Today is Saturday, Oct. 4, the 277th day of 1986. There are 88 days left in the year. The Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashanah, ends at sunset. Today's highlight in history: On Oct. 4, 1957, the Space Age began as the Soviet Union launched Sputnik, the first man-made satellite, into orbit around the Earth. On this date: In 1771, George Washington's troops launched an assault on the British at Germantown, Pa. The attack lost momentum, and the Americans suffered heavy casualties. In 1822, Rutherford B. Hayes, 19th president of the United States, was born in Delaware, Ohio. In 1860, Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini conferred at Brenner Pass in the Alps. In 1967, the television series "Leave It to Beaver" premiered on CBS. In 1965, Pope Paul VI appealed for world peace in an address to the U.N. General Assembly. In 1970, rock singer Janis Joplin died at the age of 27. In 1980, fire broke out aboard a Dutch luxury liner, the "Prinsendam," in the Gulf of Alaska, forcing more than 500 passengers and crew members to flee. Ten years ago: Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz resigned, following outrage over a racial slur he had made that was quoted in Rolling Stone magazine. Five years ago: Amid heavy security, Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass in St. Peter's Square, his first appearance there since he was shot nearly five months earlier. One year ago: With the United States abstaining, the U.N. Security Council voted unanimously to condemn Israel for its attack on PLO headquarters in Tunisia Oct. 1.

President Reagan wants to meet the 8-year-old boy who used the Heimlich maneuver to dislodge a piece of pork chop from his baby sister's throat one day in Hagerstown, Md. Scott Hoffman Jr. received a letter from the White House this week praising him for his quick thinking and asking him to make the visit. "This is just wild," said Scott Hoffman Sr., the boy's father. The youngster learned how to perform the lifesaving measure last year at school. He put it to use last month when his baby sister, Geraldine Shank, began choking on a piece of meat. He hit her between the shoulder blades then wrapped his arms around her and pushed his fist under her rib cage, dislodging the food particle. "I'm just so excited," said Sally Snowberger, the teacher who taught Scott's class how to perform the Heimlich maneuver last year. "I was really wanting and hoping that Scott would get recognition from the president." Snowberger was invited to accompany Scott to the White House.

Tip's time comes

Thomas P. O'Neill, retiring this week after a decade as speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives and 30 years in office, says he's going to miss his public life. "Do I like the status? The 'hey, tip, how are you?' Of course I like it," he said Friday in an interview on NBC's "Today" show. "I'll miss it too. I hope it just doesn't evaporate because I'm no longer speaker."

Belaga would reorganize DOT

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD - Republican gubernatorial candidate Julie D. Belaga proposed reorganizing the state Department of Transportation on Friday, said Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill said it sounded like his opponent was trying to reinvent the wheel. Belaga said her proposal would allow equal emphasis to be placed on public transportation and highway development. "The agency that we have is simply not functioning on behalf of the people of the state," she said.

Belaga, who is challenging O'Neill next month, proposed consolidating existing six-bureau departments into two: one, the Bureau of Highways and the other, the Bureau of Public Transportation. "Both areas deserve and will have equal emphasis," she said. The Bureau of Public Transportation would include the existing bureau of public transportation, aeronautics and waterways. The existing bureau of highways would remain about the same. The existing bureau of administration and planning and research would be incorporated into the two new bureaus, she proposed. She said there would still be one commissioner but only two deputy commissioners who would "have their feet held to the fire."

She said O'Neill has put little emphasis on mass transit and said the governor had left the position of deputy commissioner for public transportation vacant for five years. "O'Neill said he had a record of commitment to public transportation and noted that only last week he had outlined a $50 million proposal to improve commuter rail, bus and parking facilities. He proposed using part of the estimated $67 million surplus in the state Transportation Fund. Belaga said however, that O'Neill had a record of waiting until things go wrong before doing anything, reacting rather than anticipating. O'Neill said it sounded as if

4th District debate serves as example

Even though some of the most telling exchanges came after the official close of Thursday's 4th Senatorial District debate, the forum served its purpose well. Questions were asked — and some were answered forthrightly — about taxes, budgets, programs and ideas for the future. The comments clarified the candidates' stands and revealed something about the personalities behind the newspaper headlines and policy statements.

Because this initial effort by the League of Women Voters proved successful, it is clear that more such debates should follow before the Nov. 4 election. The public deserves the chance to see every candidate questioned along with his or her opponent (or opponents), and the league should cooperate again with cable television companies to offer it.

As critics and candidates are quick to argue, such debates indeed have their flaws. No format is without problems, television time is generally too short, and the best speaker is not always the best candidate.

But voters who care enough to watch when Zinsner and Meotti vie for support on the air later this month will see the value of such encounters in highlighting issues and stands. They will learn, for instance, that incumbent Zinsner believes at least some rights are expendable in the nation's effort to stem the use of illegal drugs. "If someone's rights get upset... then it's unfortunate," he said Thursday.

And they will learn that challenger Meotti doesn't think change is needed in the way Connecticut collects the revenues to fund its programs. Despite the tax changes passed by Congress, he told his potential constituents, the state's current strategy is pretty much OK.

Those are just two examples among many. Aside from the lack of a perfect format, there are other problems in bringing the politicians' views before the public — usually the reluctance of the candidates themselves to be exposed to view.

In Manchester, incumbents such as Reps. Elsie Swenson and James R. McCavanagh have consistently refused to face questions and challengers at public forums. The reasons they cite vary, but all are without merit and should not be accepted by the public.

Any incumbent who's scared to debate should take a cue from Zinsner. While he still won't debate Meotti unconditionally, he's come a long way since two years ago, when all he gave Stephen T. Cassano was the Rose Garden treatment and a bunch of excuses.

"I've been completely dysfunctional ever since the big MARKET CORRECTION."

Robertson campaign is old-time nonsense

"And the Lord speaks unto his humble servant, Pat Robertson." It is written on the sacred tablets, "and the Lord said unto him, 'Verily, I have made ready to raise thee up onto a throne whence thou wilt preside over the nations and give the word to heathens. Jews, relativist humanists and the other scaly creatures which creepeth on their bellies and do carry iniquity among the children.'" Thus spake the Lord to his servant, Robertson, who did fling himself down on the television studio floor and implored the Lord, his God, to give him a sign. "Thy sign shall not come from me but will issue from the people. I tell thee and thou mayest quote me, but ye, verily only in context, that my people shall give thee money and many signatures, and it is by their dollar bills and their five dollar bills and their petitions to thee to makeeth the run for high public office that thou shalt know my will and pleasure."

"And so it came to pass that the servant of the Lord Robertson did come to Constitution Hall in Washington, in the District of Columbia, and did appear via satellite to the multitude gathered in 216 meeting halls and convention centers and did say, 'What is God's will for me in this?' Let me assure you I know God's will for me."

ONE WOULD HAVE THOUGHT that Marion G. (Pat) Robertson would have been laughed off the stage of public life before this but, no, every month the man is taken more seriously, and to! from every point on the compass week by week his influence seems to grow.

For years now he and his confederates in the holy roller ministry have been bedecking those

Women can lead Boy Scouts well

To the Editor: I feel compelled to comment on the case of Catherine Pollard vs. the Boy Scouts of America concerning the suitability of women to lead Boy Scouts. Coventry is one of many towns that have a difficult time recruiting male leadership for the Webelos Den of Cub Scouts. This necessitates the role of females to fill the void.

In 1985-86, I was asked to be a den leader for this reason.

It was my pleasure to share limitless resources with these scouts. I provided a natural, historical and environmental setting that includes a 7-acre pond, art studio and workshop, along with people who contributed toward many rewarding experiences.

Male role models that were introduced to this group included "weekend fathers" at campsites, Herbert S. Zim and Ira N. Gabrielson in a "Guidebook to Birds," a poem by Matt McGreggor of the Williamette Chronicle exposing the humanity problems in Nicaragua, artist Ken Morgan, who guided, attended and critiqued an archeological study of the meeting site through benefit of Mrs. Charles Ralsch and many other men and women who volunteered collectively to help earn to the activity badges learned throughout the season.

Introduced as well, in the form of newspaper articles, were Albert Einstein, Nelson Rockefeller, Thomas Edison and others who share something in common with some members of the group in learning disabilities. It was with joy that six very competent and capable young men crossed proudly over into Boy Scouts prepared for future competition in the realm of badges to be earned through this structure.

I deeply regret that my services cannot be continued. Based on Judge Chernauskas' decision on

Wilson prepared for battle in 13th

To the Editor: As we approach the midway mark in the election, I wish to take this opportunity to extend my deepest gratitude to those citizens of Manchester who signed my petition to allow me to appear on the Nov. 4 ballot as a candidate to represent the 13th Assembly District.

To run as an independent candidate is most assuredly an uphill battle in the classic David and Goliath struggle. I accept the challenge knowing full well the consequences and I have no regrets. I have always enjoyed a good political battle.

My two opponents are both formidable and respected, but above all they can command the full support of their structured town committees to raise huge sums of money on their behalf. The fact that I am decidedly an underdog in no way clouds my command of the issues facing the average citizens of Manchester. My credentials are impeccable, and my ability to truly articulate the issues will become more apparent as the campaign progresses.

How many meanings can 'rapid' have?

WASHINGTON — In the fine art of treaty negotiation — especially with the Soviet Union — the need to be exact is so important that if the two sides don't agree on the definition of a crucial word, the treaty isn't worth the paper it's written on.

There's no better example of this than the use of the vague word "rapid" in the U.S.-Soviet Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty. In fact, a recent classified White House report is devoted to the problems that have arisen over the possible definitions of "rapid" as it applies to the reloading capability of ABM interceptor missile launchers.

The 1972 treaty banned "rapid reloading" of ABM interceptors. But the exact definition of "rapid" wasn't spelled out in the treaty. The whole point of the treaty was to prevent either side from achieving a strategic missile defense so effective that it might be tempted to launch a first strike. The idea was to make sure a nuclear war would be unwinnable, and perceived to be such by both sides.

So the TWO SUPERPOWERS agreed to limit their deployed interceptor missiles to 100 each. That meant that only a maximum of 100 of the thousands of incoming missiles could be destroyed by the interceptors.

Unfortunately, the treaty did not limit the number of interceptor missiles that each side can build and stockpile. All it did was prohibit the development, testing or deployment of "automatic or semi-automatic or other similar systems for rapid reload" of the permitted launchers.

The negotiating record indicates that the intent was to keep either side from bringing to bear "more than 100 ABM missiles during an engagement." The U.S. team indicated it had a "strategically significant time" in mind. But none of this was clearly spelled out.

The reason these overights have become a problem, according to the White House report, is that "in 1983, the Soviets conducted training and firing of ABM missiles which demonstrated an ability to reload and launch interceptors in a period that was not more than 2 1/2 hours and could have been less."

In 2 1/2 hours a "rapid reload" U.S. experts haven't been able to decide.

THE REPORT NOTES that an American plenary statement once defined "rapid" as "a reloading time which would be shorter than the time period of a nuclear engagement." Whereupon a Soviet negotiator pointed out that "an initial engagement might last only a few minutes."

The U.S. negotiators agreed that "the most likely scenario for nuclear conflict involves an intense attack... within a short period... 5 to 10 minutes — against the ABM-defensed area." This suggests that "rapid reload" would be something under 10 minutes.

Consequently, the Americans told the Soviets they wouldn't be obliged to modify their Galosh interceptors to comply with the treaty. The CIA estimated it would take a minimum of 15 minutes to reload a Galosh launcher — though the Soviets, interestingly enough, never confirmed this CIA estimate.

In one early negotiating session, an American official "asked how long it took to reload Galosh," according to the report, which added: "(Gen.) Alexseyev sidestepped the specifics, but stated that it took considerable time to move the missiles in their silos, to load them etc. Alexseyev said it would take hours, if not a day."

This led some U.S. officials to view that anything less than "hours" would violate the "rapid reload" provision of the treaty. But the Soviets haven't agreed to that interpretation, and to this day nobody is sure. As the White House report concludes: "There clearly is uncertainty in the obligation, as evidenced by the several interpretations."

Mini-editorial
How is it that slow learners continue to run of General Motors and Ford even as their policies are demonstrable failures? The auto giant are in trouble again, with a skidding share of the market, so the resident geniuses have opted to raise prices — and cure their price carbuencies as he told the such a bust that the automakers had to subsidize their customers' loans to sell their 1986 overstock. But that didn't teach them anything. Dare we suggest that cutting prices might be a way for American car makers to compete with the "japanese?"

are the voices of superstition, of the miracle worker, the faith healer, the religious bunko artist. If Pat Robertson were elected president, every Sunday morning after he had conducted his nationally televised holy roller rite from the White House, we would have, hallelujah, the laying on of hands by the chief executive. As in the old days when the husband was the archpriest of every family, King Charles ruled and there was much faith and little indoor plumbing, the lame, the halt and the blind would parade in front of Pat, the president/preacher, who would touch them and cure them of their carbuencies as he told the country that God is better than Medicare any day.

ONE OF THE MOST VALUABLE accomplishments of the 18th century was to banish mystifications of all kinds, speaking in tongues and other superstitions from the political arena; magical incantations and metaphysical mystifications of all kinds were relegated to private life. Even respectable forms of religion, the kinds that don't base themselves on an assault against reason, science and knowledge, were placed outside the purview of law and government.

The removal of the unknowable and the irrational from public debates took the form of the First Amendment in the United States, but in one way or another, the same thing was done in all the western democracies. What the Prophet Pat offers us isn't a return to the nice old-fashioned values, but a trip back in time to the religious bigotries and superstitions of 300-year-old theocracies.

News for Senior Citizens
Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Joe Diminico
Activities Director

Manchester Senior Citizens' Center has seen a marked increase in the numbers of those who use the senior bus for grocery shopping on Tuesdays. Try to deliver the best possible service, we've upped the shopping route so that waiting time on pickups and returns will be greatly reduced.

Effective immediately, all seniors south of Center Street will be picked up starting at 7:45 a.m. Return time will be 11:5 a.m. Riders who live north of Center Street will be picked up starting at 8:45 a.m. Return time will be 12:15 p.m.

Those not shopping for groceries should call for a ride on the non-grocery shopping bus. That alternates between the Parkade, K-Mart Plaza, and Caldors every Tuesday. Seniors should continue to call for a ride so that no one will be missed.

We have many people who call the center for information on the many programs and services offered by local, state, and federal government, as well as nonprofit agencies. The Governor's Day on Elderly Services in New Haven on Oct. 21 provides an opportunity for you to learn, ask questions, and receive written information on programs that may be of benefit to you. The center will provide free transportation. Call the center if you are interested. Seniors participating in exercise classes are reminded to wear rubber soled shoes such as sneakers or running shoes.

Seniors will be delighted to know that the center now has a line dance instructor. We'll start classes on Oct. 29 for eight consecutive weeks. There will be two separate classes held with a maximum of 30 persons each. The first class will be from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. and the second from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.

We welcome Anita White back to the center. She has run popular round dance classes in the past.

Please make note of these upcoming events:
Wednesday — 9 to 11 a.m. Blood pressure screening (A-K)
Thursday — 10 to 11 a.m. Nutrition program begins. Gloria Weiss, registered Dietitian, supplies a wealth of information, plus food samples for nutritious meals, about 1 p.m., a representative from Northeast Health Services, will discuss energy conservation. Energy kits used to insulate your home or apartment, will be distributed free of charge.

Friday — Fall foliage trip to Wilmington, Vt. for $37. A waiting list is being taken.
Oct. 14 — Exercise with Cleo is canceled.
Oct. 15 — Glaucoma screening by appointment, 11 to 3 p.m. Call the Health Department at 643-3179.
Oct. 20 — Flu clinic, 9 a.m. to noon. $3 donation for flu shot. $6 donation for pneumo-coccal shot. No appointment necessary.
Oct. 21 — Governor's Day. The center will run a free bus to the New Haven Coliseum for this event, which will include free lunch, informational booths on state services for the elderly, and more. Entertainment will be provided throughout the day. If interested call the center.

MACC News

Public, private partners help ex-offenders' re-entry

Editor's note: This column is provided for the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
MACC Director

This Wednesday has been designated Community Justice Day across the state. Here in Manchester the day begins with a Community Justice press conference which will provide us with updated information concerning the criminal justice system and recognize some of the vital folk involved in that system here in Manchester.

We've also scheduled an open house at our Project Re-entry Office, 64 Church St. You are invited to come to both the press conference at 9 a.m. and to visit us between 9:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The open house serves not only an opportunity for you to meet Jim Foley, our re-entry coordinator, but even more important, gives us the chance to listen to those who visit. Nobody knows the community better than the people who live and work here so we look forward to having you share your ideas and concerns with us.

Here in Manchester the churches in MACC work together with the state Department of Corrections in sponsoring Project Re-entry, a PREP (Public/Private Resource Expansion Project) program is designed to help ex-offenders successfully return to the community after they have served their sentence.

This unique public and private partnership doesn't begin and end with the odd couple of MACC and DOC. Probation officers, public defenders, court personnel work side with our Re-entry coordinator, and an excellent and cooperative liaison with top-notch staff in the Manchester Police Department makes the whole network work.

The unusually cooperative human services network in Manchester side the ex-offender in his struggle to rebuild a productive life in the community.

Foley works with staff in the Job Service Division of the Labor Department in locating jobs. Counselors in the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation arrange education and training. Social workers at Manchester Social Services not only provide temporary financial support, if necessary, but have a wealth of referral information at their fingertips.

The downtown farmers' market will operate through the end of October unless we have a severe frost.

The CRT Outreach worker in Manchester has begun to make appointments to take applications for the Energy Assistance Program. For an appointment please call Betty Markie at 647-3095 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Those who need financial assistance but do not qualify under the federal Energy Assistance Program may be eligible for help through the MACC Fuel Bank. Call early for the federal program.

The story behind the story

By Josie

Q. I am a great fan of Woody Allen and would appreciate any information about him. Todd Duclous, Bettendorf, Iowa
 A. Allen Konigsberg is 50 (born December 1, 1935,) from Brooklyn, N.Y., the son of Martin and Nettie Konigsberg, who, respectively, worked at a number of short-lived jobs and kept the accounts for a flower shop. Young Allen hated school, with the exception of English class in which his compositions were usually read aloud. He loved comic books, listening to the radio and the then New York Giants baseball team.

He was also fascinated by performers and began attending comics' and magicians' shows in Brooklyn, often copying down their jokes. At 15, he began writing his own and sending them, under the name Woody Allen, to New York columnists.

A mention in the popular Earl Wilson column got him a job with a press agent writing oneliners that would then be attributed to the firm's clients. That, in turn, led to jobs writing material for various radio and TV performers, and after graduating from high school, he joined the staff of Sid Caesar's TV show.

To please his parents, he also enrolled at New York University and later, the City University of New York. To his great relief, he was expelled by both for low grades and terrible attendance.

He then moved on to a job writing for "The Garry Moore Show," but left in 1961 to try his luck as a stand-up comedian. He was terrified, his friends had to push him onstage, but one he got there, he was very good and within a year, had appeared on "The Tonight Show."

Two years later, movie producer Charles Feldman and Shirley MacLaine caught his nightclub act and Feldman, impressed, hired him to write the movie "What's New, Pussycat?" and to play a supporting role. The movie did well enough, but he was horrified by the lack of control a writer has over his script. He decided to become a director. "What's Up, Tiger Lily?" his entry into directing, was low budget and very funny, a grade-B Japanese spy thriller. He bought the rights and then inserted totally irrelevant dialogue and himself as narrator.

His appearance as James Bond's nephew in the spoof "Casino Royale" followed, after which he wrote two plays, "Don't Drink the Water," and "Play It Again, Sam" and then appeared in the movie version of the latter.

His first movie as an actor, writer and director of original material was "Take the Money and Run," followed by "Bananas," "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex But Were Afraid to Ask," "Sleeper," "The Front," (in which he acted but didn't direct.) "Love and Death," "Annie Hall," which won Oscars for Best Picture, Best Director, Best Screenplay and Best Actress (Diane Keaton), "Manhattan," "Interiors," "Stardust Memories," "A Midsummer Night's Sex Comedy," "Zelig," "Broadway Danny Rose," "The Purple Rose of Cairo," and the recent, much-praised "Hannah and Her Sisters."

He's currently working on another film, the details of which, in his usual manner, are being kept secret, but it's a musical of sorts set in the '20s, '30s and '40s, starring Mia Farrow, his companion of the last few years.

He lives on New York's Fifth Avenue and hangs out at Elaine's, Michael's Pub (where he plays clarinet with a band on Monday nights) and New York Knick games — he's an avid basketball fan. He's been married twice, to teacher Harlene Rosen in the '50s and actress Louise Lasser in the '60s. Before Farrow, he had a long relationship with Diane Keaton who is still his good friend and an sounding board for his new ideas.

Rue McClanahan and Karl Malden

Q. Please tell me about Rue McClanahan from "The Golden Girls." J.W., Modesto, Calif.
 A. Eddi-Rue McClanahan (the name is a composite of her father's and mother's names, William Edwin and Rheua-Nell; she dropped the "Eddi" after getting a draft notice following his school) is 52, from Haldon, Okla., and by the age of 12, an aspiring performer. She took dancing lessons in her childhood and by high school was teaching dancing as well as performing.

She majored in drama at Tulsa University and after graduation, headed to Erie, Pa., and summer stock. She won a scholarship soon afterward to the prestigious Pasadena Playhouse in California and while there, appeared also in low-budget movies and various TV series, among them "Route 66" and "Malibu." She then toured the country in summer stock productions, returning to New York in 1966 to co-star as "Lady Macbird" in the satirical, Off-Broadway play "Macbird." In 1968, she was on Broadway opposite Dustin Hoffman in "Jimmy Shine," and again Off-Broadway in "Tonight in Living Color" and "Sticks and Bones."

On the strength of those performances, producer Norman Lear invited her to Hollywood for a part on his hit series "All in the Family." She stayed another week and did a guest appearance as Maude Findlay's friend on Lear's other hit, "Maude." The chemistry between the friends was strong, so she returned as a regular, starting with the second season.

Now, given the ratings for "Golden Girls," she seems to have found steady work again; although, as we go to press, a rep of hers is hinting that she may have some other plans in the works as well.

She's been married six times, twice to the same husband.

Q. I recently saw Wendy Hughes in a film called "Careful, He Might Hear You" and thought she was wonderful. Can you tell me what else she's been in? Michelle Fryou, Baton Rouge, La.
 A. The respected Melbourne-raised actress has also been in the Australian films "Newsfront," "My First Wife," "Lonely Hearts" and "My Brilliant Career." She also co-starred with Peter Falk in the American film "Happy New Year" due out this fall and is currently shooting the controversial ABC miniseries "Amerika."

Q. Please settle a debate between my grandson and me. Who is the man with the mustache in the Pepsi commercial with Don Johnson? I think it's the actor who plays Mark Grayson on "Dallas." Whoever he is, he turns me on. Tina, Dunmore, Pa.
 A. The man in question is Glenn Frey, former Eagle and now solo artist and actor. You may have seen him in "Miami Vice" and will see him this fall in the movie "Let's Get Harry." His songs have also been a steady part of the background of "Miami Vice."

Hone your office party techniques

Don't, under any circumstances, have a good time

By Rachel Cope Goldfarb

Whether for retirement, boosting staff morale, celebrating holidays or the end of the fiscal year, the office party is an experience few of us escape before terminating a career. As a matter of fact, I'll bet a fair number of careers have ended as a result of office party antics.

Amid backslapping, goodie consumption and meaningful conversation, I have learned more about co-workers and office politics at these gatherings than four years of college and a lifetime subscription to the Wall Street Journal could ever have taught.

But I've perfected certain survival techniques which now separate me from the amateur partygoer and make it possible to face fellow laborers the next morning.

My first rule is to arrive early. When I get there before most of the other guests, options are open. Do I prefer sitting on the couch where I sink down to the nickel graveyard, or on the icy rented enamel folding chairs where the slightest trace of perspiration causes one's thighs to screech in announcement of even a tiny squirm?

I learn where the stash of diet soda, extra napkins, ice and antacids (as well as the bathroom) are kept so my own physical needs will be accommodated without disturbing any of the serious party persons.

In this way I can also serve as a resource to newcomers who will undoubtedly be looking for one or more of the same items during the events. I like to be helpful; it beats leaning against a wall melting ice in a glass by the heat of my sweating palms.

I try never to be caught leaning against a wall. That stance seems to invite persons to flock around who love to talk but have difficulty listening. They form a human fence to snare the innocent wall leaner into hearing hours of recitation about how one trapper wired his basement's electrical system, while another shares the intimate details of life as a freshwater aquarium buff.

Another wall-leaning danger is that of the overly friendly co-worker, spouse, significant other, or pervert-off-the-street, who targets the lone leaner as a potential source of recreation for the evening. My previous knowledge of the bathroom location provides me with a porcelain refuge until the icky intimate finds another focus for his attentions.

I select my party outfit cautiously before rubbing a social elbow with fellow workers. I can't wear something usually worn to work or party notetakers will tell all that I didn't care enough to wear my very best.

I can't wear what they're showing on the covers of this season's fashion mags or the powers that rule paycheck digits will wonder how I can afford it. And if I expose more flesh than my young daughter in her fuzzy sleeper, questions will arise as to how I got my last promotion.

Socializing with husbands and wives of co-workers opens another rusty, slimy can of worms. If I so much as smile at someone else's husband, she will spend the next month reminding me of his morning camel breath and the fact that he leaves his underwear on the floor where he removes it.

If I converse with a fellow worker's wife, references to the football pool, Thursday happy hour, their recent trip to the Bahamas or league baseball will inevitably turn a face or two “Socializing with husbands and wives of co-workers opens another nasty, slimy can of worms. If I so much as smile at someone else's husband, she will spend the next month reminding me of his morning camel breath and the fact that he leaves his underwear on the floor when he removes it.”

crimson. I will be blamed for a poor night's sleep on the sofa or having to call in before leaving the office each afternoon.

Pot-luck office gatherings are particularly dangerous. I am careful to watch casseroles being carried in and set on the buffet table, memorizing the contents and associating it with its creator.

I don't want to be the one who chokes on the supervisor's stick-in-the-throat anisette cookies or the one who neglects to comment upon my officemate's green bean delight. A casual critique of half-done pigs-in-the-blanket to the wrong person has been known to make or break a career.

I'm always careful to be the model of moderation, doing most of my eating and drinking before or after the festivities with the office bunch. The last thing I need to display is an attack of hiccups or a slurred response to the boss's favorite current-event joke as a result of overindulgence from a soggy paper plate or a cracked plastic cup.

One last rule I enforce is never to guess who came to the party with whom. If George from the computer room shows up with vice-president Gwendolyn from administration, who am I to show surprise?

If slick Steve's escort for the night looks like his mother after a two-week bout with insomnia, it won't be me to gasp in astonishment.

And if Lowell with the polyester brown plaid suit comes to the door with a Loni Anderson lookalike on his arm, I will not drop my jaw in stunned awe!

So follow my advice as you travel the office party road to success. Go, smile a pleasant smile, and be helpful. But don't, under any circumstances, have a good time. ■

Tracy Scoggins: Uphill curves come easy

By Fred Robbins

When tawny Tracy Scoggins — in a white, figure-hugging bodysuit — turned up at my door the morning we did this interview, she all but stopped traffic on my Manhattan side street.

Stepping inside, she said of her head-swiveling outfit, "This isn't mine. It's something I borrowed from a girlfriend I'm staying with in town. I brought all gabardine dresses and boots when I flew in from California and, suddenly, it's 85 degrees. So I'm wearing whatever I find in my friend's closet."

Was she bothered by all the attention she got on the street? "Oh, no," said the long-limbed, green-eyed beauty, currently making waves on TV as Monica, Charlton Heston's business executive daughter, in ABC's "The Colbys."

"I'm not used to being stared at. I grew up in a small town in Texas — Dickinson — and I always dressed far out, always had a dark suntan and a wild hairdo. So people noticed. And it was the same when I was modeling in New York. In California, though, TV and movie stars are a dime a dozen and nobody pays any attention to you. But it's a lot different here in New York.

"At first when people looked at me, I'd check to see if I was zipped up. Then I realized it was because they had seen me in 'The Colbys.' And New York people are so friendly. They come up and say hello, and they all want to know what happens next on the show."

When last seen on "The Colbys" cliff-hanger episode this past spring, Monica Colby was at the controls of a private plane that was going into a tailspin over some rough terrain, obviously headed for a crash.

Asked what does happen next, Scoggins tosses back her reddish-brown mane and laughs. "Since my contract was picked up, I know Monica survives. She will be back wearing more beautiful clothes by Nolan Miller and, as certain otherwise intelligent career women are inclined to do, making more foolish choices with men. Beyond that, I don't know. I only get my script one week in advance. So I can't wait, myself, to see what's going to happen."

For 28-year-old Tracy Scoggins, in her "gradual career but with an uphill curve," "The Colbys" is a case of third-time's-the-charm. She starred earlier in two failed series. Her first, three seasons ago, was "The Renegades" with fellow Texan Patrick Swayze, which went by the wayside after only seven outings. This was followed by "Hawaiian Heat," a feeble show that at least eked out 13 episodes before expiring.

Referring to "The Colbys" and her role in it, Scoggins says, "As women television actors go, I think I'm one of the luckiest there is. I appreciate this part. I thank God for it every day. It's just what I wanted."

"Monica is a loving, nurturing daughter, sister and friend. She dresses nicely and wears her hair attractively. She's also a successful businesswoman, goal-oriented, a real achiever. Very direct. Fits in quite well in a man's world, which is something I've always done myself."

She shudders to recall the "bouncy beauty" roles she was obliged to play in the past.

Producers of both her previous shows demanded that she be blond. Reluctantly complying with this peroxide edict, Scoggins Tracy vowed "never again" the minute the series went off the air. "God had the right plan," she says. "I was not meant to be a blonde. I didn't even recognize myself and I felt like a fraud."

"Beauty of any sort can close as many doors as it opens in Hollywood," she goes on, speaking with the voice of experience. "If you look halfway decent, people are prone to assume you're a moron. You're always having to prove yourself and that gets a little tiring. Beauty can also be a trap in another way. You find — or at least I've found — reverse discrimination in casting. There are plenty of parts I could have done, and wanted to do, but producers said, 'No, you wouldn't be believable because of the way you look.'"

Settling on a couch, Scoggins continued talking a mile a minute — with just a touch of Texas still in her speech — while munching on an egg-salad sandwich she'd brought.

"There was no food at my girlfriend's place so I picked this up at a take-out restaurant," she said. "This is just one of my breakfasts. I'll have another when we finish here. Guess I have a really high metabolism. I eat something about every hour, a complex carbohydrate or some protein — potatoes, carrots, a wheat muffin."

"But I never have to worry about my weight. Not yet. I don't even own a scale — haven't since I've been on my own. But I can tell if my pants don't fasten as easily as they should. Then I cut down a little. Of course, since I've always been an athlete, and often in competition, I exercise so much that it'll be a while before I have to start worrying."

At the moment, Scoggins explained, she was in training for a California triathlon, in which she would participate in a 40-mile bike race, a half-mile swim and a 10-kilometer run.

The star's interest in sports, it seems, started early. Both her parents, besides being lawyers, were ranking athletes. Lucille, her mother, was once among the top five tennis players in Texas.

"I play tennis a couple of times a week," says Scoggins, "but I'm not as good as I should be, considering that a tennis ball was the first thing I held as an infant." And Scott Scoggins, her late father, was both a triathlete and a Golden Gloves boxer.

"As an only child, born late in my parents' marriage," Scoggins says, "I was kind of the son my father always wanted and never had. So I was introduced to sports when quite young and was always 'one of the guys.'"

"Being brought up by myself had its advantages. It made me strong. It made me comfortable at being alone a lot, which I am. Also I was taught to make my own way so I wouldn't have to depend on anyone else. That's given me an edge that I think men have." ■

"You're always having to prove yourself," says Tracy Scoggins, who plays Monica on ABC's "The Colbys."

High-tech fitness frauds

Some gimmicks help you lose money, not weight

By Eva Shaw

High-tech has arrived in the world of fitness—or at least that's what many advertisers would like us to believe. However, contrary to what the ads imply, there's still no effortless, futuristic way to take inches and pounds off your less-than-perfect body.

But does this stop commerce? No way. It's almost an American ethic to produce items the public wants—or is led to think it needs.

In this increasingly high-tech society, people love equipment, machines and gadgets. What better way to bank a few bucks than by supplying unsuspecting fitness seekers with gimmicks guaranteed to firm up the armchair athlete?

Manufacturers of these products and some salon owners would like you to believe that their product or treatment can get and keep you thin with little or no effort on your part.

Yet, once you receive the product or take a series of treatments, most people discover, much to their displeasure, that the only "lumps, bumps and bulges" missing are the green folding stuff.

Some of the gimmicks, gadgets, schemes and scams are dangerous, some are merely slick tricks, and some are good to a certain extent if you hang in there long enough.

Even under the frowns of the FDA and the AMA, these

"Some of the gimmicks, gadgets, schemes and scams are dangerous, some are merely slick tricks, and some are good to a certain extent if you hang in there long enough."

passive exercise systems are flourishing. The following breakdown will inform the physically fit consumer about a few questionable high-tech fitness fads of the '80s.

Electrical muscle stimulators—have you seen the ads or heard about them? "Thirty-five minutes with our new Slim-o-trim (or some catchy-named piece of equipment) is the equivalent of 1,000 sit-ups!" Curious?

So was the FDA, along with a growing group of fitness authorities. Anyone who has done 50 sit-ups knows it's no fun, so the thought of lying on a couch while a machine does all the work is big-time temptation.

Electrical muscle stimulators (EMS) have had a valid existence for bed-ridden patients for a number of years, working their weakened muscles. They are now in hot demand by salons and seem to be a fitness gold mine. They're cashing in with people who are too busy to add walking, jogging, swimming or moving to their hectic schedules.

Here's the typical procedure: Once inside the salon, you'll be but if you're looking for cheap thrills, be sure to try EMS. Just don't expect this pseudo-fitness scam to replace your regular workouts.

If you've tried on a swimsuit lately in front of a three-way mirror, you may have rejected the suit and headed straight for a figure-wrapping session "guaranteed" to rid your anatomy of cellulite.

Well, cellulite by any other name is still fat. But if you're wrinkled and lumpy in the hips and derriere, you could easily get sucked in by a sales pitch which goes something like: "You must lose four to 12 inches with your first visit or your money back!" Sounds great, right?

Cellulite's having some distinct properties is only a media-generated myth, according to the AMA, and they based this decision on considerable scientific studies. Nevertheless each year many of you are lured into expensively furnished salons featuring figure wrapping and the promise of thinner thighs— instantly. Here's what you really get:

The ads don't really lie, however, because a small muscle group is being worked—but it's just one muscle group within an entire network of muscles. Since it's not working against any resistance, it's not getting stronger—just working.

The FDA has issued warnings against EMS for pregnant women and people with heart problems, MS or epilepsy since treatments could be dangerous.

After the total body measurement procedure, you'll be wrapped mummy style in a multitude of tapes drenched in some magical formula. Only those sections which are cellulite-free will be left wrappless.

Then you'll slip into a rubberized suit or be wrapped in clear plastic before you lie down to relax. After the entire process—which can take up to an hour and which will cost about $30—you definitely will notice a difference and see the changes in your measurements—perhaps because the tape measure is being pulled a tad tighter, and through dehydration of the cells in the wrapped area.

What has happened is that dehydration of the cells, combined with the embrace of cool air as you're unwrapped, has made the cells constrict. However, within a few hours you'll be back to your normal, pre-expensive-treatment size.

If you're into illusions, you might prefer figure wrapping to a flowing caftan. But if it's long-term results you're aiming at, cross it off your list.

Is it safe? The AMA and FDA checked it out and discovered, yes, there are some risks involved. Dehydration and heat exhaustion head the list; also, that magical solution the tapes are soaked in often contains aluminum sulphate, which could produce skin irritation and tissue softening.

'Tough Guys' is rattling fun

By Bob Thomas

A train robbery in 1968? Ridiculous, you say? But when the train robbers are two old crooks named Harry Doyle and Archie Long, you want to believe it could happen.

When Doyle and Long are played by Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas, you're rooting for them to pull it off. What a pleasure to watch the reunion of two stars who can really fill the screen.

The movie is appropriately called "Tough Guys," and it's on the Touchstone label out of Disney. It begins with Douglas and Lancaster completing a 30-year stretch for pulling off the last train robbery in the West. They leave prison to face a hostile world.

Right from the start, some nutty old guy (Eli Wallach) keeps firing a shotgun at them. The cop (Charles Durning) who put them in the slammer swears he'll do it again. Back in Los Bob Thomas reviews movies for the Associated Press.

Angeles, the two cons are confronted by a street gang — and they send the ruffians packing.

Forbidden to associate with each other, Lancaster is relegated to a senior citizens' hotel, and Douglas is forced into menial, demeaning jobs. Disgusted with their new lives, they meet secretly. The Gold Coast Flyer, which was their last train job, is making its farewell run.

"Tough Guys" cannot be taken seriously, as with other Lancaster-Douglas collaborations such as "Gunfight at OK Corral" and "Seven Days in May."

The situations are too predictable, the happenings too improbable. But it is rattling good fun to see the two veterans beating up on the young toughs, Lancaster leading a food riot at the retirement home, Douglas dressing up funky and disco dancing to please a young woman who is hot for his body.

Alexis Smith makes a welcome appearance as a onetime showgirl who rekindles a romance with Lancaster. Wallach is magnificent as the crazed old hit man trying to deliver a 30-year-old score. Always a strong performer, Durning is ideal as the crooks' nemesis. Dan Carvey deserves special notice as the sympathetic probation officer. He can easily move into the Tom Hanks-Judge Reinhold roles.

Jeff Kanew directs with a swift pace and a keen eye for character. The script, by James Orr and Jim Cruickshank, displays the stars at their best. While the ending leaves many questions unanswered, it's still a crowd pleaser.

Produced by Joe Wizan, "Tough Guys" is rated PG, mostly for language. Running time: 103 minutes.

Motion Picture Association of America rating definitions:
G — General audiences. All ages admitted.

PG — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

PG-13 — Special parental guidance strongly suggested for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

R — Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian. X — No one under 17 admitted. Some states may have higher age restrictions.

Unraveling a 1922 murder

By Lynn Hoogenboom

Sidney J. Kirkpatrick came across the raw material for his best seller, "Cast of Killers" (Dutton, $17.95), quite accidentally.

While working on another project — a biography of King Vidor — he found a trunk belonging to the late film director. Kirkpatrick pried it open and discovered it was filled with notes about the unsolved 1922 murder of Hollywood director William Desmond Taylor.

"I opened that trunk," Kirkpatrick recalls, "and the first thing that ran through my mind was, 'Oh my God! King Vidor killed William Desmond Taylor.' I really believed that. Why else would he have secreted this stuff away?"

"The logical explanation was that he didn't want himself indicted, and if he was ever called to court he might need some of this paper to know what he was up against. Of course, I dug into it, and within the hour I knew he had led a secret investigation.

"Within that day I knew who the killer was." Kirkpatrick put the biography of Vidor on hold — he plans to get back to it when he completes the screenplay for the movie version of "Cast of Killers" — and started writing the story of Vidor's 1987 investigation into the now legendary murder.

"The Taylor murder is a milestone in Hollywood history," says Kirkpatrick. "People were always looking for trouble after that, were always looking for the dark side."

The aftermath of the Taylor murder shook Hollywood to its roots — and permanently skewered the careers of two prominent actresses: Mabel Normand, the lovable comedian, and Mary Miles Minter, who had been trumpeted as Paramount's answer to Mary Pickford.

By the time the dust settled,

Desmond and Minter

Normand, who had visited Taylor the evening that he was murdered, was exposed as a drug addict; and a mash note from the 19-year-old Minter to the 54-year-old Taylor was discovered in the director's bungalow, along with a night gown monogrammed "MMM."

It sounds as dishy as a scandal can get. The catch, as Vidor found out, was that much of it simply wasn't true. Taylor, far from being a notorious Lothario, was a homosexual. And most of the rumors that circulated after his death were deliberately manufactured by Paramount (the studio at which Taylor worked) to "protect" Taylor's reputation and avert the more serious scandal that would have arisen had his homosexuality become public knowledge.

Among Vidor's findings:
● Normand, who had a reputation as a troublemaker and was considered expendable by the studios, was deliberately sacrificed to divert attention from Taylor's private life. "She had a lot to hide, and they fed her to the dogs," says Kirkpatrick.

● Although the police checked Normand's statement down to the last detail, they never investigated the much shakier alibi of Mary Miles Minter or her insanely jealous mother, Charlotte Shelby.

Film capsules

Allens (R) — Sigourney Weaver, Carrie Henn, Paul Robeson, Michael Biehn (Thriller) Even if you try and follow the plot — Warrant Officer Ripley, after a 57-year nap in outer space, goes back into combat with those slimy extraterrestrials — you'll soon tire from clutching your seat in fear. This film continues the screams that were instigated by 1979's "Alien." Director James Cameron has created perfect summer fodder to keep us hoarse for days, but Weaver is a problem. Running around in her underwear playing Rambo, she needs to hone her acting. Luckily, the success of "Aliens" rests on the special effects, and not Weaver's histrionics. Grade: B-plus.

Heartburn (R) Meryl Streep, Jack Nicholson, Jeff Daniels, Stockard Channing, Richard Masur. (Comedy) Mike Nichols' adaptation of Nora Ephron's best-seller lacks the tome's zesty insight into a troubled marriage — the book is a roman a clef about Ephron's marriage to journalist Carl Bernstein — but it still provides undemanding summer fun. Jack Nicholson's singing almost makes you forget the inadequacies — lack of characterization, undeveloped situations, stale jokes. Streep makes a fine Jewish food writer, though her character has none of the book's wry humor. This film's closing sequence is a disappointment, as is the performance by Karen Akers. Grade: C-plus.

Stand by Me (R) — Richard Dreyfuss, Will Wheaton, River Phoenix, Corey Feldman, Jerry O'Connell. (Adventure-Drama) It's a shame Rob Reiner's latest film is rated R (for strong language), because those who stand to gain the most — the under-17 crowd — can't see it without parental supervision. The skeletal plot is based on Stephen King's autobiographical novella, "The Body." Four boys, living in the '60s, journey to find another boy's dead body. There's no horror, simply well-defined characters, lulling comedy and one of the best studies of friendship to hit the screen. The cast is flawless, and Reiner has directed with a heart-warming sensitivity. Bring tissues! Grade: B-plus.

The Fly (R) — Jeff Goldblum, Geena Davis, John Getz. (Horror) A David Cronenberg film ("The Brood," "Scanners") guarantees at least two things: a weak story line and excessive gore. "The Fly" doesn't disappoint. This remake of the 1958 classic (a scientist's genes are fused with those of a housefly) should have explored man's manipulation of science. The first 40 well-paced, witty minutes do, but when Cronenberg runs out of plot, the blood — and guts, gore and body fluids — start. The effects aren't special; they're disgusting. Goldblum, a fine supporting actor with a new Nautilus body, simply can't carry the lead. Grade: C.

Manhunter (R) — William Peterson, Kim Greist, Dennis Farina, Tom Noonan. (Action-Drama) The auteur theorists oughta have a field day with this big-screen psychopathic-killer-meets-psychobabbling-cop film from Michael Mann, creator of "Miami Vice." Mann has almost two hours to foist his grim philosophy upon an audience that can't zap the remote control. In the best tradition of some of the more impenetrable "Vice" episodes, there is little character development, improbable interpretations of facts and a violent climax enacted to Iron Butterfly's "In-A-Gadda-De-Vida." Grade: C-plus.

Nothing in Common (PG) — Tom Hanks, Jackie Gleason, Eva Marie Saint, Bess Armstrong. (Comedy-Drama) As wise-cracking, womanizing ad exec David Basner, Hanks is a guilt-free, upwardly mobile charmer who cajoles and wheedles his way from office cubicle to bedroom with bravura surefootedness. Unfortunately, director Gary Marshall doesn't seem to trust the laughs. He wants us to cry, too, and the film's metamorphosis into the story of how Basner deals with his parents' separation is a nose-dive into bathos. Gleason is adequate as Hanks's ill, out-of-work father, and Saint is touching as his mother. Grade: B.

Crocodile Dundee (PG-13) — Paul Hogan, Linda Kozlowski, Mark Blum. (Comedy) The leather-skinned Dundee, best known for his Australian tourism commercials, makes a delightful and likable leading man in this comedic travelogue. An attractive reporter (Kozlowski) meets Hogan in the Australian bush, takes him to New York City and falls in love with him. Yuks abound when the naive Dundee makes his way around the big city, and there is just enough action (crocodile killing, snake wrestling, fish spearfishing) to keep audiences from squirming at the silliness. This is light fare for the natives. Grade: B-minus.

Is rap getting a lousy rep?

By Ethlie Ann Vare

Russell Simmons, manager of rap-masters Run-D.M.C. (you may have seen his fictionalized life story in the movie "Krush Groove"), is indignant that rap is accused of breeding violence. After the Long Beach, Calif., concert where Run-D.M.C. fans were terrorized by street gangs, Tipper Gore — spokesperson for the anti-rock Parents Music Resource Center — blamed the music.

Simmons countered that Gore is "dead wrong," and explained that "rap records are among the most consistently positive to be found on the musical landscape." He went on to note some of Run-D.M.C.'s humanitarian efforts, including anti-drug awareness, opposition to apartheid and famine relief.

"Having quoted chapter and verse in support of my contentions," says Simmons, "I now defy Mrs. Gore to do the same. I'm sure her time would be much more fruitfully spent investigating the sources of anger and disillusionment she sees in America. She'll find that rock 'n' roll is not part of the problem, but part of the solution."

Speaking of "Krush Groove," director Michael Schultz and co-stars, the Fat Boys, will reunite for another movie, "The Disorderlies," a $5 million comedy feature going into production in early 1987, stars the hefty trio as hospital orderlies hired to protect an ailing millionaire from his money-hungry heirs. The Fat Boys are scheduled to write two original rap numbers for the sound track.

Taj Mahal, the 44-year-old, college-educated bluesman who helped reintroduce roots music to America radio in the 1960s, is making his first new album in eight years. "Taj," coming out on the Gramavision label, was partially recorded at Stevie Wonder's Wonderland studios in Los Angeles, and features performances by Wonder's own back-up singers. Mahal, who had been living in Hawaii for some years, says there will be a distinct Polynesian flavor to his comeback LP, due on the streets later this month.

New York producer Joseph Papp is mounting a stage musical of "Up Against It," which was originally developed as the sequel to the Beatles' movie "Help." Todd Rudgren has been asked to write the music.

Meanwhile, a 1964 Beatles' single — "Twist and Shout" — regained the top-10 after a hiatus of two decades. It all stemmed from the song's use on two summer movie sound tracks, the same reason that "Earth Angel" is once again climbing the charts, this one after a 33-year gap.

Unfortunately, it's not the Penguins' 1954 version of "Earth Angel" that's making a comeback via "Karate Kid II," but the First Edition. Still, songwriter Dootsie Williams (alive and collecting royalties) says that the classic version continues to make money for its creators. "It still sells today, after 30 years," says Williams, "about 1,000 copies a month."

Fundamentalists have trouble with heavy metal records, especially ones using words like "hell" and "devil." But even Jerry Falwell should remain sanguine about the latest release by born-again headbangers Stryper. Their digitally mastered, 32-track, state-of-the-art LP (due in October) is called "To Hell with the Devil."

Beaver's mom is still a hit with the viewers

By Jerry Buck

Barbara Billingsley

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Can it really be only 20 years since Barbara Billingsley stopped playing Beaver Cleaver's mother? It seems a lifetime ago, but Miss Billingsley is once again back in her role as June Cleaver.

"Life has changed a lot in that time," Miss Billingsley conceded. "But I still think the basic things are the same. Look at what they're doing on 'The Cosby Show.' Cosby is doing a lot of the same things we did 25 years ago."

Television more than any other medium feeds off its past. New ideas are passed over in favor of what worked before. Old series seem to live forever in reruns. Shows that worked in Britain are reworked for American television. Shows that worked on network television are dusted off and revived for cable or first-run syndication.

Premature ejaculation is common

This sexual dysfunction can be treated successfully

By Dr. June M. Reinsch

DEAR DR. REINSCH: I am 23 and suffer from premature ejaculation. I have heard time and time again that this is caused by masturbation. I want to state that I do not masturbate. Could I have inherited this from someone else in my family?

coitus last longer, some men use a condom to reduce penile sensation, have coitus after already ejaculating once in a lovemaking session, and use positions that reduce thrusting movements.

DEAR READER: Premature ejaculation is when a man ejaculates sooner than he and his partner would prefer. Dr. William Masters and Mrs. Virginia Johnson estimated that between 15 percent and 20 percent of U.S. men have difficulty in controlling ejaculation.

Where did you hear that too-rapid ejaculation is caused by masturbation? I could find no research that said this about masturbation, an activity engaged in by nearly all males. It's speculated that premature ejaculation might be caused by a history of rushing to complete a sex act (either masturbation or activity with a partner) to avoid being observed or caught. When a man views his rapid climax as a problem, he may focus on his performance and fear lack of control — which often makes him ejaculate even more quickly.

Fortunately, premature ejaculation can be treated successfully, and in many cases quickly, by sex therapists who are trained to teach couples the "stop-and-start" and/or the "squeeze technique" methods of learning ejaculatory control.

There is no evidence that this type of sexual problem can be inherited. However, some researchers have theorized that among prehistoric men, perhaps only the fastest ejaculators survived, while the men who needed more time in coitus were eaten by predators. Premature ejaculation is the most common of the sexual dysfunctions, and it gradually eases for some men without professional help. To make

Looking for reports

DEAR DR. REINSCH: I am a grandmother and heard about the Kinsey Report when I was much younger, but I never read it. Now that I am a reader of your column, I wondered where I could buy a copy of Dr. Kinsey's old report.

DEAR READER: The first

Premature ejaculation is the most common of the sexual dysfunctions, and it gradually eases for some men without professional help. To make coitus last longer, some men use a condom to reduce penile sensation, have coitus after already ejaculating once in a lovemaking session, and use positions that reduce thrusting movements.

two books written by Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey and his staff — "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male" (published in 1948) and "Sexual Behavior in the Human Female" (published in 1953) — are the ones usually referred to as the "Kinsey reports."

Although these two volumes remained the most cited works on human sexuality, they are out of print and thus are not available for purchase at regular book stores. Much to everyone's surprise, these books became best-sellers although they were written in a dry academic style, filled with data tables and issued by a medical-text publisher. Because so many copies were printed, it's worthwhile to call used-book dealers to ask if they have any available. Many public libraries have copies that you could check out and read.

Sex for health?

DEAR DR. REINSCH: I heard on a TV game show about a survey in which physicians were asked if it was unhealthy to go without having sex for a year, and 18 percent said, yes, it was unhealthy.

DEAR READER: There is no scientific evidence to support the idea that not having sex with a partner is bad for your health. Each person's body probably can generate one type of sexual outlet that the individual cannot consciously control. For example, some men and women have orgasms during sleep. This is popularly referred to as a nocturnal emission, or wet dream, when it occurs in males. Perhaps orgasm during sleep is a type of safety mechanism, through which the body supplements other orgasms and maintains the rate of sexual release that is best for each individual.

However, some evidence suggests that for many people, some type of regular sexual outlet or orgasm may be a basic element of good health. For example, one study found that postmenopausal women who did not have sex partners and who masturbated to orgasm were similar in terms of genital health to those postmenopausal women who had sexual intercourse. Both of these sexually active groups of women had much healthier external genitals, vaginal tissue and urinary tracts than did women who had no sexual outlet at all. Many physicians who treat

It's speculated that premature ejaculation might be caused by a history of rushing to complete a sex act (either masturbation or activity with a partner) to avoid being observed or caught. When a man views his rapid climax as a problem, he may focus on his performance and fear lack of control — which often makes him ejaculate even more quickly.

prostate problems suggest that "feast or famine" patterns of sex can increase prostate infections; therefore, they recommend that men with this problem have orgasms on a more regular basis. Of course, the prostate doesn't know whether it is being emptied by sexual intercourse with a partner or by masturbation.

Brother worries

DEAR DR. REINSCH: I am a 22-year-old male who has small testicles. My 19-year-old brother's testicles are larger than mine. Does this mean that I have a glandular problem? Does it indicate that I'm sterile? If I do have a problem, are there cures? Should I see a urologist, an endocrinologist, or someone else?

DEAR READER: Testicle size varies widely. Masters and Johnson say that the average size of an adult testicle is 2 inches long, 0.8 inches thick and 1.2 inches wide. (Remember that "average size" means that many men will have healthy, normal testicles that are somewhat smaller, and many men will have healthy, normal testicles that are somewhat larger.) Testicle size requires a visit to a physician (preferably a urologist) if one testicle is considerably larger or smaller than the other, if one or both testicles suddenly enlarge, or if there is a change in the texture of a testicle.

The testicles have two functions: They produce hormones and they manufacture sperm. If you have signs of puberty (for example, growth of facial hair, deepening of the voice, and the ability to ejaculate), your testicles probably are producing male hormones. However, if you think that you are not fully developed in these areas, make an appointment with an endocrinologist who can evaluate all aspects of your hormonal condition.

The only way to determine whether your testicles produce sperm is to have a sample of your ejaculate analyzed. Any physician can arrange for this test. In all likelihood, your testicles are within the normal size range and are producing both hormones and sperm. If there is a hormonal or fertility problem, it probably can be easily corrected with appropriate medical treatment. However, I am not aware of any way to increase the size of healthy adult testicles.

Send questions to Dr. Reinsch in care of The Kinsey Report, P.O. Box 48, Bloomington, IN 47402. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest may be discussed in future columns.

Feeding your face

Sensible eating helps your skin

By Frances Sheridan Goulart

What's the best way to feed your face? Baby your skin. A drink-up diet easy on the pork, heavy on the peaches and pull-out-all-the-stops-with-water is the secret. According to New York nutritionist Meredith L. Hoblock, R.D., "Certain nutrients found in certain foods not only contribute to overall health, but also work specifically to keep the face clear and smooth."

Here are tips:
1. Mother Nature moisturizers: Why do apples put apples in your cheeks and why are bananas, avocados and water such super head-to-toe beauty foods? They're Mother Nature's own moisturizers.

For your skin's cells to be in peak condition, your body needs a steady supply of fluid. Every living cell and biochemical reaction depends on water. Water-starved cells are like houseplants: They wilt and shrink. The beauty lesson? Soak your cells, but don't do it with caffeinated coffee, tea, colas or alcoholic beverages. These cause dehydration, warns Manhattan dermatologist Dr. Jonathan Zizmor. Zizmor calls these "blushing foods" because they cause unsightly dilation of facial capillaries.

2. Skin-specific vitamins: High-moisture fruits and vegetables are a low-calorie way to get skin-specific vitamins. The two that do the most to maintain a first-rate skin: A and C. A's primary role is to keep skin supple and moist; C's skin job is to help form collagen, a major component of the connective tissue which holds cells together and prevents delicate capillaries that lie beneath your skin from damage.

3. Water and more water: You need 8 to 12 glasses of filtered tap water, seltzer or low-sodium mineral water a day to make up for lost water.

4. Five top foods to feed your face:

- Juicy fruits — for anti-wrinkle A and C, fluid, energizing potassium. All three help prevent both facial puffiness and dry-as-a-bone complexion as well. Best bets: mangos, (90 percent); papaya, (89 percent); strawberries, (89 percent); peaches (89 percent); raspberries, (84 percent); kiwi (83 percent); and pears, (83 percent).

- Leafy greens, second best face-savers. Highest in water and vitamins: alfalfa sprouts, (91 percent); lettuce, (90 percent); carrots, artichokes and asparagus (87 percent); and corn (74 percent).

- Low-fat protein. Switch to calorie-and-fat-reduced sliced cheeses, to dry curd and uncreamed cottage cheeses and to skim or low-fat milk, and tofu and tofu "ice creams." Reduce your use of meat, full-cream cheeses and "real" cream ice cream. Fat clogs pores, slows down digestion.

- Whole grains. Like fresh greens, whole-grain cereals and breads provide fiber to cleanse the system, eliminating the digestive problems which can cause facial blemishes, rashes and discoloration. Start your day with a bowl of bran, end it with whole-grain toast and herb tea.

- EFA (vitamin F) foods. These skin-smoothers-soothers-and-plum-pers regulate the dry/moist balance in your skin. Best EFA bets for smooth skin are raw nuts and seeds, olive, corn and safflower oils. Use daily but in moderation to keep calories down.

5. Phys. ed. for your face: Working out can work wonders for skin, too. According to Dr. James White, exercise physiologist and coordinator of physical fitness at the University of California, San Diego, physical training affects the properties of the skin.

The elastic quality that allows skin to spring right back to its original shape after being stretched is significantly better in the skin of the athletes. People who exercise regularly, says White, "have fewer wrinkles than those who do not."

Here's a three-day menu plan to feed your face. You can improve your facial potential with salad fork, fruit knife and water jug. Menus that follow provide 1,300-1,500 calories a day (keep portions small).

THREE-DAY FEED YOUR FACE DIET

Choose one breakfast, lunch and dinner for each day.

3 Breakfasts

One
 1 small bran muffin with 1 teaspoon low-sodium butter or sugar-reduced jelly

1 soft-boiled egg with watercress garnish
 Vitamin C tea*

Two
 1 cup unsweetened white grape juice or Vitamin C tea*

1 cup puffed rice or wheat, skim milk and sliced kiwi or cantaloupe

1 toasted mini bagel

"The elastic quality that allows skin to spring right back to its original shape after being stretched is significantly better in the skin of athletes."

Three
 Whole-wheat fruit croissant with 1 teaspoon of heated corn oil
 1 ounce raw sunflower seeds
 Sugar-free canned pears with 2 tablespoons Crunchy Yogurt*
 Vitamin C tea*

3 Lunches
One
 V-8 juice on the rocks
 Steamed artichokes with yogurt-lemon juice dip
 2 rice crackers or Ry Crisp

Two
 Sparkling mineral water
 Egg salad with radishes and cucumbers
 Fresh grapes

Three
 1 cup chicken broth with 1/4 cup toasted croutons
 Tossed green salad with tangerine wedges

3 Dinners
One
 Jumbo shrimp and snow peas stir-fried in 1 tablespoon olive oil
 Raw sunflower seeds

1 baked apple
 Postum or decaf
Two
 Broiled tofu on shredded Chinese or regular cabbage
 Steamed peas and carrots
 1/2 cup dry roasted nuts
 Vitamin C tea* with lime wedges
 1 cup Crunchy Yogurt*

Three
 1/2 broiled chicken breast
 Raw spinach salad with toasted wheat germ and diet dressing
 Fresh fruit cocktail

Three More Tips
 • Don't worry. There are 29 complexion-spoiling problems that you can get when you get upset, says Robert D. Griesemer, M.D., Assistant Clinical Professor of Dermatology, Harvard Medical School. Seventy percent of all cases of acne, for example, are caused by anxiety and your emotions.

• There's nothing like a smile to exercise the 80 muscles in your face, says R.B. Zajonc, Ph.D., professor of psychology at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. When you smile, facial muscles push against veins and arteries in the head, changing the amount of blood that flows to the brain.

A tiny change in the amount of blood flowing to or from the brain can change its temperature. This affects production of neurotransmitters — powerful brain chemicals that can kill pain and lift your mood.

• Know the top 12 fruits for your face:

• Reach for a nectarine, not nectar. Juice gives you 140 calories, but it provides no fiber. Two small nectarines have twice the fiber and half the calories of one glass of juice.

• To keep fluids up and calories down, substitute water for 1/2 of every glass of juice, milk, coffee, wine, etc. you drink. And don't short yourself on sleep or skip meals. Both lead to stress, which impairs skin metabolism.

• Make skin-healthy substitutes that satisfy. A one-ounce serving of potato chips isn't filling and has more calories than the baked potato with two teaspoons of oil that's a better choice. A fast-food apple pie has three times the calories of a fresh apple baked with a bit of honey, butter and spice.

• The malic acid in apple juice, the citric acid in squeezed oranges and the lactic acid in skim milk make first-rate complexion quenchers. Splash them on twice a day.

• Exercise. Keep your meter running between meals. It steps up circulation, firms your skin, helps you absorb food and vitamins better and burns calories faster. Best get-thin bracers for your skin: brisk walking, stair climbing, rope jumping.

RECIPES

Vitamin C Tea

Use one of the following or a blend of any two or more: rosehip, alfalfa, peppermint, spearmint, parsley, lemon mint, red clover, hibiscus, strawberry leaf.

Crunchy Yogurt

Toast 1/2 cup regular rolled oats in a 325 F. oven for 15 minutes. Stir into 2 cups plain yogurt. Makes 2 servings or 24 toppings. ■

Master matches make fine careers

By Phyllis Zauner

Caroline Guion, a delicately built 22-year-old with long, pale gold hair (she couldn't weigh over 100 pounds), looks strangely out of place amid the clutter of a carpentry shop. Picking up a heavy board, she starts to run it through a bench rip saw, guiding it carefully past her fingers. Standing behind her and watching over her shoulder is a tall, rangy man with the look of a Viking. He is Norman Peterson, a furniture designer of some repute, whose unique, custom-built chairs command high prices. He is a master in his field. And Guion is his apprentice. What she will learn from him, over a period of six months, is the art of turning raw wood into artistically designed pieces of furniture. She'll also gain some insight into the display and marketing of the finished product.

The words "apprentice" and "master" sound awkward in the lexicon of today, as though they came from another century. They call up visions of old German operas or of Charles Dickens characters eking out a penurious existence. Still, the arrangements had great merit in other times, and might have application today.

"When you match up someone who really wants to teach with someone who really wants to learn, it's one of the finest one-on-one relationships anywhere."

A master is someone who has mastered a field of endeavor, someone qualified to take on an apprentice and pass along his expertise. The apprentice exchanges labor for learning. And that is the basis of the Apprentice Alliance in San Francisco, a non-profit placement service that pairs up the accomplished with the eager-to-learn.

Lu Phillips, who founded the group two years ago, believes it is probably the only such organization around. True, there are union apprenticeship programs, and there are college work/study programs. But they are not open to the general public, and usually cost a lot. Currently the Apprentice Alliance has about 120 apprentice master matches at work.

A master pays $20 to join the alliance and be listed in its directory. Potential apprentices pay an initial $20 fee to the alliance, which arranges interviews for them with masters. Once a match is made, there is a trial period of a week or so. Then, if the arrangement appears to be working, the master and apprentice each ante up another $50. Terms of service are worked out between master and apprentice. Phillips personally interviews each master, evaluating him or her on skills, professionalism and attitude, before sending a potential apprentice for an interview.

Most of the time, the relationship works out well, Phillips says. "When you match up someone who really wants to teach with someone who really wants to learn, it's one of the finest one-on-one relationships anywhere." And when the relationship is a good one, the learning that takes place is amazing. It's the richest way to learn.

For Guion, apprenticeship was no less than "a brilliant idea," she says. Recently returned to the U.S. after two years as an art student in Italy, she was looking for some way to expand. "I wanted to work in some medium that had utility instead of just painting still life on flat canvas." An ad in a San Francisco newspaper brought her to the alliance.

At first it was hard to choose from the vast variety of possibilities offered by the alliance directory. "But this is perfect, a chance to study art in three-dimensional form. You can't learn this from books. He's got a lot of first day Peterson said, 'Make me a chair.' That's when I started learning."

The only disadvantage is not getting paid. She works three days a week with Peterson and supports herself by working as a waitress the rest of the week.

The directory of the Apprentice Alliance is a panoply of possibilities. Prospective apprentices can choose from such fields as guitar-making, dental assisting, fashion design, freelance writing. Some typical listings:

- Publicist Elmer Brunstman, whose clients include Greenpeace and others, needs an apprentice to help with everything from creating press kits to holding press conferences.
- Caterer Ronald Jackson would provide an apprentice with a solid training in running a catering business, from preparing menus to making sauces.
- User Orient, specializing in computers, will share with one or two apprentices the programming and development of software.

- So far, the most difficult field for Phillips to crack (yet one of the most sought after) has been movie and video filming. She's also looking for more masters in the fields of health, interior design, theater and chefs.

William Porter is one of three professional photographers listed in the alliance directory. He chose 26-year-old Angela Leaper from several who showed him portfolios, to help him in his special field of architectural photography.

According to Porter, the relationship has worked out beautifully. "For one thing," he says, "I got to choose from a labor pool of people with desire. That makes a big difference. Also, I love learning things myself, so I like to share those discoveries. And the apprentice gets real-world, on-the-line education that no classroom can match."

Leaper does everything from bookkeeping to assisting Porter on shoots. "This is a tremendous learning experience," she says. "I can ask any questions and he's always available."

Is vinegar bad for your health?

By Sonja Heinze

I use oil and vinegar for my salad dressing. My wife says that I should not use vinegar in any form because I'm on a salt-free diet due to high blood pressure. Does vinegar contain salt? What is in it besides water? Aaron Resnick, Lauderhill, Fla.

There are only trace amounts of salt in vinegar, so go ahead and use it on your salad.

Vinegar can be made from any material which can be converted to ethyl alcohol. Plain, distilled white vinegar is made from corn, rye or barley. There's nothing else in it but acid, about 5 percent, and water, 95 percent. Wine vinegar is made from grapes, apple cider vinegar from apples, and malt vinegar is made from barley. Some vinegars have flavors added to them, such as garlic or tarragon.

Essentially, vinegar is a pure, unadulterated liquid useful not only for salad dressings and for preserving foods but also for cleaning purposes. The H.J. Heinz Co. has a booklet called "Vinegar Almanac" which details ways to use vinegar around the house. Send 25 cents to Heinz Vinegar, P.O. Box 28, DP 35, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15230.

CONFUSING MILK LABEL
It seems the milk industry is playing the numbers game by advertising milk as "2 percent low-fat." Two percent of what? The difference between 5 grams of fat in low-fat milk and 9 grams of fat in whole milk is more than 2 percent of whatever. Or 5 grams is 2 percent of what? Paul Koval, Santa Maria, Calif.

Alan Huggins, Ph.D. and director of their research programs, answered: "Whole milk contains 3.5 percent fat, or 3.5 grams of fat per 100 grams of milk. Two percent lowfat milk contains 2.0 percent fat, which is 1.5 percent less fat than whole milk. It's that simple."

RAW OYSTERS ALIVE?
Upon reading your column wherein you say that when you eat raw oysters you're eating them alive, both my husband and I swallowed hard. How long can oysters live out of the water? With all the processing and shipping to local stores and restaurants, are they really still alive when you eat them? Susan Earl, Dearborn Heights, Mich.

If you believe that an oyster is alive when purchased in a store, tell me how long it can live out of water even if refrigerated? Also, your claim that an oyster is eventually killed by stomach acids is nonsense. Chewing it would kill it first. Alfred McLaughlin, Rosenberg, Ore.

Shell oysters remain alive for two weeks or more if properly refrigerated, advises Robert Price, Ph.D., a seafood technology specialist with the University of California at Davis. They stay alive by tightly closing their shells, thus avoiding water loss, and probably have a reduced metabolism under refrigeration.

Technically, a shucked oyster is alive, but once out of its shell is no longer able to function as a living animal. "Opening an oyster's shell," states Price, "is traumatic to the oyster, and removing the oyster by cutting through its muscles adds to the trauma. Many of the cells in the shucked oyster will continue to respire until they run out of energy, are ruptured during chewing or are killed by gastric juices (some people swallow them without chewing), but so do the cells in potatoes and many other foods."

When you come right down to it, says Price, "a potato is probably more 'alive' than a shucked oyster, since you can plant a potato and it will grow and reproduce." Once out of its shell an oyster, alas, is doomed.

READERS' SUGGESTION: BACON FAT

My thanks to the many, many readers who sent their imaginative suggestions for using leftover bacon fat. Here are just some of them:

Jane Campbell, Bakersfield, CA: "My mother discovered that bacon fat is the best thing for removing paint from your skin. Whenever I'm painting a room or touching up woodwork, I make sure my fat jar is ready for me when I'm done. Also, once or twice a month I mix a little bacon fat into the pet food. It's a taste treat for them and keeps their coats shiny."

Marion Richter, Fresno, Calif.: "Bacon grease has the same consistency of greaseless soap and is much cheaper and handier. Use it to remove grease from a mechanic's hands or arms before using soap."

Mrs. Glenn Franklin, Port Richey, Fla.: "We have found that instead of using charcoal lighter fluid to light a charcoal grill, pour some lard on a little paper first and put it under the charcoal, and then line your grill with charcoal and pour the fat on top, spreading it around slowly. Then light with a match. No odor, no lighter fluid taste and it saves money!"

Mrs. M. White, Hot Springs, Ark.: "Bacon fat mixed with pork or beef fat makes a desirable soap. Strain fat and heat with water to remove salt and impurities. When cooled and hardened it can be lifted off the water."

And the winner is — chicken

Chicken can be counted on for successful meals

By Janet Lorimer

I just love reading about people who win cooking contests. "Maybelline Biblefister of Lower Teagarden Corners won first prize for her Creamed Rose Hip Puffs with Mock Radish Sauce. The grand prize is $10,000 and an all-expense-paid canoe trip up the Amazon."

One of these days I'm going to enter a cooking contest and I'm bound to win because I've made a phenomenal discovery — chicken — one food that is a real winner.

Chicken can be counted on whether you enter contests or prepare a meal for your family. It's a versatile, reasonably priced meat and there's so much you can do with it. It goes well cooked with vegetables and fruits. It can be cooked in a variety of ways and used in everything from the main course to salads, sandwiches, soups and snacks.

Let's start with some easy marinades that do a couple of lovely things for chicken. First, they lend to the meat the most incredible flavors, and second, they tenderize the chicken so that, when cooked, it almost melts in your mouth.

CAESAR'S CHEATER

1/4 cup vinegar
1/4 cup salad oil
2-3 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 clove garlic, finely minced
2 tablespoons onion, finely minced dash pepper
1-2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

Mix all ingredients together in small bowl. Before using, allow marinade to stand, covered, in refrigerator for about 30 minutes to give flavors a chance to blend.

TANGY TOPPER

1/4 cup vinegar
1/4 cup salad oil
3 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
1 clove garlic, finely minced
1/4 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon marjoram
dash salt, to taste, optional

Mix all ingredients and allow marinade to stand, covered, in refrigerator for about 30 minutes before using.

MYSTERY MARINADE

1/2 cup salad oil
1/2 cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped onion dash salt and pepper
1/4 teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley

Mix all ingredients and refrigerate, covered, for about 30 minutes before using.

QUICK TANGY CHICKEN

2 1/2 pounds of chicken pieces
one batch Caesar's Cheater, Tangy Topper or Mystery Marinade

In shallow dish arrange chicken pieces. Pour marinade over everything. Turn the chicken pieces in the marinade to be certain all sides are covered.

Cover dish and let stand in refrigerator for about 6 hours or overnight. Turn once or twice during the marinating period. Chicken may be cooked on the barbeque or baked at 350F for about one hour.

This dish combines chicken and fruit for a slightly Oriental flavor.

GINGERY CHICKEN

2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon ginger
1/2 small clove garlic, finely minced
1 teaspoon honey, or to taste
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/2 cup white wine
2 1/2 pounds chicken pieces
6-8 slices fresh pineapple

Mix all ingredients except chicken and pineapple. Place chicken pieces in a shallow baking dish, and top with pineapple slices. Pour marinade over everything. Allow the chicken and pineapple to marinate for several hours, covered, in refrigerator.

Bake at 350F for about an hour, turning chicken once during baking process. (Of course, when you turn the chicken, you'll turn the pineapple, too, but always keep the pineapple on top during the baking.)

Serves 4.
If you enjoy the winning combination of chicken and fruit flavors, you'll adore this saucy little number.

FRUIT SAUCY CHICKEN

1 (6-ounce) can pineapple juice concentrate

1 (6-ounce) can grapefruit juice concentrate
1/2 teaspoon ginger
3 tablespoons lemon juice
2 1/2 pounds chicken pieces

In saucepan mix juice concentrates, ginger and lemon juice. Heat to a boil, then remove from heat. Cool marinade and pour over chicken pieces in shallow baking dish. Marinate chicken overnight, covered, in refrigerator.

The next day, before cooking, place chicken pieces on grill top over broiler pan. Reheat the marinade, bringing it to a boil. Cook for several minutes. Brush the reheated marinade over the chicken. Bake chicken at 350F for 30 minutes. Turn chicken pieces, brush again with marinade and continue baking for another 30 minutes.

Note: Marinade browns easily, so watch the chicken carefully. Serve chicken with hot extra marinade to be used as a sauce.

Serves 4.
I'm not fond of deboning chicken. It is boring work. Once in a while I make the effort because the end result is so deliciously irresistible. (While I debone, I practice my acceptance speech for winning the Grand Coulee Cook-Off that I've promised myself I'll enter.)

CHICKEN-STUFFED MUSHROOMS

about 1 pound very large fresh mushrooms 1-2 teaspoons lemon juice
dash salt and pepper, to taste, optional
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 cup finely diced, cooked, deboned chicken
1/4 cup whole-wheat bread crumbs
1 egg
1 tablespoon fresh parsley, finely chopped

Wash and pat dry the mushrooms and carefully remove the stems. Set the cleaned caps aside. Chop the stems and mix with all the other ingredients in mixing bowl. Spoon mixture into mushroom caps, mounding it up and smoothing it over with the back of a spoon or a spatula.

Arrange the stuffed mushrooms in a baking dish, stuffed side up. Bake in a 350F oven for about 20 minutes.

CHICKEN SALAD-STUFFED TOMATOES

1 cup cooked, diced, deboned chicken
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup yogurt, more if desired

1-2 tablespoons finely chopped celery
1 teaspoon finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon chopped pickle, dill or sweet 4 large fresh tomatoes
carrot curls, sprigs of parsley, and/or paprika, if desired, as a garnish

Mix chicken, mayonnaise, yogurt, celery, onion and pickle together in mixing bowl. Wash and dry tomatoes and cut off about 1/2" slice from the top of each tomato. Scoop out the pulp, being careful not to break the skin. (Save the pulp and sliced-off tops for that spaghetti sauce you plan to make tomorrow.)

Fill the tomato shells with chicken salad. Garnish with a dash of paprika and/or a carrot curl or sprig of parsley. Serve chilled.

Serves 4.
You may have noticed that the chicken filling for the tomato cups tastes pretty yummy as a sandwich filling, too. In fact, you might want to double the chicken salad mixture for just that reason. It's a good way to create two meals with one recipe.

Now let's put our chicken into a casserole. This one is a veritable blue-ribbon entry!

1784 Inn

By Sondra Astor Stave

Although autumn's color show is an annual event, few are immune to its wonder. For a drive that enables one to view this spectacle, with a culinary reward at its end, a visit to the 1784 Inn is in order. Located on Route 32 in Franklin, it is the ideal fall destination.

Although the building celebrated its second century in 1984, it has served as a restaurant for only the past five years. Currently open for lunch Tuesday through Friday and dinner Tuesday through Saturday, it boasts a tremendous choice in all courses. In addition to an extensive printed menu, the seasonal addenda offer more than a dozen appetizers and an equal number of entrees.

New England clam chowder seemed the answer to my wish for a barely thickened and creamy clam broth. It added the virtues of lots of clam pieces, a proper amount of potatoes and distinctive seasoning to make for a thoroughly satisfying bowl.

Shrimp taverna appeared as three large butterfied shrimp in a sauce redolent of garlic and loaded with tiny cubes of summer tomatoes. It was definitely prepared for those of us who enjoy assertive flavoring.

The appetizer combination was a generous portion of stuffed mushrooms, mussels, sea munchies and scallops in bacon. The mushrooms had a moist stuffing that tasted of the sea, the mussels were tender, the sea munchies (mini shrimp) were fried crisp outside, succulent within and the scallops and bacon provided proper textural contrast.

The accompanying cocktail sauce was appropriately spicy but really unnecessary as the four appetizers stood up more than adequately on their own. There is no lack of choice in the salad course. In addition to the tossed salad with several dressing possibilities, there is the cashew salad which tops bibb lettuce with nut pieces in a piquant dressing.

The spinach salad has lots of fresh mushroom slices mixed in with uncut spinach leaves and tops them both with a bacon-and-vinegar moistener, then spectacularly crisp and flavorful homemade croutons. The Caesar salad follows the classical recipe of romaine leaves and an anchovy-garlic dressing, but adds a mild bleu cheese as well. A round loaf of caraway-spiked bread was good with butter and even better for sopping up the extra salad dressings.

Seated near the fireplace in the middle of the three small dining rooms, we were able to observe much of the food going to the other diners. Sighting a number of huge and interesting-looking beef dishes, we were pleased that we had chosen the steak au poivre as one of our entrees.

It arrived, gargantuan and regal, and tasted even better than it looked. The cognac and cream sauce perfectly set off the beefy peppered sirloin; this may have been the best piece of beef I have eaten in this decade. Potatoes mashed with turnips were a pleasant accompaniment.

German herbed veal with fettucine in a vegetable marsala sauce would have seemed even better if it had not been competing for attention with that fine steak. However, to give the veal its due, it was certainly a competently prepared and tasty, tender piece of meat.

Dickens en crock combined sauteed crab, shrimp and scallops in a well-seasoned cream sauce and then topped it all with Swiss cheese and puff pastry. The underlayers of the pastry might have been crisper, but that is the closest thing to a fault that one could find with this otherwise exemplary dish.

The chef's skill carried through to dessert with a barely sweet chocolate chip sour cream cake topped with whipped cream. Also enjoyable was the chocolate hazelnut mousse which had a pleasant undertaste of liqueur. Perhaps best was the macaroon almondine sundae which combined creamy vanilla ice cream with broken macaroon cookies and shards of praline-sugared almonds. Prices for appetizers range from $1.95 for a cup of soup to $8.95 for the oyster and shrimp preparations; main dishes begin at $9.95 for chicken with most of the steak and prime rib entrees topping the menu at $16.95; desserts run between $2 and $3.

Under the able stewardship of Bill and Lois Moore, excellent food in copious portions is served by a friendly and competent staff that really operates as a team. The dining rooms retain a colonial elegance, giving the whole a celebratory air, even if no special occasion prompts your visit. Let the changing foliage be your excuse or just go for no special reason at all.
