'Crusade' view mixed in schools

Students in Manchester agree that something should be done about drugs in the hallways of their schools, but see solutions such as urine testing and locker-sniffing dogs as violations of their rights. That picture emerged in interviews conducted this week by the Manchester Herald with about 30 students at Manchester High School and Bannet Junior High School.

In the interviews, even the six students who admitted to trying various drugs said they see a problem that needs to be addressed. At the same time, the current anti-drug push — a first, some students said — was described as a threat to constitutional freedoms.

The students' comments came as Connecticut's largest teachers' union gave support to the Reagan administration's "crusade" against drug use in American schools.

Part of that push is a 76-page booklet written by U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett and widely distributed this month. The booklet offers suggestions to parents, students and school officials on how to stop the flow of drugs into the classroom. It mentions strategies for students and locker searches, including those performed with trained police dogs.

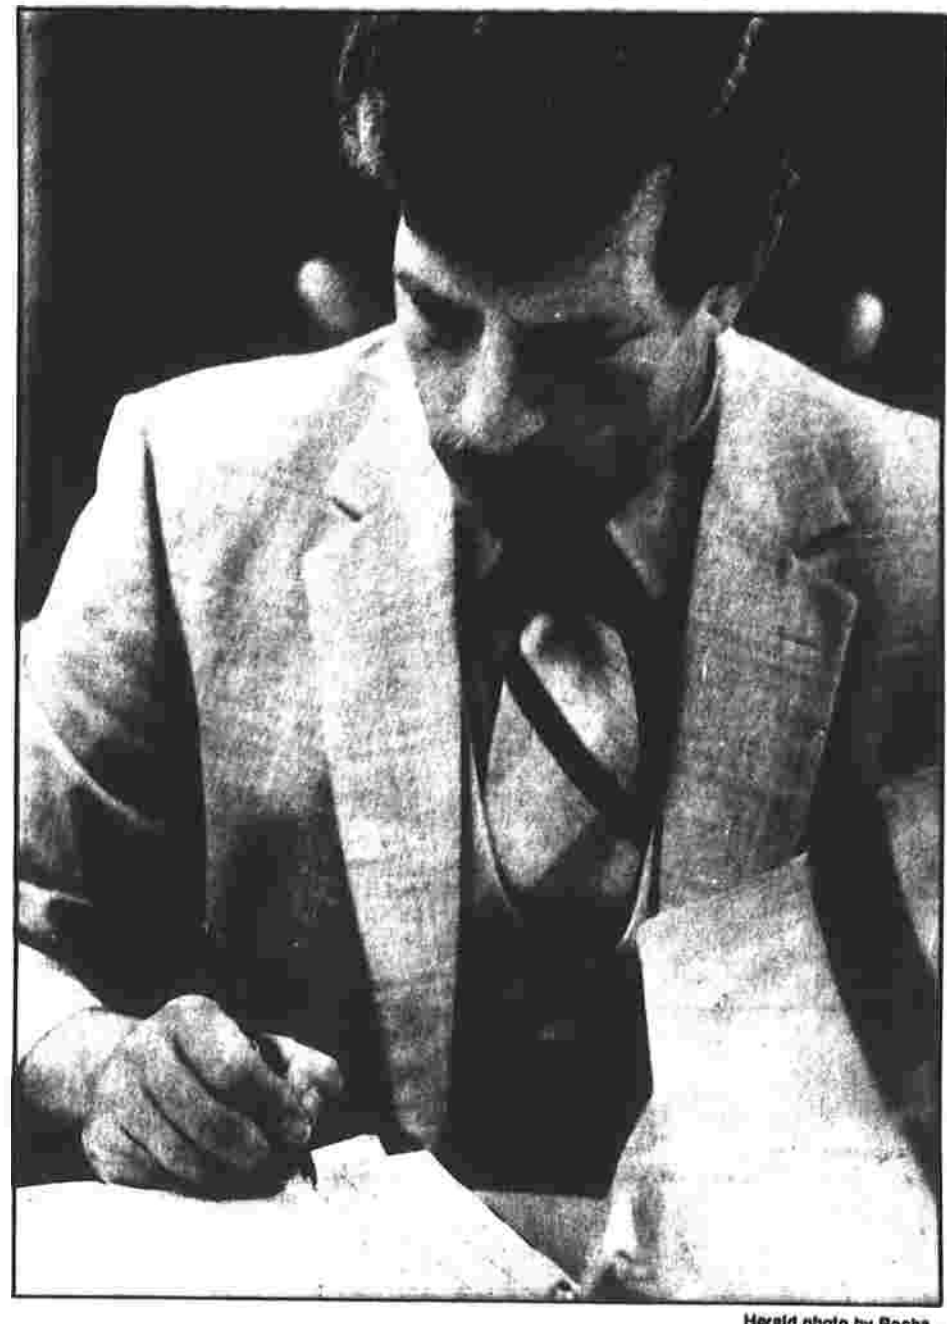

Every MHS and Bannet student interviewed said there has clearly been more talk about drug troubles recently than in past years.

"You just hear it more than you see it," said MHS senior Karen Suhle, echoing the sentiments of many. Shelly Howe, a senior, recalled an announcement over the loudspeaker system one morning last week that urged students to band together to fight drugs in the schools.

"This is the first time they've ever talked about it, really," she said. The Student Activities Association, which made the appeal, was "showing that they care, and they want something to be done about it," Howe said.

"We're realizing that it's happening around us," Suhle said, adding that she has no desire to try drugs.

One junior at the school, who asked that her name not be used, said she had tried drugs because they were so easy to get. She said a crackdown was in order. Matthew Flynn, a senior who belongs to a high school SAA, said of the situation: "There's no need for panic, but there's a need for calm, either." He said drug testing and drug-sniffing dogs should be used "only if there's a reason to."

Capt. Joseph Brooks of the Manchester Police Department logs in an 18-ounce bag of cocaine that was confiscated during an arrest on Hazel Street in January. The case is still pending trial. The bag has a street value of about $250,000, Brooks said. Cocaine is one drug students said was available around Manchester.

Owner retakes Weaving Mill, sells it again

Ownership of the former Cheney Bros. Weaving Mill at 91 Elm St. has been transferred back to its original owner, who has found a new buyer for it.

Owner Kibbe Gerstein said today he has signed an agreement to sell the property, but is bound not to disclose the name of the buyer or the purchase price.

Gerstein said that as far as he knows, the buyer plans to convert the building to rental apartments, a concept already approved by the Manchester Planning and Zoning Commission. He also said that as far as he knows, neither David C. Woodbury Associates Inc. nor Munro, Jennings and Dolg Associates Inc. — the original buyers — are involved in the purchase.

Those two corporations are partners in Silk Mill Associates, the limited partnership that has been attempting to arrange the conversion of the apartments but has apparently failed to develop a viable proposal.

Gerstein said he took the property back because Silk Mill Associates was not moving forward with the conversion.

The quietclaim deeds transfer the property to Kibbe Gerstein and to Kemaco, controlled by Gerstein, a Manchester manufacturer. The deeds list a price of about $1.4 million. They were dated Jan. 30, 1985, and were filed in the office of the town clerk Tuesday.

Mechanic's liens against the property have also been filed.

Phelon, Squarish, Fitzgerald, Dyer and Wood — a law firm at 775 Main St. — has filed liens over $83,118.50 in legal fees for services performed from August 1984 to Sept. 23, 1986, during the time the property was owned by Silk Mill Associates Limited Partnership.

The quietclaim deeds transfer the property in two pieces, about 8.7 acres of it to Kemaco and less than one acre to Gerstein personally.

MJD Construction Inc. of Farmington has also filed a pair of mechanic's liens against the property for $180,000 in services and materials. The liens name Silk Mill Associates, Kemaco and/or Kibbe Gerstein. Documents say the liens are in force only if the quietclaim deeds filed Sept. 23 are found valid.

The MJD liens are signed by John Dolg as president of MJD Construction Inc.

Dolg is also president of Munro, Jennings and Dolg Associates, one of the partners in Silk Mill Associates.

Dolg could not be reached this morning for comment on the change in control of the property.

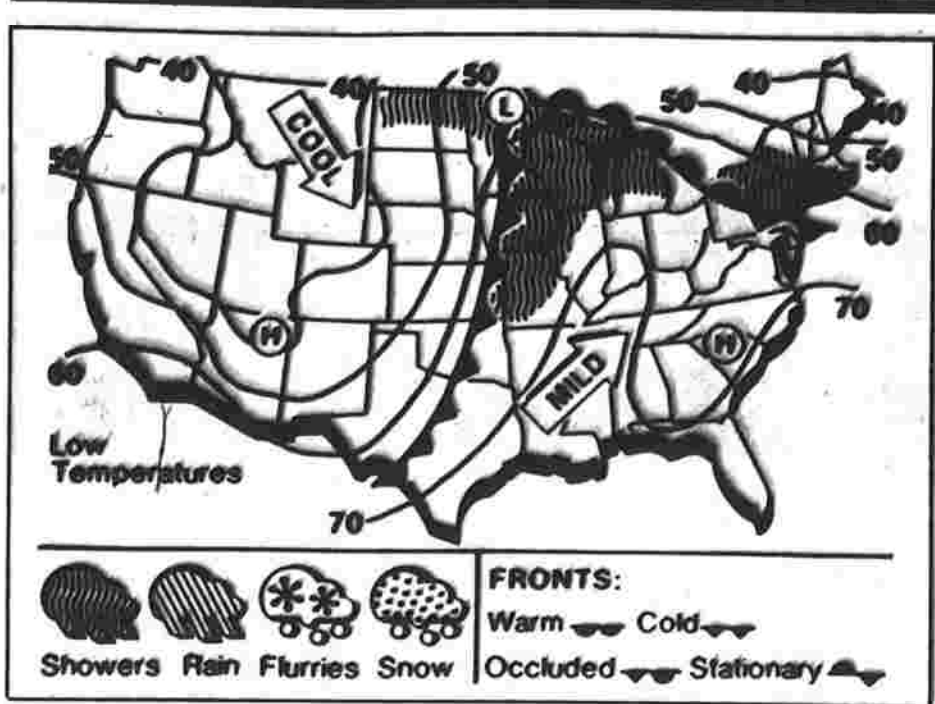

Earlier this week, Dolg said the owners of the mill still planned to have the mill converted to 249 apartments by the end of 1987. He said the key to arranging financial backing for the conversion was the federal tax bill making it a through Congress. The tax reform measure may remove incentives for people to invest in such projects.

One person close to the situation who declined to be identified said today that the filing of the quietclaim deeds and of the liens is an indication that the tax incentives available now make it worthwhile to go forward with the project.

One possibility for conversion of the mill is to create a new housing for the elderly. A Hartford architectural firm, Strocker, LaBau, Arnell & McManus, has considered that idea. David LaB

WEATHER

NATIONAL FORECAST — Generally clear skies and cool weather are forecast for most of the western half of the nation on Saturday. Showers are forecast for the Midwest, Great Lakes and North Dakota, as well as for the Northeast.

MORNING CLOUDS — Satellite photo taken at 3:30 a.m. shows widespread cloudiness stretching from the Rockies back to the Pacific coast with pockets of precipitation. A strong storm system with thunderstorms can be seen over central Texas and off the Florida coast. Frontal clouds and scattered thunderstorms have developed over the eastern Great Lakes and New York.

PEOPLE

Celebrity lobby

Jane Fonda, Michael J. Fox, Whoopi Goldberg and other Hollywood activists will tour the state to promote California's clean water initiative.

"We didn't want to do another concert, but we wanted something rooted in Americana," said Neil Merson, who with fellow Tri Star producer Craig Zadan conceived the Hollywood Clean Water Caravan to support Proposition 65.

The three-day tour, which will take more than 40 celebrities to nine cities, was to begin today.

"They want to meet people and rally them to vote on 65," said Zadan. "Can you imagine being registered to vote by Chevy Chase?"

Proposition 65 would impose stringent standards to control the discharge of toxic chemicals that could contaminate drinking water.

Other celebrities joining all or part of the tour are Rosanna Arquette, Ed Begley Jr., Shari Belafonte-Harper, Cher, Morgan Fairchild, Linda Gray, Sally Kellerman, Margot Kidder and Victoria Principal.

WHOOPI GOLDBERG ... backs clean water one count of felony battery and two counts of violating probation. He is accused of beating a friend, Chelsea Lee Ellis, 35, at his Malibu home last September. Ellis testified at a hearing that Vincent punched her after complaining that she was interfering in his love life. Jury selection began Thursday in Santa Monica, Calif.

Penn, 41, received a continuance Thursday until Oct. 3 of his arraignment on misdemeanor battery charges, said Los Angeles city attorney's spokesman Ted Goldstein.

Penn is accused of pushing songwriter David Wolkoff off a chair in a nightclub and kicking him. Wolkoff, 37, said Penn accused him of trying to kiss Madonna on April 12.

A famous name

Herschel Walker says he's enjoying the notoriety of his famous name.

"That's Herschel Walker the plumber's apprentice, not Herschel Walker the running back for the Dallas Cowboys."

"Up until the time the Dallas Cowboys signed that other Herschel Walker to be on the team, my life was real ordinary," said the 25-year-old punter.

"He said the name alone carries such an aura that some people momentarily overlook the fact that he weighs only 150 pounds, has blond hair and blue eyes."

He opened a new bank account two weeks ago.

"The manager of the bank personally wrote me a letter and thanked me for doing business with his bank," he said. "He asked me to please stop by and say hello the next time I came by."

The punter said the manager apparently didn't stop to wonder why a man with a multimillion-dollar contract would be opening an account with only $125.

False ad claims?

Actors George Hamilton and Lloyd Bridges have been named in a $700,000 lawsuit because they acted as spokesmen for a financial company accused of defrauding investors of millions of dollars.

The lawsuit, filed in Grand Rapids, Mich., refers to television ads made by Bridges urging people to invest in A.J. Obie & Associates and ads by Hamilton for his parent company, Diamond Mortgage Corp.

The lawsuit, filed by eight investors Wednesday, contends the actors were paid by Obie and Diamond to make "false representations."

The lawsuit also names A.J. Obie and Diamond Mortgage, which are undergoing liquidation under Chapter 7 of federal bankruptcy law.

The actors would not comment on the suit.

Sinatra in Spain

Halfway through his first concert in Spain, Frank Sinatra lifted a glass and shouted "Viva Espana" to the cheers of 40,000 fans in Madrid.

"I'm looking forward to this for a long time," he went on in English, apparently brushing over the times he vowed never to return to Spain after his troubles with the press and photographers during filming of "The Prince and the Paion."

"Being host to the United Nations does not mean we should be best to intelligence activities by other nations." —Secretary of State George P. Shultz, referring to a U.S. order expelling 26 Soviet diplomats.

FOCUS

Coops!

The recent summit meeting between Israel's Shimon Peres and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak led many to hope that the Arab nations of the Middle East might one day settle their differences with the Jewish state of Israel. During the Middle East crisis in 1948, that same hope was stated in a way not likely to convince many in the Middle East. Warren Austin, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations suggested that Arabs and Jews settle their differences "like good Christians."

Almanac

Today is Friday, Sept. 26, the 260th day of 1986. There are 90 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 24, 1793, Thomas Jefferson was appointed America's first secretary of state; John Jay became the first chief justice of the United States; Samuel Osgood began service as the first postmaster-general; and Edmund Jennings Randolph was named the first attorney general.

On this date:

In 1777, British troops occupied Philadelphia in the American Revolution.

In 1820, pioneer Daniel Boone died in Missouri at age 85.

In 1866, poet T.S. Eliot was born.

In 1892, John Philip Sousa and his band performed in public for the first time, in Plainfield, N.J.

In 1895, composer George Gershwin was born.

No shedding

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Bald is apparently beautiful even at cat shows.

Grenlin, at age 7 months, is being courted as the featured feline at this weekend's 11th annual Westchester Cat Show, even though he has ears like a jack rabbit, the countenance of a bloodhound and no hair.

Grenlin is one of an estimated 80 to 100 Sphynx cats worldwide — there are about 10 to 20 in the United States — who evolved from a mutation of the Devon Rex breed about five years ago in Holland.

Breeders have begun developing the pedigree, hoping to create animals hardy enough to sell as house pets.

Peter Markstein of Yorktown, who owns Grenlin with his wife, said first reports of the breed go back to the beginning of the century, but the breed died out because it was susceptible to disease.

Manchester/Area Towns In Brief

Lincoln directs CRT fuel aid

Jackie Lancelotti of Manchester has been named director of fuel assistance for the Community Renewal Team of Greater Hartford.

Lancelotti, a CRT staffer since 1987, has also been director of operations, support and training, and chief of operations and support, according to CRT's announcement.

A graduate of Hartford's Weaver High School, Lancelotti is now working toward a bachelor's degree in human services in the business administration program at New Haven's College.

Nine at MHS are 'outstanding'

Nine Manchester High School students will receive letters of commendation from the National Merit Scholarship Corp. "in recognition of outstanding academic promise," MHS has announced.

The students are Melanie E. Bodin, Jennifer A. Clough, Robert M. Fallon, Elizabeth M. Malter, Anna M. Riggo, Gail A. Sheffield, Jeffrey H. Spiegel, Stacey E. Tomkiet and Scott T. Yarrick. All are seniors.

The nine were designated commended students in the 1987 National Merit Scholarship Program.

More than one million students across the country entered the program by taking the PSAT/NMSQT test in October 1986, when most of them were juniors. The 25,000 commended students scored slightly below the level required of semifinalists, who are competing for scholarships to be awarded in the spring.

Coventry students commended

COVENTRY — Six Coventry High School seniors were designated as commended students in the 1987 National Merit Scholarship Program, scoring slightly below the level required for semifinalist standing.

According to a news release from the school, the six are among the top 25,000 participants in the 32nd annual merit program. More than a million entered the program, and 25,000 are commended students.

Of the top students, 15,000 semifinalists, including Karen Draboy, a senior at Coventry High School, will continue in the competition for some 6,000 merit scholarships to be awarded in spring 1987.

Coventry's commended students are Kevin P. Banks, Genevieve C. Smith, David T. Burrell, Jason Garick, Kim M. Hodge and Lisa Talaga.

Firehouse dedication is Sunday

BOLTON — An open house will be held Sunday to celebrate the formal dedication of the town's new fire station, which was occupied Wednesday immediately after a certificate of occupancy was issued. The station will be open from 12 to 7 p.m., with the dedication taking place at 3 p.m.

Work on the $600,000 project began last November, and was to have been finished in June. Cold weather during the winter prevented completion of masonry work, delaying the project.

The open house will feature refreshments and tours of the station, located at the corner of Bolton Center and Notch roads.

Six RHAM students recognized

HEBRON — Six RHAM High School students have been designated commended students in the 1987 Merit Scholarship Program.

The students, all seniors, are Denise A. Bartlett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bartlett of Marlborough; Jennifer C. Blewitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blewitt of Hebron; Melanie L. Estes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Estes of Marlborough; Lena R. Foran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Foran of Marlborough; Michael J. Snider, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Snider of Hebron; and Sarah J. Wyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Wyer of Marlborough.

The six students placed in the top 5 percent of over one million participants in the annual National Merit Scholarship Program, according to an announcement from the school.

Voters must register before it's too late

As of Thursday, there were 28,318 Manchester voters eligible to vote in the Nov. 4 election. But the Manchester registrars of voters hope to increase that number by the time the election rolls around.

For most people living in Manchester, Oct. 14 is the last day they can become voters and still vote in the election.

The office of the registrars, in the basement of the Municipal Building at 41 Center St., is open every weekday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Eligible people can become voters during those hours.

In addition, several special voter registration sessions are scheduled in the registrars' office before the Oct. 14 deadline.

Here is the schedule:

- Saturday, Sept. 27 — 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.
- Saturday, Oct. 4 — 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.
- Wednesday, Oct. 8 — 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.
- Saturday, Oct. 11 — 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.
- Tuesday, Oct. 14 — 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

In addition to the sessions in the registrars' office, there are sessions at Stop & Shop supermarket at the Parkade on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

There are also sessions on Thursdays at the Parkade mall from 8:30 to 8:30 p.m.

People who have a permanent physical disability may arrange to have an election official visit them to take an application to register. The registrars' office, 647-3025, can provide further information.

Some people can become voters after Oct. 14 and still be eligible to vote Nov. 4. They include people who move into town after Oct. 14, people who become citizens after Oct. 14 and people who become 18 Nov. 3.

Those whose 18th birthday falls between May 4, 1986, and Nov. 4, 1986, do not have to wait to register, however. They can become voters now and be permitted to vote Nov. 4.

Anyone who has moved within town in the past four months should phone the registrars to notify them of the change of address.

State funds help towns fight drugs

By George Lavin
Herold Reporter

Manchester, Coventry and Andover have all received state grants to help fund alcohol and drug prevention efforts for young people.

The money, which was available to Connecticut towns through the state Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission, was awarded according to the number of children 19 years old and younger in each town.

Manchester Police Department extra money to continue its drug-awareness efforts in schools, and to sponsor a poster contest in the schools.

An ad-hoc council formed in August will oversee distribution of the money in Manchester. The group, whose members were selected to qualify for the money, comprises town administrators, residents and representatives of private organizations such as Crossroads, which promotes drug awareness among junior high school students.

Assaults, sword swing lead to arrests in town

Police arrested a Manchester man after he allegedly hit an officer while the man's sister was being taken into protective custody Wednesday.

Peter Loftstrom, 41, of 61 Alice Drive, was charged with interfering with a police officer and assault of a police officer, police said today.

Police said they responded to a call from a Wedgewood Drive woman who had taken two tranquilizers and refused to go to the hospital.

After repeated attempts to coax her, police said, they took the woman into protective custody and carried her outside. Police said she was struggling and screaming.

As police carried the woman, Loftstrom and another sister tried to calm her, police said. After Loftstrom told the sister to back off, police told Loftstrom he was interfering. Police said an officer was hit on the right side of the face as officers tried to handcuff Loftstrom.

Loftstrom was released on a $1,500 non-surety bond and faces a $1,500 appearance in Manchester Superior Court.

Police said a man who lived at the Manchester shelter for the homeless was arrested after he threatened a woman with a sword Thursday night.

Police said Kenneth Oliver, 18, was charged with threatening and carrying a dangerous weapon. He also was charged, on an outstanding warrant, with second-degree criminal trespass and third-degree criminal mischief by conspiracy.

The Thursday charges stem from a fight on State Street in which one person had a sword, according to a police report. Police said they were called to the stone wall near Center Park, and a woman, Rebecca Wescott, told them her life had been threatened by a man with a sword.

She told police Oliver had pulled out the sword and told her he would slice open her stomach.

Two Chinese "throwing stars" used in martial arts were found in Oliver's jacket pockets, police said.

Police said the Wescott, also identified as a shelter resident, was arrested on an outstanding warrant. She was charged with second-degree criminal trespass and third-degree criminal mischief.

Oliver was held in a $1,500 bond and appeared in Manchester Superior Court this morning. Wescott was held on a $1,500 bond and also was scheduled to appear in court this morning.

IN COVENTRY, the money will be used to develop a "Just Say No Club" for teenagers, conduct a survey of residents about drug and alcohol abuse and provide a chemical-free event, according to the governor's office.

The money received by Andover, Hebron and Marlborough will be used to educate teachers, develop prevention programs, provide workshops and develop a network of resources about drug and alcohol awareness, the release said.

As for Bolton, Administrative Assistant Karen Levine said Thursday the town did not meet the filing deadline to receive the grant money. She said officials wanted to coordinate creation of a town group with the Board of Education, but did not have enough time.

"According to governor's office, 108 out of 169 municipalities received grants," O'Neill is arguing that the other towns "apply for these funds as soon as possible."

Charting future course a struggle for Coventry

By Jacqueline Bennett
Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — Concern over "poor public image" and the "inability of townspeople to agree on a direction for the future dominated a meeting on economic development held by members of the Town Council and other commissions Thursday night.

"We always seem like we're in a crisis situation," said Rose Fowler, a Democratic member of the Town Council and former chairwoman of the Economic Development Commission. "We have a volatile reputation, like we don't have our act together. I don't know if we can accomplish what we're trying to here."

Speaking to a group of about 25 people who attended the meeting at the Town Office Building, Fowler said that Coventry's "bad reputation" might keep businesses from locating in town. She was referring to publicity about ongoing political battles in town.

Kenneth L. Roberts and Martha A. Steinberg, state Department of Economic Development officials who attended the meeting to provide information and offer advice, tried to dispel the residents' doubts and discussed the issues surrounding adoption of a town plan.

"DON'T FEEL ALONE in the uncertainty of your quest," said Steinberg. She said many smaller towns have fears connected with development, and advised Coventry officials to generate awareness about planning for growth, to "smooth ruffled feathers and create a pleasant atmosphere in town."

Roberts said the best procedure to follow in forming a development plan would be to define the direction the town wants to take; to determine the land available and the access to it; to address the availability of sewer and water systems; to consider zoning matters; and to focus on the unique qualities of the town.

"The University of Connecticut is a major resource," Roberts said. He emphasized that the talent at UConn — especially in the area of physical sciences — lends itself to high-technology development in Coventry, which is about nine miles from the university campus.

Roberts also noted the town's proximity to Connetquot, a research park being built in Mansfield by UConn. The park will feature business sites, a hotel and conference center and residential facilities. According to Roberts, it is "likely there will be an overflow of similar development from that park into Coventry."

LIGHT INDUSTRY and further residential development, as well as the promotion of tourism, were also discussed Thursday night.

Roberts told the crowd that assistance available from the state includes small and large business loans, from $20,000 to $200,000, investment incentives, such as low-cost state-subsidized industrial parks, site-selection services, and technical help for manufacturers.

Town Council Chairwoman Joan Lewis said she'd like to promote the historic value of Coventry, which is the birthplace of colonial patriot Nathan Hale. She said she would like to see a historic district developed along Main Street. "People could visit the (Nathan Hale) Homestead, Centlands, and the shops," said Lewis. Roberts advised officials to meet with local businessmen and ask for input. Next, a consortium of town officials, commission members, and business people could put the town's development plan into action by publicizing Coventry and pursuing available resources like UConn.

Members of the Conservation Commission asked that farmers also be represented on the consortium to ensure protection of farm and forest lands which make up about 60 percent of Coventry.

FEARS ABOUT land-banking and small businesses being driven out to make way for more lucrative interests were also discussed. The state officials said there was little that could be done, except to try to discourage such fears.

Jim Ladd, a member of the Economic Development Commission, was skeptical about any changes. "This is all relevant to the completion of the highway and Connetquot, and it's a long way to go... Maybe four to five years," Ladd said.

Town Planner Pat Gatzkiewicz disagreed and said things like the Route 6 expressway and Connetquot are nearing reality.

It was agreed that members of the Planning and Zoning Commission, Conservation Commission, Economic Development Committee, and Town Council would meet during October to exchange ideas about their philosophies for the town's future. They would bring them to businessmen in January.

Sandra Stave, a member of the Economic Development Commission, said the best way to overcome Coventry's bad reputation would be to educate the public about the positive qualities of the town. Coventry should be marketed and publicized, she said.

'Crusade' review is mixed

Few others agreed. Jason Gerver, an eighth-grader at Bennett, said his English class had recently been assigned an essay on whether students should allow drug testing. The popular opinion was against the action, he said. "It's a violation of our constitutional rights."

Bennet sixth-grader Tony Pritchard said there is a drug problem at the junior high school, but not as bad as the ones at the high school. But one sophomore at Manchester High, who requested anonymity, said she had noticed more drugs while attending Bennett.

Manchester School Superintendent James P. Kennedy said the drug of choice is still alcohol, but all types of drugs are probably available. "If the student really wants drugs, they can get them," he said.

Bob Digan, coordinator of youth services for the Manchester Board of Education, said he has noticed a decrease in drug use among students. He said that besides alcohol, marijuana is still the popular drug on campus. In his work with students, he has yet to see LSD or cocaine.

Linda Haberern, administrative education coordinator for Crossroads, a drug-prevention service, also noted a shift toward the use of alcohol.

While all students admitted something had to be done, few offered solutions.

A high school senior who didn't want his name used said officials should continue what they are doing — checking lockers in enrollment files and talking more about drugs.

Flynn said more education and involvement are needed, and he criticized purveyors of the anti-drug cause for not asking the student population to join the effort.

James T. Flynn (center) leaves the wooded area where the body of his 11-year-old daughter, Kathleen Marie, was found Wednesday near Ponus Ridge Middle School, where she was a student. With him are the girl's uncle, Raymond Imperato (right), and the Rev. Victor Martin.

FBI joins search for killer of girl

NORWALK (AP) — The FBI has joined the hunt for a killer who sexually assaulted and strangled an 11-year-old girl as she walked a half-mile from school to her home in a wealthy neighborhood.

Investigators have "developed some valuable leads" in the death of Kathleen Marie Flynn, Norwalk police Chief Carl LaBianca said Thursday.

The sixth-grader's body was discovered around 2 a.m. Wednesday after a nine-hour search that started when she failed to return home from Ponus Ridge Middle School on Tuesday.

"We are doing our own investigation. We are only asking the FBI to assist us with whatever expertise they may have for this horrendous crime we want to solve," LaBianca said.

Among the clues police are investigating is a report filed at the outset of the school year about a man who tried to lure a 9-year-old girl into a red sports car, he said.

Initial evidence suggests that "the person or persons responsible have been in the area on previous occasions," LaBianca said.

The girl, who had attended her new school for only 10 days, usually goes through the woods on her way home, police said.

The neighborhood, including the dead-end street where the Flynn home lives, is made up of single-family residences with an average cost of about $200,000, officials said.

"Something like this isn't supposed to happen around here," said Lynn Drew, a neighborhood resident and mother of an eighth-grade student at the school.

Tax plan divides state delegation

By Daniel Seegon
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fairness won out when the House passed a massive overhaul of the nation's tax system, Rep. Barbara B. Kennelly, D-Conn., says.

But her opinion was not shared by Reps. Stewart McKinney, a Republican, and Sam Gejdenson, a Democrat, who voted against the bill Thursday.

The Connecticut U.S. House delegation split 4-2 on the bill, which passed 598-138.

"With this legislation, Americans will be making out their taxes with a fairer code," Kennelly said.

"This bill has imperfections," she said. "The sales tax deduction, which I fought hard to save, is one, and I predict we will soon see efforts to restore it. But even without the deduction, most Connecticut taxpayers will see their taxes go down, not up."

That view was shared by Rep. John Rowland, R-Conn., who also supported the bill.

Rowland said an analysis by a Waterbury, Conn., accounting firm of actual tax returns showed the vast majority of people in his district would pay fewer dollars to the federal government under the overhaul bill.

Also voting for it were Reps. Nancy Johnson, a Republican, and Bruce Morrison, a Democrat, both of whom said the bill was fairer than existing tax law.

But McKinney and Gejdenson said they felt the bad points of the bill outweighed its good ones. McKinney said when the tax reform effort started, supporters promised a bill that would be fairer, simpler and more conducive to economic growth than current law. The bill approved Thursday achieved none of those goals, he said.

McKinney also said the bill, while correcting some problems in the tax code, would hurt middle-class taxpayers and small businesses.

"The argument that half a loaf is better than no loaf at all isn't true when the half loaf is a bad half," McKinney said.

The bill now goes to the Senate, where Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., has said he will oppose it. Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., says he is undecided.

Kennelly said the bill "reduces taxes for those who can least afford to pay them, gives middle-income Americans a much-needed break and demands that the very wealthiest and the big corporations pay their fair share."

Also voting for it were Reps. Nancy Johnson, a Republican, and Bruce Morrison, a Democrat, both of whom said the bill was fairer than existing tax law.

Police told to recruit more minorities

HARTFORD (AP) — A federal judge has ordered the state police to put a higher priority on recruiting minority troopers by increasing the number of minority applications in the next police training class.

The order, issued Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Robert C. Zampano, was made public Thursday. The order follows a request by minority state police troopers that the department be held in contempt for failing to meet its 1984 agreement to try to hire 46 minority troopers.

Since the 1984 agreement, 28 additional minority troopers have been hired, according to Martha Stone, a Connecticut Civil Liberties Union lawyer representing minority troopers.

The judge's order concerns the group of 140 state police candidates scheduled to start training classes in January.

The minority officers have reserved the right to block the coming training class if terms of Zampano's order are not met. Sgt. Charles Levy, president of Men and Women for Justice, the group of minority officers who brought the original suit, Thursday accused state police of not complying with previous agreements.

"Every section of this lawsuit that has been signed off with the consent decree has been violated by the state. They have not adhered to one section yet," he said.

Bolton may raise requirement for high school graduation

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Students at Bolton High School will need two extra credits to graduate if a proposal by their principal is approved by the Board of Education.

School Superintendent Richard Packman told the board Thursday that although the state requires students to earn 20 credits to graduate, studies show that most achieve more than that. Packman said that an informal survey he conducted comparing area towns showed that 50 percent require more than 20 credits for graduation.

Joseph Fleming, principal at Bolton High School, recommended to the board that the school's requirement be changed to 22 credits for graduation and that the change take effect with the class of 1989.

Fleming said the change would not affect staff or classes. Board member Pamela Sawyer asked what effect raising the requirement would have on students who do not do well academically. In his report, Fleming noted that the highest failure rate at the school was in 1985, when 19 credits were required.

"We've tried not to be minimalistic here for years," said Fleming. "I really feel that kids can meet the minimum at 22."

Fleming said the majority of students in last year's graduating class took 21 credits or more. "Kids work for what they have to," he said. "We've tried not to be minimalistic here for years," said Fleming. "I really feel that kids can meet the minimum at 22."

Chairman James Marshall said he would support 22 credits, and called for the board to vote on the matter at its next meeting.

Also at Thursday's meeting, the board discussed the possibility of moving three fourth-grade classes from Bolton Elementary School to the Center School, which serves grades 4 through 8, next year.

The discussion, according to Anne Rash, principal of the grade school, comes as the result of increased enrollment figures projected next year.

"We're a bit above projections," Rash said. Rash said almost 20 extra children enrolled in the town's kindergarten-through-eighth-grade classes this year. If next year's enrollment goes above projections, Rash said the move may be a necessity.

Fleming told the board the high school is also at 100 percent capacity. He said the school had 17 walk-in students in its first week, "as high as we've ever had."

Although he couldn't offer a prediction at this point, Fleming told the board portable classrooms might be needed next year if enrollment continues to climb.

Bolton latchkey plan still lacks an anchor

BOLTON — The superintendent of schools will support a latchkey program in the schools only if it is held before or after classes and that may not meet the needs of the organizers.

Superintendent Richard Packman told the Board of Education Thursday that a day-care program proposed by a group of parents could make use of school facilities before and after school, but classes would be too crowded to house the program during the day.

Packman said he thinks members of BASIC, the Before and After School Innovative Care program, will instead try to use the Community Y in Manchester to house the program.

Surveys by the group have indicated that up to 48 families could benefit from such a program.

"Any kind of program, they (BASIC) would take care of it," Packman said, explaining that the schools wouldn't have to provide anything. "They do not impact the school whatsoever."

He said the group is still interested in the possible use of school buildings.

O'Neill defends ticket handling

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill said he was satisfied that his supporters properly handled the withholding of 400 tickets to a Billy Joel concert in New Haven next month to benefit his re-election campaign.

The tickets will be given away to anyone attending a $150-per-person fund-raiser for O'Neill immediately before the concert on Oct. 25 at the New Haven Coliseum.

"The only people who are complaining are the scalpers," O'Neill told reporters this morning. "Certainly, it wasn't handled illegally."

The $17.50 tickets, among the best in the house, were held back from public sale by James Koplik, the promoter of the Joel concert, and made available to New Haven Democratic Chairman Vincent Mauro and former Town Chairman Arthur T. Barberi.

OPINION

Cop crimes and the law

Local police departments have a tough task, and most of their officers address it with skill and dedication. Whether it's the drunks falling on the street, domestic disputes or bank robberies, the police get the call.

In Manchester, they'll even open the cars of forgetful people who lock the door with the keys in the ignition.

But some police officers in some places have peculiar ideas about the laws they're sworn to uphold.

In December 1984, there was the Bernhard Goetz case. When several teenagers hit Goetz up for $5 in a New York City subway, he responded by pulling his illegal, concealed handgun and blasting away. He elicited support from many sources, police officers most vocally among them.

More recently, there was the decision by a police organization in Oak Park, Ill., to honor a gas-station owner who took aim at two robbers fleeing in a car. The bullets from the man's pistol hurt no one, and organization members found him so brave they had to give him an award.

The only problem is that Oak Park, like New York City, has a handgun ban on the books, one that has been upheld by voters in a referendum. The gas station owner will be in court Monday, presumably with plaque in hand.

Examples such as these offer nothing more than a bit of irony, harmless First Amendment Americana.

Unfortunately, that isn't true all the time — especially when it comes to police enforcing the law among "their own."

Certainly it wasn't this week in Goetz land, where 13 officers were suspended for allegedly shaking down sellers of the smokable cocaine called "crack." They took the dealers' money and sold the stuff themselves, fellow officers allege, offering tape recordings as proof.

Admittedly, the tapers didn't go undercover for the best of reasons. They were caught doing the same thing and agreed to inform only under the threat of punishment. But the reaction of their "brother" officers stands as a frightening message to society about how any cop who would hold his colleagues to account is viewed.

"There's nothing worse than a cop who gets nailed and turns around on his friends," one unnamed "veteran" told a reporter on Thursday when asked about the informers, who are now in protective custody.

New York isn't the only place where police band together as a result of the horrors they face on the job every day. That's understandable and deserves compassion, not condemnation.

But those in law enforcement, free as they should be to commiserate and say what's on their minds about their charge, have a special responsibility where crime is concerned.

There is indeed something worse than the cop who "turns around": the one who watches others sell their souls for a dirty buck and remains silent. Unless that gets out among the ranks, the integrity of the many will be forever undermined by the failings of the few.

Visiting via a back door

By Michael Putzel

WASHINGTON — When Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze went to visit Secretary of State George P. Shultz last week, he traveled like a foreign head of state.

Motorcycle police leap-frogged ahead to stop traffic at each downtown intersection, the U.S. and Soviet flags flew from the fenders of his armored limousine, and squads of Secret Service bodyguards followed in speeding black vans with their red emergency lights flashing.

But when he came to the White House to see President Reagan later the same morning, Shevardnadze sneaked in through a back gate and cut across the Rose Garden in a maneuver that somehow lacked the dignity usually accorded foreign guests of far lesser rank.

Although White House officials insisted that a meeting with Shevardnadze was not on Reagan's schedule, reporters expected the two leaders to get together, and camera crews were staked out at the gates most often used by high-ranking visitors.

Bo Gritz came near to getting two POWs out

WASHINGTON — Two American POWs were on their way to freedom from Laos in December 1984 when machine-gun fire from a Mekong River patrol boat forced them back, according to an affidavit given to us by a highly decorated American hero of the Vietnam War.

The sworn statement by retired Army Lt. Col. James (Bo) Gritz is a gripping account of his efforts — futile so far — to rescue prisoners of war he is convinced are still alive in communist-held Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam.

Gritz has won more than 40 medals for valor and achievement, including three Silver Stars, eight Bronze Stars, two Legions of Merit and 26 Air Medals. He is a licensed pilot, a sixth-degree black belt in Karate, an underwater demolition expert and a master parachutist.

In his affidavit, Gritz "swears and affirms under penalty of perjury" that he has conducted crossborder operations in Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam to rescue American POWs. "I have crossed these borders on six different occasions as a part of intelligence-reconnaissance and guerrilla force operations designed to bring these Americans safely home who are without a doubt waiting for liberation," he declared.

THE CLOSEST GRITZ CAME to success, he said, was in December 1984. He began planning Operation Brokenwing in Thailand in the summer of 1983. His statement continued:

"This effort was designed to release three U.S. POWs being held at a prison location approximately 250 kilometers north of Vientiane, Laos. Through contacts within the Lao government we were successful in convincing the commander of the prison guard force to defect with the three POWs and a part of his force."

Gritz flew to Paris in February 1984 to confirm details of the plan with a former Laotian military commander, Gen. Kong Le, who had played a key role "in arranging the defection through officers still loyal to him," Gritz said, adding:

"I was told the guard force would be changed the second week in January 1984, and that just prior to that the Pathet Lao captain in charge of the guard would, with cooperation of a communist police official who had a truck which frequented the location on the Mekong River separating Laos from Thailand."

NEAR CHRISTMAS 1984, Gritz and his men were on the Thai side of the river as arranged. The affidavit continues:

"As we waited on the Thai border the two POWs were put into dugouts and started across the mile-wide river with several of my indigenous agents and the (Pathet Lao) guards. A patrol boat caught the first dugout halfway across the river and cut it in half with heavy machine-gun fire. The motorized craft then ran down the small boat. The second boat containing the two POWs turned around and safely made the Lao shore."

Gritz said he tried to rescue the two later, but word had been passed to Thai newspapers by the U.S. embassy in Bangkok that Gritz was active along the northern Thai border. "We had to withdraw," said Gritz, explaining that a previous disclosure had led to his temporary arrest in Thailand.

Gritz added in his statement: "I am positive there remain today in Laos 80 U.S. servicemen who put on the uniform of the United States and did what others feared to do and died for doing."

Finally, he swore that a high-level Defense Intelligence Agency official "told me that he had briefed the President-elect (Ronald Reagan) and several members of his staff in the 'West Room' of the White House" in January 1981, on a minimum of 100 POWs in Vietnam."

Soak it to 'em! The United Nations is in the midst of yet another financial crisis, and Congress seems likely to cut the U.S. contribution severely. One suggestion for self-help is circulating at high Reagan administration levels: Let the well-paid U.N. diplomats and staff pay a fair market price for their parking spaces. Fees in downtown Manhattan run $300 to $400 a month for car owners lucky enough to get a space; the garage fee for U.N. diplomats is $60 a month.

Preventable plagues Every year 4 million children die and an equal number are disabled from polio, measles, whooping cough, diphtheria, tetanus, tuberculosis and other diseases for which immunization has long been available. And worldwide immunization is attainable, according to the House Select Committee on Hunger. All it takes is money. The House is currently considering a $26 million increase in funding for immunization programs around the world.

U.S./World In Brief

House imposes farm subsidy limits WASHINGTON — Worried over reports that some of America's largest agribusinesses are receiving multi-million-dollar subsidies, the House is imposing a limit of $250,000 per farmer in federal payments.

"This is going to prevent the great big, abusive payments," said Rep. Silvio Coste, R-Minn., who forced a compromise on the issue with farm-state lawmakers.

The subsidy cap was tacked onto a $92.2 billion spending bill which passed the House late Thursday, 201-200. But the measure still is subject to Senate action, and White House officials have warned it could be vetoed. So passage of the subsidy limit is far from assured.

Higher education bill clears Senate WASHINGTON — New financial and academic standards for college students who want federally guaranteed loans are contained in a higher education bill that Congress passed and sent to President Reagan.

Without debate, the Senate gave voice vote approval to the measure late Thursday. The action came a day after the House passed the measure, 385-25.

The $10.2 billion bill extends the current program, which expires next Tuesday, for five years. It also makes loans available to a growing segment of college enrollment — part-time students in their 30s and 40s who often have to attend classes while working to support families.

Glenn warns of 'creeping Chernobyl' WASHINGTON — Sen. John Glenn, releasing government findings that groundwater under many nuclear defense plants is highly contaminated, likens the environmental problem to a "creeping Chernobyl."

"We'd better wake up before it's too late and we find ourselves with an environmental disaster that could even rival Chernobyl," the Ohio Democrat said Thursday, referring to the nuclear disaster at the Soviet nuclear power plant last April.

Robertson denies he avoided combat ATLANTA — The Rev. Pat Robertson, moving quickly against an allegation that could harm a presidential bid, is emphatically denying he sought his senator-father's help in avoiding combat in Korea.

The television evangelist's denial on Thursday came after a fellow Marine said he and Robertson had been pulled off a Korea-bound troop ship in Japan in 1951 after Robertson telephoned home asking help from his father.

That story from John Gearhart, published in The Los Angeles Times, was similar to an earlier version from another Marine who said he was on the ship — former Republican Rep. Paul McCloskey of California.

But the story just isn't so, Robertson said during questioning at a news conference. During his service in the Marines, he said, "I went where I was told. I did what I was told. I served honorably and I came back home again."

Woman plans solo North Pole trip LOS ANGELES — Pam Flowers says she likes solitude, and it's a good thing, she hopes to spend two months becoming the first American and the first woman to make a solo dogled trip to the North Pole.

"It's taken me a long time to acknowledge that I'm really happier alone and I really enjoy being out there with my dogs and the challenge of solo trips," she said Thursday.

Spending bill faces tough road

By Steven Komarow The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With intense battles looming due to President Reagan's veto threat, the biggest spending bill in the nation's history heads to the Senate after winning House passage by the narrowest of margins.

The $66.2 billion measure passed in the House by 291-208, as disgruntled Republicans joined with Democrats upset over the loss of revenue sharing and other policies in the bill to nearly defeat it.

"The Republicans voted pretty solidly," said Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

"These other fellows are upset over revenue sharing," he said after Thursday's vote. Only 15 Republicans voted for the measure, while 43 Democrats voted against.

The huge measure, known as a continuing resolution, was created because Congress has failed to pass any of the 13 separate appropriations bills for the 1987 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1.

If federal agencies don't have spending authority by then, most will legally be required to shut down.

THE SENATE Appropriations Committee is expected to consider its own version of the package today, with full Senate action expected early next week.

Ensnared House-Senate negotiations could make the first language more to the president's liking, and the timing could make it a take-it-or-leave-it proposition if Reagan wants to avert a government crisis.

But Reagan already has told Congress, which plans to adjourn Oct. 3, that he's ready to put the padlocks on government agencies rather than sign an unacceptable bill. In a similar situation in 1981, he vetoed a continuing resolution and ordered the government shut down — including the Washington Monument.

A lot of senators and congressmen out there don't believe the president would veto a CR (continuing resolution)," White House budget director James C. Miller III told reporters Thursday. "He's prepared to do it."

To forestall a crisis, Congress can pass and the president can sign a short-term, stopgap continuing resolution to keep the government operating at current levels while a compromise is worked out. House leaders were already considering the possibility.

"IT DOESN'T TAKE long to write one of those," House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said.

The Reagan administration strongly objects to the House approval of only $28.5 billion for the military, $2.7 billion less than the $29 billion pending in the Senate's version.

The House also wrapped into the omnibus package the list of arms control measures it had passed separately in its defense bill, all of which the administration opposes. They would:

• Freeze spending on "Star Wars" research.

• Continue a ban on final-stage tests of anti-satellite weapons.

• Ban for one year, starting Jan. 1, almost all U.S. nuclear weapons tests, as long as the Soviets continue to observe their self-imposed test ban.

• Block production of chemical weapons, which is scheduled to start in fiscal 1987 for the first time since 1969.

• And require continued adherence to the SALT II nuclear treaty by banning spending on any weapons which would put the U.S. over the numerical sublimits of various types of weapons in the treaty.

The administration also objected to dozens of domestic policy choices, ranging from a cutoff of money for the U.S. Civil Rights Commission to a pay-American provision for offshore oil rigs.

At CBS, the world turns on Bill Paley

Prime time or any time the best television soap operas around are played out in the corporate offices of the television networks. Of late, while CBS's program ratings have tended to drag, the intrigue and discontent at Black Rock have drawn huge audiences on the business pages and on programs like "Entertainment Tonight," which understands that there is drama aplenty beneath the bottom line.

The most recent episode was staged in CBS's boardroom when Thomas Wyman, the corporation's chairman, was given the gate after proposing the company explore the possibilities of selling itself to Coca-Cola. It was an idea so lacking in flame that the board voted to bring back the 65-year-old William Paley, who had founded CBS half a century ago.

Part of CBS's problem has been Paley's inability to leave the business as successfully as he entered it. Wyman was the fourth replacement who has been named, but this is hardly the first time that the founder of a highly successful organization proved he could do everything right but pick someone to take over his job.

WYMAN'S BACKGROUND was the Pillsbury Flour Company, which prefigured failure. He had no experience with what CBS does for a living and it showed. Lawyers, accountants, bankers and other drab types who've biased trails juggling numbers in the counting house jump at the opportunity to get into glamor industry, but even though you get to live with celebrities and have your pick of the best of the food and women, you still need the ability to get the job done. We will never know — Bill Paley probably doesn't know himself — but you have to suspect that subconsciously, at least, the parade of nudniks he's had running that place were chosen to make the founding father look indispensible.

But Paley is too old to come back on anything like a full time basis; for the time being, it is Laurence Tisch who will do the day-to-day running of the company as its new president. Mr. Tisch owns about a quarter of CBS's stock, so he can have any job he wants in the organization. He says he intends to stay on only as long as it takes to find that replacement which has eluded CBS for so long. Nevertheless, for the time being, Laurence Tisch is the boss and Larry made his millions as a real estate developer. Whether that is a better business background for television than milling flour remains to be seen.

THERE ARE CERTAIN IRONIES here for us to feast on. One of the reasons that CBS is in the present deplorable state is that it went a billion bucks into debt to prevent Ted Turner from buying the company. Say what you will about Turner, and people say a great deal about him because of this irksome man's egomaniacal smugness.

Turner has shown himself to be one of the industry's most inventive and enterprising executives. In turning his Atlanta TV outlet into the nation's first Super-Station and following that success with the development of his cable network, Turner has demonstrated that he is, in his own era, fully an equal of Paley in talent and enterprise.

It surpasses understanding that the CBS board would drop a billion-dollar bundle to bar the door to Turner in a job that was plainly too big for him. If CBS had hired an executive headhunter to find somebody for the president's seat, he might well have had Turner on the top of his list.

Tisch isn't going to retire the News people. Tisch or any other guy with a quarter interest in the company is going to let them play with his money, they've got another thing coming. Business is down throughout all of television; Tisch isn't going to retire the News people. Wyman let go. The real problem is the same as it has been for years — finding Bill Paley's successor.

Tune in tomorrow for another episode in "How the Corporate World Turns."

Veteran Beirut correspondent manages to flee kidnappers

By Farouk Nassar
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A British journalist abducted today in west Beirut said he ignored a gunman's threat to shoot him if he did not submit and kicked his way to freedom from his kidnappers' car. Correspondent David Hirst of The Guardian newspaper, the longest-serving Western correspondent in Beirut, said he was seized by three gunmen in the Moslem side of the Mreijeh crossing on the Lebanese capital's dividing Green Line at 6:45 a.m. He said the taxi he was riding in got a flat tire and that the driver and an escort of three Druse militiamen were changing it when the gunmen approached the vehicle. They asked him who he was, then pulled him from the car. He said he resisted, but that the gunmen shoved him into the back seat of a BMW automobile, blindfolded him and sped off. He said a gun was pressed against his left temple. "I shouted, I tried to make as much noise as I could, especially when the car stopped or slowed down at traffic jams," said the silver-haired 46-year-old Hirst at the office of a Western news agency in west Beirut after his hour-long ordeal. The journalist said one of the kidnappers threatened to shoot him if he did not stop kicking and shouting. "I managed to remove the blindfold. I only had it for half a minute," he said. He said the kidnappers eventually stopped the car at a "concrete hotel" house, apparently their destination, in Shitte Hoddeh, a southern suburb of Beirut, and that one gunman got out and stepped to the back door. "At this moment, I kicked and struggled and managed to detach myself, and ran away," said Hirst, visibly shaken, the red scratches on his face testifying to his struggle. "But when I ran away, they did not shoot. I found myself in an alleyway, where I grabbed a taxicab and made it back to town."

he said. Hirst, who has lived in Beirut for 23 years, said he was on his way from his seafront apartment in west Beirut's Ein Mreijeh district to Christian east Beirut on an assignment when he was abducted. He said the gunmen claimed to be from the security department of Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Shitte Amal militia and told him they wanted to question him. "They pretended to be Amal. They didn't appear to belong to any of the local militias. They were 'oran,'" said Hirst, using the Arabic word for thugs. Moslem and Christian radio stations in Beirut interrupted their programs to report Hirst's abduction in a series of bulletins before he showed up at the news agency office from which he normally files his stories. Asked whether he would now leave Lebanon, he said, "I think I will stay on in Beirut. I haven't made up my mind yet... It was a very unpleasant experience."

ment "very late this afternoon." He said Reagan's involvement in the battle to sustain the veto would depend "on what the possibilities are for success." Lugar, appearing on the "CBS Morning News," said Reagan appears to have a 25 to 30 vote margin. He would need to sustain a veto if all senators voted. Only 14 senators voted with Reagan in the Senate when the legislation was debated. A veto, Lugar said, "will send a mixed signal to the world and to South Africa and we ought to not have that mixed signal." The legislation, which was approved by huge margins in both the House and Senate, includes a ban on all new American investment and bank loans in South Africa. The White House is resigned to seeing the Democratic-controlled House override the veto, leaving it up to the Republican-led Senate to decide whether Reagan wins or loses. "It's unclear how hard Reagan will fight to have his veto sustained, or whether he will offer 'sweeteners' to build support. "It depends on how much he is very difficult to shift that many votes on senators who have already cast their vote in the other direction." Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., the Senate majority whip, said Reagan had "more than 20 and less than 30 votes on his side late Thursday." Simpson, who voted for the sanctions but now supports the president, said Reagan would try to get senators to switch position by signing an executive order that embraces "nearly everything we did in the Senate." At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan had not decided to issue an executive order that would expand the limited sanctions already in place. One official, speaking on condition of anonymity, hinted Reagan would not take any additional action if it appeared certain he would lose anyway. The House likely would vote on the veto override next week. Simpson indicated that a vote in the Senate might not come until late in the session, slated to end Oct. 3. The president has argued that punitive sanctions would hurt countries bordering South Africa as well as the country's 24 million blacks. Supporters of sanctions argue they will put pressure on Pretoria to abandon apartheid, a legal system of racial segregation that denies voting rights and privileges to the black majority.

Tax bill goes to Senate

chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, summed up the argument for his colleagues. "We want to give this country tax reform or don't we?" "Do we want to give back to middle-income taxpayers the fairness they don't believe will ever come, or do we want to stand for the status quo which goes hardest on the poor and easy on the rich?" Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., put it another way: "I personally would give my right arm to run against an incumbent who voted no on this bill." House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., closing the debate, called the bill "the most sweeping tax-reform legislation in the history of this nation. If we pass this bill, the 99th Congress will assume a special place in the history of this country. The last challenge to the legislation failed when the House voted 268-160 against a move by Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, to send the package back to congressional negotiators for more work.

The president hailed the House vote and White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "The country is now only one vote away in the Senate from enacting the president's number one domestic priority — a tax system that will promote economic growth, simplify tax returns for the vast majority of Americans, reduce the code to a promise of fairness and equity, and most important of all, reduce rates for most Americans." The top individual rate, now 50 percent, would be cut to 28 percent, although about three-quarters of Americans would pay a flat 15 percent rate. The 28 percent maximum corporate rate would be cut to 24 percent. In 1988, for a couple with two children and filing a joint return, the first $29,750 of taxable income (after deductions and exemptions) would be taxed at 15 percent. The next increment, between $29,751 and $71,900, would be taxed at 28 percent; the next, between $71,901 and $192,250, at 33 percent; and all above $192,250 would face a 28 percent rate.

FOCUS/Weekend

Put your dukes up, CBS, Vice is here!

By Jerry Buck
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It's the devious smile of J.R. Ewing, face-to-unshaven face, against Sony Crockett. It's "Dallas" vs. "Miami Vice." It's NBC making a calculated move to knock off one of CBS' most popular shows. Beginning tonight NBC's "Miami Vice" and CBS' "Dallas" will both be in the 9 p.m. time slot on the East and West coasts. "Dallas" has a distinct advantage, at least for the first show. The two-hour season premiere marks the return of Patrick Duffy, whose character, Bobby Ewing, appeared to have been killed off at the end of the 1984-85 season. There is obviously a lot of curiosity about how they're going to pull this off, particularly since CBS Entertainment President B. Donald "Bud" Grant has acknowledged Duffy is returning as Bobby. People magazine this week revealed three different solutions that have been taped. Will it be Bobby that was revived in the hospital and was nursed back to health? Or the new Bobby is a phony who had operation to look like the old Bobby? Or was Bobby's death just ex-wife Pam's dream?

David Chaney and Laura McDuffie lead the roles in Coachlight Dinner Theatre's production of "The King and I," at the theater through Nov. 30.

This 'King and I' makes a royal feast

Center Stage
Nancy Pappas

It's rough to star in a show when everyone in the theater is thinking of another far more famous performer in that role. C o u l d anyone but Anthony Quinn play Zorba? Do people watch Eliza Doolittle without thinking of Rex Harrison? It's the same case for the actor who plays the monarch of Siam in the new Coachlight Dinner Theatre production of "The King and I."

Fortunately for those who take in the Coachlight production, Chaney is hardly a pale imitation of Rex Harrison. In Chaney's capable hands, the king is a little more irascible, a little more cynical, a little tougher to love than Brynner's king. When Chaney has a temper tantrum, as in the scene where he insists that the schoolteacher keep her head lower than the monarch's, it is worthy of a toddler in the throes of the "terrible two."

But Chaney's king can also turn on the charm. I've seen this show five times. This is the first production I've seen which makes me understand Lady Thiang's point in the song, "Something Wonderful." It is "The King and I," with the "chief wife" claims that the detritorial king is really quite delightful. "This is a man who thinks with his heart," she predicts, and then says, "Him, you shall love until you die." In many performances, this is a ridiculous thing to claim. The king simply comes across as more spoiled than special. But on the Coachlight stage, it was easy to see how the sensitive and intelligent Thiang, played by Alba Quezada, could love him so deeply.

This was due, in part, to the authenticity of the emotions which Quezada displayed. Her performance as the lady who loves, and procures lovers for, the king was very strong. And when she opened her mouth to sing, a wonderfully deep contralto voice filled the hall. BUT THE SHOW is, clearly, not called "The King and I." It is "The King and I," with the "chief wife" claims that the detritorial king is really quite delightful. "This is a man who thinks with his heart," she predicts, and then says, "Him, you shall love until you die." In many performances, this is a ridiculous thing to claim. The king simply comes across as more spoiled than special. But on the Coachlight stage, it was easy to see how the sensitive and intelligent Thiang, played by Alba Quezada, could love him so deeply.

Modern dancer plans free show in Manchester

By Nancy Pappas
Herold Reporter

Contemporary dancer and choreographer Ohed Naharin doesn't always soar through the sky with supermarket shopping carts. But he is very interested in the use of unusual props in his dances. A former member of Martha Graham's company who has also danced with Rudolf Nureyev, Naharin will bring his contemporary works to Manchester on Saturday for a free performance at 1 p.m. at the Connecticut Concert Ballet studios, 280 Garden Grove Road. He will be at the Richard Rileys Dance Company, 1189 Main St., Coventry, at 7 p.m. Naharin has spent this week in artistic residency at the Jorgensen Auditorium, at the University of Connecticut at Storrs. He is working at the Jorgensen with the university's dance groups, then giving a series of performances — which he calls "informances" — in ten towns around eastern Connecticut. These informal performances combine modern dances and anecdotes. Naharin attempts to involve his audience in the creative process, and welcomes comments from those who watch. Naharin has brought these "informances" and his more traditional performances to Israel (his native land), Europe, the Soviet Union and Japan. He is touring parts of America under the auspices of Affiliate Artists Inc., which places performers and visual artists in residences at universities. When he is not traveling, Naharin is also a teacher. He has conducted classes and workshops for Juilliard School, Alvin Ailey American Dance Center and various private studios. The performance will last approximately an hour, and an informal reception will follow. The audience is urged to arrive early. Naharin did not begin to dance until he was 22. He was a competitive gymnast in Israel, but became fascinated with dance and choreography. Three months after he switched to full-time dancing, he was spotted by Graham, who was touring in Israel. She invited him to return to New York with her and he has been based in the U.S. since then.

Dancer and choreographer Ohed Naharin incorporates supermarket shopping carts into some of his dances. He'll perform contemporary works on Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Connecticut Concert Ballet studios in Manchester and at the Richard Rileys Dance Company, Coventry, at 7 p.m.

BU springs upset over Maine in regional football action

By The Associated Press
Boston University started the New England college football season with a victory over Maine in a game that was the only one of its kind in the Northeast. The Terriers, who have a record of 1-1, defeated the Black Bears, 21-14, in a game that was the only one of its kind in the Northeast.

Completed 21 of 36 passes for 222 yards and two fourth-quarter touchdowns in a rally rally. The Terriers are 1-1, Maine, 0-1. White Boston College 1-2, has the weekend of Saturday's New England schedule is filled with intrastate rivalries. There are no conference games in the Ivy League, while the only league game in the Northeast is the Delaware at Richmond, is outside the region.

Three games - Brown at Rhode Island, New Hampshire at Dartmouth and Connecticut at Yale - match an Ivy League team with a Yankee Conference team. The other game involving a Yankee Conference school is at Massachusetts, which plays host to Northeastern.

Other weekend contests include Ivy League teams at Brownell at Pennsylvania, Cornell at Colgate, Lafayette at Columbia, Northwestern at Princeton and Holy Cross at Harvard. Holy Cross, leading the Colonial League with a 2-0 record, defeated Yale 21-7 last Saturday. In the New England Football Conference, co-leaders Massachusetts Maritime and Framingham State, both 2-0, square off. Jeff Corvillo, who has completed 60 percent of his passes and thrown four touchdowns, leads Massachusetts Maritime's offense. Framingham State's Steve Condon is tied for the league lead in receptions with 10 and touchdowns with four.

In other games in the league, Plymouth State is at Fitchburg State, Westfield State is at Curry, Maine Maritime is at Nichols and Western New England is at Worcester State. Bridgewater State is idle.

Elsewhere in New England on Saturday, it will be Towson State at American International, Bowdoin at Amherst, FPI at Lowell, Worcester Tech at Tufts, Hamilton at Williams, Coast Guard at Norwich, Bates at Trinity, Union at Colby, New Haven at Central Connecticut State and Middlebury at Wesleyan. Springfield State visits Southern Connecticut Saturday night.
