GOP can't wait

By Alex Girelli Associate Editor

State Rep. Julie Belaga of Westport — who told voters she couldn't wait to be governor — took Manchester by a margin of about 8 to 5 over Richard Bozzuto of Watertown Tuesday on her way to victory in a statewide Republican primary.

Belaga's other opponent, Gerald Labriola of Naugatuck, trailed far behind in the Manchester vote. At the 12 town polling places, Belaga got 842 votes to 587 for Bozzuto and 330 for Labriola.

As party workers phoned in local tallies to Republican headquarters at the Mountain Road home of Republican Town Chairman Donald Kuehl shortly after 8 p.m., it was Jonathan Mercier, the Belaga coordinator in Manchester, who took the calls.

Mercier was slow to claim a victory, despite the fact that Belaga led in each district as the reports came in.

"I'm happy," Mercier said when all the Manchester results were in. Then he left to join the celebration at Belaga's campaign headquarters in Wethersfield.

As the results came in, Mercier said he was hoping his candidate would win by a wide margin. "That will give impetus to the campaign in the fall."

Kuehl, who supported Bozzuto, joined his candidate in backing the ticket once the results were known. "Julie Belaga had a wonderful campaign and I think she'll be the next governor of Connecticut," he said.

State Rep. Elsie Swenson, R-Manchester, who likewise had pledged her support to Bozzuto, said Tuesday night she will support Belaga.

Town Director Thomas H. Ferguson, a Labriola backer, said he will have no trouble supporting the ticket. "I think she will be a fantastic alternative to (Gov.) Bill O'Neill," Ferguson said.

Mercier and others gathered at the Kuehl house said they were

Democrats differ on impact of Republican choice in vote

By George Layno Herald Reporter

Most Democrats in the Manchester area, confident that Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill will win re-election in the November election, say Republican Julie Belaga's candidacy will not make the fall campaign more difficult for the incumbent.

But some supporters of Democrat Toby Moffett — who was defeated by O'Neill for the party's nomination in a bitter battle earlier this year — said today they were worried that disenchanted party members and unaffiliated voters would pull the lever for Belaga, hurting the chances of progressive Democratic candidates on the underticket.

"The only way we're going to beat that is show some sort of unity," said Robin Tracey of Manchester, one of the leaders of a Moffett's campaign in town. Tracey declined to name her candidate, but she said after the Democratic state convention in July it would be difficult for her to support O'Neill.

"There are many progressives in this state who are alienated by O'Neill, and they (O'Neill's supporters) haven't tried to bring them back on board," said Tracey. She added that she was "very frightened" that progressive Democratic candidates for the General Assembly, such as John Thompson of Manchester, who is running in the 13th Assembly District, would lose votes because of Belaga.

However, Moffett supporter Dorothy Brindamour of Manchester said she will vote for O'Neill. And Aloysius J. Ahearn of Bolton, a Moffett delegate at the state convention, said he was leaning toward O'Neill.

Manchester Democratic Chairman Theodore R. Cummings said some liberal Democrats and independents will probably vote for Belaga. But that shift will be compensated for by those Republicans who cannot bring themselves to support Belaga, he said.

Democratic town Director Stephen T. Cassano agreed with that assessment, saying Belaga will

Belaga rates her chances as 'dynamite'

By Judd Everhart The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Julie D. Belaga has won the right to continue her historic gubernatorial campaign, beating two others to become the first woman to win the top spot on the Republican ticket in Connecticut.

Belaga, the deputy House majority leader and a former school teacher from Westport, says she'll spend the next two months proving that Connecticut deserves better than Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill.

On Tuesday, she won Connecticut's historic three-way primary, snatching the nomination from party-endorsed Richard C. Bozzuto of Watertown.

Belaga had 41 percent, or 38,748 votes; Bozzuto, a former state senator, had 36 percent, or 33,641 votes; and former state Sen. Gerald Labriola trailed with 23 percent, or 21,647 votes, according to unofficial returns.

Her chances of beating O'Neill, she said, are "dynamite."

"We're looking for a better way to make Connecticut government work again," she said. "We have a common goal: you know it and I know it. That is November."

She said she would take to the people her "absolute commitment that the people of this state deserve better" than O'Neill.

Belaga stole the show at the nominating convention in July with a rousing speech to the delegates when she seconded her own nomination, a strategy move that stunned Bozzuto and Labriola.

The contest was only the third gubernatorial primary in state history and the first with three candidates.

Labriola conceded defeat at 9:30 p.m., telling supporters in Hartford, "We gave it our best shot. Now, let's all unite."

Bozzuto, who has tried twice before for a statewide nomination, said his political career was over. "It's the end of the campaign trail," he said, his voice cracking with emotion. "I'm out of it."

Connecticut Republicans also picked Belaga's choice for lieutenant governor. West Hartford businessman and former town council member E. Clayton Gengras Jr. He is the son of the 1966 Connecticut GOP gubernatorial candidate.

Officials were expecting a light turnout among Connecticut's 460,000 registered Republicans, even though the candidates had collectively spent more than $1 million trying to generate publicity.

The turnout was about 20 percent, with 94,036 votes cast.

State GOP Chairman Thomas J. D'Amore Jr. said O'Neill would have his hands full for the next two months.

"We're putting forth our best candidate," he said. "Bill O'Neill doesn't deserve to govern this state. Bill O'Neill is in for a tough fight in November."

He said it had been a "tough loss" for Bozzuto and Labriola, but said he expected them to "get behind Julie and fight Bill O'Neill."

Democratic State Chairman Timothy J. Moynihan said the fact that O'Neill would be facing a woman would not force a change in strategy.

"I don't think that's a big issue," he said. "They'll look at their experience, their records and their ability to govern and I think they'll support Bill O'Neill for another term."

He said there was no comparison between Belaga and the late Democratic Gov. Ella T. Grasso, an extremely popular governor who resigned because of health reasons in 1980. O'Neill, her lieutenant governor, then became governor.

Israeli jets raid Lebanon; 3 killed and 13 wounded

By Rima Salameh The Associated Press

SIDON, Lebanon — Israeli jets rocketed Palestinian guerrilla positions on the outskirts of this southern port city at daybreak today, and three women were reported killed and 13 other civilians wounded.

No guerrillas were reported killed or injured in the raid, which Palestinian sources said followed a sea battle between Palestinian guerrilla infiltrators and an Israeli gunboat south of Sidon overnight.

The sources said one guerrilla was killed in the offshore clash. Police contended that only nine civilians, all residents of the nearby Ein el-Helwah Palestinian refugee camp, were hospitalized as a result of the Israeli air raid. But Sidon's three hospitals reported three Palestinian women killed, including two sisters.

Nine other Palestinian civilians were being treated at Hammoud Hospital for shrapnel wounds, and four other injured Palestinians were being cared for in two other clinics.

All guerrilla factions have been on alert throughout Lebanon in anticipation of an Israeli attack since two gunmen stormed a synagogue in the Turkish city of Istanbul on Saturday, killing 21 Jewish worshippers.

Israeli Cabinet ministers, including Prime Minister Shimon Peres, have vowed to strike back at those responsible for the Istanbul attack.

It could not be determined immediately whether today's Israeli raid was in retaliation for the synagogue attack, the recent shooting of rockets from South Lebanon into northern Israel, or the attempted seaborne infiltration.

Sidon police said the Israeli warplanes struck three times around ammunition stockpiles of the Syrian-backed Popular Struggle Front on Sidon's southern edge shortly after 6 a.m.

Columns of black smoke billowed from an industrial compound that took the brunt of the assault as ambulances rushed victims from the scene, police reported.

The Israeli military command said its jets had targeted a base belonging to the Popular Struggle Front which it said was used for attacks against Israel. It said the pilots returned safely to base and reported accurate hits.

A communique in Tel Aviv said the base, consisting of a warehouse and weapons dump, was located 600 yards south of Sidon, which is 25 miles south of the Lebanese capital of Beirut.

Sidon police said at least two rockets exploded near an ammunition depot belonging to the Popular Struggle Front, but the dump at the basement of a two-story building did not explode.

"Otherwise it would have been a disaster if the dump blew up," said a police spokesman.

Sidon police said the base was located in a spacious compound called the Industrial City.

Police said more than 20 shops near the ammunition dump were destroyed.

Hospital to oversee visiting nurses

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

Manchester Memorial Hospital is taking steps that could mean better home health care for patients after they're discharged, a hospital official said today.

The MMH Corp., the hospital's holding company, announced today that it has ratified an agreement under which Visiting Nurse and Home Care of Manchester Inc. would come under the control of one of its divisions, Manchester Health Care Inc.

The affiliation was approved by the non-profit Visiting Nurse and Home Care in July and by Manchester Health Care on Aug. 28. The agreement goes into effect retroactive to July, hospital spokesman Andrew A. Beck said this morning.

Visiting Nurse and Home Care was an independent, non-profit organization that provided a range of different health care services to patients leaving area hospitals but who continue to need home nursing care.

Officials at its Porter Street office said this morning that the organization has 70 full- and part-time staff members and a 1986-87 operating budget of $1,362,000.

Beck said Visiting Nurse and Home Care will continue to operate its own facility independent from MMH Corp., even though Manchester Health Care will oversee its operations to a degree.

Although MMH has worked closely with Visiting Nurse and Home Care throughout the organization's 66-year history, Beck said, the affiliation will help the hospital and Visiting Nurse and Home Care improve its home health care services.

Beck said that with the affiliation, arrangements for home health care can be made earlier, communications between the hospital and the organization will improve, and the staff of Visiting Nurse and Home Care will get involved in the process before patients actually leave the hospital.

"It will strengthen the coordination of services," Beck said.

However, he added that there will be "no change in their operations" toward the patients themselves.

The affiliation is part of Manchester Memorial Hospital's reorganization, Beck said. About two years ago, the MMH Corp. was formed as the medical center's holding company.

Along with the hospital and Manchester Health Care Inc., the corporation has two other subsidiaries — Haynes Street Enterprises Inc. and Manchester Memorial Hospital Development Fund Inc., Beck said.

Beck said many of the subsidiaries have not been active for the past year while the reorganization has been under way.

Diana is tops
 Princess Diana is Britain's most stylish person, according to a Gallup poll that ranked her husband, Prince Charles, a distant second.
 Charles' brother, Prince Andrew, tied for third place with TV talk show host Terry Wogan. Andrew's wife, the former Sarah Ferguson, ranked fifth, according to the poll published Tuesday.

Bear dances
 Wide receiver Willie Gault isn't trading his Chicago Bears football jersey for a tux, but he will don tights and slippers this month for his ballet debut.
 "I wanted to show them that ballet is not aissy sport, that a masculine guy like myself can come in and do it," Gault said Tuesday at a rehearsal for "Dreamer's Journey."
 The ballet, to be presented Sept. 29 at a North Side high school, stars Gault in a show that mixes classical ballet with popular rap poetry written and performed by a cast of young men from the neighborhood, one of Chicago's roughest neighborhoods.

Legal embarrassment
 There are many ways to commit a blunder on television but only a few ways to show support, a federal appeals court ruled in dismissing Dick Clark's copyright infringement suit against the producer of a rival show.
 Clark claimed his "TV's Censored Bloopers" was the basis of a series by Alan Landsburg Productions, "Life's Most Embarrassing Moments."
 After watching tapes of both shows, U.S. District Judge James Idema of Los Angeles dismissed Clark's suit, saying Landsburg's show was not "substantially similar."
 His ruling was upheld Tuesday by a unanimous three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco.

 She and her husband, Robert, with whom she split a $2.02 million jackpot, were one of 20 families who drifted down the Mississippi River in a cruise Monday sponsored by the lottery. The winners told their stories about the impact of big bucks.
 "I used to just give it away," said William Walker of Strasburg, who got his job as a trucker after he won $1 million in December 1975. "But I'm more selective about how I spend it now. So I've finally gotten to the point where I just sit back and enjoy it."
 Roy Farmer of south St. Louis said he received $1.49 million in 1984 gave him the freedom to quit his 38-year job with the Missouri Pacific Railroad.
 Beluga received $7 million, Richard Bozzuto, the convention-endorser.

Students fill Bolton schools
 BOLTON — Schools in town are filled to the brim — if not overflowing — with 780 students. The superintendent said Monday. School Superintendent Richard Packman said the first grade class had to be divided into four sections for the first time in a decade.
 The high school, Packman has reported, is completely utilized, and the fourth grade might have to be moved to the Center School for the 1987-88 school year.
 The amount of students is increasing so fast, Bolton could need more classrooms within two years, Packman warned.
 Packman said officials are keeping an eye on the sixth grade as well, which has about 25 to 27 people in its two sections. "We'd rather see this around 25," he said.
 Packman noted the school uses a part-time special education teacher to help out with the two sixth grade classes. "It's worked out great so far," he said.

DR. GERALD LABRIOLA ... lowest vote among three ... JULIE D. BELAGA ... town's choice to face O'Neill ... RICHARD C. BOZZUTO ... endorsed candidate posts loss

Choices vary, but all agree on O'Neill

Coventry helps Belaga
 COVENTRY — The small number of Coventry Republicans that turned out to vote in the Republican gubernatorial primary Tuesday did their part to give Julie Belaga the GOP nomination.
 A total of 100 — just under 15 percent of Coventry's 1,337 registered Republicans — voted, according to Town Clerk Ruth Bennett. Bennett tallied the results at the Town Office Building after the polls closed at 8 p.m.
 Belaga received 87 votes, Richard Bozzuto, the convention-endorser, received 69 votes and Gerald Labriola trailed with 24 votes.
 For lieutenant governor, Belaga's running mate, E. Clayton Gengras Jr., received 73 votes. Dennis J. Murphy, Bozzuto's choice, got 65 votes, and Leo J. Redgate, who ran with Labriola, tallied 25.
 In the first voting district, 86 votes were cast, including two absentee ballots. In the second district, 94 voters turned out.

Traffic has South Windsor worried
 By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter
 A zone-change proposal for 97 acres in northern Manchester has South Windsor officials worried about the increased traffic development could bring to their town.
 South Windsor Planning Director Marcia Banach said Tuesday that she hopes Manchester takes her town into consideration when addressing plans for high-density development on the parcel, which is located near the town line of Interstate 84.
 New York developer John Figuerra is proposing to change the land's zoning from Rural Residence, the lowest residential density classification in Manchester, to Comprehensive Urban Development, which would allow high-density residential, commercial and industrial construction.
 Along with that, Figuerra has proposed to change the CUD regulations themselves, making room for even more commercial development than is currently allowed. Should the amendment and zone change be approved, Figuerra is asking that the parcel be governed under the provisions of the 138-acre tract where the 750,000-square-foot shopping mall is being planned.
 Before filing for the zone change, the developer paid for a traffic study of the area. Development that could take place in a CUD zone would not adversely affect traffic on roads in the area, said Stephen F. Mitchell, director of traffic at Fines & O'Neill Consulting Engineers Inc., which did the study.
 Mitchell said that although roads in South Windsor were not studied during the traffic analysis, most of the traffic generated from the CUD site would not filter into that town. Most of the traffic would go either into Manchester or onto Interstate 84, Mitchell said.
 Of the 14 intersections studied for the traffic report, Mitchell said, 12 would not be hurt by potential development on the site. He added that two of the intersections — North Main and Union streets and the proposed Slater Street-Hale Road intersection — could be improved with traffic signals.
 Mitchell said that any concrete development proposals for the 97 acres would require another traffic report.

By George Lovig Herald Reporter
 Anyone waiting in one of Manchester's 12 polling places Tuesday afternoon would probably have seen two unused voting machines with curtains open and lights on.
 Attendees — usually elderly men dressed in suits and ties — were sitting on metal folding chairs in between the booths and tended to be staring at the floor.
 As expected, the turnout for Tuesday's Republican gubernatorial primary was light. When Keeney Street School and Nathan Hale School, for example, had been open for almost three hours, each had seen only about 30 people exercise their constitutional privilege.
 "It's a little slow," admitted Marie T. Munson, the moderator at Nathan Hale School.
 Beverly Malone, the moderator at Keeney, said just before 3 p.m. that a majority of those who had voted came when the polls opened at noon. "Not that they were beating down the doors," she said with a laugh. Malone had brought along some needlepoint for the times when she was not interrupted by a voter.
 At 2:55 p.m. Republican town Director Thomas H. Ferguson came in to cast his vote.
 Ferguson, the local coordinator for candidate Gerald Labriola's campaign, did not take long to make up his mind. The curtains closed around his station plus for about 15 seconds, then they opened and he walked away.
 As though he was a political Pied Piper, his appearance was followed by five more voters within the next five minutes. In fact, there was actually a waiting line for a few moments until the ballots had been cast and the voters had left the auditorium.
 Over at Bowers School, the only sound heard during the stretch of time just before 4 p.m. was that of the address-checkers talking about their homes, discussing whether they should sell and move to another part of town.
 Meanwhile, voting machine attendant Wilbert Johnson, like a shoe-shiner in an empty train station, was looking for his next customer. "This is the easiest money you ever made," he joked to a co-worker.
 However, he admitted it was not fun. "It's boring ... it's boring," he complained.
 Tacked up to the entrance of the voting room at Bowers School was a piece of paper that read: "The cure for boredom is curiosity. There is no cure for curiosity."
 Curiosity is something that might have done the voting attendants in Manchester a bit of good Tuesday afternoon.

Manchester totals

Following is the Manchester tally, by voting district, of Tuesday's Republican gubernatorial primary between candidates Richard C. Bozzuto, Julie D. Belaga and Gerald Labriola, and lieutenant gubernatorial candidates Dennis J. Murphy Jr., E. Clayton Gengras Jr. and Leo J. Redgate Sr.
 District 1, Bowers School — Bozzuto 45, Belaga 49, Labriola 24, Murphy 39, Gengras 44, and Redgate 17.

Hard line is needed on Daniloff

By charging imprisoned American journalist Nicholas Daniloff with widespread espionage activities, the Soviet Union seems to have closed off the possibility that his release can be arranged by quiet diplomacy. And in taking that step, it has given the United States no choice but to take retaliatory measures.

President Reagan set the tone Monday when he called the arrest an "outrage" and said there would be no trade for Daniloff. That statement came in response to speculation that the magazine reporter had been framed by the KGB so his freedom could be exchanged for that of a Russian alleged to be a spy who is in U.S. custody.

Initially, Reagan maintained public silence while he made a personal appeal to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev for Daniloff's release. Unfortunately, that appeal was apparently rebuffed, leaving the United States no choice but to escalate the incident.

Reagan's strong words Monday should be a signal of strong measures to follow.

The weight of evidence seems to indicate that documents were given to Daniloff so the U.S.S.R. could use him as a means of securing the freedom of Gennady Zakharov, a Soviet official at the United Nations accused of trying to buy U.S. military secrets. Even as the Soviet Union stepped up its propaganda campaign against Daniloff in the government-controlled media, information was apparently being leaked out to the press that the arrest was linked to the FBI's Aug. 23 arrest of Zakharov.

The addition of new charges against Daniloff indicates that the U.S.S.R. plans to take a hard line. Reagan's public response, calling Daniloff's imprisonment an action "that violates the standards of civilized international behavior," was an appropriate hard-line answer.

To be effective, however, it must be followed by actions — actions such as expelling Soviet officials attached to the United Nations headquarters in the United States and reducing the number of officials permitted in the Soviet embassy.

Reagan is correct in seeking to avoid steps that would endanger U.S.-Soviet arms control discussions. But, unless the United States takes a strong stand in the Daniloff case, its position will be weakened in all relations with the U.S.S.R.

"Let's just say I was on the cutting edge of investment banking."

Eddy vies against an absent Dodd

Roger Eddy has one question — and he's a little testy about it — when you ask whether he will step up the pace of his campaign for the U.S. Senate now that the Republican gubernatorial primary is history.

"Where's Dodd?" Eddy asks with fire in his eyes at the Newington farm where he is trying to run a campaign and keep up with the chores at the same time.

This is the "other" race in the fall election — the one that has played second fiddle to Democratic Gov. Bill O'Neill's battle with challenger Toby Moffett for their party's nomination and the Republican drama over who would be the GOP candidate for governor.

Roger Eddy was the unopposed candidate to challenge Democratic U.S. Senate Chris Dodd of East Haddam, whom most of the press arbitrarily installed as the favorite. Eddy is a realist, but he still dislikes being cast as the underdog so automatically, "I didn't get in this to lose," he says.

SO IT BUGS EDDY when reporters ask him — especially when they barge in unannounced as he is pecking out a speech on his manual typewriter — about the pace of his campaign. He resents the implication that he has been goofing off up to now. He says he has been getting around, even if the media has been too busy covering the gubernatorial primary to notice.

What Eddy resents most of all is that reporters aren't asking the same question of Dodd. Eddy says Dodd has been in hiding, ducking out of some appearances they were going to share and getting away with it.

It may be all right with Dodd, a popular

Reagan hits campaign trail to keep Senate Republican

By Terrence Hunt

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan ended his long summer vacation with a plunge into a battle whose outcome will be critical in shaping the final two years of his presidency.

His challenge is to hold on to his congressional power base — the Republican majority in the Senate.

The GOP now has a 53-47 edge, and a net gain of only four seats by Democrats would put them back in power for the first time since the Reagan landslide in 1980. Democrats already have a solid majority in the House, with a 253-180 advantage. There are two vacancies.

This year, Senate Republicans are particularly vulnerable. Eighteen Republican incumbents are up for re-election, while only nine Democratic incumbents have to face the voters. Seven seats are open.

Interestingly, 15 freshmen Republicans who swept into office with Reagan six years ago stand their first re-election test in November, and the results should provide a referendum on whether Reagan's conservative agenda still is popular with Americans.

THE PRESIDENT is trying to dramatize the political importance of the Republican advantage.

"It's vital that we keep Republican control of the Senate," Reagan said at a recent political fund-raiser. "We couldn't have accomplished what we have if we had not had control of that one house.

"Imagine having to deal with two Tip O'Neills (the Democratic speaker of the House) and you'll know what I'm talking about."

In Reagan's view, Democratic control of both houses of Congress would mean "we'd be playing a purely defensive game, fighting a rear-guard action to keep the opportunity society and our strong foreign policy from being dismantled piece by piece."

Stressing his partisan argument, Reagan said, "There's only one president, and if he has to fight an obstructionist leadership in both houses of Congress, it could dangerously stymie our country. We can't let America be paralyzed by a hostile Congress; we have too much yet to accomplish."

Of course, everything Reagan has won from Capitol Hill has come through the Democratic-controlled House. But clearly, a Democratic majority in both houses would give the opposition a formidable base from which to challenge Reagan in the final leg of his presidency.

TO KEEP THE GOP in control, Reagan is campaigning from coast to coast, from Florida to California, for favorites and underdogs alike.

White House aides say Reagan will devote one day a week during September to campaigning. In October, the schedule will be increased to two days a week, followed by a final blitz right before the Nov. 4 election.

His travels will be guided "mainly by looking at races where he can have an effect — races that are close where the president can make a difference," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said.

He said the president was ready "to help those who need money to get their message across."

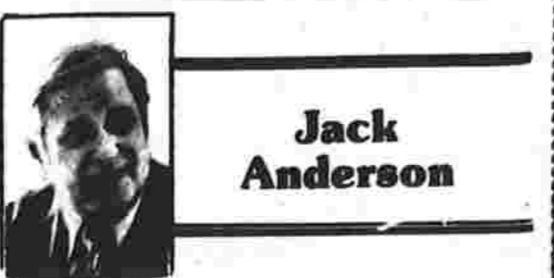

Reagan already is credited with raising $9 million for Republican Senate races, with some appearances producing more than $1 million.

Underlining the high priority given to the Senate races, Reagan's first task at the end of his 23-day vacation was a Sept. 7 fund-raiser in Los Angeles for Rep. Ed Zschau, who is trying to unseat three-term Democrat Alan Cranston.

Then, flying back to Washington the next day, Air Force One had a scheduled stop in Denver so Reagan could plug the candidacy of Rep. Ken Kramer, who is trying to prevent Democratic Rep. Tim Wirth from taking over the seat being vacated by Democrat Gary Hart.

They were not the first political outings for Reagan this year. He already has stumped for Senate candidates in Florida, Illinois, Nevada, North Carolina, Louisiana and Missouri.

Associated Press writer Terrence Hunt has covered Ronald Reagan since the 1960 presidential campaign.

Jack Anderson: FAA refused to crack down on drug abuse

WASHINGTON — The shocking allegations of illicit drug use by Los Angeles air traffic controllers shouldn't have surprised the Federal Aviation Administration. The agency was warned two years ago that drug abuse could be high among the 12,000 controllers who were hired to replace strikers fired in 1981.

The warning came from the Transportation Department's inspector general, who said, "Many of the newly hired individuals have prior records of involvement with civilian or military police involving drugs."

The inspector general's investigators found that 80 out of 2,188 controllers they checked had been implicated with drugs before joining the FAA, a spokesman told our associate Stewart Harris. Those studies were employed in the FAA's New England, Great Lakes and Northwest Mountain regions.

But none of the arrests prevented the FAA from hiring the desperately needed controllers. Federal law forbids discrimination against job applicants because of past histories of alcohol or drug abuse.

IF THE THREE REGIONS studied by the inspector general's investigators are typical, there could be 450 air traffic controllers nationwide with drug records. The inspector general noted that the number of such prior offenders could be higher than normal because most of the striker replacements grew up at a time when drug abuse was widespread.

Last year the inspector general's investigators found that three controllers at Scranton (Pa.) International Airport used marijuana. After a urinalysis exposed him, one controller confessed that he smoked pot while traveling to and from work. The others admitted smoking marijuana as often as three times a month. None admitted using the perception-altering drug while actually working in the control tower.

The inspector general's report estimated that, all told, at least 1,500 FAA employees, including controllers and others — should be enrolled in some kind of alcohol or drug rehabilitation program. Yet in fiscal 1985, only 262 FAA employees were actually enrolled in these programs.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen minimized the problem in an appearance on network television a few days ago. "We do not have a lot of drug abusers in the FAA," he asserted. "The agency did not take kindly to the inspector general's report, complaining that it didn't identify a single actual drug abuser who was on the FAA payroll. The agency insisted it has relatively few drug-related incidents considering the large number of employees."

IN AN INTERNAL MEMO, the FAA warned that the report could "severely damage public confidence in the air transportation system." Still, the fact remains that there's no way to know if control tower personnel are taking drugs, because the FAA doesn't require controllers to be tested for drug use.

While refusing to acknowledge that it has a problem, the FAA has dawdled for nearly two years over a program to test controllers for drug abuse before they are hired, then once a year after that. At first, the $700,000 drug testing program was postponed while the FAA tried to find funds. Then the program was delayed by the search for a laboratory to handle the testing.

The result is that actual drug testing for traffic controllers won't start until this December — 26 months after the inspector general warned the FAA brass that there might be junkies in their control towers.

The relaxed attitude toward drug and alcohol abuse among those on whom the safety of millions of air travelers depends is not limited to officials in Washington, apparently. The 1984 inspector general report said: "We found that (control tower) supervisors are often reluctant to take necessary action against a drug or alcohol abuser before a serious conduct event (i.e., a safety violation, civil arrest) has occurred."

AT ONE POINT, for example, the report said, it wasn't until a "serious safety event occurred," that an FAA worker who was drinking on the job finally was ordered into rehabilitation. This was despite the fact that a concerned co-worker had warned the supervisor about the boozier on three separate occasions.

Each time, according to the inspector general report, the boss replied that "he was monitoring the situation." Even when controllers are confirmed drug abusers, their punishment varies depending on the region, according to the report. Some aren't even disciplined.

H-bond redemption may be costly

QUESTION: Shortly after retiring in February 1984, we exchanged all our Series E U.S. Savings Bonds for Series H bonds, which originally had 10-year maturities. These bonds have been granted two 10-year extended maturities and will reach final maturity in February 1994. We are both 88 and probably will not see the year 1994. But just in case a miracle happens and we do live that long, should we start cashing the H bonds to avoid a large tax when they finally mature?

Time for a beer? MCC's Bill Graver bubbles when he talks about his home brew

Bill Graver pours a bottle of his homemade Dutch lager beer into a stein at the home of Richard Mellow of Manchester. Graver sampled the beer for the first time after the beer had aged for six weeks. He has been making his own beer for about a year and half, and likes to share the hobby with friends.

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter
Bill Graver grew excited when he started talking about making beer at home. "Just look at it. That's beautiful. Look at that head. Look at the color. Smell the aroma," Graver said, pouring a bottle of newly brewed beer into a clear glass stein.

valve attachment, bar-type beer bottles, beer caps, a bottle capper, a sanitizing agent, a large cooking pot and a bottle brush.

The basic ingredients for a beginning brew can be bought in a kit that consists of a 3-pound can of malt extract and the yeast. The specific gravity of the type of beer. The flavor can be altered with the combination of corn syrup and malts and hops, which can be bought separately.

There are not many places where you can buy the ingredients, Graver said. Brew and Wine Hobby in East Hartford is one of the closest stores in the area. Graver said he's also gotten additional tips on beer making from the owner and from books and pamphlets.

The first step in the preparation of the beer is to sterilize the equipment. This is crucial, Graver said, to avoid bacteria getting into the brew and killing the yeast. He washes the large container and the bottles, then sanitizes them with a product called Microchlor. A household bleach may be used instead, he said.

The next step is to prepare the wort (pronounced vert), the German word for the brew of the malt extract. This is done by combining the malt extract, the yeast, the corn sugar and hops, malts, hop and malt add (to give it flavor and texture). The quality of the water is important because any additives can affect the beer. Graver said. Chlorine could even kill the active ingredients. He uses well water from his Vermont home.

About one gallon of the brew is cooked on the stove, then added to the rest of the water in the fermenter. The fermenter is shut tight and stored in a dark cool place, such as a cellar, for about a week, before Graver checks it. The bottles are filled and capped them. Various bottles can be used to store the beer, such as the tall bar bottles, the self-capping bottles, quart bottles or even champagne bottles, Graver said.

The bottles are then returned to the cool storage area for the six- to eight-week aging process. The beer will not keep indefinitely. So Graver advised making only as much as one intends to drink during a short period of time. He tries to start new brews every six to eight weeks.

Besides counseling students for the past 15 years, and making beer, Graver also enjoys bicycling, canoeing and collecting Kingston Trio albums, and is currently serving as president of the Unitarian-Universalist Society East in Manchester. He and his wife, Louise, a marine biology teacher, have two children, Bethany and John.

Graver CAUTIONED that if the specific gravity reading is too high — meaning that fermentation is still going on — or if the brew is too carbonated, the bottles could explode.

Once the specific gravity reading is correct the beer is ready for bottling. Before it is bottled, Graver stirs in one cup of corn sugar to give the yeast more food. Add a small amount of carbonation. This special kind of sugar is available at beer-making supply stores.

Baked apple dishes summon nostalgic autumn feelings

An apple for the teacher. An apple for school. An apple for lunch. That's the rule! What rule? You all know the one we mean!

Apples in any form bring to mind so many happy memories. They make us think of crisp fall days. The aroma of an apple being baked can summon a nostalgic feeling of many pleasant times past.

Apples in many varieties will not be coming in profusion to the local markets and roadside stands. Whether eaten raw or cooked, apples give us a very real sense of well-being.

Nutritionally, apples are a winner. They provide us with a number of essential nutrients, though none in great quantity. They are low in sodium and low in calories. An average apple contains about 75 calories, and loads of fiber. Because of their high cellulose content, apples are an excellent source of fiber in the diet. Ideally, apples should be eaten unpeeled.

The favorite apple of New England is the McIntosh. This apple is suitable for both cooking and eating. Many other varieties are also available, with the Cortland and Delicious being next in popularity.

One of the most popular forms of cooked apple is applesauce. This easy-to-make family favorite can be prepared in the microwave in just 10 minutes.

Applesauce

- 4 medium cooking apples, peeled, cored and quartered
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon

Place apples and water in a 1 1/2-quart casserole. Cover and microwave on high for 10 minutes, or until apples are tender, stirring well after 5 minutes. Mash apples with a fork. Stir in sugar and cinnamon. Cool. Yields 6 servings.

Apples can be a part of your family's menu from breakfast through dinner. Why not start with quick apple pancakes? This tasty treat is sure to get your family off to a winning day.

- 1/4 teaspoon cloves
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 cup raisins
- 1/4 cup chopped walnuts
- 1/4 cups applesauce
- 1/4 cup brown sugar

Cream shortening and sugar together. Beat in eggs. Add flour, soda, baking powder, cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg, raisins and nuts. Stir in applesauce and water.

In a 1-quart casserole dish, mix sugar and cornstarch; add water; stir in raisins. Cover with vented plastic wrap, and microwave on high for 5 to 6 minutes, or until apples are tender. Let stand for 5 minutes; lightly lift plastic wrap. Stir in apples and almond extract.

Combine all topping ingredients. Sprinkle over fruit. Microwave uncovered on high for 8 1/2 to 9 1/2 minutes. Serve warm with whipped topping or vanilla ice cream. Yields 4 servings.

Apple cranberry crisp

- 2 tablespoons water
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch
- 2/3 cup fresh cranberries
- 4 tart apples, cored and sliced
- 1/4 teaspoon almond extract

TOPIPING:

- 1/2 cup oatmeal
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon

In a 9-inch microwave pie plate or round cake pan microwave butter for 30 to 45 seconds on high or until melted. Stir in apples, 1/2 cup sugar, 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg. Cover; microwave on high for 3 to 4 minutes, or until apples are tender. In a medium bowl, blend all batter ingredients; pour over cooked apples. In a small bowl combine all topping ingredients. Sprinkle over batter.

Microwave on high for 3 to 5 minutes, or until toothpick inserted 1/2 to 2 inches from the edge comes out clean. Let stand for 5 minutes. Cut into wedges. Yield: 6 servings.

Place half of the batter into an 8-inch round cake dish lined with waxed paper. Microwave for 7 minutes on high, until cake springs back when touched lightly. Let stand for 5 minutes; directly on counter top before turning out onto cake rack. Repeat with second layer. When both layers are cool, frost with cream cheese frosting.

Cream cheese frosting

- 2 packages (3 ounces each) cream cheese
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1 tablespoon cream or milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 4 cups confectioner's sugar (sifted if lumpy)

Combine cream cheese and butter in a medium mixing bowl. Microwave for 1 to 2 minutes, or warm (10 percent) or until soft but not melted.

Work fork, stir in cream and vanilla. Gradually add sugar until the frosting reaches spreading consistency. Frost tops of layer cake.

Plant of 508 Geraldine Drive, Concord; Cadet John Thurston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thurston of 355 W. Middle Turnpike; and Cadet Timothy J. Kalkus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Kalkus of 11 Green Hills Drive, Bolton.

Custer set for active duty

Michael D. Custer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Custer of Manchester, enlisted in the Marine Corps. He is scheduled to begin active duty Sept. 18, starting with 11 weeks of training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S.C. Then he will attend advanced infantry training. He will be assigned to a reserve unit in Chicopee, Mass., where he will serve his weekend drills.

Scanners let shoppers keep track of all of their purchases

I would certainly use the do-it-yourself scanner I get very impatient when it takes me longer to go through the checkout with a week's groceries than it does to go through the aisles and put the same groceries in my bag a year ago at Ream's Superstore in American Fork, Utah. These scanners let shoppers scan the Universal Product Code symbols on their own purchases. As the shoppers scan the code, the scanner beeps and registers the amount they were spending appeared on the screen in front of them.

Once they had finished scanning, they could move on to a cashier, who would have their receipt ready and could deduct the value of their coupons. The owners of Ream's were surprised at how many of the store's customers — even those with large orders — seemed pleased with the do-it-yourself scanning.

"At the end of the column, I asked readers what they thought of the idea," Gladys DeBerry of Nags Head, N.C., wrote: "I think the scanning idea sounds great. Because I have more time than money, I would gladly ring up my own purchases. That way I could make sure there were no errors."

"I think do-it-yourself scanning is a unique and ingenious idea," said Pat Bridges of Beatrice, Neb. "We have two large bag-it-yourself stores in our town, and they do very well. So I think people would try using their own purchases, especially if a small discount were offered."

Mrs. Stephen Collier of Ft. Wayne, Ind., thinks do-it-yourself scanning might help her get out of the supermarket faster. "I think it's a wonderful idea,

Advice

Meaning of pre-engagement should be left to the couple

DEAR ABBY: Recently, several young girls I work with have come to work wearing rings with tiny diamonds... They call them "pre-engagement rings."

DEAR ABBY: I was moved to write when I read the young girl's complaint about her mother's secondhand smoke.

Advantages vary for health maintenance organizations

The next time you miff and contemplate seeing a doctor to do something about that persistent cold, think of this: According to the Health Care Financing Administration, in 1985, the national health care expenditure was $225 billion...

According to the Group Health Association of America (GHA), both private and public employers, including state governments and their political subdivisions, are subject to the dual choice requirement.

Employers are not required to offer more than one of each type of qualified HMO (Group Model or IPA) in a given area. Also, an employer does not have to contract with the first HMO that requests to be in the health plan if there is another qualified HMO which agrees to be included.

In theory, HMOs should produce great savings for the employer, traditional health insurance, prepayment of fixed premiums would provide an incentive for HMOs to contain costs, and thus pass this savings on to the employees who provide health care.

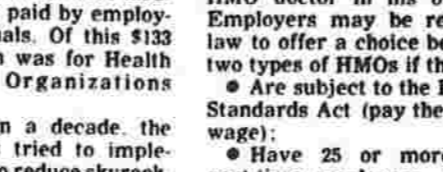

Some companies question whether HMOs really yield savings. A 1986 health care study conducted by H.S. Hansen Inc. (believed to be the largest and most detailed survey ever taken) polled 861 corporations and other organizations and found that of the HMOs in existence, a majority (61 percent) were said to be more expensive than the employer's indemnity plan.

The Washington Business Group on Health (WBGH) and the GHA have proposed regulatory changes from the HMO Act of the '70s. Since HMOs have been popular as a major health care provider in companies in the '80s, "cost-effective analysis is required."

Although HMOs have financial incentives to operate in a cost-effective manner, the savings generated are not always passed on to the employer or the employees who are HMO members. WBGH explains that HMOs tend to attract younger, healthier members who have lower health care costs...

NCAA barking up the wrong tree in Alabama case

News item — The University of Alabama may be in trouble with the NCAA for transporting players to a funeral.

It is, admittedly, a Catch-22 situation. The rules in question are sections 3-1-G and 3-1-H of the NCAA constitution, which deal with "extra benefits" for student-athletes.

Laying lines

Douglas Bouvin sits on a line-painting machine as he sprays a white line on the road at the corner of Center and Stone streets Tuesday morning. Bouvin, who works for the state Department of Transportation, and his partner, Dan Witherell, have been painting lines for two days. They repainted the streets each year.
