FOCUS

Go West, Young Man
Everyone has heard of the Wright brothers. But how many people know of Calbraith Rodgers? On November 5, 1911, Rodgers became the first person to complete a coast-to-coast flight across the United States. It took Rodgers 49 days to fly from New York City to Pasadena, California. The trip was plagued by bad weather and mechanical problems. The flight included 76 stops — not counting 20 crashes. Aviation historians say Rodgers actually spent only 82 hours in the air.

DO YOU KNOW — What plane will soon attempt a non-stop flight around the world?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Democrats have a majority in the House.

Michael P. Meotti (right) is congratulated by fellow Democrat John W. Thompson on his win over incumbent state Sen. Carl A. Zinsser Tuesday.

Glastonbury gives Meotti big victory over Zinsser

Republican Carl A. Zinsser, who was seeking his fourth two-year term in the 4th Senatorial District in Tuesday's election, lost to Democratic challenger Michael P. Meotti by less than 1,000 votes.

Even the Democrats conceded it was the biggest surprise in the 1986 election.

In 1982 and 1984, Zinsser defeated two popular Manchester Democrats — town Directors Stephen T. Penny and Stephen T. Cassano. He defeated Penny by less than 500 votes in a race where Glastonbury was the determining factor, but then expanded his margin to over 4,000 votes in the 1984 race against Cassano.

On Tuesday, Meotti, the Glastonbury Town Council majority leader, fought Zinsser to a near standstill in Manchester and won outright in Glastonbury, Hebron and Columbia. Zinsser, a Manchester real estate broker, took Bolton, the last of the five towns that make up the 4th district.

In all, Meotti, an attorney for the Travelers Insurance Co., received 17,776 votes, while Zinsser tallied 16,998. Meotti won Glastonbury 5,993 to 5,177, Hebron 1,160 to 1,116 and Columbia 848 to 712. Zinsser took Manchester 9,124 to 8,110 and Bolton 869 to 867.

"I'm thrilled," Meotti said as he stood with local Democratic leaders at the American Legion Hall Tuesday night. "It took a lot of hard work by a lot of people."

AS MEOTTI SPOKE, incumbent state Rep. Donald F. Bates, D-East Hartford, who won another term in the 8th Assembly District, shook his hands. Others walked by and patted him on the back.

Nick Paindige, Meotti's Glastonbury campaign manager, walked around the room wearing a smile, a cigar hanging from his mouth. "Did I tell you we had a winner? Did I?" he asked.

"I went to one polling place in Glastonbury tonight."

Third try puts Thompson over Swensson in 13th

In his third attempt to unseat Republican Rep. Elsie "Biz" Swensson, Democrat John W. Thompson succeeded, winning in Manchester's 13th Assembly District by 1,274 votes.

The tally when the polls closed Tuesday was 4,052 votes for Thompson to 2,774 for Swensson and 83 for Edward J. Wilson, a former Republican who ran as an independent and took conservative stands.

The big plurality for Thompson contrasted sharply with the small margins by which Swensson defeated Thompson in 1982, when she won by 73 votes, and in 1984, when she kept her seat by a slim five votes after a recount.

Thompson won all five voting districts in the 13th Assembly District in Tuesday's election.

In a victory speech to fellow Democrats at the American Legion Hall off Main Street after the election results came in, his tone was as low-key as it had been during the campaign.

"I'll work very hard," Thompson told the crowd. "I appreciate the support I received and I thank you very much."

Thompson said he made two promises during the campaign and plans to keep them both.

"I will have office hours in Manchester, and I will stay in contact with my constituents," Thompson said. "I don't know exactly how, but I will do it."

Swensson said she had made history by being the first woman in Manchester to serve three terms in the Legislature since 1962.

In his campaign, Thompson, a former Manchester mayor and a management consultant in private life, advocated state assistance to communities to encourage long-range planning with expanded citizen participation.

After his victory Tuesday, Thompson's opponents had praise for him.

"I'm sure he'll do a good job," Swensson said at Republican headquarters. She went to Democratic headquarters to congratulate Thompson, but he was at the Legion Hall and she didn't find him there.

"The best person was elected," Wilson said. "I think he'll make a fine representative."

Swensson said she plans to remain active in politics but will not seek public office again. "I'm retired," she said.

regain control of both chambers of the General Assembly, Swensson said she was satisfied with her career in Hartford.

"I don't feel badly," she said. "Jack's a good guy. He waited a heck of a long time for this, since Swensson said she had made history by being the first woman in Manchester to serve three terms in the Legislature since 1962.

Wilson 'disaster' doesn't bother him

One minute after the polling place closed Tuesday night at an independent candidate Edward J. Wilson's campaign headquarters on East Middle Turnpike was dark and deserted.

"He hasn't been around all day," said a patron at the Village Pub and Restaurant, located next door to the polling place, which Wilson launched his drive to represent Manchester's 13th Assembly District in the Legislature, Wilson had been chosen instead to be a Democrat within the year.

"They're a winning party and I like to belong to a winning group," he said.

Wilson added that he would remain "in the political scene." He offered no excuses for his showing Tuesday, choosing instead to praise his opponents and chuckle about the low numbers.

"I've been through disasters before," he said. "I gave it a good shot."

numbers are low," Diana said, adding: "The lines were long all day."

Officials at the schools attributed the greatest share of interest to referendum Question 4, which concerned the mechanics of consolidating the Eighth Utilities District with the town. The question staunchly opposed within the 98-year-old fire and sewer district — went down in defeat.

Diana said there were two broken machines during the morning, equaling the number of breakdowns in town since 1927.

Doyle noted that voters were pleasant and polite, despite a wait at Nathan Hale during the evening of about 15 minutes. "People seemed very interested and very committed to being here, which I think is nice," he said.

Rogers shutdown

Filming singer Kenny Rogers' latest music video shut down three streets in the historic district of Clarksville, Tenn., chamber of commerce officials said.

The video "Twenty Years Ago," to be released in January, will depict Rogers' life 20 years ago, said Barbara Ratcliff, a chamber spokeswoman.

Ratcliff said the filmmakers chose Clarksville, about 40 miles northwest of Nashville, because "they were looking for something that could be anywhere, USA."

The filmmakers used a cafe, a barber shop and a foundry building, which was dressed up to look like an old-fashioned hardware store, she said.

Bond issues backed

While rejecting changes in the Town Charter, Manchester residents voted overwhelmingly in favor of town bonding to pay for construction of a housing complex for senior citizens and for renovations to five schools.

On the statewide referendum questions that preceded the local issues on the ballot, Manchester voters voted with the rest of the state, according to unofficial results. They voted against convening a state constitutional convention, but in favor of amending the constitution to provide for the removal of the party lever from voting machines and for the formation of a commission to recommend candidates for judgeships to the governor.

Question 5 on the town ballot, which concerned bonding of up to $1.3 million for 24 units of senior housing on North Elm Street, was approved by a vote of 10,737 to 4,953.

According to preliminary plans, the housing complex will comprise six buildings, each containing four units that will rent for between $410 and $450, utilities excluded. The complex, to be completed and occupied by October 1987, will be located on 1.8 acres of land given to the town by the estate of Wilfred Crockett on the condition that it be used either for such a project or for a park.

After the vote was in, Democratic Town Director Peter DiRosa Jr., who has spearheaded the North Elm Street project through its preliminary phases, said he was pleased with the results. "I'm excited that the people supported it," DiRosa said. "I think the people in Manchester understood the needs of the elderly and for housing."

BY APPROVING QUESTION 6 in a vote of 10,292 to 5,201, townspeople authorized municipal bonding of up to $8.8 million for renovation projects at Manchester High School and at four elementary schools. The town will pay only $3.6 million for the work and the state will refund the rest.

At Manchester High School, the work will largely involve improvements required to bring the building into compliance with the building code. The work includes the installation of sprinklers, the removal of asbestos and the installation of new doors.

The four elementary schools slated for repairs are Bowers, Nathan Hale, Verplanck and Waddell.

At Bowers, plans call for replacement of the current media center in an addition to the building, the expansion of classroom and the cafeteria and the construction of a new entryway for buses.

At Nathan Hale, brick walls on the south and east side of the building are to be coated to prevent leakage and minor building code violations will be corrected.

At Verplanck, the media center will be expanded, offices and tutorial rooms will be improved and fire-escape windows will be installed.

At Waddell, the school office is to be moved nearer to the main entrance and classrooms will be constructed in its current location. In addition, one of the school's asphalt parking lots will be rebuilt.

"I think it's terrific that the school question won so overwhelmingly and that the people respect the tradition of providing good schools," outgoing Board of Education Chairman Leonard E. Sender said Tuesday night.

THE TOWN VOTE against convening a constitutional convention was 10,791 to 4,734. The final statewide total is not yet known, but with 165 of 169 towns reporting, the vote was 363,180 to 200,899 against a convention, according to unofficial results. The question was opposed by many groups, including the League of Women Voters and the American Civil Liberties Union. Under state law, voters must be asked once every 20 years whether to convene a constitutional convention. The last constitution was written in 1965, and the referendum was Question 1 on the ballot this year.

On Question 2, which concerned the removal of the party lever, the Manchester vote was 8,182 to 7,778 in favor. Unofficial state results had removal of the lever favored by a vote of 288,535 to 282,758. That means the lever allowing Connecticut voters to support a party's entire ticket with a single motion of the arm will disappear from voting machines before next year's election.

Question 3 concerned the formation of a commission to send judicial suggestions to the governor. It passed by a vote of 10,187 to 5,034 in Manchester. The statewide vote was 377,397 to 181,111, with 165 towns reporting, so the governor's discretion in judicial nominations will soon face limitations. Only voters approved by the state will be subject to nomination by the governor. As things stand, the governor chooses his own candidates and sends the nominations to the Legislature, a process that has been widely criticized.

Democratic Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings holds up state Rep. James R. McCavanagh's hand in victory after McCavanagh defeated his Republican challenger, John A. Tuccl, in the 12th Assembly District.

McCavanagh beats Tuccl all over the 12th

By George Lovno
Herald Reporter

Although his vote total fell short of the one he posed in his last victory, Democrat James R. McCavanagh broke new ground as he won re-election over Republican challenger John A. Tuccl on Tuesday. He captured all five voting districts in the 12th Assembly District—something he hadn't done before.

The final tally was 5,264 to 2,663. And while the victory was expected, McCavanagh was especially happy to have won Voting District 2, whose polling place is Bowers School, and District 5, which votes at the Senior Citizens' Center. In both 1982 and 1984, his Republican opponents won in those districts.

"Jim McCavanagh has been re-elected overwhelmingly," Democratic Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings announced to a round of applause from the Democrats gathered at the American Legion Hall in Manchester to await the results.

"I'm very proud of the job that was done for me," said McCavanagh, 46, a real estate broker who will begin his third term as a member of the legislative majority as a result of the Democrats' statewide sweep. "I look forward to serving another two years."

McCavanagh's race against Tuccl, a 46-year-old hairdresser, was highlighted by the battle over the referendum question, which sought to remove the Eighth Utilities District's power to veto consolidation with the town of Manchester. So was much else about the 1986 election.

The Eighth District, which has provided fire protection and sewer service to most of northern Manchester for almost 100 years, covers about half of the 12th Assembly District. Both candidates were opposed to removing the veto power, but Tuccl had repeatedly criticized McCavanagh for not taking a vocal stand on the issue.

Vocal or not, McCavanagh's position put him at odds with the stand taken by the Democratic Town Committee, which strongly supported removing the Eighth District's ability to fend off a merger. He alluded to that in his brief victory speech Tuesday night.

"It's nice to see how well people who disagree on the question got along," McCavanagh said. "I'm proud of the job that was done for me."

Over at Republican headquarters, Tuccl blamed his defeat on his late start in the race, his lack of funds and the statewide Democratic victory. "I did the best I could," he said after learning the results.

Tuccl entered the race at the end of July after two other potential candidates backed out of campaign, leaving the Republicans without a candidate in the 12th District. Tuccl supporters did distribute some leaflets at polling places and shopping centers, but most of his campaign was waged with hand-painted signs and help from family members.

Tuccl did not rule out a run for elective office in the future. But he said his immediate plans just call for keeping abreast of local issues.

McCavanagh said he is a strong candidate to become House chairman of the General Assembly's Public Safety Committee.

In 1984, he defeated Republican Jonathan Mercier despite the Republicans' success in capturing control of the General Assembly. In 1982, he beat Republican incumbent Walter Joyner, now president of the Eighth District, 4,201 to 3,933.

Here are the unofficial results by voting district in the election in Manchester's 12th Assembly District:

	McCavanagh	Tuccl
District 1	962	551
District 2	1,063	292
District 5	1,101	605

Town Democrats win big, lose big

By Alex Girelli
Associate Editor

Democratic Town Chairman Theodore Cummings didn't say, "You win some and you lose some" after the election Tuesday night, as he has so many times in the past. But Manchester Democrats did indeed win big and lose big on Election Day 1986.

The Democrats lost when Manchester voters overwhelmingly defeated a proposal to change the Town Charter to make it easier to consolidate the town and the Eighth Utilities District. A merger has been a major objective of Cummings and most Democratic leaders for years, and the proposal—Question 4 on the Manchester ballot—had the support of the town committee and the six Democratic town directors.

But the party won a state Senate seat that has been held by Republican Carl Zinzer for three terms and a seat in the state House of Representatives that Republican Elsie Swenson has held for the same length of time. And it sent James McCavanagh back to the House for a third term.

The first note of triumph was a murmur that went through the crowd shortly after 8:15 p.m. when a TV set was turned on and word got around that CBS had predicted a win by Gov. William O'Neill over Republican Julie D. Belaga.

But word also got around that at

Bowers School, Question 4 was headed for defeat by a 3-to-1 margin.

By that time the Democrats gathered at the American Legion Hall had swelled to about 150 people and the earlier din had risen to a mild roar.

The chairman took the microphone at 8:30 to announce the first results from the polls. "This is a night for no fears and no tears," he told the crowd.

Cummings proceeded to read off the 12th Assembly District vote from Bowers, and when he announced that McCavanagh had 1,011 votes to 568 for his Republican opponent, John Tuccl, there was a chorus of cheers and a round of applause.

Then there was silence when he announced that the vote on Question 4 was 415 in favor to 1,171 against.

Next came results from Manchester High School, with McCavanagh leading Tuccl 1,049 to 417 and the "yes" vote on Question 4 again trailing behind the "no" vote.

When Cummings read off the results from the Senior Citizens' Center—where the vote on Question 4 was 953 in favor of passage to 707 against—applause broke out.

That was to be the only note in the charter change effort, however, and it was not long before Cummings said: "It is unfortunate for those of us who believed in it that Question 4 has fared poorly."

But by then it had become obvious that both McCavanagh and John W. Thompson, the Democratic challenger in the 13th Assembly District, had won.

Thompson's victory—after two unsuccessful attempts to defeat Swenson—brought wild applause in the hall. He began a speech with, "Thank you very much," but had to interrupt it to let Cummings read off results from still another district showing him a clear winner.

Then he resumed to more applause.

The victory of Michael Meotti of Glastonbury over Republican incumbent Carl Zinzer of Manchester in the 4th Senatorial District was slower to become clear.

Even when Cummings shouted, "Meotti is our new state senator," some in the crowd appeared hesitant to accept the result without confirmation.

By the time Meotti came to the headquarters later for handshakes and hugs of congratulation, all was confirmed.

Area probate races far from radical

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

There were no surprises in three area races for judge of probate Tuesday.

In two districts the incumbents were unopposed, and in the third the 16-year incumbent won easily.

In Manchester, Democrat William E. Fitzgerald had no opposition in his bid for re-election. He will begin his fifth consecutive four-year term as Manchester judge of probate.

Fitzgerald, who first took office in January 1973, received 12,103 votes. His biggest tally was in Voting District 9.

Fitzgerald's last election campaign, in 1982, started on a low-key level but erupted into a bitter fight with Republican lawyer William J. Digna, now minority leader on the Board of Directors. Fitzgerald defeated Digna by almost 1,000 votes.

In Coventry, Republican David Rappe, running unopposed for that town's probate court post, received 1,376 votes on Tuesday. Rappe, 46, is a real estate broker and has been judge of probate for 15 of the past 19 years. His wife, Bertha, said he is not political. The Democrats feel he does a good enough job that they "don't run anybody against him," she said.

Bolton Republican Norman J. Preuss, the incumbent who has been judge of probate off and on for 16 years for the Andover-Bolton-Columbia district, defeated Democratic challenger Jose Ramirez, 2,214 to 1,821.

Preuss, who said he carried all three towns with the closest margin being 50 votes or less in Andover, said he didn't plan to change a thing. "I think we have a good court and we try to do what's directors, had helped lead the fight for charter revision.

District big winner as town rejects charter change

"Obviously, I'm disappointed," Penny said after hearing the results at the Democrats celebration in the American Legion Hall. "I congratulate the people of the district for the good public relations effort."

"We tried to get our point across, but it was too complicated," said Jay Giles, a former town Public Works Director who was a leading member of the Committee for Charter Revision, a group formed this year to advocate passage of Question 4.

What effect would the vote have on district-town relations? Penny said this morning it will probably have no effect, and he expects the Eighth District to continue to be "stubborn" in its relations with the town.

"I don't know what the next step is," said Giles on Tuesday. "Maybe the people of Manchester have spoken and that's it."

However, several Eighth District supporters said they would like to see the town turn over control of the town's Buckland firehouse on Tolland Turnpike to the Eighth District Fire Department in exchange for the Eighth District giving up control of its 28 miles of sewer lines.

Robert Blechman, head of the pro-district group STEAL, or Stop

Tampering with the Eighth's American Liberties, said he would like to see the district and town boards of directors sit down together and work out some sort of swap.

"If that does not happen, there will occur STEAL TWO," said Blechman. He said if his group is reactivated, it would focus on defeating Democratic candidates for the town Board of Directors in 1987.

Blechman noted that the Republican Town Committee opposed changing the charter and said if an agreement could not be reached, he would work to elect GOP candidates.

Eighth District advocate Wallace Irish Jr. agreed.

"There's a lot more responsibility put on the Eighth's Board of Directors," he said. "There is equal responsibility for the town directors to deal equitably and fairly with the Eighth."

The town and the district have been negotiating to share the Buckland firehouse, but Irish said he is opposed to any sharing plan.

"I think the sharing idea is baloney," he said. "I think the people of Manchester proved that."

However, Eighth District Director Thomas Landers, also a district firefighter, was more optimistic. "If both sides want to do it, it is possible," he said.

Penny said this morning he is hopeful a sharing arrangement can be worked out. But he said the town is not at liberty to give up control of the Buckland firehouse because townspeople voted overwhelmingly last November to not sell the facility.

He added that the town firefighters at the station still need the building to serve areas in the vicinity.

Had the Town Charter had been changed, a single townwide vote could have accomplished a merger under the provisions of the Home Rule Act, a state law. Under the existing charter, any consolidation proposal must be approved by Eighth District voters—who operate under a town meeting system of government—before it could become final.

That "veto" power, and the debate over whether the Eighth District should continue to exist, was at the center of the debate over the referendum question. Irish said Tuesday night that the vote was also a vote on the Eighth District itself.

"There's an awful lot of good in the Eighth that the rest of Manchester recognized," he said. "A bright thank-you is deserved to all those Manchester voters."

That thank-you—on a 20-foot-long piece of paper—was written by Eighth District supporters in big black letters and displayed outside the Eighth District firehouse.

James Sarles, a deputy chief with the Eighth Utilities District fire department, coordinates the placement of solicitors at polling stations around Manchester Tuesday evening. Sarles oversaw the successful campaign to defeat Question 4, which sought to remove the power of Eighth District voters to veto consolidation with the town of Manchester.

Town turns battlefield as 8th applies pressure

By George Lovno
Herald Reporter

The second-floor meeting room in the Eighth Utilities District firehouse on Main Street had been transformed into a high-tech war room.

A computer was set up in one corner, feeding on the number of voters who had cast ballots at each of Manchester's 12 polling places throughout the day. It printed out big black letters and displayed them were then hung on a wall, in between battle maps that had been marked with pins of various colors.

Walkie-talkies squawked. Messages came in and orders were given to get more solicitors to various polling places and to deliver food to the army of Eighth District advocates who were encouraging electors to vote "no" on the fourth referendum question on the town ballot.

Question 4, which eventually went down by 2,510 votes, concerned the removal of the Eighth District's ability to veto a merger of its fire and sewer services with those provided by the town government.

The general of the Election Day effort was James Sarles, a deputy chief in the Eighth District Fire Department and a member of the pro-district group STEAL, or Stop Tampering with the Eighth's American Liberties.

"This could be the Pentagon," Sarles said, with reports radioed from the polling places. Sarles kept track of how many solicitors his opponents had stationed in the field. The information was then noted on one of the maps, and orders were given to the troops.

"We knew where he was going the whole day," Sarles said in reference to Democratic Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings, one of the leaders of the effort to remove the Eighth District's power to veto consolidation.

As the day wore on, Sarles said, it became obvious that Cummings was withdrawing his solicitors from voting places within the Eighth District and stationing them in polling places in the southeast corner of town, which is located in the Town Fire District.

This information was represented on one map by a big red arrow pointing up from the southeast corner of Manchester with the words "Armored Division" written next to it.

Each time the opponents made a move, Sarles made sure the Eighth District sent more solicitors to outnumber them. The only area that was conceded was the Voting District 5 polling place, the Senior Citizens' Center on East Center Street.

"We conceded the senior center when we saw he was putting all his marbles there," Sarles said.

In addition to the field work, a phone bank had been set up to urge Eighth District residents to vote.

Sarles had predicted that the Eighth District would win if 60 percent of the voters turned out, with about 85 percent of the Eighth District and 33 percent outside the Eighth District voting "no."

The final margin, which Sarles predicted would be 1,000, surprised him. The vote was 10,945 to 7,535. Almost 67 percent of those registered in Manchester turned out to vote.

Once the victory results were called in and read off by Sarles, the well-organized army stopped all efforts, let out a yell en masse and broke out the champagne.

Elsewhere, voters nix AIDS law, back abortion freedom

By Lee Miltano
The Associated Press

Anti-abortion ballot issues fared badly in four states and lotteries were approved in five others, while Californians made English their official state language and rejected quarantining people with AIDS.

Among the more than 200 state and local ballot issues decided across the country on Tuesday, voters also:

• Rejected by nearly a 3-to-1 margin a bid by the poor, predominantly black neighborhood of Roxbury to secede from Boston;

• Turned down by a similar overwhelming margin an Oregon initiative allowing residents to grow marijuana for their personal use;

• Gave strong approval to a $1.2 billion toxic waste cleanup bond in New York, a $200 million bond in New Jersey, and a resolution in Massachusetts calling for a timetable for cleaning up that state's waste sites;

• Favored a freeze on most property taxes in Montana and a state revenue cap in Massachusetts, but turned down a Colorado measure requiring a popular vote on any new taxes or increases;

• Voted to keep a mandatory seat belt law in Nebraska, but repealed a similar law in Massachusetts.

ANTI-ABORTION MEASURES were trailing in Rhode Island, Oregon and Massachusetts. But in Arkansas, Amendment 65, which would prohibit spending state funds for abortions unless the mother's life was in danger, was a virtual dead heat.

According to unofficial returns with 91 percent of precincts reporting early today, 20 votes separated the sides—a 50-50 split.

Unofficial figures showed 286,504 votes for Amendment 65 and 286,484 against, with 2,568 of the state's 2,815 precincts reporting.

"It's close and a real tense time until we can get some concrete figures in," said Kevin McCray, coordinator of the Unborn Child Amendment. "We had hoped to have a better margin of victory. Some of the advertising against Amendment 65 may have confused some of the voters," he said.

Lotteries, on the other hand, swept to victory in five of six states: Montana, Kansas, South Dakota, Idaho and Florida, which also soundly rejected county-option casino gambling. North Dakota voters rejected a lottery.

And after more than a century of light liquor controls, including a prohibition period that lasted 68 years, Kansas voters overwhelmingly approved a constitutional amendment to legalize county-option liquor by the drink.

IN CALIFORNIA, with 17 percent of the vote counted, the English language measure, Proposition 63, won 77 percent of the vote, with 23 percent opposing it.

Proposition 63, which would amend the state Constitution to recognize English as the state's official language, won wide support from voters alarmed over an influx of non-English speaking immigrants.

"It's clearly aimed at Hispanics and Asians, but it doesn't help people learn English," said state Sen. Art Torres, who opposed the measure.

California citizens rejected the AIDS initiative, Proposition 64, by a margin of more than 2-to-1.

The AIDS initiative, backed by supporters of Lyndon LaRouche, called for identification of AIDS victims and possible quarantine measures. It would have barred them from education and restaurant employment. Virtually all major candidates, the gay community and the California medical establishment opposed it.

"We want every demagogue to know... it stopped here tonight," said David Mixner, coordinator of

Business as usual, or better?

If the victors prove magnanimous and prudent, everyone will have won something in Tuesday's election.

Statewide, Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill won a broader mandate than he's ever had before, carrying his party to victory in both chambers of the General Assembly. Nationally, the Democrats regained control of the Senate and will now control the entire Congress.

On both counts, that could mean a return to business as usual several years ago, but it should mean the beginning of business better than ever. The same holds true closer to home.

Locally, the most surprising twist was challenger Michael P. Meotti's upset of incumbent Republican Carl A. Zinsner in the 4th Senatorial District. The most significant was the voters' decision to turn thumbs down on Question 4 on the Manchester ballot, which would have removed the power of Eighth Utilities District voters to fend off consolidation with the town.

In the first instance, Meotti deserves congratulations for pulling off a win over three-term incumbent Zinsner, and Zinsner deserves a round of applause for his six years of service to Manchester and the other towns of the 4th Senatorial District. Though the surprise isn't there, the same formula applies to newly elected state Rep. John W. Thompson and the incumbent he defeated, Elsie "Biz" Swenson.

The meaning in the second case is infinitely more complicated, of course. Even now, however, it's clear that all concerned must heed the will of the electorate and bend wherever possible for the good of the entire town.

The voters have spoken, and they want the Eighth District to have the better hand in its ongoing card game with the town government. That certainly calls for some adjustment on the part of Democratic officials who have grown accustomed to having their own way, but it does not change what's best for Manchester.

In rejecting Question 4, the voters have given a strong show of support to the Eighth District Fire Department — and to self-determination for Eighth District residents. That must be taken into account by the Board of Directors, bitter as some of its members may be. The Buckland area appears to belong to the district once and for all, and the town government must act accordingly.

At the same time, the Eighth District should negotiate not only from strength, but with the desire to improve the situation for everybody in town. Its leaders should recognize that they don't belong in the sewer business, state their demands on autonomy for their long-serving volunteer fire department and take the brave step of offering their own strategy for maximizing strengths and diminishing weaknesses.

Calling for such magnanimity may prove about as profitable as asking President Reagan to recognize that he'll have to learn to work with the still-Democratic House and the newly Democratic Senate if he wants to improve things for Americans. But in both cases, warring and bickering can only go so far before it stymies progress on all fronts. And it may be about as fruitful as pleading with O'Neill, his 160,000-vote plus plurality notwithstanding, to rid state government of the plague of cronyism that has hung over it for so long.

But there is some hope nonetheless.

In Washington and Manchester, the battle lines are now clearly defined. A strenuous application of the checks of opposition certainly can only improve the Reagan "revolution", and locally, every faction at least knows where it stands for the foreseeable future and can seek to reduce conflict with that knowledge, if it so chooses.

Even if that's all pie in the sky, comfort remains. Manchester will send a capable and honest delegation to the General Assembly, spend $8.8 million for improving school facilities and build a nice housing complex for senior citizens. The far right won't have a go at the state constitution, and unless some ballots are hidden somewhere, that obnoxious and obsolete party lever will at long last disappear from Connecticut voting machines.

The system took a beating in this year's state election

Losers in the state election this week had company. The system that put them on the ballot also took a beating this year.

Whether it was absentee ballot rube-rubs in Bridgeport and Waterbury that discredited the Democrats or the exercise in futility that was the Republican state convention, the "system" looked so bad it raised the question of how much longer voters will continue to let politicians play games with the franchise.

The system even looked bad in the preliminaries this year — the September primaries where more than a score of candidates who had been "endorsed" at various party conventions lost to challengers. That should have said something to the voters at large who simply refused to buy the products of the formal apparatus.

GIVEN A CHANCE, in the dinky little bluster on the convention process which Connecticut calls a "challenge primary," voters demonstrated all up and down the line that they want a say in who runs for high office.

Obviously this is getting around to another plug for direct primaries in Connecticut on our part. We don't hold much hope of seeing it, because the convention system is held hostage by the two major political parties. But the idea gained some headway this year just the same, and some influential friends.

U.S. Sen. Chris Dodd spoke out for direct primaries here. So did such Democratic colleagues in the U.S. House of Representatives as Sam Goldenson and Barbara Kennelly. U.S. Rep. Bruce Morrison leans that way, too. GOP State Chairman Tom D'Amore, Julie Belaga, Dick Bozuto and Gerry Labriola favored it as Republican leaders.

All but five of the United States choose nominees for high office by direct primaries, open to registered voters in one party or another. Some allow unaffiliated voters to participate.

THAT ALONE IS NOT a compelling reason to jettison the pack, but it shows how lonesome it's getting to be in the convention corner. More importantly — and this is what it's all about — the number shows that almost the entire nation leaves those important choices up to the electorate at large.

The alternative, which Connecticut continues to use, is the dinosaur we call state or district conventions attended by "proxies" known formally as delegates. More often than not, those "proxies" are interested only in the power politics or the social whirl of the convention and care little about sentiment back home.

A direct primary would ventilate that process and reduce the nominating system to basics with voters at large allowed in, finally, as full partners. That's as it should be. Connecticut puts up with a nominating procedure firmly in the hands of the "club" in each party. And that's as outdated as it is wrong.

Campaign post mortem

Toby Moffett, the former congressman who wanted to be governor this year, wound up with a nice consolation prize after all. He started this week as co-anchor on Channel 30's news shows at a salary hinted to be well above the $80,000 he would have received next year as governor.

In fact, Moffett will be making far more than the $72,000 his old job of congressman pays or the $75,000 a U.S. senator receives.

Future file

Republicans can forget the byphen if they are thinking of a Dole-Dole team to head the 1988 presidential ticket for their party. "I have no intention of running for national office," said U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole during a brief stop in Connecticut last week.

She is sometimes mentioned as candidate for vice president on a slate headed by her husband, U.S. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole. Mrs. Dole was at Bradley International Airport in Windsor Locks to campaign for Julie Belaga, the GOP candidate for governor. Mrs. Dole said her husband would be taking a hard look at running for president after this week's elections.

Change needed in soccer rule

To the Editor:

As the parents of one of the students involved in the recent soccer issue we feel it is time the facts are made clear.

Your newspaper has published two recent items: one quoting a Manchester School Board member and the other a letter to the editor. Both people referred to the rule being bent to accommodate a few students. The actual number of students involved is 341. This is hardly a few. Second, there seems to be the misconception that the activities in question are being played simultaneously. This is not true. School soccer is played after school on weekday afternoons. School practice is held on weekday afternoons when school games are not scheduled. Club soccer is strictly a weekend activity. The parents of the students participating in both activities only requested a rule modification to be taken by the board and that soccer be treated on an equal, not separate, basis with other school sanctioned activities.

The key issue which seems to be totally overlooked is that soccer is simply an activity which should involve the discretion of the parents as to the child's participation. True, soccer is a sporting activity. But we would like to have explained to us the true difference between a child's taking part in soccer, an activity, or the school band, an activity. If the present rule were to be applied to a child in the school band, he or she could not participate in a separate jazz band on weekends. Tell a parent of a band member and watch the fun at the next school board meeting.

When a newspaper prints a letter or reports a story it should do a little research into the subject. Does the Manchester Herald realize that under the present rule it is permissible for a student to participate in a soccer practice or game, then go straight to a Midget Football practice or to a game without breaking any rule? Further, why is Manchester the only school system in the state to have such a rule on the junior high level?

The rule is a bad rule and we feel it is unfair. We not only intend to see the rule changed, we will do everything in our power to see the rule modified to give of fairness and on a basis consistent with other activities on the junior high level.

This rule was instituted several years ago due to very poor working relations between school and soccer club coaches. Since

Israelis treat an American as a criminal

WASHINGTON — Israeli border officials strip-searched a distinguished American businessman two weeks ago, interrogated him for more than three hours and confiscated some of his personal property — because he is of Arab descent and looks it. Despite his U.S. passport, which showed him to be a native-born American, the Israeli officials refused to accept his repeated insistence that he is a U.S. citizen.

Dr. Omar Kader is a professional type born and raised in Provo, Utah, where his parents had immigrated from what was then Palestine — and looks it. He recognizes Israel's need to take anti-terrorist precautions at its border crossings, but he was particularly upset at being singled out for harsh treatment when other, non-Arab Americans were passed through without a hassle.

Despite his U.S. passport, which showed him to be a native-born American, the Israeli officials refused to accept his repeated insistence that he is a U.S. citizen.

Dr. Omar Kader is a professional type born and raised in Provo, Utah, where his parents had immigrated from what was then Palestine — and looks it. He recognizes Israel's need to take anti-terrorist precautions at its border crossings, but he was particularly upset at being singled out for harsh treatment when other, non-Arab Americans were passed through without a hassle.

"I FEEL LIKE A JEW and you're the German," Kader testified to one Israeli official — a reference to the initial segregation of Jews before the Nazis shipped them off to the death camps during World War II.

Kader is softspoken and usually amiable. He looks unmistakably Arab; in fact, his Caucasian American wife says she was partly attracted to him by his resemblance to actor Omar Sharif.

An executive director of the Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee until last December, he spearheaded efforts to erase the stereotype of Arabs as trigger-happy fanatics lurking around every corner to kill the first American who happens along. Because of his position, he received threatening telephone calls following every terrorist bombing attributed to Arabs; the committee's West Coast director, Alex Odeh, was assassinated, and the committee's Boston office was bombed.

Here is what happened in Israel, based in part on an affidavit Dr. Kader filed with the U.S. consular office in Jerusalem to protest his treatment:

Kader was optimistic when he boarded a bus to cross the Jordanian-Israeli border on Oct. 22 with eight Western Europeans and other Americans. He had been told of rough treatment given to other Arab-Americans, and he overheard one of the European passengers offer to carry a young Arab-American's camera across the border to prevent its confiscation.

BUT KADER BELIEVED he would be treated properly because he is an American — "American first, Arab second," as he puts it. He was going to Israel to meet with government officials, and, as a U.S. taxpayer, he had helped subsidize the Israeli economy to the tune of billions of dollars. He felt he was entitled to a modicum of courtesy.

Kader's optimism was abruptly shattered. While the Europeans and Caucasian Americans were whisked through Israeli customs, he and the two other Arab-Americans were directed into a separate room — and ordered to take off their shoes.

At one point a lower-level official started to apologize to Kader for the discriminatory treatment, but a senior military officer came over and told them, "Shut up!" Then Kader was ordered into another room and made to strip down to his underwear.

The Israeli officials examined all the cards in his wallet. Kader said; they opened all the private correspondence in his luggage and read it closely, questioning him about the contents. They grilled him about notes in his notebook and asked him why he had underlined certain passages in the books he was carrying, particularly one autographed by King Hussein.

ALL OF KADER'S BELONGINGS were opened — even candy bars — and dumped into a box. A computer disk, containing six months' research material for articles he was preparing, was confiscated on grounds that "information on it may be sensitive."

The Israelis appropriated a souvenir letter-opener because it was "too sharp" and could be used as a weapon. Kader later found an identical one just five miles down the road in Jericho in the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

Leaving Israel two days later, Kader was again singled out at the airport. This time, he decided not to be so cooperative. He insisted that the Israelis acknowledge him as an American; when they refused, he raised his voice and demanded to be treated like other Americans boarding the plane. He was quickly passed through.

Republican Town Director Geoffrey Naab carefully studies a voter registration list Tuesday at GOP Headquarters on North Main Street.

Republican headquarters at 150 North Main St. resembled an engineering office.

Five tables were set up with about three or four people at each, holding rulers and drawing lists through names on computer lists. Republican Town Chairman Donald Kuehl sat at a desk in one corner, drawing up blank charts that would be used later to tally the final vote. Two calculators sat nearby.

There was little talk among the workers, except for numbers that were called out as each name was crossed off on the voting lists.

"I think we've had more people doing more things this year in Republican headquarters than in any past year," said Kuehl. "It's very busy."

Kept on the outside steps of the office were two cases of beer, in hopes that the careful plotting and hard work put in by the party faithful had paid off.

It hadn't.

The local Republican candidates for governor, Congress and the Connecticut General Assembly were all beaten except in the 5th Assembly District, which includes only a corner of Manchester. The only left state Sen. Carl A. Zinsner and Rep. Elsie "Biz" Swenson — both three-term legislators from Manchester — ordinary citizens once again.

"Even though they lost, they're still winners in our hearts," Kuehl said as he stood on a ladder in front of the wall-length tally sheet and spoke to Republican workers. He noted that voters had decided on the six referendum questions exactly as the GOP Town Committee had recommended.

"We do know something about the feelings of the town of Manchester," he said.

The only applause that went up from the 30 or so people in the office came when it was announced that the fourth referendum question — which sought to remove the power of Eighth Utilities District voters to veto a merger with the town of Manchester — was defeated.

The GOP Town Committee had strongly urged the rejection of that proposal.

Swenson, who was hugged and kissed after it was learned she had lost, offered encouragement to the party, predicting good things for the GOP next year.

"I think next fall we can take the Board of Directors," she said.

Swenson went on to praise her opponent, John W. Thompson, saying she was sure he would do a good job in the Legislature.

"I got the rest of my life," she said. But she said she had no plans to seek elective office again.

Despite the evening's results, the cans of beer were opened, drinks were served, champagne was poured and snacks were consumed.

"This is the first day of next year's election," said Kuehl.

Farmers' market will be missed

To the Editor:

As the season for the farmers' market comes to an end, I shall miss the abundance of fresh fruits and vegetables provided us by the local farmers.

Every week, I looked forward to a little outing to Main Street and the market. I especially appreciated the warm and friendly atmosphere at the market.

Some keep going when polls close

Vote adds up to a long day for tabulators

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

While the majority of Manchester residents cast their votes Tuesday and then retired to that comfortable stuffed chair in front of the family room television set to watch election numbers trickle across the screen, the real work for some was only beginning.

In the basement of Manchester's Municipal Building, Town Clerk Edward Tomkiel and Chief Moderator Vincent Diana waited for 12 voting district officials to bring in the results from the machines at their polling places. Both had been working since early morning.

The clock above the Coke machine in the break room where the two sat read 8:10 p.m. If everything went smoothly, Tomkiel said, the figures would be gathered by 10:30.

The two passed the moments listening to the nationwide results on a digital clock-radio which only transmitted one station. They tried their hardest not to bet on which moderator would bring in information first, or on what time someone would arrive.

At 9:10 p.m. it appeared that the Democratic party had gained control of the General Assembly, according to the radio announcer. At 9:15, results from Mahoney Recreation Center on Cedar Street — the polling place for Voting District 11 — arrived. They were the first of the evening in Manchester.

Local information on the results was hard to come by for the few town employees and interested residents waiting in the room. Mostly, they relied on polling place moderators, who inevitably commented first on the results of referendum Question 4, concerning consolidation of the town and the Eighth Utilities District.

Chief Moderator Vincent Diana (left) reads the numbers for him. About 87 percent of Manchester's voters turned out at the polls.

Democrats ride wave for O'Neill

O'Neill would trounce Belaga. "We said, why waste the money? The deciding factor was a strong satisfaction with Bill O'Neill. I think what we are seeing is strong support for his policies," Wade said.

Republicans had counted on a big turnout and strong support in Fairfield County, long a GOP stronghold. It never happened. While Belaga won the small towns there, such as Darien, Ridgefield and her hometown of Westport, O'Neill won handily in the larger cities there, including Bridgeport, Stamford and Norwalk.

Every poll taken in the final weeks of the campaign showed O'Neill ahead. The most recent poll, released Friday, showed him with a lead of 16 percentage points, roughly the way it turned out Tuesday.

Almost 1.7 million Connecticut residents were expected to vote. Officials expected about 70 percent, or 1.1 million, to make the effort. It appeared that fewer than 1 million did so.

Throughout the campaign, Belaga accused O'Neill of being a poor leader who did little more than react to problems and crises. She charged that he presided over state government run by his political buddies and had little vision for Connecticut's future.

The governor promised during his campaign to remove some top officials now in state government, but refused to say which ones. O'Neill based his campaign on the theme that "Connecticut is working," pointing to the state's low unemployment rate and high per-capita income. He also hammered away at the fact that Belaga missed 43 percent of the votes in the General Assembly this year and briefly mentioned the loss of the Belaga personal finances.

Documents released by Belaga last month showed she and her husband were worth $1.4 million and paid $119 in income taxes in 1985.

O'Neill spent $2.1 million to beat Belaga in the state's most expensive gubernatorial race yet in Connecticut.

O'Neill, 56, had finished the last two years of the late Ella T. Grasso's term, in 1981 and 1982. A tavern owner from East Hampton, he had been her lieutenant governor and had resigned because of falling health.

Belaga, a deputy House majority leader from Westport, is a 36-year-old former school teacher who has been in the General Assembly for 10 years.

She was the first woman to win the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Although she failed to get the party's endorsement at its summer nominating convention, she pulled off an upset victory in a three-way primary in September. O'Neill had to fight off a challenge for his party's nomination from former U.S. Rep. Toby Moffett. Moffett fell just short of the convention support he needed to qualify for a primary against the governor. He later became a television news anchorman.

Also in the running for governor was Unaffiliated Party candidate Frank J. Longo, a former mayor of Bristol who qualified for the ballot through petitions. Early returns showed Longo with fewer than 10,000 votes.

"Another four years?" he said of O'Neill's victory. "Wait and see if things don't get worse. "If I were younger," the 68-year-old sporting goods dealer said, "I'd plan to run again in four years."

State's congressional delegation survives intact

By Daniel Beeson
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Republican U.S. Rep. Stewart McKinney had his closest victory ever and his challenger all but promised a rematch as Connecticut voters re-elected all six incumbent congressmen. Unofficial returns from Tuesday's voting showed McKinney retained his 4th District seat by 9,775 votes, fewer than the 12,582-vote margin of victory in the 1974 Watergate election where he was the only Republican congressman sent to Washington by Connecticut voters.

That 1974 election was McKinney's closest until he faced Democratic state Rep. Christine Niedermeier in Tuesday's balloting and the GOP congressmen had predicted he would do better against her. Winning far easier victories were Reps. Barbara Kennelly, D-1st; Sam Gejdenson, D-2nd; Bruce Morrison, D-3rd; John Rowland, R-5th; and Nancy Johnson, R-6th.

Niedermeier said after the defeat she likely would run again in 1988. "There will be another tomorrow for this campaign," she said. "The closeness of this race is a mandate to go on from here."

McKinney and Niedermeier

agreed on the reasons for the outcome, her failure to win more votes in Bridgeport, the largest city in the district. "We just didn't get the numbers out of Bridgeport we needed to get," she said. "To only lose Bridgeport by 3,400 votes is mindboggling. God bless you Bridgeport, I love you," McKinney said.

With all 112 precincts reporting, unofficial returns showed McKinney winning over Niedermeier 77,210 votes to 67,238, or 53 percent to 47 percent.

Niedermeier ran a well-financed, aggressive campaign against McKinney, a contest McKinney characterized as "abusive and abrasive."

State Democratic leaders had considered her campaign the best chance they had to win a majority in the Connecticut U.S. House delegation, now divided evenly between Republicans and Democrats.

But her well-fought campaign and solid state-wide victories by Democratic Sen. Christopher J. Dodd and Gov. William A. O'Neill weren't enough to unseat McKinney, first elected to the U.S. House in 1976.

In the 1st District, Kennedy rolled up an expected huge lead over Republican Herschel Klein, who once said he would demand a recount if he won. Unofficial returns from the 130 precincts showed Kennedy with 128,929 votes, or 74 percent, to 44,210, or 26 percent, for Klein. Results from the 2nd District showed Gejdenson trampled Republican Francis "Bud" Mullen, former head of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, who, earlier this year, had been expected to give the liberal Democrat a strong challenge.

Unofficial returns from 142 of 163 precincts, or 89 percent, showed Gejdenson with 108,456, or 67 percent of the vote, to 52,275, or 33 percent, for Mullen.

"It ought to send a message to the Republican National Committee that they ought to stop wasting money and effort trying to send me back to Bozrah," Gejdenson said. "I'm absolutely amazed at how well we did."

In the 3rd District, Morrison won an expected victory over former prosecutor Ernest J. Diette Jr., a Democrat turned Republican.

Unofficial returns from 142 of 163 precincts, or 89 percent, showed Morrison with 112,667 votes, or 70 percent, to 49,111, or 30 percent, for Diette.

"The margin of victory is a statement of the support for the work that I've done," Morrison said. "The most important thing that I'm going to do is to provide the kind of leadership in Washington and the kind of effective representation and service in the Third District that I have provided."

In the 5th District, the unofficial tally from all 122 precincts showed Rowland with 98,356 votes, or 61 percent, to 63,304, or 39 percent, for Cohen.

Unofficial returns from 122 of 143 precincts, or 85 percent, showed Rowland with 98,356 votes, or 61 percent, to 63,304, or 39 percent, for Cohen.

U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd raises a fist in victory Tuesday after beating Republican challenger Roger Eddy handily.

Dodd celebrated his win with his family and a few hundred supporters in a Hartford hotel.

Dodd relishes 'sweet' victory

By Daniel Beeson
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Democratic U.S. Sen. Christopher J. Dodd says his impressive win over Republican Roger W. Eddy shows negative campaigns don't work in Connecticut.

"Connecticut, through modern political history, has never accepted negative campaigning by Republicans and Democrats," Dodd said after his 65 percent-to-35 percent victory Tuesday. "And I hope tonight that we set up a lesson."

But Eddy, in a sometimes tearful concession, said, "I did everything I had to do with limited finances. I didn't do anything I'm ashamed of. I didn't tell any lies. I didn't do anything I am ashamed of," Eddy said.

One of Eddy's top campaign weapons was a $23,000 newspaper ad where he asked voters to respond to questions about Dodd's character and voting record in exchange for a chance at a $10,000 prize, which he awarded to a retired Navy officer.

The ad included mention of a doughnut throwing incident involving Dodd 10 years ago and allegations that Dodd and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., broke pictures on the wall of a classy French restaurant in Washington.

Unofficial returns from 762 of 776 precincts, or 99 percent, showed Dodd with 621,667 votes, compared to 337,792 for Eddy.

"In the words of Jackie Gleason, 'How sweet it is,'" Dodd said of his victory. Dodd also said he was buoyed by nationwide returns that showed Democrats regaining control of the U.S. Senate, a change that assures him of a subcommittee chairmanship.

"I served in the House for six years in the majority and I have served in the Senate for six years in the minority. Believe me, the majority is better," Dodd said.

Eddy broke into tears as he told supporters and reporters, "It appears obvious I lost. If there are tears in my eyes, it's because I'm disappointed," his family standing beside him.

Eddy's concession came at the Polish-American Club in his hometown of Newington.

"It appears obvious I lost," Eddy said. "I think he ran a fair and square campaign. I congratulate him. Eddy said his biggest handicap was a lack of campaign dollars to wage his battle against Dodd. Dodd outlasted Eddy nearly five to one.

"The vast majority of the people think he is a good senator. He has beaten me fairly and squarely," Eddy said.

Dodd, 42, of East Haddam, won his second term as as easily as he did his first six years earlier when he handily defeated Republican James L. Buckley, a former U.S. senator from New York. Dodd, son of the late Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, served three terms in U.S. House before moving to the Senate.

Eddy, 46, was recruited by state GOP leaders to run against Dodd after the party's first choice, former Yale President A. Bartlett Giamatti, turned them down.

A farmer, author, former state legislator and the Republican national committee man from Connecticut, Eddy also is the inventor of the Audubon bird call.

Democrats recapture Senate, put end to 'Reagan revolution'

By Lawrence L. Knutson
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Democratic surge ended Republican rule of the Senate's levers of power, forcing President Reagan to choose between compromise or stalemate in the last two years of his White House term.

In a dramatic show of strength in Tuesday's elections, Democrats captured Republican seats in Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Dakota, Alabama and Maryland. They turned back strong challenges to Democratic seats in Colorado and Louisiana and yielded a Democratic seat only in Missouri.

But all the races weren't settled early today. The Democratic triumph ended the Republicans' 53-47 grip on the Senate. It came at the end of the costliest campaign in history — and one that had no national theme but was characterized by negative television advertising — "mudslinging" in popular parlance.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia — now in line to become majority leader — predicted that a Democratic-controlled Senate will "pull the administration back toward the center in its extremes in foreign policy and its extremes in domestic policy."

"THE DEMOCRATS are all set to go to work," he said. "We don't want confrontation."

"I would hope we would not see a fortress White House that feels it is under siege," Byrd said. "We Democrats feel that for the good of the country we want to all cooperate. I would hope the president would not be confrontational."

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas now will become floor leader of a minority, freed to pursue presidential ambitions without having to defend Reagan's agenda on the Senate floor. Dole said the Democratic victory would "make it more difficult for Ronald Reagan."

He also said the White House will be forced to be very careful in selecting judicial nominations.

The Democrats, while taking over the Senate for the first time since the Reagan landslide in 1980, marginally strengthened their numbers in the House.

That meant Reagan would have a more difficult time selling the most controversial — of his programs, from his Strategic Defense Initiative to his American-financed war against the leftist regime in Nicaragua. Democrats were likely to press for new taxes to combat the deficit and for legislation to stem the tide of imports from abroad.

REAGAN HAD campaigned for continued Republican control of the Senate with the fervor of a personal crusade, saying a Democratic victory Tuesday would confine him to a six-year presidency.

But while his own popularity remains at near-record levels, it did not transfer to the GOP candidates — most of them freshmen swept into office with narrow victories in the 1980 election.

"There's no question that the president is going to have a much more difficult time getting his programs through," said Frank Fahrenkopf, Republican national chairman. "But the president is a master of building coalitions ... and he always has that ability to carry his message directly to the American people."

Paul Kirk, the Democratic chairman, said the reversal of political fortunes means Reagan will "have to be in a position of either accepting what the Senate and House send to him, compromising with them to get a result, or putting himself in sort of a Captain Veto position."

SAID RETIRING House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.: "If there was a Reagan revolution, it's over. It will be the art of government by compromise. It has happened many times in the past, and it's not that bad."

One of the few bright spots in an otherwise gloomy night for the GOP was the victory in Missouri of former Republican Gov. Christopher S. "Kit" Bond over Lt. Gov. Harriet Woods for the Democratic seat vacated by retiring Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton.

Democrats fought back a strong Republican challenge in Colorado for the seat of Democratic Sen. Gary Hart.

fact a lot of them sounded like Ronald Reagan." Kemp said. "In the South, Democratic Gov. Bob Graham defeated Sen. Paula Hawkins in Florida.

In Louisiana, Rep. John Breaux kept the Senate seat of retiring veteran Russell Long in the Democratic column by defeating GOP Rep. Henson Moore.

Georgia Democratic Rep. Wyche Fowler ousted one-term GOP Sen. Mack Mattingly. Former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford put an end to the brief Senate career of GOP Sen. James T. Broyhill, who was appointed to the position earlier this year to replace Sen. John East, also a Republican, who committed suicide.

IN MARYLAND, Rep. Barbara Mikulski swept conservative Republican Linda Chavez, a former Reagan aide, out of the race for the seat being vacated by retiring GOP Sen. Charles McC. Mathias.

Former North Carolina Gov. James Abner went down to defeat at the hands of Democratic Rep. Thomas A. Daschle.

Area Democrats part of tide that sweeps GOP

Prague, Bates and Fusscas re-elected; Herbst ousts Giulietti in 35th

By Herald Staff

In a turnaround from 1984, Tuesday's election proved to be a day for the Democrats, and they won four area races for General Assembly seats.

The Democratic winners included Vernon Mayor Marie Herbst, who defeated incumbent Republican James Giulietti in the 35th Senatorial District, 11th Assembly District incumbent Edith G. Prague and 9th Assembly District incumbent Donald Bates.

Republican state Rep. J. Peter Fusscas managed to hold onto his seat in the 55th Assembly District.

MARIE HERBST unseats Giulietti

Prague, who lives in Columbia, today called her triumph over Republican challenger Raymond Milvae one of her most satisfying election victories.

"It was wonderful," said Prague, who will start her third two-year term when the new legislative session begins in January. "The people came out and really gave me an overwhelming victory."

Prague defeated Milvae, a 55-year-old Lebanon businessman, 5,636 to 2,685. The 8th Assembly District includes Coventry, Franklin, Lebanon, Boscawen and Columbia. Prague won Coventry 1,978 to 899.

Milvae said this morning he was pleased with his effort, despite the loss.

"I really worked very hard and I wouldn't have changed anything," he said. "I think it was just due to the landslide of the Democratic party."

Milvae said he will continue to stay active in politics and did not rule out a future run for the House of Representatives.

An "exhausted" Prague said her first priority of the new term will be to address problems with insurance coverage. In particular, she said she will press for an insurance consumer advocate and prior approval of rate hikes.

9th Assembly District

Despite losing in both Manchester and Glastonbury, Bates won by a large enough margin in his hometown of East Hartford to give him his third two-year term.

Bates, 58, beat Republican challenger Paul Munns 3,914 to 3,434. He said he expected to lose to Munns in Glastonbury because that is Munns' hometown. The final vote there was 882 to 520.

In a similar vein, Bates said he expected to win easily in East Hartford, where he received 2,555 votes to 1,859 for Munns. However, Manchester's tally of 893 to 839 surprised him. Bates said he probably lost in Manchester because Munns — 35 years his junior — contacted more people while campaigning door-to-door.

"He got to a lot more homes than I did," Bates said late Tuesday evening after the results were announced. "I thought he worked very hard."

Bates said the major factor behind his victory was probably Munns' lack of experience. "Although he claimed experience, he didn't have any," Bates said. "That was obvious," Bates said.

During the campaign, Munns said his current job as a clerk for the General Assembly's Public Safety Committee had given him the know-how to get things accomplished in the Legislature.

Munns said this morning he was satisfied with his effort. "I'm pretty happy, because from the beginning I said I'd like to run and learn. I'm still young. I know a lot about campaigning now," he said.

Munns said he would consider running for elective office in the future, possibly for the Glastonbury Town Council next year. However, he said his main goal was to help the GOP regain a majority on that panel.

Bates, a retired salesman, said his first goal is to get a seat on the key Appropriations Committee. He said he was "excitedly" promised a position on the panel and will ask for it when he returns to the General Assembly.

Bates said the campaign and Election Day work made him "very, very tired."

"I will probably sleep a little late tomorrow," he said.

Here are the unofficial results of the election in the 9th Assembly District:

East Hartford	2,555	1,859
Glastonbury	370	882
Manchester	839	893
Total	3,914	3,434

55th Assembly District

Marlborough resident Fusscas held off a challenge by Hebron Democrat David Cohen to retain his seat in the Legislature.

Fusscas, a business consultant, won in all five towns that make up the district, which includes a small part of northeastern Manchester. He was the only Republican incumbent in the Manchester area to keep his seat, as Sen. Carl A. Zinner, R-Manchester, and Rep. Elsie "Biz" Swenson, R-Manchester, fell victim to Tuesday's Democratic onslaught.

The final tally in the 55th Assembly District — which comprises Bolton, Hebron, Marlborough, Andover and the section of Manchester — was 4,308 for Fusscas and 2,880 for Cohen, a former Colchester first selectman.

"It's just a very hard district for Democrats to break into," Cohen said Tuesday night. Cohen said he called Fusscas after hearing the results to congratulate him. He said he told the Republican jokingly: "It's going to be very lonely in the General Assembly."

Fusscas, re-elected early this morning at his home, said he was happy about his victory but was shocked by the stunning defeats handed to many Republicans.

"I'm deeply disappointed that my fellow Republicans will not be getting back in," he said. "I think in the last two years the Republicans did an excellent job."

He attributed his win to his accessibility to the voters and his hard work. He said he doesn't think the Democratic majority will "bring him down."

Cohen, meanwhile, was already preparing for his next run for Fusscas's seat.

"I'm going to run again in two years," Cohen said. "We'll start our campaign again tomorrow."

Early Tuesday, Fusscas was nervous about the election and said he was not very confident.

"I'm always nervous before an election," he said. "I'm never confident. I'm in a swing district."

Here are the unofficial results of the election in the 55th Assembly District:

Andover	379	436
Bolton	641	676
Hebron	1,084	1,295
Manchester (3)	785	840
Marlborough	776	1,179
Total	3,665	3,426

35th Senatorial District

Vernon Mayor Herbst soundly defeated Republican incumbent Giulietti to capture the 35th Senatorial District seat. Herbst topped Giulietti 14,883 to 11,939 — a margin of 2,944 votes.

Herbst has served as mayor for the past seven years and defeated four other Democratic challengers this summer to win her party's nomination. In addition to Vernon, Cohen said he had defeated Giulietti in the 12th House District, where he had to relinquish two years ago when the GOP lost control.

Three representatives are vying for the majority leader's post. They are Deputy Minority Leader Robert F. Frankel of Stratford and Assistant Minority Leader Ronald L. Smoko of Hamden and Richard Balducci of Newton.

In the Senate, Minority Leader Cornelius P. O'Leary, D-Windsor Locks, is seeking the post of president pro tempore along with East Hartford Sen. John B. Larson. The Senate majority leader post is being sought by Owens, Steven C. Casey of Bristol and possibly the loser of the O'Leary-Larson contest.

Towns join trend

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

The towns of Bolton, Andover and Coventry followed the rest of the state Tuesday and voted overwhelmingly for Democrats seeking Connecticut's highest offices.

Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill, who defeated Republican Julie D. Belaga, won support in all three towns, as did U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd and U.S. Rep. Sam Gejdenson, both Democrats. Dodd faced Newton Republican Roger Eddy, while Gejdenson was challenged by Francis "Bud" Mullen, a former head of the federal Drug Enforcement Agency.

Residents in Bolton voted 866 to 671 for O'Neill, 947 to 599 for Dodd and 1,025 to 518 in favor of Gejdenson. Andover followed suit, casting 485 votes for the governor, 553 for Dodd and 584 for Gejdenson. Belaga, Eddy and Mullen received 342, 272 and 244 votes, respectively.

In Coventry, O'Neill won 1,779 to 1,088, while Dodd defeated Eddy 1,880 to 1,014 and Gejdenson received 2,038 to Mullen's 882.

On the three state questions that appeared on the ballot, Bolton and Andover voted not to hold a constitutional convention, to drop the party lever from voting machines and to establish a special commission that would recommend candidates for judgeships.

The results were completely opposite in Coventry, where a local question was also on the ballot. By a margin of 1,177 to 956, Coventry residents voted to make minor changes in the form of municipal government there.

The changes in the Town Charter approved Tuesday call for the elimination of the boards of health and welfare and the establishment of a hiring and evaluation procedure for the town manager, as well as other minor changes.

Reagan revolution said over

"Some people say Reagan lost. We believe he won," said Speakers arguing that the fact that some contests were razor-thin translated into a GOP success story. "We believe many of these races ... we turned them into horse races."

In many cases the losers were freshmen swept into office when the GOP took control of the Senate in Reagan's 1980 landslide. They included Sen. Jeremiah Denton of Alabama, the former Vietnam prisoner of war, defeated by Democratic Rep. Richard Shelby; Sen. Mack Mattingly of Georgia, beaten by Rep. Wyche Fowler; Sen. James Abdnor of South Dakota, who lost to Rep. Tom Daschle, and Sen. Paula Hawkins of Florida, ousted by Gov. Bob Graham.

Democratic Rep. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland defeated Linda Chavez to win the seat vacated by Republican Sen. Charles Stenholm and Rep. Harry Reid, another Democrat, bested Jim Santini to capture the seat vacated by Sen. Paul Laxalt, Republican.

By contrast, of the 12 Senate seats the Democrats were defending, Republicans could claim only Missouri, where former Republican Gov. Christopher Bond defeated Lt. Gov. Harriet Woods in the race to succeed retiring Democrat Thomas Eagleton.

Control of the House was never in doubt. Among the winners was Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, heavily favored to succeed O'Neill as speaker.

A new generation of Kennedys met mixed success. Joseph Kennedy II easily won the seat being vacated by O'Neill. His sister Kathleen Townsend lost her bid to oust Republican Rep. Helen Bentley of Maryland. Kennedy and Mrs. Townsend are children of the late Robert F. Kennedy.

Mike Espy, a black former state official, defeated Republican Rep. Webb Franklin of Mississippi to become the state's first black congressman since Reconstruction. In 1982 and 1984, Franklin defeated a black opponent despite the fact his district has a black majority.

The new Congress will have 22 Black members, the highest number ever.

But the trend was toward the GOP in 11 races for governor.

Republicans picked up governorships in eight states previously held by Democrats and were leading in four others.

Minority status didn't have time to become habit

By Brent Lyvonn The Associated Press

HARTFORD — After laboring in the unaccustomed role of the minority for two years, the Democrats will be back in control of both chambers of the General Assembly when the 1987 session opens in January.

House Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand, R-Darien, blamed the GOP's sweeping losses in Tuesday's election on the party leader and on Gov. William A. O'Neill's hefty 140,000-vote margin over Republican challenger Julie D. Belaga.

"I don't think anybody envisioned the dimensions of the loss at the top of the ticket," Van Norstrand said. "I never would have believed Bill O'Neill could blow anybody out by that margin."

The Democrats appeared to have picked up as many as 24 seats in the House for a 90-61 majority. In the Senate, the Democrats appeared to have gained 43 seats for a 25-11 majority.

REPUBLICANS HELD an 85-66 margin in the House and a 24-12 edge in the state Senate going into Tuesday's election. The GOP had swept to control of both chambers two years ago for the first time since 1972, largely on the strength of President Ronald Reagan's strong showing in Connecticut. The Democrats had retaken control in 1974.

The town of Ridgefield, where Democrat Barbara M. Ireland appeared to have defeated Republican Janet L. Johns in the 11th House race, illustrated the strength of the Democrats' victory. The town hadn't gone Democratic in anyone's memory.

In Waterbury, Democrat Doreen B. DeBlanco easily defeated state Rep. Norma L. Cappellotti, who had defeated DeBlanco in the Republican gains in gubernatorial races soften Senate loss

By The Associated Press

Republicans, stripped of their majority in the Senate, found solace in the nation's gubernatorial elections where they netted at least eight new seats, including coveted Texas and Florida.

With all but two — effectively one — of 36 gubernatorial elections decided, the count early today was 24-24.

Republicans actually took previously Democratic governors' offices in 11 states, but lost three previously held by Republicans. The 11 were: Wisconsin, South Carolina, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Kansas, Texas, Nebraska, Maine, Florida, Alabama, Arizona. The three were Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Oregon.

GOP candidate Arliss Sturgulewski, one of nine women gubernatorial candidates across the nation, trailed Democrat Stephen C. Cooper in a three-way Alaska race complicated by the write-in candidacy of former GOP Gov. Wally Hickel.

Democratic incumbent Madeleine Kunin seemed destined to prevail in Vermont although the question there won't be settled formally until the Legislature meets in January.

Republicans last held a majority of statehouses in 1969.

Among the Democratic victories Tuesday were nine in which popular incumbents like New York's Mario Cuomo and Massachusetts' Mike Dukakis swept to victory.

Fifteen of the open seats belonged to the Democrats, while Republicans had only four vacancies.

The GOP won 17 states, grabbing control of eight vacant Democratic seats and defeating incumbents in Texas and Wisconsin, two states where economic issues were a factor.

In Texas, former GOP Gov. Bill Clements ousted Gov. Mark White, reversing the 1982 election between the same two men, and in Wisconsin, legislator Tommy Thompson, a Republican, bested Democratic Gov. Anthony Earl in a close contest.

But the GOP made impressive inroads in the West and the South, electing Guy Hunt as the first Republican governor of Alabama since Reconstruction, Rep. Carroll Campbell in South Carolina; Bob Martinez in Florida; Harry Bellmon in Oklahoma; Garrey Carruthers in New Mexico; Evan Meacham in Arizona, and Mike Hayden in Kansas. All were open seats previously held by Democrats.

Two of nation's five most populous states — California and Illinois — re-elected GOP incumbents, George Deukmejian and James Thompson, respectively.

But in Pennsylvania, Democrat Bob Casey defeated Lt. Gov. William Scranton III to regain the seat his party.

Democrats also picked up Tennessee as Ned Ray McWherter ran a strong race against Winfield Dunn for the open seat.

U.S. officials mum on reports of failed peace trip to Iran

By Jeffrey Ubrich
The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran's prime minister said today there was no possibility of negotiations with Washington, which Tehran claims sent former National Security adviser Robert McFarlane and four other Americans on a futile mission to mend relations.

Town repairs part of scene

The stable from one of the nativity scenes destroyed by fire last month has been repaired and will be used when a new nativity scene is placed in the center of town, Park Superintendent Robert Harrison said Tuesday.

Harrison said Park Department employees were able to repair the stable, which was damaged in an Oct. 17 fire at the lodge in Center Springs Park. The fire damaged almost all the figures for the town's two nativity scenes being stored there.

The setting for the scene that had been displayed at Robertson Park was also destroyed by the fire. Harrison said some kind of shelter for the figures may have to be improvised for this year.

Figures for two new scenes have been ordered and are expected to arrive in town in four to six weeks. Loans from the Savings Bank of Manchester and the Manchester Board of Realtors will finance the purchase of the scenes at a cost of about $13,500. A public fund drive will be held to repay the loans.

Mayor Barbara Weinberg said Tuesday she has received a message from Melnick Display and Decorations that one camel and one angel in the scene for Robertson Park will not be available in time for the delivery.

One unanswered question is where the scene for the center of town will be displayed. Originally it was put in Center Park, but was moved to the lawn of Center Congregational Church to avoid an objection to a religious display on public land.

Crash victims satisfactory

Two young Manchester women who suffered multiple injuries in an automobile accident Monday afternoon remain in satisfactory condition at Manchester Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokesman said today.

Mary Ann Forand, 16, of 57 Columbus St., and Lisa Gyoreri, 17, of 168 W. Center St., were passengers in a car that left the road on Princeton Street, glanced off an oak tree and knocked down a utility pole at about 1:30 p.m. Monday.

The driver of the car, Wayne Hollingsworth, 16, of 102 Charter Oak St., was charged with reckless driving and is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court on Monday.

parts to Iran. Published reports in the Middle East said secret negotiations between Iran and the United States led to the release Sunday of one American hostage, David Jacobsen, by a pro-Iranian group that says it holds two other Americans.

But Prime Minister Hussein Musaavi was quoted today by Tehran Radio as saying, "There isn't any possibility of any kind of negotiations between us and America. The relations with America, because of its crimes against the Islamic revolution, is one as between the wolf and the lamb."

Musaavi reiterated Rafsanjani's claim that McFarlane led a peace mission to Iran, but like Rafsanjani, did not say when the purported trip was made.

"Mr. Rafsanjani in his speech referred to one of the Americans who introduced himself as McFarlane and his papers proved that, and a Xerox of their passports exists," Musaavi said.

REAGAN, MCFARLANE and U.S. government officials had no comment on the Iranian claim, because of its crimes against the Islamic revolution, is one as between the wolf and the lamb."

The agency, monitored in Cyprus, today quoted Rafsanjani as saying in a speech Tuesday, "If you want us to help you, provided like others you do not interfere with our job, we will help — if our friends in Lebanon accept. Of course, our friends in Lebanon are also free. They have no commitments to us that they should obey our orders."

The price for the help, he said, was delivery of weapons and spare parts for Iran, locked in a 6-year war with neighboring Iraq.

He later said Iran's conditions for helping free the hostages were guarantees from Washington and

Paris that Iranian assets seized after the 1979 revolution would be returned, recognition of the rights of Lebanese Moslems and freedom for political prisoners in Israel and other parts of the world.

Islamic Jihad, which held Jacobsen and claims to hold Associated Press reporter Terry A. Anderson and educator Thomas Sutherland, has been demanding that Kuwait free 17 people convicted in the bombings of the French and U.S. embassies in Kuwait. Kuwait refuses.

IRNA SAID Rafsanjani's speech commemorated the seventh anniversary of the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. Militants held 52 Americans hostage for 444 days, prompting the United States to break diplomatic relations with Iran.

Rafsanjani said Rafsanjani and the other envoys arrived on a plane carrying military supplies Iran had bought from international dealers.

They brought "one Colt," presumably a pistol, for every Iranian official, a Bible signed by Reagan and a cake shaped like a key "to open Tehran-Washington ties," Rafsanjani was quoted as saying.

Can you name these oddball vegetables?

So you think you know your veggies

OK, smarty, sit down at the kitchen table and take this test

- By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter
- Even when Judy Gorman was young, she loved vegetables. "I guess I was a really weird kid that way," she says. "When kids would ask what your favorite food was, I would say, 'vegetables.'"
- It should come as no surprise that the Dale Road resident has just published a cookbook, "Judy Gorman's Vegetable Cookbook." Published by Yankee Books, it is being delivered to most bookstores around the country this week.
- Gorman's approach to her second cookbook is different from the way most authors tackle vegetable cookbooks. Gorman begins with artichokes and works through the alphabet to zucchini. In between are such little-known veggies as chayote, jicama, miriflon, rapini and rocket.
- She explains that a plantain is a cousin to a banana. It is generally boiled, broiled or fried. A salsify is a long oyster-white root vegetable, similar to a carrot, which is good in soups and stews.
- And she did not include only her own favorites. She spent several years researching unusual ways to use traditional favorites, such as sauteeing carrots with oregano, or making marmalade out of red onions.
- Where will this cooking teacher and author head next, now that she's gone "on beyond zucchini"? She's kneading her way through the manuscript for a bread cookbook, which will also be published by Yankee.
- Here are the answers to the quiz, above:
1. This is taro root, and it is grown in the South and in Hawaii. It has a starchy texture. Store it, uncut, in a cool, dry well-ventilated place for two to three weeks, or refrigerate unwrapped for five to seven days.
 2. These are tomatillos. They look a great deal like the Chinese lantern plants used in dried-flower arrangements. Tomatillos have a slightly acidic flavor that might be compared with that of a tart apple. It is a distinctive taste and one which contributes essential character to the cuisines of Mexico and the American Southwest. Without washing or removing the husk, place in a shallow pan and refrigerate in a single layer. May be kept one to three weeks.
 3. These are sorrel leaves, also known as sour spinach or chive. The plant grows wild throughout North America, but you'll find the cultivated varieties in the markets. Sorrel has a sharp, lemony flavor and disintegrates rapidly into a puree when cooked. It is extremely fragile and should be used the day it's purchased, if possible.
 4. These Jerusalem artichokes are not from Jerusalem and are not artichokes. They are roots from a plant related to the sunflower. They are exceptionally high in iron. The best time to buy them is now through April. Unwrapped, they may be stored in a cool, dry place away from light. Their flavor is more like water chestnuts than artichokes. Serve raw, in a salad or with dip. Since the flesh darkens quickly when exposed to the air, the pieces must be submerged in lemon juice and water when they are cut.
 5. These are enoki mushrooms, and they come from Japan. They will last less firm than cultivated white mushrooms, but should not be spongy. As soon as you get them home, remove from packaging. Handle as little as possible. Do not wash. Transfer to a paper bag or wrap in cheesecloth or a clean kitchen towel. The idea is to allow air to circulate. May be refrigerated up to five days.
 6. Kohlrabi is a distinctive-looking vegetable that is related to a cabbage, but has the flavor of a delicate turnip. Look for kohlrabies that measure about 2 inches in diameter. Anything larger will be pithy and strongly flavored. Remove leaves and stalks, and store in an airtight bag. Refrigerate and use leaves within three to four days, bulbs within seven to 10 days.

Mystery vegetables offer chance to experiment

- Taro chips
 3 slender taro roots
 Vegetable oil for deep frying
 Freshly ground sea salt
 Rinse taro roots. Place in a wide saucpan. Add enough water to cover by an inch. Bring to a gentle bubble and cook uncovered for 40 minutes or until tender when pierced. Drain and pat dry. Refrigerate for three hours or until thoroughly chilled.
 Remove skin with a paring knife or swivel-blade peeler. Slice as thinly as possible. Heat the oil in a deep-fat fryer to 375 degrees. Submerge the slices of taro root in the hot oil in small batches. Cook until crisp and lightly browned. Drain on absorbent paper and sprinkle with sea salt. Serve as you would potato chips.
 Note: Taro chips usually develop a pinkish-purple starburst pattern in the center while they cook.
- Grilled chicken with salsa verde
 2 chicken breasts, boned and split
 1/4 cup vegetable oil
 Juice of 2 limes
 1 pound tomatillos, coarsely chopped
 1/4 cup water
 1 medium onion, quartered
 1 garlic clove, cut in half
 2 green chili peppers, such as jalapeno, seeded
 1 tablespoon chopped fresh cilantro
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1/2 cup sour cream
 Place chicken breasts in a shallow dish. Pour on the oil and sprinkle with the juice of 1 lime. Turn to coat both sides. Cover the dish and refrigerate for four hours, turning occasionally to ensure even marinating.
 Meanwhile, combine the tomatillos and water in a wide saucpan. Bring to a gentle bubble and cook, uncovered, for 10 minutes or until tender. Increase the heat and cook, stirring, until almost all the liquid is evaporated. Transfer to the container of a blender or processor.
 Add the onion, garlic, chilies, cilantro, salt and the juice of the remaining lime. Process until smooth. Transfer to a small bowl and refrigerate.
 Place the chicken breasts on a hot grill and cook, basting with the oil marinade. When lightly charred, transfer to a serving platter. Spoon a generous dollop of sour cream onto each piece of chicken and spoon on some of the salsa verde.
- Wilted sorrel salad
 12 ounces sorrel
 2 large hard-cooked eggs, coarsely chopped
 4 tablespoons butter
 2 shallots, minced
 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
 1 cup water
 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 Pinch cayenne pepper
 Rinse sorrel and remove tough stems. Tear into bite-sized pieces and place in a salad bowl. Add chopped pepper and toss to combine.
 Melt butter in a small saucpan. Add shallots and toss to coat. Stir over medium heat until the shallots are tender. Sprinkle on the flour and continue stirring over medium heat until the mixture foams. Remove from the heat and whisk in the water. Return to medium heat and stir until the mixture bubbles and thickens. Blend in the mustard, salt and cayenne.
 Pour the hot dressing over the sorrel and toss immediately so that the leaves will wilt. Serve at once.
- Jerusalem artichokes sauteed in butter
 1 1/2 pounds Jerusalem artichokes, unpeeled
 4 tablespoons butter
 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 1/2 tablespoon water
 2 tablespoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese
 Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
 1 tablespoon chopped fresh chives

Supermarket Shopper

Newlywed wants to know secrets of smart shoppers

By Martin Sloane
United Features Syndicate

DEAR MARTIN: I read your column frequently and I am particularly amazed by the savings some "smart shoppers" manage to accumulate. For example, your smart shopper of the year was Dorothy Clark, who purchased $1,148.74 worth of groceries for just $108. How is it possible? What does she buy?

Perhaps your longtime readers know all the methods, but I am newly married and new to the supermarket-shopping scene. Any advice would be greatly appreciated. — Joan Fas, Clinton, N.J.

DEAR JOAN: The shopping spree that earned Dorothy Clark her title of Smart Shopper of the Year was a carefully planned event. She does not go on a spree like this weekly, or even monthly. Her goal was to create a register tape with the longest deduction for coupons, and here was a world record.

Day-in and day-out savings are what you should be interested in, and you get these by carefully checking the supermarket newspaper advertisements for items on sale, and matching them up with manufacturers' coupons and refund offers.

Here is a letter that shows the smart-shopping savings you can achieve on every trip to the supermarket.

DEAR MARTIN: My grocery budget for a family of four is $80 a week, and here are a few of this week's savings.

The 8-quant can of Kool-Aid drink mix normally sells for $2.39 and was on sale for $1.69. I had a $1 store coupon clipped out of the supermarket's newspaper advertisement, and this brought my cost down to 69 cents, which is less than 10 cents a quart.

Pure & Natural bath soap was on sale at 79 cents for the three-pack. I had a 35-cent coupon, which the store doubled. So the soap cost me just 9 cents!

Last but not least, Oscar Meyer Weiners are usually priced at $2.29. The sale price was $1.79. My 50-cent coupon was doubled, so my final cost was only 79 cents.

As you might guess, I have a well-organized coupon book, and I never leave home without it. — Lana Croft, Baton Rouge, La.

DEAR MARTIN: I recently clipped a coupon out of the newspaper offering 25 cents off the purchase of two packages of a product. In that same newspaper, a supermarket ran an advertisement offering the product as a "Super Special" at a very low price with a minimum purchase of $10. Of course, there was a limit of one item at that price.

What can I do with the 25-cent coupon? — L.A. Fort Myers, Fla.

DEAR L.A.: At the time you get the super special with the minimum purchase, you can buy another one at the regular price and use the 25-cent coupon on the purchase of both items. Or you can wait until the item is on sale again without any quantity limit.

Chicken can be prepared beautifully in the microwave

Microwave Kitchen Marge Churchill

A popular choice for dieters, chicken is rich in protein, low in fat, and when served without the skin, low calories. The average serving of chicken prepared without the skin is about 166 calories per serving.

The time required to prepare a whole roast chicken in the microwave is just about 10 minutes per pound. So, an average 3 1/2 pound chicken can be ready to serve in about 35 minutes. It is quite possible to cook and serve a family meal for four consisting of roast chicken, salad and vegetable, warmed rolls and dessert in just 45 minutes. This is a real boon for the busy family!

Roast chicken, either whole or chicken parts, can be beautifully cooked in the microwave. The broiling techniques are simple and quick to do. So, no more talk about gray, pale, or colorless poultry prepared in the microwave, please! It's just a matter of technique!

My favorite broiling technique is to simply brush the chicken with melted butter and sprinkle with paprika. The results are excellent, eye-catching, and golden brown. Or, if you wish, you may make up a broiling sauce, and keep it handy

- Power level 70% (medium-high) 10 minutes per pound
Whole frying chicken 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 pounds
Power level high (100%) 9 minutes per pound
Rinse chicken and pat dry. Brush with broiling agent or melted butter and sprinkle with paprika. Place bird, breast side down on a microwave roasting rack. Cook uncovered for one half of cooking time. Coat a second time with broiling sauce. Return to the microwave for second half of cooking time. Cook breast side up. Shield ends of legs or tips of breast, if needed, to prevent overcooking. Use small strips of aluminum foil securely wrapped around legs, or secured on breast with wooden toothpicks.

- Herb and wine chicken
1/2 cup red wine
2 tablespoons Kitchen Bouquet
2 tablespoons parsley
1/2 teaspoon thyme
1/2 teaspoon rosemary
Combine all ingredients in a wide-mouth jar which can be sealed. Shake well. Brush on poultry with a small paint brush or basting brush. Keep sauce refrigerated and sealed. It can be kept for use for about 6 weeks.

- Herb roasted chicken
2 packages (10 ounces each) frozen white and wild rice
1 stalk celery, thinly sliced
1 small onion, sliced
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1/2 cup butter
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves
1/2 teaspoon dried rosemary leaves
1/2 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
6 pound roasting chicken

- Chicken caquelote
3 tablespoons olive or salad oil
1 large onion, sliced
1 large green pepper, seeded, and cut into 1 inch cubes
1 carrot, chopped
1 medium garlic clove, crushed
1/2 teaspoon dried Italian seasoning
1 medium green bell pepper
1 medium red bell pepper
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 can (8 ounces) whole tomatoes in tomato puree
1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
1/2 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
1 chicken (3 pounds approximately) quartered

- Sweet and sour chicken
2 pounds boneless chicken or turkey breasts, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
3 tablespoons sherry
In a large shallow microwave-proof dish, toss chicken cubes with sherry. 2 teaspoons soy sauce and ground ginger. Set aside. Remove and discard stem, rib and seeds from peppers, cut peppers into strips. Cut strips in half crosswise; set aside. In a large glass bowl, combine vinegar, water, cornstarch, and 2 teaspoons soy sauce; mix well. Stir in pineapple chunks and their syrup. Add pepper strips. Microwave on high for 2 minutes, stirring once. Until sauce is thickened and clear. Set aside. Cover chicken pieces with waxed paper; microwave on high for 6 minutes, rearranging after half of the cooking time. With a slotted spoon, remove chicken pieces and add to sauce. Add sliced fresh ginger. Stir to combine. Cover and microwave on high for 1 1/2 to 2 minutes, until mixture is heated through. Spoon mixture onto serving platter. Serve with cooked rice. Makes 6 servings.

Drop Jerusalem artichokes into a large pot of boiling, salted water and cook, uncovered, for 10 to 15 minutes, or until crisp-tender. Drain in a colander and set out to cool. When cool enough to handle, slice the unpeeled Jerusalem artichokes into 1/4-inch thick rounds. Melt butter in a large skillet. Stir in lemon juice and water and add slices of Jerusalem artichokes. Toss to coat evenly and reduce heat. Cover the pan and cook slowly for 10 to 12 minutes or until tender when pierced.

- 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1/2 cup heavy cream
4 ounces enoki mushrooms
Sprinkle veal with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Set aside. Heat oil and butter in a large skillet until butter melts. Add shallot and stir over medium heat until tender. Remove shallot with a slotted spoon and transfer to a plate. Add veal scallops to the pan and cook over medium-high heat until nicely browned on both sides. Transfer to a plate. Pour the beef broth, wine and lemon juice into the pan and cook briskly until reduced by half. Remove from the heat and blend in the mustard and cream. Add the mushrooms and return to the heat. Bring to a boil. Then add the veal and the shallots, spooning the sauce and the mushrooms over the meat. When the veal is warmed through, transfer to a serving plate and pour on the sauce.

STRASBOURG, France — To the calorie-wary, goose liver pate is a regional delicacy. The cool but here it's a delectable appetizer that put this Alsatian capital on France's culinary map in lofty language.

This city of 250,000 on the French banks of the Rhine cannot claim to be the birthplace of "pate de foie gras." That credit, according to "L'Histoire Merveilleuse du Foie Gras de Strasbourg," goes to the ancient Egyptians, who force-fed figs to geese to fatten their livers. But Strasbourg does lay claim to giving foie gras its fame and to being the Pate Capital extraordinaire. It is said to have begun one day in 1780. The Marquis de Contades, King Louis XVI's emissary to Strasbourg, told his head cook, he expected "guests of distinction" the next day who were to be treated accordingly.

Post-Series ratings return to normal

NEW YORK (AP) — Football was sacked by the World Series, but otherwise last week's prime-time ratings pretty much returned to routine.

CBS' "Dallas" beat NBC's "Miami Vice" on Friday, but NBC's "L.A. Law" tied CBS' "Falcon Crest." ABC's "Moonlighting" was the network's only top-10 show, NBC's only bottom-10 entry was "1986."

NBC won the week with an average prime-time rating of 19.5, according to A.C. Nielsen Co. figures released Tuesday. CBS was second with 15.8. ABC had a 12.6. Each rating point equals $74,000 homes with television.

The seventh game of the World Series, Monday on NBC, attracted the biggest television audience ever for a baseball game, according to the Nielsen ratings, and helped boost NBC's numbers, though the network needed help, having won all five previous weeks of the new season.

The World Series rated a 38.9, replacing "The Cosby Show" in the No. 1 spot for the first time since June when the family-style situation comedy was up against the "Liberty Weekend" celebration on ABC.

"Cosby" was No. 2 last week with a rating of 34.9.

ABC's "Monday Night Football" led the Washington Redskins and the New York Giants went up against the rain-delayed series between the Boston Red Sox and the New York Mets and dropped to 67th out of 74 with a rating of 8.8.

Seven of the top 10 shows last week were on NBC: "Family Ties," a family sit-com that follows "Cosby," was No. 3; "Cheers," a sit-com set in a Boston bar that follows "Family Ties," was No. 4; "Night Court," a sit-com set in a New York courtroom that follows "Cheers," was No. 7.

NBC's Saturday sit-com, "Golden Girls," was No. 8, and the World Series pre-game show was 10th.

CBS' highest-rated show was "Murder She Wrote" at No. 4. Its other top-10 entry was "60 Minutes" at No. 6.

ABC's "Moonlighting," the screwball-comedy detective series, was ninth.

"Except for baseball giving it some spark, otherwise the week was pretty much true to form," said Gerald Jaffe, NBC's vice president for research projects.

Jaffe said the network was somewhat disappointed by "Rage of Angels: The Story Continues," the sequel to the hit 1985 miniseries.

Man consumed with love obsession

DEAR ABBY: I am hopelessly in love with a married woman. The problem is she will not leave her husband. I have been in love with her for 13 years — ever since I met her.

The last 13 years I've lived in misery. Until last year I had never even kissed her. Then last month, my dream came true and she finally gave herself to me. I was so high I swear I could fly. Abby, I could never have another woman again. If only she would leave her husband, I would give anything to be married.

I am losing my sanity. I can't eat. I can't sleep. Sometimes I am so hungry for her I just want to die. I am obsessed by her smile, her looks, her voice, her mind. She is everything I have ever wanted in a woman and I can't have her. Help me!

Now, all you need is a therapist to help you accept emotionally what you have already accepted intellectually.

Thoughts
 "Our Father, forgive us our sins, as we forgive those who sin against us."
 If there's one thing I know, it's that I stand in need of forgiveness. There is only one person who is perfect, and it isn't me. I need to be forgiven for so much of what I do. I need to be forgiven for so many things I ought to but don't do. For me, for us, the life Christ wants is impossible. Our only hope is for God to erase the score. The good news is that God does just that. But there's something else. I'm expected to forgive in the same way that God forgives me. When someone wrongs me, I am to go to her and forgive the wrong. When someone crosses me, I am to erase his debt. It's much more natural to keep score, or to get back, or to carry a grudge or a hurt. But no. As with so many things of God, what I receive as a free blessing God expects me to give as a free blessing to others.

The forgiveness which flows into me should be flowing from me.

Slam scores on error
By James Jacoby
I'm proud of today's North-South pair for playing the Jacoby transfer bid after a one-no-trump opening. North's bid of two diamonds forced South to bid two hearts. (South's jump to three hearts announced a maximum hand with four-card heart support.) Next came a series of cue-bids. Most important of these was the four-spade cue-bid by South, since that placed the partnership beyond four hearts. At that point North willingly bid the slam.
It would have been a good slam if South had the jack of clubs instead of the jack of hearts. As the cards lay, declarer needed to find the king of clubs with West and apparently also needed the club suit to split. But he worked out an extra chance. He drew trumps, ruffed his losing spade in dummy and then cashed the A-K of diamonds. Now he played a low club. When West followed with the seven, he played low from dummy. East won the singleton jack and had to return a card that allowed South to trump in his hand and discard a low club from dummy. Now the club finesse brought home the contract.
South played well, but West could have set six hearts. When the first club is finally led, he must go up with the king to protect against two possibilities: first, that East had the singleton jack; second, that East had one of the other missing clubs singleton and declarer was planning to duck the club into him. Needless to say, once the club king is played, declarer cannot avoid the loss of two club tricks.

SPORTS
Coventry scores easy
Class S tourney win

By Jim Tierney
Herald Sports Writer

COVENTRY - What was expected to be a tight Class S first round contest, between the sixth-ranked Coventry High boys' soccer team and 11th-ranked Lyman Memorial High of Lebanon never materialized. The outcome was never in doubt.
The homestanding Patriots, now 12-2-3, received goals from six different players and went on to post a surprisingly easy 6-0 win Tuesday over the visiting Bulldogs. The win catapults Coventry into the quarterfinal round versus the Granby-Coginchaug victor Saturday at a site and time to be announced.
Coventry, the Charter Oak Conference champions, had played Lyman to a 2-2 tie on Oct. 27, which seemed to be the right tuneup the visitors would need in preparation for Tuesday's match. The Patriots, however, shrugged off their recent poor performances - two losses and two ties - and took it right to Lyman, which never had a chance to breathe. The Bulldogs finish 8-3-6.
"Yes, I was surprised," Coventry coach Bob Plaster said of his team's easy victory. "Especially, because of the wind. We just got done with them (Lyman) last week, and I told my kids that if they didn't go outside against Lyman, it would be tough."

The Patriots went outside, inside, and every which way against Lyman and before the Bulldogs could regroup, they trailed, 3-0. Rob Berkowitz opened the scoring - the only goal Coventry would need - at 11:08 of the first half on a beautiful display of passing. Sophomore Jack Ayer turned the ball upfield and carried the ball past the defense, then, he released to Jason Smith. Smith gathered the ball in stride and sent a pass to the right wing, where Berkowitz corralled Smith's pass and angled an 11-yarder inside the left post for a 1-0 lead.
At 15:43, Smith scored on a left-footed shot which went right between Lyman goalie Garth Senchal's legs, following a scramble in front of the visitors' net. Meanwhile, Lyman wasn't accomplishing much offensively and had to deal with the Patriots' onslaught. Coventry, which played against the wind in the first half, scored its third goal at 24:28 of the first half. Off a direct kick, Jason Garick faked the attempt and Berkowitz slid the ball over to sweeperback Matt Paton, who fired a 26-yarder right at Senchal. But, Senchal couldn't find the handle and the Bulldogs found themselves in a deep hole, down 3-0.
"Hey (Coventry) just took the field with a lot of intensity," Lyman coach Rich Bryant said. "We lacked the intensity and we just didn't play soccer the first 15 minutes. I told them at half that we could get three, but once four comes, everyone put their head down."
Well, it didn't take long for No. 4 to come for Coventry in the second half. At 5:08, Peter Lazerini bounced a shot off Senchal and David Burrell picked up the bouncing rebound and deposited it in the net for the 4-0 lead. "After we won the COC," Plaster said, "we had problems with injuries and didn't have much intensity. With some pressure today, they responded."

Sox' McNamara named as top manager in AL

By Howard Ulmon
The Associated Press

BOSTON - The American League has plenty of good managers, all of whom have patience, know how to handle players and are excellent communicators.
What is it, then, that separates Boston's John McNamara from his peers?
"Roger Clemens," he answered simply.
After 13 years as a major-league manager and after his most depressing moments in that long stretch, McNamara won his first AL Manager of the Year award Tuesday.
He credited Clemens, the right-hander with the record and his Red Sox teammates with bringing him the honor.
"An award like this, you have to share it with so many people," McNamara said. "The players make the manager."
McNamara said he won't rate the importance of his role in bringing the Red Sox from a fifth-place finish in the American League East in 1985, his first year as manager, to within one strike of a world championship in 1986.
"that's for somebody else to judge," McNamara said. "I don't know any other way to put it. I did my job. I'd let somebody else evaluate what I did."
The voting for manager of the year, conducted by the Baseball Writers Association of America, was completed before postseason play. The evaluations of McNamara's decisions in the World Series were often critical.
"Roger Clemens, but you stay with what you have," he said at a news conference Tuesday. "That's what we did."
Boston led the New York Mets in the World Series, three games to two. The Red Sox led the sixth game, 5-3 in the 10th inning, and New York had two outs and nobody on. But the Mets rallied to win 6-5, then overcame a 3-0 deficit in the seventh game to win 8-5 and win it, the title.
"1985 is the toughest thing that I've been through" as a manager, McNamara said.
His chances of winning the manager of the year award were "the furthest thing from my mind," in the days after the World Series, he added. "I would have rather had a win and let somebody else be manager of the year."
Somebody else almost was. McNamara edged Bobby Valentine of the Texas Rangers by a single first-place vote, 13-12. Each got eight second-place votes and six third-place votes from a panel of 28 sports writers, two from each AL city.
McNamara had 95 points based on a system awarding five points for a first-place vote, three points for second and one point for third. Valentine had 90 points.
Gene Mauch of the California Angels, who were beaten by the Red Sox in the AL playoffs, received two first-place votes and 44 points. Pat Corrales of the Cleveland Indians got the other first-place vote and 18 points.
The only other manager to receive votes was Lou Piniella of the New York Yankees. One voter had him in second place and two others in third for a total of five points.
The Red Sox took over first place in the AL East on May 15 and never gave it up. Despite losing the last four games of the regular season to New York, Boston won its division by 5 1/2 games with a 95-66 record.
In 1985, Boston was 81-81 and finished 18th games behind the first-place Toronto Blue Jays. This year the Red Sox overcame serious injuries to starting pitchers Bruce Huest and Al Nipper and the club's mid-season suspension of Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd.
But for McNamara that turnaround was ruined by the World Series loss. And not even the manager of the year award can erase the pain.
"I take it for granted that I'm going to win. That's why this is so devastating, to come that close. The hurt will remain," he added. "However long a person's been a Sox fan or a rooster, it's not going to hurt them more than the hurt I feel."

East Catholic football in a strange situation

Can a team qualify for a state championship game, but not play for its own league crown?
That situation may confront the East Catholic football team. The Eagles, after eight weeks, sport a 6-1-1 overall record. That puts them in a comfortable - for now - situation as far as the numbers go in Class MM, East, which won the state title in that division in MM. East, which won the championship game, slated for the weekend of Dec. 5-6, again this year.
But, wait, the Eagles may not make the championship game in the rugged All Connecticut Conference. East beat ACC foe St. Joseph last Saturday, 36-26, but it was one of four designated games that do not count in the ACC standings. East, despite the win, dropped back into fourth place in the ACC at 2-1.
Xavier is third at 3-1. Fairfield Prep second at 2-0-2 and Notre Dame of West Haven in the lead at 4-0. Prep did lose to Notre Dame, 28-15, but it was the Jesuit's designated game. Prep still must face Xavier and St. Bernard in ACC play. Xavier still has to play Notre Dame along with Prep in conference dates.

IF COACH JUDE KELLY'S SQUAD is to make the ACC title game, it'll have to win its last two ACC games - against South Catholic Friday night at Mount Hebo and against St. Bernard next Friday evening in Uncasville - and look for some help.
Kelly, for one, isn't thinking about the ACC title game that will be played Friday night, Nov. 21, at neutral site. "There are too many uncontrollable factors right now. I'm not looking at it right now. All we're looking at is getting ready for South Catholic," he said.
East's wishbone attack, which was defused in its loss to Notre Dame and held in check by Xavier, was clicking on all cylinders last Saturday night against St. Joseph. A pass interference call - disputed by some - did play a role in the outcome. But an undisputed fact is St. Joseph never stopped East's ground game. Kevin RiCassi, who scored three TDs to bring his total to 18 for the season, churned out 180 yards on 22 carries to lead a 246-yard ground assault.
ONE NEGATIVE TO THE WIN over the Kadets was a knee injury to 5-10, 170-pound senior running back/defensive back Bill Barry. He was to be reevaluated Tuesday morning by an orthopedist. He suffered a dislocated knee and stretched some ligaments, according to Kelly. "He may not need surgery," Kelly said, "but I'm assuming he's out for the rest of the year. I'm just glad it's not as bad as it might have been."
Barry was East's second-leading scorer before the injury with 5 TDs and four two-point conversions.

MHS season ends
The 1986 season for the Manchester High boys' soccer team is over, ended in a 1-0 loss to Staples High in a Class LL qualifying round test, Monday in Westport. The loss leaves Manchester 7-8-1, its first losing season since 1949.
For seventh-year coach Bill McCarthy and the Indians, it was a learning season. McCarthy thinks his team will be better for it come 1987. "I feel next year will be a different story," McCarthy said. His young team, he believes, was found wanting against older opponents after enjoying success at Billing and Bennett juniors high the year before. "I think they found it a little tougher playing kids two or three years older than them," he cited.

ONE INGREDIENT WHICH MCCARTHY knows he's going to have to conjure up is a legitimate goal-scorer. Mo McCarthy led the Indians with only 5 goals this year. Next in line were Chris Lyder, Glenn Jensen and Louis Jaffe with 3 apiece. Manchester scored a minute 23 goals in 16 games. 14 of those in three consecutive wins, 5-0 and 3-0 over Ferk and 6-1 over Hartford Public.

"We didn't have anyone you could look at and say 'hey, here's the offense,'" McCarthy said. "We need someone who isn't afraid to take it (shot) with authority from the 18 (yard line)." In 1985, that role was filled by Nick Caccala, who notched 16 goals. That gave him a three-year total of 42, putting him third on the all-time MHS career scoring list.
From Jim Penders, East Catholic baseball coach, the CIAC's baseball committee voted down a proposal from the Rules Committee that games, by mutual consent and during the CIAC tournament, would be nine innings in length. Instead, what was approved was an additional week before the baseball of season for conditioning for eight pitchers and two catchers. Those names must be submitted prior to the week of conditioning and cannot be altered.

Kelly Ryan doesn't regret his selection of Yale

By Chris Doel
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — Kelly Ryan could have accepted a football scholarship from top-ranked Miami or perennial power Notre Dame or "half the schools in the Big Ten Conference."

But he passed them up to play quarterback at Yale.

Kelly Ryan could be playing for teams that are regular fixtures on Saturday afternoon national telecasts.

But he passed them up to play for a team that hasn't been on a major network, or even cable, in six years.

Kelly Ryan could have regrets about this.

But he doesn't.

"I think Division I-AA may be a step back from big-time college football, but in a lot of other aspects Yale is a step above the Division I programs," said the junior with the choir-boy face and the lethal arm.

"Academically, the Yale experience is going to be a lot more beneficial to me than if I had chosen a Division I program."

There's a certain aura about Division I, big-time, powerhouse football teams that appeals to almost any college player...

Except this one.

And so, the 6-foot-2, 200-pound sociology major from Springfield, Ill., has taken his place among the best quarterbacks ever to play at the Ivy League school.

Though there was still recruiting competition for Ryan, his older brother, Mike, was already playing for Yale and convinced his brother Tom Ellis in the family might be better than one. He had nothing but good things to say about Yale, its team, and its coach, Carm Cozza.

"Miami of Florida was interested and Notre Dame was talking to him, so we knew he was a player. What we didn't know was whether they were considering him as a quarterback or because of his fine athletic ability, as a defensive back or whatever," Cozza said. "We know now they were interested in his quarterbacking ability, because that's what he is."

In his sophomore season, as a backup for Mike Curtin, Ryan came in against Holy Cross to complete 5 of 8 passes for 40 yards and a touchdown, lifting the Elis to a 18-15 come-from-behind victory.

In his first varsity start for the Bulldogs, Ryan broke four of Yale's individual records. Standards for passing yardage, total offense, completions and attempts were dashed as he connected on 29 of 48 passes for 426 yards in a losing effort against Army.

"He already stands right at the top of the quarterbacks I've had here," said Cozza, dean of Ivy League coaches with 22-years of service. "I've never had a quarterback who throws better than him. He has tremendous leadership ability and tremendous heart."

Ryan tore the posterior ligament in his left knee during a freak play in an intra-squad scrimmage a week before the regular season started. He missed the first game and most of the second before starting against Army.

With just four varsity starts, Ryan has become just the eighth Yale quarterback to throw for 1,000 yards in a season. With four games remaining on the Elis' 1986 schedule, he is likely to break the single-season passing record of 1,584 yards set by Brian Dowling in 1968.

Hawks send Milwaukee a double message

By Bill Bernard
The Associated Press

The Atlanta Hawks, seeking to end Milwaukee's six-year hold on the Central Division championship, have sent the Bucks a double message.

Not only did the Hawks hand the Bucks a 107-88 victory, Milwaukee a 107-88 victory last night, but they did it with NBA scoring champ Dominique Wilkins on the bench for most of the game with an injured ankle. Randy Wittman and Kevin Willis scored 28 and 23 points, respectively, to make up for Wilkins' absence.

"When you lose a guy like Dominique, whether by an off night or to an injury, someone has to step forward and pick up the slack," Wittman said. "I just try to be more aggressive offensively and help out with the scoring. We don't need just one person to do the scoring. I think we showed that. Our goal is to win the division, and to do that we have to be the Bucks."

Wilkins, the NBA's scoring champion last year with a 30.3 per game average, left with an ankle injury late in the first quarter after scoring one point and missing all seven of his field-goal attempts. He had scored 38 and 39 points in Atlanta's first two games, but the injury left him on a "day-to-day" status.

"We are a little older and a little more experienced," Wittman said. "This game should give us a lot of confidence."

In other games, it was Washington, 102, New Jersey 101; Indiana 125, Philadelphia 121 in double overtime; Chicago 111, San Antonio 104; Dallas 118, Los Angeles

Bulls 111, Spurs 104

Michael Jordan scored 34 points, 26 of them in the second half, as Chicago stayed unbeaten with a victory over San Antonio.

Jordan, who has 125 points in three games, rallied the Bulls from a 19-point deficit in the second quarter. His basket with 5:32 left in the game broke a 100-100 tie and gave the Bulls the lead for good.

Charles Oakley added 28 points for Chicago, while Mike Mitchell's 34 points topped the Spurs.

Rockets 100, Kings 84

Akeem Olajuwon scored 26 points and Jim Petersen had 15 rebounds as Houston won at Sacramento.

Mitchell Wiggins, who scored 21 points, scored four consecutive baskets in the final three minutes of the third period, giving the Rockets a 74-60 lead going into the final 12 minutes.

Derek Smith led the Kings with 22 points.

Lakers 110, Sonics 96

James Worthy scored 26 points and Byron Scott added 23 and they led a 3-2-2 Los Angeles run in the third period against Seattle.

Scott hit a three-point goal early in the third quarter to break a 54-54 tie and then added 10 more points to lead the Lakers to a 74-60 lead in the third quarter.

Tom Chambers led the Sonics with 21 points, while the Lakers got 17 rebounds from Kurt Rambis.

Bulls 102, Nets 101

Jeff Malone scored 26 points, including a 20-foot fallaway jumper with four seconds remaining, lifting Washington over New Jersey.

Two free throws by Dwayne Washington gave the Nets a 101-100 lead with 13 seconds left. The Bulls, who blew a 19-point first-quarter lead, regained the lead on Malone's basket and then fouled New Jersey's last bid when rookie John Williams stole the ball from Orlando Woolridge as he attempted a last-ditch shot near the foul circle.

Moses Malone scored 32 points for the Bulls, while Buck Williams had 20 points and 13 rebounds for the Nets.

New Jersey forward Buck Williams (52) shoots over a bevy of Bulls, including Dan Roundfield (5) and Mike O'Koren (25) in NBA action Tuesday night at Landover, Md. The Bulls won, 102-101.

UConn hosts Big East tournament

STORRS — The University of Connecticut will serve as host this weekend to the fifth annual Big East Soccer Tournament at the Connecticut Soccer Stadium, Seton Hall (15-1) faces Boston College (6-7) in the Saturday opener at 10 a.m. with the Huskies (12-8) battling Syracuse (5-4) at 1 p.m.

The winner's meet Sunday at 1 p.m. for the Big East championship and an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

Syracuse holds a 4-3 win over UConn this year, that game up in the other end of the last 13 games of the regular season.

UConn is 9-2 against the teams in the Big East tourney. It lost, 2-1 in overtime, to BC.

Wojnarowski a UConn stalwart

STORRS — Senior Patti Wojnarowski, a Manchester High School graduate, was in the starting lineup for the University of Connecticut women's soccer team for all 18 Husky games in 1986. Wojnarowski had four shots this year and recorded two assists for the Huskies, who wound up 14-4 heading into post-season play.

UConn faces Brown (11-2-3) Saturday night at 7 in Providence, R.I. in NCAA first-round play.

Wojnarowski, an electrical engineering major, has started in 33 of 38 career games for Connecticut. She has scored one goal along with 10 assists in 12 points.

Major League all-stars unbeaten

FUKUOKA, Japan — Jesse Barfield, Von Hayes and Jose Canseco each belted two home runs, leading the unbeaten U.S. major league all-stars to a 13-3 victory over their Japanese counterparts Wednesday in the fourth game of their seven-game goodwill series.

Playing before 27,000 spectators at Heiwadai Stadium on Japan's southernmost main island of Kyushu, the Americans took a 1-0 lead on a second-inning solo home run by Barfield, the Toronto Blue Jays' slinger.

In the third, the U.S. team exploded for five hits and six runs off Hisanobu Watanabe of the Japan Series champion Seibu Lions. Hayes, of the Philadelphia Phillies, singled a two-run home run and Canseco, of the Oakland Athletics, belted a solo shot.

The fifth game is to be played Thursday at the 50,000-seat Koshien Stadium in Osaka, western Japan.

Mariners add to coaching staff

SEATTLE — Billy Connors, pitching coach of the Chicago Cubs for the past five seasons, on Tuesday was named pitching coach of the Seattle Mariners, who also added Bobby Tolan and Frank Howard to Manager Dick Williams' coaching staff.

Gildemeister pulls off big upset

WORCESTER, Mass. — Peruvian Laura Gildemeister limited No. 5 seed Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany to just five points in the final five games to produce a 7-6 (7-5), 6-1 opening-round upset at the Virginia Sluis of New England tennis tournament Tuesday.

Third-seed Czechoslovakian Helena Sukova overcame an early threat from upset-minded Melissa Gurney for a 1-6, 6-1, 6-2 victory.

Lemieux cited

NEW YORK (AP) — Mario Lemieux of the Pittsburgh Penguins, who scored a league-high 15 goals, on Tuesday was named the NHL's Player of the Month for October.

Lemieux, whose performance highlighted the Penguins' best start, 8-3-0, since Pittsburgh joined the NHL in 1967-68, edged Edmonton Oilers center Wayne Gretzky.

Rookie Jet goalie calms Quebec

By The Associated Press

QUEBEC — Winnipeg rookie goalie Kelly Hrudey found his first minutes of NHL regular-season play a little unsettling.

"I was nervous," Hrudey said after the Jets' 6-3 victory over the Quebec Nordiques Tuesday night.

Berthiaume stopped Stastny's 25-foot wrist shot and went on to make 36 saves and lead his team to the win.

"When I made that first stop I became less nervous inside and started playing with confidence," he said.

Berthiaume was the Jets' third-round choice in 1985 draft and his only previous start for Winnipeg was in a 4-3 playoff loss to the Calgary Flames last spring.

Less than a week ago, he was in goal for the three-time Stanley Cup champions of the American Hockey League.

"There's a big difference between the AHL and the NHL," he said. "In the AHL, you can relax. In the NHL, you have to be ready for anything."

And as for his counterpart who was concerned, he wasn't.

He was there when they needed him. He was really solid, while Quebec goaltender Clint Malarchuk, who faced 22 shots. "He came out and challenged the season 6:11 of the third period broke a 3-3 tie. Dale Hawerchuk hit the outside of his stick and sent the puck into the net. I was ready to play."

Jim Kyte's first goal of the season at 6:11 of the third period broke a 3-3 tie. Dale Hawerchuk hit the outside of his stick and sent the puck into the net. I was ready to play.

Risto Silta, who was in goal for the Philadelphia Flyers and New York Islanders were 7-1 winners over the New Jersey Devils and Washington Capitals, respectively, while Pittsburgh tied Vancouver 2-2.

Quebec coach Michel Bergeron had little doubt about which part of his team should be held accountable for the defeat. He blamed the result directly on the defense.

"I haven't seen the defense play well in a long time," Bergeron said. "Maybe it's because I boasted about how good they are earlier this week."

Islander goalie Kelly Hrudey (30) saves action at the Nassau Coliseum Tuesday night. The Islanders won, 7-1.

Mario Lemieux grabbed the goal-scoring lead with his 17th midway through the third period to give Pittsburgh the tie. Lemieux took a pass from Dan Frawley, fought off a check from defenseman Dave Richter and pumped the shot into the upper right corner of the net past goalie Wendel Vanacker.

The power play also worked well for the Islanders, who won five in a row at home. They hit on three of six man-power advantages.

Pat LaFontaine and Mike Bossy each scored a pair of goals and Bryan Trottier contributed a goal and two assists. The Caps, usually successful power-play unit, LaFontaine scored 17 goals in 13 contests.
