Connecticut forecast
Central, east interior, southwest interior: Saturday, sunny but cool, high in the middle 50s, variable wind less than 10 mph. Saturday night, clear and not as cold, low in the 30s. Sunday, sunny in the morning, clouds increasing during the afternoon, high 55 to 60.
Coastal: Saturday, sunny but cool, high 55 to 60, variable wind less than 10 mph becoming southwest 5 to 15 mph in the afternoon. Saturday night, a few clouds and not as chilly, low 40 to 45. Sunday, morning sunshine giving way to afternoon clouds, high 55 to 60.
Northwest hills: Saturday, sunny but cool, high in the middle 50s, variable wind less than 10 mph. Saturday night, clear and not as cold, low in the 30s. Sunday, morning sunshine giving way to some afternoon clouds, high in the middle 50s.

Across the nation
Showers were scattered across the Midwest to the southern Atlantic coast Friday, with some flooding reported in Arkansas and threatened in rain-soaked Louisiana and Alabama.
Areas of fog and drizzle stretched from the southern Great Lakes across much of the Mississippi Valley to the central Plains, and showers were scattered from the east central Plains across the Mississippi and Tennessee valleys to the southeastern coast.
A flash flood watch remained in effect late Friday for southwestern Alabama and a flood warning was posted for low-lying areas near Morgan City, La., as rain was expected to continue, the National Weather Service said.
Heavy rains have soaked parts of northern Louisiana, southern Arkansas and northeastern Texas since Thursday morning. In Arkansas, lowland river flooding continued along the Arkansas River near Van Buren.
In the six hours ending at 2 p.m. EDT, 3 1/2 inches of rain fell at Pensacola, Fla., and Greenwood, Miss., and Memphis, Tenn., both reported 1 inch. Temperatures at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 33 degrees at Loring Air Force Base in Limestone, Maine, to 88 degrees at Homestead Air Force Base in Florida and Palm Springs, Calif. The overnight low was 14 degrees at Gunnison, Colo.

NATIONAL FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts rain in Washington and parts of Oregon and northern California and in a wide band stretching from Missouri to the East Coast today. Showers are expected in Kansas, Oklahoma and most of the southeastern states.
Saturday's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms from Alabama across Georgia to the Carolinas, with scattered thunderstorms over the northern Florida Air Force Base in Limestone, Maine, to 88 degrees at Homestead Air Force Base in Florida and Palm Springs, Calif. The overnight low was 14 degrees at Gunnison, Colo.
Highs were forecast in the 50s and 60s for much of the nation, but in the 40s over northern Maine and New Hampshire. Highs were expected in the 50s and 60s over much of California and from the southern Atlantic coast across Florida to south Texas, but in the upper 40s to low 50s in the desert southwest.

Suit for show

A flight suit worn by Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, during his April 1985 mission on the space shuttle Discovery is being sought by Gov. Norm Bangert for a new space exhibit at the Utah State Capitol.
Bangert wrote to the Smithsonian Institution this week asking for a suit worn by Garn for the Capitol's exhibit, said Francis Giani, the governor's press secretary.
In addition to the Garn suit, the display will include memorabilia from two other astronauts, Utah's Don Lind and Mary Cleave, a New York native who attended Utah State University in Logan, Giani said Thursday.
The Garn suit actually is an "in-flight coverall garment," said Derek Elliot, assistant curator of the space science and exploration department at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum.
One Garn suit already is on display at the Smithsonian. Elliot said another of three or four suits worn on the Discovery by Garn would be sent to Utah, if the loan is approved.

PRINCE ANDREW heads for long career

Royal transfer

Prince Andrew, the duke of York, has transferred from the Royal Navy's special list onto the general list, which could mean the 26-year-old helicopter pilot is intending to pursue a long career.
A spokesman for Buckingham Palace said Thursday that Andrew, who applied for the transfer earlier this month, would now be able to stay in the Royal Navy longer and would be eligible for more promotion than if he had remained on the special list.
However, the spokesman, who by custom was not identified, said the transfer did not mean the duke's resignation, was necessarily signing up for a lifelong naval career.
The second son of Queen Elizabeth II joined the navy on a medium-term commission in 1979. He flew an anti-submarine Lynx helicopter during the Falklands war with Argentina in 1982.
He is now on an advanced helicopter instructor's course at the Royal Naval air station at Yeovilton in southwestern England.
Wildlife tours
Prince Phillip arrived in China's Shenzhen Special Economic Zone on Friday and visited a water plants exhibition and nature reserve there, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

Winner Watergate stranded

COOKEVILLE, Tenn. — A cockroach dubbed Watergate won a Florida bug race, but his sponsors at a university here said the small, brown insect would not be coming home for accolades.
Watergate scrambled to victory Wednesday against seven other cockroaches in the out-of-state division of the Great American Bug Race, sponsored by Palm Beach Atlantic College.
The staff of Tennessee Technological University's student newspaper, who scooped their winner up from a dormitory hallway, are to receive $25 for the win. But Watergate's future is uncertain.
The students raised the $3 entry fee and spent an additional $15 to ship their contender to the West Palm Beach, Fla., school in a film canister with air holes.
Now they don't want to spend the money to bring Watergate home.
"We were told he would not be fed to the frogs like the losers," said Holly Hewitt, 21, a senior at Tennessee Tech and managing editor of the student newspaper.
"I think it would be nice if he could live down there with all the big Florida cockroaches," Hewitt said.

Clearing a Ser(ou)s error

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — The editor of the Daily News, said Friday that after 57 years it was the clearest of records about the paper's initial reporting on the 1929 World Series.
"Assuming that confession is good for the soul or at least good for the readers, we admit that we did have the Chicago Cubs win that fifth game of the 1929 World Series, whereas the Athletics won it," Richard C. Garvey, said in his column.
The paper, trying to get a jump on its competition, printed 10,000 copies saying the Cubs defeated the Athletics, 2-0.
But the A's scored three runs in the bottom of the ninth inning and won 3-2. The paper junked the 10,000 copies with the wrong score.

Mystique keeps beer selling

CHICAGO — Corona Extra, a Mexican beer drunk like tequila with a wedge of lime, is tapping off a strong share of the American imports market, and no one is quite sure why.
Although Corona Extra is sold in just 26 states, it was the fifth-most-popular imported beer in 1985.
"It's really remarkable. We're the new kid on the block and we're beating the hell out of everybody," says Mike Mazzoni, executive vice president and general manager of Barton Beers Ltd., the Chicago-based importer.

One word may hinder merger

Proponents of merging the Eighth District and the town had succeeded in beginning the consolidation process, and a meeting of both legislative bodies was convened on March 20, 1978. Eighth District electors turned out in force, and voted not to appoint members to a consolidation commission.
"Shall" is generally mandatory," Goodrich said. The only instance in which "shall" was not judged to mean "must," he said, involved a New Haven case in which the Connecticut Supreme Court ruled that a law stipulating that the city "shall" adopt a budget by a certain time was not legally binding.
Goodrich said there has never been a case in which the courts have been asked to define the word "shall" as it appears in the Home Rule Act. Any dispute over the word would likely have to be settled by the state Supreme Court, he said.
In 1978, the issue came close to being resolved.

Hayride a victim of crisis

Insurance lack kills yearly event

By George Lavin
Herald Reporter
ANDOVER — There will be no treat this Halloween for some 1,000 area children who had planned to spend the holiday enjoying a hayride.
For the first time in eight years, the Halloween hayride scheduled for Oct. 31 at the Post Family Farm on Route 1 will not be held. Insurance problems have forced cancellation of the affair and have put its future in doubt, along with that of others planned for Christmas and Easter, organizers said.
"I can't envision when we'll be able to do it again," said Joel Rosenberg, executive director of Andover, Hebron, Marlborough Youth Services Inc., which would have sponsored the event. "This is a real rotten deal."
Rosenberg said the Post family had put a lot of work into preparing for the hayride — including using bulldozers to clear new trails and getting the hay wagons ready. Then the Post family was told by their insurance company a week and a half ago that the liability for someone getting hurt was too great.
Rosenberg said AHM has enough insurance to cover the event, but its policy cannot be used because the event would not be held at its Hebron offices. Other activities planned at the farm — including an Easter Egg hunt and a visit from Santa Claus — will also probably have to be canceled, he said.
"We're OK, but basically what this means is anytime we want to do an activity outside of our building, basically we can't do it," he said. "We're charged with the mission of promoting positive services for kids, then we are told that we cannot hold such events."
After receiving word from the insurance company, the Posts and AHM frantically tried to obtain some form of coverage from other companies, but could not, Rosenberg said.
"It's just unfortunate it happened so soon (to Halloween)," he said.
John Post, a retired dairy farmer who owns the 250-acre farm, said he was extremely disappointed that the event had to be canceled.
"It's very upsetting because I sank eight years of work into it," he said. "We're getting set for a big turnout."
Post said that last year, about 600 children of all ages took part in the rides, and he expected about 1,000 to come this year. The hayrides would each have covered a one-mile trail, along which volunteers in costumes would have performed different skills. Refreshments would have been offered after the ride.
Post started the hayrides to give children a safe way of enjoying the holidays instead of walking along dark and potentially dangerous streets trick-or-treating. "We're trying to do something for the kids," he said.
Post said he hopes he can secure insurance for the Christmas and Easter events, and possibly for a hayride next Halloween.

Town unveils bond plan for mall-area work

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter
The town administration Friday unveiled an agreement with the developers of the planned Mall at Buckland Hills under which it would issue tax-increment bonds to finance public improvements near the mall site.
Under the terms of the agreement reached with the Homart Development Corp. of Chicago, a partner in the development of the proposed 785,000-square-foot mall, the town would issue up to $13 million in bonds to help pay for public improvements around the site.
Planned improvements include 30 road networks, the State Traffic Commission requires when a permit is granted for the site north of Interstate 84 between Buckland and Denning streets.
The town would also use bond money to pay for public utilities and other road improvements it has deemed necessary for future economic expansion in the area.
"It's AN EXCELLENT economic investment for the town," Town Manager Robert B. Weiss said Friday at the new conference in Lincoln Center. Also attending were Assistant Town Manager Steven R. Werber, Planning Director Mark Pellegrini, Budget Analyst Robert Huestis and Finance Director Boyce Spinelli.
The tax-increment financing agreement, which sets the terms under which the town will pay for the public improvements, will be discussed at a special meeting of the Economic Development Commission Tuesday. If it is approved by the EDC, the agreement will go before the Board of Directors, which has scheduled a meeting for Nov. 5.
Along with consideration of the tax-increment financing agreement, the EDC is expected to schedule a public hearing on final plans for the area, which include the proposals for the giant mall and a number of road and utility improvements around the site. Depending on what reaction town officials get, the directors may approve those plans as soon as December.
The bonding agreement was reached after months of discussion between town officials and the developers.

Manchester jeweler Leonard W. Wost, whose shop is located on Spruce Street, demonstrates what Connecticut and much of the rest of the nation should do Sunday at 2 a.m., when standard time returns. Wost is turning the clocks back an hour, from 12 to 11.
The mall will eventually increase the town's tax base by a substantial amount, town officials said.
There are also provisions in the contract, which has not yet been signed, that would protect the town against losing money if Homart pulls out of the deal or if the mall is a failure.
"There is no financial exposure on the part of the town," Weiss said.
It is estimated that within 10 years, the town will have collected enough money to clear the debt, town officials have said.
The tax-increment financing agreement has allowed in the state statutes since 1974, Weiss said, but Manchester is the first town to use the provisions.
Homart, an arm of Sears, Roebuck and Co., has said it needs help from the town because of the unusually high cost of developing the hill site in northwest Manchester. It will cost about $57 million to build the Mall at Buckland Hills, the developers have said.

The 20,000-square-foot facility is double the size of the original club and includes racquetball courts, an indoor running track, swimming pool, sauna, steam room and whirlpool, as well as exercise equipment.
John Cipolla, president of the fitness center, said in a prepared statement that the renovations cost about $2 million.

Rioux says charges 'crazy'

Democrat denies using pressure in race
By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter
Al Rioux, the Democratic candidate for sheriff in Hartford County, Friday stonily denied accusations by his opponent that he has twisted arms and pressured deputy sheriffs into contributing to his campaign.
On Thursday, Republican candidate Stephen Polis called Rioux a "political animal" and said he had forced many deputy sheriffs to make contributions of up to $500 each during a fund-raising event earlier this year.
"These are absolute lies," Rioux said. "That's crazy. That never happened."
Two deputy sheriffs who made contributions of $500 to Rioux said Friday that they had not been forced to buy tickets to the fund-raising event in question.
Rioux said that the fund-raiser brought in close to $25,000, although he did not have an exact figure. But many deputy sheriffs declined to contribute, he said.
Polis has since been reinstated, but has said he does not want to resume work for the office.
The high sheriff is one of the few remnants of county government in Connecticut. The responsibilities of the sheriff and his deputies include serving legal papers, protecting the courts and transporting prisoners. They are paid on a per-diem or commission basis.
Rioux has said that his main objective is to bring faith and confidence back to the office, which has been plagued by a poor reputation. He has called for higher pay for special deputies, who are paid $60 a day when they work, and for more training. Deputies currently receive very little training, if any, Rioux has said.
Besides training programs, Rioux has said he would establish a code of official conduct, a manual, dress code, internal audits and other programs.
Polis has also said a training program is needed. He has charged that the Democrats have tarnished the image of the sheriff's office.

Bomb threat stalls Red Cross vote

GENEVA — A bomb scare today forced more than 1,000 delegates to leave the site of an International Red Cross convention as they grappled with a controversial proposal to exclude South Africa from the meeting. Police spokesman Marcel Vodroz initially reported the building was evacuated because an anonymous telephone caller claimed a bomb was planted in the convention center. Later, he said it was a false alarm. A convention center official said the evacuation was triggered by a multilingual taped message broadcast throughout the convention building that instructed delegates to leave. At the time of the evacuation, the session was adjourned, but delegates were in the convention building preparing to meet again. The evacuation further delayed a crucial conference vote on whether South Africa should be expelled from the meeting because of its policy of apartheid, or racial segregation.

Marine plane crashes during search

NAPLES, Italy — A U.S. Marines plane, with a crew of two aboard, crashed in the Mediterranean Sea on Friday while searching for a missing Navy aircraft, a Navy spokesman said. Lt. David Morris, a spokesman for the U.S. 6th Fleet based in Naples, said crew members of a Greek ship saw the Marine Corps A-6 hit the sea southeast of the island of Crete at about 11 a.m. The plane had taken off from the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy as part of a sea and air search for a plane from the same carrier, a S-3 Viking submarine hunter, which has been missing since Tuesday. The Viking carried a crew of four. Morris said weather conditions were normal where the A-6 crashed. A sea and air search was launched for the pilot and flight officer, the only crewmen aboard the Marine Corps craft, Morris said. The names of the crew were not made public, but Morris said the plane was part of the Marine Attack Squadron 533.

Ex-postal official gets 4 years

WASHINGTON — Peter Voss, the former vice chairman of the U.S. Postal Service board of governors, was sentenced Friday to four years in prison for embezzlement and receiving payoffs in connection with a postal contract. U.S. District Judge George H. Rye sentenced Voss, who was co-chairman of President Reagan's Ohio campaign in 1980, to two years' imprisonment on each of two counts of accepting an illegal gratuity in connection with a $250 million mail-sorting equipment contract. Voss also received six months on each count of embezzling money from the Postal Service by submitting vouchers for first-class airline tickets he did not use. The sentence for embezzlement is to run concurrently with the four-year term. Voss was fined $11,000 — $5,000 on each charge involving the gratuities and $1,000 for the embezzlement.

U.S. radiation experiments disclosed

WASHINGTON — Federal agencies conducted a 30-year series of radiation exposure experiments on human subjects, including injecting them with plutonium, radium and uranium, a House subcommittee said Friday. The experiments took place all over the country starting in the mid-1940s and did not end until the 1970s, according to the report by the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on energy conservation and power. The report, "American Nuclear Guinea Pigs: Three Decades of Radiation Experiments on U.S. Citizens," is based on a review of thousands of pages of Department of Energy documents obtained by the subcommittee in the past three years. Experiments conducted by DOE's precursors exposed hundreds of people to radiation, it concludes. The experiments attempted to measure the biological effects of radioactive material, the doses from injected, ingested or inhaled radioactive substances, and the time it took radioactive substances to pass through the human body, the report said.

Legislator in trouble over drug claim

COLUMBIA, S.C. — State Rep. Philip Bradley said he wanted to point out the need for drug testing when he called a radio talk show last month to say he had seen colleagues use cocaine in the South Carolina House of Representatives. But the Republican's action stirred public emotion, brought bitter reactions from colleagues who questioned his motives and resulted in his indictment this week for obstruction of justice for refusing to name the alleged offenders. Bradley, the owner of a real estate company in Greenville, has been suspended from the House and is up against an uncompromising prosecutor who vowed to make Bradley's "name, names or eat crow." If Bradley offers the names of legislators, he could ruin their political careers, and the 48-year-old lawmaker said there is no point in naming them because they can be convicted on his word alone.

Reagan defends hostage efforts

CINCINNATI (AP) — President Reagan said Friday that he won't pressure the Kuwaiti government to exchange 17 terrorist prisoners for Americans held captive in Lebanon because that "would only encourage other terrorists elsewhere in the world to take American hostages whenever they believe that American pressure on a foreign government would be useful." Defending his administration's policy of refusing to detail what it has done to win the release of the American hostages, Reagan told the Associated Press Managing Editors in a letter that publicity "tends both to increase the incentives for the captors to retain the hostages and to discourage third parties who might be helpful in resolving the situation but who wish to remain shielded from public recognition." APME President James F. Daubel, who had invited Reagan's response to charges by hostage families that the administration isn't doing enough, questioned the president's commitment to freeing the Americans and appealed to Reagan "to redouble the efforts and increase the intensity... to bring this matter to a conclusion." Among those held captive in Lebanon is The AP's chief Middle East correspondent, Terry Anderson, whose sister challenged the editors on Tuesday to join the struggle for release of the hostages. Reagan in his most detailed explanation to date of his position regarding the hostages, told Daubel that he was sorry he was unable to address the editors but wanted to respond before their annual conference concluded Friday afternoon. "I can assure you that numerous efforts have been undertaken to secure the release of the hostages, although in general we have said little publicly about these efforts," Reagan said. Reagan reiterated his administration's willingness to talk to the hostages' captors, "either through direct talks with the kidnappers or their representatives" or through third parties; but insisted "we cannot and will not concede" to their extortion demands. "Despite our intensive efforts to establish a dialogue, the kidnappers thus far have shown little inclination to talk, instead insisting that we capitulate to their extortion demands," the president's letter said. "We maintain that there is an important distinction between making concessions to terrorists' demands and conducting a dialogue with those who hold our citizens. We cannot and will not concede to their extortion." "Up to the present time, the kidnappers of William Buckley, Terry Anderson, David Jacobson and Thomas Sutherland have made one and only one consistent demand: the release of the 17 convicted prisoners who have been tried and convicted in Kuwaiti courts for the deadly bombings of the U.S. and French embassies and four Kuwaiti facilities on Dec. 12, 1983," Reagan said. "Six people died, and 88 were wounded in these attacks, which were designed to inflict massive casualties." "The kidnappers in Lebanon expect the United States government to pressure the government of Kuwait to free these murder-

Book ruling called 'recipe for disaster'

By Kristi Umbrett The Associated Press

GREENEVILLE, Tenn. — A federal judge ruled Friday that a county school board violated the constitutional rights of seven families who found such books as "The Wizard of Oz" and "The Diary of Anne Frank" offensive to their strict Christian beliefs. U.S. District Judge Thomas G. Hull, in a 27-page opinion, also said the Hawkins County school board must accommodate the families' rights to free, public education without violating their First Amendment rights to religious freedom. He did not recommend a specific alternative, but said home schooling for reading class would be one. Hull said he would convene a jury to decide damages in the case and set a tentative trial date for Dec. 15. "This is a wonderful victory. We're very pleased," said attorney Michael Farris, who represented the parents in their battle for an alternative to using the Holt, Rinehart, Winston series of reading books. But Anthony Podesta, president of People for the American Way, which paid the fees for Timothy Dyk, the school system's attorney, called the ruling a "recipe for disaster for public education that will disrupt education for all children." "It will invite every sect in the country to pick and choose which parts of the public school curriculum it will accept," said Podesta, whose group was organized by television producer Norman Lear. The school board, backed by attorneys from the state of Tennessee, argued during the trial that the

'Cinderella' made list

GREENEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Here is a sampling of stories which seven fundamentalist Christian families objected to in the Holt, Rinehart, Winston series of reading books. There were more than 400 specific objections in all. "Cinderella" made list. "Cinderella" by Hans Christian Andersen because it depicted lying and not growing old as make-believe rather than magic. "Macbeth," by William Shakespeare, because of its mention of witchcraft and magic. "The Wizard of Oz," by L. Frank Baum, because it portrayed a witch as good and because it depicted traits such as courage, intelligence and compassion as personally developed rather than God-given. "The Diary of Anne Frank," because it suggested all religions are equal in a passage by Anne. "I don't mean you have to be Orthodox... I just mean some religion..." "It doesn't matter what just to believe in something." "The Revolt of Mother," by Mary Wilkins Freeman, a seventh-grade short story about a woman challenging her husband's authority because it attacks the "biblical family." "A fairy-tale by Danish writer Hans Christian Andersen because it described a child's trip to a fortune teller, which introduced children to the supernatural." "Stories about dinosaurs if the creatures were said to be older than the Biblical account of the beginning of the world." "Stories about other religions, including worship by American Indians and followers of Islam." "A story that depicted a child's imagination as a "bird's eye" inside their head because such representations were considered occult and put too much emphasis on a person's imagination. He said the fact that Tennessee laws mandate education while allowing children to be taught at home or in private schools shows that the state has acknowledged alternatives to traditional public education in classrooms. "The plaintiffs are therefore entitled to opt out of the Hawkins County public school reading program while still enjoying the benefits of the rest of the curriculum (with appropriate provisions for home instruction according to state law)," Hull said.

changes demanded by the parents would defeat public education's purpose of exposing students to varying viewpoints. Dyk said during a news conference in Washington that the eighth appeal Hull's ruling to the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, possibly as early as late Friday. "This is not the end of the road," he said. "We intend to take this case as far as is necessary to get this decision reversed." The case was referred to a modern version of the 1925 Scopes "monkey" trial in which science teacher John Scopes was prosecuted by the state for teaching Darwin's theory of evolution in Dayton, Tenn. — 150 miles down the Tennessee River from Dayton. In Dayton, William Jennings Bryan and Clarence Darrow argued bitterly over whether stu-

Soviets call for end to expulsion war

MOSCOW (AP) — The news agency Tass claimed Friday the Kremlin dealt a "sledgehammer" blow to the U.S. Embassy by withdrawing its Soviet staff. Tass called on Washington to turn its attention from diplomatic expulsions to limiting the arms race. Washington has ordered 80 Soviet diplomats to leave the United States, beginning with 25 at the Soviet U.N. mission who the Reagan administration charged were spies. In retaliation, the Kremlin ordered to U.S. diplomats out of the Soviet Union and limited the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and consulate in Leningrad to a total of 261 American staffers. On Wednesday night, the Kremlin withdrew all Soviet employees — about 250 — from the two U.S. missions. In its dispatch, Tass said the U.S. administration should turn from the expulsions to "much more essential questions, the questions of limiting the arms race." "We will hope that the event with the sledgehammer, on which they so incautiously laid their hands in Washington, will remain nothing more than a passing curiosity in the history of diplomacy," said Tass. "Even in Washington, they cannot call into question the fairness of the Soviet measures," said Tass. U.S. diplomats in Moscow on Friday spent their second full day without meals, drivers, cleaners and cooks. Notices in the embassy announced departure times for a shuttle bus to the hard-currency grocery store where diplomats' meals and drivers often shopped but where the diplomats themselves now go to buy goods. The embassy snack bar, normally a luncheon gathering spot for American diplomats, journalists and businessmen, remained closed to non-embassy people.

Two inmates die in brawl

FLORENCE, Ariz. (AP) — A racial brawl broke out today among some 200 medium-security inmates at the Arizona State Prison, and two inmates were stabbed to death, a corrections official said. As many as five inmates were injured in the fighting, which broke out in a dormitory and spread outside, said Tom Aughton, legislative liaison for the Department of Corrections. He said prison officials believe the brawl was racially motivated. One of the dead prisoners was black and two prisoners confirmed, were white, said Aughton. Meanwhile, a Pinal General Hospital nurse reported treating two black inmates. The disturbance began about 7:45 a.m. in the South Unit. An hour later, the majority of the 588 inmates in the unit were seated in the prison yard, surrounded by guards on horseback, said Aughton. Aughton said prison guards went through the dormitories and other buildings, trying to get any remaining inmates into the main yard. He said some inmates were armed with pipes and large pieces of wood taken from shops. "The situation at the moment is under control as far as the South Unit yard is concerned, although tensions remain high," said Aughton.

Ignorance no help in AIDS fight

Despite overwhelming evidence that AIDS cannot be transmitted through casual contact, fear of the deadly disease has continued to fuel the ostracism and discrimination faced by its victims.

In California this fall, voters will be asked to consider a measure that would provide for the quarantine of AIDS victims. At schools throughout the country where young AIDS victims have been allowed to attend classes, worried parents have kept their children home and mounted protests.

Against this backdrop of paranoia, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop is to be commended for offering a forthright and sensible plan to combat the disease.

Koop this week called on Americans to give up "free-wheeling casual sex" and urged early education for children, possibly beginning with third-graders. Because about 1.5 million people are infected with the AIDS virus and are capable of spreading the disease, Koop said, education and "safe sex" are the key weapons. There is no known cure for AIDS, or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, which destroys the body's immune system.

"The silence must end," he said. "There is no doubt that we need sex education in schools and that it (must) include information on heterosexual and homosexual relationships."

Koop also lashed out at discrimination against AIDS victims or members of groups at high risk of contracting it.

His recommendations are sure to meet with heavy criticism, particularly from parents who are already uncomfortable with the idea of schools teaching their children about sex.

But the need for early education cannot be disputed, and the schools are the place for it to begin. To date, 26,566 Americans have been diagnosed as having AIDS and 14,977 have died.

Although still largely confined to homosexuals, intravenous drug abusers and hemophiliacs, AIDS is slowly spreading to the general population through heterosexual relationships.

That means anyone who plans on having any type of sexual relationship must be equipped with information on AIDS.

Ignorance and misinformation are no substitutes for prevention and caution. Besides helping to stop the spread of AIDS, early education might also help end the fear that threatens to deny a group of unfortunate Americans their rights.

Welcome to the world of deniability

WASHINGTON — According to the White House, in 1985, during a visit through El Salvador, Salvadoran officials asked Vice President Bush to recommend a counterintelligence expert. Bush turned to Donald Gregg, his national security adviser and a retired CIA official.

Gregg suggested Max Gomez, a Cuban-American veteran of the Bay of Pigs who had worked for the CIA in Vietnam. Gen. Juan Bunillo, head of the Salvadoran air force, then hired Gomez as a consultant.

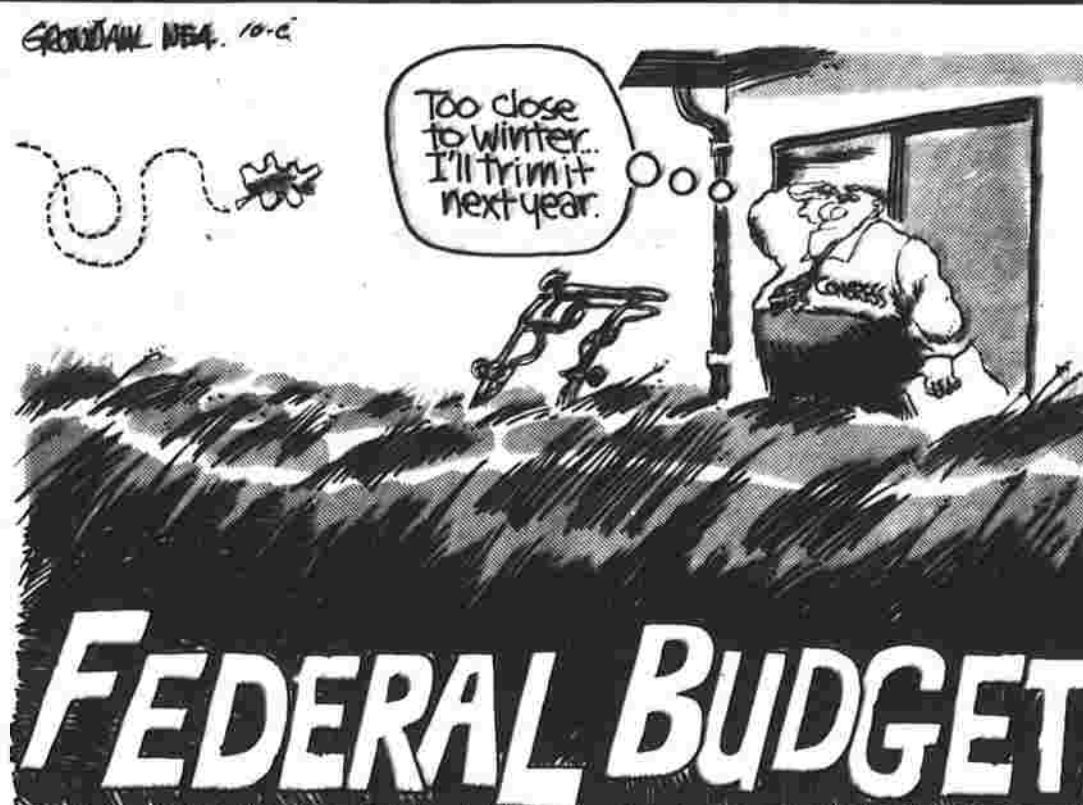

If, as it is now alleged, Gomez was behind contra supply flights, it's news to the White House. Yes, Bush says he met Gomez three times, but there were only quick hellos and a few questions about El Salvador.

Welcome to the wonderful world of deniability. There is ANOTHER "unofficial" version circulating that is hotly denied by official spokesmen. It is the story of how the Reagan administration organized a private war in Nicaragua.

It is not technically violating U.S. law, this would certainly state the law to its limit. According to this second version, two years ago, after Congress banned military assistance to the company, Corporate Air Service Inc. Cooper told the aircraft broker from whom he bought the plane that he owned this company. (Cooper had earlier been broke and seeking work. He told family members he was going to work for Gomez.)

The plane was a U.S. Air Force cargo plane that had suddenly been declared surplus. It quickly passed through the broker's hands into Cooper's possession at bargain-basement prices. The same broker had previously sold aircraft to former general Secord and former NSC staffer Liliac. A contract that ended up in the "contra air force," which operates out of the Salvadoran air base at Ilopango, where Gomez is assigned under his counter-terrorist "contract."

The plane's co-pilot, Wallace Sawyer Jr., a 1968 graduate of the Air Force Academy, had resigned

Eighth exists for selfish fun

To the Editor:

To believe that the Town of Manchester is better served by the Eighth District is ridiculous. Should the South End and the West Side also form separate districts? A giant step backwards! Should the Town of Manchester revert to a total volunteer fire district? Not practical at all, another step backwards.

The reason the Eighth District exists is for the selfish benefit of a small, specific group for the glamour and fun of riding fire trucks and the political fun of opposing the perceived establishment.

The principles and efficiencies of a central town government are time-proven. A town works best when all its citizens participate and care about the total town.

Yes vote needed for town schools

To the Editor:

Our children need your help. For more than 25 years many of the school buildings which house our public school system have served Manchester well. However, like any public building after many years of wear and tear, they come a time when upgrading and repair is essential. Waddell, Verplanck, Bowers, and Nathan Hale are at that point now. These schools are beyond the point of repainting or minor repairs, they need major renovations.

One of the most important aspects of this vital issue is the need to bring these same schools up to the latest building codes, a move which will help insure our children's safety and well-being.

I believe the proposed renovations are necessary to continue offering our young people every educational benefit we have at our disposal.

On Nov. 4, please vote yes on Question 2. This investment today will ensure the continuation of a proud Manchester tradition, quality education.

The possible is now impossible?

To the Editor:

Put fairness back in the charter. This is the better cry of Ted Cummings and Stephen Penny.

Let's take the word "fairness." The Buckland firehouse was put up in spite of a court order. The Eighth District was not allowed to vote on it. We were denied that right. We represent about a third of the town voters.

However, on the consolidation issue, the entire town can vote on it. The rest of the town has about two-thirds of the voters. Fair? The Eighth District would suffer from it. They face a tax increase of 82 percent. This is based on a house assessed at $32,000. At present, the tax for both fire and sewer is $170. If the town takes over, the tax will be $210.

The town will gain an estimated $1.24 million in additional taxes. Your homes are being reassessed. You know what that means. More taxes, right?

In view of all this, how come we face another tax increase next year. Mr. Cummings and Mr. Penny said that the Eighth District was being funded by the town, to the tune of $175,000 to $200,000. No record can be found to verify this. It was blamed on a computer error. How come Mr. Cummings and Mr. Penny didn't check their facts before they were quoted? They certainly had access to the files. How many other misquotations have they made?

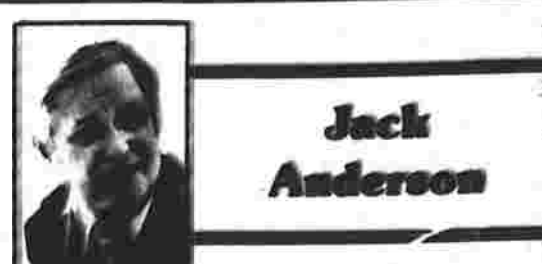

The Committee for Charter Revision is in favor of keeping the volunteer fire department. They have been stepped on too many times by the town's directors. They would be very foolish to be stepped on again. Mr. Penny has said the Eighth does not provide as good fire protection as a paid department. No one in the Eighth would agree. The town and Eighth have been together for 86 years. It has been said two forms of government can exist in one town. Why has the possible suddenly become impossible?

Finally, Mr. Cummings has fought this thing tooth and nail. He has spent a good amount of money, and a lot of his time. Being as he has no one doing nothing for nothing, what does he stand to gain for his efforts?

How will Mr. Penny benefit from it? This has been a political issue from the start. The town as a whole will not benefit from it. Mr. Cummings and Mr. Penny and the town will be the only winners.

Stand up and be counted. Vote "no." Don't let them get away with this sham.

Feds' aggies lost the bucks for the books

WASHINGTON — American agriculture is going through a terrible time, as drought, floods and foreclosure threaten hundreds of farm families. And in Washington, the Agriculture Department is so short of money it had to order management personnel to "volunteer" for menial manual labor like running elevators and pushing freight dollies.

Some of the paper shufflers were not happy over their callous-threatening temporary duty as stock boys. But their boss explained it was necessary because there was no money left to have hired help do the job. Here's the heart-wrenching story.

The department hired a private contractor to consolidate its reference library branch in downtown Washington with the main library in nearby Bethesda, Md. But the $70,000 budgeted for the move wasn't enough to cover packing the books and journals in Washington and putting them on the shelves in Bethesda.

IN A MEMO OBTAINED by our associate Corky Johnson, the chief of the public services division, Keith Russell, explained the situation. "Originally, we had planned for the entire project to be done by contractors. The cost, however, has made that impossible, and National Agricultural Library staff had to do the job."

When the move began in June, library employees were initially scheduled for eight hours of book packing. But in September they were asked to "volunteer" additional time.

"Persons who volunteered to help in June/July, but could not be scheduled for various reasons would be contacted first," another Russell memo said. "But this only amounts to about 10 percent of the hours needed. Consequently, we ask your assistance in identifying staff who are willing to help and can be spared for four hours to help."

THE AMOUNT OF FINGER-POINTING and buck-passing this led to can be imagined, especially since the tasks included "operating the freight elevator" and "pushing book trucks." One disgruntled employee complained that using management-level employees for such common chores was undignified and a "waste of professional staff." But the 200,000 volumes had to be moved.

Adding to the discontent was the revelation that no one seemed to know where the money had disappeared. Library acquisitions chief Victoria A. Reich assigned an employee to research the problem. Her assignment is to determine why we are out of money," Reich explained in a memo.

Uster nightmares Religious bigotry and three centuries of mutual hostility make an early, peaceful solution to the civil strife in Northern Ireland unlikely. If not impossible. This is the grim conclusion that our associate Jon Lee Anderson has reached after an intensive investigation. In which he interviewed dozens of Catholics and Protestants, militants and innocent civilians.

Most Americans have no idea of the degree to which Uster has become an armed camp. Like Berlin, it is separated by physical barriers: brick or metal walls topped with barbed wire and known, with conspicuous irony, as "peace lines."

ON COOPER'S BODY was found a Southern Air Transport identification card and one of Robert Gomez's business cards. Southern said it serviced the aircraft when it was in Miami, on a contract basis, and had given Cooper the I.D. so he could have access to the plane while it was being serviced.

The three crew member — now a Sandinista prisoner — was Eugene Hasenus, the loadmaster or "cargo kicker." Hasenus had done similar work for Air America in Vietnam and had flown with Cooper. Reportedly, it was Cooper who brought Hasenus into the operation.

Hasenus said the operation was headed by Gomez, who told him and Cooper that he (Gomez) had been brought into the operation by Sanchez and Gregg. Further, according to Hasenus, Gomez said he was working for the CIA and was in almost daily contact with the vice president's office.

THE PLANE, LOADED WITH Eastern European small arms and ammunition, started in Miami. Loaded at Southern Air Transport, the plane flew to a U.S.-built contra air strip in Honduras. It picked up a fourth man — still unidentified, who also died and is believed to have been a contra guide — and then continued on to Ilopango, where it refueled.

Despite the these official and semi-official contacts with Washington, all concerned say the U.S. government had no knowledge of the operation. A contra spokesman says his organization bought the weapons with private funds and had privately contracted with Cooper's Panamanian company. Welcome to the wonderful world of deniability.

Thanks, South, for the support

To the Editor:

I'd like to thank the South End people who wrote in they plan to vote "no" on consolidation. There is more involved than sewers and money.

Several years ago, I purchased a private medic-alert and it is hooked up to the Eighth District volunteers. I have systemic lupus, and some cycles of the disease make my legs very weak and I fall down and cannot get up. I just have to reach in my pocket and press the button, and within minutes a few of the volunteers are here to pick me up.

The hospital has started an alert system that I believe you must want and which has a 36-person waiting line. It is tough enough on a lupus family and others that need the medic alert without being deprived of this support.

This is one of the things that nobody talks about. The talk is about money. If the town hadn't been giving it away as freebies for developers, things wouldn't be so bad for all of us in the tax department. It's good to know some South End people can see the unfairness of this vote, and read between the lines of Seith and Penny. Thanks again.

Nine districts made our town

To the Editor:

Our City of Village Charm is suffering today, primarily because of an "error of judgment." As is often true, this could have been corrected, but that would have called for integrity and courage, both of which were sadly lacking.

Let me briefly review for you who we are historically and the divisions or districts that have made Manchester one town.

The Hartford County map of 1868 shows our one town to be made up of nine districts. Each has its own culture, personality and history, and one, the Eighth, has its own financial base created out of deprivation and need for its own fire department and sewer system, both created for the same essential reasons: the safety of its citizens.

District 1 — Union Village or the Oakland area, home of one of the earliest schools north of the Turnpike; home of the Oakland paper mills where some still stand and are in use; the main body of the Economy Electric Co. near the starting point for the yearly canoe races on the Hockanum River which also flows through Districts 2, 7 and 8.

District 2 — East District or the Manchester Green area, where a former knitting mill still stands and is in use. Here was the location for the first tavern, hotel and post office. This area goes to the Bolton line.

District 3 — The Lyddallville area, where the original Lyddall home still stands and is occupied, and where the former Lyddall & Foulds paper company (now Lyddall Inc.) functions successfully.

District 4 — or the South District, goes southerly from lower Main Street to the Glastonbury line.

District 5 — or the South West District, goes southwesterly to the Glastonbury line via Kenney Street.

District 6 — or the West District, known familiarly as the West Side, has the West Side "Rec," the Historical Society and Fire Museum, Cheney Hall, some former Cheney Mills and homes, and goes to the East Hartford line.

District 7 — or the North West District, the Buckland area, was formerly devoted exclusively to farming and tobacco, but currently is a beehive of activity as it is preparing for phenomenal commercial growth. The Hartford, Providence & Fishkill Railroad passed through here. The Hilliardville section has business and industry, and one of the original Hillardville makers (woolen) still stands and is in use. This section goes to the East Hartford line.

District 8 — The Depot Square area, and its former hub of activity included the Hartford, Providence & Fishkill Railroad and later the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, the railroad station and the northerly terminal for "Cheney's Goat," as this private railroad was called. This was Cheney Brothers' main contribution to the district and came into being as the need for employees. It was a step-child kind of relationship which contributed to the strong and independent spirit in the Eighth and why self-determination is so important to us. There were the usual assortment of stores; the post office; and Ape's Opera House, which still stands at the corner of Oakland Street andapel Place and houses the granary which now occupies all of apel Place. It was here, too, that the first piece of firefighting apparatus for the South End was housed. This had to be moved by the physical strength of the volunteer firemen when it was needed. Union Pond with its auxiliary water supply is also in the Eighth.

District 9 — Manchester Center is, as the name implies, the center of our town where you will find the Municipal Building and Lincoln Center, the seat of our government and its services, the main post office, churches, lodges, businesses; and south of the center, an area called Educational Square, the East Side Rec. churches, business, etc.

Each of these districts has its ancestral, religious, cultural, economic and philosophical backgrounds. The diversity is great but this is our heritage, our history, and the basis of our contribution to our preservation of our way of life. It is an excellent example of one of President Reagan's recent statements when he said of our country, "What holds us together...outweighs what holds us apart."

Our local Historical Society's notation in its display of the North End says, "The North End is in some ways a microcosm of America. We hope that this exhibition will enable you to explore and remember this fascinating time in our history." Please think twice about all of this and then vote "no" on Question 4.

Unite the town to end problems

To the Editor:

Hopefully when the sun sets on Nov. 4, 1986, the town of Manchester will be united under a single constitution and the petty squabbling and bickering between the town and the district will be a thing of the past. We will then face future problems one for all and all for one. No special privileges for any segment of town or group of people.

Years ago I fought for fluoridation for our town and after every conceivable group in this town were united in its favor we lost the referendum by 13 votes, due largely to the votes cast for the district. Fortunately, fluoridation was mandated on a statewide basis, and today the dental facility at the University of Connecticut Dental School tells me the practice of dentistry is changing, and cavities are no longer a significant part of the practice, largely due to the benefits of fluoridation.

When I was a child my father belonged to the Lincoln Hose Company of Perth Amboy, New Jersey, one of six volunteer fire departments in the town at that time. I was fortunate to have a father who was not only a volunteer but also a leader in his field.

Jim is the type of person who responds to the needs of people and our community. He is not the type of person who gets involved in something for his own good. I urge all voters in the 12th Assembly District to vote for Jim McCavanagh. He is truly a fine man and we are fortunate to have someone with his sincere interest in our community willing to serve us.

Tucci can offer change of pace

To the Editor:

A vote for John Tucci is a vote for your hometown. He cares about Manchester and the average citizen. John won't "play politics." He has definite ideas and is not afraid to act to get things done.

John has always fought long and hard to keep Manchester a good place to live and raise a family. He was a key figure in the HUD issue in the early '60s. He has consistently shown deep concern and regard for the educational process in our town.

John has proven himself to be a man of action — a doer! This town needs a change of pace. We need a political figure who will really represent the people. We don't need politicians who represent us in name only.

Large crowd of Republican, Democrat or undecided — to cast a vote for John Tucci. He'd be the best choice for our town.

35th fortunate Herbst running

To the Editor:

Because of her outstanding record as the mayor of Vernon Marie Herbst deserves consideration by the voters of the 35th Senatorial District to become our state senator.

Marie Herbst has proven repeatedly that she can get things done expeditiously and economically. As the chief executive officer of the larger town in the 35th District, Herbst has dealt with all types of problems and solutions.

Herbst's genuine concern for service to people and her willingness to "tell it like it is" and not back off from difficult problems will be assets in a General Assembly that suffered from a lack of leadership and direction during the last session.

As a resident of Vernon for 23 years, I am convinced of the outstanding leadership that Herbst will provide in the Senate. Her skills and knowledge will be required to the utmost. The residents of the 35th District are fortunate to have a candidate of her caliber.

Michael F. Tobin Vernon

Let me be the first to say that I am a fan of the firemen and firefighters of our town. I have seen their courage and bravery in the face of danger and adversity. Your Birthday
 Oct. 26, 1986

Promotion or advancement in your chosen field of endeavor is a strong possibility in the year ahead. However, you are going to have to outperform some stiff competition.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There might not be as much harmony in your household today as everyone would like. Unfortunately, you could be the prime contributor to this discord if you act before thinking. Major changes are ahead for Scorpio in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-0428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will not get over persons who are not in accord with your views by browbeating them today. In fact, it's the least desirable method you could use.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's best not to volunteer to try to straighten up the financial accounts for your club or group today if there are shortages. They may look to you to make them up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A common objective that you and your mate want to accomplish today won't be achieved if each insists it can only be done his or her way.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your degree of productivity today will depend on how well you plan. Don't expect to get a lot done if you aren't organized.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Things should run rather smoothly for you today where romance, friendships and socializing are concerned, but commercial involvements could be bumpy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Much of personal advantage can be gained today, but there is a chance that you'll take your opportunities for granted instead of trying to capitalize on them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't be angry with others today just because they won't do for you what you should be doing yourself. If it's not important to you, it won't be important to them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are negotiating a business matter today, don't tip your hand prematurely. Let the other party establish the terms, silence can achieve what talking can't.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Success comes by being considerate toward others today. If you put your interests last, those with whom you deal will mistreat you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Loved ones who go off on their way to do things for you today must be properly acknowledged. They'll not be as willing to help again if you're ungrateful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) At a convivial gathering today, don't corner a pal and pressure him or her for a special favor. You're more likely to get a "no" than a "yes."

When playing low is a no-no
 By James Jacoby

The tried and true slogans of bridge play are valuable, but you must also remember that they have their exceptions. "Second hand low" is a basic precept, since high cards are best used to capture other high cards, but today's deal, from a European championship of some years past, well demonstrates an appropriate time to ignore that rule of play.

Declarer won the ace of diamonds and played a low club. Defender West was quick to put up the king. Now what? South really had no easy way to take a ninth trick unless the defenders made some kind of outrageous mistake. Or maybe both the king and the queen of clubs would be in West's hand. That is what declarer needed, so he played low from dummy on West's club king. West now continued with a small club. Undaunted, declarer played dummy's 10, losing to the queen. Back came a diamond, and the contract was set two tricks. A sad result! No doubt. But at the other table the play, defense and result were the same, all of which shows the high standard of card play in Europe at that time.

Note that the contract would have been easily made if West casually played "second hand low."

"I found him in the Yellow Pages."

This couple met under some rather unusual circumstances. They found each other in the Yellow Pages, under "D" for "Dancing Lessons."

Back when dancing schools became a part of life in Connecticut, naturally they became a part of The Original Yellow Pages from Southern New England Telephone. In fact, for more than 100 years, whenever something new has appeared in the Connecticut community, it's appeared in The Original Yellow Pages.

You see, when you've been around as long as we have, people not only depend on you for just about every conceivable product and service. But sometimes even for husbands and wives.

Connecticut In Brief

Bomb victim's family sues TWA

The family of a 36-year-old Connecticut salesman killed when a terrorist bomb blew apart an airplane TWA jetliner over southern New York last April has sued the airline for $25 million in a New York court.

The suit, filed in State Supreme Court in Manhattan, charges that TWA caused the death of Alberto Ospina by "willful and reckless mismanagement of passenger and aircraft security" before and during Flight 388.

Ospina, a resident of Stratford, Conn., was one of four Americans killed when a bomb exploded aboard a TWA jetliner in flight last April 2. The blast also killed Demetra Stylian, 52, her daughter, Maria King, 29, and an 8-month-old granddaughter, Demetra King. All were from Annapolis, Md.

A little-known Palestinian group, the Executive Kassin Unit of the Arab Revolutionary Cells, said it planted the bomb to retaliate for a U.S. military confrontation with Libya in the Gulf of Sidra the previous week.

Housing construction up 14% in state

HARTFORD — Year-to-date figures show that housing construction in Connecticut has increased 14.3 percent over the same period in 1985, state Housing Commissioner Joseph E. Canale says.

In the first nine months of 1986, 21,274 new housing units were authorized compared with 18,631 in the same period last year, according to statistics released by the Department of Housing.

A preliminary analysis of reports filed by local building officials shows that permits for 2,534 new units were issued in September compared with 2,942 authorized in August, an increase of 8.2 percent, Canale said.

"Residential construction activity remains strong in Connecticut," he said.

New Haven County leads the state with 5,929 permits for new units in the first nine months of this year and Hartford County is second with 5,797 permits, according to state statistics.

Manfred jury breaks for weekend

HARTFORD — The jury in the murder trial of Dr. Russell F. Manfred, charged with beating his wife to death, broke for the weekend without reaching a decision Friday in its first full day of deliberations in Hartford Superior Court.

Manfred, 33, has admitted he has caused Catherine Billings Manfred's death, testifying that he struck her with an aluminum baseball bat during a quarrel on March 8, 1985. He has also acknowledged that he tried to disguise her death by saying she died in an automobile accident.

Defense lawyers maintained that Manfred did not intend to kill his 33-year-old wife, and was either legally insane or acting under extreme emotional disturbance.

But Assistant State Attorney Herbert G. Appleton told the jury that Manfred killed his wife intentionally and "really thought he could get away with it."

Body of missing fisherman found

NORWALK — The body of a Westport fisherman whose boat was found adrift 10 days ago was recovered Friday from Norwalk Harbor, marine police said.

A lobster fisherman discovered the body of 60-year-old Donald Miro in the early afternoon near the mouth of the harbor, the same area where Miro's 21-foot power boat was recovered Oct. 15, police said.

There was no indication of foul play, police said.

Trident protesters found innocent

NEW LONDON — A jury deliberated five minutes Friday before finding six anti-nuclear demonstrators innocent of disorderly conduct charges stemming from a demonstration during the launching of a Trident nuclear submarine.

The protesters, who were arrested during the launching of the USS Nevada at the Electric Boat shipyard in Groton on Aug. 16, used the two-day trial in Superior Court as a forum for airing their opposition to nuclear weapons.

One of the defendants, 43-year-old Louis DeBenedette of Uncasville, said he was surprised by the verdict.

One of the jurors, 78-year-old Harold Northup of Pawcatuck, said he and the others on the panel "couldn't find it within ourselves to find them guilty and send them to prison."

Granby to review AIDS decision

GRANBY — The Board of Education will be reviewing an administrator's decision allowing a child with AIDS to attend a Granby elementary school, board members said.

Chairman Virginia Wutka said Thursday that although none of the nine board members opposed the decision, the meeting will be held in private to request from some parents that the issue be discussed and decided publicly.

The matter is on the agenda for the board's Nov. 5 meeting.

On the first day of school after the announcement that the AIDS-infected child would be allowed to attend classes, parents of 14 students kept their children out of Kelly Lane School, but since then the number of absentees has been falling.

plains against one another with the National Labor Relations Board in Hartford. The case was set for a final showdown in the federal 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals in New York when the U.S. Supreme Court made a ruling in a separate case that nullified the argument the home's owners had planned to use against District 1199.

Contract negotiations started shortly after that, and on Feb. 5 the strikers returned to work.

Since then, District 1199 had said more than once that little progress was being made.

Last week, the union scheduled a vote to set a strike deadline. However, that vote was canceled when progress was made at the bargaining table earlier this week.

The contract brings to a close a labor-management conflict at the 135-bed home that at times became violent.

About 60 employees went on strike last October when the home's owners refused to be contract negotiators with District 1199. The strike saw violence on both sides — including a November 1985 incident in which a striker's car was shot against.

The strike caused hard feelings on both sides, as the union and management repeatedly filed com-

Pocketbooks key in SNET vote

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Union negotiators agreed Friday to conduct a secret mail ballot on a contract proposal aimed at ending a 6-week-old strike by 9,700 employees of Southern New England Telephone Communications Corp.

Shortly before the latest round of contract talks ended at 3 a.m., union leaders met at the Labor Department headquarters in Wethersfield, agreed to complete the ballot by Nov. 8, state Labor Department spokesman C. Richard Ficks said.

UNION PRESIDENT George Sherwood said that it was clear to him that SNET officials were not going to budge further on the issues of employee givebacks in the area of medical benefits and the form wage hikes would take — the two major stumbling blocks in negotiations.

SNET Chairman Walter H. Monteith said management is "properly awaiting the return of our employees."

SNET spokeswoman Eilissa Jenny said the company's new offer retains its demand that workers pay 20 percent of the first $5,000 of most medical expenses incurred in a year.

Union members had all their expenses covered under the old contract. The giveback portion of business agents attended a closed meeting in Wallingford Friday afternoon to discuss the proposal and several said afterwards that they think it will be ratified.

"It's people's pocketbooks talking now, rather than the price tag," said Pat Gocwoltz, president of Local 283.

SNET's original offer in large part caused the workers to strike.

SNET is now offering to ease the medical expenses of workers who have long-term health problems with a special co-payment protection plan, Jenny said.

The company also offered a new doctor's service option plan that would provide workers with free doctors' services after they had met either a $150 individual or $300 family deduction, she said.

JENNY SAID SNET has improved its proposal to pay parts of raises in a lump sum. The offer, encompassing a general minimum 7.5 percent pay raise over three years, also includes a $300 bonus to workers if the contract is ratified, she said.

The offer to be presented to union members is similar to contracts reached with workers by other telephone companies and several industries in Connecticut, Monteith said at a news conference.

He said SNET must reduce its share of employee medical coverage because of escalating costs in health care.

Obituaries

Florence V. Lamberg

Florence V. Lamberg, formerly of McCurtree Drive, died Friday morning at a local convalescent home.

Born in Manchester, she was a lifelong resident of the town. She was one of the oldest living lifetime members of Emanuel Lutheran Church. Her parents and oldest sister died the original charter of the church 100 years ago.

She received a 50-year diamond pin for her employment with former Cheney Bros. mills, where she had been employed as a weaver in the ribbon department.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Peter Joseph Reed who passed away October 26, 1987.

October comes with sad regret, the date and month we will never forget for in our hearts he will always stay, loved and remembered every day.

Sadly missed by Mom, Dad, Brother & Sister

In Memoriam

In loving memory of William Baird who passed away October 25th, 1985.

What would we give if we could go back in time to the day "Hello Dad, Pappy", in the same old way.

To hear your voice, to see your smile, to sit and talk with you awhile, Though absent, you are always near.

Still loved and missed and ever dear.

He denied union charges that the company has engaged in union-busting.

"I stand before you myself this afternoon a former member of this union," said Monteith.

Talks resumed around 4 p.m. Thursday after a 37-hour recess. The two sides did not meet face to face, but Labor Commissioner P. Joseph Ferraro shuttled back and forth between them.

THE STRIKE against Connecticut's largest telephone company began Sept. 12 after union members rejected a proposed 3-year contract by a vote of 4,619 to 3,544, despite the endorsement of union leaders.

The work of SNET employees, including operators and service technicians, has forced the company to suspend the installation of most new phone lines and person-to-person calls.

Temporary replacement operators were hired earlier this month, but phone company officials have said striking workers would get their jobs back when the strike is settled.

The funeral will be Sunday at 3 p.m. in the chapel of the Weinstein Mortuary, 640 Farmington Ave., Hartford. Burial will be Emanuel Synagogue Cemetery, Wethersfield. The family will receive friends at his home, 48 Craigmont Road, West Hartford, Sunday through Wednesday evening.

Memorial donations may be made to the Emanuel Lutheran Church Memorial Fund, Watkins Funeral Home, 142 E. Center St., in charge of arrangements.

He is also survived by a son, Philip G. Siegal of West Hartford; a daughter, Nancy L. Siegal of Falls Church, Va.; and two grandchildren.

Red Sox go for the clincher tonight

Mets glad to be home

By John Nelson The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Boston Red Sox have got the New York Mets right where they want them.

Down 3-2 in the best-of-seven World Series, the Mets feel happy just to have brought the Series back to Shea Stadium, especially after losing the first two games here.

"When we went to Boston, we felt like we had to win two out of three," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said during Friday's off day. "When you win the first two, you want to sweep, but we're right where we wanted to be going into Boston."

One thing was for sure from Boston's perspective.

"Now, we've got the homecourt advantage off our backs," Red Sox center fielder Dave Henderson said.

The Red Sox won the first two games of the Series 1-0 and 9-3 in New York. The Mets won the next two games in Boston, 7-1 and 6-2, before the Red Sox came up with a 4-2 victory Thursday night to break the deadlock and move within one game of their first World Series title in 68 years.

"They have to feel that they've got us where they want us," Henderson said of the Mets.

"They're down a game and they have to win. We feel the same way. We're right where we want to be — a game up and Roger (Clemens) on the mound."

In Saturday night's Game 6, the Red Sox will send 24-game winner

Win or lose, there were some shots exercised from old Fenway Park in Game 5. The Red Sox have not won a World Series title since 1918 — when Babe Ruth still played for them — and have lost three seven-game Series since, in 1906, '67 and '75. In the last of those two Series, the final game loss came at Fenway.

Then there was also the infamous Boston Massacre of 1978 when the Red Sox were swept at home in a crucial four-game series with the New York Yankees in September, and finished tied for the American League East regular-season lead. They lost a one-game playoff to the Yanks at Fenway on Rucky Dent's homer.

Gamble rested Clemens

By Dave O'Hara The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Manager John McNamara of the Boston Red Sox successfully positioned himself to win what may be the biggest game of the World Series by saving 24-game winner Roger Clemens for Game 6 Saturday night.

McNamara insists he and pitching coach Bill Fischer, a longtime friend, are not gambling in trying to bring Boston its first World Series championship in 68 years.

"I just do our homework and go from there," McNamara says of pitching changes begun in the American League playoffs more than three weeks ago.

McNamara and Fischer spent hours charting the Boston pitchers. They delayed pitching assignments, even at the risk of annoying some baseball people.

Now, with a 3-2 lead and a chance to win the championship at Shea Stadium Saturday night, McNamara and Fischer are right where they want to be.

Clemens, with five days off, is well-rested and ready to go against Bobby Ojeda, who will try to keep the Mets alive and force a seventh game on just three days' rest.

"We're going with the way we set it up," McNamara said. "Circumstances dictated our moves and things have worked out the way we hoped from the start."

"Now we've got the big boy set to go Saturday," Fischer said with a nod toward Clemens' locker Thursday night after Bruce Hurst pitched the Red Sox to a 4-2 victory in Game 5 in Boston.

Despite injuries, the Red Sox maintained a strict schedule for starting pitchers during the season. Clemens Hurst, Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, Al Nipper and Tom Seaver were given at least four days off between assignments.

That worked out well as the Red Sox turned back repeated challenges and won the AL East title. But McNamara and Fischer decided a change was in order after Seaver was sidelined by a knee injury on Sept. 19 and Nipper had trouble with consistency.

Manchester girls snare third straight crown

By Jim Tierney Herald Sports Writer

Three in a row!

This was the case for the Manchester High girls' soccer team on Friday as they defeated Rockville, 1-0, to earn its third consecutive Central Connecticut Conference East Division championship at Memorial Field. The Indians remained unbeaten at 12-0 in the CCC East and 13-1 overall. Rockville, Manchester's only threat in the league, dropped to 10-3 in the CCC East and 11-3 overall.

For Manchester coach Joe Erardi, who lauded the undying support for his team from the athletic administration and the parents, the third straight championship was sweet, especially for his seniors.

"All the seniors played so well today," Erardi said. "They were champs their sophomore and junior years so there was a little incentive for them to win today."

Manchester's Jill Boggini (11) and Rockville's Beth Mullen race stride for stride for the ball in their CCC East Division match Friday at Memorial Field. The Indians won, 1-0, to clinch their third straight championship.

Only then could the Manchester girls begin to savor this one. "Our kids are so committed and intense and they want to learn," a happy Erardi said. "I'm happy for them."

The Weekend

MHS gridders host Windham today

The Manchester High football team, 3-4 overall and 2-1 in the CCC East Division, host Windham High today at 1:30 p.m. The Whittetas come in at 0-2-1 in the division and 1-4-1 overall.

In other football action, UConn hosts Maine at 1 p.m. at Memorial Stadium in Storrs in a Yankee Conference clash. Today has been designated Band Day. Prior to the game, UConn will hold a "Site Dedication" at 12:40 p.m. where it will unveil a 4 X 8 color rendering of the new Sports Center that will house athletic facilities and new 8,000-seat arena for basketball.

East, Coventry booters in action

The East Catholic boys' soccer team will be in action Saturday at 11 a.m. against Northwest Catholic in West Hartford. The Eagles, 6-4, have to win two out of their three remaining games, or win one and tie one, in order to qualify for the state tournament. Meanwhile, the CCC champion Coventry boys' soccer team will be in action this morning at 11 against Rocky Hill as part of Soccerfest '86. The Coventry girls host Bacon Academy at 1 p.m.

ND gridders hand East its first loss

WEST HAVEN — Returning to the wars after a week's absence due to a bruised hip, tailback Don Martone rushed for two touchdowns and quarterback Kevin Neville passed for two more as unbeaten Notre Dame topped East Catholic from the unbeaten ranks, 28-16, in a battle of All Connecticut Conference heavyweights at Quigley Stadium.

The victory leaves the Green Knights in the driver's seat as far as the ACC race is concerned. They are 4-0 in ACC play while East Catholic is in second place, 3-2-1 in the conference. Notre Dame is 6-0-1 overall while the Eagles now stand 5-1-1.

NHL roundup

Martone scored on runs of 4 and 12 yards and rushed for 84 yards to pace Notre Dame's balanced attack. The Green Knights rushed for 185 yards while Neville passed for 139 through the air. ND quarterback Kevin Neville flipped a 3-yard TD pass to his favorite target, Chris Ferito, to end the first quarter and then the pair connected on a 50-yard Half Mary scoring strike with no time left on the clock to end the first half. ND had a 21-0 halftime lead before East battled back to tie the game, 14-14, on a 35-yard run to cap an 85-yard Eagle drive. The Knights then recovered an on-sides kick and marched to their final score, a 12-yard Martone run. Notre Dame is a good team," said East coach Jude Kelly. "Field position the first half hurt us. We were backed up most of the time and when we had fourth-and-short, we had to punt."

Aaron Albritto scored East's final TD on a 5-yard run to cap a 71-yard march.

Quarterback Mark Mangialico, who was at the helm in place of T. J. Albriro, ran in two two-point conversions. "It was a coach's decision," Kelly explained why Albriro was not the Eagle signal-caller.

Aaron Albritto accounted for East's other TD on a 5-yard run.

East had 150 yards rushing with Mangialico 3-for-3 for 42 yards in the air. Ric Cascat led the Eagle attack with 76 yards in 12 carries. East's next action is next Saturday against ACC rival St. Joseph at Mount Nebo with a 5:30 p.m. twilight start.

Whalers hold off the Sabres, 5-4

In the third period, Barr got his first of the game, beating the Sabres goalie Jacques Cloutier with a 26-footer.

Perreault got Buffalo back into it on a power-play goal, the first extra-man goal of the season for the Sabres in 34 attempts.

At 14:22, Dineen scored what proved to be the game winner.

Blues 1, Red Wings 4

At Detroit, Detroit goaltender Sten St. Laurent burned ahead 33 shots and first-period goals by St. Louis' Jocelyn Lemieux and the Red Wings' Steve Yzerman accounted for all the scoring Friday night as the Red Wings and Blues played to a 1-1 NHL tie.

At Landover, Md., Bob Mason turned aside 35 shots and got offensive support from Larry Murphy and Gaetan Duchene in the Washington Capitals' 8-2 NHL victory over the Minnesota North Stars Friday night.

Cape Cod Relays is the Striders' cup of tea

After another season of tourists and traffic, native Cape Codders are ready to hang up their patience about now, in favor of a hot cup of tea and a warm blanket by the fire. With the departure of the through that participated in the Cape Cod Relay last weekend. The participating in Truro must take especially good this morning.

Over 2,000 runners, 250 teams, and their support crews descended on the Cape last Saturday for the eighth annual, eight-day, 162-mile relay race that begins in Truro and ends in Provincetown. Five teams from Manchester's Silk City Striders joined them. Competing for the sixth straight year, the Striders would sooner eat fast food than miss this annual autumn ritual.

LAST YEAR, THE STRIDERS' "A" team was the first Connecticut group to finish, earning ninth place overall. In 1987, they placed 11th. This year, they placed 13th, a hard charge in a hard-charging Hartford Track Club. Knowing they had a tough act to follow this time around, the team of Phil and Ken

On the Run
Greg Best

Forley, Ray and Rick Parr, Randy Poinl, Bert Markove, Christ Nelson, and myself finished in a club-record eighth place. The time of 7:32:45 was slightly slower than the previous year, but we earned, considering a persistent head wind that dogged the runners over much of the course. Hartford Track Club, determined to turn the tables of a year ago, did just that, finishing in seventh place, 40 seconds ahead of Silk City.

Everyone raced well, but the run of the day belonged to Striders newcomer Marlowe, who passed three runners and nearly erased NYC's 9:30 lead over the grueling 16-mile seventh leg.

Congratulations are also in order for the Striders' four other teams, whose results are not available.

WITH HALLOWEEN JUST AROUND THE CORNER, it's time again for the American Cancer Society's Pumpkin Run for Hope, set for its fifth annual running Sunday. The event will kick off with a costume contest at 10 a.m., followed by a one-mile fun run at 10:30. The newly certified five-mile road race will commence at 11 a.m. Entry fee is $5.

Race director Jim Cunningham, in his first year with the race, expects a good turnout. "We'd like to see over a hundred participants for tomorrow's events," he said. "And we hope to build up from there." Cunningham added that the race is timed so that it may be used as a warmup for runners planning to compete in the Thanksgiving Day Road Race in November.

This year's event is sponsored by the Silk City Striders, The Manchester Recreation Department, and Tierney Funeral Home.

FOR THOSE WHOSE THANKSGIVING DAY preparations require a shorter "warm-up," consider the newly established Lita Children's Museum three-mile road race. The event, which will benefit children's programs at the museum, will be held on Sunday, Nov. 2, starting and finishing at the Globe Hollow swimming area on Spring St. It will begin at 10 a.m. with day-of-race and pre-registrations accepted between 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. Entry fee is $5. Merchandise awards will be given to the top male and female finishers, followed by a raffle for prizes, which is open to all participants. Entry forms may be picked up at the museum, 247 South Main Street.

NBA season opens Friday

Rest in East trying to catch the Celtics

By Bill Bordner
The Associated Press

Philadelphia, Milwaukee and Washington are putting Moses Malone, Jack Sikma, Jeff Ruland and Roy Rinnon in different uniforms this year in a bid to challenge the Boston Celtics' dominance in the NBA's Eastern Conference.

But out West, where the Los Angeles Lakers missed the finals for the first time since 1981, nearly everyone is standing in what Coach Pat Riley calls a balanced conference.

The Celtics, with Larry Bird winning his third consecutive Most Valuable Player award, won their 10th title in 1986 and their third of the decade. Unless backup forward Fred Roberts makes the team, they will have the same 12-man squad that made the NBA finals for the third straight time last season.

The 1986-87 season opens next Friday with nine games, including Washington at Boston.

THE BIGGEST UPHEAVAL is in Philadelphia, which sent Malone another three-time MVP in the Bulls and long-time backup Clemon Johnson to Seattle.

The Philadelphia front line should still be formidable, however, with Ruland, Rinnon, budding superstar Charles Barkley and backups Tim McCormick, Danny Vranes and Chris Robinson.

ALSO HOPING TO IMPROVE are the New Jersey Nets, who acquired Orlando Worlidge for scoring help up front and Cleveland, which gave up Hinson for the right to draft North Carolina's Chad Doughty No. 1.

where we've been, which is striking distance of a championship. I'm not saying it brought us any closer to Boston, but it's something we had to do to make sure we didn't fall any further back."

ALSO CHALLENGING FOR SUPREMACY in the West are Denver, Dallas, Utah and Portland.

The Mavericks did a lot of housecleaning, dumping forwards Dale Ellis and Jay Vincent, which means Coach Dick Motta is counting on second-year man Detlef Schrempf and rookie Roy Tarpley to help out high-scoring Mark Aguirre. Motta hopes Al Wood will be the much-needed backcourt backup behind All-Star Rolando Blackman.

DERBY is high on rookie Mo Martin as a backcourt scorer to help out the forward duo of Alex English and Calvin Natt. Coach Doug Moe also is hoping to move center Wayne Cooper can move to power forward, making room for Blair Rasmussen, who was a playoff surprise for the Nuggets.

AT PORTLAND, new coach Mike Schuler has felt out of his chair at his coming-out press conference, needs a healthy season from center Sam Bowie, who can provide offense around the scoring power of Kiki Vandeweghe and Clyde Drexler. If Darrell Griffith rebounds from injury and Kelly Tripucka can keep scoring. Utah will be tough despite the loss of Dwight Dismuke, who was a key defensive piece. New coaches also reside in San Antonio and Golden State. The Spurs' Bob Weiss has a strong nucleus in Alvin Robertson, Mike Mitchell and center LaRue Driesell. Puccini's 'Tosca' is great fun at the Bushnell

HARTFORD — Giacomo Puccini's "Tosca" opened the Connecticut Opera's 68th season Thursday, an instant hit at its 1986 debut. It made a solid season premiere at Bushnell Memorial Hall. It was great fun and nicely overplayed. The melodrama of "Victorian Sardou's original play is heightened by librettos written by Giuseppe Giacosa and Luigi Illica. The pair created three acts of poignant characters, caustic wit, violence, lust and integrity. Puccini's score impresses listeners with its intensity. A good thing, too, since the action drags a bit at times, as in the slow starting opening scene and Act III's dreary entrance.

Center Stage
M. Renee Taylor
Frusoni is a fine singer. He has perfect breath and tone control but could vary volume a bit more. He was fine in "What eyes are like thine eyes" in Act I, and impressive in Act III's famous "The heavens blaze with stars." He held his own quite nicely in a thrilling duet with Zachau. Act III's "The time is short." Bass William Powers played Baron Scarpia, his male chauvinist obsessed with possessing Tosca. With his sudden appearance at the end of Act I, he stole the scene, his venom casting a deliciously evil pall on the lovers' gaiety. He was best in Act II "Venet my enemies call me," as he gloated over his conquest. I think he made the most dramatic use possible of a voice past its prime. In Act I bass baritone Irwin Densen played the Sacristan, or church elder, with cometic flair. His Act II duet, "Not in front of the Madonna!" Her best control was in the Act II "Love and music have I lived for." She overplayed Act II hysteria just a tad when Mario was led away, but mostly was a strong dramatic asset.

Oklahoma man builds a boat to float his ministry
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The money to build the schooner comes from donations of churches and individuals. Linnell and his wife and a couple of friends have been building the vessel from a blueprint. The wood is Honduran mahogany. Linnell says, shipped from Brazil. It is stronger than steel in some respects, he said. The construction site is a remote rural area near the small community of Luther in northeastern Oklahoma County about 20 miles from Oklahoma City. Once finished, the boat will take the Linnells from the coast of Catoona near Tulsa down the Arkansas and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans, where Linnell says they'll "hang a big bell" and head for the West Indies.

Broncos want to buck tide

By The Associated Press

The 121st consecutive sellout crowd of 76,000 at Mile High Stadium will watch Denver try to avoid its first two-game losing streak since 1984 when the Broncos play the Seattle Seahawks Sunday. Seattle coach Chuck Knox calls the game an important one, "but if it's too early in the season to say it's a key game."

However, at the end of the season the teams could consider it the key. The Broncos go into the game with a 6-1 record and a one-game lead over second-place Seattle in the American Football Conference National Division.

Last Monday night, the Broncos were beaten 22-10 by the New York Jets. The last time they lost two straight was when Rick Karlis hit the uprights on last-minute field-goal attempts in consecutive games two years ago.

Denver has three straight wins over the Seahawks, the last a 13-10 win last season achieved on Karlis' 24-yard field goal in overtime. Quarterback John Elway of Denver suffered a concussion last Monday, but is listed as probable for Sunday.

Denver quarterback John Elway (7) gets sacked for a safety in last Monday night's game with the Jets. The Broncos lost their first of the season that night. Elway and company hope for better results Sunday against Seattle at Mile High Stadium in Denver.

It will be the second meeting this year between the two teams. The Falcons won 28-14 Oct. 12 at Atlanta, holding the Rams' Eric Dickerson to 73 yards on 16 carries. Dickerson, who has rushed for at least 100 yards 30 times, has failed to hit the 100 mark in three games against Atlanta.

Penn State, Alabama in significant matchup

By Herschel Hissenon
The Associated Press

Alabama and Penn State are fourth and fifth on the all-time major-college victory list with 622 and 610, respectively, and they will be second and sixth in the national rankings when they tangle Saturday in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

There will be few league games played this year where you will see so many good athletes on one team. This is probably the quickest football team we've had. We run better on defense than any team I've had and the backs are quicker than most people think.

Both teams have experience. Both teams are better than last year. We're better than we do. It's a big game, a meaningful game, and will enhance any national hopes we have if we win it.

Alabama's Ray Perkins, who succeeded Bear Bryant after the 1982 season, says Penn State "could be the best football team we've played since I've been here and could be the best football team Joe Paterno has had at Penn State."

An Honor Court 'graduate' talks about giving up booze

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Honey Carr
MACC Director

I hated myself and everyone else. I lost my self respect, my wife, my car, my house. I was losing the love of my children. The speaker at the Honor Court anniversary program gripped the back of his chair as he described his periodic lapses into drunkenness in his struggle to overcome alcoholism.

"Once I took that first drink, I wasn't sober a minute, drinking round the clock for three or four weeks. I can't remember or I remember crawling on my elbows to reach out the door to get water from the snow. Food, heat, water - all the water lines were frozen - I ran out of everything. Darn near ran out of life.

"After repeated rounds of detoxification, I went to a meeting right here. Right in this room. I heard a guy talk. He's in the room tonight. And I heard what he said. For the first time I started really listening. And I started going to AA meetings every night.

"Mostly every 28 hours since then I've been to an AA meeting. Sometimes when I'm having trouble, I've even gone to two meetings a day. They've been there. They've been through it all. They know what it's like. They told me I wasn't alone.

"I've got the respect of my children back. Only through the help of this fellowship - have I made it. Give AA a try. The fellowship during just people helping people. I learned from them how to stay stopped and stay sober. Just give it a try. It may help you. It helped me.

Advice

Sisters exchange hostilities after one exchanges vows

DEAR ABBY: I was married recently and it was the happiest day of my life. My family came out for me from New Jersey (I live in California) and all went well except for one thing.

My letter, seems irrational. Perhaps another family member can persuade her to get the professional help she needs.

DEAR ABBY: My son and his wife, "Betty," are divorced. I have always been close to my daughter-in-law, who thought of me as her mother and my husband as her father because both of her parents are dead. Betty and our son have a daughter. Betty was having problems with her so she came over to talk to me about it. When my son found out, he called me on the phone and was so angry he hung up on me. He thinks I should not see Betty - or even talk to her. She's always been like a daughter to me.

Only money market mutual funds absolutely 'safe'

Investor's Guide

William A. Doyle

QUESTION: I presently have individual retirement accounts in a no-load "income" mutual fund. I also have money in certificates of deposit, a bank money market deposit account and Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds. A broker I consulted recommended I redirect everything, minus emergency money, into a growth mutual fund whose shares can be purchased only through a contractual plan. Is it safe to place all my investments in one mutual fund? Will a load fund really outperform my no-load in the long term and make up for the commission charges?

ANSWER: There's a relatively short answer to your first query. The second requires a more detailed reply. Except for money market mutual funds, no mutual fund is absolutely "safe." There is some risk in mutual funds holding stocks, bonds or a combination of the two. However, there is also the possibility of financial gain. And most mutual funds have produced good investment results over the years. Because a mutual fund invests in many different securities, it provides diversification—thereby reducing risk. There's nothing wrong investing in just one fund, especially when you're dealing in relatively small amounts. For larger investments, however, it's usually wiser to use two or more funds. Now, for your second question. When you invest in a mutual fund with a straight load, up to $5 percent of your money goes to pay commissions meaning that $1,000 put into a no-load fund, which has no commission charge, purchases $1,000 worth of shares. It stands to reason that you start off with an advantage in a no-load fund. No one mutual fund or type of mutual fund turns in the best performance, year in and year out. There have been periods when load funds were the best performers and other times when no-load funds were best. The standard advice from this column has been to stick with truly no-load funds — those with no commission charges when shares are purchased, no redemption charges when shares are cashed in and especially no infamous 12b-1 plans, which dilute the values of shares. The contractual plan that broker recommended to invest in a mutual fund under that method up to 5 percent of your first year's investment can go to pay commissions — meaning the value of the first shares you purchase would have to double before you become "whole." You'll save commission charges and financial grid by never going near that broker again.

CBS agrees to sell publishing division

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Inc. said Friday it agreed to sell its educational and professional publishing division for $500 million to Harcourt, Brace Jovanovich Inc., a leading publisher of textbooks and periodicals. The transaction is the first big sale of a CBS division since Laurence A. Tisch became acting chief executive of the broadcaster and publishing concern last month.

bolster profitability and reduce its debt at a time when reduced national advertising is hurting its primary businesses. # The story behind the story

By Josie

Q. I want to know about Matthew Broderick. Vanessa G., Pharr, Texas

A. He's 24, one of three children of the late actor James Broderick and his artist wife, Patsy, and was born and raised in New York. To get his kids out of the city during the summer, the elder Broderick always took them with him on his tours in summer stock and it was on one such tour that Matthew first realized that he might become an actor.

Matthew Broderick

To that end, he chose New York's Walden School for high school; it had renowned theater department. He was afraid to try acting at first, however, so he channeled his energy into sports. When a knee injury sidelined his sports activities, he finally threw himself into acting — and did it critically well.

After graduation, he got an acting job immediately in the play "Valentine's Day" at the HB Studio. In it he co-starred, the only time, with his father. Several months later, he was cast in his first film, "No Small Affair," starring Sally Field to be directed by Martin Ritt, her director in "Norma Rae." Ritt's subsequent illness forced the postponement of the film (it was later made with a different cast) and that disappointment seemed to set off a string of others. He spent a year auditioning for roles that he didn't get.

His luck changed, however, in 1981 when he was cast as the adopted gay son in the play "Torch Song Trilogy." It brought him to the attention of Neil Simon who was then casting a play, "Brighton Beach Memoirs," and a movie, "Max Dugan Returns." Matthew auditioned and got both parts on the same day. "Brighton Beach" won him a Tony. "Max Dugan" brought him a film career, which has now also included "Ladyhawke," "1918," "WarGames," "Valentine's Day," "Master Harold and the Boys" on TV, and the recent "Ferris Bueller's Day Off."

Next up is "Project X" in which he plays a pilot assigned to a secret military project involving chimps. It's due out next spring.

Stacy Keach

Q. Please tell me everything about Stacy Keach. Miss Lana Lamb, Junction City, Ohio

A. He's 45 (born June 2, 1941), one of two sons of Stacy Keach Sr. and Mary Cain Peckham Keach, both actors. He was born in Savannah, Ga., where his father was then a drama teacher at Armstrong Junior College, and raised in Hollywood, where his father became a studio dialogue coach.

Stacy Jr. realized early that he wanted to follow his parents into the profession and be great at it. He wanted to play the types of roles that his idol Laurence Olivier played. His parents, however, wanted to spare him the up-and-down life of an actor and urged him to become a lawyer instead.

He compromised and began to study economics at the University of California at Berkeley but midway through, switched to drama and English. During his summer vacations, he established his preference further, by appearing at the Ashland, Ore., Shakespeare Festival.

Following graduation, then, his parents weren't surprised when he moved on to the Yale School of Drama. He stayed a year, appeared next with Joseph Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival and then resumed his studies at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Arts on a Fulbright Scholarship. While in London, he met Olivier, who encouraged him to become a character actor. When he returned to the U.S., that's what he did.

His stage break occurred in 1967 with the off-Broadway satire "Macbird!" His performance won him a slew of awards and led to appearances later that year in the plays "We Bombed in New Haven," and the Yale Drama School Repertory Theater's "Coriolanus."

The next year, he starred in "Falstaff," then "Peer Gyn" with the New York Shakespeare Festival, followed by "Indians" and "Long Day's Journey Into Night" on Broadway. He also began to appear in movies: "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter," "End of the Road," "Brewster McCloud," "Doc," "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean," "The New Centurions," "Fat City," "The Long Riders," and more recently, "That Championship Season."

He's also done a lot of TV: "The Blue and the Gray," "Princess Daisy," "Mistral's Daughter," "Intimate Strangers" and the "Mike Hammer" series. Currently, he's in production on "Hammer" and during that show's hiatus next spring plans to star in a miniseries based on the life and marriages of writer Ernest Hemingway.

He's been married four times. Current wife is Polish actress Malgosia Tomassi whom he met when she appeared on "Mike Hammer." And, as you're probably aware, he spent six months in a British jail for cocaine possession last year. He now spends much of his time in anti-drug-abuse efforts.

Rex Smith

Q. What will Rex Smith be doing next? He's great. Lori Rosenan, Modesto, Calif.

A. Broadway, it seems. He's scheduled to start performances this month in an off-Broadway musical called "Brownstone," which details the stories of five people living in a New York brownstone. If all goes according to plan, the show should move to Broadway in December. He's also having discussions with various record companies looking to revive his recording career.

Q. Please help. Did Bruce Willis star as a character named Tony on a "Miami Vice" episode? I say no. My son says yes. There's money on this one. Marie Armato, Richland, N.J.

A. Collect your money. According to the show's casting director, he played a character named Tony Dee in an episode called "Three Eyed Turtle."

It's time to turn over a new leaf

When you're a kid, fall means getting a fresh start

By Sarah Overstreet

I love the fall, and I don't think it all has to do with brisk weather and pretty leaves.

Fall, when you're a kid, means getting to start out fresh, with a perfectly clean record. (That is, unless you happened to get the same teacher for fifth grade that you had in fourth).

Fall was the time when you went in to face a new teacher who knew nothing about you (you thought — you hadn't learned about teachers' lounges yet) and who had no old accounts to settle with you. You had convinced yourself that this year it would be different, this teacher would like you. You're a new kid, you told yourself, who would be able to anticipate every move to please the new teacher.

Everything was new in the fall. You had new shoes, new clothes, new crayons and a new laminated zipper notebook with a map of the world and flags of the nations. Pencils were long, unchewed and had erasers. As cooler days arrived, the hope quickened that the new car coat could finally be worn. There would be no end to affluence, you thought, because just around the corner was December. By the time the new leather smell was out of your shoes, Christmas would be here.

Fall was the time when there was still hope you had changed magically during the summer and would suddenly be the most popular kid in class. You were still able to believe the cutest (boy/girl) would send you a note saying (he/she) liked you. The name Pigface hadn't been flung your way yet.

There was still hope, in the fall, that you might be elected homeroom representative to the student council. This year, you might get a speaking part in the Thanksgiving play, with real dialogue instead of "Gobble, gobble."

As you grew older, fall meant there was still a chance you might be chosen a cheerleader or allowed to actually play in football games. You hadn't had to beat down a throat lump when your name wasn't called over the school intercom. Those long games on hard benches and bleacher seats hadn't happened yet.

Teachers still believed, in the fall, that they would accomplish all they wanted to in the coming year. They came to school armed with plastic leaves with which they created blazing bulletin boards. They plastered book jackets on the boards and tacked up large construction paper letters with mottoes such as FALL INTO FALL WITH READING or DON'T FALL INTO BAD WORK HABITS.

They still believed that each child was a special individual they could reach as soon as they found the key to his personality. The language papers with alphabet soup had yet to be turned in, and no one had yet smoked in the boys' bathroom.

I still have that "clean slate" feeling in the fall, and I like to start new ventures then: washing windows (I always get half of them done) and getting out a roadmap and planning a trip to a small town we've never been to.

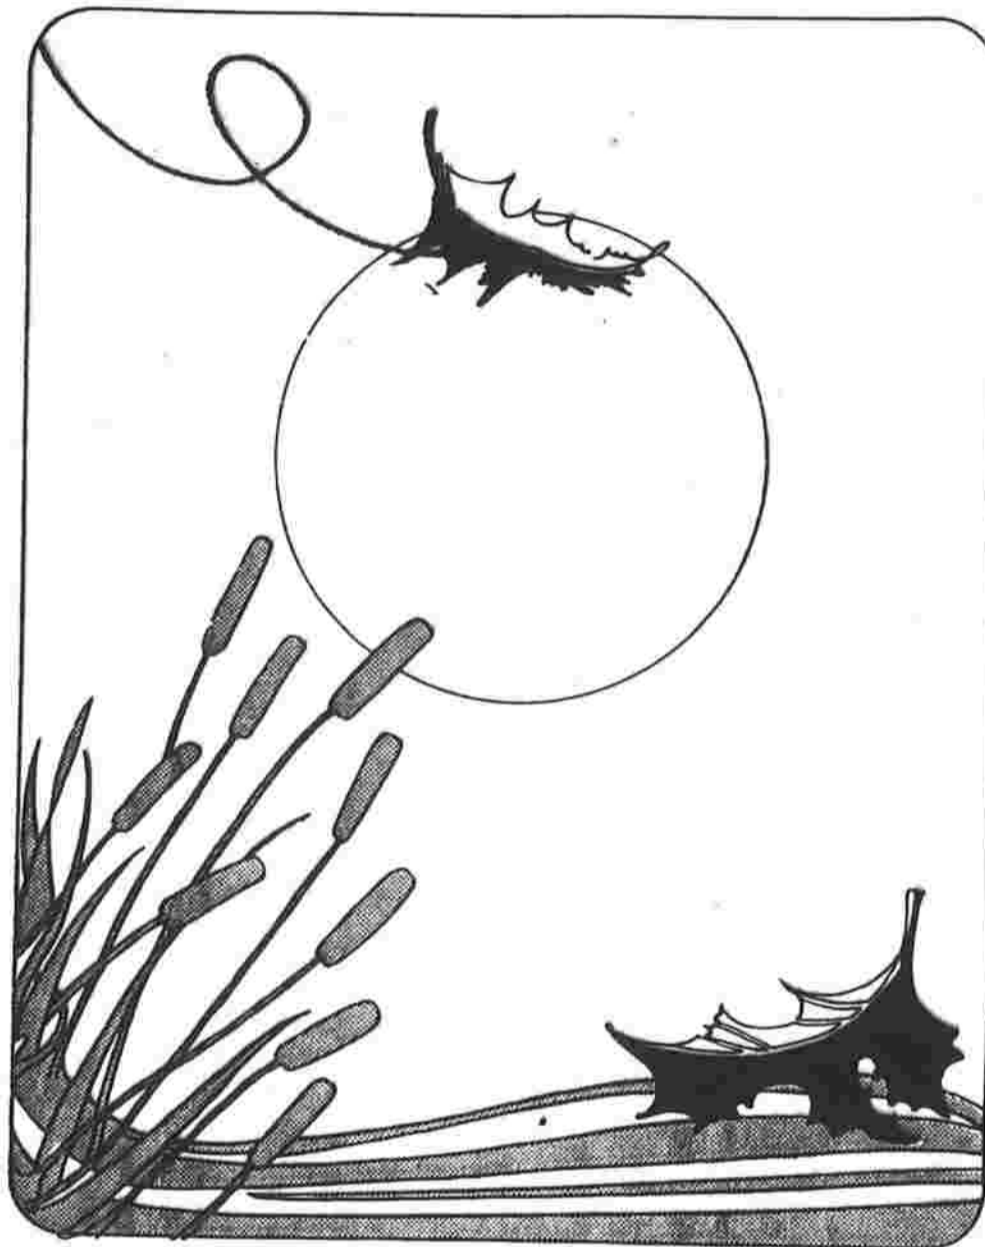

I'm reminded, in the fall, of the time my best friend and I drove several hours over winding Arkansas roads to reach a crafts festival. That fall it was beyond our wildest imaginations that things would ever be different than they were just then. She'd always live two miles away from me, and we'd drive through the hills, daydreaming into the forests lining the twisting highways.

Our parents would worry about us being on the road alone, and we'd call them as soon as we got to our apartments. In the winter, we'd shop for new sweaters and wear each other's clothes. She had yet to move to Houston to go to law school, and my parents hadn't died.

My husband and I married in the fall, confident we'd always share the same goals and be self-sacrificing to the utmost. We honeymooned in a national forest while the days were still warm and sunny and the nights cool enough that we lit the fireplace in our cabin. We walked in the hilly woods and got those strange kind of goosebumps that tell you things will never be quite the same again.

We hadn't put all our money into one checking account yet, nor discovered busted water pipes on the coldest day in January. We'd yet to be just downright disgusted with each other for a variety of silly reasons.

I like it that our anniversary coincides with the opening of school, although we didn't plan it that way. I feel like we've just been handed our brand-new pencils and clean slates. ■

Mary Fiore says most people associate vampires with Halloween.

Gary Tucker/Manchester Herald

Mary Fiore: Bitten by the vampire bug

By Nancy Pappas

Mary Fiore uses plenty of garlic when she cooks. Her dentist has never complained that her front teeth protrude. And she absolutely never sleeps in a coffin.

But Fiore, a second-year student at Manchester Community College, is known to friends as "the vampire lady."

"I'm not a blood sucker. Really, I'm not!" says the 35-year-old psychology major. But she admits that she's worked hard to earn her nickname. Since she was 10 years old, she's studied and collected books about vampires, and now owns more than 150 vampire books.

"I guess you could blame this all on my grandmother," says Fiore. "She was always talking about the werewolves. The tales they told in French Canada. That got me interested in the European werewolf stories, which led to vampires and the other horrors."

At this point, Fiore, an Ellington resident, is looked upon as something of a local expert on the subject. She gave a lecture on vampires to literature students at the University of Hartford last year. On Wednesday she'll do another, this time for students at MCC. Part of her collection of vampire books is being shown at the MCC library.

Nancy Pappas is a reporter with the Manchester Herald. She does not believe in vampires.

Fiore finds it amusing that the world thinks about werewolves and vampires primarily in October, in conjunction with Halloween horrors. For Fiore it's a year-round hobby. Some have even called her interest an obsession.

She talks about the various vampires in literature as if she were personally acquainted with them. She's read about all of them — from Prince Vlad Dracol, the 13th century ruler of a principality called Wallcheria, all the way to Carmella, a lesbian vampire with a punk rock hairdo.

She particularly likes tales in which the vampire is the hero. She talks about stories in which vampires rescue — rather than ravish — beautiful women. Some 20th century vampires have been dashing and handsome. But Fiore admits that this is a rather recent twist on the traditional legends.

"Your basic vampire legend has lots of blood and dirt and death," Fiore says. "He was a dangerous figure."

Some variation of the vampire legend has appeared in many cultures. This is because there were certain phenomena which occurred in many nations, Fiore says.

During a plague, large numbers of bodies would be carted to the edge of a town and buried in very shallow graves. Invariably, some of those placed in the "death cart" were not really dead, just extremely ill. And some of them survived.

Mary Fiore

"Now, what would you do if you 'came to,' with about six inches of dirt and leaves over you. You'd sit up, right? And then you'd stand up. And then you'd lurch off, probably in the general direction of home," Fiore says.

"Now picture this. You're not exactly a vision of loveliness. You're covered with dirt and blood and a lot worse from lying in that cart with the other victims. So people are scared down that one road in your town. Then some guy yells, 'Hi, y, I thought he was dead!' And that's how the stories get started."

There were also people who needed blood because they suffered from pernicious anemia. "These people had to avoid sunlight, so this fed right into the vampire legend. Vampires became creatures who could function only at night," Fiore says.

The vampire might have been no more important than any other fearful characters of legend if it had not been for the work of Bram Stoker. His novel, "Dracula," written in 1897, made the vampire a popular figure.

"Stoker took a lot of what was known about Prince Vlad Dracol, and combined it with the Gothic, the romantic, of the novels in that late Victorian era," Fiore says. "He took a lot of license. It was maybe one part traditional folklore, and two parts Stoker. But it became the point of departure for everything on vampires that's been done in this century."

For example, if your youngster is going to be a vampire for Halloween, he or she is probably planning on wearing a sweeping black cape. Stoker has been credited with adding the elegant cape and evening wear in which vampires have appeared ever since, from Bela Lugosi to the Count on Sesame Street.

The Victorian era also saw the vampire subtly transformed into someone who was nearly as attractive as he was fearful.

"You started seeing women who would purposely give themselves to the vampire, offering themselves to be sort of 'love victims.'"

Fiore is fascinated by this phenomenon. A psychology major, she's worked for five years as a volunteer in shelters for abused women. "I think I tend to be attracted to 'the bad boys.' What is it? The danger? The belief that we can reform them?"

But one can also adore a vampire without becoming his victim. In the late 1960s, the program "Dark Shadow" was popular on television. Barnabas Collins was a vampire who needed only a pint of blood every now and again to survive. "He would not generally kill his victims, only drink what he really needed. The rest of the time he was out saving heroines," says Fiore. "And they would often fall head over heels for him."

As for Fiore, she says that she's never met a vampire she couldn't love, but they've all been in books or on the silver screen.

"Most of the time, by the time you're about halfway through the book, you're rooting for the vampire," she says. "Maybe I should say, 'Some of my best friends are...'"

Mary Fiore will speak on "Vampires in Literature and Legend" at noon Wednesday in C-105 of the Lawe Building of Manchester Community College. The program is free and open to the public.

You can save your child's teeth

There's no need for any kid to be down in the mouth

By Frances Sheridan Goulart

According to the American Dental Association, almost 40 percent of all 6-year-olds have lost several teeth because of periodontal (gum) disease. Little Americans, in fact, are walking around with more than 200 million unfilled cavities, says the International Society for Preventive Dentistry — the equivalent of billions in potential dental bills. Besides holey molars and bicuspids that wobble, kids also suffer from TMJ, deformed jaws, over-bites, under-bites and bad breath.

If your child's down in the mouth, cheer up. There are dozens of ways to help him out dentally. Here are some to start with:

1. Your child's tongue is a barometer of his general health. A healthy tongue is pink. White spells a toxic condition somewhere, while yellow and green are connected with not so up-and-up liver, pancreatic or stomach functions. Allergy, too. Reddish colorings indicate vitamin deficiencies, so does a cracked tongue.

What to do if the tongue you're inspecting doesn't pass the test? Eliminate sugars, junk food and caffeinated sodas from the diet. Substitute more fruit juices such as apple and grape that aid in detoxification. Reduce intake of enamel-eroding lemonade and citrus coolers.

2. Americans use more mouthwash than any other nation on earth. That includes kids — especially teens. Don't take your offspring's halitosis lightly. Mouth odors can be caused by anything from post-nasal drip to diabetes to kidney disease, says The Holistic Health Association. It's best to schedule a physical, a dental visit and make sure your child is brushing his tongue twice a day as well as his teeth to reduce odor-making bacteria.

3. The average kid has an average of 11 cavities by the time he's 17. Less sugar can reduce the calories count. Keep "spice" cubes instead of lifesavers around. Freeze any spicy-sweet herb tea in mini ice-cube trays (tuck in a mint leaf or lemon peel before freezing), and keep baggies of them in the freezer to stop snack-attacks with a third the calories of candy.

4. Poor digestion, stomach gas and bad breath go together. B6 (Pyridoxine) is the B vitamin most likely to help because it regulates digestive juices. Yogurt and buttermilk are good sources.

5. Two ways to prevent adult gum disease: Teach your child to gently massage his gums morning and night with vitamin E oil and floss while the oil is still on. A 500 mg vitamin C tablet with each meal helps, too, if gums are not so healthy looking. Vitamin C kills acitomyces viscosus, a bacteria involved in the development of periodontal disease, advises the Linus Pauling Institute of Menlo Park, Calif.

6. What test does a good dentist perform for an older child? A soft-tissue checkup for oral cancer once a year. A good way to find the best dentist is to get a referral from your family physician, or ask your pharmacist for the name of his dentist, or call the dental clinic at a nearby hospital.

7. Fewer burgers and more broccoli and your child will keep his teeth longer. More than 40 percent of all periodontal disease victims eat vegetable-poor diets. Vegetables, especially leafy salad greens, strengthen teeth and gums by providing calcium, the B vitamin folate and vitamin C. Good sources besides lettuce? Dark greens including kale, collards and parsley. And strawberries, gram for gram, have slightly more vitamin C than oranges. Puree a cupful in the blender and use for topping whole wheat pancakes.

8. Don't let toddlers eat the toothpaste. Most commercial brands contain 53.85 percent dicalcium phosphate dihydrate (an abrasive), 43 percent sorbitol-water mixture and 0.1 percent saccharin (natural sweeteners). 0.05 percent methylparaben (a preservative), and sodium in the form of sodium carboxymethyl-cellulose (an emulsifier) and sodium lauryl sulfate. Look for baking soda-based cleaners containing fluoride with the fewest additives possible and apply with a soft, not a hard-bristled brush.

9. Is your child unhappy?

Cheer him up. Stress and anxiety only increase levels of harmful bacteria in the saliva which contributes to gum diseases such as gingivitis and trench mouth by raising cortisol in your body. High levels of this hormone are often linked to lowering of the body's immune reserve, says the Journal of Human Stress. And encourage a child to finish a meal with a good stress-fighting snack that fights decay such as cubes of natural Swiss or Cheddar when he can't brush. ■

Alas, 'Jack Flash' a fizzle

By Bob Thomas

There are certain things in film credits to which critics react like a bull before a matador's cape.

The writers credited for Whoopi Goldberg's first comedy film, "Jumpin' Jack Flash," are David Franzoni, J.W. Melville, Patricia Irving and Christopher Thompson.

With all these contributors, you might expect "Jumpin' Jack Flash" to be a mess.

Not since 20th Century Fox

Bob Thomas writes movie reviews for The Associated Press.

Cinema Review

combined Sylvester Stallone and Dolly Parton in "Rhinstone" has the studio produced such a mishmash.

The promising premise: Whoopi Goldberg is an unorthodox computer operator in a Manhattan bank.

Miss Goldberg seeks help from the British consulate, but she is intercepted by a pair of suave moles who assign a small army of assassins to eliminate her.

That wouldn't be bad, except that the episodes became a string of unconnected and illogical sitcom sketches.

The good news about "Jumpin' Jack Flash" is that Whoopi Goldberg emerges as a comedy star of the first order.

The other actors fare less well. Stephen Collins is a bumbling newcomer to the computer room whose true identity is revealed unconvincingly in the final shootout.

"Jumpin' Jack Flash" is rated R, apparently because of Miss Goldberg's vulgarisms.

Whoopi takes job seriously

By Bob Thomas

LOS ANGELES — Followers of the standup comedian were surprised when she became a movie star in the dramatic "The Color Purple."

"I planned to be known as Whoopi Goldberg, character actor," she said.

"That's a tough gig. You have to be really funny every time.

People are always surprised, and I have to remind them that I had always planned to be a dramatic actress.

It was Goldberg's one-woman show, performed in the Amblin film headquarters before Steven Spielberg and his staff.

"We set off our own atom bomb," she said glowingly. "and we've been enjoying the mushroom cloud ever since."

Whoopi Goldberg, whose real name is Karen Johnson, was born 36 years ago in Manhattan's Chelsea district.

Moving to San Diego in 1974, Goldberg helped found a repertory theater where she played dramas, but she drifted into improvisational troupes where her comedy skills emerged.

Goldberg was interviewed on the set of "Burglar," a Warner Bros. comedy that had also been written for another actress.

Despite the rigors of publicizing one movie while making another, she seemed serene.

Film capsules

Allens (R) — Sigourney Weaver, Carrie Henn, Paul Robeson, Michael Blum. Even if you try and follow the plot — Warrant Officer Pipley, after a 57-year nap in outer space, goes back into combat with those slimy extraterrestrials — you'll soon tire from clutching your seat in fear.

Stand by Me (R) — Richard Dreyfuss, Wil Wheaton, River Phoenix, Corey Feldman, Jerry O'Connell. Adventure-Drama. It's a shame Rob Reiner's latest film is rated R (for strong language), because those who stand to gain the most — the under-17 crowd — can't see it without parental supervision.

Nothing in Common (PG) — Tom Hanks, Jacqui Mason, Eva Marie Saint, Bea Aronson. Comedy-Drama. As wise-cracking, womanizing ad exec David Basner, Hanks is a guilt-free, upwardly mobile charmer who cajoles and wheedles his way from office cubicles to bedroom with bravura surefootedness.

Children of a Lesser God (R) — William Hurt, Marlee Matlin, Piper Laurie, Philip Bosco. Drama. This Tony-award winning play makes the transition from stage to screen with dignity intact.

Creedle Dundee (PG-13) — Paul Hogan, Linda Kozlowski, Mark Blum. Comedy. The leather-skinned Dundee, best known for his Australian tourism commercials, makes a likable leading man in this comedy travelogue.

Peggy Sue Got Married (PG-13) — Kathleen Turner, Nicholas Cage, Barry Miller, Catherine Hicks, Joan Allen, Kevin J. O'Connor. Comedy. Turner goes to her 28th high school reunion, faints and is thrust back to the time just before her graduation.

The Name of the Rose (R) — Sean Connery, F. Murray Abraham, Christian Slater. Mystery. How do you adapt a 20,000-word mystery novel set in a 14th century cloister?

Come on, 'R & R', get real

Video Beat

Well into its second month on the air, the syndicated "Rock 'n' Roll Evening News" has yet to decide whether it's a program about entertainment — or an entertainment program.

How can one take seriously an informational broadcast with a studio audience? Gee whiz, these folks are applauding their favorite news items!

Still, the funniest part of "R 'n' R Evening News" — aside from Eleanor Mondale trying to read her lines — is the behind-the-scenes manipulation that leaks out on-screen.

For instance: The program's first superstar coup was an interview with Lionel Richie, and that big name helped a lot of other stars fall in line.

Did anyone notice that the interview was conducted by show co-host Marianne Rogers, wife of Kenny — the man who hoisted Lionel Richie into the big leagues? Richie used to live in the Rogers' guest house, for goodness sake.

And was it a coincidence that another much-ballyhooed guest on the program was that great humanitarian Ken Kragen, manager of — you guessed it — Lionel Richie and Kenny Rogers?

Ethlie Ann Vare tunes into rock for the Newspaper Enterprise Association.

Alabama's newest is a hit

By Mary Campbell

Every album that Alabama has put out has been on both country and pop charts. If the new single, "Touch Me When We're Dancing," goes to No. 1 on the country chart, it'll be Alabama's 20th single in a row to do so.

It had climbed to No. 34 on Oct. 4, its third week on that chart. The new album, out in early October, is "The Touch."

The tour is the 10-date Marlboro Country Music Tour, Oct. 24 through Nov. 23. Alabama, which closes its shows, is on five of the dates.

Mary Campbell writes about music for The Associated Press.

Rhino Records, who are distributing the Beaters' "By Request" LP.

On the cable side, Showtime will air "Be-Fore," half-hour documentary about the making of Huey Lewis and the News' "Fore" album.

Irreverent country crooner Kinky Friedman has launched a second career as a novelist. It appears that all those years of writing wacky lyrics are standing him in good stead.

Before all the various "Aids," the big rock charity event of the season in Britain was always the Prince's Trust, an annual ball thrown by Prince Charles and featuring a stellar array of rock royalty.

Violent 'Cobra'

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The Sylvester Stallone movie, "Cobra," is too violent for Brazilian audiences and has sparked a debate over whether there still is censorship under the country's civilian government.

Selleck is vindicated by Magnum's rebound

By Robert Barr

NEW YORK — Tom Selleck has no reservations about making a fool of himself. After all, he's the guy who turned up on David Letterman's show, stuck his face in a tank of water and favored the nation with his impression of a motorboat. He got a bit annoyed, however, when the ratings appeared to make a fool of his show, "Magnum, P.I."

In a showdown between two former college jocks, Bill Cosby ran Selleck ragged on Thursday night. Selleck congratulated Cosby for an excellent show, but burned at the sniping he felt "Magnum" was taking as it nearly dropped out of the top 50.

"What I think people forget is that we were at a level, even at 48th, where we could have stayed on the air for several years," Selleck said in a telephone interview from Honolulu.

This season, CBS has moved "Magnum" into a later time slot Wednesday nights, and the show is prospering. Last week, it was 22nd on the A.C. Nielsen list. "I'm real pleased that there has been a response," Selleck said. "It vindicates the show in a way."

He was bothered, he said, by what seemed to be an increasing fascination with the weekly Nielsen numbers in newspapers and on shows like "Entertainment Tonight."

At the television writers tour this summer in California, Selleck recalled, he had urged writers to do more reviews and fewer top 10 lists.

"It's one thing for the network," Robert Barr writes about Hollywood for The Associated Press.

Risks of toxoplasmosis are clarified

Treatment during pregnancy is controversial

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR READER: In July we answered a question about whether there was a virus carried by cats that was dangerous to unborn babies. Unfortunately, in discussing the disease toxoplasmosis, we repeated the reader's use of the word "virus."

Many readers, including several physicians and veterinarians, have since asked the Kinsey Institute to clarify this by explaining that the infectious agent for this disease is not a virus, but a protozoan called Toxoplasma gondii.

One physician said that the column had caused pregnant women to worry about toxoplasmosis when it stated that "there is no safe treatment during pregnancy...."

The intent of the column was twofold: (1) to inform women who planned to become pregnant, that before becoming pregnant, it was important that they be tested to determine whether they were already infected with Toxoplasma; and (2) to tell those women who had never had a Toxoplasma infection how to avoid contracting the disease during pregnancy.

Most women have been exposed to this disease years or many months before they became pregnant, and their babies are not at risk. However, if a previously uninfected woman is infected during pregnancy (or only a few months before conception), her baby is at risk of being infected in utero.

Congenital toxoplasmosis occurs in about one of every 8,000 live births in the United States and can result in birth defects or health problems later in life. The infected infant can and should receive treatment immediately at birth. This will not reverse existing birth defects, but it does prevent further damage.

Treatment of women who acquire Toxoplasma infection during pregnancy is controversial. Some authorities recommend therapeutic abortion, especially if the infection occurs during the first three months of the pregnancy. Other researchers report that the chance of having an infected infant can be reduced (but not eliminated).

Some of these treatments involve using a drug not yet available in the United States (the manufacturer states that "safety has not yet been established for pregnant women..."). A different treatment also being studied consists of two drugs (one of which is suspected of causing birth defects, and so is not recommended for use during the first three months of

The Kinsey Report

Afraid of surgery

DEAR DR. REINISCH: If my uterus hangs, do I need surgery? I'm afraid and will never have it done. Is there anything else doctors can do besides a hysterectomy? I feel good otherwise and have no bleeding, but I'm very scared about the surgery.

DEAR READER: I assume you've been told that you have a uterine prolapse (in which the uterus or womb begins to slide down into the vagina) or some similar problem associated with weakening of the pelvic muscles. These conditions vary greatly from one woman to another; therefore, questions about them cannot be answered without a thorough examination.

What's normal?

DEAR DR. REINISCH: If a woman has an abnormal Pap smear and then has a normal one, is it possible that cancer will redevelop at a later time?

DEAR READER: Not all abnormal Pap smears are related to cancer. It really depends on what type of abnormal cell was detected by the Pap test. For example, many of the abnormal (many clinicians prefer the word "atypical") cells reported are the result of vaginal infections.

If a vaginal infection is successfully treated and no atypical, infection-related cells are seen in a second Pap test, there is no increased likelihood that cancer would follow. Any woman who receives a Pap test report other than Class I (no atypical cells seen) should follow her physician's recommendations regarding treatment and the scheduling of future Pap tests.

In many cases, a physician will suggest frequent Pap tests

“Most women have been exposed to this disease years or many months before they became pregnant, and their babies are not at risk. However, if a previously uninfected woman is infected during pregnancy (or only a few months before conception), her baby is at risk of being infected in utero.”

(for example, every three months, instead of once a year) until he or she is certain that the problem has been fully treated and has not recurred.

Baby in future?

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am a 28-year-old woman. For two years I have had migraine headaches and the leakage of milk from my breasts. I take Inderal and Parlodel every day. I have been unsuccessful at getting pregnant. I would like to know if I will be able to have children in the future.

DEAR READER: This is really a question for your physician, who knows the most about your particular situation, why the drugs were prescribed and whether they're working.

Neither Inderal nor Parlodel has been shown to reduce fertility. In fact, Parlodel, which is used to treat galactorrhea (having a clear or milky discharge from both breasts), also is used to treat one type of female infertility.

Make an appointment with your physician to review your condition and to discuss what to expect next. In the meantime, carefully read the package inserts for the medications you're taking so that you can ask questions about the drugs and their side effects at the appointment. Ask your pharmacist for copies or ask a reference librarian at a public library to help you look up these medications in drug reference books.

Also be sure to tell your doctor about all your symptoms, including the headaches. If you feel you need a second opinion, or are especially worried about fertility, look for a fertility specialist or fertility clinic near you. Most medical schools and large hospitals have such clinics. Galactorrhea is not unusual, and even some men have this condition. Prescription drugs (including antihypertensives, antidepressants and tranquilizers) cause a breast discharge in some patients. It also can be caused by changes in hormonal levels (such as at puberty), and, in rare cases, by a tumor of the pituitary gland.

Tests to diagnose the cause of breast discharge can include examination of the discharge; blood tests of hormone levels; X-rays of the skull if a pituitary tumor is suspected, and a mammogram (breast X-ray) if a cyst or tumor of the breast is suspected. If you have not had these tests recently, perhaps it's time to ask your physician about repeating some of the tests, particularly measurement of prolactin (a hormone produced by the pituitary and related to milk production).

Send questions to Dr. Reinisch in care of The Kinsey Report, P.O. Box 48, Bloomington, Ind. 47402. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest may be discussed in future columns.

“The severity and extent of the effects of toxoplasmosis infection on the fetus depends on when, during gestation, the fetus is infected, and on the level of the infection. Until a safe and effective treatment is found and is widely available, the decision about treatment must be made by the parents and their physician after carefully weighing the known risks.”

Decorating with flair looks easy

By Susan Plese

Take a few dried leaves from the back yard. A pumpkin and some gourds, a head of curly kale, a champagne bucket, a package of candy corn, a few bare tree branches, Easter basket "grass," a bedspread, spray paint, sticky tape and several yards of cloth. What do you have?

The makings of not one, but several unique table arrangements perfect for the fall season of holiday entertaining, all courtesy of two creative Manchester women.

Carolyn Habolan of Timber Trail and Marilyn Neumayer of Timrod Road collaborated recently at Neumayer's home to demonstrate how easy it is to decorate a dining room table for special occasions. Included in their handiwork were a casual fondue by the fire, a children's party, a buffet table, and an intimate breakfast for two.

Actually "easy" is unfair. Both women obviously have a flair for design and composition. But using their ideas, even a hostess without the mostest could duplicate their efforts.

"Everything we obtained is available in Manchester," says Habolan. "That's one of the nice things about Manchester." Some decorations were found in their homes. Some, like the dried leaves littering the back yard, were free. Here's what they did.

In the family room, in front of the fireplace, is the warm "fondue by the fire." The table is round, covered to the floor with a length of gold lame cloth, bought on sale for about $15. Not cheap, to be sure, but both women point out that their purchases can be used and reused.

Atop the lame is a green cloth interwoven with gold threads: a $7.99 Marshall's buy. The cloth is gathered at each corner with gold bows (ribbon they found at Fairway) in order to create a scalloped effect.

Echoing the gold are dinner plates with gold rims, and gold-plated flatware. But it is the centerpiece that appropriately takes center stage.

They painted a pumpkin, about 8 inches in diameter, with gold spray paint. Cascading from the top of the pumpkin are natural green-and-gold sprayed eucalyptus and oak leaves. At each place setting, they have placed a sprig of leather-leaf fern, again tinged with gold spray paint.

"You don't have to totally spray the whole thing," Habolan says. "The orange pumpkin showing through is beautiful." The same is true of the green leather-leaf ferns.

The eucalyptus and ferns were found in Neumayer's basement, saved from previous projects. "If you can't find it in Fairway, it's in our basements," Habolan quips. But eucalyptus, both green and brown, can be found in garden centers such as Woodland Gardens.

On to the kitchen area, where the two women have set a square table for a children's Halloween party. Covering the table is a black cloth with gold threads interwoven, another Marshall's purchase.

Placemats are orange lunch bags with black pumpkin faces. The bags were purchased in West Hartford. The cost was about $5 for a package of 12. But it would be equally easy to paint black pumpkin faces on plain orange bags, Neumayer notes.

"And if I were really having a party, I'd probably put the sandwiches in the bags, instead of using them for placemats," she says. "You know how kids like to take things out of bags."

The centerpiece for the children is a large fabric orange and black bag, stuffed with paper, and tied with a black ribbon. It sits atop a grapevine wreath, and a straw scarecrow perched in the center of the bag completes the picture.

But just to intrigue the children, the women sprinkle candy corn with abandon all over the surface of the table, and decorate further with streamers of narrow orange ribbon, using the inexpensive ribbon which comes in rolls. A teddy bear in the corner wears an orange Halloween mask, and a fabric happy-faced pumpkin (available at Lift the Latch on Main Street) is filled with candy.

In the dining room, the women set an arrangement suitable for a buffet table or small dinner party for four. They started with a runner made of burgundy-colored moire, a shimmering fabric similar to taffeta.

The runner is gathered at both ends of the table, and hangs over several inches. Neumayer used about four yards. The moire costs about $4 a yard.

Down the center of the fabric is a lavish arrangement of silver spray-painted naturals — maple and oak leaves from the back yard, delicate bare tree branches interspersed with silver-tinged Easter "grass," acorn squashes and gourds in all shapes and sizes, Indian corn and tiny, delicate sheaves of strawberry corn.

In the center, adding height to the arrangement, is a silver bag tied in the middle and topped with trailing eucalyptus and strawberry corn.

The effect of all that silver on the luxurious burgundy fabric is rich and sophisticated. Yet the items are all simple, inexpensive and readily available. The spray paint came from Fairway on Main Street; the gourds, squash and pumpkins from Hurst Berry Farm in Andover.

In front of the living room fireplace is a small round table set for an intimate tete-a-tete-breakfast or a romantic dinner for two. The cloth is an antique crocheted popcorn bedspread, "made by my husband's Aunt Dora about 50 years ago," Neumayer says.

"I think it's neat — it's a bedspread, and it's too long, but you just fold it under," she says. Peeking out from the open work design of the crocheted is an underlying pink tablecloth.

The pink is echoed in delicate china edged with pink flowers. In the center is an elegant silver champagne bucket topped with the most common of vegetables:

kale.

This kale is not of the ordinary type, however; it is ornamental, with curly green leaves on the outside and light pink in the center. Neumayer bought three pots of kale at Manchester Garden Sales on Oakland Street. Cost: about $3 each.

The women weren't satisfied with the plain, unadorned kale, however. It took a length of imitation pearls and a chain of small silver balls (Christmas tree garland) wrapped among the leaves to complete the effect. Two more heads of the kale sit in a basket in a corner, a basket lined with a crocheted dresser scarf.

The kale can be grown outside, and cut late in the season for indoor decoration. "What's amazing about this kale, is if you put it in your sink filled with water and ice, it opens like a rose — beautiful!" says Habolan.

"It also looks beautiful at Christmas," Neumayer adds. "I put it in the fireplace with poinsettias behind it."

The women are quick to share other secrets of innovative table settings. Polished red apples or small pumpkins, for instance, can be used for candleholders. At Christmastime, Neumayer takes tapers, anchors them in a clump of clay, and surrounds them with be-ribboned candy canes, like spokes on a wheel.

Tiny wreaths (available at Paperama on Broad Street) can also double as candleholders.

A large wreath of any kind can be used to hold a round serving dish on a buffet table. "Poke a few leaves into the wreath and serve vegetables from it," Neumayer suggests.

A wheel of brie also looks festive set inside a wreath. Suggested decorations at this time of year are grapes and nuts. At Christmas, the decorations can be changed to holly and red berries.

"Literally everything we do is thrown together," Neumayer says. "Nothing requires a great deal of talent." Talent: maybe not. But imagination, certainly.

Get that derriere in shipshape

No more ifs, ands or butts to a flatter fanny

By Frances Sheridan Goulart

What body part do only 9 percent of all women feel confident about? No butts about it — it's our backsides. In a recent survey, 91 percent of all women between the ages of 18 and 35 told pollsters they felt they looked better fully clothed in the rear.

No wonder! On any given day in the U.S., one out of six of us sit down with a good book and a snack but only one in 10 goes for a good fat-reductive run. And the bottom line is that our bottoms only get wider, and age doesn't help.

The average woman puts on three pounds with every passing five years and what doesn't wind up on her hips or thighs winds up on her derriere. These are the female body's three hot spots for fat.

If you'd like to have an uncanny fanny, but your derriere is taking a backseat to the rest of your fine points, there's plenty you can do. The first step is to cheer up. The good news is that hip-shape buttocks only rank No. 6 as the female feature that first catches a man's eye (No. 1 is overall figure, No. 2 is a pretty face).

The second step is to get started on a good fanny-flattening program. Here are some tips:

1. Make less of that cushy tush through the magic of non-huff-and-puff calisthenics. You can trim off up to three inches, says fitness expert Maggie Lettvin, using her four-step multipurpose exercise faithfully and follow a prudent diet. It tightens up the loose muscles that lead to a droopy derriere, says the author of "The Beautiful Machine":

• Press the small of the back firmly to the floor and place a pillow beneath head and buttocks.

• Start the exercise with knees bent, then let them fall out away from each other; slowly tighten buttock muscles and hold. Release and repeat for 10 minutes.

• When you have been comfortably doing the exercise for 10 minutes, slide your feet down a little farther — 3 or 4 inches. Slowly tighten bottom muscles again and keep the small of your back right to the floor. Keep repeating, stretching your feet farther forward each day or week, as you are able.

• Stretch legs out almost straight. Place one foot over the other and push down with the top foot, then pull up with the bottom foot. Alternate feet and repeat for a total of 10 to 15 minutes daily.

When you aren't exercising, work on proper posture. That can also give you a sleeker rear silhouette.

2. Bag those baggy pants, say consultants Gerrie Pinkey and Marge Swenson. Here are a few tips from the authors of "New Image for Women":

• Wear soft garments in medium to thin fabrics with moderate fullness that doesn't hug any part of the body. Gathered shirtwaists, not too blousy caftans and gored and A-line skirts, suits with long jackets over-the-hip and sweaters that stop at your bottom are the most flattering.

3. The perfect pair of buns by Miss America standards measure roughly 37 inches (hips included). One reason Miss A's measure up and yours don't? She skips dessert and skips rope instead.

Three other aerobics workout that do the most to make the least of your derriere? Try aerobic dancing, brisk walking (including uphill) and stair climbing. Good fat-burning aerobics like these can speed your fat metabolism up to 16 times its normal testing rate, says the Aerobics & Fitness Association of Sherman Oaks, Calif. Aim for 30 minutes a day.

4. Try Loni Anderson's rear-in-gear bump-and-grind while you're doing stationary household chores such as washing dishes or fixing meals. To make it twice as effective, do it to fast music. While standing, pull in your buttocks muscles as hard as you can, then let them go in rhythm to the music. Pull them in again and release. Alternate this with tummy muscle tightening in bump-and-grind fashion.

5. Five mistakes filmdom's four famous fannies — Harlow, Grable, Lamour and Monroe — never made and you shouldn't either if you have an ample-parking-in-the-rear type of rear: wearing pencil-slim skirts, tight knit pants and hip-huggies, extra-wide or wrapped belts, a tunic or peplum jacket and horizontally striped skirts, dresses or dance wear.

6. Exercise while you walk, climb and sit, suggests executive exercise consultant Charles T. Kentzleman. Here are four in-and-out-of-the-armchair calisthenics that minimize droopy derriere and saddlebags and prevent secretary spread:

• Step up on a bench or chair; stand erect; step down; do for three minutes at a rate of 24 steps to the minute.

• Enroute to the office, get off elevator five floors early, walk up the stairs.

• Sit sideways in an armless chair, arms at sides, holding onto the back of the chair for balance. Raise legs off floor, lean upper body back slightly, move legs as if riding a bicycle. Keep legs extended. Keep back slightly rounded. Do five to 10 times.

• Stand with right side to the back of your chair, right hand on the backrest. Keep body erect, legs straight. Lift left leg out and up as far as possible. Lower leg. Reverse. Do exercise with each leg 15 to 20 minutes or as long as you can.

7. Be realistic. Fanny fitness is tougher if you're the wrong body type, says The Fashion Institute of America. Mesomorphs — athletic, muscular, big boned and broadhipped — have the most trouble (Ursula Andress-Dolly Parton types), falling into a pear-shaped derriere.

For thin boned long-legged Shelly Duval-Twiggy types — ectomorphs — it's a cinch. The right clothes camouflage what you can't change. And whatever you do — invest in a three-sided full-length mirror that gives you a good rear view. Don't go out the door without a good how-do-I-look? look.

8. To baby your bottom, spurge on sezier lingerie and smooth on this recipe from one of Europe's most famous rejuvenation spas. It not only helps prevent "crocodile skin," it alleviates boils, the only skin infection that an ample backside is susceptible to. You can also use it as a facial lubricant.

BOTTOMS UP BOTTOM MOISTURIZER

3 tablespoons avocado
1 capsule vitamin E (opened and drained)
1/2 teaspoon wheat germ oil

3 tablespoons plain yogurt
Place all ingredients in a blender and puree for 20 seconds. Apply to clean face in small dabs and smooth on. After five minutes, rinse off with warm water. Splash face with cold water for a second rinse. Pat face dry. Refrigerate.

9. Last but not least, forget those fanny-fattening foods. "Calories you don't need will widen your fanny faster than any other female body part — with the exception of your hips and upper legs," warns Jamie Lee Curtis, who has the pattest fanny in Hollywood. ■

21 The Curious Shopper

What causes pops when opening tops?

By Sonja Heinze

I bought a six-pack of Mauna Loa macadamia nuts in Hawaii and upon opening one of the cans by peeling back the sealed top, it let loose with a bang so loud I jumped a foot high. I didn't eat them, or course. Would they be toxic? They smelled funny, too. The other cans were all right. Connie Green, Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

Whenever you encounter anything out of the ordinary when opening a box, can or bottle of any product that is to be ingested, either return the product to the store or send a letter to the manufacturer stating when and where the item was purchased along with any code number stamped on the packaging.

Yolanda Santos-King of the Mauna Loa Company claims that what you described is rare, and that most likely the loud bang was produced because of a defective pull top on the vacuum-packed tin, and not from deteriorated nuts. If the nuts had a funny odor, however, quite possibly the tin was defective. Ordinarily the tins have a shelf life of two years.

If you still have the tin, send the information to Mauna Loa Marketing Co., 1833 Kalakaua Ave., Suite 200, Honolulu, Hawaii 96815.

COMPOSER OF MUSIC IN WINE COMMERCIAL
Would you be able to find the title and composer of the background music of the Ernest and Julio Gallo wine commercial currently airing on TV? I think it's one of the best commercials I've seen and would like to acquire this music for my collection. Irma Falls, Nicholson, Pa.

The music you are looking for was specially arranged for the commercial and is not on a record as such. But the television arrangement you like so much is based on a composition entitled "Hymne" by Vangelis, who also arranged for Vangelis the commercial. "Hymne" is on an album called "Opera Sauvage" by Vangelis and is currently being sold in major record stores throughout the country. It's available on either the Warner Brothers or Poly Gram label. For your information, Vangelis also composed the music for "Chariots of Fire."

CHAP-STICK ADDICT?
My son has been using Chap-Stick on his lips for the past year and says he can't live without it. He does not live in a climate nor do any kind of work which would predispose him to having dry lips. He thinks he's addicted to it but says he can't bear the dryness of his lips if he stops using it. Is this is addictive, what can he do to stop?

Patricia Hubbard of A.H. Robins consumer services claims that "in no way are the ingredients in our lip balm addictive."

"Loyal Chap-Stick users," says Hubbard, "become accustomed to the way our product makes their lips feel."

While the ingredients in Chap-Stick may not be addictive in a drug-related sense, your son apparently has become a "loyal Chap-Stick user" who has become accustomed to the product, having developed a compulsive physiologic need for it. Advise your son to switch to Vaseline petroleum jelly to kick the habit.

WHAT IS TOFU?
What is tofu? How is it made, and what of? What is it supposed to be substituted for? Mrs. O.M.W., Payette, Idaho

Tofu is made from raw soybeans which are soaked, drained and then ground into a puree. After the puree is cooked and strained, it's curdled by adding calcium sulfate, which is derived from seaweed or gypsum. Curds and whey are formed, much as the way cheese is made. Then the curds are put into a tub, pressed and cut into cakes. The cakes are stored in water.

Tofu can be used as a substitute for meat, cheese and eggs. It's high in protein, low in fat and has no added salt. Although it's very bland tasting, it absorbs flavors from other foods and therefore is often used as a protein extender.

For instance, if you like two eggs for breakfast but would like to cut down on cholesterol, you can use one egg and scramble tofu along with it. You can mash it up with peanut butter and spread it on bread. You can marinate it, stir fry it, make dips out of it and even turn it into mayonnaise. It's easily digested.

If any readers have hit upon some interesting ways of using tofu, please share your ideas with us.

Jane Powell, Indian Beach, Fla.: "I use it for my garden. It makes a good addition to the compost heap, or just mix it in the soil and watch the flowers improve."

Melinda Gwinn, Mundeletn, Ill.: "I have several iron skillet, and after each use I rub them down with just enough fat to coat them. This keeps them from rusting between use and also prevents sticking when cooking." ■

Meatloaf has party appeal if it's fancy

By Shirley E. Sump

Who said that meat loaf can't be an interesting, tasty party dish? It makes a perfect party entree. It is easy to prepare and can be made ahead of time. It also can be made as festive or as fancy as you desire. You can make it with a variety of meats and dress it up with sauces. Besides tasting great, it can help the party budget.

The Greeks were among the first to prepare meat loaves, when it was discovered that minced meat cooked faster. The Romans enjoyed the Greek dish, but soon came up with their own creative ways to prepare it. Recipes using fish, meats, fruits and nuts can be found in an ancient cookbook by Apicius.

The Romans helped spread the idea for making meat loaf to other countries. People accepted the dish, partly because the fork had not been invented and it was easier to eat. It quickly became a favorite, as each country turned out its own versions. No matter which of the following recipes you prepare, you can turn out delicious meat loaves for an extra-special party entree.

The Danes are best known for their beloved Frikadellar, meatballs. They make many delicious dishes using ground meat. Serve this meat loaf, Danish style, with sugar-browned potatoes, cucumber salad, braised red cabbage, crusty rolls and apple cake.

DUMPLING STEAK
1 pound lean ground beef
1 pound ground pork

3 large onions, chopped fine
5 tomatoes, skinned and chopped
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon dried parsley flakes
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 tomato, cut into quarters for garnish
2 sprigs of parsley for garnish

Preheat oven to 375F. Mix beef and pork with the onions and tomatoes. Add the salt, pepper, paprika and parsley flakes. Form the meat mixture into a large round dumpling and set it in a well-greased casserole. Dot the top of meat with specks of butter. Bake 1 hour. Decorate the finished meat loaf with tomato quarters and parsley sprigs, if desired.

Makes 6 servings.

Sure, there is a lot more to Mexican cuisine than tacos and tamales. A flavorful accompaniment to this meat loaf is a tossed salad combining lettuce, avocado, onions and oranges, cornbread and chocolate dessert.

MEXICAN MEAT LOAF
2 1/2 pounds ground beef
3 cups shredded Cheddar cheese
2 cups tomato juice
1 large onion, chopped
2 eggs, beaten
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon salt

Turn out delicious meat loaves for an extra-special party entree.

1/4 teaspoon black pepper
8 cups corn chips
sliced pimiento-stuffed olives

Preheat oven to 350F. In large bowl, combine beef, 2 cups cheese, tomato juice, onion, eggs, garlic, chili powder, salt and pepper; mix well. Slightly crush 4 cups corn chips; mix well into meat mixture. Spread in a 9 x 13 x 2-inch baking dish. Bake 50 minutes. Remove from oven. Spoon off drippings. Top with remaining chips; sprinkle with remaining cheese. Return to oven 5 to 10 minutes or until cheese melts. Garnish with olives.

Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Swedes love meat, and they are innovators here. This may look like just a meat loaf on the outside, but it's something else inside — a piquant and juicy blend of beef and pork with finely diced beets and chopped onions. Serve with mashed potatoes, carrots au gratin, baked beans, pickled cucumbers and apple dessert.

SWEDISH MEAT LOAF
(Kottfars a la Lindstrom)
1 pound ground beef
1 pound ground pork
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1/2 cup milk
2 eggs, beaten
2 teaspoons white vinegar
1 medium onion, minced
1 cup finely chopped drained beets, canned
2 tablespoons dried parsley flakes
1 teaspoon dried dillweed

1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

Preheat oven to 350F. Combine all the ingredients in a large mixing bowl and with your hands, mix together thoroughly. Pack into a 9 x 5 x 3-inch loaf pan. Bake 1 1/2 hours, until loaf shrinks from edges of pan. Spoon off drippings. Let stand 10 minutes.

Transfer to a serving dish with two broad spatulas. Cut into slices to serve.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

While this dish originated in Scotland as a food for breakfast, this variation makes a delightful main dish. Serve with scalloped potatoes, buttered Brussels sprouts, fruit salad and butterscotch meringue pie.

SCOTCH MEAT LOAF
1 pound ground beef
1/2 pound bulk pork sausage
1/2 cup dry bread crumbs
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon dried parsley flakes
1/2 teaspoon ground sage
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup milk
1/4 cup ketchup
1 egg, beaten
6 hard-cooked eggs, peeled

Preheat oven to 375F. Combine ground beef, sausage, bread crumbs, onion, parsley, sage, salt, milk, ketchup and beaten egg in bowl. Mix together lightly but thoroughly. Divide into six equal portions. Press each portion around a hard-cooked egg, forming a loaf. Place in a shallow roasting pan.

Bake 35 to 40 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

This meat loaf — the traditional Sunday lunch in Berlin — is sometimes made in the shape of a cowering rabbit; but otherwise the dish has nothing to do with wild game. Serve with small boiled potatoes rolled in melted butter and parsley, sauerkraut, rye bread and a fruited gelatin dessert.

MOCK HARE
(Falscher Hase)
1/2 pound lean ground beef
1 pound ground pork
1/2 pound bulk pork sausage
1 large onion, chopped
3 slices of bread soaked in milk
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon dried marjoram
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

Preheat oven to 350F. Combine all the ingredients in a large mixing bowl and mix together thoroughly.

In a shallow roasting pan, with dampened hands shape meat mixture into a firm, slightly long, flattened shape to resemble the body of a hare. Rinse your hands in cold water. Smooth surface of meat loaf with wet hands. Bake 1 hour. Arrange the "mock hare" on a serving platter and surround with potatoes.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

This flavorful meat loaf from Greece is perfect with a country-style salad of lettuce, cheese, tomatoes and black olives. Serve with crusty bread and lemon cheesecake. ■

The Clark's

By Sondra Astor Stave

Even without the note on the menu announcing that The Clark's at 32 North St. in Willimantic was founded in 1949, one has a sense of immediate post World War II. The polished real wood paneled walls and floored wallpaper are pre-modern and present a pleasing solidness. The menu is classic American food with no surprises. Some of it is good, some of it less so. But the overall spirit is of generosity, causing one to leave satisfied, certain that both kitchen and waiting staff really cared.

I think one must be very cranky not to appreciate gifts and from the moment one arrives, through the meal to the free coffee, The Clark's augments what you order with something extra. While pondering the menu, there is a basket of three kinds of crackers (the breadsticks are delicious), whipped butter and an additive soft cheddar cheese spread. A few minutes later, they are joined by a small, soft loaf of bread.

Appetizers are a mixed lot. A crock of French onion soup au gratin is pleasant and hot enough for even those with asbestos-lined mouths. The broth contains a generous amount of onion slices and although the bread within is perhaps too soft, the cheese topping successfully pulls it all together.

Baked mussels with garlic butter cannot be faulted for flavor or texture and the garlicky smell is invitingly pungent. But one cannot help but wonder: with mussels that week at 40 cents a pound, three to the portion, even these large ones appear insufficient and over-priced at $3.95.

Quality is the issue in a cup of clam chowder. There seems to be more uncooked flour in this pallid and very thick emulsion than either clams or potatoes.

Both the bleu cheese and creamy garlic house dressing taste familiar (perhaps several restaurants are sharing the same bottle) but nevertheless good. However, the brown edging on some of the lettuce on our visit suggested that more attention needs to be paid to the salad bowl.

A relish tray with an interesting sweet sauerkraut, bean salad and pickled peaches is a challenge to the waitress's talents to get it all to fit on our table.

Best of the main dishes is the sirloin steak, a substantial piece of meat with just the right amount of resistance to the teeth. Accompanied by good french fries and three real onion rings, it is a most satisfactory plate.

Less pleasing is the veal cutlet parmigiana, a somewhat offtasting rendition of the Italian classic.

Most disappointing is the lobster newburg, the shellfish a minefield of cartilage, the sauce underseasoned. The rice pilaf with it is either creamed or au gratin. Green beans were the vegetable of the day when we visited, and while they were still crunchy, they had the unmistakable taste of a frozen vegetable. All the more a shame as fresh ones were available that week at the grocery.

But again, there are the gifts, this time crisp surfaced, soft interior corn fritters served with wonderfully maple syrup. With such an assortment of food, one must find something to like.

Desserts continue the return to the '50s with double fudge chocolate cake and deep dish apple pie. The former consists of three dark brown cake layers filled with a buttercream frosting. The pie is sparse of pastry but chock full of cinnamon apples and topped with a complimentary scoop of vanilla ice cream. Best of the desserts is the lemon sherbert, not too tart, not too sweet and thoroughly creamy. The dozen plus appetizers at The Clark's range from $1.50 for soup to $4.50 for a shrimp cocktail. The 17 main dishes on the regular menu are augmented by 10 specials varying from $7.50 to $19.95. Desserts run $1 to $2.25.

Dinner at The Clark's is homey with lots of food and caring service. If you're nostalgic for the feel of the '50s or young enough to wonder what it was like, The Clark's will provide a clue. ■
