HARTFORD COURANT ENDORSEMENT

"Voters would be well advised to re-elect Republican Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, 48, a Realtor, in the 4th Senate District in Manchester, Glastonbury, Hebron, Bolton and Columbia. This common-sense chairman of the Energy and Public Utilities Committee worked unsuccessfully last term for a bill to disbar attorneys convicted of felonies. Blunt, honest and conservative, Mr. Zinsser often shapes his party's views, and isn't afraid to stand alone when need be."

Leaders say charter vote up for grabs

By Alex Girelli Associate Editor

Most leaders in Manchester's charter-revision battle this morning predicted a close vote on the controversial referendum Question 4, which has divided townspeople into warring camps in the past few months.

dicted the vote would be close, but said the majority will vote in favor of the charter change. He said that no matter what the outcome of the vote, the posture of consolidation proponents will be to "let things settle down."

The Democratic majority on the Board of Directors has established some conditions for consolidation and will stick by them if the vote is in favor of the change, he said. He said retention of a volunteer fire department is one of those conditions.

"I think a narrow vote in favor is going to make it even more difficult," he said. "It is going to take a lot of patience."

Wallace Irish, a STEAL member who has been active in the fight against changing the Town Charter, declined to make a prediction.

"My heart says we are going to win, but I really don't know," Irish said. "We're getting a lot of good vibes."

Polls favor O'Neill but Belaga sees win

By Judd Everhart The Associated Press

HARTFORD - Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill was favored to defeat Republican Julie D. Belaga heading into Election Day, but the challenger refused to give up hope, insisting, "It's going to happen."

Some 1.67 million Connecticut residents were eligible to vote today. Secretary of the State Julia H. Tashjian said she expected about a 70 percent turnout, or about 1.1 million. Polls were to be open today until 8 p.m.

O'Neill spent Monday working the telephones, calling Democratic town chairmen and other officials. "I feel very good" about winning, O'Neill said.

But during a campaign stop in Bridgeport, Belaga said: "The vibes are terrific. It's exhilarating. We have a lead."

The O'Neill-Belaga race has been heated at times as Belaga tried to paint the incumbent as a weak leader whose administration is built on cronyism.

O'Neill's campaign was based on a "Connecticut is working" theme that emphasized the state's healthy economy. O'Neill outspent Belaga by roughly $2 million to $1 million, a record in total spending in a Connecticut gubernatorial race.

The most recent political poll, conducted by the University of Connecticut and released Friday,

Many want 8th to keep its power

An informal poll of Manchester voters at four polling stations outside the Eighth District - Keeney Street School and Nathan Hale School - also rejected the question, the informal survey found.

"Ten people voted against Question 4 and five voted yes, the exit poll found."

"It's not broken why fix it?" asked a woman at Nathan Hale School who did not want her name used.

"I used to live in the North End and my husband was a firefighter, so I know how those people feel," Pat Fales of Norman Street said after casting her vote at Nathan Hale School.

"I believe if the town had control of the whole thing, taxes would go up," Allan Lunn of Cambridge Street said after voting at Waddell School. Lunn said he voted mostly for Democratic candidates, but went against the recommendation of the Democratic Town Committee and opposed changing the charter.

Of four people interviewed in about 20 minutes there, all said they voted against Question 4. At Robertson School, though, two of five people interviewed said they support changing the town charter and pushing ahead with consolidation.

"I've seen consolidation work in the town of Vernon," said one Hilliard Street man, who declined to give his name.

Roland Newcomb of Phelps Road said he voted against charter revision because he was suspicious of what the leaders of the charter change effort would do if the question were approved.

"I'd like to know what (Democratic town Director Stephen) Penny and (Democratic Town Chairman Theodore R.) Cummings got out of it," said Newcomb.

Handful of races mean Senate control

WASHINGTON (AP) - Voters are electing senators in 34 states today, but it is only a relative handful of close or dead-heat races that will determine whether Democrats regain full control of Congress.

Fully half the contests are that name only and many others would fall into the major upset category if the underdog wins.

Take Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, for example. His Democratic opponent mounted the kind of challenge that prompted Dole to leave most of his campaign money in the bank.

That leaves Dole, a potential presidential candidate in the next national election, paying more attention to places like Florida and Alabama and Louisiana than to his own returns.

As the evening wears on, the Kansas Republican is likely to be intensely interested in Nevada, California and Washington for the final word on whether he will keep the "majority" in his title.

For after a campaign marked by massive spending and nasty television mudslinging by candidates of both parties, it is voters in a few states who will decide whether Democrats regain the Senate majority they lost in the landslide that swirled Ronald Reagan into the White House six years ago.

And although Republicans hoped that Reagan's political magic as campaigner-in-chief would prove the controlling factor in preserving the GOP majority, many of their leaders stressed the historical and numerical odds against them as they prepared to explain a defeat.

Historically, the party of a two-term incumbent president fares poorly in the off-year election held in his second term, a phenomenon sometimes called the "six-year itch."

In midterm elections at the six-year point of a presidency, the party in control of the White House has lost an average of about seven seats in the Senate. The smallest such previous loss of seats was four in 1966 which, coincidentally, is the number the Democrats need to erase the current 53-47 majority.

This year, Republicans were faced with defending far more seats - 22 to the Democrats 12 - simply because of the party's

Judge waits for motion in Copas case

Copas was scheduled to be sentenced today, but no sentencing report had not yet been completed. The attorney for Copas is expected to file for a change of plea before that date. Copas, who pleaded guilty Oct. 8 to murdering Bleu, faces a maximum sentence of 60 years in prison. He has already changed his plea twice. He originally pleaded guilty to Bleu's murder in April, then changed his plea to innocent in June. Copas, who has been held at the Brooklyn Correctional Center since his arrest, was charged with stabbing and hitting Bleu on the head April 25, then dragging her into a wooded area off Hop River Road in Coventry while she was still thrashing around and moaning. Bleu's battered body was found April 27 in a wooded area near the Hop River. An autopsy showed she had been stabbed 11 times and suffered blows to the head that left skull fractures, according to a police affidavit. The autopsy also revealed that Bleu had engaged in sexual activity sometime in the hours before her death. About five relatives of Bleu's watched the court proceedings this morning. All indicated they wanted Copas to get the maximum sentence. "He's just stalling," said Bleu's grandfather, Joseph Toth of Storrs. "They should take him out and shoot him like a dog."

Remember to vote today - polls remain open until 8 p.m.

Vote, Or Else!

If voter trends persist, less than half of all eligible voters will cast ballots in today's election. Voter participation is typically low in off-year elections. In some nations, however, voting is compulsory. Governments in Australia, Belgium and Ecuador all require citizens to vote. Anyone who fails to do so may be fined, and repeat offenders may even risk disfranchisement. Some American colonies had compulsory voting laws, but enforcement was poor.

Santa in Indiana goes to the dogs

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) - Christmas isn't going to the dogs, but pet owners can help Santa raise some money for the financially troubled animal shelter. The Humane Society has persuaded Santa to pose with pets for seasonal photos, with the proceeds going to the shelter. The financial problems could force the shelter, which operates on donations, to close by the end of the month, said society vice president Helen Jasper. The pictures will be taken Friday, Saturday and Sunday at a cost of $10 for two 4-by-6-inch color pictures, Jasper said. Area veterinarians will play Santa.

Stallone sued

A Utah man has filed a $105 million lawsuit against actor-filmmaker Sylvester Stallone and MGM-UA Studio, alleging the script for "Rocky IV" was based on a plot he submitted in 1982.

The Los Angeles Superior Court lawsuit, which also names studio president Freddie Fields and executives Dean Stieber and Frank Yablans as defendants, was filed by attorney James Pagnius on behalf of Tim Anderson. It seeks $5 million in general damages and $100 million in punitive damages.

Stallone's attorney, Jacob Bloom, was in a meeting and unavailable for comment Monday afternoon. Phone calls to the studio's legal affairs department were not returned.

The actor's publicist, Paul Bloch, said he hadn't seen the suit and could not comment on it. Stallone is out of the state and unavailable for comment.

Tammy has enough

Country music singer Tammy Wynette has canceled her concerts for the rest of the year and will be hospitalized for about six weeks trying to overcome a drug problem, her publicist says.

Wynette, 44, blames a dependency on prescription painkillers on recurring health problems, including a stomach ailment for which she had surgery in 1983, spokesman Kent Arwood said Monday.

"It's not an addiction but it's a problem they wanted to nip in the bud before it got out of hand," he said.

Wynette, known for the hits "D-I-V-O-R-C-E" and "Stand By Your Man," will be treated at the Betty Ford Center in Palm Springs, Calif., said Arwood, of Kathy Ganzwich and Associates of Kansas City.

No Wonder

A songwriter's copyright suit against singer Stevie Wonder was dismissed by a judge in Los Angeles who ruled there was no evidence the entertainer had access to the song before he wrote "I Just Called to Say I Love You."

U.S. District Judge David Williams' decision was announced Monday by Wonder's attorney, Jack Whitley II, who said most of the copyright infringement suit over the Academy Award-winning song was dismissed by Williams on Aug. 8.

The suit, filed in October 1985, alleged that Wonder's song was lifted from a tune called "Hello It's Me," written by Lee Garrett and Lloyd Chateau.

Wonder and Garrett co-wrote in 1970 the hit song "Signed, Sealed, Delivered, I'm Yours."

Actress Gilda Radner says she is recovering from the removal of a malignant cyst from an ovary.

Mayor orders nativity scenes

By Alex Girelli
Associate Editor

Manchester Mayor Barbara Weinberg ordered two nativity scenes Monday to replace the ones that were destroyed in a recent fire at Center Springs Lodge.

The scenes, ordered from Melnick's Display and Decorating of East Hartford, will be delivered in four to six weeks, so it could be mid-December before they are in place at the center of town and in the North End.

On Friday, a group comprising officials and interested Manchester residents decided to buy figures for the two scenes after representatives of the Savings Bank of Manchester and the Manchester Board of Realtors offered to loan the approximately $13,500 needed to pay for them. A public fund drive will be held to repay at least some of the money.

Daniel Reale, a member of the Realtors' board of directors, said Friday he thought the Realtors might be willing to make good on the board plans to provide a gift.

And on Monday, board President Frank Strano said he will recommend to fellow Realtors that the money be donated. "I think it would be a good public service project," Strano said.

The Savings Bank of Manchester plans to donate $1,000 and loan $9,000.

At the meeting Friday, Kenneth Lappen, secretary-treasurer of the Manchester Association of Insurance Agents, told officials that the association might be willing to underwrite the cost of insuring the figures.

William Johnson, SBM's president, has suggested that the scenes be owned by someone other than the town so they could be insured more easily. Because the town is largely self-insured, it has a $50,000 deductible on its fire insurance and could not collect for loss of the burned figures.

While the larger figures in the two scenes were damaged beyond repair in the lodge fire on Oct. 17, some of the smaller animals may be salvageable. Robert Digan, director of the town's Youth Services Bureau, said he will try to arrange to have some of the young people served by the bureau clean and repaint the figures deemed salvageable.

The fire is presumed to have resulted from arson, police and fire officials say. They reported nothing new in their investigation this morning.

The scenes were originally purchased from the proceeds of a public fund drive and donated to the town. They were displayed during Christmas at the center of town and in Robertson Park.

Since the fire, some controversy has arisen about where the new scenes are to be displayed. One of the fund-drive leaders wants the new scene for the center of town displayed on municipal property.

At the meeting Friday, Kenneth Lappen, secretary-treasurer of the Judge hears arguments on Route 6

An appeals court decision is expected in about a month on a request by opponents of the proposed Route 6 highway that would stop the state from acquiring homes and property for the 11.8-mile road. Assistant Attorney General Kathryn Mobley said this morning.

Mobley, who argued before the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals in New York Monday in favor of continuing the fight against the highway, said it is hopeful the three-judge panel will rule in the state's favor. However, she said the decision could go either way.

"I have no idea what the court will do," Mobley said. "The court was very concerned about the plaintiffs losing their property."

Thirty-eight homeowners and the Eastern Connecticut Citizen Action Group, which has helped lead the fight against the $70 million highway project, filed a federal lawsuit in March seeking to stop the state Department of Transportation from taking property. They argued that the acquisitions were not proper because the road has not received final approval.

Before construction can begin, the DOT must receive environmental permits from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the state Department of Environmental Protection. Decisions on both are still pending.

In July, U.S. District Court Judge Jose Cabranes dismissed the highway opponents' suit on the grounds that the actual construction had not begun. Opponents appealed the decision, arguing that the lawsuit is timely because the road has not received final approval.

South Windsor mall appeal to continue

By John F. Kirsh
Herald Reporter

The developers of the Mall at Buckland Hills, faced with a legal challenge to the vital state traffic permit they acquired, said today they are confident they will prevail in court against the town of South Windsor, which is trying to block the project.

Their comments came after a Hartford Superior Court judge denied a motion filed by the developers that would have blocked South Windsor's challenge of the traffic permit.

South Windsor is appealing the State Traffic Commission's decision to grant the Homart Development Corp. of Chicago the permit to build the mall. The appeal claims the commission did not consider the mall's impact on roads in South Windsor.

The town also charged that the STC failed to hold a public hearing on the project before granting the permit.

When the STC granted Homart the traffic permit, it required 33 road improvements around the mall site, most of them in Manchester.

Hartford attorney Michael D. Neupert, who represents Homart, filed two motions earlier this year to block South Windsor's appeal. Those motions were denied Monday by Judge Norris L. O'Neill, Neupert said.

However, Neupert said the developers were not surprised by the action and were sure they would win the court case. No court date has been set.

"I'm confident it (the State Traffic Commission permit) will stand," Neupert said. "It doesn't change anything. They (South Windsor) still have the burden of proof."

The permit is needed to build the proposed 785,000-square-foot Mall at Buckland Hills, which would be located mostly in South Windsor with some parking in Manchester.

Those plans were dropped when Homart and Melvin Simon agreed to build just one mall and act as partners on the Buckland Hills development in Manchester. By that time, the Winchester Mall had been reduced in size to 400,000 square feet.

Andover warned on inspections

Builder says part-timers can't keep up with load

By George Lovng
Herald Reporter

ANDOVER - The town should hire a full-time employee to handle building and sanitation inspections because the current part-time strategy is not keeping up with the local housing boom, a builder told the Board of Selectmen Monday.

"We just can't survive the way we're doing it now," said Paul Jurovaty Jr. of Tiger Lee Construction Co. "You have enough things opening up in the next three to four years ... that you need a full-time person."

Jurovaty said he has had difficulty arranging inspections with the part-time building inspector and sanitarian. On a number of occasions, the inspectors did not show up when they were supposed to, Jurovaty said, and he did not know how to contact them.

"There is nothing wrong with either (Building Inspector) Fred Chmura or (Sanitarian) Paul Hutcheon doing their job (or their knowledge of the job)," Jurovaty said during the selectmen's meeting at the Town Office Building.

But Andover needs a full-time employee to handle the positions, he said. "The town is growing, and we can't play these little games with part-timers," Jurovaty said. First Selectwoman Jean S. Gasper agreed that changes are probably necessary. But she said hiring a full-time employee or increasing the hours of the two positions can't be done until a new budget is drafted next spring.

The current inspectors each work about a week at a time, Jurovaty complained that he has been unable to install electricity at a home he is building on Burnap Brook Road because Chmura has been away from town and his substitute is not qualified to sign a wiring certificate. He said he wants to get that certificate signed as soon as possible so he can install heat and do interior work on the building.

Gasper said Chmura is scheduled to return on Wednesday, and Jurovaty agreed to have the certificate signed that morning.

But the builder warned that between 150 and 200 homes will probably be constructed in An-

Access Improvements are coming

ANDOVER - With $22,000 in state surplus money scheduled to arrive within two weeks, the Board of Selectmen decided Monday to obtain cost estimates for the installation of handicapped-access ramps at the Town Office Building and the Andover Public Library.

"It's up to us now to go out" to get quotes, First Selectwoman Jean S. Gasper told board members. "I'd like to see something at the library before the snow flies."

If the money is being distributed to the town under the Town Improvement Program.

Andover's plans for using the funds were approved by a local allocation council comprising the town's state legislators. At a September public hearing, townspeople backed the idea of building the access ramps.

At the library, a cement ramp will be built leading to the front door and a sidewalk will extend to the rear parking lot, according to preliminary plans discussed by the board. At the Town Office Building, a wooden ramp will be built to the rear door, which will have to be widened to allow for wheelchair.

Selling skis doesn't seem likely when everyone else is wearing bathing suits and stocking up on suntan lotion. But selling skis—lots of skis—is exactly what Win-Sum Sports did when we advertised on United Cable Television. By coincidence, our ski sale ad on United Cable aired during the season's first heat spell. Beach weather or not, our ad worked. And it was the only ad promoting the ski sale we used—in any medium. When customer after customer walked through our door asking about our ski sale, I knew United Cable was doing its job. Cost effective, geographically specific ads that target the consumers we want to reach. That's good advertising. And that's exactly what United Cable has to offer.

MHS booters eliminated from state tourney

WESTPORT - It was not the kind of season when you think about Manchester High soccer. The Indians, over the years, have been one of the better schools in the state of Connecticut. But the year 1986 was not kind to Manchester and it came to an end Monday as the Indians fell to Staples High, 1-0, in a state Class LL qualifying round clash.

John Walker found Tim Doran at the top of the penalty area on the right side and he blistered the game-winner home. "Staples likes to work the diagonal ball. He (Walker) hit it to the right side of the penalty area," McCarthy recalled the winning goal.

Staples, after going 3-3-1 in its first seven games, has won seven of eight games. The lone setback was a 2-1 reversal to Brien McMahon in the Fairfield County Interscholastic Athletic Conference championship game. "Staples plays in the tough FCAC and had a real good year. Our kids can hold their heads up high," McCarthy said of his team's play.

Dickerson and Rams overcome the Bears

By Mario Fox The Associated Press CHICAGO - Eric Dickerson won the battle of the running backs from Walter Payton. More importantly, he helped the Los Angeles Rams win their battle with the Chicago Bears.

Chicago's Dennis Gentry returned the ensuing kickoff 84 yards. Two plays later, Payton's replacement, Thomas Sanders, ran 10 yards for the tying touchdown. On the next series, Gary Fencik intercepted a Dilts' pass and returned it to the Rams' 34. On the first play after the interception, Sanders galloped 34 yards for his second TD to put the Bears ahead.

East began the second half in fine fashion, getting some good scoring chances, but it was unable to capitalize. On a quick counter-attack, the first half ended up with a 1-0 Bristol advantage.

Nothing is more irritating for a defender than to realize that he made the play that allowed declarer to succeed in an ambitious contract. This happened in today's deal, but we still have to extend a "well done" to declarer for good card reading and play execution.

He could now ruff dummy's last heart with his ace of diamonds, overtake his queen of diamonds with dummy's king and play the 10 of diamonds to pick up West's last trump. At the same time, he shed his losing small club, leaving himself with the good A-Q and his contract.

Diminutive Morris big figure in Giants' offense

By Tom Conovon
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — He's intense, private and at times feels misunderstood. At 5-foot-7, he also has been called small or little on several occasions.

But Joe Morris is the major factor in the New York Giants' offense these days, and after Sunday's NFL game, he was the second-leading rusher in the league after his second straight 101-yard game.

Morris' 886-yard rushing total put him 150 yards behind Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams. Morris' total has been accomplished in only eight games. He missed one game because of an allergic reaction to medication.

"I don't think Joe is running significantly different," Ray

Handley, the coach of the Giants' running backs, said. "Like any sport, a professional gets in a groove, and he's seeing everything and making all the right cuts."

Morris made a lot of right cuts last year, rushing for 1,227 yards and 13 touchdowns in a club-record 1,338 yards and 21 touchdowns, both Giants' records.

Through nine games last season, he had 573 yards, or he is ahead of that pace.

However, it has taken Morris most of the first half of the season to reach the point where he left off last season. He missed almost all of training camp because of a contract dispute, and had an added worry as his wife prepared to give birth to their first child.

During training camp, he had a run-in with a reporter who called him a runt at his home, and the two engaged in a shouting match a couple of days later.

Morris' problems with the media continued last week when he refused to talk to the press after gaining 101 yards against Washington, tying the second-best performance in his five-year career with the Giants.

"Last week, one of the people in the press questioned whether I could gain 50 yards against the Redskins," Morris said. "Then they said we weren't going to score a point against the Redskins. You take that personally. I just go out and show people I can play football."

There have been questions about Morris' ability to play in the NFL. Given the opportunity, Morris gained 510 yards in the closing stages, and had the starting job as Woolfolk was dealt to Houston.

Morris has talked with the press more this season, and he gave a rare insight into himself when speaking about linebacker Sam Mills of the New Orleans Saints recently. Mills is 5-9 and one of the shortest linebackers in the league.

"Sam Mills and Joe Morris are telling people size alone isn't what's most important," Morris said. "It's competitive drive. Sam and I don't grade out on the computer because of our height. But our competitive natures let us get the job done."

Handley agrees.

"He had great success last year and I've had nothing different, he worked harder in the offseason in preparation for this year," Handley said. "He attributes his success to weight work and his study of film and blocking schemes. He certainly did not rest on his laurels. He redoubled his efforts."

Morris' competitive nature was a source of comic relief.

During a game last season against New Orleans, Morris suffered a concussion and was benched by Parcells. Between plays, he kept running up to Parcells, yelling to be put back in.

Finally, to get Morris off his back, Parcells had some of the Giants players hold his helmet and Morris didn't bother him again.

Parcells rarely likes to put any of his players in the spotlight, and Morris is no exception.

"Joe is making a significant contribution," Parcells said. "I'm glad for him. This isn't a one-man game, though. I keep trying to spread it. He's the viable one. But like I said, all running backs are the same if there is no hole."

Morris has gotten a lot of holes because the Giants' offensive line has been playing well, and in the past two weeks, New York has gone to two tight end offenses with Mark Bavaro and Zeke Mowatt, among the best blocking tight ends in the league. Fullback Maurice Carthon, who's been kept running up to Parcells, has cleared the way for Morris.

Leonard's comeback is for one fight only

NEW YORK (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard says he is not making a comeback. Instead, the former welterweight and junior middleweight champion says he is returning to the ring for one fight he has always wanted.

"I don't want a career," Leonard said Monday at a news conference at which his April 6 fight against middleweight champion Marvin Hagler was officially announced.

"Nobody believes me because I've contradicted myself before. But all I want is this one fight. I've never lost the feeling for fighting. Marvin, Marvin was always there and I've always wanted to fight him."

The 12-round fight, to be held at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev., will be the richest in history, according to promoter Bob Arum. Leonard is guaranteed $11 million. Hagler, the undisputed middleweight title-holder and the early '80s' favorite at Caesars, has a $12 million guarantee. The guarantees are the largest in boxing history.

Hagler and Leonard seemed to be on a collision course five years ago when Leonard won the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title in June, then beat Thomas Hearns for the undisputed welterweight title in September.

There was a three-round knockout by Leonard of Hearns. Then, Hearns and Leonard fought a three-round fight in the same arena. Leonard was victorious in the third round.

"The weak area of the retina was completely reinforced so that, in my opinion, there is less risk of further retinal damage. I do not find that to preclude my being road work for a May fight against Roger Stafford, Leonard experienced pain in his left eye."

The diagnosis was a detached retina which was repaired by surgery. On Nov. 9, 1982, he announced his retirement, shooting down plans for a big-money meeting with Hagler. Eighteen months later, though, he returned for a fight with Kevin Howard. He looked rusty in scoring a ninth-round knockout and again announced his retirement, saying he had lost the desire to fight.

The Nevada Athletic Commission had been dubious about sanctioning the fight. But Dr. Filip Honmaki, the commission's chief physician, said Leonard had gone through an extensive physical examination and was declared in top shape.

"A patient is a patient," Honmaki said. "We went about it the same way we would examine any person."

"My conclusion is that Mr. Leonard is in excellent physical health," Honmaki said. "There is no finding to preclude his fighting in the state of Nevada."

Dr. Louis Angioletti, director of the retinal diagnostic center of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, was hired by Lloyd's of London, insurers of the fight, to examine Leonard.

"The weak area of the retina was completely reinforced so that, in my opinion, there is less risk of further retinal damage. I do not find that to preclude my being road work for a May fight against Roger Stafford, Leonard experienced pain in his left eye."

greater risk to have damage done to the eye, I would sit him down and say, 'I'm fine. I wouldn't do it if I wasn't.' Leonard said.

Hagler said he would not concentrate on punishing Leonard's surgically repaired eye.

"I plan," he said, "on hitting him all over his body."

Arum said the fight could have a potential closed circuit and pay-per-view audience of 3 million and might gross as much as $100 million. That would double the Warriors' record gross set by heavyweight Larry Holmes and Gerry Cooney at Caesars in 1982.

Closed circuit tickets went on sale at New York's Radio City Music Hall Monday at $60 each. The 15,000-seat arena at Caesars is scaled with a $700 top price and a sellout will yield $7,875,000 from the live gate.

"The original deal, which Leonard did not accept, would have paid him $2 million plus 30 percent of the revenue in excess of $25 million," Arum said. "He opted instead to be bought out for the percentage of $3 million. If the fight does over $30 million, he lost money. If it does over $50 million, he made it. It was a business-man's decision."

"Marvin gets 50-75 percent of revenue over $25 million."

Hagler, who prefers 15-round fights, said he would be content with 12 against Leonard.

"I still believe in 15 rounds, especially with the magnitude of this fight," Hagler said. "But you've got to argue over three more rounds?"

Montana gets green light from doctor

REDFORD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Seven weeks after undergoing an operation for a career-threatening back injury, Joe Montana has received the green light from his surgeon and medical staff to return to the San Francisco 49ers.

Coach Bill Walsh said he would decide today whether to activate the five-time Pro Bowl quarterback, now on injured reserve, for the game against St. Louis in Candlestick Park.

Walsh said a decision would be based on medical reports. On Monday, Dr. Arthur White emerged from a meeting with Walsh, team doctors and 49ers strength coach Jerry Attaway and pronounced Montana ready to play.

"Joe is in as good shape as he's going to be, and waiting any longer is not going to improve the situation," said White, who performed the Sept. 15 operation. "He can take anything right now."

Montana, who quarterbacked the 49ers' first offensive unit in their afternoon practice Monday, said he's eager to return Sunday to help the injury-plagued 49ers, 5-1. He said he considers himself "85 to 90 percent" ready, with only slight numbness in one foot.

"If it were up to me, I'd be in there," he said.

The 30-year-old Montana, who originally said he planned to return for a Nov. 17 game against Washington, said he was fully confident that he's in no danger.

"It's his (the doctor's) job to know," he said. "He's done thousands of backs."

Road trip leaves Williams fuming

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — As far as Joe Williams is concerned, the Los Angeles Kings are little more than clown princes in their home arena.

Williams was fuming after Monday night's 4-2 loss to the Calgary Flames, which wrapped up a seven-game, coast-to-coast road trip that saw the Kings go 0-4-1.

After the game, Williams said "Kings' management is to blame for the club's perennially difficult traveling schedule."

"We don't have priority in our own building (The Forum), so we aren't getting the best seats," Williams said. "You look at all the Canadian teams — they're not No. 1 in their buildings. We're not."

The Kings are owned by Jerry Buss, who also owns the Forum and the NBA's Los Angeles Lakers.

"I can see the Lakers having priority in their building. We're just 'things,' said Williams. "Our building's so busy, we never get to practice. The building's used 365 days a year. We get the short end of the stick."

Business In Brief

Cheesebrough-Pond's to sell group

WESTPORT — Cheesebrough-Pond's Inc. has announced it is selling part of its Chemical Products Group. The sale, announced Monday, would be the first in the chemical group since the Fortune 500 company purchased Stauffer Chemical Co. for $1.25 billion almost two years ago. "The decision to sell these businesses, with annual aggregate sales of $150 million, is the result of our ongoing evaluation of Cheesebrough's long-term direction and the need to focus on the company's strategic growth areas," said Ralph E. Ward, the company's chairman and chief executive officer, in a company news statement.

The company plans to sell Stauffer Seeds, its fabricated plastics business and a number of chlorine, caustic soda and food formulas for plants. Dennis G. McCarthy, a company spokesman, said the various businesses represent slightly more than 10 percent of the total sales for the chemicals group.

Interest on securities up slightly

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose slightly on Monday's auction.

The Treasury Department said $3.02 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.23 percent, up from 5.18 percent last week. Another $8.01 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.39 percent, up from 5.21 percent last week.

The rates were the highest since Oct. 20, when three-month bills sold for 5.30 percent and six-month bills averaged 5.39 percent. The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 5.37 percent for three-month bills with a $100 million bill selling for $9,997.80 and 5.52 percent for six-month bills selling for $9,732.10.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Monday that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable rate home mortgages, fell to 5.74 percent last week after averaging 5.82 percent the week before.

Consumers seek business reports

More than 18,000 Connecticut consumers contacted the Better Business Bureau and Telecommunications Commission last month to obtain a business performance report before purchasing goods or services from a firm in Tolland, Windham or Hartford counties.

The estimated value of these contemplated purchases is in excess of $30 million, said Karl Tracey, president of the bureau. Tracey said that consumers are becoming more concerned about where and how they spend their money and are now "investigating before they invest."

Any consumer may obtain a business performance report on businesses in Hartford, Windham and Tolland counties by calling 247-4700 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. The bureau currently maintains over 20,000 files on local companies.

Nothing wrong with 'cold calling'

QUESTION: The other day, I had a telephone call from a stock broker. After telling me his name and business, he said he had some certificates of deposit paying interest four percentage points higher than I can get on CDs locally. He wanted to ask me some questions, so he could send me literature. I told him to send all the literature and I will decide if I am interested. What do you think of brokers who try to drum up business in this fashion?

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

ANSWER: There's nothing basically wrong with it. It's known as "cold calling." Brokers and other sales types get on the phone all the time and try to land new customers. Some build up profitable businesses that way.

It goes without saying that you should never buy from a broker or anyone else strictly as the result of a phone call. Check out that guy and his firm. If you're inclined to do business with him, visit his office before opening an account with him. The broker then sells the CDs to his customers, who collect high interest. There's no commission charge to the customer. The broker collects a fee from each bank or S&L whose CDs he sells.

A word of caution. Very often, banks and S&Ls offering sky-high CD interest rates are in financial trouble. However, customers whose CDs and other deposits are covered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. or the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. have no reason to worry about losing any money.

QUESTION: When I moved, I wanted to transfer my individual retirement account from a bank where I formerly lived to a bank where I now live. I was discouraged from doing so by representatives at both banks. They both said my IRA is "locked in" a 12 percent CD for 12 years. I wonder about such high interest, now that rates are lower. Should I leave the IRA where it is, or should I transfer it?

ANSWER: LEAVE IT BE! Because interest rates on new CDs are coming down, 12 percent for 12 years will turn many people green with envy.

That interest was available a few years ago, when you first obtained your IRA CD. That CD is a contract. The bank at which you have it must pay the agreed-upon 12 percent interest for its maturity.

If you transfer your IRA, you'll have to redeem that CD and obtain a new one — at the lower rates now prevailing. DON'T DO IT!

Also, by redeeming that CD before its 12-year term is up, you could be hit with an early withdrawal penalty. Banks and savings and loan associations are not required to levy penalties on IRA CDs when IRA participants are 59 1/2 or older. But many do.

QUESTION: Enclosed with my most recent bank statement was a letter. It says "... your account will be charged $10.00 per check for any check that is not posted to your account on the day it arrives at the bank because of insufficient funds. The account will be charged even though you make a deposit the same day."

Is the bank permitted to do this?

ANSWER: Sure. Banks and S&Ls are allowed to lay on any fees they like in this new era of deregulated banking, some are coming up with all kinds of charges for services they formerly performed for free.

However, charges for bounced checks are nothing new. Over the years, lots of banks and S&Ls have levied fees of $10 or more for each, and every rubber check. You're supposed to have enough money in your account, before you write a check.

Bid for BankAmerica may turn hostile

By Steve Wilstein
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — BankAmerica Corp. told its suitors to go away but didn't slam the door on a possible merger, and First Interstate Bancorp quickly hinted it may make a hostile takeover bid for the beleaguered financial giant.

The directors of the nation's second-largest bank holding company on Monday asked First Interstate to withdraw its $3.4 billion buyout offer, saying it was not interested in the offer.

First Interstate, which called the bid "friendly," said it was "not interested in the offer."

The statement drew an immediate response of disappointment from First Interstate's chief executive officer, A.W. Clausen.

"We are not rejecting the First Interstate or any other proposal at this time," he said.

"A tender offer is an alternative," said Paul Minch, First Interstate's chief spokesman.

Securities analyst Joseph Aronson of Blir Wuyette & Co. Inc. in San Francisco, agreed, saying, "I don't believe First Interstate wants to wait for 90 days to work out its own solution. I think they'd prefer to have a shotgun wedding."

John R. Beckett, chairman of the board's executive committee, said the board saw no reason to merge with First Interstate now and is "encouraged by the aggressive approach being taken by the management team to address the bank's problems and put it on the road to recovery."

BankAmerica's chairman and chief executive officer A.W. Clausen said the bank would be continuing selling assets, but would not sell its assets to First Interstate.

BankAmerica's 14-member board of directors discussed the bid on Monday.

BankAmerica's stock closed at $16.125 on the New York Stock Exchange, up from Friday's close of $15.50.

Citicorp spokesman John Maloney in New York said Monday it was the bank's policy not to comment on any discussions or even to acknowledge whether talks had occurred.

Beckett said "The First Interstate and other proposals are unnecessary impediments to the bank's progress, generating uncertainty in the marketplace, consuming an inordinate amount of senior management time and attention and affecting the bank's relations with its customers."

"We are not rejecting the First Interstate or any other proposal at this time," he said.

First Interstate, which wants to acquire stock and debt securities of BankAmerica stock, had increased its offer by an estimated 22 percent from one it made on Oct. 3.

Savings bond interest lowest since '82

By Martin Cruikshank
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. savings bonds will earn interest at a rate of 6.06 percent over the next six months, the lowest level since the bonds were switched to market-based rates in 1982.

The Treasury Department said Monday the new rate, in effect until May 1, is down from a 7.02 percent rate of return earned in the past six months.

Interest on Series EE savings bonds is adjusted twice a year, on Nov. 1 and May 1, to reflect open market interest rates. Investors who hold their bonds for five years earn the average of the half-year rates.

For the first four years of the program, the interest rate has averaged 8.99 percent. The rate is based on 85 percent of the level of interest rates for five-year Treasury notes.

In addition, investors are guaranteed a minimum interest rate, regardless of what the market rates do. That minimum guaranteed rate had been 7.5 percent, but it was lowered on Saturday to 6 percent. Bonds sold before that date will be covered by the higher guaranteed rate.

The Treasury Department had been threatening since last April to cut the guaranteed minimum rate, but Treasury advisers have said that even at the lower guaranteed rate of 6 percent, savings bonds are still a good investment for small savers and for the added tax advantages offered by the bonds and other investments.

Savings bonds are exempt from state and local taxes and federal taxes may be deferred until the bonds are redeemed.

The department finally announced the decision to cut the rate.

The cut in the minimum rate does not affect bonds sold before Saturday.

Unqualified person. The mailfi, says Jennings, author of many books on organizations and leadership, which are based on concepts which involves skills, and qualification, which involves judgments by superiors.

Again, the judgment might not be for all time. Jennings notes that Winston Churchill, leader of wartime Britain, was judged a malfit by his contemporaries in the pre-WWII years.

• Exift. Once competent, but changed circumstances have rendered him unqualified.

• And prof. Incompetent but qualified. Appointed because there is an expectation that the individual will grow to meet the demands of the job.

The profit seldom is terminated, says Jennings. "Instead, he'll receive moral counseling and coaching," he'll be given a second chance.

• Nonfit. This person is competent, but unqualified. The competent person is not of the sort needed by the company.

• Malfit. May be competent but personally unqualified by any number of factors, including a negative personality, not being a team player, or being unable to follow the instructions of the board of directors.

• Malfit, an incompetent and unqualified person.

• Exift. Once competent, but changed circumstances have rendered him unqualified.

• And prof. Incompetent but qualified. Appointed because there is an expectation that the individual will grow to meet the demands of the job.

The profit seldom is terminated, says Jennings. "Instead, he'll receive moral counseling and coaching," he'll be given a second chance.

Some young corporate whizzes on fast track to frustration

By John Cunniff
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Some sharp young corporate executives who believe they're on a high-speed track to the top might be on a spur line instead, says a professor who has followed executive careers for three decades.

They could be headed for frustration rather than the achievement enjoyed by their counterparts in the 1960s, when many young people moved swiftly into top jobs created by a rapidly expanding economy.

At best, he said, many of the young executives described are simply fast-trackers — occupying important jobs early in their careers — rather than riding the fast track. "Their destination," he said, "is dubious."

Today, "salutism is unlike that of the 1960s," Jennings pointed out. Today, there is no great shortage of executives. Business isn't expanding nearly as fast. And a fast start doesn't necessarily mean continued momentum.

"In fact, we have a glut of managers," said Jennings, whose book is titled "The Executive's Dilemma."

Jennings began tracking executive movements in the 1950s, and he has followed "The Mobile Manager" and "Executive Success," that created or popularized "executive mobility," "early starters," and similar terms.

Jennings finds himself at odds with some suggestions in a Business Week article about a new generation of young fast-trackers being destined to reshape corporate America.

continued studies indicate that the fast starter might later be overtaken by those whose abilities are less quickly recognized or which continue to grow.

Jennings developed the concept of the mobile manager back in the 1950s while tracking the positions that managers passed through on their way to the top.

Seeking a statistical gauge to future success, he found that in dozens of companies the base salaries of managers, other than officers and those on commissions, produced a significant ratio when divided by the average age. Specifically, he found that the average manager's salary was 80 percent of his or her age in terms of thousands of dollars. That is, a 46-year-old manager typically was earning $38,000. And a 35-year-old earned $28,000.

But, he discovered, he could spot the young "early starters" destined to go all the way to the top because they earned their age in salary. At age 35, for example, they were earning $35,000.

(Later, because of inflation, the definition of an early starter had to be changed to a person in his or the 30s age bracket earnings twice his or her salary.)

Jennings found that only one in 10 young managers had a 1-to-1 ratio. And by tracking them through the 1960s, he found they had twice the probability of becoming officers.

Since then, from what he calls "listening posts" at 40 large corporations, Jennings has found a greatly changed environment, one in which openings are fewer — because of retirements rather than economic growth.

Cheesebrough-Pond's to sell group

WESTPORT — Cheesebrough-Pond's Inc. has announced it is selling part of its Chemical Products Group. The sale, announced Monday, would be the first in the chemical group since the Fortune 500 company purchased Stauffer Chemical Co. for $1.25 billion almost two years ago.

Nothing wrong with 'cold calling'

QUESTION: The other day, I had a telephone call from a stock broker. After telling me his name and business, he said he had some certificates of deposit paying interest four percentage points higher than I can get on CDs locally. More than 18,000 Connecticut consumers contacted the Better Business Bureau and Telecommunications Commission last month to obtain a business performance report before purchasing goods or services from a firm in Tolland, Windham or Hartford counties. The estimated value of these contemplated purchases is in excess of $30 million, said Karl Tracey, president of the bureau.

Manchester voters nix Question 4

By George Lovng

HARTFORD — While Republicans yesterday lost their gubernatorial challenger Julie D. Belaga went wrong, Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill says there was a simple reason he beat her by more than 150,000 votes.

"We worked hard. We had a good record. Just as simple as that," O'Neill said after the results were in Tuesday night. "The people of Connecticut have spoken very, very clearly."

"They said it couldn't be done, but you didn't listen," O'Neill told cheering supporters. He promised four years of "progressive, forward-looking government."

Meanwhile, the Democrats appeared to have picked up as many as 26 seats in the House in 80-81 majority. In the Senate, the Democrats appeared to have gained 13 seats for a 25-11 majority.

Republicans held an 85-68 margin in the House and a 24-12 edge in the state Senate going into Tuesday's election. The GOP had swept control of both chambers two years ago for the first time since 1972, largely on the strength of President Ronald Reagan's strong showing in Connecticut. The Democrats had retaken control in 1974.

House Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand, R-Darien, blamed the GOP's sweeping losses in Tuesday's election on the party lever and on O'Neill's hefty margin over Belaga.

"With 782 of 99 precincts reporting, or 79 percent, O'Neill was leading Belaga 571,946 to 413,677, or 58 percent to 42 percent."

Belaga conceded defeat shortly after 10 p.m. She said she did not know if she would run for office again.

"She told her somber supporters: 'This is not a concession speech; this is a call to arms. We are the honorable opposition and we will do our damndest to speak to the issues we raised in this campaign.'"

After she left the podium, she was besieged by reporters asking what happened. Her explanation: "When you have a strong economy, it's very hard to get people to reject an incumbent. The public is very unwilling to unseat an incumbent when their pocketbooks are full."

The size of her defeat stunned Republicans.

"I'm just sad, disappointed across the board," said state GOP Chairman Thomas J. D'Amore. "I didn't see this one coming. I thought it would be a lot closer."

James A. Wade, one of O'Neill's top strategists, said the O'Neill campaign had stopped doing voter polling almost two weeks ago because they were convinced

Meotti beats Zinsser in 4th upset

Thompson and McCavanagh prevail over Swensson and Tucci

Manchester voters Tuesday gave Democratic candidates heavy pluralities over their Republican opponents, helping to re-elect Gov. William A. O'Neill, U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd and U.S. Rep. Barbara Kennelly.

They also sent Democrat James McCavanagh back to the state legislature for a third term representing the 12th Assembly District and replaced Republican Rep. Elsie Swensson with a Democrat, former Mayor John Thompson, in the 13th Assembly District.

Thompson had tried twice before to unseat Swensson, but lost by close margins. Edward J. Wilson, who left the Republican Party to run as an independent in the race, finished last with 83 votes.

State Sen. Carl Zinsser, a Republican, carried Manchester but failed to hold onto his seat in the 4th Senatorial District. The three-term incumbent was defeated by Democrat Michael P. Meotti of Glastonbury, an attorney for the Travelers Insurance Co. of Hartford.

Zinsser, a real estate broker who was favored to win, had only 14 more votes than Meotti in Manchester, his hometown. Zinsser also took Bolton, but lost in Glastonbury, Hebron and Columbia — the other three towns in the 4th Senatorial District — by wide margins. Democratic leaders called Meotti's victory the biggest surprise this year.

The defeat followed a bitter campaign over the charter change, a proposal that created one of the most emotional and controversial battles in Manchester in recent history.

About 67 percent of the town's 28,678 voters cast ballots in the election.

In a vote that was captured by voters approved a bond issue of $1.3 million to build housing on North Elm Street for elderly people and another bond issue of $8,800 for the renovation of four elementary schools and code work at the high school.

Like their counterparts elsewhere in Connecticut, Manchester voters opposed holding a statewide constitutional convention, favored removing the party lever from voting machines and favored establishing a commission to recommend candidates to the governor for appointment as judges.

The only three districts to support changing the charter were 4, 5 and 9 — all in the southern part of the state. Each is to be separately, paid for department.

When the vote was in supporters of changing the charter conceded they had been soundly beaten.

"That's the most decisive expression of the people since they overwhelmingly expressed themselves against participation in the Community Development Block Grant program," said Democratic Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings. Cummings and other Manchester Democrats, including Stephen T. Penny, who leads the majority Democratic

Democrats: Reagan revolution over

By Donald M. Rothberg
The Associated Press

Resurgent Democrats, riding a tide of Southern and Farm Belt votes to control of the Senate, confronted President Reagan today with an opposition that Congress and served notice that "if there was a Reagan revolution, it's over."

The bright spot for Republicans in Tuesday's midterm elections was in the races for governor, where the GOP picked up eight statewide victories including those in Texas, Florida, Maine and Wisconsin.

As returns rolled in, the Democrats claimed eight new Senate seats and were leading in North Dakota, another state now held by a Republican. If that trend holds, Democrats would control the Senate by a 56-44 majority. By contrast, the Republicans picked up only one seat vacated by a Democrat, that in Missouri.

The GOP was holding its own in the House with Democrats looking to a maximum gain of eight seats. Entering the election, they had a 75-seat majority, controlling the House 35-18.

By early today, the Democrats had won 242 races and were leading in 19, the Republicans had won 162 and were ahead in 12.

"We look forward to cooperating with the president," said Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., expected to be majority leader when the Senate convenes next January.

But Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who narrowly defeated Republican challenger, Rep. Ed Zschau, expressed what was on the minds of many Democrats when he told supporters in Los Angeles, "We have laid the groundwork for taking back the White House two years from now."

Vice President George Bush told ABC the loss of GOP control would "complicate staying on the offensive in the last two years of the Reagan presidency."

At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes conceded the Democrats' gains would make life tougher for the president, but insisted that "it won't alter the agenda."

But a retiring House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. took a farewell swipe at his political rival, saying, "If there was a Reagan revolution, it's over. O'Neill added that the next two years would see "the art of government by compromise. It has happened many times in the past and it's not that bad."

With several aspirants in both parties looking ahead to the 1988 presidential election, the Democratic control of the next Congress will give the opposition party a far stronger voice in setting the political agenda.

Reagan returned to the White House on Election Day after investing heavily of his own time and prestige in the Senate fight to keep control of the Senate. "I didn't seek re-election to be a six-year president," Reagan implored cheering crowds while campaigning in 11 states. But the presidential appeals weren't enough to sway voters in Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Maryland, South Dakota, North Carolina and Nevada.

The Democrats picked up Senate seats in all those states despite Reagan campaign appearances.

Still, his spokesman insisted that the president could claim to have made many of those races closer than they otherwise would have been.
