WEATHER

NATIONAL FORECAST — Snow is forecast Saturday for the Northwest, with rain along the coastal areas. Showers are forecast from Texas to the Great Lakes and Northeast.

SNOW AND RAIN CLOUDS — Weather satellite photo taken at 3:30 a.m. shows a band of layered clouds stretching from central Mexico to the Middle Atlantic states. Snow-producing clouds are visible over the northern Rockies. High clouds stretch eastward to the upper Great Lakes. A band of clouds containing a few showers can be seen over the desert Southwest. Layered rain clouds obscure the Pacific Northwest.

China gets lesson

New York Stock Exchange Chairman John J. Phelan Jr. has left for China to help give officials in that communist nation some inside information on trading stocks and bonds.

Phelan departed Thursday at the head of a delegation of 20 U.S. executives to a four-day symposium, which opens Monday in Peking.

The Americans, who were invited by China, plan to teach banking and industrial officials there about equity markets, credit markets, security regulations and different types of financial instruments. It is Phelan's first trip to China and the first time the stock exchange has helped conduct such a symposium in a communist-run country.

Risky speech

Two-time Nobel Prize winner Linus Pauling and W. Edwards Deming, the management consultant who helped Japan in its industrial resurgence, were inducted into the Engineering and Science Hall of Fame in Dayton, Ohio.

In their acceptance speeches Thursday, both men warned that the United States is making some grave mistakes. Deming, 86, said American managers are headed for a collision with growing trade and budget deficits that will make this nation a bad credit risk. Pauling, 85, who won Nobels

Salk confidant

Dr. Jonas E. Salk says researchers racing to develop a vaccine for the deadly AIDS virus face a more difficult battle than he did in own successful quest for a polio vaccine more than three decades ago. However, Salk said he is confident a vaccine for acquired immune deficiency syndrome eventually will be found, despite the mysterious killer virus's complexity. Some doctors have predicted there may not be an AIDS cure discovered until the next century.

The 72-year-old researcher, who heads The Salk Institute for Biological Studies in La Jolla, Calif., was at the University of Pittsburgh on Thursday to give one of a series of lectures marking its medical school's centennial.

Across the nation

Snow fell from the Rockies to the Nebraska Panhandle today, leaving a blanket up to 9 inches thick and prompting storm warnings and travelers' advisories across the area.

The low-pressure system over Colorado causing the storm combined with high pressure off the Oregon coast to generate winds across California, as another storm system brought rain and snow to the Pacific Northwest.

The snow fell on much of the Rockies, Wyoming, southern Montana, western South Dakota and Nebraska as a mix of freezing rain and snow fell in southeast Wyoming.

Winter storm warnings were issued for extreme southwestern South Dakota and northeast Wyoming, where the National Weather Service said 8 to 12 inches of snow were possible.

High temperatures were predicted to be in the 30s and 40s in the Rockies, Utah, Nevada, the northern Plains, Minnesota and northern Maine; the 70s and 80s from Texas to the south Atlantic Coast; in the 70s in Southern California; in the 50s and 60s in the rest of the nation.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 14 degrees at Yellowstone Park, Wyo., to 81 degrees at Key West, Fla.

FOCUS

Earth's Defensive Shield

Scientists are once again concerned about the ozone layer. This invisible layer lies 6 to 30 miles above the Earth's surface. The amount of ozone in this layer of air is actually quite small, accounting for only 0.00006 percent of the total volume of dry air. Yet without it, the Sun would be lethal to many forms of life on Earth. That's because the ozone layer absorbs more than 99 percent of the Sun's dangerous ultraviolet radiation.

DO YOU KNOW — Ozone is a molecule consisting of three atoms of what element?

Almanac

Today is Friday, Nov. 7, the 311th day of 1986. There are 54 days left in the year. Today's highlight in history: On Nov. 7, 1917, Russia's October Revolution took place as Bolshevik forces led by Vladimir Ilyich Lenin overthrew the provisional government of Alexander Kerensky. (It's known as the October Revolution because of the calendar in use in Russia at the time.)

On this date: In 1874, the Republican Party was first symbolized as an elephant, in a cartoon by Thomas Nast in Harper's Weekly. In 1885, the Canadian Pacific Railway was completed as the last spike was driven at Craigellachie. In 1916, Republican Jeannette Rankin became the first woman elected to Congress. In 1918, during World War I, an armistice had been signed set off celebrations across the country.

In 1944, Franklin D. Roosevelt won a fourth term in office, defeating Thomas E. Dewey. In 1962, Richard M. Nixon, having lost California's gubernatorial race, held what he called his last press conference, telling reporters, "You won't have Nixon to kick around anymore." In 1962, Eleanor Roosevelt died.

In 1967, Carl Stokes was elected the first black mayor of a major city — Cleveland. In 1972, President Richard M. Nixon was re-elected in a landslide over Democrat George McGovern. In 1973, Congress overrode President Nixon's veto of the War Powers Act, which limits a chief executive's power to wage war without congressional approval.

Ten years ago: Lebanese President Elias Sarkis urged his countrymen in a speech to lay down their arms and end the bloodshed of the country's civil war.

Today's birthdays: Evangelist Billy Graham is 68. Jazz musician Al Hirt is 64. Opera singer Joan Sutherland is 60. Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., is 56. Singer-songwriter Joni Mitchell is 43. Actress Danna Patito is 22.

On the Light Side

Birthday greetings come 40 years early
LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) — The governor of Rhode Island was the first to wish Jeanne West a happy 80th birthday. Then came birthday greetings from 34 other members of the National Association of Gifted Children in Las Vegas, Nev. "If there are no risks, there is no new knowledge."

Scobee, an educator and member of the association's board of directors, spoke at the organization's annual convention Wednesday. On Thursday, she presented a commemorative plaque Thursday to Gov. Richard Bryan on behalf of the people of Nevada.

Risks embraced
June Scobee, wife of the late shuttle commander Dick Scobee, says the Challenger disaster taught her a new meaning of courage and the need to take risks.

"The greatest risk is to take no risk at all," Scobee told 2,000 members of the National Association of Gifted Children in Las Vegas, Nev. "If there are no risks, there is no new knowledge."

Other towns don't share Manchester's drought

By George Loyne
Herald Reporter

Although Manchester's reservoirs are at less than half their normal depth and a drought watch has been issued by town officials, reservoirs in other parts of the state are at normal levels.

The Metropolitan District Commission's reservoirs in Barkhamstead — which serve 400,000 customers in 11 towns in the Hartford area — are 85 percent full, MDC spokesman Todd Rosenthal said Thursday. He said the past few months have been drier than normal, but current levels are average for this time of the year.

"Obviously, it's been a dry fall, Rosenthal said. Similarly, the Windsor Locks-based Connecticut Water Company's reservoirs in Vernon and Stafford are either at sufficient levels or are overflowing, said Senior Sanitary Sewer Inspector Robert Glasheen.

"We have no worries about being low," he said Thursday.

THE SHENIPSIT RESERVOIR in the northeast corner of Vernon, which serves Vernon and South Windsor, is at 80 percent of capacity, Glasheen said. While the level has been low the past few months, Glasheen said it has not fallen further during the past few weeks and in fact has risen slightly with the recent rainfall. The reservoirs owned by the company in Stafford are overflowing their banks, he said.

In Windham, Water Department Superintendent Robert Sears said there has not been a problem supplying water to customers. He said the town has one of the largest watershed areas in the state "so we don't dry up as quick."

However, he said 1986 has been a dry year overall. "Rainfall is way below normal this year," Sears said.

Manchester Water and Sewer Administrator Robert Young said Thursday that below average rainfall has caused the town's nine reservoirs to drop to 47 percent of capacity. Since April, Manchester has received about a inches less precipitation than it usually does, he said.

Not been an appreciable drop in the level of the Connecticut River. It is only 1.5 inches to 1 inch below normal, he said.

THAT MAKES THE TOWN drier than other towns in Connecticut, according to Mendell. He said in Bridgeport, 2.14 inches fell in October instead of the normal 3.33. In Norfolk, 3.9 inches of rain fell instead of 4.26 and in Windsor Locks, the rainfall should have been 3.51 inches but was 2.18 inches, Mendell said.

The utility is worried that the dry period may continue and create severe shortages next summer. He noted that the drought months in the summer of 1985 were made worse by below-average rainfall in the fall and winter of 1984.

"We're cautious" he said. "This could be the start of an extended dry period."

The situation in Manchester has prompted officials to call for residents to voluntarily conserve water by not continually running the faucet and by taking shorter showers. Young said if more rainfall does not occur, mandatory restrictions might have to be applied by February.

Land sale to end grisly death case

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

The Spencer Village apartment complex and not far from a prime shopping area, would probably be sold for commercial or multiple-family use.

Manchester attorney Michael M. Darby said the 18,716 square-foot of land at 112 Spencer St., under half an acre — will be sold to liquidate the assets of Jessica Lamprecht so they can be distributed to beneficiaries.

Darby said officials had the option of either distributing the land to the former site of the Lamprecht house, which was demolished in July after rodents were exterminated — or selling it and charging Jessica Lamprecht's estate.

Bids will be accepted at Probate Court until Dec. 1 and will be opened Dec. 2, Darby said. Lamprecht's decomposed remains were found by police in the refrigerator and fireplace in the house on May 2. Police had entered the home to check on Lamprecht's son, Louis Lamprecht, after reports that Jessica Lamprecht had not been seen by anyone since late January or early February. Louis Lamprecht, 49, who has a history of mental illness and violent behavior, was taken into custody immediately after police found the body.

Darby said he thought the land, near the Spencer Village apartment complex and not far from a prime shopping area, would probably be sold for commercial or multiple-family use.

Somebody's going to use it for business or apartments, is my guess," he said. They can be sold for commercial or multiple-family use. Somebody's going to use it for business or apartments, is my guess," he said.

MANCHESTER POLICE Department spokesman Gary Wood said officers were ready to file a warrant charging Louis Lamprecht with improper disposal of a body, but saw no need to do so after he was declared unnot to take care of himself.

World War II pilot to keynote ceremony

Leo J. Cordier of East Hartford, a former glider pilot who flew five combat missions and landed directly in enemy positions during World War II, will be the principal speaker at the traditional Veterans Day/Armistice Day observance in Manchester on Tuesday.

The observance, in front of Manchester Memorial Hospital, will be conducted by the Veterans Council. Council president William Miller will open the ceremony at 10:45 a.m.

The hospital was built as a memorial to the those who served in World War I.

Col. Cordier was one of the first U.S. glider pilots to land directly into Nazi defenses during the Normandy invasion at St. Mere Eglise, France.

During the invasion of Holland, Cordier's glider was hit by anti-aircraft fire and crash-landed into German lines.

Cordier was among American glider pilots who later received an award for valor from the government of the Netherlands.

Recently, he retired as manager of Bradley International Airport.

He will be speaking at the hospital ceremonies, which will be given by Warren Fretanik, president of the hospital.

Mrs. Fred Thrall of Manchester, national president of the World War I Barracks auxiliary, will be one of the auxiliary members to place a wreath at the World War I memorial at the hospital.

Fred Thrall, of the World War I Barracks, will recite "In Flanders Fields," and the Bennet Junior High School band will play.

Color guards, veterans and the band will assemble at the American Legion Hall on Legion Drive at 10:15 a.m. and march to the hospital at 10:30 a.m.

Directors favor mall pact despite hearing criticism costs at well over $50 million. After extensive negotiations with the company, the town administration has proposed to issue up to $13 million in bonds for road and utility improvements on 380 acres around the mall site. The bonds would be paid back with tax revenues from the mall and surrounding development.

To retire the debt — estimated at a total of $21 million over 15 years — the town would use the real estate taxes from a 193-acre "project site." The town has estimated it will take in $51 million in real estate taxes from that land over the 15 years, plus $9 million in personal property taxes.

In addition, town officials are anticipating large development ventures on adjacent land that will yield millions of dollars more. The Mall at Buckland Hills is not the only development that is envisioned." Planning Director Mark Pellegrini said at the hearing. But he warned that "without this type of town participation, the project probably wouldn't go forward."

Pellegrini said the mall and nearby development would diversify Manchester's economy and stimulate employment opportunities, in addition to simply bringing in tax dollars.

Contacted this morning, Democratic Director James "Dutch" Fogarty said the agreement still has his support. Those who objected at the hearing "seem to be the same negative people who object to everything," he said. "If we had listened to them, we would not have very much in Manchester — we would not have an industrial park, and that's one of the best things that ever happened in this town. We would not have schools or parks."

Director Geoffrey Naab, one of the three Republican members of the board, had similar concerns. He said he wants to know if the $13 million figure "is the number that's needed to make the project work."

"None of the materials I've been supplied answers that question," he said. "My personal feeling is that 'town bonding' probably makes sense ... There is an inherent logic in the $13 million figure because it does represent the cost of public improvements."

"A lot more information has to be disseminated to the public," said Democratic Director Kenneth N. Tedford, who, like Naab, attended Tuesday's hearing. "Many of the people don't seem to understand that the public improvements will encourage additional development beyond the mall."

Although the bonding agreement has already been approved by the EDC, it is a segment of the entire project plan that is still under consideration by the EDC and the town Board of Directors. Under state law, the agreement can take effect only upon approval by both the directors and the EDC. It does not require approval from Manchester voters.

After the hearing, EDC Chairman Alfred Werber said all comments will be considered. "The public hearing will play an important part," he said. "Every comment made will be considered — pro and con."

The "pro" comments came from just a few — including Eileen Stern, who represented the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce. "For 10 years that site has been passed up because of the high development cost," Stern said. "We are convinced that development will occur on the 1.54 corridor. It's not realistic to think that the land along a growing highway will be left as open space."

The Economic Development Commission has scheduled a workshop session for Nov. 15 for further discussion of the mall plans. It plans to act on them Nov. 20. If the project plan wins final EDC approval, it will be forwarded to the Board of Directors.

Board of Directors to hear public
The town Board of Directors has scheduled a public comment session for Nov. 20 from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the board's office in the Municipal Building to hear suggestions and complaints from residents.

Future sessions will be held on the first Tuesday of each month from 9 to 10 a.m. and the third Thursday of each month from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Veto leaves sewer funding intact

Funds for improvements to Manchester's sewerage disposal plant are safe despite President Reagan's pocket veto of an $18 billion extension of the Clean Water Act of 1972. Robert Norwood of the state Department of Environmental Protection said today.

Norwood said state funds will finance the $12 million grant planned for the work and provide the 2 percent loan for the remainder of the cost of the improvements, estimated at about $26 million.

Norwood said that while failure to extend the life of the federal Clean Water Act funding will complicate matters for the state in financing future such improvements, it will not affect the situation for Manchester. Robert Huestis, the town's budget analyst, said this morning that the DEP has drafted a financing agreement for the grant-loan program and has also drafted an application form.

Since the grant-loan program is a new one, the procedural details have not yet been worked out. Norwood said the state can make the statewide funding program work as long as the federal stalemate over clean water funding does not continue.

The pocket veto of the $18 billion funding measure came as no surprise. Reagan had proposed $6 million to keep the fund going for three years. After that, the burden would have been borne by the states. Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., chairman of the House Public Works Committee, said after the veto: "I intend to introduce the clean water bill as passed, word for word, on the first day of the new Congress."

Democrats captured control of the Senate and retained control of the House in Tuesday's election.

Norwood said one complication in implementing the state's funding program now is the change in tax law affecting tax conversion for state bonds. He said the Clean Water Act problem has focused attention on the effect that tax changes will have on bonding procedures.

Head of teachers' union urges national standards

By Steve Felco
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, called for national standards for teachers similar to those applied to professions such as medicine and law.

"There are things that good teachers, just like good lawyers or good doctors, have some gut feelings about," Shanker said at a news conference Thursday.

Shanker was in Hartford to address an advisory committee to the State Board of Education that is studying the feasibility of setting up a professional standards board.

"Teaching can only become a profession and these standards boards can only mean something if they end up certifying teachers, influencing teacher education programs, playing some role perhaps in the decertification of teachers, all of these on the basis of a knowledge base," Shanker said.

He said the knowledge base would be the list of "10 or 15 or 20 or 50 things that every teacher has to know."

"We don't want to end up with a separate set of standards in 50 different states. We don't have, for instance, Connecticut surgery and Mississippi surgery and California surgery."

Shanker said that the standards for other professions are taken from a national group and the state standards boards have a role to play in administering them.

The union leader also said that many of the rules and regulations that now exist in the laws governing education will have to be removed if teaching is to achieve the plateau of professionalism.

"If you've got a lot of rules from above where other people are telling you exactly what books to use, how many minutes to spend on this or that, that really is a message to everybody that we really don't consider you a professional," he said.

"We consider you a hired hand."

Shanker said this country is moving away from what we do in schools is what is politically determined to depending "on what is good for the kids as based on either research or the universal experience of the best of the practitioners."

He said that will come about even if the school board doesn't like it, the union doesn't like it and the individual teachers don't like it.

The advisory committee Shanker addressed is made up of representatives of state teacher unions, school boards, principals and the public.

School boards 'in trouble,' group says

By Christopher Connell
The Associated Press

Americans could lose local control of their public schools if they fall to bolster school boards that have yielded power to the states in the recent drive to raise standards, a report says.

The 18,388 local school boards are "in trouble ... and need help," the Institute for Educational Leadership concluded in a report released Thursday.

The Washington-based institute questioned board members and community leaders in nine metropolitan areas — Oakland, Calif.,

Hartford, Columbus, Ohio; Pittsburgh; Atlanta; Denver; Indianapolis; the Washington suburb of Alexandria, Va.; and the Dallas-Forth Worth suburb of Lewisville.

It also interviewed rural school board leaders in Idaho, Iowa and Wyoming.

The ratio of business executives and other community power-brokers among the 95,000 individuals serving on the boards is lower than it was in the past, the study found.

Many have been driven away by the "hassles" of board membership, including what some executives regard as "the constant

Jaekle tapped for leadership role

HARTFORD — House Speaker R. E. Van Norstrand, R-Darien, recommended that House Majority Leader Robert G. Jaekle, R-Stratford, become minority leader for the General Assembly session that convenes Jan. 7.

The Republicans lost control of the legislature in Tuesday's elections.

Van Norstrand, R-Darien, said Thursday the two had met the day before and decided that Van Norstrand would be the minority leader and Jaekle would be his deputy.

But after sleeping on it, Van Norstrand said he thought it would be better if Jaekle were minority leader since Van Norstrand says this will be his last term. The proposal will be submitted to a House GOP caucus on Monday.

"I've got to think of the future," Van Norstrand said, "and I'm not going to be around. The future is what counts."

Jaekle is a House Republican, who will be outnumbered 92-59 by the Democrats, will "have to be both the loyal opposition and constructive critics."

Most schools take advantage of act

HARTFORD — The State Department of Education said that about 94 percent of the state's school districts are moving to take advantage of the Education Enhancement Act, according to a survey of school superintendents.

The act provides more than $300 million for the next three years to raise teachers' salaries and make other improvements in education. It provides incentives for school districts to raise minimum teachers salaries to $25,000.

The survey was sent to the 185 school districts with 154 responding.

Superintendents in 65, or 55 percent, of the districts said they had begun the process, which includes the approval of the local fiscal authority, the local school board and the teachers' union.

An additional 33 superintendents said that although they haven't taken concrete steps yet, they expect their school districts will participate. School districts have until early 1987 to decide whether to take part.

Dodd says party will set agenda

HARTFORD — U.S. Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, elected to a second term this week, said that with the Democrats back in control in both the U.S. House and Senate they will "set the agenda instead of responding to an agenda" from President Reagan.

He said he expected tough scrutiny of several issues pushed by the president, notably aid to Nicaraguan rebels, which Dodd opposes.

Dodd said he expected to get some subcommittee chairmanships, but said it was too soon to say which. He said he expected to remain on the Foreign Relations and Banking committees.

Dodd and Gov. William A. O'Neill led the Democrats to sweeping victories in Connecticut on Tuesday, including control of the state House and Senate, which they had lost two years ago in the Reagan landslide.

Despite the overwhelming majorities the Democrats amassed, Dodd said he thought there was still a strong two-party system in Connecticut. He noted that the state's congressional delegation remain evenly divided, with four Democrats and four Republicans.

Encased tombstones stir debate

ENFIELD — Historians are differing on whether to try to remove 19th-century Shaker tombstones cemented into a walkway on the grounds of the state's minimum-security prison.

State historical officials believe they should be left undisturbed, fearing an attempt to move them would cause further damage. But a Massachusetts-based expert on the Shakers said Thursday that the state's decision didn't represent "the optimum answer" to the situation.

John J. Carson, the state's economic development commissioner, said the U.S. Navy's Nautilus Memorial Museum in Groton and the refurbished Hersey Lake Compo in Bristol only helped bring more visitors to the state, if helped to raise Connecticut's profile as a tourist attraction.

State spending for AIDS 'scandalous'

By Brent Lovmon
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — The coordinator of AIDS Project New Haven is chastising Connecticut for lagging behind neighboring states in money it spends to help AIDS victims and combat the spread of the deadly disease.

John Wilcox estimated on Thursday that Connecticut will spend $600,000 on AIDS-related programs this year, or about $100 for each state resident afflicted with acquired immune deficiency syndrome. State health officials put the figure around $800,000.

"This is clearly ridiculous and scandalous ..." Wilcox said during a news conference sponsored by Planned Parenthood of Connecticut.

"For a state talking the surplus we do, to be spending the dollars we do can only be viewed as callous disregard or ignorance for those at risk."

Wilcox estimated that 318 state residents are now afflicted with acquired immune deficiency syndrome. The state Department of Health puts the number at 132.

Massachusetts spends $14,975 a year for every person with AIDS, the highest in the nation, Wilcox said. New York spends $3,919 per person, he said.

Wilcox said Connecticut should be spending at least $2 million a year on education and direct assistance for AIDS victims.

Thursday's news conference came amid debate in Granby about a decision by the local Board of

Granby AIDS psychologist censured

GRANBY (AP) — An anti-homosexual psychologist hired to testify against allowing an AIDS-afflicted child to attend public school was expelled from the American Psychological Association and censured by other professional societies for allegedly unethical behavior.

Paul Cameron, the director of the Nebraska-based Institute for Sexuality, was the main speaker at a Board of Education meeting attended by about 200 residents Wednesday.

Despite Cameron's testimony, the board voted 7-0 on Wednesday to uphold school Superintendent Pasquale E. Starble's decision to allow the unidentified child to keep attending Kelly Lane Elementary School.

Leaders of the parents' group that paid Cameron $1,000 to speak at the meeting said they were aware of Cameron's problems with the professional societies, but, nonetheless, felt Cameron was fit to present another side to arguments involving the confidentiality of its victims, and educate people how to avoid getting AIDS.

The state departments of Health and Education are also developing a curriculum to education school children about the disease, Melchreit said. It should be ready by next year, he said.

Cameron was ousted from the association in 1984 because of unspecified violations of the group's ethics code, Robert Brown, a professor of educational psychology at the University of Nebraska and a member of the association, said.

Brown said the association's ethics panel, which took the action, has refused to further specify why Cameron was expelled.

At about the same time, the Nebraska Psychological Association adopted a resolution disassociating itself from Cameron, Brown said.

Joel I. Brodsky, a member of the Midwest Sociological Society, said the Midwest society censured Cameron in 1985 because of "con-

Confrontation preceded killing

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — A man who died of gunshot wounds after he was chased by an angry mob apparently had confronted people he suspected of selling drugs to his girlfriend, police said.

William McDougall, 48, of Fairfield was shot Tuesday night in the city's West End, police said. He died Wednesday morning in Park City Hospital from loss of blood, according to the state medical examiner's office in Farmington.

"He was down there because his girlfriend, evidently, was a drug user," detective Gene Redmond said Thursday.

Police Superintendent Joseph A. Walsh called the killing vicious and said McDougall was shot for no reason that began prior to the collision.

"It's one of those things you can't control. You can't anticipate something like this," he said.

Prior to the shooting, McDougall's car struck a boy on a bicycle. His car then struck a utility pole, and McDougall fled on foot as a crowd of about 12 people approached, police said.

"There were two guys out front, and at least 10 people behind them. One of the two up front apparently shot him," Kruzinski said.

Redmond said police had no suspects in the case, and "a few" people were cooperating with authorities.

whether the crowd chased McDougall because he struck the boy or because of a dispute about drugs that began prior to the collision.

The boy, identified as Felix Berrios, 13, was treated at Park City Hospital and released, police said.

Detective Leo Kruzinski said McDougall may have backed his car into the boy in an attempt to get away after the car became surrounded by the crowd of people.

"There were two guys out front, and at least 10 people behind them. One of the two up front apparently shot him," Kruzinski said.

Redmond said police had no suspects in the case, and "a few" people were cooperating with authorities.

Town mayor turns model

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The mayor of Shelton was planning on getting some national exposure today by modeling sexy male lounging clothes on a syndicated television talk show.

"I'm confident of my body," said Michael Pacowta, 31. "I may get some votes out of it."

Pacowta, a Democrat, was scheduled to model this morning on the Sally Jessy Raphael Show, which is originating from New Haven this week. The syndicated show airs on about 30 television stations throughout the country.

Pacowta volunteered to model during Thursday's show, when he was in the audience. The show concerned women who killed their husbands.

The lingerie fashion segment was scheduled for live broadcast at 10 a.m. today in the New Haven area on WTNH-TV. It was to be taped for later showings on other stations.

After Thursday's taping, the show's executive producer, Burt Dubrow, asked for two volunteers from the audience to model male apparel from Frederick's of Hollywood, a maker of sensual lingerie for women and lounging clothes for men.

Dubrow told the 300-member audience he was looking for two ordinary-looking people, and the show would "take them offstage and turn them into sexy, hot numbers."

Several people raised their hands and Pacowta and a woman were picked. A staff member of the show later identified the woman as Diane Penna. Pacowta said she was a hairdresser.

After he was picked, Pacowta identified himself to the audience as a part-time mayor, but jokingly refused to tell the audience the town he was from.

Later he identified the town and said he volunteered for the model because he would enjoy the publicity.

He said he did not know what type of clothes he would be asked to model.

OPINION

PAC funds are flowing too freely

Another election is over, and the new representatives will soon take their seats in Washington and across the nation. Unfortunately, that's when the PAC money contributed in the recent campaign will go to work as well.

As anyone who's studied the matter has learned, there's no easy way to stem the phenomenon of PACs, or political action committees. Their rights are intertwined with the political freedoms guaranteed under the democratic system of government in the United States.

Still, there's something unclear about the way they go about their business. They give incumbents too much money and leave many candidates with debts that don't work to the benefit of constituents.

These days, there is a PAC for just about everything. There are PACs for the insurance industry, PACs for the publishing industry, PACs for the steel industry, and extra-powerful PACs for the legal and medical professions. There's even a PAC against PACs.

The 100th Congress, like every one before it, has its work cut out for it. But it should find time during the coming year to give a fair hearing to the ideas of the nation's anti-PAC PAC, Citizens Against PACs.

These past few months, the group has specifically targeted elected representatives who rely too heavily on PAC dollars.

In the Hartford area, it has directed its questioning at the record of Barbara B. Kennedy, who represents the 1st District in Congress and is a member of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee — scornfully known as "PAC Heaven."

According to Citizens Against PACs, Kennedy has accepted more than $4,900 in PAC money for the 1986 campaign as of June 1, and has taken nearly half-a-million dollars since 1982. This year, the funds paid for a re-election effort that did not include a primary challenge and helped her roll over an opponent who had raised a piddling $4,000 at the beginning of October.

The purpose here is not to single out Rep. Kennedy. She's one among many, and her PAC contributions are dwarfed by those given to some others.

But it's hard not to wonder about her need for all those PAC dollars, or whether they should be allowed to flow so freely.

In the coming year, Congress should take a good look at the rules governing PACs. It should reconsider, for instance, previously proposed legislation that would move congressional races along the path of general presidential elections, which are financed out of a voluntary taxpayer-checkoff fund. That change would cost $49 million to $87 million a year, according to Citizens Against PACs.

These estimates are probably low, and no real solution to the problem will be simple. That one is worth considering nonetheless, and Congress must keep seeking reform until it succeeds.

Meanwhile, there is one thing that will make a candidate hesitant about accepting PAC dollars: citizen outrage. Voters should study the contributions lists, question their representatives' stands and make their feelings known in writing, over the phone and in elections.

If the urging and criticism are loud enough and frequent enough, they'll lead to change for the better in a system that too often leaves government looking as if it's for sale to the highest bidder.

Goldwater prepared GOP for the Reagan revolution

William Rusher

Save in the unlikely event that President Reagan summons him for a special post-election session, the 9th Congress has breathed its last, and with it has drawn to a close the political career of Barry Goldwater. Let us pause to assess and to salute him, as he retires to private life at last. Only now are we beginning to realize what a profound influence he has had on the political life of this country.

For all the nostalgia currently being squandered on the early 1950s, they were not a notably happy time for people of the kind we would now call conservative.

As Lionel Trilling observed in 1950, "In the United States at this time liberalism is not only the dominant but even the sole intellectual tradition." It was less than two years later that Barry Goldwater entered the U.S. Senate.

HE HAD SUPPORTED Eisenhower rather than Taft for the 1952 Republican presidential nomination, but in the Senate he quickly made it clear that his implied no lingering softness toward the regnant liberalism. I can still vividly recall the tremendous impression he made on me the first time I ever heard him speak, at a meeting in Colorado Springs in February 1955.

Here, I told my friends when I got back to New York, was a Westerner we could support and follow.

Through the latter part of the '50s, he was one of the very few national political figures with whom the nascent conservative movement could identify, and with the death or retirement of such other senatorial stalwarts as Bill Knowland, Styles Bridges and Bill Jenner, Goldwater slowly became the acknowledged spokesman of America's conservatives. When his first book, "The Conscience of a Conservative," appeared early in 1960, it quickly became a runaway best-seller, and ultimately sold more than 3.5 million copies in hardcover and paperback editions.

SMALL WONDER, then, that a group of young conservative politicians turned to him when they were seeking a candidate to bid for the Republican presidential nomination in 1964. Goldwater didn't want the honor. He would have to give up his Senate seat to make the race, and in addition he sincerely doubted his qualifications for the presidency.

After President Kennedy's assassination, moreover, he knew that victory was out of the question. But his supporters appealed to his sense of duty, so ultimately Goldwater ran.

May the Lord bless him, and give him many years of happiness, contentment and peace.

Garden slugs pay CEOs no matter what

For the past few weeks, the financial writers had been keeping a death watch on Sam Armacost. The losses at the Bank of America were beginning to get up there to the point that the institution's chief executive officer and president might have to be eased out. In order for a bank president to lose his job, the losses do have to be stupendous. It almost never happens, but depending on how you add it up — and there's a lot to add up at the B of A under Sam's tenure his bank has lost something in the neighborhood of $7 billion.

Those are the public, generally known figures. There may be, almost surely are, other losses in the form of bad loans in the vaults which haven't yet been made public. During Sam's five years at the bank, the stock dividend has been eliminated and the Bank of America, once the largest in the nation, has slipped to second place and may fall further before it gets small enough to land in its safety net, assuming there is one down there somewhere.

THE OFFICIAL PRESS RELEASES didn't say whether they were providing Sam with "out placement" services. Sometimes when they lay off the drones in sales or accounting they give them out placement, meaning they help find a new job, at least in the extent of letting them use the Xerox machines for their resumes. Sam, however, will walk out with $1.7 million in severance pay, though with his stock and stuff like that, he may actually leave with well in excess of $2 million, maybe in his pocket. This is in top of the $575,000 a year which he was paying Sam to spill all that red ink.

When the propagandists from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce talk about our competitive system which rewards winners, they omit saying that you can do damn well as a loser, too. After E.

Clariborne Robbins Jr., the company president, told A.H. Robbins into Chapter 11 bankruptcy it was discovered he was getting $320,000 a year. Then a federal judge heard about it and chopped his employment back to 200 grand and he will have to pay for his use of the company helicopter to whirlybird out to the golf course. If that's losing, who needs to win?

ANOTHER WELL-KNOWN winning loser is Frank Borman of Eastern Airlines, whose company has been spewing red ink and whose relations with his employees have been so sulphurous that the public has found out riding Eastern can be quite an adventure in human relations.

There are scores of less-publicized instances of CEOs whose companies are losing money or barely making it from quarter to quarter whose compensations bear no rational relationship with their records as businessmen. In the last several years there has been some talk in the business periodicals about tying compensation to performance but that's been it — talk.

Syria has long history of terrorism

WASHINGTON — The United States and the United Kingdom have officially confirmed what we have been reporting for years: that Syria has sponsored international terrorism. Syrian strongman Hafez Assad has been stirring up terrorist attacks against the West for at least four years.

There is no question that Syrian troops occupying Lebanon have protected the Iranian Shites, who have held American and other Western hostages in the Bekaa Valley over the last two years. Not much happens in the Bekaa Valley without the Syrian army's knowledge and consent.

We were the first to disclose — on May 10, 1983 — that the Bekaa Valley terrorists were responsible for the bombing a month earlier of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, which killed 17 Americans.

We cited as the source of our report communications intercepted by the National Security Agency. But regard for national security aided the Iranians planning the bombing. (CBS News revealed the Damascus connection in a later report.)

SINCE THAT FIRST terrorist incident in the current cycle of anti-American violence, many other Americans have been murdered by Iranian Shites — with the Syrians' help. All told, we count at least 270 Americans who have died as a result of the unholy Iranian-Syrian alliance. Here in the detailed indictment of this bloody conspiracy at work:

● October 1983 — An Iranian-trained terrorist, with Syrian logistical help, car-bombed the U.S. Marine barracks at Beirut airport, killing 241 Americans.

● September 1984 — Two Americans died in the suicide bombing of the Beirut Embassy annex. U.S. intelligence sources are convinced the attack had Syrian support.

● December 1984 — Two Americans were murdered and two others savagely tortured aboard a Kuwaiti airliner hijacked to Tehran. The hijacking was planned and coordinated by the Ayatollah Mohtashami, then Iran's ambassador to Syria. We proved this by quoting word-for-word from a Dec. 4 NSA intercept of a telephone conversation between Mohtashami and Damascus and an Iranian foreign ministry official in Tehran.

● March 1985 — The CIA's Beirut station chief, William Buckley, was flown to Damascus in a Syrian army helicopter. He had been kidnapped by Iranian Shites a year earlier and hidden, like other American hostages, in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley, where he was subjected to long and brutal torture. (The Syrians may not have known who was aboard the helicopter, since Buckley was disguised as a wounded Iranian soldier.)

Anyway, he was transferred to an Iran Air 727 at the Damascus airport and flown to Tehran, where he subsequently died from a heart attack induced by torture and deprivation.

● June 1985 — A U.S. Navy man was murdered during the hijacking of TWA Flight 847, which U.S. intelligence sources say was the work of Iranians and Syrians.

● December 1985 — Simultaneous terrorist attacks on Rome and Vienna airports left six Americans dead. Although Libya helped Abu Nida's terrorists stage these atrocities, secret intelligence evidence we've seen shows that Iran and Syria were equally to blame. As we reported earlier this year, the two four-man terrorist teams got their training and operational planning in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley.

Under the dome — The ill-fated American Embassy a-building in Moscow for the past couple of decades continues to fuel a smoldering match between State Department officials and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee itself. At one point in the discussions, the exasperated Senate staffers proposed that all further work on the embassy be halted until the State Department gets its act together. The diplomats chewed this over for a while, then protested that such a move would cost time and money. Responded the committee staff with bitter sarcasm: "It is obvious that speed and economy have not been the hallmarks of this particular project."

Confidential file — Women in Czechoslovakia are getting mixed signals from their government. On the one hand, they are being encouraged to hold jobs; on the other hand, they are being offered incentives to bear children. Women already make up about half the Czech work force, and they earn the same pay as men do for the same jobs. But while there are professional women and some in managerial positions, sexual equality seems to have gone astray in the government sector: There is only one woman in the Communist Party secretariat — and there are no women ambassadors.

Collision victim a veteran pilot

TAMPA, Fla. — Investigators today were studying the wreckage of a demolished twin-engine plane as its experienced pilot landed it on a fog-shrouded taxiway and was killed in a collision with a Pan Am jet.

William S. Bain, a 21-year veteran airlines pilot, may have been making his second attempt at landing Thursday morning at Tampa International Airport when his Piper Apache crashed into the Pan Am World Airways Boeing 727 with 23 people aboard. National Transportation Safety Board investigators said. Three minor injuries were reported among those on the jetliner.

Waldheim unit linked to deportations

WASHINGTON — The German army unit with which Kurt Waldheim served during World War II was directly involved in the deportation of 68,000 Yugoslav civilians to concentration camps. The Washington Post reported today.

The newspaper, citing captured Nazi documents, said the quartermaster of the Wehrmacht's Combat Group West Bosnia was assigned the duty of setting up collection points and transporting the prisoners to camps.

Waldheim, the former secretary general of the United Nations who now is president of Austria, admitted through a spokesman last month that he was "assigned as a special missions staff officer to the quartermaster" of the Combat Group West Bosnia.

Letter alleges prison abuses

WASHINGTON — A letter smuggled from a Sandinista prison says hundreds of Nicaraguans who served in the National Guard of the deposed Somoza dictatorship are being subjected to physical and psychological torture.

Nicaraguan Embassy minister-counselor Francisco Campbell called the allegations in the letter "blatantly false. We view it as just another attempt to discredit the government of Nicaragua."

Claiming that the charges are unsubstantiated, Campbell said no "serious newspaper" should publish a story based on the document's contents.

The authenticity of the letter, which concludes with a plea to the Western world to "help us get justice," could not be verified independently.

Civil rights groups back Kennedy

WASHINGTON — Civil rights organizations are urging their longtime champion, Edward M. Kennedy, to assume the chairmanship of the Senate Judiciary Committee and use his aggressive style to carry the liberal banner in the 100th Congress.

Sources in the civil rights and civil liberties communities say they prefer the more confrontational Kennedy, D-Mass., over the more cautious Joseph Biden Jr. of Delaware — and have told Kennedy so.

But the groups quickly added they consider Biden an ally, and would work closely with him should Kennedy, who has a choice, assume the chairmanship of the Labor and Human Resources Committee.

The sources spoke on condition they not be named.

Aquino says she doesn't fear coup

MANILA, Philippines — President Corason Aquino said today the Philippine military was on maximum alert, but also said she was confident there would be no coup attempt when she leaves on a state visit to Japan in three days.

"Everytime I plan a trip abroad there is so much talk about a coup. If I believe there would be a coup, I wouldn't leave," she said, adding that she planned to depart for Japan on schedule Monday.

Aquino, in a press conference, played down the significance of military alerts, saying they were relatively commonplace. Similar alerts were also in effect before her two previous trips abroad, including a September visit to the United States.

Aquino said she conferred Thursday with Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos about coup rumors.

"I made it very clear and he agreed with me, that definitely we should not allow anything like this to happen," Aquino said.

Shultz, Chirac discuss terrorism

PARIS — Secretary of State George Shultz traded views on terrorism today with Premier Jacques Chirac and said the critical comments they exchanged were a mark of true friendship between the nations.

Shultz said they also discussed U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations. The secretary, stopping off in Paris on the way home from meetings in Vienna, also planned to meet President Francois Mitterrand, a Socialist, who has distanced himself slightly from the policies of Chirac's center-right government on terrorism.

Chirac and Shultz emerged together from the premier's Left Bank office after their hour-long meeting.

"We reaffirmed our joint determination to stamp out this terrible development," Shultz said of terrorism. "We see this problem the same way."

Neither Shultz nor Chirac would reply when asked whether they discussed reports of U.S. negotiations with Iran and arms shipments to that country as part of efforts to free American hostages in Lebanon.

Medical association backs self-transfusions

CHICAGO (AP) — People facing surgery should have their own blood collected in advance to provide the safest transfusions possible and avoid contracting communicable diseases like AIDS, says the American Medical Association.

Use of the patient's own blood in called autologous blood transfusion, and it eliminates the risk of contracting diseases from someone else's blood, said Dr. Ira Friedlander, a member of the AMA's Council on Scientific Affairs.

The council's report endorsing autologous blood transfusions adopted as general policy by the AMA in June, was published in today's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The risk for hepatitis and communicable diseases that you can get through blood transfusions and that includes AIDS — is pretty much in the blood's mind right now," Friedlander said, explaining why the AMA decided to adopt the policy.

Of the 26,876 reported cases of AIDS in adults since 1981, 485, or about 2 percent, were contracted through blood transfusions, the national Centers for Disease Control says.

Among children, 48, or about 13 percent, of the 376 AIDS cases reported since 1981 were contracted that way, said CDC spokeswoman Jeanne Daves.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, devastates the body's ability to fight disease and is believed to be passed through transmission of body fluids, primarily through sexual contact and use of contaminated needles or blood products.

Autologous blood transfusions, when administered under guidelines established by the American Association of Blood Banks, carry no risk of hepatitis, malaria or AIDS, the AMA report said.

They also help preserve blood-bank stores, can reduce health care costs, and are particularly valuable to patients with rare blood types who have antibodies to common blood components, the report said.

In person-to-person transfusions, blood is matched for blood type and given to 20 other factors, Friedlander said. But there are more than 100 other blood components that in rare cases might not be compatible, he said.

Unemployment rate holds steady

Thousands of new jobs help keep October rate at 7%

By Matt Yoncov The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economy created about 300,000 to 350,000 new jobs last month, just enough to keep up with a growing labor force and hold the nation's unemployment at 7.0 percent, the government announced today.

The Labor Department said its monthly household survey showed a job gain of 340,000 after seasonal adjustments, offsetting an identical decline in September.

But the labor force grew by 360,000 last month, the first increase since June. In the last year, 2 million people have joined the labor force in search of work, nearly 75 percent of whom were women.

In a separate survey of business payrolls, employers reported adding 298,000 jobs in October, 175,000 of them in business and hospital services and in retail trade.

But the household survey said that most of the job growth — 223,000 — was in part-time work.

Addressing the small growth in full-time jobs, the commissioner of labor statistics, James L. Norwood, told a congressional committee today that 5.8 million Americans who had sought full-time work had to settle for part-time employment last month.

She called that "a rather high number for this stage of a recovery."

She also commented that "almost all of the job gains occurred among women and teenagers, a good deal of it in part-time jobs."

Altogether, 110,240,000 people were on the job last month, more than 20 million of them part-time workers. The working total represents 50.8 percent of the adult population, down 0.1 percentage point from the August record of 50.9 percent.

The 298,000 increase in payroll workers was more than twice the average monthly gain of the previous five months. Mining, the oil and gas industry and manufacturing employment all rose slightly in October after falling a total 350,000 since the first of the year.

Manufacturing employment rose by 27,000, oil and gas by 1,000 and mining by 900.

The unemployment rate for adult men held at 6.2 percent, the level it has maintained for four of the last five months and the same rate as in October 1985.

Joblessness among adult women has fallen from 6.4 percent to 6.1 percent in the last year.

For other population groups, the Bureau of Labor Statistics gave these October unemployment calculations:

• Whites, 6.0 percent, unchanged.

• Blacks, 14.4 percent, down from 14.8 in September.

• Hispanics, 10.5 percent, down from 11.1.

• Teenagers: 17.6 percent, down from 18.7.

• And black teenagers, 34.8 percent, down from 38.3.

On the eve of the government's announcement, private economists said the jobless rate would remain stuck in the 7 percent range in the coming months despite recent improvements in trade and a tax-avoidance consumer and business buying spree.

Narriman Behravs of Wharton Econometrics in Philadelphia said there may be some improvement in the unemployment totals the rest of this year, but not much and not lasting.

"The economy is not going gangbusters," he said. "There is a fair amount of encouraging news. The statistics suggest we are beginning to see a turnaround in trade in manufacturing."

GM closings put pressure on Japan

By Steven K. Paulson The Associated Press

TOKYO — General Motors' closure of 11 plants will bring increased pressure on Japan to limit auto exports, an industry spokesman said today.

American's largest automaker announced Thursday that it would close the plants over the next three years to cut costs. About 29,000 workers will be either retrained, reassigned or dismissed.

"Because of these job losses, we expect another U.S. protectionist move to be accelerated," said Takayuki Imajo, a JAMA spokesman. "Japan will be under increased pressure to keep exports down."

However, he said JAMA believes restraints on auto exports from Japan must be removed.

"We are a free trader. That's our position," he said.

Tatsuo Masuda, a spokesman for Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry, said his organization hasn't had time to study the impact of GM's decision.

But other foreign automakers have decided to cut back on overcapacity to remain competitive, he said.

In October, Japanese auto manufacturers called for an end to six years of restraints on Japanese car exports to the United States, saying the surge in the value of the yen for the past year, which made Japanese products more expensive, had severely cut into their sales.

The Japanese government currently limits auto exports to the United States to 2.3 million vehicles annually. The voluntary restraints were urged because of American complaints that Japanese imports were hurting the U.S. auto industry.

Exports from Japan to the United States of cars, trucks and buses in the first half of this year rose 18 percent over the same period last year, to 1.7 million vehicles, according to industry officials.

FOCUS/Weekend

Quilters are busy as a bee this weekend

By Nancy Pappas Herald Reporter

This is a great weekend for those who are intrigued by the art of quilting. Across the region, there are spectacular exhibits showcasing quilts sewn by American women. The centerpiece is a show that's open on Saturday only. It's an enormous quilt show sponsored by the Universalist Church, 433 Fern St., West Hartford. A juried show of 32 artisans will take place in one large room. In another, 50 heirloom quilts will be demonstrate the techniques used from 1840 to 1986. Admission is $1, and a pair of hand-sewn quilts will be raffled. The show is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Refreshments and crafts made by Universalist Church members will also be sold.

At the Mark Twain and Harriet Beecher Stowe Houses, there are crazy quilts, children's bed quilts, doll quilts and even quilted throws. In addition, through Nov. 24, there is a quilt on display which was made by Libby Clemens, before her marriage to Samuel Clemens. It is done in a tiny purple-and-silver print. The show is open Tuesday through Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m. $3.75 for Twaïn House, $3 for Stowe House, $6 for the pair. Farmington Avenue at Forest Street, Hartford.

You'll have to call for an appointment, if you want to see the quilts which are hanging in the Crater Gallery this weekend. That's because this gallery, at 1445 Main St., Hartford, is open Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and weekends by appointment only. But the extra effort is worthwhile, to see the show called "African American Master Quiltmakers." Many of these 14 quilts tell a story or reflect the values held by the quiltmakers. The show will go on through Dec. 19. Call 280-0170 for further information.

Several quiltmakers are participating in the Holiday Crafts Expo, sponsored by the Inter-Community Mental Health Group Social Club, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the Glastonbury High School gym. About 100 professional craftsmen will be there with gifts, handblown art glass, pottery — and many quilts.

workshop where the kids can make items to take home and give as holiday gifts. Then, if all of this fails to whet your appetite, perhaps you should go to the Whitney Museum of American Art in Stamford, where an exhibit being circulated by the Smithsonian Institution is opening this weekend. The exhibit surveys 200 years of American quilt making with 35 examples in various styles and techniques. It goes from wool working at the beginning of the 19th century, through the silks and satins of the Victorian era, and the brilliant quilts of the 20th century Amish and Mennonites. The museum is at the corner of Atlantic Street and Tresser Boulevard. The exhibition will be open, free, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays. It will hang through Dec. 24. A free workshop on quilt collecting will be offered at 2 p.m. Dec. 6. Another workshop, on quilt restoration, will be Dec. 13 at 2 p.m.

Roy Clark, co-host of the long-running program "Hee Haw," is continuing with the show after Buck Owens is gone. Clark is playing the banjo.

'Hee Haw' without Buck

It still takes a little getting used to

By Joe Edwards The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The "Hee Haw" cornfields seem a little bare and there's one less pair of overalls: longtime co-host Buck Owens is gone. "After 18 years, you look around and he's not there," says Roy Clark, the remaining co-host of the country music-comedy show. "It takes a little time getting used to." Owens, a veteran country music star, announced earlier this year he would not return to the 60-minute show he's had with Clark since its premiere in 1969. Owens has set aside his famous red, white and blue guitar to concentrate on his business interests. In his place are rotating co-hosts such as the Oak Ridge Boys, John Schneider, Loretta Lynn and other country music stars. "It's sort of like a party where there used to be two hosts to greet everyone and then there is just one," Clark said about Owens' departure. "What does the audience think? 'On the one side, you've got people saying, 'Why change after 18 years?' On the other hand, people may be saying, 'It's time for a change.'" Clark said. Schneider, who spent seven years as Bo Duke on "The Dukes of Hazzard," says "Hee Haw" is able to carry on because it is well organized. "It may sound unorganized, but it's very organized — organized enough to have fun," he said during a break from taping his segment on the show. "On most shows, fun is prohibited, but not here. There is no pretense, there are no rules. It is not stuffy. You do and say about what you want." "Hee Haw" began on CBS as a replacement for "The Smothers Brothers" show. It was canceled in 1971 by the network, but returned to the air six months later as a syndicated program. It is carried by 220 stations, usually broadcast early Saturday evening to 18 million to 20 million households. "In terms of variety shows, we've outlasted everybody," says Sam Lovullo, the show's producer. "The program's format has changed little: corny jokes within short segments, twangy country music and fetching Southern belles.

Actress Sissy Spacek had a little trouble selling suicide

By Kathryn Baker The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sissy Spacek spent 11 weeks last winter meticulously planning suicide. It was for the movie, "Milk and Honey," Marsha Norman's adaptation of her Pulitzer Prize-winning Broadway play. Except for very brief appearances by a few other actors, it is a two-character vehicle for Miss Spacek and Anne Bancroft. "It wasn't easy selling suicide to movie studios, the Academy Award-winning actress said. "We shopped it around and nobody wanted to do it." Miss Spacek said in a recent interview. "If you read a synopsis of it, you know, you'd go, 'gosh.' But I laughed a lot when I saw it. It was a very emotional experience. It was just the oddest thing that I'd ever seen. So we just kind of all hung in there." Aaron Spelling, who also had seen and liked the play, agreed to produce the movie, an extreme departure from his silly, glibby television shows such as "Dynasty" and "Love Boat."

When she saw the play, Miss Spacek knew if she did not portray the suicidal daughter, Jessie Cates, she would live to regret it. "It's rare that a part like that comes along," she said. "I was so excited after I saw the play. I laughed and cried at the same time. I wasn't depressed. I was incredibly moved, and I think more than anything, I just couldn't not do it." The cast and crew were confined to a soundstage during rehearsals and shooting. Miss Spacek was only briefly visited by her husband, film director Jack Fisk, and their 4-year-old daughter, Schuyler. The family lives on a horse farm in Virginia. "I remember the first time she came with her daddy, she came running out and she was just pink, and she just kind of glowed. She was just this beautiful little child that embodied everything that was absent from the set." Her separation was part of the transition into Jessie, an epileptic woman with a failed marriage and delinquent son who has made a seemingly rational decision to end her life.

College football roundup

Miami isn't certain what to expect from Pitt

By Dick Brinster
The Associated Press

With Vinny Testaverde at the controls, it would be logical to assume that Miami football Coach Jimmy Johnson has no quarter-back worries as he prepares his top-ranked Hurricanes for Saturday's game at Pittsburgh.

But Testaverde, whose passing has led Miami to an 8-0 start, isn't the problem. In fact, Johnson doesn't know who is — for Pitt.

"We're going to have to be prepared for anything and everything," Johnson said Thursday. "I'm not sure what we can expect from Pitt. I'm not sure what we can't expect from Pitt." Johnson said Thursday.

He could scrap his plan to redshirt highly recruited junior college transfer Sal Gennia, or he could go with Joe Feltyky, a fourth-team quarterback at the start of the season.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 3 Michigan is at Purdue, Missouri is at No. 4 Oklahoma, California is at No. 5 Arizona State, No. 7 Nebraska visits Iowa State, Cincinnati is at No. 9 Auburn, No. 10 Arkansas visits Baylor, North Carolina is at No. 11 Ohio State, Stanford visits No. 12 UCLA, No. 13 Washington is at Oregon State, No. 15 North Carolina State travels to Virginia, No. 16 Iowa is at Illinois, No. 17 Arizona visits Washington State, No. 19

Georgia plays Florida at Jacksonville, and North Carolina is at No. 20 Clemson.

No. 18 Louisiana State is at No. 6 Alabama in a night game, while eighth-ranked Texas A&M and No. 14 Southern Cal are off.

Gotfried, whose Panthers are 4-3-1, has pondered the quarterback problem since Congeni, the second-leading passer in Pitt history, suffered a hairline fracture of his back in last week's loss to Syracuse.

"We lost the one guy we couldn't afford to lose," Gotfried said.

Gotfried has said he may wait until as late as gametime to name his starter.

Gennia passed for 3,555 yards last season at San Mateo (Calif.) Junior College. Feltyky has been ineffective in two seasons as Congeni's backup, completing only 10 of 27 passes with three interceptions.

Johnson's main concern is that Congeni's absence may alter the Panthers' offensive game plan. With Congeni at the controls of Pitt's run-and-shoot offense, the team has been averaging nearly 40 passes a game.

"They ran a lot of two-back formations early in the season before they went to the run and shoot, and they may go back to that," Johnson said.

Testaverde is the most dominant player in college football this season, completing 84 percent of his passes for 1,558 yards, 20 touchdowns and seven interceptions.

Defense was on the mind of Penn State's Joe Paterno, who believes the current crop of Nittany Lion defense is as good as any he has ever coached.

"It's tough to think we've had a himself right now, and he's doing a good job."

Arizona State, 7-0-1 overall and atop the Pacific 10 standings at 4-0-1 with an inside track to the Rose Bowl, figures to have an easy time with California, 1-7.

"They have everything — size, speed, talent," Cal's lame duck Coach Joe Kapp, who was fired Wednesday, said in assessing the Sun Devils.

Arizona State Coach John Cooper also has quarterback Jeff Van Raaphorst, who has completed 67 percent of his passes for 870 yards, seven touchdowns and no interceptions.

A victory by Alabama, 6-1 and 4-0 in the Southeastern Conference, would sound the title hopes of LSU, 5-2 and 3-1.

Nebraska, 5-1 in the Big Eight and 7-1 overall, needs a victory over Iowa State to remain in the thick of the conference race.

Arkansas, 7-1 overall and 3-1 in the Southwest Conference, trails Texas A&M by a game as it takes on Baylor.

UCLA, trailing Arizona State by one-half game, needs a victory over Stanford to stay in the hunt for the Rose Bowl. The Bruins are 4-1 in the Pac-10 and 6-2 overall.

A victory by North Carolina State, 4-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference and 6-1 overall, would force Clemson, 4-1 and 6-2, to beat unranked North Carolina to maintain a share of the lead. North Carolina, 3-1 and 5-2-1, would drop from contention with a loss.

Ohio State, 7-2, is a prohibitive favorite over Northwestern. The Buckeyes, 4-0 in the Big Ten, are tied with Michigan for the league lead.

UConn senior quarterback Peter Lane has been relatively mistake-free the past three games, making a big difference in the Husky offense. The junior college transfer has completed 56.8 percent of his passes, 130-for-228, and ranks at the top in career completion percentage in the Husky record books. In the past three games, Lane has completed 52 of 83 passes for 588 yards and two touchdowns and more importantly, no interceptions.

The Huskies will be facing a prolific Blue Hen passing attack led by senior quarterback Rich Gannon. An All-America candidate, Gannon has passed for 1,767 yards and netted 326 more on the ground. Delaware is averaging 433.6 yards per game on offense, while allowing 350.5 on defense. The Blue Hens have a strong defense against the run, yielding an average of only 64.4 yards, but they're proven susceptible to an air attack, yielding 283.9 yards per game in the air.

This is the 19th meeting between the two schools with Delaware, a first-year Yankee Conference member, holding a 14-4 edge in the series. UConn's last win over the Blue Hens came in 1957, meaning the Huskies obviously have their work cut out for them. Delaware is 8-0 against Connecticut at Newark Stadium. The last meeting between the two schools occurred in 1982 when Delaware took a 13-7 verdict.

"We played probably our best third period of the year," Montreal Coach Jean Perreault said. "In the second period we gave the puck away and they came out flying."

The victory stretched the Canadiens' unbeaten streak to seven games and pushed them past the Quebec Nordiques into first place in the Adams Division. Montreal has gone 5-2 during that stretch.

Ryan Walter and Claude Lemieux also scored for the Canadiens, who jumped to a 2-0 first-period lead.

Canadiens get big triumph over the Kings

By The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Montreal's Bobby Smith may have had three goals, but he knew which one did the most good.

"We needed this game," Smith said after the Canadiens defeated the Los Angeles Kings 4-0 Thursday night.

"The goal early in the third got us going."

Smith's second goal of the game came on 2-0-1 break after Chris Nilan carried the puck into the Kings' zone and fed Smith a perfect pass. All Smith had to do was sweep the puck into a wide-open net, tying the score 4-4.

With 3:33 to play, Sergio Momesso scored the game-winner off a pass from Stephane Richer, who carried the puck behind the Los Angeles net and fed it to a wide-open Momesso.

Smith, who also scored a first-period power-play goal, completed his fourth career hat-trick with an empty-net goal with 51 seconds to play to round out the scoring.

"We played probably our best third period of the year," Montreal Coach Jean Perreault said. "In the second period we gave the puck away and they came out flying."

The victory stretched the Canadiens' unbeaten streak to seven games and pushed them past the Quebec Nordiques into first place in the Adams Division. Montreal has gone 5-2 during that stretch.

Ryan Walter and Claude Lemieux also scored for the Canadiens, who jumped to a 2-0 first-period lead.

Sullivan got the Devils' fourth goal in a 6:14 span when he converted Mel Bridgman's pass from the corner.

"My record was set by Murray Craven and Mark Howe, who scored shorthanded goals 26 seconds apart in the first period. 'I've got to be honest,'" said Sullivan. "We're thrilled to death with the tie. We accomplished something, scoring four goals in 10 minutes against the best defensive team in the league."

New Jersey's Joe Cirella is sent flying through the air after being hooked by Philadelphia's Ilkka Sinisalo during first-period action Thursday night at the Meadowlands Arena. The Devils rallied to tie the Flyers, 5-5.

Fund redemptions due right away

QUESTION: I was invested in a regular mutual fund, and the fund could take seven days to redeem, which it did. The share value dropped during that seven-day period and lost some money. Wouldn't it have been smarter for me to switch from the regular mutual fund into the money market mutual fund and then wait a check on my money market mutual fund account? That would have eliminated the seven-day delay in redemption of your shares. More likely, you misunderstood what happened.

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

I wanted out of the regular mutual fund. From reading its prospectus, I knew I had to redeem my shares by mail and the fund could take seven days to redeem, which it did. The share value dropped during that seven-day period and lost some money. Wouldn't it have been smarter for me to switch from the regular mutual fund into the money market mutual fund and then wait a check on my money market mutual fund account? That would have eliminated the seven-day delay in redemption of your shares. More likely, you misunderstood what happened.

If you had used that fund organization's "exchange privilege." By doing that, you would have redeemed your shares in the regular mutual fund and switched the proceeds immediately into the money market mutual fund on which you can write checks. But the same amount of money would have been involved.

QUESTION: My first husband and I owned mutual fund shares in his name and my name, "as joint tenants." After our divorce, he received and cashed the dividend checks. Now he has liquidated all the shares. Was it legitimate for him to do this, without my consent?

ANSWER: No, on both counts. As is the case with individual stocks, dividend checks on jointly owned mutual fund shares must be paid to "an" and "between" the names. Both owners are required to endorse the checks before they can be cashed.

Sometimes, one of the joint owners will endorse dividend checks for deposit in a joint account for both owners. There's nothing wrong with that. But it's clear that's not what your ex-husband did.

And proper requests to redeem jointly owned mutual fund shares

Every mutual fund is required, by the Investment Company Act of 1940, to redeem its shares at the next value established after the share redemption request is received. All funds must "price" their shares at 4 p.m., eastern time, every business day. Some do more frequently.

Then, the proceeds of the redemption must be paid within seven days. That's another requirement of the '40 Act.

Assuming funds were handled correctly, your shares were redeemed at the price established the day your letter reached the fund - the next business day, at the latest. You didn't get a lower price to which the shares dropped during the following seven days.

Of course, you're correct in your reasoning that the money would have been available to you sooner

Carbide to sell corporate headquarters

DANBURY (AP) - Union Carbide Corp. will sell its corporate headquarters along with 650 acres of land for $30 million and lease back the building under an agreement signed Tuesday with the Danbury corporation.

Corporate officials said the agreement signed Thursday with The Related Companies Inc. should end speculation that Union Carbide planned to leave Danbury.

This agreement affirms our commitment to stay in the Danbury corporate home that we selected 10 years ago," Robert D. Kennedy, Carbide president and chief executive, said in a statement. "The proceeds received from this transaction will be an important part of our recently announced recapitalization plan."

The letter of intent signed Thursday calls for Union Carbide to lease the huge building for 20 years. The sale is to be completed by year-end, Union Carbide said in the statement.

Union Carbide will also form a limited partnership with Related Companies to develop the 650 acres of land during the next 14 years, the statement said. It will get one-third of the net profit from the development, the statement said, but he declined to describe how it will be developed.

"The unique physical characteristics of the site and buildings will allow a mixed-used development program," he said.

Union Carbide had announced plans earlier this year to develop the property around its corporate headquarters. The city of Danbury objected to part of the plan, which Mayor James E. Dyer said included condominiums.

The development should be the kind the community wants and we have the tools to control it," Dyer said Thursday night.

Union Carbide said it expects to realize a pre-tax gain of more than $100 million over the next 20 years from the sale. The transaction is expected to affect net income in 1986.

The company finished its move from New York City into its Danbury headquarters in the spring of 1982. Its building is a quarter-mile long and has 1.3 million square feet of office space.

Related Companies Inc. is involved in the ownership, development, financing, operation, management or syndication of 315 properties around the United States.

On Tuesday, Carbide announced a major program to restructure $2.5 billion of its debt. Its president

Business In Brief

GTE plans to raise dividends

NEW YORK - GTE Corp. apparently reports that an investor might be amassing a major stake in the company, said Thursday its board also would seek shareholder approval for a 3-for-2 stock split, for authorization to nearly triple the number of GTE common shares available to be issued to 750 million from 280 million, and to adopt certain defenses against a hostile takeover.

GTE, based in Stamford, Conn., is a major telecommunications concern that operates the nation's largest independent, or non-Bell system, telephone company. With 1985 revenue of $15.7 billion, GTE also has interests in long-distance services, telecommunications equipment and lighting products.

GTE's board raised the quarterly dividend to 91.5 cents a share from 80 cents, with the new dividend to be paid Jan. 1 to holders of record Nov. 24. That will raise the annual dividend to $3.66 a share from $3.24.

Perfume maker sues Calvin Klein

STAMFORD - The maker of imitation perfumes has filed a federal lawsuit against Calvin Klein Cosmetics, seeking $8 million in damages for alleged restraint of trade.

Representatives of the Stamford-based Parfums de Coeur said Thursday it filed a lawsuit on Oct. 22 in U.S. District Court in New York.

The suit is the latest volley in a continuing dispute over use of the trademark "Obsession," the name of a perfume made by Calvin Klein Cosmetics.

Parfums de Coeur charged that Calvin Klein Cosmetics and its president, Robin Burns, pressured Weibratt Technologies Inc. into backing out of a deal to supply scented strips for a national advertising campaign for "Confess" perfume.

"Confess" is Parfums de Coeur's imitation of Calvin Klein's perfume "Obsession."

Time closes Picture Week magazine

NEW YORK - Economic uncertainty and weakness in the national advertising market were cited as the reasons why Time Inc. has decided to close down its Picture Week magazine.

Henry Grunwald, editor-in-chief of Time, and Kelso Sutton, executive vice president of Time, said Thursday in a joint statement that they felt it would be unwise to invest more than $100 million to launch a major weekly in the face of decreased national advertising and an uncertain economic future.

The decision Thursday marked the end of the second major test of Picture Week magazine.

Time spent $30 million over the past two years in developing the news and human interest magazine and in testing reaction to it in selected cities, said Michael Luttman, a spokesman for Time.

Value of dollar remains unchanged

LONDON - The U.S. dollar was little changed today as European currency markets awaited publication of U.S. unemployment figures later in the day. Gold jobs in Hong Kong and was mixed in Europe.

Dealers said an improvement in the U.S. jobs figure for October could boost the dollar, but markets were expecting it to be unchanged at 7 percent.

Survey says town will boom

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

HARTFORD—Manchester is a prime area for development and will experience a boom of industrial construction within the next five years, a major business real estate firm predicted Friday.

According to the Farley Co.'s fall 1986 survey of Hartford-area industrial space, Manchester's vacancy rate for industrial buildings over 10,000 square feet is 3.8 percent. That means only a fraction of the 4.5 million square feet of modern industrial space in town now stands unoccupied, Farley Co. spokesman Peter Van Strum said.

"The hottest area for the next five years is going to be east of Hartford," Van Strum said during a CityPlace news conference Friday afternoon at which the survey was released. Asked about Manchester, he said, "We'll be seeing more industrial and commercial building out there." The survey also predicted that Hartford's northern suburbs will see considerable industrial growth in the near future because of their easy access to Interstate 91.

FARLEY'S SURVEY covered industrial buildings in the Hartford metropolitan area that were built after 1950 and contain at least 10,000 square feet of space.

While space in Manchester has been growing at a slow rate during the past six months, creating a stable market, about 68,000 square feet of industrial space resulting from new construction cropped up in Bloomfield and Windsor alone.

Farley officials said that with the interest rates low, many companies are seeking to build their own buildings rather than lease from someone else. This, in part, has been the cause of the increase in development.

"The Manchester Industrial Park has no problem keeping occupants," he said, while other industrial parks—including one on Sanrico Drive near Union Pond—are already being built.

Contract OK brings SNET strike to end

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

NEW HAVEN (AP) — An eight-week strike against SNET's biggest phone company ended Friday night when striking workers voted 6,678-1,869 to accept a 3-year contract.

Some of the approximately 9,700 workers were to return to their jobs within three hours of the settlement announcement. Southern New England Telecommunications Corp. spokesman Michael Gomez said.

Others will be back Saturday and Sunday with most workers returning on Monday, putting about 600 temporary operators hired during the strike out of work, Gomez said.

Enrico Melita, a spokesman for the Connecticut Union of Telephone Workers, said strikers wanted to get back to work.

"Our members voted resoundingly not in favor of SNET's final offer, but rather to end the strike," he said.

The strike began Sept. 13, is the longest in the company's history and the first the Connecticut Union of Telephone Workers has called independently. Gomez said. SNET workers struck for 2 1/2 weeks before the company gave in.

"We were confident that our workers would approve the contract. We believe it is responsive to the needs of the employees raised during the strike and balances that with the needs of the ratepayers to keep the cost of business down," Gomez said. "We expect the SNET team can and will be put back together again."

Jacobsen warns speculation could prove deadly

WASHINGTON — David Jacobsen, back in America after 17 months in captivity, received a hero's welcome at the White House Friday and then warned that speculation over U.S. dealings to free remaining hostages in Lebanon could cause their death.

Jacobsen, 35, went to the White House for a private meeting with President Reagan shortly after the freed hostage and his family arrived from Wiesbaden, West Germany on a military transport plane.

"The man that is planned will also help the industrial market as well," Daglio said, referring to the 785,000-square-foot Mall at Buckland Hills, proposed by the Homart Development Corp. of Chicago to the Buckland area of Manchester.

Survey says town will boom

HARTFORD—Manchester is a prime area for development and will experience a boom of industrial construction within the next five years, a major business real estate firm predicted Friday.

According to the Farley Co.'s fall 1986 survey of Hartford-area industrial space, Manchester's vacancy rate for industrial buildings over 10,000 square feet is 3.8 percent. That means only a fraction of the 4.5 million square feet of modern industrial space in town now stands unoccupied, Farley Co. spokesman Peter Van Strum said.

"The hottest area for the next five years is going to be east of Hartford," Van Strum said during a CityPlace news conference Friday afternoon at which the survey was released. Asked about Manchester, he said, "We'll be seeing more industrial and commercial building out there." The survey also predicted that Hartford's northern suburbs will see considerable industrial growth in the near future because of their easy access to Interstate 91.

FARLEY'S SURVEY covered industrial buildings in the Hartford metropolitan area that were built after 1950 and contain at least 10,000 square feet of space.

While space in Manchester has been growing at a slow rate during the past six months, creating a stable market, about 68,000 square feet of industrial space resulting from new construction cropped up in Bloomfield and Windsor alone.

Farley officials said that with the interest rates low, many companies are seeking to build their own buildings rather than lease from someone else. This, in part, has been the cause of the increase in development.

"The Manchester Industrial Park has no problem keeping occupants," he said, while other industrial parks—including one on Sanrico Drive near Union Pond—are already being built.

Contract OK brings SNET strike to end

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

NEW HAVEN (AP) — An eight-week strike against SNET's biggest phone company ended Friday night when striking workers voted 6,678-1,869 to accept a 3-year contract.

Some of the approximately 9,700 workers were to return to their jobs within three hours of the settlement announcement. Southern New England Telecommunications Corp. spokesman Michael Gomez said.

Others will be back Saturday and Sunday with most workers returning on Monday, putting about 600 temporary operators hired during the strike out of work, Gomez said.

Enrico Melita, a spokesman for the Connecticut Union of Telephone Workers, said strikers wanted to get back to work.

"Our members voted resoundingly not in favor of SNET's final offer, but rather to end the strike," he said.

The strike began Sept. 13, is the longest in the company's history and the first the Connecticut Union of Telephone Workers has called independently. Gomez said. SNET workers struck for 2 1/2 weeks before the company gave in.

"We were confident that our workers would approve the contract. We believe it is responsive to the needs of the employees raised during the strike and balances that with the needs of the ratepayers to keep the cost of business down," Gomez said. "We expect the SNET team can and will be put back together again."
