Europe votes for sanctions against Syria

By Ben Dobbin
The Associated Press

LONDON — The Common Market today agreed to impose sanctions against Syria, including an arms embargo, in support of Britain's charge that Syria sponsored terrorism, officials said.

A formal announcement of the agreement was to be made shortly by British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe, president of the 12-nation Common Market's Council of Foreign Ministers.

The officials, briefing reporters on condition of anonymity, said in an apparent reference to Greece that one country could not associate itself with foreign ministers' statement, but would implement the four sanctions agreed against Syria.

Apart from the arms ban, the Common Market agreed to suspend exchange visits by high-level officials and to tighten surveillance of Syrian embassies and of Syrian Arab Airlines operations.

"The essence (of the meeting) is agreement on the four points for action against Syria," said one British official briefing reporters.

Ministers of the trading bloc, known formally as the European Economic Community, gathered at the new, heavily guarded, Queen Elizabeth II conference center for the one-day meeting. Their agenda included East-West relations, the Middle East and the Syrian issue.

On Sunday, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac said after a meeting that they expected the sanctions to be approved.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government broke diplomatic relations with Damascus on Oct. 24 after an Arab was convicted of trying to smuggle a bomb aboard an Israeli jetliner at London's Heathrow Airport last April. Howe said there was conclusive evidence of official Syrian involvement in the attempt to sabotage the El Al jumbo jet and kill the 375 people on board.

The United States and Canada recalled their ambassadors from Syria to demonstrate their support for Britain.

Belgium last Monday said it was recalling its ambassador for a week's consultation, but no other European country has followed suit.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, appealing to the Common Market to crack down on Syria, said in Paris on Friday that the U.S. government would be "interested" in the results of the meeting and indicated some further U.S. action would then be taken.

At a foreign ministers' meeting in Luxembourg on Oct. 27, Greece refused to join the other EEC nations in signing a statement expressing a "common sense of outrage" at British evidence that Syria was involved in the El Al bomb plot.

The meeting did not produce agreement on joint measures against Syria. Britain blamed the lack of results on the presence of only six ministers, with the rest of the countries represented by deputies. British officials said they hoped all 12 foreign ministers would be present today, but they were not certain.

The Syrian government has said the bomb plot was a conspiracy by the United States, Israel and Britain to isolate Syria and cut it out of the Middle East peace process. Syria has circulated a six-page document to EEC countries, rejecting British charges.

On Sunday, Libya warned the European Community against deciding on "collective aggressive action" against Syria, and said if such measures were adopted, Libya would reply with "suitable measures."

In a report monitored in London, the Libyan foreign ministry said "any aggressive action against Syria is an aggression against the whole Arab nation ... (and) would be considered as directly against Libya."

The statement also called on Arab countries to withdraw their assets from EEC countries, stop oil exports and boycott Western goods.

The sleigh and deer were among items damaged by an Oct. 17 fire in the lodge at Center Springs Park, which also destroyed figures from two nativity scenes. New ones have been ordered and are expected to arrive in three or four weeks.

Opinions differ on town mall

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

When the Homart Development Corp. of Chicago announced plans two years ago to build the mammoth Mall at Buckland Hills in northwestern Manchester, some business people cringed at the prospect of so much added competition.

But as the mall starts its leap from blueprint to reality, business leaders in Manchester say the 785,000-square-foot shopping center will not destroy existing retail industry.

"I don't think its going to hurt us," said Joseph Garman, who owns J. Garman Clothier on Main Street. "I think it will bring more people into the area."

Garman's comments echoed those made by other business owners this morning during an informal survey.

Most of those interviewed agreed that Main Street and strip shopping centers like the Manchester Parkade will withstand the initial impact of the regional mall and will keep the clientele they have established over the years. They also said the downtown shopping district provides personal service that isn't available in the big chain stores found at malls.

"Most of the shoppers on Main Street are Manchester people," Garman said. "People still like coming where they can get high service — you don't get that at a mall."

Nathan Agostinelli, president of Manchester State Bank, and William Johnson, president of the Savings Bank of Manchester, both agreed. But they said Main Street and the Parkade will change somewhat.

"There'll be a shifting of stores over there, just like there was on Main Street," Agostinelli said.

Johnson said the retail center will become more condensed on Main Street, while more service-oriented businesses will crop up. More restaurants will also be established, he said.

Some of those interviewed also said the mall will draw people into Manchester who will then shop elsewhere in town.

"It's going to make Manchester a more attractive destination for people who live outside the area," said Anne Flint, president of the Greater Manchester Area Chamber of Commerce, which supports the mall project and the town's plans to finance road and utility improvements around the site.

"People have gone to Waterford who would never have gone there except for the Crystal Mall," Flint said.

Town officials, who are proposing that the town issue $13 million in tax-increment bonds to help pay for public improvements around the site, say the Mall at Buckland Hills will also spur other industrial and commercial growth in the region, including hotels and a convention center.

"People who come to a convention facility usually come with dollars in their pockets," Flint said.

During a public hearing on the project last week, a number of local merchants said the mall would hurt their businesses. Dr. John Clapp, a professor of finance and real estate at the University of Connecticut, said today is some reason for that fear.

"Certainly the effects on local merchants will be negative," Clapp said. "But I certainly wouldn't expect the mall to put Main Street out of business."

Studies have shown that most shoppers will choose a mall over the local retail outlets because of the diversity it offers, he said.

Philip Davidson, a co-owner of D&L Venture Corp. of New Britain, which operates a store at the Manchester Parkade and plans another one at the new mall, said the Parkade might find the going rough at the beginning, but will survive.

"There's always an initial crunch in the beginning," he said.

Captors say they'll release French hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An underground group believed made up of Shiite Moslem extremists loyal to Iran said today it would free some of the French hostages it holds in Lebanon within 48 hours.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization said in a statement delivered to the Beirut office of a Western news agency the imminent release of "some French hostages" was a result of Algerian and Syrian mediation.

The statement did not say how many hostages would be freed. The group has claimed responsibility for kidnapping three Frenchmen and two Americans in Moslem west Beirut.

Eight Frenchmen are being held hostage in Lebanon by various groups.

Today's promise of freedom came as the 12-nation European Economic Community met in London to consider British-sponsored sanctions against Syria in support of Britain's allegations that the Syrian government supports terrorism.

Release of French hostages while the London conference is underway could help improve Syria's image.

"As a result of the promises given by the French government on the demands that it very well knows and which had been previously discussed with the Algerians and currently through the constant French intervention with (Syrian) President Hafez Assad ... We announce that we shall release some of the Frenchmen within the next 48 hours," the statement said.

Among the Frenchmen held by Revolutionary Justice are two television crewmen of France's Antenne-2 station, soundman Aurel Cornea, 54, and lighting engineer Jean-Louis Normandin, 34.

They were kidnapped in west Beirut March 8, 1986 along with two other crew members, correspondent Philippe Rochot, 39, and cameraman Georges Hansen, 45.

Rochot and Hansen were freed in Beirut on June 21. The third French hostage in Revolutionary Justice captivity is Marcel Coudari, 54, of Marseille. He was believed kidnapped in west Beirut last February, but the group made the announcement of his abduction on Sept. 24. He is a French citizen of Lebanese descent.

The Revolutionary Justice statement accused the West of engineering an attack against Syria and said: "We declare in the name of the Revolutionary Justice Organization that we consider these (anti-Syrian) threats as directed against us. We shall confront them."

Skepticism follows vote

8th-town talks will be tough, leaders say

By George Lavna
Herald Reporter

Town and Eighth Utilities District leaders agreed today that the two sides need to sit down and talk about their differences regarding sewer service and fire protection, but both said they were skeptical about recreating a liaison committee. And their positions indicate that there may be a major difference of opinion about whether or not to share the town's Buckland firehouse on Tolland Turnpike when discussions begin.

"Obviously we need to do something at this point so that there is communication and dialogue," said Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg, one of six Democrats on the nine-member Manchester Board of Directors.

"It's always important to talk," said Gordon Lassow, a member of the Eighth District Board of Directors and a former president of the independent utilities authority.

But both also pointed out that previous liaison committees between the two boards were unsuccessful.

"Some were just horrendous," Lassow said. "It's very difficult to negotiate. It's hard."

"Historically, I don't think a liaison committee between the two boards has been successful," Weinberg said. "I think at this point, we need something to be successful."

The comments follow the defeat in last Tuesday's election of a proposal that would have removed the Eighth District's power to veto consolidation with the town of Manchester.

The outcome was a major victory for the district, which provides fire protection and sewer service to most of northern Manchester, and guaranteed its continued existence for the foreseeable future. It was seen as a major loss for Manchester Democrats,

Today is Monday, Nov. 10, the 314th day of 1986. There are 51 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Nov. 10, 1871, journalist-explorer Henry M. Stanley found Scottish missionary David Livingstone in central Africa. Stanley gave his now-famous greeting: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume." To which the Scotsman replied, "Yes, and I feel thankful that I am here to welcome you."

On this date:
In 1483, Martin Luther, a major leader of the Protestant Reformation, was born.

In 1875, the U.S. Marines were organized under authority of the Continental Congress.

In 1917, 41 suffragists were arrested in front of the White House.

In 1919, the American Legion held its first national convention, in Minneapolis.

In 1928, Hirohito was enthroned as the Emperor of Japan.

In 1951, coast-to-coast dial telephone service without operator assistance began as Mayor M. Leslie Denning of Englewood, N.J., called his counterpart in Alameda, Calif.

In 1954, the two Jima Memorial, depicting a group of servicemen raising the American flag, was dedicated in Arlington, Va.

In 1975, the United Nations General Assembly approved a resolution equating Zionism with racism. U.S. Ambassador Daniel P. Moynihan denounced the resolution, saying the United States would "never acquiesce in this infamous act."

In 1982, Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev died of a heart attack at age 75.

Ten years ago: The Utah Supreme Court ruled that convicted murderer Gary Gilmore could be executed by firing squad to meet his request that he die rather than spend a lifetime in prison. The sentence was not carried out, however, until the following January.

Five years ago: President Reagan told a news conference he was postponing until January his plans for new tax increases and further cuts in benefit programs.

One year ago: Britain's visiting royal couple, the Prince and Princess of Wales, attended services at Washington Cathedral, then visited the National Gallery of Art.

Decision leaves expressway foes madder than ever

By George Lovig
Herald Reporter

Opponents of the proposed Route 6 expressway said today they hope to continue their fight despite a federal appeals court's rejection of their attempt to halt the project.

"We don't intend to roll over and die," said Laurel Houle of Andover, one of 38 homeowners who were plaintiffs in the lawsuit that led to the appeal.

Houle said, however, that she did not know if the property owners would appeal the decision handed down Friday by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in New York. That has yet to be decided, she said.

"I'm angry about it," Houle said of the ruling. "It was unfair and unjust."

South Windsor attorney Jon Berman, who represented the homeowners, could not be reached for comment this morning.

But another plaintiff, Edith Petersen, who lives in Bolton until her property was bought by the state Department of Transportation, said she would support an appeal if Berman advised the group to go ahead.

"I'm just very disturbed," said Petersen, who now lives in Manchester.

ON FRIDAY, the three-judge appeals panel decided in favor of the state's argument that a lawsuit filed by the homeowners in March was not timely because the highway has not received final approval and construction has not started. The ruling upheld a decision in July by U.S. District Court Judge Jose Cabranes. U.S. Assistant Attorney General Neil Tuohy said today he was not surprised by the appeals court decision. "I thought that Judge Cabranes' decision was well reasoned and well written," he said.

During oral arguments last Monday, members of the three-judge panel expressed concern about the homeowners losing their property — something that gave the opponents hope the court would rule in their favor and stop the DOT from acquiring more land in the path of the road.

"That put a little doubt in my mind," Tuohy said today. But he said the court "was probably persuaded by the fact that Judge Cabranes considered that Houle said the decision did not make sense. 'How could the thing not be right (for legal action) when homes are being condemned?'" she asked.

Houle and the state have maintained that although property is being acquired, it could be repurchased by homeowners if the $170 million project — which would extend Interstate 384 from Bolton North to Windham — is ultimately killed.

FINAL APPROVAL hinges upon the DOT's receipt of environmental permits from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the state Department of Environmental Protection.

The Corps is currently waiting for additional information from the DOT about its plans to fill some 80 acres of wetlands in conjunction with the road construction. The DOT has said that information will be ready by February, and a decision on the permit will follow if the Corps accepts the data.

The DOT also needs two permits from the DEP — one for air quality and another for filling the wetlands.

Dr. Ragendra Jain, who oversees the issuance of air quality permits for the DEP, said today a decision should be made on that matter in a few weeks.

U.S. Senior Environmental Analyst Maria Butts said the inland wetlands permit is still under review. A decision might not come until early next year when the DOT submits the additional information to the Corps because the DEP would also want to review that data, she said.

Before a final decision is made on either permit, the public will have the opportunity to comment, Jain and Butts said.

Rough going seen for town-8th talks who vocally supported passage of Question 4 on the town ballot.

Both sides agree that the election's outcome has left a doubt that the problems between the two governments must be worked out. Major disputes concern sharing the Buckland firehouse and will collect lucrative sewer hookup fees from a new sewer planned for Buckland.

"The election to me showed the support for the continuation for the (Eighth District) volunteer fire department is there in the entire community," Weinberg said. "They (the public) have given us instructions."

She said she is hopeful that a sharing agreement can be worked out for the firehouse.

"I really think and am committed that both fire departments can work together," she said.

Lassow suggested that the town sell or give the Buckland firehouse to the Eighth District. In turn the district would help the town build or pay for another fire station in another part of town, he said.

But Democratic town Director Stephen Penny, the Democratic majority leader, said last week the town cannot give up control of the station because it is needed to fight fires in the area under the jurisdiction of the paid Town Fire Department.

As for the dispute over sewers, the Eighth District is currently appealing a decision by the state Department of Environmental Protection that gives the town control of a key valve in a sewer line the district is building.

"That valve will allow the town to change waste from Buckland into its lines and collect hookup fees from those that use the sewer. The district has said it wants to use that money to pay for the cost of the project."

One town director today disagreed with the stand taken by Weinberg and Lassow. A liaison committee would be helpful, "the sooner the better," said Republican Director Geoffrey Nash.

Kathy Mohney, who helps run Home Pet Care, East and West, sits with her Afghans, Dreamer, left, and Sunnie. The sitting service allows animal owners to leave for vacation and not worry about taking their animals to a kennel.

Owners travel, pets stay

Manchester woman turns animal love into business

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

It's easy to see Kathy Mohney has a fancy for animals.

Her two Afghan hounds, Sunnie and Dreamer, lumber through the rooms in her Manchester home, jumping on visitors and sprawling on furniture as if it were their own. The armrests on the couch and a couple of chairs have been torn and scratched by their furry paws.

A tarantula, stone still, broods in a glass case next to the wall. There were two until one got hungry and ate the other.

"I love animals," said Mohney, who can talk warmly even about alighting reptiles. "When I go to zoo, I take a lot of pictures of big snakes," she said, adding that she likes their "cute faces."

It was that love of creatures large and small — and an unplanned break from her career — that led Mohney and a fellow animal lover from Southington to start Home Pet Care, East and West.

The sitting service, Mohney said, was designed to help pets avoid the psychological and health problems that can be associated with kennels.

SOME ANIMALS become ill after spending time at kennels, she said, and many become disoriented in a strange place. "Not that they're all bad," Mohney said, "but a pet gets used to home sounds."

Since opening the business in August, Mohney and partner Carol Calladine, who handles animals on the western side of the Connecticut River, have spent their time going into other people's homes to check on pets.

For dogs, they'll go up to three times a day; for cats, only once. "I spread the hours out so they're not alone for too long," Mohney said. The cost is $12 a day for the canines, $8 for the felines.

Calladine said she got the idea after watching a woman on television who did the same thing.

"It really appealed to me," she said. "I always wanted my own kennel but never had the capacity to do it."

The two women met through business dealings and had talked about doing something with animals. When Mohney, who was brought up on a farm in Pennsylvania, suffered a sickness that took her off the job, it was the impetus she needed to start the service.

Mohney said after 18 years, the graphics field had gotten stale anyway. "I just got tired of it," she said. "I lost the drive."

CALLADINE, a production manager at a Simsbury advertising firm, said potential home-care clients go through an interview process and fill out a questionnaire so the two women can get to know the animals. The two will not watch dogs "if they've been trained to attack," she said.

So far, Calladine has been bitten once — by a cat.

"Some cats are high strung," Mohney said. "We expect those kinds of things."

Mohney said her most unusual call was a request to sit for a man's horses and oxen. "I was left with no words," she said. "I don't know what's required in the care of an oxen."

LINDA CLASSON, who lives in Bolton, said she was grateful for the service when Mohney watched Classon's pets.

Classon has three dogs, three cats, and ten parrots that needed attention, so that was a fairly tall order. "It was wonderful," Classon said. "I was really happy to have her around."

Classon said she called Mohney because she has so many pets.

"If I had one or two animals, I think I'd just take them to a kennel," she said. She said the kennels she has used for her dogs in the past "didn't notice that they underwent any trauma."

Mohney's partner has been booked nearly every weekend, and the Christmas holidays are spoken for as well. Mohney, who only started recently, said she has also been getting a good response.

Future plans include expanding the service to include other towns in the area by hiring others to help. "I'm looking forward to all the animals I'll meet," Mohney said.

Officials look for more rain

Weekend impact has yet to show

By Alex Girelli
Associate Editor

Almost two inches of rain has fallen on Manchester over the last three days, but it's too early to tell whether the rainfall has had an immediate effect on reservoir levels, the superintendent of the town water department said this morning.

Water Superintendent Robert Young said readings will be taken today at all town reservoirs, which were at about 67 percent of capacity last week.

If the readings indicate no change at all after the 1.85 inches of rain, it will show how dry the ground has become, Young said.

When it rains on ground that is wet, he explained, the water flows in sheets into the streams that feed the reservoirs. When the ground is dry, the rain soaks down and its effect on the reservoir level is delayed.

In any event the weekend rainfall is a benefit, Young said. He said 65 inches of rain fell over Thursday night and Friday, and another 1.2 inches fell over the weekend. More is predicted for Tuesday, he said.

Last week, Manchester officials asked residents to conserve water voluntarily by taking shorter showers and not allowing water to run continuously. Young said mandatory restrictions on consumption might have to be imposed in February if the water supply situation does not improve.

This past summer was a dry one across the state, with rainfall of 75 percent to 90 percent of average. Manchester has had about 8 inches less rain than it usually does by this point in the year, leaving its reservoirs lower than others across Connecticut.

Young said the October rainfall should have been 3.5 inches but was only three-quarters of an inch. That left the town's nine reservoirs with enough water for about 113 days.

As a result, the town has been using more water from wells and checking to see that there are no leaks in pipes or at dams.

In the future, Young said, the town could increase the capacity of its Buckingham Reservoir in Glastonbury by two-and-a-half times by building a dam in a different location. He guessed that might cost $5 million or $8 million.

Red's too hot

Red Skelton was resting comfortably at home in Palm Springs, Calif., after hot stage lights and an exhausting routine forced the 73-year-old comic to cut short a benefit performance, his secretary said.

The zany comedian was performing Saturday night at the Anaheim Convention Center during a benefit for Loma Linda University Medical Center when he told the audience he wasn't feeling well and excused himself. He was tended to by the center nurse and a doctor, and did not require hospitalization.

"It was complete exhaustion from the lights and he did more physical bits than he usually does," said the secretary, who asked that her name not be used. "It was too hot, and those extra bits didn't help too much."

Bill Harper, a spokesman for the convention center, said the comic was near the end of the show, having done about an hour and 45 minutes.

Skelton's Emmy Award-winning "Red Skelton Show" was broadcast weekly on television from 1951 to 1971. Skelton has kept up a busy schedule of appearances around the country.

The two-hour emergency operation for Sinatra, 70, was Sunday, said Cliff Brown, spokesman for Eisenhower Medical Center.

Sinatra had been appearing in Atlantic City, N.J., at the Golden Nugget Hotel, but canceled further shows when the ailment struck, his spokesman, Lee Selters, said Sunday in Los Angeles. Sinatra flew home in great pain to Palm Springs, where he was admitted Saturday night to the medical center.

Dr. Alan Altman, Sinatra's physician, said in Palm Springs that the entertainer had acute diverticulitis and would probably wear a colostomy bag to collect waste for about eight weeks after the surgery until his intestines heal and can be restored to normal.

"He should be fine," Altman said before the surgery to remove the inflamed part of the intestine.

He said Sinatra would not be allowed visitors for the next several days and no telephone calls for 48 hours.

Selters said Sinatra, who was born in New Jersey, had been due to conclude his Atlantic City performances Sunday and "he tried to make an attempt to continue, but the pain was too severe."

Decision on hazardous waste authority due soon

HARTFORD (AP) — Federal environmental officials, who said earlier this year that Connecticut was too lenient with polluters, are expected to decide after this month whether to restore the state's authority to enforce the U.S. Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Since last January, the state Department of Environmental Protection has been operating under the scrutiny of the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

"We've essentially agreed to do it EPA's way," said Ed Parker, DEP assistant director for hazardous waste.

Connecticut was among five states that lost its authority to run the federal program, according to Susan Absher, EPA's chief of oversight in the state programs branch of the Office of Solid Waste. The other states are Maine, Alabama, California and Ohio, she said.

Inadequate staffing has been cited in EPA's criticism of DEP's hazardous waste program.

Unless the state can regain its authority to enforce federal hazardous waste laws, it could lose federal money that pays for three quarters of its staff. The DEP has about 60 people working in the program, but EPA says more are needed.

Environmentalists say Connecticut has an inordinately large number of toxic waste dumps for a state its size and many are threatening underground water supplies.

Connecticut has 84 dumps that are required to close because of insufficient safeguards to protect ground water, according to the Environmental Defense Fund, a Washington, D.C.-based environmental group.

One reason Connecticut has so many dumps is that DEP encouraged scores of companies to install pits, ponds, piles, lagoons or landfills for hazardous waste in the 1960s and 1970s to limit direct pollution of streams and rivers.

Instead of having rivers contaminated immediately, the state now faces gradual contamination of its ground-water supply — a problem that is far more difficult to correct.

About a third — or a million — of Connecticut's residents rely on ground water for drinking, cooking and bathing.

EPA decided to yank Connecticut's authority because DEP officials were allowing industry to get away with pollution, Pareuteau said in Boston.

In violation of federal law, Connecticut was allowing hazardous materials to be dumped in landfills, was failing to assess required penalties against companies that had violated hazardous waste laws, and was failing to protect already tainted water from further pollution, EPA says.

DEP has denied it was "writing off" polluted water, but the agency has argued that, in some areas, it may be unreasonable or impractical to expect ground water to ever be cleaned up.

DEP, for instance, originally had proposed to allow Contract Plating Co. of Stratford to leave a pile of hazardous waste on its property, which is in an area where the water already is too polluted to drink without treatment.

Under pressure from environmentalists and EPA, the state decided to require removal of the waste, and the company has agreed to comply.

Holy Land's reopening prospects dim

By Brent Lyvonn
The Associated Press

WATERBURY — Nearly three years after Holy Land USA was closed for renovations, its gates remain locked and signs warn pilgrims that the shrine, a replica of Palestine at its own risk.

A campaign to raise $5 million for an ambitious restoration plan failed miserably and the prospects for Holy Land's ever being reopened are bleak, nuns who oversee the religious shrine say.

"It didn't seem people were interested," Sister Josephine Valentini, who along with one other nun has lived in a small convent at Holy Land since 1972, lamented last week.

"I guess they don't appreciate the Holy Land."

The shrine's $2-foot lighted cross still looms high above the city, a landmark for motorists along Interstate 84. But Holy Land's 17 acres are mostly in sad disrepair.

Vandals have set fires around some of the 200 religious shrines, gouged holes in the Catacombs of Rome and beheaded many of the statues that line the asphalt walkways. Weeds run riot along the miniature villages of Bethlehem and Jerusalem.

JOHN GRECO, the Yale Law

"It didn't seem people were interested," Sister Josephine Valentini, who along with one other nun has lived in a small convent at Holy Land since 1972, lamented last week.

School graduate who founded Holy Land 40 years ago to "bring people closer to God," died last year at age 90. He bought Pine Hill in 1946 for $1 from two local businessmen and built his monument with whatever materials he could buy by his hands on — store mannequins, scrap lumber, corrugated iron, pipes, chicken wire.

During its heyday in the 1960s, Holy Land attracted as many as 40,000 visitors a year from across the country. Even now, visitors occasionally wander through.

The Religious Teachers of Filipina, a teaching order of nuns, took over stewardship of Holy Land in 1982 under the auspices of the Catholic Campaign for Christ, a non-profit organization that technically owns Holy Land.

"What is aesthetically pleasing we'll keep," Sister Angela said. "What is not we'll remove, not in disrespect to John, but out of respect to him. The master plan will perpetuate John's dream."

The first goal is simply to clean up the grounds and do some landscaping with volunteer labor. The cross itself was refurbished in May by volunteer workers.

Yet the spiritual retreat that Holy Land was intended to provide is now suffering, Sister Angela said. "The appearance of peace that pervades this place," she said. "That's why we can't convince people we're closed."

"The return of the Holy Land to its original purpose is uncertain. The professional fund-raiser hired for a six-month campaign two years ago, Sister Angela said.

He said he especially hopes to focus on education, improvement of health care and increasing job opportunities.

Man faces charges in drug death

NORWALK — The death of a woman who was eight months pregnant after she allegedly took a mixture of cocaine and heroin has led police to charge a Norwalk man with two counts of manslaughter, authorities said.

The suspect, 36-year-old Samuel Brown, was scheduled to be arraigned today in Norwalk Superior Court. He was held by police in lieu of $25,000 bail after his arrest Saturday.

Police said Brown was at the Westporter Motel when they arrived about 5 a.m. Saturday and found the body of Bridgett Gay, 27, in a room. A motel clerk said the couple had checked in Friday night.

Detective Ron Pine said Brown told police that Gay had taken a mixture of cocaine and heroin. An autopsy was to be performed on Gay, authorities said.

Officials at the Kiwanis Emergency Shelter for the homeless in Norwalk said both Brown and Gay had spent many nights in the shelter.

Ethics law may hasten departures

HARTFORD — A new ethics law that takes effect in January may hasten the departures of state officials who want to take jobs in private industry.

The law, which was passed in 1983 but doesn't become effective until Jan. 7, 1987, prohibits officials who helped negotiate, award or supervise contracts worth more than $50,000 from going to work for one year after leaving office for contractors with whom they worked.

Deputy State Treasurer Paul J. McDonough, who has resigned to become director of governmental relations with First Connecticut Bancorp, said the law was a minor factor in his decision to leave the post he has held for 10 years.

If he had delayed, he couldn't have taken the job because the banking company has state contracts.

"The major factor (in the decision to resign) was that this was a very good time to look out there in the private sector and see what was available," McDonough said. But, he added, the new law, "does curtail your ability to go into the private sector."

State unemployment claims increase

WETHERSFIELD — Average weekly claims for unemployment benefits in Connecticut rose 1,200 to 21,315 during the last two weeks of October, the first time the number has risen since July, the state Department of Labor reported.

The latest average was still nearly 3,000 less than the 24,236 average weekly claims recorded during the same period last year, state officials said.

During the two weeks ending Nov. 1, there were 2,981 first-time filings and 18,334 continued unemployment claims compared with 2,410 first-time filings and 17,672 continued claims during the same period in 1985.

Benefits expired for 339 people in the most recent two-week period.

Twelve unemployment offices had an increase in the number of claims filed and six decreased. The number of people filing in Bridgeport stayed the same.

The Danbury area had the biggest increase, mainly due to a temporary, one-week shut down of an area plant, the Labor Department reported.

I-84 bridge slated for repairs

WEST HARTFORD — Repairs were to begin today on the Prospect Avenue bridge over Interstate 84 that was ordered closed after a half-inch wide crack was found in a steel support, state transportation officials said.

The crack was discovered Friday by a contractor repairing damage to the bridge from a tractor-trailer accident about a week ago, said Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns, who ordered the bridge closed on Saturday.

In the accident, a truck traveling on I-84 hit a steel support, but the damage was not serious enough to close the bridge, Burns said. But when the contractor arrived, it appeared that the bridge had been hit a second time in about the same place, causing the half-inch split, Burns said.

The second accident apparently was not reported to state police.

Bozzuto, Labriola pin loss on D'Amore

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Richard C. Bozzuto and Gerald Labriola, who lost the GOP gubernatorial primary to Julie D. Belaga, say the blame for the trashing she took from Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill last week lies with the party's state chairman, Thomas J. D'Amore Jr.

Sounding more bitter than ever, Richard C. Bozzuto, the campaign's final weeks of the campaign, he said Belaga wasn't going to win, despite the glowing, optimistic reports about her in the media and from state GOP officials.

Bozzuto could have won, he said, but her handlers "just didn't know what they were doing."

"O'Neill was extremely vulnerable," Bozzuto, a former state senator, said. "People were looking for an excuse to vote for somebody else and we never gave it to them."

It was quite a posting, wasn't it? Labriola said, taking a few minutes between patients in his pediatric practice in Naugatuck to discuss the election.

The two top Republicans in the state House of Representatives — Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand and Majority Leader Douglas S. Lloyd — said D'Amore should resign.

For them, D'Amore had a blunt statement: "D'Amore will go down in Friday on his own terms."

D'Amore said he plans to stay on the job "until I can figure out what happened."

"I'm not in the habit of quitting when things look bad," he said. "I'm going to finish what I started. His current term expires in June."

He plans to meet this week with top GOP office holders to discuss the party's future. Expected to attend are U.S. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. and U.S. Rep. Nancy

USS Louisville joins Navy's fleet of subs

GROTON (AP) — The USS Louisville has become a part of the Navy's nuclear powered submarine fleet with the main speaker at commissioning ceremonies telling the crew to demonstrate "professional competence."

"Incompetency is our enemy anywhere, but it's our public enemy number one in our business," McKee said.

He said the Louisville will have to demonstrate the four characteristics of a good submarine, "which are stealth, mobility, firepower and speed. That last one is up to the crew."

McKee told the commanding officer that during sea trials, the Louisville proved it's a good submarine. "Now it's time to go out and turn it into a good warship," he said.

McKee also hailed the safety record of the nuclear fleet, saying that since the launch of the USS Nautilus in 1954, U.S. submarines have logged more than 65 million miles without a nuclear mishap.

Rain drips off Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins' umbrella as she boards the nuclear-powered submarine USS Louisville at the U.S. Navy's submarine base in Groton Saturday. Collins was one of the speakers at ceremonies commissioning the sub.

State ranks 49th in disciplining physicians

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut ranked 49th in the nation in disciplining doctors last year, according to figures from the Federation of State Medical Boards.

State agencies that discipline physicians revoked a record number of licenses for incompetence or other problems in 1985, almost 60 percent more than in 1984. The New York Times reported in Sunday's edition.

The number of lesser disciplinary actions, such as license suspensions or probation, also increased dramatically. The Times reported. The increase behind Connecticut, which was a single year and larger than the increase for the previous four years combined.

Based on the number of disciplinary actions for every 1,000 doctors, Nevada, which has 1,494 doctors, was the most active board in the nation last year. Nevada revoked the licenses of 10 doctors and took a total of 30 disciplinary actions.

Connecticut, which has 9,544 doctors, revoked no licenses while placing four doctors on probation. Only Nebraska and Alaska ranked behind Connecticut, which was 49th because the District of Columbia was included on the list.

Dr. Douglas S. Lloyd, commissioner of the state Department of Health Services, said he hadn't read the Times report and wouldn't comment on Connecticut's ranking.

"I will review it with staff. I'm not going to speculate," Lloyd said when reached by news Sunday.

The new statistics come after years of criticism that many state medical boards, the most important agencies in the nation's medical discipline network, failed to punish doctors who were drunk, incompetent or impaired, allowing them to continue practice, possibly harming or killing patients.

A report in June by the inspector general of the Department of Health and Human Services said that boards disciplined "strikingly few" incompetent doctors. This week, however, the inspector general, Richard P. Kuserow, said he was "very pleased" by the new figures.

Former hostage returns home

SANTA ANA, Calif. — Former hostage David Jacobson hugged and kissed his 92-year-old father and other relatives as he returned for a reunion he said he could only dream about while being held by Lebanese terrorists for more than a year.

Jacobson was waiting Sunday at the steps of the private jet that brought his 55-year-old son from Washington, D.C., and he hugged for a long time before David Jacobson moved on to his sisters and other relatives gathered on the tarmac at John Wayne Orange County Airport.

"Dreams of this homecoming kept me going," Jacobson, who wore an American flag on his lapel, told reporters when the greetings were over. "The thought of a reunion with family and friends gave me hope. And now that day has arrived, and I look forward to sharing time with my loved ones."

Ads spur call for spending limits

WASHINGTON — A barrage of "totally out of control" campaign ads, with mudslinging galore, is bringing renewed attention to efforts to reign in campaign spending, a chief proponent of election reform says.

The negativity of this year's multimillion-dollar television political campaigns disgusted the voters, said Sen. David Boren, D-Okla.

"If there was ever evidence of a need for change, what went on this year is Exhibit A. I've been hearing that from voters," he said.

Kennedy rejects Judiciary chair

BOSTON — Edward M. Kennedy says he decided to head the Labor and Human Resources Committee when the Senate assumes control of the Senate next year. He steered the committee before the Republicans took a majority in 1980.

His decision makes Sen. Joseph Biden Jr., D-Del., who is considering a run for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination, head of the Judiciary panel.

"The return of the Senate to Democratic control offers an unusual opportunity to reverse the retreat of the past six years in critical areas ... that make a difference in people's lives," Kennedy said.

He said he especially hopes to focus on education, improvement of health care and increasing job opportunities.

Speeding tour bus flips; 1 killed

DAVIE, Fla. — A trip to Walt Disney World became a "terrifying, horrible" ride as a bus loaded with Central American tourists flipped twice and landed upside down, killing one woman and injuring all 30 others aboard.

One witness said the bus was going 60-70 mph in a construction zone marked 45 mph, while the bus company blamed the accident on the wet road and foggy conditions. Police were still investigating.

"It was horrible," said Rolando Chavez, 46, a Guatemalan customs officer who suffered a fractured collarbone Sunday.

"Horrible, terrifying, horrible. Thank God I'm alive," Olga Batres de Leon, 44, of Guatemala City was killed, said Florida Highway Patrol Lt. Jim Lee. Of the other passengers, who were visiting from Costa Rica, El Salvador and Guatemala, eight were admitted to hospitals, but none in serious condition.

The driver of the Galaxy International Tours bus was also hurt in the early morning wreck on Florida's Turnpike.

Series sparks outbreak of racism

AMHERST, Mass. — An outbreak of racism in this small college town after the Boston Red Sox' World Series loss is frightening and angering black and Hispanic students, officials and colleagues say.

"There's a sense of vulnerability and terror, of a state of siege on the part of minorities," said John Grayson, an assistant professor of religion at Mount Holyoke College in nearby South Hadley.

A flight here between white fans of the Boston team and black fans of the New York Mets revived racial tensions at the University of Massachusetts and spread to nearby colleges in the Connecticut River Valley.

On Oct. 30, a week after the Series, a racial slur was graffitied on the steps of Smith College's Lilly Hall, which houses offices for minority student groups.

There were rumors that a white student in a Ku Klux Klan uniform had won a Halloween party prize for the best Klansman. Black women complained of increased harassment.

Residents return home after wreck

CLARKTON, N.C. — Rail workers labored to reopen tracks that were closed after a freight train derailed and caught fire when the crew used the emergency brake in a vain attempt to keep from hitting a man on the tracks.

Fourteen of the train's 126 cars derailed Saturday, including two tankers filled with methyl alcohol that burned until Sunday.

The cars carried between 110,000 and 140,000 gallons of methanol.

About 50 nearby residents who were evacuated after the derailment were allowed to return to their homes Sunday.

Barry Wayne Landreth, 28, of Linden, was apparently sitting on the tracks and stood up as the CSX train approached, authorities said. He was holding a rifle and may have been hunting, said Bladen County Emergency Coordinator Mike Lower.

Gas prices stabilize, survey shows

LOS ANGELES — The decline in gasoline prices may be coming to an end, according to the latest Lundberg Survey, which found the average pump price down only a tenth of a cent in the past two weeks.

A survey of 15,000 gas stations nationwide found the average price of all grades, plus taxes, at 84.85 cents per gallon on Friday, compared to an average 84.73 cents Oct. 24.

Trilly Lundberg, publisher of the bi-monthly survey, "The drop was only a tiny portion of one cent per gallon, which was expected due to wholesale trends the past two weeks."

Hasentus tribunal visits crash site

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The trial of captured American Eugene Hasentus moved briefly Sunday to the southern Nicaragua jungle where the rebel supply plane that carried him was shot down.

Hasentus, accompanied by the president of the People's Tribunal that is trying the American on a charge of terrorism, and defense and prosecution attorneys traveled by helicopter to the jungle site 30 miles north of the Costa Rican border, said defense attorney Enrique Soto de Baten.

The lawyer said the group returned later in the day.

Hasentus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., says he was a cargo handler on the C-123 plane that was carrying arms and ammunition to U.S.-backed Contra rebels.

The American pilot and co-pilot and a Nicaraguan radio man were killed in the Oct. 5 crash. Hasentus parachuted from the plane and was captured a day later.

He faces up to 30 years in prison if convicted by the court of the crime of terrorism and public security violations charges. His trial will continue this week in Managua.

Lawmakers question Iran deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration efforts to exclude most of the government, including the CIA and the military, from its reported arms deals with Iran may be held by Lebanese terrorists for more than a year.

Jacobson was waiting Sunday at the steps of the private jet that brought his 55-year-old son from Washington, D.C., and he hugged for a long time before David Jacobson moved on to his sisters and other relatives gathered on the tarmac at John Wayne Orange County Airport.

"Congress is going to be asking a lot of questions," Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley." The newspaper reports, and they have not been denied, indicate the Reagan administration is not standing tall on this one.

"In an effort to cut Congress out, they have also cut out the CIA, the Joint Chiefs (of Staff), the State Department, the Defense Department," said Nunn, a military expert who will head the Armed Services Committee next year.

"And if so, who is making the decisions?"

"It would appear the White House is trying to do a back door way to get away from any congressional oversight," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said on the CBS program, "Face the Nation."

Catholic leader warns of 'disaffection'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, warning of "dangerous disaffection" between the Vatican and parts of the U.S. church, says face-to-face talks are needed between American bishops and Pope John Paul II before the pope's visit next summer.

Bishop James Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, president of the bishops' national organization, said the pope is welcome in this country "despite" "current tensions and controversies."

However, he said, it would be wise for members of the U.S. church to "share with him information about aspects of the church which will be highlighted when he returns to this country."

He didn't say exactly what the bishops would tell the pope, but he went on to describe deep divisions within an otherwise flourishing U.S. church.

Shultz called an unusual meeting of State Department experts Sunday at his suburban Washington home, but officials said the session on Syrian-sponsored terrorism was limited to questions about Iran.

A New York Times report quoting Shultz aides raising the possibility of Shultz resigning over "his pure speculation, as the story itself says," spokeswoman Sandra McCarty said.

Shultz himself, asked by reporters as he left his house Sunday whether he planned to resign, replied, "No."

News reports last week said former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane traveled to Tehran earlier this year and arranged to ship arms to Iran in exchange for the release of U.S. hostages.

An embargo on arms shipments to Iran, which is at war with Iraq, has been in effect since 1979. The U.S. position on the war is neutrality.

"If the press reports are true, said Sen. Democratic Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, the arms trade was "a major blunder" that should be a more moderate group of leadership in Iran. "We've made some strides in that regard," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a Senate Intelligence Committee member who appeared on the CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, appearing on the ABC program, said improving relations with Iran in general is desirable. But he added, "When it comes to arms trade for hostages, I have the gravest doubt."

Manila vows to counter coup attempt

TOKYO (AP) — Philippine President Corason Aquino, who arrived in Japan today seeking increased financial aid and investment, warned those said to be plotting against him that he would use "people power" to counter any coup attempt.

Aquino left Manila after warning any "self-appointed messiah" he will call the populace into the streets to fight any move against her government. She flew into Tokyo on a special flight and immediately boarded a helicopter to the government guest house.

At a welcoming ceremony there, she walked slowly alongside Emperor Hirohito, 85, while a brass band played the national anthems of the Philippines and Japan.

Wearing a simple gray-green suit, the Philippine president smiled as she caught sight of 75 Japanese schoolchildren enthusiastically waving the flags of both nations and wearing caps of yellow, the color she used in her presidential campaign in February. After paying a call on the emperor at his palace, the 53-year-old leader was to begin her first round of talks with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

Dita Angara, an exchange student at Tokyo's Waseda University and one of 12,000 Filipinos living in Japan, said she enjoyed the ceremony but did not come to see the pomp.

"We would like to give her support," she said. Poll shows support for curbs on smoking

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans believe the government should limit smoking in workplaces and public areas, but should not restrict advertising in magazines and newspapers and on billboards, according to a recent poll.

The poll released Sunday by three anti-smoking groups, 62 percent of those questioned said cigarette advertising should be restricted, while a similar survey recently conducted by the American Medical Association found 64 percent in favor of an advertising ban.

The new findings prompted a spokesman for the Tobacco Institute, Scott Stapf, to charge that the AMA "doctored" its survey.

A report accompanying the poll conducted for the American Cancer Society, American Heart Association and American Lung Association said their results differed from the AMA's because the doctors' group had prefaced its question by telling respondents

But the medical association supported a ban on cigarette advertising.

But the medical association supported a ban on cigarette advertising. Stapf called that a "mini-indoctrination session" that skewed the results of the AMA's poll, but officials of the anti-smoking groups said it was evidence that public opinion on the issue can be readily changed.

It is clear that the idea of restricting cigarette advertising and banning free public samples is becoming more acceptable, even though our public education efforts in this area have hardly begun," said Kenneth Warner, a public health professor at the University of Michigan.

In other findings, nine out of 10 people questioned for the latest survey support "no smoking" sections in public places, two out of three believe that smoking indoors is harmful to non-smokers in the vicinity, and six out of 10 believe that cigarette advertising causes youngsters to start smoking.

Hard look must precede rifle repairs

Before the Board of Directors commits the town to spending as much as $75,000 to repair the rifle range at the old Nike site, the directors had better satisfy themselves they won't be asking the taxpayers to finance a rather expensive facility chiefly for the benefit of people who don't pay Manchester taxes.

If the directors do decide to spend the money, they should set the schedule of fees for groups that use the range that provides for paying back a good part of the expense of renovations within a reasonable amount of time, for keeping the range from falling into disrepair again, and for sustaining some of the operating costs.

The directors will have a chance to ask the pertinent questions at a workshop Thursday before their 8 p.m. meeting in the hearing room of Lincoln Center.

Apparently it is somewhat unusual for a municipality to maintain a rifle range as part of its recreation facilities. But that alone is not a good reason to discontinue it.

Manchester has a number of unusual offerings in its recreation program, and a rifle range has been part of the package for a long time.

But information from the Recreation Department indicates that some people from as far away as New York and Massachusetts use the range for only one dollar an hour, plus the cost of a recreation card. At private ranges the fees range from $8 to $14 for an hour of shooting.

Clearly, Manchester's hourly charge must be raised if the problems at the range are corrected at town expense.

More important are the fees charged clubs and commercial users of the range. Those fees were raised last September to make the range more nearly self-sustaining, and they should be examined again in the light of the $75,000 expenditure.

If the town can make the range self-sustaining without raising the rates to commercial levels, and thus keep it available for Manchester users, the directors should approve the repairs. But if the rates have to be as high as those charged by commercial ranges in order to make the operation sound, maybe the town should get out of the shooting business.

"They've degraded everything else — why NOT the CIA?"

Veterans Day tale has foreign flavor

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — Every November, around Veterans Day, Oliver Butler gathers with friends and neighbors to commemorate the grit and the gallantry of having defended the nation. He puts on an old uniform, the medals still glitter, and revels in the stories of brave men at arms.

But this year is going to be a little different. Butler will no doubt change the subject somewhat. Yes, he will still speak of blood and guts, and the smell of cordite drifting in with the overseas dawn, but he will also talk of a more recent combat he has waged right here on the home front.

Well, air, he might say, the altercation started some months ago when he attended a meeting of the Brownsville City Council. Butler is local lawyer, with an eye for detail, and he noticed that the red, white and green flag of Mexico was standing right next to the traditional Old Glory.

Butler had seen the Mexican flag flying in other parts of the city, of course. Brownsville has a decidedly Hispanic history. It sits at the southernmost point on the U.S. mainland, 96 percent of the 100,000 residents have Spanish origins and showing the Mexican flag is a cultural remnant.

STILL, BUTLER BRISTLED. It's one thing to put a foreign flag on display on private property, but quite another in a government setting. He told the city council members that he had campaigned for U.S. sovereignty in two wars, and he would prefer to have the U.S. flag fly without company.

One council member agreed, Susan Austin, whose name does not appear on the agenda in this kind of thing, said the Mexican flag had been displayed in the council for years, and it was indeed kind of strange; she thus had the flag dismantled from its staff and removed from the chamber.

That action bruised some other opinion.

Have you visited the bloodmobile?

To the Editor:

As a volunteer worker for the Connecticut Valley East Branch, Greater Hartford Chapter, American Red Cross, I have been amazed at the number of people who are not aware of where the expression "bloodmobile" came from. They immediately construe it as a "van." This is incorrect. The term "bloodmobile" is used because we are mobile. We hold these blood drives in various places throughout the year — in churches, fraternal halls, schools, etc., in different parts of the state in order that no one can claim it is too difficult for them to get to a bloodmobile. So many do not realize that the Red Cross holds these "drives for blood" in different locations in order to accommodate that group of philanthropists who give something more valuable than money, namely blood.

It is through the unselfish cooperation of various industries, churches, schools and organizations — plus the undaunted services of dedicated volunteer workers that the Red Cross is able to hold these blood drives in all different locales many times throughout the year. While it would be more simple for the Red Cross to hold all of these drives in one central location — Red Cross headquarters — and avoid the necessity of transporting equipment from one place to another, it undoubtedly would limit the amount of blood collected since it would not be as easy for donors to reach that point. The collection of blood is such an avertily important issue, the Red Cross is willing to make this extra effort to collect as much blood as possible. With the advent of so many transplantations the need for blood is greater than ever.

Now that we have settled the question of what bloodmobiles, have you visited one lately?

however. A councilman named Robert Lackner said the removal was an affront to Mexico. He said Brownsville had a special responsibility to maintain relations with the people south of the border, and he took it on himself to return the flag to its place of honor.

So Butler the old soldier was forced to redirect his attack. He says he did not want to make a fuss, but the big guns of public opinion became necessary. He asked the council to schedule an open debate on the matter of the Mexican flag, and then to settle the question of propriety once and for all.

THE DEBATE WAS HELD last spring, and Butler led the forces of chauvinism. He said he had joined the U.S. Marines in World War II, he stayed on to retire as a full colonel in the Army Reserve, and he could not tolerate any encroachment on the meaning and importance of the American way.

Others with him felt the same. Both Hispanic and Anglo-Saxon. The issue, they argued, was devotion to a common purpose, and blast the neighborly tie. Brownsville is a city in Texas. Texas is a state in the Union, and the Union has always and solely been represented by the stars and the stripes.

Butler says he thought the points were irrefutable. Yet Councilman Lackner rose in opposition just the same. Butler said the councilman had taken pains to pack the council meeting with city employees in his debt, and they cheered loudly as Lackner talked about heritage and internationalism.

Lackner said that displaying the Mexican flag was a symbol of the respect held for the Mexican state. And removing it would dilute the respect. He suggested that Butler and his troops did not understand the fine points of local customs, and he insisted that the foreign flag remain standing.

BUTLER SAYS THE BICKERING went on for hours, blah, blah, blah, until the five-member council decided eventually to punt. The members said the issue required more study, which was another way of saying that the argument was a draw, and they voted 4 to 1 to table the question indefinitely.

Col. Butler did not accept that, however. The colonel pointed out that Brownsville stood alone in this peculiar respect, the councilwoman noted the need for community solidarity, and, in the end, not long ago, the government officers agreed to a compromise.

The compromise adds four more flags to the display in the council room. Those of France, Spain, the Texas Republic and the Confederate States of America. They represent the six flags that have flown over Texas during its organized history, and Butler says he is satisfied with the result.

Or that's the way he will tell it to the Veterans Day gathering, anyway. He says the skirmish is over. The only flag that concerns him now is that of the Marine Corps; he says he will wave it at the annual get-together, to celebrate yet another triumph for the forces of the United States.

Gold hunters buy support in Philippines

WASHINGTON — The government of the Philippines is backing efforts by a group of American and Filipino treasure hunters to recover a fortune in stolen gold believed to have been buried offshore by the Japanese during World War II.

The government's support is limited to protection by the Philippine coast guard, but the Aquino government has hopes that recovery of the buried treasure could give the Philippine economy a badly needed boost. In fact, when the American leader of the venture met Aquino last March, she listened intently and reportedly exclaimed: "My God! It could be the second miracle." (The first, of course, was her surprising progress from widowed housewife to president in the space of a few months.)

More than 10 years ago we first reported on the hundreds of pages of confidential State Department documents pointing to the existence of billions of dollars' worth of booty the Japanese plundered throughout Asia and buried in the Philippines during the war. According to these documents, the treasure was stashed in 172 secret locations in the islands, both on land and under water.

AMERICAN PRISONERS OF WAR reportedly were forced to help bury the treasure, and were then, like pirate captives of long ago, killed to safeguard the secret. At one site the POWs were reportedly buried alive.

We also reported that then-President Ferdinand Marcos, through a secret operation code-named "Liberator," had uncovered some of the buried gold and added it to his personal fortune, estimated at $10 billion.

The latest treasure seeker is Al Meyers, an American engineer who has invented a laser-based gold detector. A reputable testing laboratory has confirmed that Meyers' device consistently locates gold.

Meyers enlisted the support of investors and Filipino businessmen who had maps of purported burial sites of World War II treasure. He was in the midst of pinpointing promising sites when the Marcos regime was overthrown early this year.

On March 9, Meyers met with newly installed President Aquino and several high officials and laid out his evidence of potential gold caches in Calatagan Bay, about 70 miles south of Manila. Though Aquino was restrained throughout the meeting, she quickly realized what several billions in gold would do for her treasury, which was systematically looted by Marcos for years.

MEYERS AND HIS ASSOCIATES gave the government a good deal: 75 percent of any treasure they find. Philippines law requires only 50 percent for the government.

In return, the government provides the treasure hunters with protection. The "Calatagan Project" is being coordinated by Aquino's uncle, Francisco Sumulong, an assemblyman, who signed a memorandum ordering the coast guard to permit the project "to provide all necessary assistance and support to facilitate and expedite the smooth operation of the project."

The food and salaries of the coast guard protectors are being paid by Meyers and his associates. So the Aquino government could be getting a bargain: at no cost to the treasury, a possible 75 percent share in some 800 tons of gold worth more than $8 billion.

The treasure seekers also benefit from the arrangement as they dig on a coral reef identified by an eyewitness to the gold's original burial. Their coast guard protectors have already driven off one gang of about a dozen armed men who tried to kidnap the salvage master.

Citizen Action
Suspecting a cover-up by the Justice Department, a group fighting for rights of the homeless has bypassed the U.S. attorney and appealed directly to a federal grand jury to investigate a former Housing and Urban Development Department official.

The Community for Creative Non-Violence has challenged the methodology used by HUD official Kathleen Peroff in her controversial 1984 study, which claimed there were only 350,000 homeless in the entire country. As we reported earlier, an FBI interrogation of Peroff was stopped because Justice officials were afraid it would damage her credibility as a government witness in a related civil case.

Season's first major storm buries Plains states, Canada

By Arthur Buckler
The Associated Press

More snow moved into the northern Plains today after the season's first major snowstorm closed highways, stranded travelers, killed six people and left hunters out in the cold on the first weekend of deer season.

The first storm moved into Canada on Sunday, leaving frigid temperatures and up to 25 inches of snow in its wake. It was followed by a weaker storm from the Rockies that was depositing light snow today on Wyoming and the Dakotas.

A number of county roads were still blocked by drifts in North Dakota, while ice covered parts of Interstate 90 in South Dakota. Eighteen inches of snow fell on Bismarck, N.D., a record for any November storm, while elsewhere in the state 25 inches fell in Devils Lake and drifts of up to 5 feet were reported in Minn.

"Everybody is complaining about getting their streets plowed," Devils Lake police dispatcher Holly Duclumeau said Sunday.

WHILE WINTER weather is not unusual in North Dakota more than a month before the Dec. 21 official start of winter, "this is a bit much," said National Weather Service meteorologist Rich Van Eas.

"Traveling is probably the worst hazard we've had. The roads are really bad, solid ice," deer hunter Marvin Boss of Clark, S.D., said Sunday at a cafe in Faith, S.D.

But he added: "If you're going to hunt you got to be where they're (deer) at. We're used to that type of weather. Winter is winter."

In North Dakota, two deer hunters from Minot spent 38 hours in their pickup truck 15 miles north of Towner before the road was opened Sunday morning, said Jim Boehn, communications supervisor for state radio. The men were unharmed.

"We did a lot of cuddlin' last night," said Jeff Hardy, 24, who was stranded with Greg Tompkins, 24. "I was freezing. We almost gave up hope last night. We just kept talking to each other. ... Our legs were really numb."

Hundreds of motorists were stranded on Interstates 94 and 29 but most got rides to shelter, said Lyle Gallagher, director of state Radio Communications.

WINDS GUSTING to 68 mph from Devils Lake and St. Paul, Minn., toppled utility poles and knocked trees onto power lines, cutting electricity to 6,700 customers in the area. Power was restored by Sunday night.

In northern Minnesota, which got up to six inches of snow, 12 hunters were rescued over the weekend, including one man who was hospitalized today in stable condition. One of the rescued hunters was a 15-year-old boy who was found unharmed 15 miles north of Duluth after a night in which the temperature dropped to 14 degrees, with a wind chill of 25 to 35 degrees below zero.

"Once he knew he was lost, he apparently gathered up some pine boughs and covered up and waited for the duration," said Sgt. Tom Pearson of the St. Louis County sheriff's office.

Searchers planned to resume looking today for one of two canoeists who drowned in the frigid waters of Lake Vermillion in northeastern Minnesota. His companion's body was found Saturday.

In Michigan, foot-deep snow drifts formed Sunday one day after the state enjoyed unusually warm temperatures in the 60s.

POLICE USING four-wheel drive vehicles had to rescue 50 cars that got stuck west of Minot, N.D., on Saturday, said Ward County dispatcher John Strandberg.

About 15 truckers and a couple families waited out the storm at the Minot Standard Truck Stop, said manager John Berdover. People who didn't get motel rooms watched television and "drank coffee and told their old stories."

A farmer in his 60s who lived near Devils Lake, N.D., died during the storm after his vehicle got stuck in snow.

Wade Dollens of Bismarck, N.D., steers a snow blower through a drift outside a Bismarck bowling alley Sunday afternoon. The city's residents spent the day digging out after 18 inches of snow buried the town Friday and Saturday.

Israeli faces spy charges

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Mordechai Vanunu, a former nuclear technician who told a British newspaper that Israel has secretly stockpiled at least 100 atomic weapons, faces spying charges and a life sentence, the daily Davar reported today.

The newspaper said Vanunu's prosecutors would not charge him with treason, which is punishable by death. Davar did not give a source for its information. The Israeli government revealed Sunday that Vanunu was under arrest and would be tried, but denied that secret agents kidnapped him in Britain and spirited him back to Israel.

The announcement put an end to almost six weeks of speculation over Vanunu's whereabouts, but did not say how or when the 32-year-old got to Israel.

He was last seen in London on Sept. 30. Five days before the Sunday Times published a lengthy article on Israel's nuclear capabilities based on information and photographs it said Vanunu provided.

The report said Israel had produced 100 to 200 nuclear weapons — including neutron bombs — at the Dimona nuclear center, a suburban factory in the southern Negev desert where Vanunu worked for 10 years.

Israel has not confirmed or denied producing nuclear weapons.

Education secretary rips U.S. policy

By Christopher Connell
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A national commission headed by former Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell says the United States is making "national suicide" by sharply increasing spending on its schools and colleges.

The academic and civic leaders, in a report commissioned by a state college group, rebuked President Reagan and others who have sought to cut aid for college students.

The report, released Sunday, called for a domestic Marshall Plan to nearly double the number of college-educated adults by the turn of the century.

"Public officials who propose budget reductions in education at a time when the republic is handicapped by the burden of an undereducated populace are unthinkingly abetting an act of national suicide," the Bell commission said. "Their priorities are wrong."

The 58-page report, "To Secure the Blessings of Liberty," was prepared for the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, which is holding its annual meeting in Phoenix. Bell was to address the group today on the recommendations.

The 22-member panel included Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and former Mississippi Gov. William Winter, as well as a half-dozen college presidents, the heads of both national teachers' unions and the chancellor of New York City's schools.

The association represents 372 four-year campuses and awards a third of all bachelor degrees. It urged states to keep college tuition as low as possible, in part to help recruit more minority students and stop the growth of "an American underclass." It also urged the states to defend the lead in producing the million new teachers needed by public schools in the next decade, and to help cut the dropout rate in high school.

The commission criticized states for curtailing spending on remedial programs. Remedial education is the key to the nation's foreseeable future," in the state colleges, it said.

The report's pungent language echoed the 1983 "A Nation At Risk" report by the National Commission on Excellence in Education, which Bell appointed. That report warned of a "rising tide of mediocrity" in U.S. schools and likened their condition to "a unilateral act of disarmament." It spurred many states to raise high school graduation standards and boost school budgets.

"Tragically for the American people, the federal student financial aid program today endorses the chopping block in Washington," the report said, claiming that the real value of federal aid has fallen 25 percent since President Reagan took office in 1981.

Bell served in Reagan's Cabinet for four of those years and went before Congress to defend the president's cuts in student aid. But Bell said in a telephone interview that he always battled inside the administration with then-budget director David Stockman over those cuts.

Bell's slap at budget-cutters came as the House of Representatives passed a bill to raise the federal deficit to $100 billion by 1990. The bill would cut the federal deficit by $10 billion through the sale of whale meat.

Watson, 36, said a Sea Shepherd team went to Iceland several days ago and patrolled the harbor, watching for an opportunity to sink the vessels.

"As we don't want to cause bodily harm we therefore prepared the act very carefully," he said.

Group sinks whaling ships

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — An American anti-whaling group has claimed responsibility for scuttling two Icelandic whaling boats — half the country's whaling fleet — in Reykjavik harbor.

Saboteurs opened the bottom valves on the vessels, Hvalur 5 and Hvalur 7, around 2 a.m. Sunday when no crew members were aboard, police said. No injuries were reported.

The Los Angeles-based Sea Shepherd Conservation Society said it carried out the attacks. Its leader, Paul Watson, said in an interview with Icelandic state radio and television that a team from his organization sank the 430-ton vessels because the Icelanders were hunting whales illegally.

Environmentalists accuse the Icelandic government of using scientific pretenses as a cover for commercial whaling.

"They are trying to say they are killing whales for research, but the whale meat is being sold to Japan. They are prostituting science," Watson told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from Vancouver, British Columbia.

Iceland agreed to abide by an International Whaling Commission decision to cease whaling from 1985 to 1990. Although commercial whaling stopped, the government permits the Hvalur Whaling Co. to carry out scientific whaling in cooperation with the National Oceanic Research Institute.

The company, which has two other boats, is allowed to catch 200 whales a year under a plan to document the number of whales.

Last August, Icelandic and U.S. officials reached a compromise providing that half the meat resulting from the whaling be consumed by Icelanders. In the past, 90 percent of the meat was sold abroad, nearly all of it to Japan.

The United States monitors foreign whaling. If it determines that efforts to conserve the whales have been undermined, the Secretary of Commerce is required by law to recommend that the president either embargo the offending country's fish products or curtail its right to fish in U.S. territorial waters.

Iceland maintains that as a fishing nation it must conduct extensive research on how whales affect fish population and that it can finance its research only through the sale of whale meat.

Watson, 36, said a Sea Shepherd team went to Iceland several days ago and patrolled the harbor, watching for an opportunity to sink the vessels.

"As we don't want to cause bodily harm we therefore prepared the act very carefully," he said.

Infant abducted from mom's arms
SELLERSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Tears ran down Barbara Worthington's face as her pastor pleaded for the safe return of her newborn son, taken from her arms by a woman in hospital garb the day after he was born.
"This appeal is to the person who took the child," the Rev. Mark Wimmer said Sunday as Mrs. Worthington, 26, sat in a wheelchair and cried, her tearful husband, Neil, 27, by her side.
Mrs. Worthington gave birth Thursday morning to 6-pound, 5-ounce Phillip at Grand View Hospital and was talking to Wimmer on Friday when, authorities say, a woman wearing a white coat walked into the room, claimed the baby, and took an examination and walked off with him.
"Please return baby Phillip to this hospital, the nearest medical facility or authorities who will be in a position to see that the baby is returned to this location," said Wimmer, pastor of St. Andrews Lutheran Church.
Hospital spokesman Scott Campbell said neither of the child's parents was in a condition to speak during the appeal in a hospital conference room.
The Worthingtons, of Silverdale, a Philadelphia suburb, have one other child, 16-month-old Elsieha.

CPR skills help make a difference
DETROIT (AP) — Bystanders using cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) can improve the survival chances of patients undergoing cardiac arrest at a rate equal to that of patients whose heart attack occurs in the presence of emergency medical service personnel, notes Internal Medicine News.
According to the medical journal, nearly 23 percent of 472 patients who suffered cardiac arrest outside Detroit's Henry Ford Hospital and received CPR by bystanders survived until they were admitted to the hospital, and 11 percent were discharged alive. However, only 14.6 percent of those who were not given CPR by bystanders survived until hospital admission, with 4.7 percent discharged alive, the publication reports.

Study shows domestic dispute threat exaggerated

By Pete Yost
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A new federal study explodes the myth that handling domestic disturbances is one of the most dangerous assignments for police officers.
The number of fatalities among police occurring during domestic disturbances actually is less than one-third the number commonly reported by researchers and in police training materials, the National Institute of Justice says.
As recently as last year, researchers were reporting that as many as 23 percent of officer deaths occurred during domestic disturbances, but the correct figure is less than 6 percent, the study said.
From 1972 to 1984, there were 69 officers killed in domestic disturbances, which is one of the most frequent of all police street assignments. A total of 210 officers died in robberies, the most dangerous of all police activities. Police handle four to 10 times as many domestic disturbances as they do robbery calls.
The study, issued Sunday, said the notion that handling domestic disturbances is one of the most dangerous police functions stemmed from the assumption that the "disturbance" category of FBI statistics was composed solely of domestic problems.
The category actually included general disturbances ranging from bar fights to gang brawls and disorders short of riots or civil unrest.
"Research and police training... have emphasized the danger in domestic disturbances," said the authors of the report, Joel Garzer and Elizabeth Clemmer. "If domestic disturbances do not generate exceptional danger to the police, managers can focus attention on improving effectiveness of the police response to victim needs."
Tony Pate, a senior research associate at the Police Foundation in Washington, said on-the-scene counseling rather than a strict law enforcement approach may be appropriate in a majority of domestic disturbance situations.
"There have been training manuals and approaches to training at academies that have basically just been scaring the police into believing that these situations are much more dangerous than they really are," Pate said.
"Counseling... is not something that would readily come to mind if you think you're going to be assaulted," he said.
The study says statistics are incomplete on assaults and injuries of police officers during domestic disturbances.
However, the institute reviewed data from eight independent studies of assaults, injuries and deaths among law enforcement officers.
Six of the studies found domestic disturbances caused the lowest number of such incidents and the other two found domestic disturbances prompted the second-lowest number of such incidents.
The study noted that the California Penal Code incorrectly states that 23 percent of deaths of law enforcement officers result from intervention in domestic violence incidents.

CDS offers AIDS money

By Steve Hannon
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The federal Centers for Disease Control is sponsoring a $10 million program to teach the nation's schoolchildren about AIDS, according to a report published today.
"The schools are a very important vehicle for transmitting information," Dennis Tolma, director of the CDC's Center for Health Promotion and Education, told the Los Angeles Times. "There are 47 million kids in the nation's schools, as well as several million faculty and staff who also need to understand about AIDS."
"Society cannot wait to begin to do this," Tolma said. "There is a lot of urgency here. People must be convinced that this is needed — and needed now."

the augmented AIDS budget request, already was in the planning stages before two recent reports recommended that AIDS education programs be implemented as quickly as possible, the Times said.
In its report, the Institute of Medicine, an affiliate of the National Academy of Sciences, urged annual spending of $1 billion on education about AIDS, most of it from federal sources.
And in a report issued last month, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop urged that AIDS education "must start at the lowest grade possible... so that children can grow up knowing the behavior to avoid to protect themselves."
Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is caused by a virus that destroys the body's immune system, leaving victims vulnerable to a variety of life-threatening infections. It is caused by a virus believed to be passed through blood and semen, but not through casual contact.
Under the program envisioned by Tolma, each school district would come up with its own education program, although CDC officials would provide guidance.
"School curricula are intensely local affairs," Tolma said. "Their decision-making is local. That's the way it should be. The community makes the decisions."
He added that he anticipates little resistance to the idea of discussing AIDS in the classroom. He said the National School Boards Association already has come out in favor of AIDS education.

Infant abducted from mom's arms
SELLERSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Tears ran down Barbara Worthington's face as her pastor pleaded for the safe return of her newborn son, taken from her arms by a woman in hospital garb the day after he was born.
"This appeal is to the person who took the child," the Rev. Mark Wimmer said Sunday as Mrs. Worthington, 26, sat in a wheelchair and cried, her tearful husband, Neil, 27, by her side.
Mrs. Worthington gave birth Thursday morning to 6-pound, 5-ounce Phillip at Grand View Hospital and was talking to Wimmer on Friday when, authorities say, a woman wearing a white coat walked into the room, claimed the baby, and took an examination and walked off with him.
"Please return baby Phillip to this hospital, the nearest medical facility or authorities who will be in a position to see that the baby is returned to this location," said Wimmer, pastor of St. Andrews Lutheran Church.
Hospital spokesman Scott Campbell said neither of the child's parents was in a condition to speak during the appeal in a hospital conference room.
The Worthingtons, of Silverdale, a Philadelphia suburb, have one other child, 16-month-old Elsieha.

Reagan faces tougher battles over contra aid, analysts say

By Robert Parry
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is likely to face tougher battles over aid to Nicaragua's contra rebels in the 100th Congress although the Democrats' Senate will do not dramatically alter the balance of power on the issue, analysts on both sides say.
These observers foresee contra aid as one of the most closely fought issues in the new Congress and potentially an important battleground in the 1988 presidential race.
Last Tuesday's elections ushered in a 10-vote Democratic majority in the Senate, but that does not translate into a comparable shift on the contra aid question, because some defeated Republicans opposed the assistance and some victorious Democrats are for it.

This year, Reagan lobbied heavily to win $100 million in military and other aid for the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government. He prevailed 53-47 in the Republican-controlled Senate and 220-209 in the Democratic-dominated House.
The category actually included general disturbances ranging from bar fights to gang brawls and disorders short of riots or civil unrest.

The Giants' Joe Morris (20) is spun to the ground by the Eagles' Evan Cooper after scoring on an 18-yard run in the second quarter of Sunday's game. Morris was injured on the play but was able to return later. He scored twice in the Giants' victory.

Philadelphia quarterback Randall Cunningham is tackled by New York's Lawrence Taylor for a two-yard loss during third-period action Sunday at Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia. Taylor had three sacks on the day in the Giants' 17-14 victory.

'Little' Joe Morris leads Giants to victory

By Ralph Bernstein
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — If the name of Joe Morris doesn't come quickly to mind with the likes of NFL star running backs Eric Dickerson, Walter Payton and Tony Dorsett, maybe it will before long.
"I'm not a big name," said Morris, who scored two touchdowns and gained more than 100 yards for the fourth straight game as the New York Giants defeated the Philadelphia Eagles 17-14 Sunday.
The victory left the Giants deadlocked with the Washington Redskins for first place in the NFC's Eastern Division. Each is 8-2.
Morris, who gained 111 yards on 27 carries against the 3-7 Eagles, collected 128 yards three weeks ago against Seattle and added 181 yards in each of the next two games, against Washington and Dallas.
Morris, who scored on runs of 18 and 3 yards, refused even to let a blatant personal foul deter him Sunday.
On his first TD run, Morris was at the back of the end zone when Eagles defensive back Evan Cooper slammed him against the stands. Morris was hit with a 15-yard personal foul penalty.
"I don't think it was a vicious shot," Morris said. "I think it was an over-zealous play." Morris said he has any malice on his part.
"At the time I thought it was malicious because I hurt my leg," Morris said.

Eason's timely scrambling key to Patriots' comeback

By Steve Hannon
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Tony Eason's timely scrambling led the Patriots to a 30-21 comeback victory over the Colts Sunday.
"We did a heck of a job with a three-man pass rush," said Eason, who was repeatedly forced to scramble by the Colts' hungry defense. "You have to design the plays and try to stay in the pocket (to pass). But things change."
Improving on the run, Eason led New England with 35 yards rushing on 11 carries in Sunday's 30-21 victory. He had gains of 8, 11 and 10 yards that went for first downs on three second-half scoring drives which brought the Patriots back from an 11-point deficit. Passing, he finished with 19 completions in 33 attempts for 240 yards.
"They did a heck of a job the first half," Eason said of the Colts' early lead. "Jack (Trudeau) was really throwing well. Not too many people score 21 points off our defense."
But Eason wasn't too concerned when Indianapolis jumped ahead 14-3 early in the second quarter and still led 14-6 at halftime.
"It's a four-quarter game. We're a mature team that's been in that situation before," said Eason, who quarterbacked the Patriots to a runner-up finish to Chicago in last season's Super Bowl. "Coming in at halftime, we knew it was a 60-minute football game and that's how we had to play it. Just take it one play at a time."
Trudeau passed for 236 yards, including 151 in the first half when the Colts struck with touchdowns on their first two possessions.
"The only victory is when the final gun goes off. Until then, you don't even think about it," said Indianapolis Coach Rod Doehner, not daring even to imagine the Colts' early lead might stand up.
"Our inconsistencies on offense caught up with us, and defensively, their speed hurt us. They didn't do much differently after the early Colts' lead. Really, they played the same defense the whole game. We just stopped executing," Doehner said.
Trudeau, a rookie, was intercepted four times, including twice by Steve Nelson. The first one, at the New England 22, halted an Indianapolis drive toward what might have been an 18-point lead late in the second quarter. Nelson's second interception set up Mose Tatupu's clinching 1-yard touchdown run in the final period.
In between, Eason passed 8 yards to Willie Scott and 2 yards to Irving Fryar for touchdowns in the third quarter, putting the Patriots ahead to stay.

By Steve Hannon
The Associated Press

"We did a lot of good things defensively," Doehner said. "The only thing was the quarterback (Eason) did a good job avoiding the rush."
New England Coach Raymond Berry said the Patriots were "glad to get out with a victory. We felt behind but kept our poise and came back. We just took one play at a time and played better in the second half and shut them down."
"The Colts are a football team that plays everybody tough," said Berry. "We felt we'd be in a dogfight. Eason did a remarkable job of throwing and running and made the big plays when he had to."
The Colts built a 14-3 lead on a 1-yard touchdown run by Randy McMillan in the first quarter and a 1-yard run by Trudeau in the second period. Their final touchdown, with 35 seconds to go, came on a 19-yard pass from Trudeau to Matt Bourz.
The 21 points marked a season high for Indianapolis, but the Colts were hurt by seven penalties for 75 yards and two others were called on Indianapolis for offensive pass interference.
New England, in second place in the AFC East, raised its record to 7-3.

Patriot quarterback Tony Eason (11) loses the football as he is sacked by the Colts' Duane Bickett (50) and Dave Ahrens in first-half action in Indianapolis. Eason's scrambling led the Patriots to a 30-21 come-from-behind triumph.

O'Brien's waiting game pays off as Jets bomb the Falcons

By Tom Soldano

ATLANTA — Ken O'Brien played a waiting game, but only until the second period. Then it was bombs away as usual for the New York Jets.
O'Brien connected on a club-record 17 consecutive pass completions, including 13 straight in the second quarter for 195 yards and three touchdowns, as the Jets exploded for their eighth-straight triumph, a 28-14 victory Sunday over the Atlanta Falcons.

The Jets, now 6-1 and atop the AFC East by two games over New England after winning their fifth without a loss on the road, have had uncanny success in the second period, outscoring opponents 112-13 over their last five games and 145-24 for the season.
The victory may have been costly to the Jets, however, who lost two starting defensive linemen, Marty Lyons and Joe Klecko.
"We started out throwing the short stuff and we missed on two first downs by just a little in the opening quarter," said O'Brien, who finished with 26 of 33 completions for 322 yards. "Then we decided to give the long stuff a shot."

"I've got the best receiving corps in the league," said O'Brien of speedsters Toon and Walker, and tight end Mickey Shuler. Toon had five catches for 98 yards Sunday and has 69 for 890 yards on the season and eight TDs. Walker also had five catches for 85 yards. He has 32 catches for 785 yards and an AFC leading nine TDs. Shuler had four receptions for 43 yards and has 39 for 411 and three scores.

Chargers, Bills pull off upsets

San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana brings his arm back and gets ready to get off a pass in his return to action Sunday against the St. Louis Cardinals...

'Crazy' Montana hits big in return

By Dove Goldberg The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Ten minutes into the game, Joe Montana threw the ball nearly 50 yards...

Just the fact that we had him. Armies work harder for Lancelot than they work even harder for King Arthur...

On Friday, his back surgeon, Dr. Arthur White, told a medical panel that although Montana's back was healthy...

Does that mean you're crazy, Montana was asked. "Maybe," he replied.

But it didn't take long for him to prove he wasn't that crazy. Of the first six series he directed, five resulted in San Francisco scores...

Montana was also hit hard enough on two occasions to warrant the passer fits.

Huskies let Gannon, Delaware slip away

By The Associated Press

Slip sliding away on rain-soaked turf, Connecticut dropped a 35-7 Yankee Conference match to Delaware this weekend.

Senior quarterback Rich Gannon completed 18 of 24 passes for 182 yards and ran in three touchdowns...

The 6-3, 196-pound Gannon, who runs the 40 in 4.5 seconds, kept his balance on the rain-soaked field in Newark, Del., but the Huskies had trouble with their footing.

Also in Connecticut college football action Saturday, Wesleyan upset Trinity, 21-17.

New Haven was crushed by Towson State, 47-7. Coast Guard defeated Marietta, 12-7.

By The Associated Press

When the NFL season started in September, four coaches lost their regular-season debuts. A second wave of new coaches is having much better success.

Al Saunders, who replaced Don Coryell at San Diego 11 days ago, and Marv Levy of Buffalo, who took over for Hank Bullough last week, both won Sunday.

"I'm so proud I can't even tell you how it feels," Saunders said after the Chargers, 1-7, under Coryell, handed Denver a 9-3 defeat.

Levy, who previously was a head coach at Kansas City, saw the Bills edge Pittsburgh 16-12.

A person comes into a situation very apprehensive about what might happen the first time out here and the team does not have a good record," Levy said of his debut at Buffalo, which took a 2-7 mark into the game.

In other games, it was Chicago 23, Tampa Bay 3; Houston 32, Cincinnati 28; New Orleans 6, Los Angeles Rams 6; Minnesota 24, Detroit 15; New England 30, Indianapolis 21; New York Jets 28, Atlanta 14; San Francisco 43, St. Louis 17; Kansas City 27, Seattle 7; Washington 16, Green Bay 7; Los Angeles Raiders 17, Dallas 13; New York Giants 17, Philadelphia 14.

Robb Riddick rushed for 108 yards and a touchdown, keying the Bills' victory that snapped a two-game winning streak for the Steelers, 3-7.

The Steelers also scored on a 3-yard pass from Jim Kelly to Andre Reed, and a 29-yard field goal by Scott Norwood.

This King Arthur had just undergone a taxing week in which even his sanity was questioned. It was more taxing, he said, than the weeks before the two Super Bowls in which he ended up being named most valuable player.

He had injured his back running left and throwing right in the season opener at Tampa Bay. He underwent surgery to repair a ruptured disc and his season, if not his career, was deemed over.

But he began working out two weeks after the operation. An operation which leaves many people happy just to be able to tie their shoes. By last Monday, the doctors cleared him to play.

On Friday, his back surgeon, Dr. Arthur White, told a medical panel that although Montana's back was healthy...

Does that mean you're crazy, Montana was asked. "Maybe," he replied.

Miami is the determining factor in the bowl picture

By Herschel Nissensohn The Associated Press

The top-ranked Miami Hurricanes apparently will determine the site of any national championship shootout with runner-up Penn State.

Informal sources have quoted one of the top people in Penn State's athletic department as saying, "The ball is in Miami's court. Wherever they go, we go."

That will have to be either the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz.; the Florida Citrus Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla.; or the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla. as Miami-Penn State showdown cannot take place in the Cotton, Orange, Sugar or Rose Bowls.

The Fiesta, Florida Citrus and Gator Bowls all say they will be able to offer the same money as the Cotton, Orange or Sugar — i.e., $2.5 million-2.6 million.

But only the Fiesta has the money in the bank thanks to a recent agreement with Sunlight, its corporate sponsor. The package would include travel and hotel costs.

The Citrus Bowl reportedly is asking permission from television to ask for an increase in the rate for a 30-second spot from $40,000 to $75,000 while the Gator Bowl's package is said to include 40 hotel rooms for each team for a week but is dependent on Mazda buying additional TV spots during the game.

Miami would prefer to play in the state of Florida for the home-field advantage. Penn State's preference apparently is the Fiesta Bowl.

Both teams are 9-0 after Miami, Penn State edged Maryland 17-15. Miami has home games with Tulsa, 7-3, on Nov. 15 and East Carolina, 1-1, on Nov. 27. Penn State visits Notre Dame, 4-1, next Saturday and plays Pitt, 4-1-1, at home on Nov. 22, the official bowl selection date.

If all things were equal, we definitely would like to play in the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., or the Florida Citrus Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., or the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla. as Miami-Penn State showdown cannot take place in the Cotton, Orange, Sugar or Rose Bowls.

Japan captures world golf crown

INAGI, Japan — Tsuneyuki Nakajima shot a 4-under-par 68 Sunday to win the individual title by two strokes and help Japan capture the team championship in the $900,000 World Championship of Golf.

Bernhard Langer of West Germany also shot a 68 and finished second with a 272 total to Nakajima's 18-under-par 270, and his European team — an 8-4 loser to Japan in the team final Sunday — was the runner-up. The Australia-New Zealand team beat the United States 11-1 for third place.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Top-seeded Stefan Edberg crushed Mats Wilander 6-2, 6-1, 6-1 to win Sunday's all-Swedish singles final in the $435,000 Stockholm Open-Scandinavian Tennis Championships.

It was the eighth career singles Grand Prix triumph for the 20-year-old Edberg.

Al Unser Jr. wins first of year

MIAMI — Al Unser Jr. won his first race of the season when the car of hard-luck Roberto Guerrero ran out of fuel at the start of the final lap of Sunday's season-ending Nissan Indy Challenge, while Bobby Rahal clinched the Indy-car season driving championship.

Rahal, who finished far off the pace in eighth, was three laps behind the winner. Earlier this season, Rahal became the first Indy-car driver to win more than $1 million in one year. He ended the season with six victories, including his first Indianapolis 500.

Portugal's Cunha wins 15K race

LISBON, Portugal — Aurora Cunha of Portugal won the International Amateur Athletic Federation World 15-kilometer Road Race for Women on Sunday for the third consecutive time, clocking 46 minutes, 21 seconds.

Teammate Rosa Mota, the 1984 Olympic marathon bronze medalist, finished second in 48:35, and Carla Beurkens of The Netherlands was third in 48:36 in the 9.3-mile race.

Britain wins horse show team title

NEW YORK — Britain won the team championship at the 103rd National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden on Sunday, succeeding the United States.

The competition was close all week, but British Equestrian Team won the championship with 73 points, overtaking the United States, which had 62.

Canada finished third with 55 points, and France was fourth with 29. Brazil had 7, 67 and Australia trailed with 5 — both having been represented by a single rider.

Blazers' Bowie suffers broken leg

OREGON CITY, Ore. — Sam Bowie, whose latest leg injury probably will sideline him for the rest of the NBA season, refuses to feel sorry for himself.

"There are reasons for everything," the Portland Trail Blazers' center said from his hospital bed Saturday. "Right now it's just a little hard to see the reason for this."

This is Bowie's right leg, which he broke Friday night in the fourth quarter of the Blazers' 120-113 victory over Dallas. "I've never been an individual who says, 'Why me?' And I won't say it now. I'd rather it happened to me than to other people. I know I can handle it," he said.

Bowie underwent surgery Sunday at Willamette Falls Hospital in the Portland suburb of Oregon City, team spokesman Tim Renn said.

Renn said Dr. Robert Cook, the Blazers' team physician, placed three screws in Bowie's broken right tibia in an operation that lasted slightly less than 2 hours.

NBA roundup

Erving is enjoying final fling

By Bob Baum
The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — The scene will be repeated 22 times this season: Julius Erving, in his final NBA campaign, acknowledging the cheers in a special ceremony as he makes his final appearance in each arena.

On Sunday night, "Dr. J" played his last game in Portland, scoring 29 points to pace Philadelphia to a 125-119 victory over the Trail Blazers.

"It's a new experience," Erving said of his first taste of the role of basketball superstar on his last swing through the league. "It didn't seem to be too painful."

"I think it's quite flattering for a visiting player to be acknowledged like this."

"I'm enjoying every moment of this season," he said.

Erving certainly enjoyed Sunday night. "He was sensational," said Portland coach Mike Schuler. "What a credit he is to the game of basketball."

In the only other NBA game, the Los Angeles Lakers defeated the New York Knicks 111-88.

Erving, who was presented with a golf club and a $1,000 check for charity by the Blazers before the game, said performances like one Sunday night don't raise any second thoughts about his decision to retire.

"I know I can play," he said. "I just don't want to play any more after this year. If I let a good game influence my decision not to come back, what am I going to do after a bad game?"

Tim McCormick and Maurice Cheeks triggered a second-half surge that lifted the 76ers to their third straight victory and handed Portland its fifth loss in six games.

The Blazers had 6-foot-7 Kenny Carr playing center for much of the game because Sam Bowie is out, probably for the season, with a broken leg and his replacement, Steve Johnson, was in foul trouble.

Julius Erving of the 76ers holds a golf club he received before Sunday's game with the Trail Blazers in Portland. Erving, who is retiring at the end of the season, made his final appearance in Portland Sunday as the 76ers beat the Blazers, 125-119.

New Zealand sails past America II

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — New Zealand routed America II by 12 minutes, 32 seconds today to move into the lead in the America's Cup challenger trials.

The victory gave 25-year-old skipper Chris Dickson and New Zealand a five-point lead over New York Yacht Club's 12-meter boat, skippered by John Kollus.

New Zealand is 19-1 in the first two rounds for 51 points. America II is now 18-2 with 46 points.

American hopeful Stars & Stripes, third in the 12-point series, will move into next month's semifinals, beat Italy's Azurra by 37 seconds, Stars & Stripes, skippered by Dennis Conner, is now 17-3 with 41 points.

In the other races, Canada II defeated Challenger France, while Crusader of Great Britain walloped Heart of America, French Kias edged American entry Eagle, and USA trounced Italia.

Six prospective Australian defenders also raced in the light winds, but there were no surprises.

Australia IV came from 8:38 down to defeat its syndicate mate Australia III by five seconds.

In other defender races, Kookaburra II defeated witless Steak 'n' Kidney, and leader Kookaburra III beat South Australia.

There was no contest between New Zealand and America II after giant wind shifts occurred on the third and fourth legs on a 24.3-mile triangular course in the Indian Ocean. America II lost an early 58-second lead, and fell behind by 13:39 at one point.

The light winds, between 2 and 10 knots, were extremely shifty and played a key role in almost every race. The wind shifts were up to 110 degrees.

Stars & Stripes avoided defeat on the final leg when it came from 42 seconds behind to beat Azurra.

The Italian boat, skippered by Mauro Pelsacchi, desperately attempted to fend off the attacking Azurra on the final leg, but the San Diego Yacht Club's boat was able to outpace it.

Lucas, skipper of Australia III, was allowing Colin Beasheal and Australia IV to win the race. The two boats were on the same tack on the final beat and Australia III was reaching while Beasheal's 12-meter boat was hard on the wind pointing toward the finish line.

Lucas was apparently allowing Australia IV to hold its one-point lead in the series over Kookaburra minutes left in the game. Sophomore Peter Matlischak also scored for Seton Hall with 18 minutes remaining.

Joining Hennessy on the All-Tournament team were teammates Terry Higgins, Greg Maslingi, and Pat Hughes; Fred Paulsen, Chris Whitcomb, Mark DiMonte, Charlie Mullin, all from Syracuse; Dan Donigan and Chris Heath of Connecticut; and Erik Brown and David Sullivan, both from Boston College.

Seton Hall, which was seeded No. 1 in the Big East tournament, is making its first appearance in post-season soccer play.

On Saturday, Seton Hall beat BC, 6-2, and Syracuse edged host Connecticut, 1-0. Hennessy scored four goals and Matlischak added two against BC.

John McEnroe nets another victory

By Raf Casert
The Associated Press

ANTWERP, Belgium — John McEnroe needed to beat Miroslav Mecir and for much more than the first prize in the $920,000 European Community Championships.

In a somewhat puzzling 6-3, 1-6, 7-6 (7-5), 5-7, 6-2 victory over Mecir Sunday, McEnroe mixed his best shots with some of his worst, combined great recoveries with bad slumps and had a dozen aces with seven double faults.

However, the result was sufficient to give McEnroe his fourth tournament victory since coming off a six-month hiatus from tennis that ended in August.

"I need to be able to play that kind of match. He's the kind of guy I need to beat to get back to the top," McEnroe, who was the world's No. 1 player from 1981 to 1984, said.

McEnroe picked up a winner's share of $210,000 for the world's richest indoor tournament.

McEnroe executed an unlikely comeback however, to beat the ninth-ranked Czechoslovak Trailing 2-0 and 30-0 on Mecir's serve in the deciding set, the New Yorker pressured the 22-year-old into errors to break back.

"I felt it didn't look good, but he played a couple of careless points and looked slower on court," McEnroe said.

Sensing victory, the McEnroe of old was back. He mentally and physically relaxed. "I was able to overcome it and mentally and physically relaxed," he said. "The set took over an hour."

John McEnroe makes a backhand return during the finals of the European Community Championship in Antwerp on Sunday. McEnroe beat Miroslav Mecir for the championship 6-3, 1-6, 7-6, 5-7 and 6-2.

Kiss goodbye to fare wars that brought super savers

The recent trend in the airline industry has been to toward the larger airlines swallowing the smaller. The result: Kiss goodbye to the fare wars that brought us the lowest of the low in airline ticket prices.

Will it still be possible for us to fly at low, affordable rates? Airline executives retort: Yes! But already there have been increases.

On Oct. 26, there was a price rise among most of the major airlines on unrestricted fares. Costs were hiked $10 for distances under 1,000 miles and $20 for longer trips. And at this time, we may not see the competitive fare-slashing we've grown to expect since deregulation.

Airline deregulation in 1978, consumers have saved $6 billion per year in benefits, including lower fares and increased service, reports the Brookings Institution.

Airline deregulation promoted competition. The threat of a new airline entering the market is one factor that kept the larger airlines responsive to the consumer. But the reality today is that entry by a newcomer is tough.

"There are a limited number of slots at airports for newcomers," says Christopher Witkowski, executive director of the Aviation Consumer Action Project — a Washington, D.C., consumer group. "Our concern is that a few major airlines will control most of the air traffic," he adds.

Consider Denver, which used to have three major carriers: United, Continental and Frontier, Texas Air Corp. acquired both Continental and most of Frontier's assets. Now there are only two major competitors — Continental and United. Frontier is gone and so are its low, no-frills flights, which once fell as low as $9 on some one-way tickets.

Frontier Airlines and People Express, which also was bought by Texas Air, offered extremely low prices, but did not offer the services of the larger airlines.

"No-service is not what the consumer wants," says a spokesperson for Continental Airlines. "And according to the complaints received by the Department of Transportation, this seems to be the case. The No. 1 complaint made by passengers concerned flight problems such as cancellations, delays and irregularities. Of all complaints, 34 percent concerned flight problems. It's no surprise that the low-budget, no-service airlines were often the targets of a substantial number of these complaints."

Are we seeing a change in attitude on the part of the consumer and the airlines? For some, delays do not matter; cost is a priority. But most people want to be able to rely on getting to their destination as scheduled with as few hassles as possible.

"Consumers were screaming for cheap-cheap flights. But no company could maintain quality service for a passenger and his baggage at those prices," says Harriet Emerson, a national director of the American Society of Travel Agents.

What, then, are the keys to getting the best fares and services? Booking early is your best bet. But there are penalties for changes and cancellations. If you're flexible, you can typically get less expensive flights with restrictions.

Use travel agents more than ever before. But be specific when booking a flight. If you want the cheapest flight to get you there as soon as possible, ask for it! If it's a reputable travel agency, you should be able to get the best deal for your particular needs.

You deserve what you pay for, so at least know your rights. If you're bumped involuntarily, for example, if the airline does not get you to your destination within an hour of your original arrival time, it is required to pay you compensation equal to your fare with a maximum of $200. After two hours, it doubles, with $400 maximum.

"Make sure to note the time. Also insist on receiving your compensation right there. If not, the law requires the airline to mail it within 24 hours," reports Witkowski.

Fifteen years ago, a developer may have builded a house as an act to hinder the movement of machinery during construction. Today, a builder knows that good landscaping helps to sell a home. It is the most up to date tree standing that is as close as a tree to the foundation. One can benefit from the positive correlation between good landscaping and higher resale value. A study by the U.S. Forest Service established that trees alone can contribute up to 15 percent of the value of a home. The lawn and landscaping contribute to the overall value of a home.
