds or academic excellence.
 "Whatever it takes, whether it's an in-school radio station or a dramatic production or what have you, you've got to touch a nerve within your students," said Whinnem. "You've got to be sure that you're offering something that really matters to them."
 He bridges when people call these kinds of things "extras" or "frills." "The essential element of education is the building of a self-image," said Whinnem. "When you start to build into your school day opportunities for kids to try things and to be successful at them, then you're giving them a reason to come to school with open minds and open hearts. Then they're ready to accept the knowledge that you're trying to give them. At first, a kid may be working on his math only because he knows that's how to earn extra time in the gymnasium, or on the stage. But with enough motivation, he'll eventually succeed, both in the gym and in the classroom."

WHINNEM IS TROUBLED

by the epithet, "the country club school," which he has heard used about Martin. "To me, a country club is a place where you loaf and have a good time. Is that what people think of us?" he asked. "I'd like to see Martin School develop a reputation of being a place where learning is tough, where there's very high expectations of the students. To succeed and do well here should require the great diligence. I've already heard this is a good school. I want to make it really great."
 Whinnem, who will make $41,505, has a wife and four daughters, now living in Windham, who will soon move to the Manchester area. He will be managing to satisfy his two major professional commitments, and still find time for the family.
 "First, you're not going to see me chasing around trying to get someone to mow the lawn. And I couldn't care less why so many pencils are being used in grade 2. A lot of effort is wasted on those kinds of petty details," he said.
 But in Manchester, he at least feels he more responsible for the school's success. "Having come from a place where I was the Lone Ranger, this is really excellent," he said.

Rochelle Abraitis sees Robertson as a challenge

By John Mitchell
 Herald Reporter

After 19 years of teaching and administrative work in East Hartford and South Windsor junior high schools, Rochelle Abraitis decided she wanted a change.
 "I really wanted to make the shift to the elementary school," the new principal at Robertson Elementary School said earlier this week. "I needed a new challenge."
 Abraitis, one of two new principals in Manchester, was hired in June to fill the shoes of the school's former leader, William Freeman, after his retirement at the end of the 1985-86 school year.
 It was her wide range of experience that Assistant Superintendent of Schools Wilson E. Deakins took into account when choosing her for the job, which pays $41,505. Deakins said Abraitis, throughout the extensive, month-long hiring process, showed that she had strong building management skills as well as curriculum strength.
 "She interviewed well," he said.
 Friends in the right places also helped, Deakins noted. "She had terrific references at South Windsor," he said. "She had a great deal of confidence in what they said about her."
 Formerly an associate principal at the Timothy Edwards School in South Windsor, Abraitis said she began her school career teaching French and Spanish at an East Hartford junior high school.

THE RECEIVED

degree from Southern Connecticut State University, her master's from Eastern Connecticut State and her sixth-year certificate from the University of Hartford.
 After two years in East Hartford, she moved to South Windsor, where she had been since 1969 until coming to Manchester. The work she eventually brought her into administrative positions.
 Abraitis said administration at the junior-high-school level eventually became a bit frustrating because "it's difficult to make a change" in students at that age.
 The Robertson post, she said, will give her the chance to offer a more positive influence on the children, she said. "I really like to work with younger children."
 The philosophy she takes to her first grade-school assignment at the school on North School Street could apply anywhere. "Treat the kids with courtesy and respect and expect the same from them," she said. Abraitis also said she thought a grade school should be responsive to a variety of different learning styles.
 Through those styles, Abraitis wants to "have the students, as they progress, develop good thinking skills, good decision-making skills, and develop more responsibility as they mature."
 Her teaching and language background will help her in governing the estimated 350 students and 25 teachers that make up the Robertson population, she said.
 "I have a good perspective of what goes on in a classroom," she said, adding that the foreign language background will come in handy helping the children at the grade-school level develop their communication skills.
 "COMMUNICATION is important," she said. "I'm really hoping there will be a lot of communication with the teachers and parents."
 She is particularly excited about the first- and sixth-grade math program the school will offer this year. The new program is being implemented town-wide under the direction of Manchester's other new principal, Martin School's Ray Whinnem, and Robertson is one of the last schools to get it. The program, Abraitis said, is unique in that it provides "a lot of concrete activities" for the students.
 In Abraitis' view, the right people will be teaching that program and the others at the school. She said she had opportunity to meet with them during the summer.
 "I've been very impressed with the caliber of the staff," she said.
 If there is a hurdle to overcome in making the switch, Abraitis hasn't found one.
 "I'm confident I can handle whatever's going to come up this year," she said. "I think I'm really ready for it."
 Abraitis, 46, lives in East Hartford. She is married to Mark Abraitis, business manager at the Manchester Herald.

Environmental group may join sewer suit

By John F. Kirch
 Herald Reporter

The Manchester Environmental Coalition may seek to join a lawsuit brought against the town by the state Department of Environmental Protection, its lawyer said Thursday.
 However, Manchester attorney Bruce S. Beck had not yet seen the DEP's suit and said no decision on the matter has been made by coalition members.
 The DEP filed suit in state Superior Court in Hartford earlier this week, charging that Manchester had repeatedly violated the permit governing its sewage treatment plant on Olcott Street, which discharges into the Hockanum River via Hop Brook. The suit also charges that the town violated an agreement with the DEP and the environmental coalition.
 "We'll probably try to intervene and become a partner (in the suit)," Beck said. He said a decision would be based on whether the DEP was serious about enforcing the federal Clean Water Act.
 "The bottom line is, we want the town to be in compliance (with federal clean water standards)," Beck said.
 In the past, the DEP has worked closely with the town to correct sewage treatment problems. Late last month, the state granted the town more than $12 million to improve the plant, which is under federal orders to be upgraded so that the Hockanum is clean enough for swimming and fishing by the end of 1988. Voters have approved municipal bonding to cover the remainder of the $25 million project.
 The Manchester Environmental Coalition threatened to file a similar suit against the town in July if the DEP did not take action. For years the coalition, led by pharmacist Michael Dworkin, has been charging that the town violated the federal Clean Water Act.
 In the DEP's suit, the state is seeking up to $10,000 for each of at least eight Clean Water Act violations in 1985.
 The state is also seeking to force compliance with its permit — which sets a limit on the amount of plant pollution allowed in the Hockanum — and with the agreement under which the town and the environmental coalition. In that agreement, the town was required to send the DEP a monthly list of any new sewer hookups, something officials admit it has failed to do.
 Beck said the court remedies the DEP is seeking are sufficient, but added: "I think the only remedy that would make sense is a moratorium on any major sewer hookups."
 Such a moratorium could have drastic effects on the rapidly developing North End, delaying plans to build a massive enclosed shopping mall and high-density housing.
 The environmental coalition has opposed the proposed Buckland Hills Mall planned north of Interstate 84, but denies that its involvement in any legal action against the sewage treatment plant would be to block the mall construction.
 Robert Young, the town's water and sewer administrator, acknowledged Thursday that the sewage treatment plant has violated state and federal standards and that the town has not forwarded the information required under the agreement. But he said the plant has not been found in violation for nine months and is able to meet all requirements set by the DEP.
 "We'll comply (with the permit and the agreement)," Young said Thursday. "It's easy. I'm not sure why we haven't been doing it in the past. It's probably something that slipped through the cracks. It's not a major item."
 Young added that the method the plant's laboratory used to test its waste water inaccurately showed water containing organic material that it really did not contain.
 "In essence, we reported some numbers that were incorrect," Young said.

Dance helps Magoon family

As his classmates adjust to the new school year, Scott Magoon lies in a bed at Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York City.
 Born with a severe congenital heart defect, the 18-year-old East Catholic High School student from Vernon has had two open-heart operations, and has survived the installation of an artificial valve and a pacemaker.
 But physicians have determined that he will need a heart transplant as soon as a suitable donor can be found. He has been in New York City waiting for such a transplant since July.
 Nonetheless, his spirit is very much present in the school on New State Road. The East Catholic High School Parents' Club is putting on a benefit dance Saturday night to help raise money for some of the Magoon family's medical expenses, which are expected to exceed $200,000.
 The dance, which is open to the public, will run from 8 p.m. until 1 a.m. Tickets cost $7.50 and include set-ups. Guests are invited to bring their own wine or liquor. For tickets, call 643-2922 or 643-5338.
 To make a donation for Magoon's care, contact the St. Bernard Life Fund, 25 St. Bernard Terrace, Vernon, or call 873-9753.

Thompson theme is citizen input

By Alex Girrell
Associate Editor

Former Mayor John Thompson's strategy for victory in the 13th Assembly District this November calls on the state to encourage widespread citizen participation in municipal planning.

Thompson, a Democrat, also has challenged his Republican opponent, incumbent Rep. Elsie Swenson, to a series of debates. He left the third candidate, independent Ed Wilson, out of the challenge.

Swenson cites Wilson in refusal

State Rep. Elsie Swenson, R-Manchester, who is seeking her fourth term, today refused to enter a series of debates with her Democratic opponent.

react to proposed plans," he said. "Rather we should take the bull by the horns, and determine the future growth and development of our town."

Thompson said as a legislator he would issue position papers on issues and work hard to produce forums so that voters can participate directly in the legislative process.

Swenson, Thompson charged, "has failed to maintain reasonable contacts with the district, either through direct voter contact, contact with town government officials or bodies, or by failure to speak out on issues of concern."

"Our effort will be to emphasize the positive, but to hold the incumbent accountable," he said.

Thompson said the CDAP, which involved participation by a wide variety of citizens, produced "thoughtful and incisive thinking about our town as it existed then and as it might exist in the future."

On the scaffolding

Dave Botteroni, left, and John Lagault, both employees of the Manchester Board of Education, repainted the flag pole in front of Bennett Junior High School on Thursday. The scaffolding was set up around the pole to make the job a little easier. The work comes as schools began a new year this week in town.

Struggle leads to charges

A Maple Street man was arrested Thursday when he was seen dragging his girlfriend up Main Street in a headlock after she refused to go with him to a Spruce Street bar, police said this morning.

Police said John Henderson, 25, of 36 Maple St., was charged with breach of peace, third-degree assault and threatening in connection with the incident.

Officers said they saw Henderson dragging his girlfriend, Diane Stasiak, 25, also of 36 Maple St., north on Main Street near the Maple Street intersection.

Henderson was being held on $1,000 bond, and is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court on Wednesday.

An Oak Street woman was arrested Wednesday and charged with stealing 15 credit cards after she tried to purchase cosmetics with one of them at a Main Street pharmacy, police said today.

Police said the charges came after she attempted to purchase $22.25 worth of cosmetics at Arthur Drugs at 942 Main St. When a clerk discovered that the credit card DeCamillis used was on a list of cards reported stolen, she notified police, police said.

At first, DeCamillis claimed to be the woman whose name was on the credit card, but another employee said she knew DeCamillis' first name was "Tracy," police said. After the arrest, a search of the suspect's handbag turned up 14 other credit cards in the other person's name, and DeCamillis' identification.

Police said DeCamillis admitted to her real identity and said she found the credit cards in Hartford. She was released on a $500 cash bond and is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court on Sept. 15.

O'Neill orders changes in housing

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill has ordered the commandant of the state Veterans Home and Hospital to correct immediately violations of the state employee housing policy at the Rocky Hill institution.

O'Neill's order Thursday followed disclosures that some employees may not qualify for low-rent, state-owned quarters on the institution's grounds and that some employees have not paid sufficient rent.

O'Neill also ordered the Department of Administrative Services to expedite its review and revision of the housing policy for all 882 state employees who live in state-owned housing.

The policy has been criticized in recent months for discrepancies in the rents charged in at least two departments.

State Auditors Leo V. Donohue and Henry J. Becker Jr. Wednesday released a letter to O'Neill saying they had found that two veterans' home employees apparently did not qualify to live there and that four employees had underpaid their rents by a total of $10,774 during the past four years.

Millstone power cut for repairs
WATERFORD — Power has been reduced by 50 percent at the Millstone III nuclear power plant to repair a leaking valve in its containment building, a Northeast Utilities spokesman reported today.

The leak, which approached 10 gallons per minute, was discovered at about 11:30 p.m. Thursday, NU spokesman Clifford Hill said. Repairs were scheduled to begin at noon today and full power was expected to be restored Saturday, he said.

The reduction in power was necessitated so workers could enter the containment building, which houses the nuclear reactor and steam generator, Hill said.

Tax overhaul troubles Gejdenson
WASHINGTON — Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., says he has reservations about the tax overhaul plan to be decided on by Congress in a few weeks, but he hasn't made up his mind how he will cast his own vote.

"I'm undecided, but leaning slightly against," Gejdenson said during an interview Thursday.

Gejdenson said he will weigh two options in deciding how to vote, passing the bill now and fixing it later, or trying to delay passage to give Congress time to improve it.

Regardless of his position, Gejdenson said he expects the bill to pass.

The bill, which lowers tax rates, although not necessarily tax bills, for many taxpayers also eliminates some deductions. It was approved by a House-Senate conference committee last month.

Bankers say no mortgage crunch
There was a time when single-digit mortgage rates brought people out of the woodwork, but Connecticut banking officials say despite the return this spring of the low rates the mortgage business has slackened in recent weeks.

Many statewide banks are now offering rates on 30-year, fixed rate mortgages from 9.5 percent to 9.875 percent. Other banks have kept their rates from 10 percent to 10.5 percent, plus points.

"The market has reacted to the cuts with a loud yawn," said David J. Walker, first vice president and economist for People's Bank.

Walker said the bank, which has set its fixed-rate mortgage at 9.875 percent, has had no increase in applications since it dropped its rate last week. He added that the market has been stagnant for the past six weeks.

Candidates differ on few issues

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Connecticut Republicans looking for the difference on issues among the three candidates vying for their party's gubernatorial nomination often must look closely to find distinctions.

The trio — Deputy House Majority Leader Julie D. Belaga of Westport; former state Sen. Richard C. Bozuto of Waterbury, the party-endorsed candidate; and former state Sen. Gerald Labriola — will face off Tuesday in a primary.

The winner will face Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill in November. Also on the ballot will be Unaffiliated Party candidate Frank Longo, former mayor of Bridgeport.

Bozuto, 56, spent eight years in the state Senate, including a two-year stint as minority leader. He served in the state House for the U.S. Senate in 1980 and as governor in 1982. He is an insurance agent.

Belaga, 58, has been in the General Assembly since 1976. She is the first woman to seek the GOP gubernatorial nomination and has never sought statewide office before. She is a former school teacher.

Labriola, 54, is a pediatrician. He served two years in the state Senate and sought the GOP gubernatorial nomination in 1982. He had reservations about such a game, but did not flatly rule one out.

In addition to lotteries, the state funds Labriola opposes the use of taxpayer money to pay for abortions outside Connecticut.

Insurance: Labriola favors the idea of having a "consumer counsel" within the Department of Insurance who would represent the public when insurance companies seek to raise rates.

Belaga and Bozuto say the position is unnecessary.

South Africa: Bozuto and Belaga favor selling state investment in companies doing business with white-ruled South Africa, saying it would "cost the state too many millions of dollars to make a political statement."

He said he would support a ban on new investment in companies doing business in South Africa.

State law now requires the sale of stocks in companies doing business there unless they meet strict equal-opportunity guidelines.

Some parochial schools grow and expand

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

Tuition at most of Manchester's Catholic schools has gone up this year, the first few days of classes have gone well, and a few of last year's leaders have just plain gone.

At East Catholic High School, new Principal Peggy A. Siegmund said this week she was still getting to know the 78 faculty members and the curriculum. She's been impressed with the wide range of subjects offered, and wants to maintain the school's "true reputation for excellence."

Siegmund, formerly a teacher and curriculum director in Cincinnati, Ohio, took the place of Father William Charbonneau, who assumed the role of president of the school. She said plans include developing a "Catholic" fine arts program and improving the school's science labs.

Tuition for the school's 28th year in operation has gone up to $2,200, from $1,735 last year, she said, but enrollment is holding at around 1,200. Although enrollment tends to fluctuate, Siegmund said her first few months in Manchester have well demonstrated the school's impact on the town, adding, "Everywhere I turn, I'm meeting an East graduate."

MOTHER TERESA MARIE, first-year principal at Assumption Junior High School, has replaced Marie Alberta. Marie said that enrollment is down to 81 this year, part of a constant slide at the school in the last four years. During the 1983-84 school year, 171 students populated the halls of the school, which instructs students in grades 6 to 8.

She said her short-term goal at the school, whose population is mostly from Manchester, is to "boost up the school and enrollment and spirit." Tuition has increased $50 for the year, to $525, she said. So far, classes have gone smoothly and without incident, she said.

St. Bridget School, which registered about 100 students last year in grades 1 through 8, will have about the same number in 1986-87, said Sister Helen Hart, principal.

Hart, entering her eighth year as the school's leader, said Sister Dorothy O'Dwyer has been added as a replacement to the fifth-grade staff. There are six full-time teachers at the school, as well as instructors for fine arts classes and physical education.

Hart said the school plans to continue upgrading typing and computer-literacy courses which were introduced in 1984.

unique in that "there is a tremendous involvement of parents."

Kelly said 473 students are enrolled this year — "the same number as last year."

Plans for the new school year, she said, include expanding the computer program, which was established in 1984. The school has six new computers for students, which are shared between the two classes that make up each grade.

"Our diocesan system has developed a good program," Kelly said. The school, which had its accreditation renewed last year, plans to offer a basic program in computer literacy skills.

ENROLLMENT AT Cornerstone Christian School has jumped to 160, almost 20 students above last year, and Principal Marcia Kirby said the independent parochial school is still interviewing students.

She described the first few days at the kindergarten-through-ninth-grade school as "very calm and peaceful." Goals, Kirby said, include continuing to work to integrate scriptural ideas into the subject areas, and expanding the sports program and curriculum.

To get those things done, the school has hired three new teachers and a director of development and finance.

The teachers are Carolyn Ware, who will teach junior high.

The new director of development and finance is John Thompson, Kirby said, hired to help the school grow smoothly.

Kirby, who has been principal since the school opened five years ago, also noted that the school would be adding a 10th grade next year, through construction of a new school officials want to build in Tolland that would eventually house all high school grades.

Thompson said the new school is needed because "there isn't enough room for anything" at the current facility.

An investigation of Long Island Sound found 5,383 violations of the federal Clean Water Act over five years, members of the association said during a news conference Thursday.

Environmentalists vow to sue cities
NORWALK — Environmentalists who have successfully sued corporations and cities to clean up the Hudson River announced plans to sue Bridgeport, Norwalk and Milford over pollution in Long Island Sound.

The suit would ask the three towns to correct alleged violations of federal clean water standards that the group claimed could translate into $53 million in federal fines, said John Cronin, founder of the newly formed Connecticut Coastal Fishermen's Association.

OPINION

Volunteers are part of fire future

Whether it's about sewers, fire protection or just the weather, the governments of the town of Manchester and the Eighth Utilities District seem to find themselves at odds with one another.

Fortunately, that doesn't usually happen when the fire departments overseen by the two governments are called to the scene of the same emergency.

In one unfortunate instance last year, trouble did occur. Firefighters got into a dispute that ended with blows being exchanged, and questions about the matter persisted for weeks.

This week, firefighters from the two departments — along with volunteers from six other towns — proved that the Adams Street blaze in March 1985 was the exception rather than the rule. Side by side, they battled a Monday night fire at the Manchester Lumber Co. Sady, valuable property was lost. But because everyone on the scene cooperated, the damage was minimized.

That's a good indication for the future of Manchester, one that everyone on both sides of the town-district consolidation battle should pay attention to, including the firefighters themselves.

As the campaign leads up to Nov. 4, when townspeople will vote on whether to remove charter provisions that allow the district to stave off consolidation, the half-truths will be flying fast and furious.

One that has much currency around Manchester is that if consolidation occurs, the district's 98-year-old volunteer spirit will be crushed beneath the weight of a hungry town administration. That prediction stems from another half-baked conclusion holding that the only option in the event of consolidation will be to fully staff the town with paid firefighters.

Even if the consolidation battle is pursued and won in the most possible way, that doesn't have to happen.

Certainly, it would be better if the hard-liners seeking to force a merger pull in their horns and try a new approach. Compromise clearly beats warfare — and if no compromise proposal is offered, the town will be hurt more than it has to be, no matter what the outcome of the charter revision vote.

But Manchester's firefighters — and the ones that serve the Eighth District are indeed Manchester's firefighters — are not obliged to follow the example of their leaders. As recently as Monday night, they've proven they can and will work together on behalf of the citizens of their town.

It has long been evident that the town's firefighting future lies in a combination of volunteers and full-timers. The time has arrived for some specific thought to be given to what that future holds, and for the public debate to reflect that thought.

No matter what the firefighters who have served so well should not allow themselves to be reduced to pawns in the political game, and the Democrats pushing so hard for consolidation should not make the mistake of thinking they don't need the volunteers' skill and dedication. Perhaps the situation would improve if leaders on both sides took the opportunity to learn from those who answer when danger calls.

The world of infallibility fails miserably

In a secular society it's best to let religious institutions thrash out their theological differences without comment from the outside. But the means taken by the Roman Catholic Church to oust Charles E. Curran from his post as professor of theology at Catholic University couldn't have been more secular.

Not only was the news of Father Curran's firing released to the secular press before he himself was informed of it, but a news conference was called by the church authorities to explain. To those outside the controversy, the explanation added up to the pope thinking that people who masturbate will grow hair on the palms of their hands while Father Curran doubts it.

The priest has been sacked for expressing the most cautiously worded tolerance of such practices as birth control, abortion and homosexuality. In his writings he neither welcomes them nor glorifies them but asserts that under certain circumstances they should be tolerated. A few years ago one might have observed that Father Curran was being nothing more than a 20th century realist, but now one can't be so sure.

A SPIRIT of religious dogmatism has re-fastened its grip on much of the planet as men across the world from Northern Ireland to Sri Lanka kill and maim in the name of their various divinities. From the Mosques of Iran to the First Baptist Church in Honolulu, USA, the gospel of intolerance is preached with increasing vehemence. And sad to say, millions of men and women listen and take heed.

It surpasses understanding that a Polish pope of all popes would choose these means to stiffen disagreement in his church. Hundreds of members of Solidarity are still in prison thanks to

Fire 'Rambos' loved by editors

To the Editor:

The Herald's editorial Aug. 23, concerning the Bristol tragedy in which two 14-year-old girls were killed when their car was hit by a fire truck, was an attempt to absolve the fireman by misleading and selective use of facts.

These children were killed because it was a false alarm, not because they may have had the car radio turned up and were unable to hear the siren, but because the driver of the fire truck chose to race through a red light.

The driver was well aware of previous tragedies in our state when fire trucks speed through stop signs, aware that the use of loud stereo or radios in passenger cars is now a common practice; aware that with the exception of very few, most fires are minor in nature, or even false alarms. The driver, given an out to violate traffic rules for his stupid legislators, did just that. The slaughter of these children was an absolutely unnecessary, inexcusable, vile, sick, obscene, brutal act.

What is the motive for the editor to list the age, name, guilt, and possible punishment of the caller of the false alarm and not the driver of the death truck? Is the motive to avoid having parents know that a fire truck driver who speeds to kill is practically let off scot-free? The name, age and physical conditions of the driver will become public record in the legal suit filed against the fireman and fire department, which I expect will be in the many millions, should get the attention of the public officials or Herald editors who place little value on private lives.

In the more than a dozen years I served as a volunteer fireman, fire police and fire commissioner, I know of not a single occasion when a minute saved by speeding through streets and stop signs would have made a vital difference. A study by fire underwriters shows there is no significant difference in fire losses in areas up to 10 miles from a fire station. The report found no justifiable reason or need for fire trucks to speed.

Connecticut fire departments for years were required by law to observe same speed and stop signs, just like any other citizen. Mostly volunteer, they gave excellent service without endangering lives. Insanity began with paid firemen, unions and politicians. As events in East Hartford point out, politicians love paid fire departments. It's another opportunity for them to find jobs for relatives and friends; and later for them to collect lifetime pensions from "stress." This stress could well be from other causes. Years ago a newsman reported that a large part of Hartford's paid firemen were also working other full-time jobs. I'm sure that this condition exists in many cities today. How capable is any person of making a sound judgment who works 16 hours a day?

In Bolton I sleep well protected by a volunteer fire department. Free of political hacks, fat egos, unions, the volunteers serve not for profit, but only for the best interests of the public. Fire trucks are hard to come by; "Rambo" fireman have no place in a volunteer fire department.

Letters policy
The Manchester Herald welcomes original letters to the editor. Letters should be brief and to the point. They should be typed or neatly handwritten, and, for ease in editing, should be double-spaced. Letters must be signed with name, address and daytime telephone number (for verification).

"I know you will understand when I tell you my decision is controlled by analysis of the degree of potential reward to the degree of risk."

When the doctrine of papal infallibility was first proclaimed in the 19th century it was received with a snort by non-Roman Catholic Christians and howls of pain by the Roman Catholic intelligentsia, lay and cleric, of the time. Over the years the dogma of papal infallibility came to be regarded by historians as an unfortunate outcropping of Vatican "triumphalism," but the time of Pope John XXII it appeared the doctrine was being quietly laid aside in favor of the idea that infallibility comes from the whole church in a grand and special way which certainly would not concern itself with technical aspects of the sex act.

It would be heartening to write that, by firing Father Curran from his job in far off America, Pope John Paul II is out of step with his time, that an enlightened and tolerant age will laugh him out of it. Let's hope so, but infallibility is in fashion. The men and women who run the world, heads of governments everywhere, claim infallibility. They just don't say so out loud. The pope, bless him, has the courage of his pretensions.

Pressler gets 1986 award for junkets

WASHINGTON — Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., is our choice for the 1986 Allen Ellender Memorial Trophy.

This is our own junketeering award, named for the late Louisiana senator who bewildered foreign leaders and drove U.S. diplomats to distraction as he careened around the world, often lecturing heads of state in impenetrable Cajun French dialect.

We've reported on Pressler's two-day exercise in personal diplomacy in Monte Carlo, when he learned of Prince Rainier's deep resentment of plans to locate in his consulate in Nice, France. The stopover in Monaco was only part of Pressler's swing through Italy and environs during a 16-day investigation last spring of U.S. "bilateral relations" with the so-called "mini-states of Europe."

Actually, Pressler has a long way to go before he'll match the influential Ellender, whose voluminous reports of stupifying details were always properly published by the Foreign Relations Committee. When Pressler prepared a modest report on his Easter junket, the committee refused to publish it — a stunning putdown for the chairman of the subcommittee on European affairs. Pressler had to make do with entering it in the Congressional Record, like any local newspaper clipping or constituent's wedding anniversary congratulations.

PRESSLER'S TRIP APPEARS to have created maximum confusion among the Foreign Service personnel who had to make arrangements for his whistle-stop tour. No one seems to have had a clear idea of Pressler's purpose.

According to cable traffic seen by our associate Lucette Lagnado, the Rome embassy was initially under the impression that Pressler was looking into "consulate closings." This sounded plausible since consulates were to be shut down in Nice and in Seville, Spain, and Trieste, Italy. However, one cable noted, "the senator did not manifest any interest in visiting Trieste." Few people do.

Then the same embassy was informed that the point of Pressler's visit was to "expand his sensitivity to Northern Italy." In line with this laudable goal, he would visit Florence, Milan and Bologna.

Next the embassy learned that Pressler, who is also a member of the Special Committee on Aging, wanted to investigate Italy's treatment of the elderly.

While he was in the neighborhood, Pressler decided to drop in on the Most Serene Republic of San Marino, a tiny hillside nation completely surrounded by Italy, and notable chiefly for having had a government dominated or heavily influenced by the Communist Party for the past 40 years. Atack would have it, Pressler's visit coincided with the semi-annual pageantry surrounding the inauguration of the two co-regents who rule the little country.

THE FLORENCE CONSULATE cabled Washington that the senator would be "warmly welcome" at the festivities, but warned: "Senior San Marino officials are generally unavailable for bilateral discussions during the inauguration period, due to ceremonial responsibilities."

Undeterred, Pressler went to San Marino and met the country's secretary of state, who solemnly informed him that mini-states are in a position "to offer solid moral and idealistic contribution to the biggest of battles undertaken on the international scene," according to Pressler's unpublished report.

Finally, the senator was invited to dinner by U.S. Ambassador Maxwell Rabb and his wife in the elegant Rome embassy. There was one disappointment, though, involving a movie actor who apparently is sometimes available for celebrity duties. "Roger Moore and wife regret they will not be able to return to Italy in time to dine with the senator," the embassy cabled to Washington.

Footnote: Pressler did not return numerous calls.

Reagan firm on limited sanctions

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan is standing pat with limited sanctions against South Africa, despite pressure in Congress for tougher steps and a White House admission that moderate action has not produced enough results.

Reagan sent a message to Congress on Thursday that left open the possibility of additional sanctions later against the white-ruled government in Pretoria after consultation with key allies.

For the time being, however, he renewed for another year a prohibition on the sale of Kruggerand gold coins, a ban on computer sales to the South African government, a moratorium on bank loans to the South African government and a ban on the export of U.S. nuclear technology to Pretoria.

U.S. aims to strike deal on arms

WASHINGTON — As U.S. and Soviet experts open a new round of nuclear weapons talks, the Reagan administration is preparing to scale back its proposal for a 50 percent reduction in globe-girdling weapons, a U.S. official said.

The talks at the State Department over two days are designed to clarify the U.S. and Soviet positions before negotiations resume in Geneva on Sept. 18.

Soup tests could lead to suspect

RUNNEMEDE, N.J. — Tests on a package of chicken noodle Cup-A-Soup could lead investigators to whoever laced the soup with the cyanide that killed a man, say authorities who have found no poison in hundreds of other boxes.

"Instead of chasing a criminal, we're going to trace a weapon — in this case, cyanide. Cyanide is not as accessible as a gun," Dennis Wixted, Camden County first assistant prosecutor, said Thursday.

The package of the contaminated Lipton product was to be tested today at the state medical examiner's lab, said Wixted. Investigators hoped tests would show the type and origin of the cyanide that killed Louis J. Denber, 27.

Contra leader seeks donations

WASHINGTON — When Adolfo Calero calls, he wants rich people to listen.

The Contra leader is on the telephone this week getting commitments for $10,000 donations to keep the Nicaraguan rebels in supplies until congressional aid comes through.

Calero started making calls Thursday morning to a select group of wealthy conservatives and got promises or, at least conditional commitments from all eight he contacted, said Ann Stone, a political consultant the contras hired to help them raise money privately in the United States.

Draft no threat for 2.1 million

WASHINGTON — In less than four months, the first 2.1 million young men affected by the resumption of selective service registration will have legally escaped the draft — but those who failed to register will have also lost eligibility for several federal benefits.

The nation's 2.1 million men who turn 26 by Dec. 31 will reach the age at which they become ineligible for a draft even if a callup were ordered after the outbreak of war.

Officials with the Selective Service System consider the development a milestone, as well as a new opportunity to publicize the legal requirements for registration. The reason: Men who turn 26 this year and who failed to register are about to permanently forfeit their right to various federal benefits.

Aquino, foe to negotiate for peace

MANILA, Philippines — President Corason Aquino and a Moslem leader who recently returned from exile agreed today to negotiate an end to a 14-year revolt in the south that has killed at least 50,000 people.

Aquino and Nur Misuari, chairman of the separatist Moro National Liberation Front, said in a joint statement after a two-hour meeting in a Roman Catholic convent that they agreed "to support the continued cessation of hostilities" while holding further talks.

The Moro front has spearheaded the Moslem insurgency in about a dozen provinces on Mindanao, the Philippines' second largest island, and in the Sulu chain of islands farther south, but the fighting has been reduced to isolated skirmishes in recent years.

Reagans prepare prime-time talk

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — The White House is staging an extraordinary buildup for a speech on prime-time television by President Reagan and his wife Nancy intended to mobilize Americans in a war against illegal drugs.

The Reagans will address the nation at 8 p.m. EDT on Sept. 14 from the family quarters of the White House.

Announcing the speech Thursday, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said "this is an unprecedented event," the first time a president and his wife have delivered a speech together on television.

FAA works to prevent collisions

By H. Josef Hubert
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In cloud-dotted skies at 9,100 feet, an alarm blazes in the cockpit of a Boeing 727 and a computerized voice warns of a plane, barely visible through the haze — but closing fast.

"Descend! Descend!" the voice directs, and the pilot gently lowers the aircraft. About 20 seconds later the oncoming Gulfstream jet swooshes overhead. A collision is averted.

The system, known as T-CAS, is scheduled to be put in a small number of passenger jets as part of a year-long test.

While the airborne technology to detect and head off many airplane collisions has been proven for some time, critics say the effort to get the devices into commercial jetliners has been far too slow and mired in excessive testing and controversy.

The collision of an Aeromexico DC-9 and a single engine private plane near Los Angeles this week has focused renewed attention on government and industry efforts to put collision warning technology into the hands of commercial pilots.

For the system to sound an alarm, the other aircraft need not have a T-CAS device, although it must have a transponder that enhances radar that to equip a fleet of 3,000 planes, probably until 1990 at the earliest.

The airlines and government have been interested in developing an airborne collision avoidance device since the late 1970s after two jetliners collided over the Grand Canyon. The effort to develop a system got another boost in 1979 when a Boeing 727 and a small plane collided over San Diego.

Five years ago, J. Lynn Helms, then head of the FAA, declared that the agency would be ready to issue a mandate for the system, discarding previous design approaches, and said it would be ready for widespread use by early 1988.

But the prototype tests already are nearly a year behind schedule and critics say there's no assurance against further delays.

One reason for the delay was that some critical problems proved more difficult to resolve than had been expected.

Most perplexing was the tendency of the T-CAS system to sound alarms when sighting non-threatening aircraft in crowded airspace such as in terminal areas where a collision avoidance system was especially necessary.

That problem was largely eliminated by the use of a new radar technology called "chirp search" which allows the device to ignore planes outside a certain radius.

Anthony Broderick, associate administrator for flight standards, said a prototype T-CAS has been installed in a Piedmont Airlines Boeing 727 and will be in use on passenger-carrying flights before the end of the year. Next year similar prototypes will be in use at United Airlines and Northwest Airlines in tests that are to conclude in 1988.

But the prototype tests already are nearly a year behind schedule and critics say there's no assurance against further delays.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., who five years ago headed a subcommittee examining why collision avoidance systems were not being developed more rapidly, complained that the FAA still is moving too slowly.

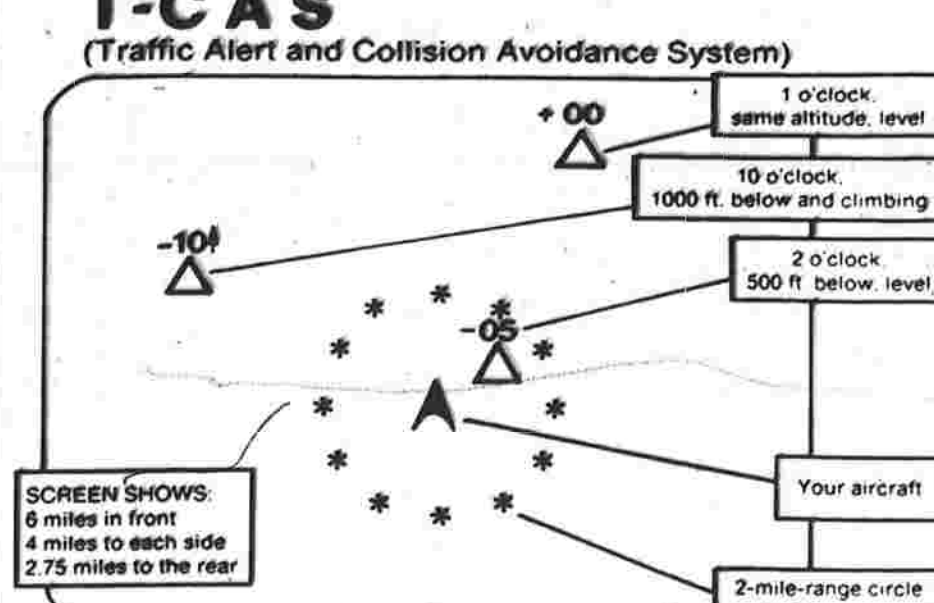

"Nothing has happened. Frankly it hasn't happened because the FAA hasn't pushed it and because some folks in the aviation industry don't want to deal with the cost of it," Glickman said.

A T-CAS system designed for commercial jetliners has been estimated to cost as much as $100,000 apiece and could go higher. Tom Tripp, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association, which represents the major air carriers, says the airlines have no objections about the cost.

Henry Duffy, president of the 33,000-member Air Line Pilots Association, also complains that the FAA has had a record of "getting bogged down" in developing T-CAS.

"It's been a long, slow, that's been the frustrating part of this," Duffy said, suggesting that the FAA has failed to put the matter at a high enough priority.

Secret satellites test 'Star Wars'

By Howard Benedict
The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Two satellites scheduled for a secret launch here today are to engage in orbital warfare, with one crashing into the other in a major test of "Star Wars" technology, sources report.

The Strategic Defense Initiative Office near the National Aeronautics and Space Administration would acknowledge the launch of the Delta booster rocket today.

Reporters were to be informed a few hours before liftoff and escorted to a viewing site on Cape Canaveral.

If the experiment is successful, SDIO, which manages the Star Wars missile defense program, planned to discuss the results several hours after launch.

A Delta has not flown since the rocket was grounded after a failure in May. Success would end a string of four U.S. space launch failures since February and help restore confidence in a space program battered by those and the January explosion of space shuttle Challenger.

Sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said the payload consisted of two satellites that were to separate in orbit and fly intricate maneuvers, using small jet thrusters, as they tracked each other.

The objectives, they said, were to obtain spectral data with infrared sensors and to test guidance, navigation and jet thruster systems. One of the satellites also might try to track a rocket launched from another site, the sources said.

After these concepts have been tested, they said, one of the satellites was to ignite a small motor and crash into its companion in a test of kinetic energy technology in which one projectile is hurled at another at great speed and destroys it on impact.

One element of President Reagan's Star Wars defense system envisions scores of orbiting satellites carrying lasers, kinetic energy devices and other antimissile measures.

A Delta test first stage thrust 71 seconds after liftoff here May 3 and was blown up by a radio command from the range safety officer when it shot out of control.

Destroyed with the rocket was an $87.5 million weather satellite. Since Challenger exploded Jan. 28, killing its crew of seven, the United States has had only one space rocket success. That was an Atlas launched Feb. 9 from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., with a military satellite.

After the explosion of an Air Force Titan 34D with a military satellite in April and the Delta failure in May, all large U.S. space rockets were grounded. That included the Atlas-Centaur, whose first stage has an electrical system like that blamed for the Delta fiasco.

O'Neill calls for stiffer drug penalty

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill called today for a mandatory minimum sentence of five years in prison for anyone convicted of selling more than five vials, or a half gram, of the potent cocaine derivative crack.

O'Neill also ordered the state police to increase the number of troopers assigned to drug enforcement and encouraged cities and towns to do the same with their police departments.

In addition, the governor announced the formation of an "action committee" to develop an anti-drug education program because, he said, "I believe the only long-range solution to drug abuse is education."

O'Neill's action came a day after reports of a multiple murder in Bridgeport committed by a man who police say told them he had been high on crack.

The governor said it was a "horrible coincidence" that his planned announcement of the initiatives came the day after the murders were discovered.

DeLeo denied that, and said she decided to put her house up for sale only after talking to Rand. She said she is especially upset because she had just finished paying off the mortgage on the property two years ago.

"I'm not a fighter," said DeLeo. "I just want a few years of peace and quiet with my dogs."

"My home has always been me alone with my dogs," she added. "To keep it that way, she decided to leave Manchester."

Museum chief fired for Colt gun trades

HARTFORD (AP) — David O. White, director of the Connecticut State Library Museum, has been fired because he allegedly traded away of priceless pieces of the state's Colt firearms collection without approval.

Interim State Librarian Suzanne J. LeBaron announced today.

LeBaron said she had notified White of her decision on Thursday. White, a Tolland resident who has been museum director since 1973, was accused of trading guns from the extensive collection to private collectors without the required approval from the state library board.

State police investigators estimated the guns were valued at as much as $1.5 million, but it has not been formally determined how much the guns received in trade were worth. White has maintained that they were of comparable value.

The state police had described some of the guns as "one-of-a-kind, historical treasures having no duplicate in the entire world."

White's firing came a week after a hearing on his conduct held by LeBaron. He had been on an unpaid leave of absence since the trades were disclosed on Aug. 7.

On Wednesday, White's immediate superior, Ariene Bielefeldt, announced she was resigning effective Oct. 31. She had earlier been suspended for five days.

Committee for One to stay dormant during '86 campaign

By George Lovno Herald Reporter

The Committee for One Man, which was active in the late 1970s in pushing for consolidation of the town and the Eighth Utilities District — will apparently not be heard from again before this November's election, according to one of its former leaders.

Democratic Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings, who helped organize the group in 1978, said Thursday that because the Committee for Charter Revision was created last month, there is no need to reactivate the Committee for One Man.

Cummings said the Committee for Charter Revision will serve the purpose of "educating voters" to support approval of a referendum question that would present the district — which has provided fire protection and sewer service to most of northern Manchester for nearly a century — from voting a consolidation proposal. Cummings contended his support for the Committee for Charter Revision has nothing to do with his support for consolidation. "It (the charter change) just makes good sense, and it has nothing to do with any other issue whatsoever," he said.

The Committee for Charter Revision is a bipartisan group that has indicated it supports consolidation, but says its only current aim is to get the charter change. Members of the committee include Stephen Penny, Democratic majority leader on the Manchester Board of Directors, and former town Public Works Director Jay Giles, both strong supporters of consolidation.

The group's president, retired businessman William Steith, said he would like to see the district's volunteer fire department continue to serve, but under the direction of the town.

"For too long the tail has wagged the dog, so my hat is off to this consolidation proposal," Cummings contended. "I support consolidation because it supports consolidation."

STEAL to organize committees

The Eighth Utilities District group STEAL will be forming citizens' committees Wednesday to help in its efforts to defeat a referendum question that would remove the district from the town and the Eighth Utilities District.

STEAL, STEAL Residents at Work, district legal counsel John D. LaBelle Jr., district supporter Wallace Irish Jr., Treasurer Betty Sadiouki and Bleitchman.

He said every Wednesday through the Nov. 4 election, the various committees will meet to discuss their efforts. The meetings will be open to the public, and the first one will tentatively be held Sept. 17 at Whitton, Bleitchman said.

The district has provided fire protection and sewer service to most of northern Manchester for almost 100 years.

The controversial referendum question asks voters to approve a change in the Town Charter that would require only one, townwide vote to proceed with consolidation. Currently, district residents have to vote separately to approve a merger before it can take place.

If the charter revision is approved by voters, it is seen as the first step towards consolidation. Residents living outside the district outnumber those living in the district three to one, and it is widely assumed that they would support consolidation, which is favored by the Democrats who control the Manchester Board of Directors.

In a related item, Bleitchman said STEAL raised $300 at the district's annual Peach Festival. The donations plus STEAL's treasury to about $1,500.

People in the Manchester area who get energy assistance from the state stand to benefit from a plan to spend $37 million it has received from the Exxon Corp.

The town of Manchester has applied for some of the federal money, which has not yet been fully spent, to have an energy audit of public institutions within the town. A decision has not yet been made, but the study would point out ways in which the buildings could be made more energy efficient.

Zinsser said the Exxon plan also sets aside $1 million for weatherization efforts for households and public facilities, which will supplement some $4 million the state has already budgeted.

However, there is a requirement in the Exxon plan that the weatherization money not be spent on public institutions until the energy audit is conducted so that it is known exactly how the weatherization money should be spent, Zinsser said.

Gov. William A. O'Neill, a Democrat, had initially submitted a plan that did not call for the creation of a trust fund. However, he was about to board the plane when it was stormed, said a spokeswoman holding a sign that read "Energy audit is a scam."

He said the final plan received bipartisan support. "I had a number of liberal Democrats come up to tell me they think we have a good plan here," Zinsser said.

The trust fund, to be called the Energy Assistance Fund, will be administered by the state Office of Policy and Management, which will distribute the money to two agencies that operate energy assistance programs — the Department of Human Resources and the Department of Income Maintenance.

Last year, Zinsser said the state provided assistance to between 800 and 10,000 households in Connecticut. The DIM, which helps those receiving welfare or other financial assistance, served 1,116 people from its Manchester branch office — which handles Manchester, Bolton, Coventry and Andover.

Beaulieu said the town-by-town breakdown was not available. The DIM, which provides help to households not served by DIM, helped 429 households last winter in Manchester, according to spokesman David Dearborn. Twenty people were helped in Bolton, 137 in Coventry and 17 in Andover, he said.

Zinsser said the approved plan also provides $400,000 to conduct energy efficiency studies of public institutions. "I would like to see $500,000 to continue with a program that was previously funded

A salute to grandparents

By Margaret Hovden Herald Reporter

Sunday is Grandparents Day, and what better way to observe the day than to think about what grandparents mean to all of us.

The Manchester Herald visited the Children's Place, a day-care center at 422 Tolland Turnpike and asked some 3- and 4-year-olds about their grandparents.

Their answers varied.

Christopher Dube, 4, has two grandparents who live in Singapore.

"They came here. We went to Riverside. We went on rides and played games. Then they left. They drove their car. Then the airplane took them over the water. They brought little fans." Phyllis Young, assistant director of Children's Place, said Christopher's grandparents gave fans to the children in the day-care center.

Christopher calls his Singapore relatives grandma and grandpa.

"My mother calls them Mom and Dad. They played with me, watched movies and television. I want to see them again." When asked what his grandparents like to do, Christopher, he replied, "They eat, drink and all kinds of stuff."

Lindsay Werkhoven, 3, said she has grandparents and great-grandparents.

"I sleep at Grandma Werkhoven's house in her big bed and I eat chicken and tomatoes. Grandma Bates teaches me to write," she said.

"They're good and healthy," said Jeffrey Haynes, 3, after he was asked about his grandparents. "I got two. They play with me and talk with me. I got Great-Grandpa and Great-Grandma. They don't live in our house. I watch TV with them."

"I used to have three," Barbara La Beige, 4, said as she held up three fingers. "I was still in my mommy's tummy (when) they were alive. My mommy remembers them. One was my daddy."

Elizabeth DiCiccio, 4, said she didn't have grandparents. "I know other people's grandparents. I like them."

Jonathan Gustafson, 4, walks with his grandparents. Asked how old they are, he said, "Four." He added that his grandparents "look like mommy."

When he was asked about grandparents Michael Schatz, 4, said he did not have any. He looked sad and turned away.

Day hasn't caught on

Grandparents Day is Sunday. Many people, including some grandparents, have not heard of the annual observance.

Local florists report an increase in sales for the day during the last few years.

Ronald Brown, owner and manager of Brown's Flowers, 163 Main St., said he expects to sell about 15 to 20 floral gifts for grandparents. On Mother's Day he sells from $80 to 400.

Sharon Platt, a wholesaler at Floral Expressions, 135 Center St., said the day is just beginning to be recognized. It is still not as popular as florists would like it to be.

"Each year sales will pick up as there is more awareness," said Jan Tracy, owner of Penland Florist, 24 Birch St. Bill Milkowski, president of Flower Fashion, 85 E. Center St., sees a small increase.

specify what action the ships might take.

In Cyprus, an anonymous caller to a Western news agency said a previously unknown group called the Libyan Revolutionary Cells was responsible. But a statement later was delivered to newspaper offices in Beirut, Lebanon, claiming it was the work of Jundallah, or Soldiers of God, a pro-Iranian Moslem group long active in Lebanon.

Libya's state-run Tripoli radio, monitored in Moscow, said the government of Moammar Gadhafi had no role in the hijacking.

The gunmen, dressed as airport security guards, opened fire as they seized Flight 73 at about 5 a.m. EDT Thursday after it arrived from Bombay en route to West Germany.

Scores of people were boarding at the time and at least 30 fled in terror as the gunmen ran up the steps of the plane firing shots that wounded two baggage loaders. One was in critical condition with a head wound, officials said.

The hijackers left a sack of hand grenades and several clips of machine-gun bullets on the tarmac when they stormed the plane. Mirza said they had machine guns and grenades aboard the jet.

Pakistani army commandos quickly surrounded the aircraft and sealed off the area as senior army and air force generals took charge of operations from the control tower.

An airport worker was wounded when the hijackers fired from the plane hours later.

An American passenger of Indian origin, Kumar Rajish, who was shot aboard the plane and thrown onto the tarmac, died later while being operated on at Jinnah hospital, police and hospital officials said.

However, Pan Am spokeswoman Ann Whyte said the American passenger was alive and being treated in Karachi.

Mustafa, the hijackers' leader, later told Pakistani officials in the control tower the hijackers were very nervous about shooting the passenger and that the other hostages were being well looked after, the officials said.

Fervaz Shari of Los Angeles, who was about to board the plane when it was stormed, said he saw a uniformed gunman holding a sign that read "Energy audit is a scam."

He was quoted as saying no take commando action.

Mirza said no such move was planned.

Pamela Hanlon, another Pan Am spokeswoman in New York, said there were 345 passengers and 13 crew members on the plane. Officials in Pakistan, however, said there were 380 passengers and 15 flight attendants.

Pan Am officials in Pakistan said 41 Americans, most of Indian or Pakistani origin, were on the plane. A copy of the passenger list obtained by The Associated Press in Pakistan indicated there also were two Canadians and 43 Europeans of various nationalities, while the most were Indian or Pakistani.

In London the British Foreign Office said 15 Britons were on board. However, the Indian Foreign Ministry offered a conflicting set of figures.

Confusion about who was on the plane resulted from the fact that some passengers boarded it in Bombay, India, but got off in Karachi, while others who were booked to board in Karachi had not done so when the plane was seized.

The flight was scheduled to arrive at Kennedy International Airport at 3:25 p.m. EDT today, according to Pan Am.

Isabelle P. Cullen; honored by the queen

Isabelle P. Cullen, 74, of 111 Downey Drive, died Thursday at Hartford Hospital.

She was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and came to the United States in 1939. Before she retired, she was employed by the British Information Services in New York City, eventually becoming chief of its speakers' section. She was awarded the Order of the British Empire by Queen Elizabeth II in 1976 aboard the royal yacht.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. on Saturday at St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church, 215 W. Center St.

There are no calling hours. Memorial donations may be made to the American Heart Association.

U.S.: no concessions to Pan Am, hijackers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will not give in to terrorist demands in the hijacking of a Pan Am jet in Pakistan, nor will we urge third parties to do so.

A State Department official declined to comment, however, on whether the United States was urging the government of Cyprus to allow the jet with nearly 400 passengers to be flown there, as the hijackers have demanded.

"I can't comment on that," State spokesman Mike Kraft said. "These are tough decisions. A lot of it has to be decided on the ground."

The State Department released a statement saying that its policy in the hijacking is clear and unchanged: "We are always willing to talk with anyone, or with any group, concerning the safety of American citizens and other innocent victims of terrorist incidents. We will not, however, give in to terrorist demands, nor will we urge third parties to do so."

The State Department confirmed that one passenger, possibly an American, was shot when the plane resulted from the fact that some passengers boarded it in Bombay, India, but got off in Karachi, while others who were booked to board in Karachi had not done so when the plane was seized.

The flight was scheduled to arrive at Kennedy International Airport at 3:25 p.m. EDT today, according to Pan Am.

'Papa' once saved her by the seat of her pants

Almost everybody loves their grandparents in glowing terms.

GRANDMOTHERS THEN seemed much older than they do now to me. As long as I knew my grandmother, she was in a wheelchair as a result of a circulation problem after the birth of her fifth child. Rita's grandmother was unable to walk around much either. Both seemed to accept their disabilities with grace.

My generation, in general, has remained active and healthy longer than our grandparents did. I drive my grandchildren on day trips, occasionally learn their rock dance steps, swim, hike and play miniature golf with them. I thought it was the only time he rescued me but it was the most embarrassing.

and her Aunt Alice used to describe the arrangements to Louise's grandmother in glowing terms.

Rita's grandmother was unable to walk around much either. Both seemed to accept their disabilities with grace.

who are grandmothers are also actively involved with their grandchildren. Most also work and drive cars. Some golf, do aerobics and travel to foreign lands, activities their grandparents couldn't do in their later years. But we grandparents brag about our grandchildren just like grandparents have for generations.

OF THE THREE girlhood friends, I was the only one with a grandchild. "Papa" was busy running his farm, but he sang folk music and told us stories. He took me for rides and was there to rescue me when I got caught by the seat of my long underwear on a barbed-wire fence. I literally hung there while Rita ran and got him. It wasn't the only time he rescued me but it was the most embarrassing.

My generation, in general, has remained active and healthy longer than our grandparents did. I drive my grandchildren on day trips, occasionally learn their rock dance steps, swim, hike and play miniature golf with them. I thought it was the only time he rescued me but it was the most embarrassing.

Grandparents have different joys from parenting. Usually we don't get involved in commands such as "brush your teeth, stand up straight, do your homework and hurry up." We also have no decision-making power and have to remember not to interfere.

And grandchildren now have different kinds of tales to tell. I told my grandparents about a character defects in the White Mountains of New Hampshire when I was 17 and about class trips to museums, New York City and Washington, D.C. They seemed like great adventures to me. They had never been to those places.

None of the grandmothers of my youth could drive a car but probably all had ridden horses.

ONE OF my greatest pleasures is having little grandchildren run to meet me when I drive to their homes. The older ones no longer run to me but seem glad to see me.

The constant I see between grandparents and grandchildren through the generations is love and respect. These two generations seem to be more tolerant of each other and willing to overlook character defects in real and imagined — than children and their parents do of each other.

The influence of grandparents continues. On Sunday, Grandparents Day, I will remember the two grandparents I knew. Their patience,

The comet returns

You missed the comet last winter? Fear not. Bill Haley and The Comets are back in town, with songs of the 50s and 60s. They will be at Cabaret, 70 Union Place, Hartford, tonight and Saturday. The cover charge is $5, and shows start at 9 and 11:30 p.m.

Art show is open

September Song is the name of the annual arts and crafts show and sale sponsored by the Tolland County Art Association. It will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the Ellington green, in case of rain. It will be moved to Ellington High School. There will be a portrait demonstration, a white elephant table and home-baked foods, as well as crafts exhibits.

Arts on the green

The Glastonbury Arts Guild will sponsor its 24th annual Arts and Crafts Show on the Green this weekend at the corner of Main and Hubbard streets. More than 200 artisans are expected to show their wares, rain or shine. Admission is free to this show, which will run from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. If you cannot find parking near the Green, leave your car at Glastonbury High School and catch the free shuttle bus.

Part of the festivities on Sunday will include 18th century military drills and re-enactments of Revolutionary War camp life on the lawn at the Welles-Shipman-Ward House. From 1 to 5 p.m., the historic scenes will be created outdoors, while weaving demonstrations and tours are offered indoors. Admission is $2 per person, children under 12 free.

A bit spooky

If your taste in art runs to the bizarre, you won't want to miss the show of eccentric works called "Outsider Art," which is currently hanging in the Atrium Gallery on the University of Connecticut's Storrs campus. The rather strange works in this exhibit were done by amateur artists, most of whom never expected their pieces to be shown to the public. The gallery is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. The exhibit ends Sept. 19.

Through a glass darkly

An artist who uses fused glass as his medium, R Bruce Laughlin of Hickman Street, will be demonstrating his craft Sunday at the opening of the 51st annual exhibition of the Society of Connecticut Craftsmen. The show will be held this year at the Arts & Crafts Association of Meriden, 53 Colony St., Meriden. Other demonstrations will include metalclay, quilting, pierced tin work and a hands-on "happening" designed

A Griffith retrospective

Famed filmmaker D.W. Griffith will be honored tonight with a lecture and screening of his epic film, "Intolerance." The four-part work made in 1916 takes three hours to view. But it took two years to film, and cost an estimated $2,500,000—a monumental sum at the time. It will be shown in Millard Auditorium of the University of Hartford. The show, which is free, starts at 7 p.m. The lecture will be presented by Paul Stacy.

A Wapping good time

You'll have a fine time at the Wapping Fair, held this weekend in Rye Street Park, South Windsor. There will be carnival rides, baseball games, an auction, parades, live music, and arts and crafts exhibit. There's also a break dancing exhibition, foot races and children's games. The fair is open tonight until midnight, Saturday from 11 a.m. to midnight and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $2, children under 12 free. Parking is free.

New Age arrives

Instead of an olden days fair, why not a New Age Fair? That's just what you'll find on Saturday at the Unitarian-Universalist Meetinghouse, 50 Bloomfield Ave., Hartford. If you bring the exact time and place of your birth, a computer will give you an astrological chart for $4. Psychic readings, 20 minutes each, cost $8 and a 30-minute astrological reading is available for $25. Sponsored by the New Age Exchange and An Open Door, the fair will run from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., especially for children. These special events will be offered from 1 to 4 p.m. The entire exhibit will be open Tuesdays through Saturdays, noon to 4 p.m., through Sept. 28.

Legends continue

"The Sky Legends of American Indians," a planetarium show, continues during September at the Copernicus Planetarium and Space Science Center, Central Connecticut State University, Wells Street in New Britain. Shows are Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30. Admission is $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children under 12.

Local exhibit closes

Sunday will be the last day to see the exhibit of North Manchester at the Manchester Historical Society's Museum of Local History at 126 Cedar St. Hours are 1 to 5 p.m.

Thoughts

The Book of the Acts of the Apostles tells us that Jesus appeared to His apostles over a period of forty days after His resurrection (Acts 1:3). On one occasion, He spoke the following words to them: "But you will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes on you; and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth" (Acts 1:8). The Holy Spirit is powerful! The Spirit has the power to transform and sanctify human lives.

Mike and Ed are free

A coffeehouse concert featuring the guitar duo of Mike and Ed will be held at 7:30 at the Wintonbury Baptist Church, 84 Maple Ave., Bloomfield. Also on the program is singer Alison Holmes. Admission and refreshments are free.

Schoolhouse arrest undermines trust

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently an incident occurred at my children's school. Two third-grade boys were caught eating candy and money from a teacher's room. One boy did not show up for school for a few days. When he returned, he told the kids he had been away "camping." The other boy, however, received a different punishment. He had a history of causing trouble at school, so his father suggested (and the principal agreed) that the boy be given a good scare. The principal called the police, and two police officers came to the school and told the boy he was under arrest. This "arrest" took place in front of the other students. The boy was handcuffed and led to a police car, presumably to be taken to jail, although I doubt that the incident was carried that far.

My children came home wide-eyed, convinced that policemen do arrest little kids as they had seen it with their own eyes. I was furious about the way the matter had been handled. When I spoke to the other parents, I was shocked to learn that many of them thought this type of scare was good for the children. I still disagree. What do you think?

DEAR MOM: I agree with you. The end does not justify the means. What will the children think when they learn — and they surely will — the policemen do not arrest little kids; that those whom they trusted and respected the most — their parents, teachers and officers of the law — lied to them and had them in a phony arrest to scare them? I think, in that case, that scheme will do more harm than good.

DEAR ABBY: Can you please tell me why restaurant owners keep their restaurants so dark you need a flashlight or match in order to read the menu? It's ridiculous. Most people would like to see what they're eating. At least I do.

DEAR ABBY: I speak only for myself, but I agree when the waiter has to bring a flashlight to the table in order to read the menu. It's a time to lighten up. Reason for another common complaint from a diner.

DEAR ABBY: Why do so many of the finer dining rooms have background music so loud that the customers have to shout in order to be heard? My wife and I were invited to one of the nicest restaurants in the city, and had a miserable time because we

Have doctor track body deficiency

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Do you believe in body wisdom? I have developed a craving for carrots and eat about a pound a day. I'm not pregnant. What could my body be lacking that the carrots provide?

DEAR READER: Often our bodies tell us through cravings, that we are deficient in certain substances. I believe in body wisdom — to a degree. But a pound of carrots a day might cause you to develop carotene in the presence of too much carotene in the blood and tissues. This may cause a yellow or orange cast to the skin. I believe in a medical examination and let the doctor determine which, if any, nutrients you may be lacking.

DEAR DR. GOTT: During delivery, I tore my cervix, which was repaired with stitches. Seven weeks later I expelled some gauze that had been placed there during the stitching. Is this standard procedure? What damage could result?

DEAR READER: Someone didn't carry out a sponge correctly in the delivery room. That gauze should have been accounted for at the time of the stitching. If you have had adequate obstetrical followup, there has been no damage. However, you might mention the incident to your obstetrician who probably will want to be more careful in the future.

DEAR DR. GOTT: It could just be an obstinate pimple, but I'm scared that I might have skin cancer. Sometimes it bleeds; sometimes it just looks like a big pimple. What should I do about it?

DEAR READER: Have it removed by a surgeon or a dermatologist.

DEAR DR. GOTT: When I visit a new doctor for the first time, do I have the right to ask what medical school he went to, how long he has practiced and at what hospital he served his internship? If he refuses the information, or confirms a doctor's credentials by making an inquiry to the county or state medical (or osteopathic) society — or you may write directly to your state's licensing agency. The data about a doctor's training are required for licensing. To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my new Health Report, Choosing a Physician: Make a Decision For Good Health. Others who would like a copy should send in their name and address to P.O. Box 91429, Cleveland, OH 44101-2429. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I just had the displeasure of learning that I have been infected with herpes II. Can my uninfected mate take the new drug acyclovir as a prophylactic?

DEAR READER: I am not aware of any studies that have confirmed the value of acyclovir as a preventive. Perhaps the manufacturer can give you further information. Write the Consumer Products Division, Burroughs-Wellcome Co., 303 Cornwell Rd., Research Triangle Park, NC 27709.

Montpelier mayors meet

MONTPELIER, Ind. (AP) — The mayor of Montpelier there. So was the mayor of Montpelier, the first deputy mayor of Montpelier, and the mayors of Montpelier and Montpelier. The man responsible for the whole thing was Kenneth Neff, who is, you guessed it, the mayor of Montpelier. This one. As part of his city's 150th anniversary, Neff invited the mayors of seven other Montpeliers for a party this week. Sara Rice of Montpelier, Vt. was one of six who accepted the invitation.

"It was just newly elected in May, and I guess my predecessor had declined the invitation," she said. "But he sort of enticed me to come by saying the first settler here was from Montpelier, Vt. Then I found out that was true of North Dakota and Idaho." Patti DeBuck, mayor of Montpelier, N.D., represented the smallest town, with a population of 96. "We're just having a ball here. The trip has been well worth it," she said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christopher Hewett...

That, of course, was "Springtime for Hitler"...

Since then he's done plenty of television...

Hewett made his American film debut in 1968...

The show, adapted from the novels by Gwen Davenport...

The "D" stands for "draft" — the major league baseball amateur draft...

Everything is still right on schedule for the do-everything outfielder...

Mr. Belvedere was first played by Webb in the 1948 movie "Sitting Pretty"...

His second year, he got noticed.

My freshman summer, no one approached me...

"I've almost become obsessed with the game," he admitted...

Shootout envisioned as Dolphins, Chargers clash

By The Associated Press

Both coaches envision a high-scoring shootout, and for good reason, when the Miami Dolphins meet the San Diego Chargers in their National Football League opener Sunday.

"It's hard to visualize this as a low-scoring ballgame because both offenses have so much firepower," said Miami coach Dan Shula, pointing to the offenses that finished 1-2 in the league last year in passing.

Led by quarterback Dan Fouts, the Chargers averaged 304.4 passing yards a game last season, while the Dan Marino-led Dolphins averaged 287.1.

"I just wish we were playing Miami some other time, later in the year so our defense had a chance to become settled," said San Diego coach Don Coryell.

Past Miami-San Diego matchups have produced some of the NFL's most memorable games. Three of the teams' last four meetings were decided in overtime.

San Diego leads Miami 7-4 in their series. The teams last met in the 1978 game, when San Diego ended Miami's bid for an unbeaten season with a 34-28 overtime victory.

The Dolphins took the AFC East title with a 12-4 record in 1985, but lost a sixth Super Bowl berth by losing to New England in the AFC Championship game.

While both teams boast high-powered offenses, defensively the Dolphins and Chargers are in transition.

Miami's unit, ranked 23rd in total defense last year, has been retooled with eight players who were not in the lineup for the 1985 opener. The Chargers' defense, the worst in the league a year ago, also has been overhauled.

"What they're trying to do is play bump-and-run and knock the receivers off their timing while getting on a pass rush," Marino said. "Hopefully, we'll be able to do the things we want with the football."

The Bears will open defense of their first NFL crown since 1963 against the Browns, winners of the AFC Central Division last year. Chicago's 18-1 record in 1985 tied for most wins in a season and included a 46-10 victory over New England in the NFL title game. The Browns led the series with the Bears 6-2, including a 27-21 victory in their last meeting in 1980.

Led by the NFL's all-time leader Walter Payton (524 carries for 1,561 yards), the Bears had the NFL's top rushing offense in 1985 with a 172.5-yard average.

Few rivalries could be more competitive than the Raiders and Broncos. The last three games have gone into overtime — a league record — and the last five meetings have been decided by three points or less.

"The Kelly phenomenon has added a special spark," said linebacker Eugene Marve in a statement echoed by several other Bills.

Although Kelly, the former USFL most valuable player, signed a five-year, $8 million contract with the Bills on Aug. 18, he's already had a big impact on the Bills.

Season ticket sales have jumped from 18,000 to about 27,000, and the crowd for the Jets game, which was sold out earlier this week, could exceed the team's home attendance record of 79,353.

Reeves. "It's a game within our division and it's against the defending champions. They took the title away from us. We want it back."

The Jim Kelly Era opens at Buffalo with the Bills entertaining the Jets.

"I've been a winner wherever I've gone and I don't expect to stop now," said the quarterback whose presence has helped revitalize a franchise — at the gate at least — that has set the current NFL standard for fan loyalty with back-to-back 2-14 seasons.

Gregg has done a house-cleaning at Green Bay, getting rid of many of last year's starters, including the passing combination of quarterback Lynn Dickey and tight end Paul Coffman.

"Everybody's just kind of nervous because of all the changes. It's uncertain," said free safety Tom Flynn, who has been a lot more serious. "I really like to get to the playoffs this year. I'm tired of watching."

Frank Bulough, starting his first full season as Bills head coach, said the turnout at Rich Stadium will mean a lot to his team.

"I've been in one of five great fight and there's about five guys out there waiting for you and you walk out there to face them and all at once 10 of your buddies drive up."

"The Packers have started slowly in each of Forrest Gregg's first two seasons and finished at 8-8, just short of playoff contention."

Green Bay's Super Bowl victory after the 1967 season the Packers have qualified for the playoffs only twice — in 1972 and 1982.

There were 20,773 people in attendance and they booed Stejber repeatedly for his uninspired performance which he let passing shots sail by without hitting the target.

Stejber hadn't met a seeded player en route to the quarterfinals.

"It's a strange guy off the court and I don't think many players talk to him," Becker said.

Becker meets Meier, whom he has beaten three times in four matches — including the quarterfinal match of Wimbledon this year — and the top seed, defending champion Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia.

Chris Evert Lloyd, seeded second and seeking her seventh Open crown, faced Soviet-born Andrei Panin in the first match.

The men's doubles final was held today, with No. 3 Mats Wilander and No. 4 Andres Gomez of Ecuador and Sloba Zivojnovic of Yugoslavia.

Meier is the most difficult guy on the tour to play, I think," Becker said. "One day he wakes up and is unbeatable."

"The man thing is it is so difficult to read and watch. He hits the ball flat but wings it."

Meier is getting to be known as a Swedish killer in the fourth round. He eliminated Wilander, the second seed, on Thursday. He raised his record against Sweden's best players to 18-3 over the last two years by taking Nyström.

Meier's superb court coverage and deep approaches kept Nyström off-balance all day.

"I think Joakim was passing today much better than Mats," Meier said. "I don't think I'm going to be a big name in this tournament."

Becker was a little surprised to see Meier get so far.

"I know him pretty well and I talked to him after his first match," Becker said. "He tells me Wilander and Nyström are going to go home."

Navratilova kept alive hopes of a triple crown here as she and Peter Fleming, the top seeds, advanced to Sunday's mixed doubles final with a 7-5, 7-5 victory over Elizabeth Smylie and John Fitzgerald of Australia. They will face unseeded Raffaella Reggi of Italy and Sergio Casal of Spain.

Becker cruises into the semis

By Barry Winer The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It took Boris Becker a lot longer to realize how badly he was routing Milan Sejber than it took the crowd at the U.S. Open.

Becker, the two-time Wimbledon champion and No. 3 seed here, surged into the semifinals Thursday with a 6-3, 6-2, 6-1 victory over the unseeded Sejber. The West German star dismantled the Czech, 6-2, 5-6, 6-2.

Becker meets Meier, whom he has beaten three times in four matches — including the quarterfinal match of Wimbledon this year — and the top seed, defending champion Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia.

Chris Evert Lloyd, seeded second and seeking her seventh Open crown, faced Soviet-born Andrei Panin in the first match.

GE unit's move affects income

FAIRFIELD (AP) - General Electric Co.'s credit unit will take a $50 million charge against third-quarter earnings to reflect write-downs of repossessed oil drilling equipment, a company spokesman said.

The charge will be reflected as lower earnings from GE's financial services business, spokesman Jack Betty said Thursday. The charge was disclosed in a Securities and Exchange Commission filing by the credit unit.

"This write-down is not expected to change the analysis' forecast for the company as a whole, which is a moderate increase," Betty said.

The electrical and electronics products concern had 1985 third-quarter net income of $75 million, or $1.26 a share, before its acquisition of RCA Corp.

GE said that it had been told by the SEC that when GE Credit Corp. repossessed the equipment, it should have listed the rigs at market value rather than at the carrying value of loans outstanding on the equipment.

George Casper, a first vice president of Robert W. Baird & Co. a Milwaukee securities firm, said he didn't know what value banks had placed on land drilling rigs they had repossessed, but he thinks that repossessors of offshore rigs have yet to mark down rigs to market value.

That could mean other repossessors might have to take write-downs, he said.

The GE Credit write-down reflects a lower valuation for 26 land-based drilling rigs repossessed or purchased between 1983 and 1986. The filing said that $22 million of the write-down reflects the SEC position that GE Credit should have valued the rigs at market value rather than at their value upon repossession.

The additional $22 million charge reflects GE Credit's revamped expectations of revenue from operating the rigs.

STOCK MARKET RECORD - The stock market surged to record highs Thursday, propelled by a wave of buying by professional program traders and revived enthusiasm for oil stocks.

Remington celebrates prize

BRIDGEPORT (AP) - About 1,000 Remington Products Inc. employees paraded briefly near their Main Street factory in a celebration of an industry award.

Gov. William O'Neill, Bridgeport Mayor Thomas Bucci and U.S. Rep. Stewart McKinney, D-Ohio, were on hand Thursday to congratulate the electric shaver company, while Vice President George Bush talked via a telephone hook-up to the crowd.

The celebration was dubbed "Proudly Made in the U.S.A. Day" by Remington owner Victor Kiam. He said he wanted people to know that manufacturing was still viable in the United States, even though heavy industry here is being challenged by overseas competitors.

The workers, mostly women, walked behind a parade float and the Black Rock Pipe and Drum Corps, carrying red, white and blue balloons. After the speeches, Remington provided a lunch of hot dogs, hamburgers and corn on the cob.

The workers approved of Kiam's sentiments. "When I do shopping for clothes, if it doesn't say 'Made in America,' I won't buy it," said Marjorie Jenkins, who repairs shavers for Remington.

Bush told the gathering that they are "living proof of the ability of all United States companies to compete."

Set up periodic withdrawals for mutual fund investments

QUESTION: I have shares of an income mutual fund. As I am in need of more income, I contacted the registered representative through whom I bought the shares. She says I can receive monthly checks but adds that a few shares would have to be sold each month.

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

As I see it, the number of shares I would be sold is not the issue. It is the amount you invested in those shares - and the money you receive from the redemption is either a profit or a loss.

ANSWER: The registered representative is recommending a periodic withdrawal plan, which might or might not work out well for you. Most mutual funds have such plans.

Under this arrangement, the fund would automatically redeem enough full and fractional shares each month to provide you with a check. Meanwhile, the dividends the fund declares would automatically be reinvested to buy more full and fractional shares.

It stands to reason that, if the dividends at least equal your withdrawals, the number of shares you own will not be depleted. But, if your withdrawals exceed the dividends, your shares will gradually diminish in number.

However, there's more important factor to take into consideration - the total value of your investment. The value of the mutual fund's shares can rise or fall, taking the total value of your investment up or down.

If the fund's "total return" - dividends, plus an increase in share value - is greater than your withdrawals, the total value of your investment will rise. On the other hand, if the total return is less than your withdrawals, your investment will shrink in value.

Remember that there have been periods when mutual fund share values fell, thereby producing negative total returns. There will be similar periods in the future.

Over the long term, however, the vast majority of mutual funds have produced good total returns. So, as long as you don't set your withdrawal rights too high, you won't run a big risk by taking monthly checks.

My suggestion is to start by making withdrawals at an annual rate equal to 8 percent of the present value of your fund holdings. Then, if the fund performs well and the value of your investment increases, raise your withdrawal rate. Just don't go too far out on the withdrawal limb.

QUESTION: Rather than take money out of a mutual fund gradually, wouldn't it be better to redeem all my fund shares when prices go up?

ANSWER: Absolutely, assuming you know when that's going to happen. If you have that clairvoyance, you shouldn't be investing in funds. You would do better than lots of fund managers.

Can I transfer my investment from a mutual fund to a credit union, without paying taxes?

ANSWER: Yes, if you have a loan. No, if you have a profit. To get your money out of the mutual fund, you must redeem the fund shares you own. The difference between your "basis" - the amount you invested in those shares - and the money you receive from the redemption is either a profit or a loss.

ANSWER: We recently became grandparents for the first time and would like to invest $2,000 for the baby's college education. What type of mutual fund would you suggest?

ANSWER: The natural choice is a no-load growth mutual fund. No-load means there's no commission charge when you buy the fund shares. And steady clear of funds with 12b-1 plans and/or rear-end redemption fees. Those 12b-1 plans increase fund expenses and reduce share values. Rear-end fees take bites when shares are cashed in.

Growth mutual funds hold common stocks with past records and/or future potential of rising in value, taking the fund share values higher.

Gift fund shares registered in the baby's parents as custodian of the account.

Barnes sells steel division

BRISTOL (AP) - Barnes Group Inc. has announced an agreement to sell its Wallace Barnes Steel Division to Theis of America Inc. This is a subsidiary of Friedl and Gustav Theis Kallwatzwerke GmbH of Hagen, West Germany. The company is a specialty steel producer.

Wallace Barnes, Barnes chairman and chief executive officer, said Thursday the sale is subject to a final, definitive agreement and the approval of directors of both companies.

Barnes didn't disclose the sale price. He said Theis approached his company about the sale.

Reagan condemns incident

By Terence Hunt The Associated Press

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan declared Friday that no punishment is too severe for the "despicable and cowardly" seizure of a Pan Am jumbo jet in Pakistan. But his chief spokesman said the United States has been unable to link the captured captors to any specific group or government.

Larry Speakes read a statement on behalf of the president a few hours after the incident ended when the Arab gunmen opened fire on hostages that had been held in the plane nearly 17 hours.

Reports from the scene throughout the day had indicated there were four assailants, but a State Department official suggested there were five — two dead and three captured when Pakistani officials stormed the plane.

Speakes said Reagan had been kept apprised of the unfolding incident Thursday night and Friday and had made several decisions. The spokesman declined to be specific, but the administration ordered an aircraft carrier to sea and, according to sources, dispatched a team of FBI agents to investigate.

"Nothing can justify such barbarism," Reagan said in the statement read by Speakes. "We can think of no punishment too severe for the criminals responsible."

Speakes, responding to questions, said the United States was "unable at this time to make any connection with any government or any specific group."

Hospital officials in Pakistan said 15 passengers and two of the gunmen died in a shootout with security police who captured the plane. They estimated that as many as 12 of the approximately 400 people on board were wounded.

Earlier, one American was killed when the gunmen boarded the plane. At the State Department, spokesman Charles Redman said late Friday. "It is my understanding that there were five hijackers two killed, three captured."

At least 17 of the injured were Americans, a State Department official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said late Friday. The extent of their injuries was not known, he said, adding that U.S. officials knew of no additional American deaths.

Speakes said that President and Mrs. Reagan had offered their condolences to the families of those who died.

Shultz nixes Daniloff trade as arms control talks open

By Borry Schweld The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Friday ruled out a trade with the Soviet Union for the release of Nicholas Daniloff, an American journalist held in a Moscow jail and threatened with a spy trial.

Calling the arrest of the magazine correspondent an "outrage," Shultz said it "showed the dark side of a society prepared to resort to hostage-taking as an instrument of policy."

But while Shultz condemned the Soviets in a speech at Harvard University's 35th anniversary celebration in Cambridge, Mass., he called for a new round of arms control talks as scheduled at the State Department.

A U.S. official, who demanded anonymity, said the U.S. delegation headed by senior adviser Paul H. Nitze made no mention of Daniloff's jailing during the initial three-hour session.

But Nitze told Victor P. Karpov, the chief Soviet delegate, as they headed for lunch he hoped the arrest would not be an obstacle to progress, the official said.

The talks were recessed after an afternoon three-hour session in the afternoon and will be resumed on Saturday. Neither side made a statement.

The two-day meeting is designed to smooth the way for the reopening of formal negotiations Sept. 18 in Geneva on U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons and moves toward space-based defenses.

Karpov said "we are prepared to reach an agreement." But asked by a reporter if one was possible, he replied evasively. "Let's see."

Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead hosted a lunch for the delegations before they went into an afternoon session.
