

WEATHER

Connecticut forecast

Northwest Hills, Central, Eastern Interior, Southwest Interior and Coastal: Clearing early today and cooler. Lows in the teens. Winds northwesterly around 10 mph diminishing to calm. Increasing cloudiness Thursday with highs 35 to 40. Snow or rain Friday.

Coastal forecast

Long Island Sound to Watch Hill, R.I., and Montauk Point: Winds northeast 25 to 35 knots and gusty shifting to north 20 to 30 knots and gusty this morning and decreasing to northeast 10 to 20 knots tonight. Winds east 10 to 20 knots Thursday becoming southeasterly during the afternoon. Seas 5 to 8 feet decreasing to 3 to 5 feet during the day and to 1 to 3 feet tonight and Thursday. Rain and snow with occasional sleet and fog lowering visibility to zero to 2 miles.

Across the nation

A storm sent snow across the Northeast today and temperatures fell to record lows in Michigan, while strong winds lashed sections of the West and much of the South was balmy.

Parts of north-central Pennsylvania had up to a foot of snow, along with strong winds; and Binghamton, N.Y., and Wilmington, Vt., had a 6-inch snowfall by early today. Travelers' advisories were widespread in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Snow fell across much of Pennsylvania, New York and New England, and rain spread along the mid-Atlantic coast and through coastal Massachusetts.

Freezing rain was mixed with snow in northwestern North Dakota, and northeastern Montana. Snow also was falling in Colorado over the northern and central mountains.

Temperatures dropped sharply across the Dakotas, Minnesota and Iowa into northern Michigan, with early-morning readings from around zero into the teens.

Low temperature records set by early today included 15 at Grand Rapids, Mich., breaking an 1894 record of 17; Marquette, Mich., minus 1, breaking a record of 2 set in 1961; and Muskogee, Mich., 13, five degrees lower than a 1959 record.

The 60s to 70s prevailed in Florida, the Gulf Coast region and south Texas.

Strong winds lashed the east slopes of the northern Rockies and sections of the northern Plains, and drifting and blowing snow cut visibility in western and central North Dakota. A high wind warning was posted for northwest and southeast Wyoming and the front range of the Montana Rockies. Gusts of around 45 mph hit Casper, Wyo., while Bozeman, Mont., had 40 mph gusts.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 1 degree below zero at Marquette, Mich., and Redwood Falls, Minn., to 76 at Key West and Sarasota, Fla.

NATIONAL FORECAST — Rain is forecast Thursday for most of the Pacific Northwest and from the Texas Gulf to the Carolina coasts and north to the Great Lakes. Flurries are predicted for the northernmost latitudes.

STORM CLOUDS — Weather satellite photo taken at 2:30 a.m. shows a storm off the New Jersey coast. This storm is producing a variety of weather, with snow, rain and thunderstorms across the Northeast. Clouds and showers are scattered across the West from the Texas panhandle northwestward to Colorado, Idaho and Washington. The subtropical jet stream continues to be evident in the satellite photo, stretching from southern Arizona to northern Oklahoma and southeastward to South Carolina.

FOCUS

A Man of Few Words

The Gettysburg Address is one of the most eloquent speeches ever made. Abraham Lincoln delivered the speech on this day in 1863 as part of a ceremony to dedicate a national cemetery. Before Lincoln got up to speak, a noted orator of the day, Edward Everett, addressed the crowd for a full two hours. No doubt the crowd was relieved when Lincoln followed Everett with his inspiring two-minute speech. Five handwritten copies of the Gettysburg Address survive today.

DO YOU KNOW — In what state is Gettysburg located?

Rake shake

Although there aren't any leaves left on the trees, Richard Parker of East Center Street is still using his rake to shake the snow from trees in his yard. The storm dumped around eight inches in Manchester, and left residents with a lot of shoveling (and raking) to do.

Three architects to bid on North Elm housing

The town has invited three architects to submit proposals to design the 24 units of senior housing on town-owned North Elm Street and a committee will meet today to decide whether to invite more.

The three who have been asked to offer proposals are Alan Lamson, who did preliminary planning on the project, Richard Lawrence and Richard Mankey. Lawrence and Mankey are Manchester architects. Lamson, a Manchester resident and former Manchester planning director, has offices in East Hartford.

Lamson was paid $4,800 to do schematic design work on the housing project in order to develop cost estimates for a bond issue. On Nov. 4, townpeople voted 10,737 to 4,833 to appropriate up to $1.3 million for the work.

Assistant Town Manager Steven Werber said Tuesday that the decision on whether to seek more proposals will be made by a committee that includes administrators and three members of the Building Committee. The Building Committee members are chairman Paul Phillips, Frank Pitts and Theunis Werkhoven.

Werkhoven is one of the three Republican members of the nine-member Building Committee. Last week the three questioned the method by which Lamson was chosen for the preliminary work.

The issue was discussed at a meeting of the Board of Directors Thursday and Town Manager Robert Weiss said then that method used to select Lamson was proper.

Weiss said Tuesday that when the proposals from applicants have been received, a selection committee will be formed to pick an architect.

He said the committee would follow the makeup called for in a set of town guidelines on hiring consultants. Under those guidelines the selection committee for non-school construction projects includes three members of the Building Committee. Other members are the director of public works, the town engineer, the town planner, the chief building inspector and another department head.

Weiss said Friday that Lamson was chosen for the schematic design work under the prescribed town procedure for engaging a consultant for non-design planning and research studies. That does not include including members of the Building Committee in the selection committee.

The Republicans who joined committee in raising questions about the selection were Robert Samuelson and Joel Mrosek.

Democratic Director Peter DiBona, who has guided the North Elm Street housing project, questioned the motive of the three in raising the issue. "I'm not going to sit back and allow politicizing of something of value to the community," he said.

Phillips, a Democrat, said he customarily names one Republican as one of the three Building Committee delegates to a selection committee.

Anti-drug unit organizes despite insurance woes

Despite an unexpected insurance setback, the Manchester Council of Substance Abuse Concerns — a town panel formed as a result of the governor's recent initiative — has named an executive committee and is considering its long-term purpose.

The group, which met at Lincoln Center Tuesday afternoon, was formed in August from an ad-hoc committee of concerned town officials and parents. The town received a special $5,000 state grant to pay for the program.

But the money, which must be spent by June 30, still hasn't arrived, partly because of insurance problems, said John C. Post, a member who is also the town's human services analyst.

The funds are to be used to pay for five substance abuse programs. Some $2,200 will go for a three-to-five-part drug awareness tabloid that will be mailed to every household in Manchester; $1,000 will fund a high school graduation party with a wide range of activities, but no alcohol; $500 will pay for an in-service educational program for elementary and junior high school students and faculty members; $500 will go to the Manchester Police Department for drug-awareness efforts in schools; and $1,700 will help sponsor a poster contest in local schools.

Under Gov. William A. O'Neill's initiative, the state set aside $465,000 for all communities that organized committees designed to discourage youths from using drugs and alcohol.

Post said the state requires surety bonding and liability insurance, something council officials weren't aware of when they applied for the grant in August.

"I'm still grappling with the insurance issue," he said, adding that the group might have to take money from the grant to pay for insurance. The other alternative, he said, is to make the town itself the recipient of the grant and use municipal insurance.

When the insurance is straightened out, Post said, the group will start collecting the money.

"I haven't been able to get an actual insurance quote," he said.

Fence mending follows building dispute

Panel to clarify policy on town selection of architects

Members of the Manchester Building Committee ended their differences Tuesday over how architects should be selected for town-supervised construction projects and agreed to form a subcommittee to further clarify the policy.

But the resolution of the conflict — which flared last week when the panel's three Republican members questioned the selection of architect Alan Lamson to draft preliminary plans for a housing complex for senior citizens on North Elm Street — did not occur without some criticism from Democratic Chairman Paul Phillips.

"I and the other members were very upset and disturbed by the article in the paper by the three Republican members of the committee," Phillips said. "It hurts me that we weren't told about it."

Phillips said he only learned about a statement criticizing Lamson's selection by the panel's three GOP members after it had been reported in the media. "It hurts me to think we have people here that would do this type of thing," he said, referring to members Joel Mrosek, Robert E. Samuelson and Theunis Werkhoven, the statement's authors.

In their statement, the three questioned whether the town followed the selection policy drafted in the mid-1970s by Phillips and former Public Works Director Jay Giles when it hired Lamson.

The statement said that the selection should have been made by a larger committee than was used because the work appeared to include more than just non-design aspects of the project. The preliminary designs that have already been drafted went beyond this requirement, it said.

But Phillips defended Lamson's selection at Tuesday's meeting, saying the hiring was legal under the Town Charter. The selection policy was not officially approved and did not have to be used, he said.

Mrosek answered that the policy appeared to be "some kind of an official document" and said it was never explained to him it was only advisory.

"You should have asked," responded Democrat Frank Pitts.

Democrat Richard LaPointe then proposed that a subcommittee be formed to work with Public Works Director George Kandra to "prove and clarify" the policy. He agreed with Mrosek that Lamson's work "was a little on the design side."

Phillips said that preliminary designs for the elderly housing complex had to be drafted because the town needed an estimate of the cost of the project to schedule a referendum on it. The project was approved by voters Nov. 4, allowing up to $1.3 million for the project.

The Building Committee unanimously approved LaPointe's motion. Phillips was included on the subcommittee and will appoint two other members with the aim of eventually having the town Board of Directors officially approve selection guidelines.

When the discussion was over, both sides said they would put the dispute behind them. "I would just as soon forget it all and start over from scratch," Phillips said.

At one point of the hour-long meeting, Phillips said he would support never again using the selection policy, even though he thought it was a good one. Mrosek and Samuelson said the plan was usable, but needed clarification.

"I do not want to throw this policy out," said Mrosek. "By and large, this policy is good."

"It's an excellent piece of work," said Samuelson.

PEOPLE

Hoping for work

Bob Hope, who at 84 still is a globe-trotting comedian, traded lines with his wife when reporters asked him about retiring.

Hope and his wife, Dolores, arrived at Honolulu International Airport on Tuesday on the last stop of a trip that included filming a television special in Tahiti and appearing at a cancer benefit golf tournament in Tokyo. He planned to perform at a hospital benefit in Honolulu.

"Mr. Hope, do you work for money or just for people?" a reporter asked at an airport news conference.

"He better do it for money if he's going to support me," Mrs. Hope said.

Another reporter asked Hope if he ever planned to retire. "Retire? Retire? I don't know who to spell that," he said, then looked at his wife. "Would you want me to retire?"

"I told you, you can't afford it," Mrs. Hope said.

Nancy seeks help

First lady Nancy Reagan, honored by sportscasters for her fight against drug abuse, is urging the sportscasters to help her.

Mrs. Reagan on Tuesday was awarded the American Sportscasters Association Hall of Fame's Humanitarian Award and a 30-inch-high porcelain giraffe with the inscription: "For sticking her neck out for kids."

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth thanked her for "raising the consciousness of this nation" and she asked for sportscasters' help "because you're visible, you're respected."

For 'The Gipper'

President Reagan sent a check for $1,000 to the northern Michigan town of Larium to help finance a recreation area named after its most famous native, George "The Gipper" Gipp.

Reagan as an actor played the Notre Dame football player, uttering the famous line "Win one for the Gipper."

Paul Vertin, a 24-year-old student at Michigan Technological University, said he wrote Reagan about two months ago asking for help.

The check, signed by the president, was drawn on Reagan's personal account with the Beverly Hills Bank of America, Vertin said.

Almanac

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 19, the 323rd day of 1986. There are 42 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Nov. 19, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln delivered his Gettysburg Address as he dedicated a national cemetery at the site of the Civil War battlefield in Pennsylvania.

"We here highly resolve," said Lincoln, "that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the Earth."

On this date:

In 1794, the United States and Britain signed the Jay Treaty, which resolved some of the issues left over from the Revolutionary War.

In 1881, James Garfield, 20th president of the United States, was born in Orange, Ohio.

In 1917, Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was born.

In 1919, the U.S. Senate rejected the Treaty of Versailles by a 55-39 vote.

In 1959, the Ford Motor Co. announced it was halting production of the Edsel.

Today's birthdays: Actor Alan Young is 67. Baseball hall-of-famer Roy Campanella is 65. Former United Nations Ambassador Jeanne Kirkpatrick is 60. Talk show host Larry King is 52. Talk show host Dick Cavett is 50. Broadcasting and sports executive Ted Turner is 48. NBC journalist Garrick Utley is 47. Actor Dan Haggerty is 45. Fashion designer Calvin Klein is 44. Actress Jodie Foster is 24.

Jai alai called harmful

By George Layno
Herald Reporter

Jai alai play at the Charter Oak Park handball courts causes serious damage and may force the town to spend $30,000 or more to recondition the surface of the court walls in a couple of years. Recreation Director Scott Sprague said Tuesday.

"Those courts were not designed to have a hard ball thrown against it," Sprague said. "So when an object hits...it may not crack it right away, but it slowly wears down the integrity of the wall."
His comments followed charges last week by Manchester jai alai enthusiasts that they are being unfairly prohibited from playing at the courts. They said that the plastic ball they use is not hard enough to damage the playing surface.

However, the contractor who was hired by the town this summer to recondition the walls said jai alai play is damaging. "With somebody playing jai alai, the lifespan is going to decrease drastically," said James Aldrich, president of Aldrich Construction Co. Inc. of Manchester.

Aldrich said the courts are made of pre-cast slabs of concrete, and the joints used to connect them in the corners are hollow at the core. This makes them less able to take shots from hard balls, such as those used in jai alai, lacrosse or baseball.

He said a racquetball or handball is made of soft rubber, can be squeezed in a person's hand, and travels at a slower speed than a jai alai ball. Aldrich said he has seen some jai alai players using tennis balls, but that others who see them and decide to play probably do not realize this and use hard plastic balls.

Sprague said there is already a crack in the corner of one of the two courts that was not caused by a racquetball or handball. He speculated that it was probably a harder ball, perhaps even a baseball.

He noted that jai alai courts have thicker concrete walls than the ones at Charter Oak Park and have a hard granite surface to take the shock of the ball. Sprague said it would probably cost about $80,000 to build jai alai courts in Manchester, something that would not be worth the expense.

One local jai alai player, Chris Schoombs of Vernon Street, said last week that when players try to play on cement courts, they are told by police to play at Charter Oak Park. Sprague said Tuesday there might be a communication problem, but added that he would inform the police department of the jai alai restrictions at the park.

Sprague said that it is difficult to stop jai alai play at the courts, even though a metal sign is posted on the walls restricting the facility's use to racquetball and handball players. He said another sign will soon be erected at the park explaining the department's policies.

MMH measures up, group says

Manchester Memorial Hospital has received a three-year accreditation from a national commission that inspected the site.
The accreditation, awarded by the Joint Commission on the Accreditation of Hospitals, is a voluntary process in which a hospital is measured against nationally recognized standards developed by health-care experts.
According to Andrew A. Beck, director of public relations for the hospital, the commission can award one-, two- or three-year accreditations. He said the fact that it gave MMH a three-year accreditation reflects the commission's faith in the hospital's quality of care.

"I guess they're fairly confident that there's no need to do another site inspection for three years," he said.
The commission, a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting quality health-care services, is governed by representatives from five national health-care organizations.
They indicated that MMH is in compliance with the commission's standards and is working to improve its services. Beck said.

Selectmen form drug committee

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously Tuesday to form a committee to study the findings of a survey on drug use in the schools.

The group that conducted the survey, Bolton Residents for Alcohol and Chemical Education, sought the formation of such a committee when it presented its findings to the Board of Education last week. Members also said they hoped to have a human services worker hired to counsel townpeople, especially elementary and high school students, on drug and alcohol abuse.

Selectman Michael Ziska voted with other members of the Board of Selectmen to form the committee, but questioned the need for the human services position.

"You have not come close to convincing me of the need for a human services worker," Ziska told members of BRACE who attended the selectmen's meeting at the Community Hall.

The committee is to include representatives from BRACE, the Board of Education, the Department of Health, the Board of Selectmen, the Department of Welfare and the Recreation Department. The resident state trooper and a representative of the local clergy will also be included.

Among other things, the BRACE survey, which was conducted in June, showed that 16 percent of seventh- and eighth-graders had used drugs within a two-week period. Among high school students, 21 percent reported using drugs during that time.

The selectmen's vote to form the committee came after about an hour of comments from the approximately 15 townspeople in attendance.

"We feel that there's a problem in town," Raymond Boyd, the president of BRACE, told the board. "We feel that our town may lack some human services that we need." He added, however, that Bolton's drug problem is not unlike that facing similar communities in the nation.

Boyd said he would like to see the committee complete its study in the next two months so that the human services position — if it is advocated by the committee — can be proposed in the selectmen's 1987-88 budget.

Selectwoman Sandra Pierog, who made the motion to form the panel, initially recommended that the selectmen support the creation of the human services position without the stipend. "It seems to me that we form committees and study things to death," she said.

But Ziska argued that Bolton has enough difficulty paying present town employees what they deserve without the creation of another position.

While supporting the proposed human services position, two eighth-graders from Bolton Center School said the BRACE survey, as summarized in a newspaper account, did not accurately reflect the drug problem in the seventh and eighth grades.

Student Mary Cotton said that although students answered honestly some questions, such as those relating to work, they did not take the drug-related questions seriously. But the proposed position is necessary, Cotton said, because students are hesitant to seek help from the school's guidance counselor.

Bolton ZBA needs more legal funds

BOLTON — A likely rise in legal expenses for the Zoning Board of Appeals was among increased expenditures the Board of Finance learned about at its meeting Monday night.

The ZBA notified the finance board in a letter that the $10 currently allocated for the ZBA's legal expenses will probably be inadequate in light of an ongoing dispute over whether the board has jurisdiction to consider an appeal from Box Mountain Quarries, operators of the Bolton Notch Quarry. In August, the ZBA refused to hear Box Mountain's appeal of the Bolton Zoning Commission's denial of a permit to quarry at the Bolton Notch site.

Administrative Assistant Karen Levine told the finance board that legal fees for a court appearance would be at least $300 per day, the rate the town paid for a court appearance in 1983.

In addition, the finance board was informed by First Selectman Douglas Cheney that anticipated repair of one of the town's dump trucks for $7,200 would drain the $16,000 in the road equipment maintenance fund earlier than expected.

In other matters, the finance board discussed formulating a procedures manual outlining the responsibilities of all town positions. Putting together such a manual was recommended in June by the town's auditors, according to finance board Chairman Raymond Ursin, and its need was demonstrated when H. Calvin Hutchinson resigned four posts he held, leaving the town in the difficult position of filling jobs whose exact duties had never been formally established.

Ursin said he would seek to have money set aside in the coming fiscal year to formulate the procedures manual, which he hopes can be accomplished for $2,500 to $3,500 if a college student is hired to perform the task.

OPINION

The time for talks has come

The need for negotiations between the town government and the Eighth Utilities District has never been clearer.

Since the district won guarantees about its future in the election Nov. 4, many encouraging overtures have been made, even if all of the talk filling the air can't exactly be seen as sincere.

Speaking for majority Democrats on the town side of the fence, Mayor Barbara Weinberg said last week she wanted to immediately seek "understanding and affection" with the district, a considerable change from her previous stand. Farther north, the independent utility authority has appointed a team to negotiate about future negotiations.

Such things would seem to bode well. But at the same time, there is a kind of eerie silence about the mechanics of town-district rapprochement that indicates someone is stalling and may well mean something more is afoot.

If plain old stalling is the only problem, it should cease immediately. The long-pursuing questions about fire and sewer affairs grow increasingly crucial with each passing moment, and more continually arise.

First, there is the question of what use is best for the town's Buckland firehouse. Talks earlier this year produced no movement on having district volunteers and town firefighters use it jointly, despite the fact that sharing is clearly the best option. The result of the impasse could be two back-to-back stations, something that would be a monument to a political failure of considerable magnitude.

Then there is the problem of fees for homeowners linking up to sewers in Buckland. As things stand, some have been charged twice because both town and district officials insist on taking a "me-first" approach, no matter who has to foot the hundreds of dollars in bills.

The list goes on and on. Given the situation, it is clear that the words of the past week should promptly lead to action. As events belie the soothing statements, however, the politicians' concern for the town's best interests becomes all the more doubtful.

The reason for the delay probably has a lot to do with saving face. Political futures are at stake, and the ground rules of whatever negotiations occur will probably be conceived to minimize embarrassment. For that reason, some thought of closed discussions along the lines of last year's futile talks between Mayor Weinberg and district President Walter Joyner is probably making the officials round.

Indeed, attempts to figure out a way to keep the talks secret might just be the key to the stalling. Should that prove true, it cannot be tolerated.

The coming talks between the town and the Eighth District must be open and candid, with those making the deals ready to be held accountable. And they must get under way before any more time is wasted.

O'Neill plays it smart with 1990 talk

A common misconception about the governor's office is that tenants must vacate after two terms.

Not true. The notion may come from our national experience when Franklin D. Roosevelt got to be such a fixture as president (he was elected to four terms) that Congress amended the Constitution to say that two terms would be enough for anyone.

The state has no limit on its governors. They may hang on for as long as the electorate will have them.

The question of a third term came up again during the recent gubernatorial campaign. We heard it asked about Gov. Bill O'Neill. "Gee, could he — would he?" was the way it often came out. E. Clayton Genras, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, even made a public boo-hoo when he argued one day for O'Neill's ouster. He'd be a "lame duck," and therefore ineffective in a second term. Genras suggested. A reporter straightened him out.

BUT O'NEILL KNOWS there is no such limit. And that makes his quick response to reporters on the day after he had won re-election something to keep in mind. The question was, what about 1990?

Coventry battle a political ploy

To the Editor:

Taxpayers of Coventry, did you know that you will be paying between $3,000 and $6,000 for a special election to fill a Town Council seat that is already filled? Does this outrage you, as it did me? Do you look around at the potholes in the roads, at the rapidly filling landfill, at the lumpy school athletic fields, and wonder why your tax dollars are being wasted on petty political squabbling?

Perhaps you are angry enough to want to do something about it. I was. But I discovered that because 22 of my fellow citizens had signed a petition, the election had to be held even if 3,200 of the rest of us objected. Why the petition? The petition circulator will tell you it's the principle of the thing. But looking at the signatures on it and recalling past town meetings and hearings, I would have sworn that the chief principle of many of them was budget cutting.

I remember one signer objecting strenuously to the Board of Education's allotting $500 for a morale-building staff breakfast the day before school started. But with a stroke of the pen he and 31 others can mandate the purposeless spending of 10 times that amount. Funny how principles change.

And said that Coventry is once again embroiled in a time-wasting, energy-wasting, money-wasting legal wrangle. Several years ago I supported a lawsuit against the town because I sincerely believed the town meeting vs. referendum matter needed to be settled once and for all.

Never again will I be so naive. Our lawyer worded the complaint imprecisely and the judge was able to sidestep the crucial issue, so nothing changed. The same question plagued the following year's budget, but a new council took our point of view.

Unless, of course, the opposition filed suit. Again, a judge's ruling settled absolutely nothing. So much for the effectiveness of going to court.

But we supporters of that first lawsuit got to put ourselves on the back as noble defenders of the public good. Alas, ego inflation and excitement can be intoxicating.

The initiator of our suit, who dazzled us with her knowledge of the Town Charter and Connecticut General Statutes, subsequently did a 180-degree turn on the town meeting issue, laid low for awhile, and next made the newspapers by complaining to the state about the town clerk's office. The state found the complaint groundless. But soon the preliminary scenes of the present drama began to unfold, a veritable banquet for the headline seeker.

It began, as so much does in Coventry, around budget time. A Democrat resigned from the council, and her party nominated a former councilwoman to fill her seat. But because of acrimony left over from the town meeting vs. referendum issue, three council members refused to ratify her appointment. Then another Democrat resigned, and another nomination was made, but the two Republican councilmen, astonishingly, refused to ratify either one.

And so the crippled five-member council finally passed a budget dictated by the minority: the two Republicans were in the driver's seat because the three Democrats couldn't muster the four votes necessary to pass a budget. (The lengthy delay cost taxpayers some $60,000.)

The real drama started when a Republican resigned. The council was effectively dissolved, because the remaining four members did not constitute the required five-member quorum.

The solution was for the town manager to appoint the two previously-nominated Democrats. That six-member council later ratified the Republican nominee, restoring the council to full membership.

Enter the headline seeker, she of the dazzling state statute knowledge. Soon the State Elections Enforcement Commission found on its desk a complaint from this oft-complaining Coventry citizen. The town manager, she says, shouldn't be able to appoint council members, for they are the people who appoint the town manager, and therefore a special election must be held.

There may be legal merit to this view. State statute 9-22 may indeed supersede Section 2-5 of the Town Charter so a special election may fill the seat. But right now the seat is already filled, and statute 9-22 says that it may also be filled at the next regular election.

Unless, of course, 32 Coventry voters sign a petition forcing a special election.

When the council found itself without a quorum, the town attorney considered but rejected the option of a special election because by statute it could not be held until after a lengthy waiting period. During those several weeks the town would have had no legal governing body. I wonder if the 32 signers (two of whom chaired councils) would have challenged the town attorney's reasoning. I certainly wouldn't have.

Ironically, even the 32 signers aren't going to be pleased about the election, because if it won't be the one they petitioned for, they wanted all three of the new Council

Bizarre plot leaves eight jailed in Rio

WASHINGTON — How did eight American soldiers of fortune think they and 100 native guerrillas could land on the coast of Ghana in rubber boats and overthrow Jerry Rawlings, president of the West African nation of some 13 million?

Easy: They were convinced they had the official if secret backing of the CIA and the National Security Council. To their dismay, they learned otherwise when Brazilian authorities seized their Argentine-registered freighter on its way to Africa loaded with weapons last March.

As we've reported, the eight mercenaries, all Vietnam veterans, are now languishing in a Rio de Janeiro jail. They have, as the phrase goes, been hung out to dry by the shadowy individuals who suckered them into the cockamamie plot. The CIA has denied any involvement, and the man they claim recruited them says he did no such thing.

The bizarre story might strike some as funny, but it's no laughing matter to the eight Americans. Although the Brazilian charges against them were overturned by an appellate court, they remain in their vermin-infested cells awaiting a decision on their possible extradition to Argentina on charges of trafficking in contraband.

DETAILS OF THE RAMBO TEAM'S recruitment are provided in a diary written by one of the eight, Steve Hedrick. Our reporters Corky Johnson and Robert Young have seen the diary and letters the prisoners sent to family members in this country.

Hedrick, a weapons expert in Vietnam, wrote that he was signed up by one Ted Bishop. At the first "team meeting" in Argentina, Hedrick wrote, Bishop told the group: "You are being hired to overthrow the communist-backed government of Ghana. It's a joint effort between the U.S., Argentina and another unnamed country. This mission is sanctioned from the highest office in the country."

According to Hedrick, Bishop also told them: "I work directly for the NSC. I have walk-in access. He told them, Hedrick wrote, that he had worked for the CIA-run airline, Air America, in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

The Americans were to train a force of 100 Ghanaian rebels, apparently on board the freighter after picking them up off the Ivory Coast. The rebels adjoined Ghana on the west coast of Africa. The mission would be launched in rubber boats from the ship. Part of the Americans' mission was to rescue two CIA agents from a Ghanaian prison.

THE LEADER OF the amphibious operation was to be Godfrey Osei, a former Ghanaian official. According to our sources, he told the Americans that he had raised $500,000 for the invasion, with the help of a supposed U.S. agent named Solomon and what Osei called the "Chinese Mafia" in New York City.

As luck would have it, neither Osei nor Bishop were aboard the arms-laden Argentine freighter Norbistor when Brazilian police seized it. Bishop told us he has never worked for any government agency. He acknowledged that he had helped arrange the arms deal for Osei, but denied having recruited the mercenaries for the CIA or the NSC. Compounding the Americans' unfortunate situation, they told their families, the U.S. Embassy in Brazil has done nothing to help them get better treatment from their jailers. The embassy denied the prisoners' charges.

Relatively speaking, our intelligence sources say, the irascible Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of Iran is a popular, charismatic leader. The catch, of course, is the phrase "relatively speaking." The intelligence experts are comparing Khomeini with his rival dictators in the Middle East, which may be like comparing rotten apples and rotten oranges. At any rate, the analysts think Khomeini clearly has a stronger hold on the affections of his people than do the rulers of Syria, Iraq and Libya — or even Saudi Arabia and Jordan. He might do well in a free election, they say.

Interagency vendetta?

The Justice Department has quietly put out the word that it is investigating a former House staffer, Ted Mehl. As an investigator for a subcommittee chaired by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., Mehl successfully fought the administration to get patrol aircraft for the Customs Service to use in the war against drug smugglers. Now Mehl has transferred to the agency to help it manage the aircraft. Justice Department officials say they're concerned about a possible conflict of interest, but our sources believe the department is just taking revenge on Mehl for his success in enhancing the Customs Service's drug role.

Subsidiary of UTC halts parts sales

By Dean Golembeski
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A United Technologies Corp. subsidiary has suspended the shipment of helicopter engine parts to Iran under pressure from Canada, which has announced plans to review the $2.8 million deal.

The action in Canada came Tuesday at about the same time U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige told reporters in Hartford that he saw nothing wrong with the sale of parts to Iran Helicopter Support & Renewal Inc.

The contract between Iran and Pratt & Whitney Canada was struck last fall, but the only shipment of parts was made Oct. 29, P&W said in a statement released through UTC headquarters in Hartford. The initial shipment was valued at $234,000 or about 25 percent of what has been promised.

Canadian Deputy Prime Minister Don Mazankowski told Parliament Tuesday that the company suspended the shipments at his government's request pending further review.

But, three hours before the release of the UTC statement, Baldrige said, "United Technology had every right to sell them." Baldrige was in Hartford to address local business executives.

"They didn't have to ask Commerce for permission," he said. "They may have called up to check with us to see if it was all right, but they're not controlled because the Iranians could buy that kind of part from probably 10 different countries, including the Soviet Union."

UTC said the parts were for Bell 212 commercial helicopters. Baldrige said that made the deal exempt from the 1979 U.S. arms

Settlement boosts clerical salaries

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — About 5,000 state clerical workers can expect pay raises in March as a result of the settlement of a landmark lawsuit against the state by one of the largest state employee unions.

"With this beginning, all state employees will soon be paid solely on the basis of their job requirements, not on the basis of their gender," said Dominic J. Badolato, executive director of the Connecticut arm of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which brought the suit against the state in 1983.

"For those employed by Connecticut, (the state) will no longer be permitted to underpay some job classifications simply because the majority of people in that classification are women," said Badolato, who announced the settlement in a joint news conference with Gov. William A. O'Neill on Tuesday.

"What it boils down to is pay equity," O'Neill said, adding that the settlement will ensure that "the persons in the clerical positions are treated with the proper dignity and respect and equitable pay for the positions they hold."

The governor, who called the agreement historic, said it would result in lump-sum payments of $500 to about 1,800 clerical workers in lower salary grades. Pay raises will range from 2 percent to 3 percent of each worker's current annual salary. The settlement will cost the state $1.75 million in 1987 and $4 million in 1988.

"What it boils down to is pay equity," O'Neill said, adding that the settlement will ensure that "the persons in the clerical positions are treated with the proper dignity and respect and equitable pay for the positions they hold."

Badolato said the agreement affects only one bargaining unit, but said it would serve as "the beacon which will guide other settlements soon to come in other state bargaining units."

The General Assembly this year approved $13 million for job evaluation increases for state clerical employees.

Betty Tianti, president of the Connecticut State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, called the settlement "a major step forward" for state employees.

One of the women who initiated the suit, Silvia Tirrell, a former clerical worker at Fairfield Hills Hospital in Newtown, said the agreement means that typists will "no longer make the same as the people who scrape the dishes in the kitchen."

"As soon as I was working six months I discovered they were paying this fellow who was an ex-patient, who was illiterate, a higher salary grade than I was in," she said.

Seat belt law cuts injuries

So far, 26 states and the District of Columbia have enacted mandatory seat-belt laws, according to the Connecticut Safety Belt Coalition, a group that lobbied heavily for Connecticut's law. Two of those states, Nebraska and Massachusetts, repealed their laws in referendums this month, said Nancy Owen, executive director of the Connecticut coalition.

The 24 remaining states have nearly 70 percent of the country's population, Owen said.

In Connecticut, the Citizens Coalition Against A Mandatory Seat Belt Law is pushing for repeal here. The group contends the law is an invasion of privacy.

"The people of our society have been brainwashed for over 20 years now on the alleged safety benefits of seat belts," David Solan of Norwalk, director of the anti-seat belt coalition, said following repeal of the Massachusetts law.

"For some people driving on our roads at some times and under some driving conditions, seat belts are valid safety measures. For others at other times and under other conditions, they are stupid and virtually suicidal," he said.

Owen said an informal survey by her group found a majority of legislators in both chambers of the General Assembly would oppose repeal of the law.

John Bulk

John Bulk, 67, of 150 Parker St., husband of Elizabeth E. Nagorny, died Monday at home.

He was born in New York City, had lived in Stafford Springs 35 years, moving to Manchester 31 years ago. He was a U.S. Navy veteran of World War II, a member of the Manchester Sportsmen's Club and a life member of the National Rifle Association. He retired as a carpenter with First National Supermarkets after 18 years.

He also is survived by a brother, Dr. Michael Bulk of Stafford Springs; six nephews and two nieces.

The funeral will be Thursday at 11 a.m. at Introvigne Funeral Home, Inc., 95 E. Main St., Stafford Springs. Burial will be at the convenience of the family. Calling hours are today from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.

Proposed hiring policy called weak

the Manchester Interracial Council, said she was hopeful the town would make progress, but sorry the statement was removed.

In place of the controversial statement, the commission added a statement that would require department heads to submit a written report to Town Manager Robert B. Weiss justifying why a qualified minority candidate was not hired in an underutilized position before the actual job appointment was made.

Town officials are currently required to submit a report after they have made their decision.

"I don't think it lacks all of its teeth, maybe a few," HRC Chairman Robert Faucher said of the plan adopted Tuesday.

In removing the statement, the commission followed the recommendation of Town Attorney John W. Cooney, who said in a four-page legal opinion that court decisions show the town could be open to a lawsuit on the grounds of "reverse discrimination."

"It must be considered whether a racially conscious selection process would withstand a challenge under recent court decisions," Cooney said. Citing several U.S. Supreme Court cases, Cooney said that past "societal discrimination" was not good justification for a race-conscious affirmative action plan.

"As time goes by and the court dissects this ... now they're talking about innocent victims of affirmative action. You never heard that kind of talk five years ago," Cooney told commission members.

Commission members adopted the plan unanimously, but not before some members qualified their vote.

"I'm willing to go along with the changes if they actually protect the town from a lawsuit," said commission member Eleanor Tunney.

"But if the actual spirit (of the change) is to protect 'innocent victims,' I don't think that's in keeping with the spirit of affirmative action."

"If we have to remove the passage, then so be it," said Thomas Stringfellow. "But I'd like to see the town get some positive results."

Those results could rest with the hiring goals contained in the plan, some town officials said. The plan calls for the hiring of seven minority-group members and three women by June 1987. Over five years, the town sets a goal of hiring 21 minority-group members and six women.

If passed by the Board of Directors, the plan would also be reviewed annually to see if it was helping the town hire more minority-group members and women. Of the town's approximately 400 employees, about nine are non-white, according to HRC members.

Automobile sales boost summer GNP

By Martin Crutinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's economy, propelled in part by booming car sales, expanded at a moderate 2.9 percent annual rate this summer after the spring's near-standstill performance, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the rise in the gross national product was also the result of a hefty defense spending increase and a slightly improved trade performance.

The 2.9 percent growth marked an upward revision from the original estimate one month ago that the economy had expanded at a 2.4 percent rate in July-September period.

The faster growth was accompanied by higher inflation. An inflation index tied to the GNP rose at an annual rate of 2.4 percent in the third quarter, up substantially from a 1.7 percent annual rate in the April-June quarter. The government blamed the inflation rise on higher food prices.

Even with the upward revision in growth, the economy was still expanding at a rate far below Reagan administration expectations.

The administration had been hoping for growth in the final six months of the year to exceed an annual rate of 4 percent.

Most analysts are predicting growth in the final three months of the year will average 3 percent to 3.5 percent, reflecting increased spending by consumers and businesses rushing to take advantage of expiring tax benefits.

The pace of current activity is far above the barely perceptible growth rate of 0.6 percent turned in during the spring.

That weak performance had led to fears that the current economic recovery, now four years old, was in danger of tumbling into a recession.

Whalers anxious for game with Montreal

By Jim Tierney
Herald Sports Writer

HARTFORD — It will be their first meeting since the Hartford Whalers were eliminated by them in a dramatic game seven during the Stanley Cup playoffs last April. Revenge isn't the likely term for the Whalers tonight at the Civic Center (7:30 p.m., Sportschannel, WTC) when they face the defending Stanley Cup champions, the Montreal Canadiens. But rather, Hartford will be aiming to show their formidable adversary and the rest of the National Hockey League that they are for real and last season's inspiring playoff performance was no fluke.

"It could have went our way (last season)," Whaler right wing Stewart Gavin said Tuesday at a nighttime luncheon, referring to Hartford's loss to the Canadiens in the seventh game of the Stanley Cup playoffs. Gavin remained inflexible concerning his club's key Adams Division contest this evening. "We can beat them (Montreal) and we will beat them," Gavin insisted.

Montreal (10-5-3) stands atop the rugged Adams Division with 23 points, and, more importantly, the Canadiens are unbeaten amongst division rivals. The Whalers (7-5-3) have lost possession of third place with 17 points, three points behind second-place Quebec.

"I'm very pleased with the way our team has been playing," Whaler coach Jack Evans said. "Our chances for first place (in the Adams Division) are very good. We have to perform every game. We can't sneak up on anyone anymore. Teams respect us and they have to be on top of their game to beat us." Although the NHL season is still young, Hartford feels that tonight's contest may set the tone in the division for the rest of the year. Looking back on last year, while their sights are set on a division title this year, the Whalers won't be happy until they reach their ultimate destiny — the Adams Division championship and the Stanley Cup championship.

"This program has come a long way," right winger Kevin Dinnen said. "We're looking no further than our division and we're going to settle for nothing less than first place. I know we could have won it (the Stanley Cup) last year." Evans emphasized the importance of each and every divisional game. "In our division, every game is like playing a playoff game. With the closeness of the teams in the division, that's the way you have to look at it. This game is important to us to make them (Montreal) aware and that we're capable of beating them."

Many questions will still linger after tonight's contest, however, the Whalers are confident. "I can see us heading in the right direction," Dinnen said.
"WHALES NOTES — Sylvain Turgeon will be available to the media within a couple of days, but his return to the team is still unknown. Scott Kleinendorst and John Anderson will play tonight. Mike Millar, who scored his first NHL goal Saturday against Edmonton in his first NHL game in an emergency substitute role will also play. "Millar impressed me the other night," Evans said. "I want a longer look at him."

Evans indicated reserve goalie Steve Weeks will start Saturday in New York against the Islanders. Mike Liut will be in the net tonight. The Whalers will produce a "Hartford Whalers Video Yearbook," which will be made available to the public. The "Video Yearbook" will be sponsored by WHCT-Channel 18. The video will be completed for a pre-Christmas release, while the date and details on availability will be announced later.

NHL roundup

Isles nip Nordiques in wild, crazy affair

By Barry Winer
The Associated Press

With 4:05 left in what already had been a wild game, the New York Islanders caught the Quebec Nordiques. Then things really got crazy.

Greg Gilbert's backhander slipped past goalie Clint Malarchuk at 15:55 of the third period Tuesday to make the score 2-2. Already, the teams had engaged in several brawls, including one involving goalies Malarchuk and Kelly Hrudey.

"But the weirdest stuff was yet to come."

The Islanders went on a power play with 1:28 to go when Michel Goulet was called for tripping. As New York pressed for the winning goal, Dale Hunter got the puck and saw a streaking Alain Cote behind the Islanders' defense. Hunter's pass hit Cote in full stride and he beat Hrudey with 23 seconds left.

The short-handed goal made 3-2 for Quebec, a safe enough lead with so little time to go, right?

Sorry. The Islanders pulled Hrudey for an extra attacker, giving them a 6-on-4 edge with Goulet still in the penalty box. During a scramble in front of the Quebec net, Bryan Trottier grabbed the puck, waited to get full control and poked it over a prone Malarchuk.

The clock read 9:01.
A wide-open overtime followed, as both clubs got good chances. With 15 seconds left, Mike Bossy cashed in for his second goal of the contest and the Islanders had an improbable, dramatic 4-3 NHL victory.

Elsewhere, it was Winnipeg 3, Pittsburgh 1; Los Angeles 6, Washington 5 behind Bob Bourne's hat trick; St. Louis 4, Minnesota 3; and Vancouver 5, Calgary 0.

Islanders 4, Nordiques 3
"We never give up until the last second," Bossy said. "Tonight was one of those nights.

"I didn't even know how much time was left," Bossy said of Trottier's tying goal.

"I made the first two saves," Malarchuk said of that goal. "Then I saw the puck there and I just tried sprawling."

It didn't work.
Bossy's winner came when he broke free in the slot, took Trottier's pass and sent a wrist shot at Malarchuk's legs into the net.

"Was there a full moon tonight?" Islanders Coach Terry Simpson asked.

Jets 3, Penguins 1
Winnipeg moved into first place in the Smythe Division for the first time since the NHL adopted its present divisional lineup in 1979. They are 12-6-1 and their 25 points tie the Jets with Philadelphia for the most points in the NHL.

Paul MacLean, Fredrik Olausson and Gilles Hamel had the goals.
"It's got a lot to do with confidence," Coach Dan Maloney said. "The skill was always there, it's just to get team confidence in themselves and to do little things right at key times."

Kings 6, Capitals 5
Bourne, who was acquired from the Islanders in the waiver draft, collected his second three-goal game of a 18-year career and Jay Wells capped a rough night for Washington goalie Pete Peeters with the winning goal on a long shot during a power play.

Peeters had given Los Angeles the power play by clearing the puck into the crowd and being whistled for a delay of game penalty.

Bourne had an idea he would have a big night after a morning skate. "It was incredible," agreed Bourne. "Everything I shot this morning went in. I've never been that hot in practice."

Bourne got his first goal on the game's first shot, just 41 seconds into the game when he put the puck between Peeters' legs. He struck again before the second period ended as he picked up a loose puck behind Peeters after Sean McKenna's backhander had trickled off the goalie's glove, and put it in the open net at 14:11.

Bourne completed his hat trick 32 seconds into the third period. Grant Ledyard fired a long shot wide of the net, but it rebounded off the end boards past a befuddled Peeters to Bourne, who was alone at the right of the crease.

Blues 4, North Stars 3
Bernie Federko scored once and assisted on both St. Louis goals in the third period as the Blues rallied to win in Minnesota.

The North Stars carried a 3-2 lead into the final period before Ric Nattress tied it at 57 seconds and Greg Paslawski scored the winning goal at 10:26.

Canucks 5, Flames 0
Petri Skirko scored three times, including two shorthanded goals on the same Flames' power play in the third period. Richard Brodeur stopped 24 shots for his first shutout this season and sixth of his career.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Tway and Pat Bradley have been named the 1986 Players of the Year by Golf Magazine, which conducted a poll among 60 PGA Tour pros and 100 pros from the LPGA.

Tway won four events, including the PGA Championship, while Bradley won five tournaments, including three of the four major championships, and set a single season money record for the LPGA of $416,472.

The magazine also selected Scott Verplank and Jenny Lindback as its 1986 College Players of the Year.

Clemens' MVP award disputed by Mattingly

By Michael A. Lutz
The Associated Press

KATY, Texas (AP) — Roger Clemens realizes he only gets 35 chances a season to prove his value. That's the exact reason Don Mattingly believes the Boston Red Sox pitcher should not have won the American League MVP award.

Clemens, the unanimous AL Cy Young winner this year, was named most valuable player Tuesday in the balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. The 24-year-old right-hander received 19 of 28 first-place votes and 339 points in beating Mattingly, the New York Yankees first baseman, who had five first-place votes and 258 points.

"When I go between the lines, I change," Clemens, who was 24-4 with a league-leading 2.48 ERA for the American League champions, said. "It's not arrogance or cockiness. I just realize that I only get about 35 chances to go out there in a season and I have to make the most of each opportunity."

"It's not who won or lost," Mattingly, who was trying to become the first repeat winner in the AL since New York's Roger Maris in 1961, said. "There's no jealousy in my mind. It's tough for a player who's out there every day. It's not that easy to keep yourself mentally, and you play hurt a little bit now and then.

"A guy like (Clemens) does a great job every fifth day, but the other four days you're counting on somebody else. I'm a guy who wants to be out there every day, help my club every day. I don't like days off."

Clemens didn't have many off days in 1986.
He won his first 14 games, set a major-league record by striking out 29 Seattle Mariners on April 29, finished second in the league in strikeouts and became the Red Sox slump breaker, winning 14 games following a Boston loss.

"I didn't plan it that way but it was a challenge that presented itself and I was fortunate enough to capitalize on the opportunities," Clemens said.

Clemens' teammate, Jim Rice, was third with the other four first-place votes and 241 points. Clemens, Mattingly and Rice, who was MVP in 1978, were the only players named on all 28 ballots.

Mattingly had another outstanding season as the Yankees finished second in the AL East. He batted .352, runner-up to Boston's Wade Boggs' .387, set a team record with 228 hits, had 81 homers and drove in 113 runs. Rice hit .324 with 20 homers and 110 RBI.

Trailing the top three in the MVP voting were George Bell of Toronto, 125 points; Jesse Barfield, also of Toronto, 107; Kirby Puckett of Minnesota, 105; and Boog 87.

"I know he is valuable," Mattingly said of Clemens. "But it's hard for me to conceive that a guy who is in 33 or 34 games can be as valuable ... as an everyday guy who is out there 162 games."

Clemens, who made a spectacular comeback from shoulder surgery last year, said that his awards will become targets for opposing hitters next season.

"When I go against a Reggie Jackson, George Brett or Don Mattingly, I'll have to have total concentration or I won't see the ball again."

Clemens, whose wife is expecting their first child this month, plans to rest until December when he will start jogging.

"The kind of season that we had is going to make it easier for all of us to get up and run," Clemens said.

Only seven pitchers have won the MVP and Cy Young the same season — Don Newcombe of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956, Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1963, Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals, McLain, Blue, Rolie Fingers of the Milwaukee Brewers in 1981 and Willie Hernandez of the Tigers in 1984. Fingers and Hernandez were relievers.

Mattingly unhappy with the voting

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly doesn't understand how someone who appears in one-fifth of his team's games can be the American League's Most Valuable Player.

"It's not who won or lost," the New York Yankees' first baseman said Tuesday after Boston pitcher Roger Clemens was named the 1986 AL MVP. "There's no jealousy on my mind. It's tough for a player who's out there every day. It's not that easy to keep yourself mentally, and you play hurt a little bit now and then."

"A guy like (Clemens) does a great job every fifth day, but the other four days you're counting on somebody else. I'm a guy who wants to be out there every day, help my club every day. I don't like days off."

Mattingly finished a distant second in the voting to Clemens, who became only the eighth pitcher to win the award. Clemens impressed the voters by winning 14 games after Boston losses. Mattingly played in all 162 games for the Yankees, batted .352 with 230 hits, hit 31 homers and drove in 113 runs.

Mattingly had another reason why it was hard for him to conceive that a guy who was in 33 games can be as valuable as an everyday guy who is out there 162 games.

"If I had a vote, I think I would have voted for (Jim) Rice or (Joe) Carter or (Jesse) Barfield if their teams had been winners," Mattingly said.

Rice, Clemens' Red Sox teammate, finished third in the voting and received four first-place votes. Long before the votes were counted, he had said, "I think the MVP should be given to a player who goes out there and performs every day."

Mattingly said he did not want to minimize the accomplishments of Clemens and said he was fortunate to have had the kind of season he had and it was an honor just to be considered.

"I guess I'm just tired of coming in second place this year," he added, referring to the second-place Yankees. "But I don't mind being in here (in the MVP voting)."

Quebec's Paul Gillis is sent against the boards by New York's Denis Potvin in their NHL game Tuesday night at Le Coliseum in Quebec City. The Islanders won a crazy affair in overtime, 4-3.

49ers' inability to run the ball causing problems

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

The question to Bill Walsh was simple and so was the San Francisco coach's answer.

The question: Was the difference between the San Francisco offense that scored 43 points against St. Louis and just six against Washington simply the difference between the Cardinals and the Redskins?

The answer: "I'd say so, yes."

To put it more simply, the reason the two Super Bowl champs are 6-4-1 and struggling for a playoff berth is much more basic than whether Joe Montana has been at quarterback in just three games. It's that they can't run the ball. In only four of their 11 games have the 49ers averaged more than four yards per rush — against the Dolphins, Colts and Cardinals, three teams that are hardly the best of defense and against the Redskins, against whom they stopped trying early in the game.

One reason Montana was so effective in his return seven weeks after back surgery in the 43-17 victory over St. Louis is that San Francisco ran the ball — 33 carries for 184 yards with Joe Crivie picking up 105 yards in 21 carries. Montana had to throw only 19 times, completing 15 for 270 yards and three touchdowns. But Monday night against Washington, the 49ers ran just 18 times — for 83 yards — leaving Montana to throw 60 times, one reason he completed 33 for 441 yards, and became the second NFL quarterback to throw for over 400 yards without throwing a touchdown pass.

Cleveland's Bernie Kosar did it just the Monday night before — and the first whose team failed to cross the goal line.

"We just didn't feel like we could run effectively," Walsh said. "They overpowered us up front."

Walsh was roundly criticized in the Bay Area for releasing the fumble-prone Wendell Tyler, the mainstay of the rushing game for four years. And Roger Craig isn't halfway to duplicating his 1,000-yard rushing-receiving double of last year — in fact, he may have become too battered by the work to repeat.

But up front is the basic source of the 49ers' trouble.

Four of the five interior offensive linemen have played together since Walsh took over in 1979. Tackle Keith Fahnhorst, guard Randy Cross and tight end Russ Francis are former All-Pro and center Fred Quillen has been the Pro Bowl. But Fahnhorst is now 34, Francis and guard John Ayers 33, Cross 32 and Quillen 30, which in the NFL means that their time may be getting short.

As is San Francisco's 1986 season. Their loss to the Redskins means the 49ers almost surely have to win the division to get an NFC playoff spot. The Bears, Giants and Redskins, all 9-2, are just about assured of the playoffs. But the 49ers don't win the West, where they trail the Rams by one-half game, there are four other teams they have to beat out for one berth.

"If you look at the record, I think there will be three teams in it from the East," said Walsh, adding the Cowboys, 7-4, to the Giants and Redskins.

Moreover, the 49ers have the NFL's toughest closing schedule, particularly after their game with the Falcons, 5-5-1, this Sunday. Then come the Giants, Jets, Patriots and Rams, who have a combined record of 34-10.

Walsh was pessimistic enough to suggest a week ago that given the improvement by Atlanta and New Orleans, his team might be able to win the division with a record of 9-7-1. But he was a little more optimistic after Monday's marathon loss.

"We have a tough schedule, but we can compete," he said. "I feel good about our team."

Little Lever prospers where big men reign

Lafayette Lever is proving that even a little guy can sometimes prosper in the paint, where the NBA big men reside.

The 6-foot-2 Denver guard had 21 points and 15 rebounds, giving him 33 rebounds in two games, as the Nuggets defeated the New Jersey Nets 125-112 Tuesday night.

"What's happening is the big guys are blocking out really well and the guards have been able to sneak in and get the ball off the boards," clever said. "For us to win, we have to get the ball moving and get everyone involved in the offense like we did tonight."

While Lever was frustrating the Nets, who have the NBA's worst record at 2-7, 6-foot-7 Alex English scored a season-high 43 points for the Nuggets.

"Alex always makes the big shots," Nuggets Coach Doug Moe said. "He didn't want to come out, but he had to give him a little rest and he played 43 of a possible 48 minutes."

Mike Evans also played an important role in Denver's victory, scoring nine of his 16 points during a 13-0 spurt that turned a 100-99 Nuggets lead into a 115-99 advantage with four minutes left.

"Evans gave us a big, big lift tonight," Moe said. "And we needed his scoring badly. He came through and hit some big shots."

"It was definitely one of those nights for me," Evans said. "I made up my mind I would be an offensive threat tonight. We finally started hitting some shots in the fourth quarter."

NBA roundup

Blazers 115, Rockets 111

Portland won its fourth straight game as Kiki Vandeweghe scored six of his 23 points in the final 1:10 of overtime in Houston.

The Rockets led 81-74 going into the fourth quarter before a 12-3 spurt gave the Trail Blazers an 89-84 edge. Nine straight Houston points by Mitchell Wiggins gave the Rockets a 97-91 advantage with 2:10 left, but a basket with three seconds left by Terry Porter, who scored 22 points, forced the overtime.

Robert Reid scored 21 points for the Rockets, who lost their second game in a row with a right ankle sprain in the second quarter. Sampson missed the start of the season with a sore left ankle.

Lakers 114, Mavericks 110

Mike Johnson scored 23 points, nine of them in a 3/4-minute spurt as Los Angeles came from behind to win at Dallas.

Johnson's seven points took the Lakers from a 100-100 tie to a 102-102 lead with 1:43 left in the game. After the Mavericks scored five straight points, Johnson added two more to lead Los Angeles ahead to a 107-107.

Mark Aguirre led Dallas with 26 points.

The Kings' Otis Thorpe (33), who played in the Big East Conference in college at Providence, leans back to put a shot around the defense of Alton Lister of Seattle in their NBA game Tuesday night in Seattle. The SuperSonics had three players with 20 or more points, led by Dale Ellis' 28-point effort, and whipped the Kings, 119-105. Derek Smith netted 21 points to lead the Kings.

Martina makes her point decisively

By Bob Greene
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Martina Navratilova had a good meeting with Virginia Slims of America. She won her match against Catherine Lindqvist 6-1, 6-0.

The last time the two met, earlier this year in Filderstadt, West Germany, Lindqvist took the first set and had match point in the second before Navratilova pulled off a three-set victory.

"We were so close last time," Navratilova said after a 6-3, 6-0 victory in their first-round match at the 16th annual Virginia Slims Championships at Madison Square Garden Tuesday. "I haven't been sharp playing against her. I wanted to show her what I can do."

"I also want to give the people in the audience my best," said the world's top-ranked woman's tennis player. "I feel like 'I'm cheating them of their money when I don't'."

The crowd got its money's worth as Navratilova dominated the match with Lindqvist in winning her 50th consecutive singles match.

"I have a good streak going and I want to keep it up," the left-hander from Fort Worth, Texas, said.

"She served and returned better" than her last meeting, Lindqvist said. "She was a little nervous at first, but then came back after her first break."

Navratilova's service was particularly effective in her second set, when she won 6-1. "I did not play my best tennis tonight, but she played very well."

Martina was her normal unpredictable self. When she was good, she was great. But when she was bad, Phelps was in the match. Phelps' chances came mainly in the second set when Martina's concentration visibly wavered.

After winning the first set easily, Navratilova raced out to a 4-1 lead in the second set. She threatened to make a runaway of the match when, suddenly, her concentration disappeared.

Phelps broke Martina's service from deuce in the sixth game and the Czech launched a slew of sloppy shots, then held serve, broke Martina's again and pulled even at 4-4.

But Martina's concentration once again, dropped only two points as she won the next to close out the match.

"I think she had a let-down," Phelps said. "And I might have hit a couple of good shots."

Turkey Day grid tickets now on sale

Tickets for the Thanksgiving Day football game between East Catholic and Manchester High School will go on sale at both schools on Thursday. Tickets will be on sale at the main office at East Catholic daily from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. Tickets will be on sale from 12:30 p.m. until 4 p.m. Tickets purchased in advance are $3 for adults, $2 for students. Tickets purchased at the gate the day of the game are $5 apiece.

Jim Calhoun lands first recruit

STORRS — First-year University of Connecticut basketball coach Jim Calhoun landed his first recruit Tuesday as Lyman DePriest, a 6-foot-8, 206-pound forward from Highland Park High School in Detroit, announced his intentions of attending UConn next fall.

DePriest, in one rating service, was ranked among the top 75 seniors in the country. He was the only junior named to the Michigan All-State first team last season after averaging 16 points and 12 rebounds. He helped Highland Park to a 22-2 record in Detroit's large-school division.

UConn had lost out on three other prospects, however. Point guard Tim Singleton from New Orleans signed with Notre Dame. He had narrowed his choices to Notre Dame and UConn. Six-foot-11, 240-pound center Sean Muto, from Mechanicsburg, Pa., signed with St. John's, after giving early indications of attending UConn. And 6-foot-9 power forward Willy Foley from Albany, N.Y., has decided to attend Boston College.

Masse has good fall at Davidson

DAVIDSON, N.C. — Junior Bill Masse of Manchester, an East Catholic High School graduate, had another fine fall season with the Davidson College baseball team. He led the club to a 19-2 record when the starters played, 11-4 overall. He switched from his familiar leadoff spot to the third slot in the order and came in with a team-leading 17 RBIs and three homers in only 30 plate appearances, including 12 walks. His batting average was .466.

Masse has reportedly had "serious talks" with the New York Yankees, Cleveland Indians and Chicago Cubs. He is also leaving open the option of playing with the U.S. Olympic team in the Pan-American games during the summer of 1987.

Brett undergoes shoulder surgery

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Third baseman Gregg Brett of the Kansas City Royals underwent surgery in California Tuesday on his injured right shoulder, the Royals announced.

The operation, at Centine Hospital in Inglewood, Calif., lasted about 45 minutes and went as planned, Royals trainer Mickey Cobb said. Cobb said Drs. Frank Jobe and Lewis Vocum removed cartilage from the acromio-clavicular joint, as well as a very small portion of the end of the clavicle, or collarbone.

Brett will be in the hospital for two days, and will report to spring training on time and be ready for the season, Cobb said.

Eason, Breeden cited by the AFC

NEW YORK — Quarterback Tony Eason of the New England Patriots and cornerback Louis Breeden of the Cincinnati Bengals were named the AFC Offensive and Defensive Players of the Week, respectively, the NFL announced Tuesday.

Eason led the Patriots from a 28-16 deficit in their 30-23 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Sunday. He threw two touchdown passes to wide receiver Irving Fryar, the second 25-yarder on the game's final play. Eason set team records of 52 completions on 36 completions in throwing for 375 yards, and his 26-yard run with three seconds remaining set up the winning play.

Breeden, in his ninth NFL season, had two interceptions, returning one for a touchdown, and added four tackles in the Bengals' 34-7 victory over the Seattle Seahawks.

Notre Dame losing wars, not battles

By Herschel Nissenon
The Associated Press

Notre Dame has won eight of nine battles but only four wars. Translated, that means the Irish have outgained eight of their nine opponents — all but Pittsburgh — but they pay off on points, not yards, and the record is only 4-5.

Couch Lou Holtz will tell you that Grantland Rice was wrong. It's not how you play the game, it's whether you win or lose. And Notre Dame outgained Penn State 416 yards to 314 on Saturday but lost 24-19.

"There were some very difficult losses to swallow in this season, and this was one of them," Holtz said. During a three-game winning streak, which ended against Penn State, Notre Dame committed only two turnovers to eight for the opposition. In the other six games, the Irish turned the ball over 16 times and took it away 10.

And they have been absolutely smothered when they get into scoring position.

Three times each against Michigan (a 24-23 loss) and Michigan State (a 20-15 setback) Notre Dame reached the opponent's 20-yard line and came away empty-handed. Against Michigan they fumbled at the 6 and 9 and threw an interception in the end zone. Against Michigan State they fumbled at the 3, threw an interception at the 18 and missed a field goal after reaching the 20.

In a 28-10 loss to Alabama the Irish reached the 37, 36, 30 and 29 without putting points on the board. In a 10-9 loss to Pitt they reached the 37, 24, 24 and 20 without scoring.

And against Penn State they came away with nothing after reaching the 21 and the 6 and had to settle for field goals after first downs at the 6 and 22.

"Going into the season, I thought we had some problems and would be getting better, and we have been getting better," Holtz said. "I feel we have an excellent team. I didn't feel that way in the beginning of the season, but I feel that way now and I don't see how these kids could do anything but get better."

"It's frustrating, but a week from now everybody is going to be getting better," Holtz said. "I feel we're playing the University of Washington, we're playing Ohio State and we have two games with Texas. So the thought that we're trying to come up with a creampudding really does blow my mind."

"We're not going to buy out of any games, we're not going to cancel any contracts that we have. Any agreements that we have that are not contracts but are written letters will be honored."

they'll be fine." The Irish have two games left, both on the road, at LSU on Saturday night and Southern Cal the following week.

For the second straight season, Notre Dame's schedule has been ranked as the toughest in the nation by the NCAA. Athletic Director Gene Corrigan made some unwanted headlines last week when he disclosed that Notre Dame would schedule teams like Stanford, Boston College, Indiana, Northwestern, Miami of Ohio, Duke and Virginia in the 1990s.

Future schedules have been released through 1992. In each of the next four seasons, Notre Dame opens with Michigan, Michigan State and Purdue, just as it did this year.

"That's a bite," Corrigan says. "I don't know of anybody who wants to open with those three. And there's nothing we can do about that because all of those are long-term contracts."

It was interpreted in some quarters that the new opponents meant a softening of the schedule.

Not so, Corrigan says. "We're trying to get the scheduling up to the year 2000 because we are an independent, we don't have an automatic seven or eight (conference) games handed to us each year and then have to put in two or three. We have to schedule a complete 11 games."

"One thing that we thought about is that we'd really like to play in every section of the country, but not necessarily every other year."

"We played Navy in Baltimore. We were 2-4 and Navy had just lost to the University of Pennsylvania and they'd been beaten by Air Force 40-6 and there were 61,000 people there. It was packed. When Notre Dame does go on the road it's through anything like this before."

"The bandwagon is always a crowded ride," the 54-year-old Knox said. "When you're winning, everybody wants a haton. That does not mean that we're going to play Boston College every year from now until eternity. We've got a 90-game set with them in the '90s. We've got a three-game set with Brigham Young. I don't consider that a complete 11 games."

People who were singing Knox's praises just two years ago are now questioning his coaching decisions. And "the old coach," as he called himself this week, is aging rapidly.

"When you're losing, you find out a lot of things about yourself," he said. "You've got to be analytical, you've got to be rational and you can't go off the deep end. I'm not used to this. I don't like it and it bothers me. But I also like to think I can deal with reality."

'Old coach' Knox finding hard times

By Jim Cour
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — In his 14 years as a head coach in the NFL, Seattle's Chuck Knox has never been through anything like this before.

"The bandwagon is always a crowded ride," the 54-year-old Knox said. "When you're winning, everybody wants a haton. That does not mean that we're going to play Boston College every year from now until eternity. We've got a 90-game set with them in the '90s. We've got a three-game set with Brigham Young. South Australia to stay in trials

FREMANTLE, Australia — South Australia announced Wednesday it will continue to compete in the America's Cup defender trials despite rumors to the contrary.

Graham Spurling, South Australian Challenge chairman, said the 12-meter boat had been sold to another group, and a condition of the sale was that the boat would be allowed to continue to compete in the upcoming third round of the defender trials.

Spurling's spokesman, Graham Ferrett, refused to name the purchaser, but it is believed to be a foreign syndicate planning to challenge for the America's Cup in 1990.

In his statement, Spurling said the syndicate had decided that a review of performance would be made at the end of November and decisions made based on that performance. But, he said, the terms of sale changed the plan.

"It is now clear that South Australia is not as competitive as Alan Bond's Australia IV or the Kookaburra. On performance parameters alone, it had been decided to stop sailing," he said.

Ironically, the statement came only hours after South Australia, taking advantage of light winds, upset Australia IV on the final day of the second round-robin series.

In today's other races, Kookaburra III, skippered by Iain Murray, downed wireless Steak n' Kidney, while Peter Gilmore piloted Kookaburra II to a win over Australia III.

Light breezes, which began at 12 knots and never freshened to more than 15 knots, were perfect for South Australia, as the Adelaide-based boat posted its first victory over any of the top three challengers. It previously had three wins over Steak n' Kidney and one over Australia III.

South Australia, skippered by John Savage with Phil Thompson at the helm, was behind two seconds at the start, but has taken a 27-second lead by the time the two boats reached the first windward mark.

The Seahawks appear no closer to a Super Bowl today than they did in 1982.

downhill run, but on the next beat to windward, South Australia found a 15-degree favored windshift which placed it 77 seconds ahead at the mark.

Kookaburra III had little trouble, beating Steak n' Kidney by 3:18. Kookaburra II won by 24 seconds over Australia III, the world 12-meter champion.

The victories left Kookaburra III with 29 points, nine ahead of Kookaburra II and 10 in front of Australia IV. Australia III has 10, South Australia 8 and Steak n' Kidney is still winless after two rounds.

First-round victories were worth one point, while the second-round wins were worth two and victories in the third round, which begins Dec. 2, will be worth three points.

It was reported that a revolutionary new camard keel had been fitted to Australia IV. The reports, which appeared in Australian newspapers, claimed that a vertical fin had been fitted between the front edge of the keel and the hull.

John Longley, a crew member of Australia IV and Project Director for the Alan Bond Syndicate, denied there is panic in the camp following the loss to South Australia.

"The panic should be in the challengers' camps," he said. "When they view the tight competition we are having, they must know they are in trouble."

Murray, the skipper and project director for Kevin Parry's Kookaburra Syndicate, said a protest filed by Kookaburra II against Australia IV had been dropped.

He also said he was thrilled with the performance of the two boats during both the first and second series.

Parry denied stories that he and Bond, the director of the Australia IV and III boats, were rivals off the race course.

"We are not close personal friends," Parry said. "But we have a common goal. And that is to keep the America's Cup in Australia."

The N.Y. Giants not only beat the Washington Redskins in a 1942 game without making a first down, they gained only one yard by rushing and completed just one pass, which was good for a touchdown. The final score was 14-7.

A Traditional Thanksgiving...

For Today

Thanksgiving is a celebration of the sheer perseverance and determination of the first colonists to survive the harsh conditions in their new home. The early homemakers learned to adapt familiar European recipes and cooking methods to fit new foods and lifestyles. The first Thanksgiving dinner was a "pitch in" meal with special dishes from each family.

Thanksgiving dinner for a house filled with relatives doesn't have to be a survival test for today's busy cooks if they follow the colonists' customs of adapting traditional recipes to incorporate new eating trends and asking each family to contribute a favorite dish to the gathering.

Today's convenient, time-saving ingredients such as sweetened condensed milk, bottled lemon juice, ready-to-use mincemeat and chicken-flavor bouillon allow the cook to create recipes that are not only delicious but quick and easy to prepare.

Add hearty, rich flavor to the turkey stuffing and gravy, with instant bouillon or bouillon cubes, which are easier and more economical to use than canned broth. Dissolve one teaspoon instant or one cube in one cup boiling water in any recipe calling for one cup broth or stock.

Keep bottled lemon juice on hand to give a zesty flavor to punches, salads, sauces and vegetable dishes. Ready-to-use mincemeat is the quick and convenient ingredient for the traditional holiday pie. For other luscious desserts, choose sweetened condensed milk, today's easy way to homemade taste and goodness.

Celebrate the joys and traditions of the American spirit with this memorable Thanksgiving dinner.

Before the feast, sip this warm, spiced cider.

HOT CRANBERRY CIDER

(Makes about 2 quarts)

- 1 quart apple cider or apple juice
- 1 (32-ounce) bottle cranberry juice cocktail
- 1/2 cup bottled lemon juice
- 1/3 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 8 whole cloves
- 2 cinnamon sticks

In large saucepan, combine ingredients; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; simmer uncovered 10 minutes. Remove spices. Serve warm.

Unfold this refreshing ruby red salad onto lettuce leaves and serve with Lemon Fluff Dressing.

SHERRIED CHERRY SALAD

(Makes 10 to 12 servings)

- 2 (16-ounce) cans dark sweet cherries, drained, reserving syrup
- 1 cup water
- 1/3 cup bottled lemon juice
- 1 (8-serving size) package black cherry or cherry flavor gelatin
- 1/2 cup dry sherry or water
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans
- Lettuce leaves
- Lemon Fluff Dressing

In small saucepan, combine water and lemon juice; bring to a boil. In large bowl, pour boiling mixture over gelatin; stir until dissolved. Add reserved syrup and sherry; mix well. Chill until partially set. Fold in cherries and nuts. Pour into lightly oiled 7-cup mold. Chill 4 to 6 hours or overnight. Serve on lettuce with Lemon Fluff Dressing.

This creamy, spiced drink is a delicious way to toast the holiday.

APPLE CINNAMON CREAM LIQUEUR

(Makes about 1 quart)

- 1 (14-ounce) can sweetened condensed milk (NOT evaporated milk)
- 1 cup (1/2 pint) whipping or coffee cream
- 4 eggs*
- 1 cup apple schnapps
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon

In blender container, combine all ingredients; blend until smooth. Reserve 1 cup crumb mixture; press remainder firmly on bottom and halfway up sides of 12x7-inch baking dish. Stir nuts into reserved crumb mixture; set aside. In large mixer bowl, combine remaining ingredients except crumb mixture; mix well. Pour into prepared crust. Top with crumb mixture. Bake 55 minutes or until golden. Cool. Garnish as desired. Refrigerate leftovers.

*Use only Grade A clean, uncracked eggs.

Serve the traditional turkey with this moist, flavorful corn bread stuffing.

SAVORY CORN BREAD STUFFING

(Makes about 3 quarts)

- 1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced (about 4 cups)
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 3/4 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 margarine or butter
- 4 teaspoons chicken-flavor instant bouillon or 4 chicken-flavor bouillon cubes
- 1-2/3 cups boiling water
- 1 pound bulk sausage, browned and drained
- 1 (16-ounce) package corn bread stuffing mix
- 1-1/2 teaspoons poultry seasoning

In large skillet, cook mushrooms, celery and onion in margarine until tender. In large bowl, dissolve bouillon in water. Add sausage, mushroom mixture and remaining ingredients; mix well. Lightly stuff turkey before roasting. Place remaining stuffing in greased baking dish; cover. Bake at 350° for 20 minutes or until hot. Refrigerate leftovers.

Bouillon guarantees that this quick-to-fix gravy will be extra flavorful and delicious.

RICH GOLDEN GRAVY

(Makes about 1 1/2 cups)

- 1/4 to 1/3 cup unsifted flour
- 1/4 cup pan drippings or margarine
- 2 cups boiling water
- 2 teaspoons chicken-flavor instant bouillon

In medium skillet, stir flour into pan drippings; cook and stir until dark brown. Stir in water and bouillon; cook and stir until thickened. Refrigerate leftovers.

A no fuss press in the pan crust makes this new version of pumpkin pie a winner with beginning bakers.

DEEP DISH PUMPKIN PIE

(Makes 10 to 12 servings)

- 1/3 cup unsifted flour
- 1/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1/3 cup granulated sugar
- 1 cup cold margarine or butter, cut into small pieces
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts
- 1 (16-ounce) can pumpkin (2 cups)
- 1 (14-ounce) can sweetened condensed milk (NOT evaporated milk)
- 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon allspice
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

Preheat oven to 350°. In medium bowl, combine flour and sugars; cut in margarine until crumbly. Reserving 1 cup crumb mixture, press remainder firmly on bottom and halfway up sides of 12x7-inch baking dish. Stir nuts into reserved crumb mixture; set aside. In large mixer bowl, combine remaining ingredients except crumb mixture; mix well. Pour into prepared crust. Top with crumb mixture. Bake 55 minutes or until golden. Cool. Garnish as desired. Refrigerate leftovers.

Pie making is more fun in a group

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

The delicious aroma wafting through the hall of Trinity Covenant Church last Tuesday morning was of apples, but there were no pies baking in the room from where it came. There were, however, four huge bags of apples, 64 quarts in all, and several women peeling them as fast as they could at one end of a long table.

At the other end of the table, Janet Holmes had her hands in a huge bowl of sticky pie dough. Three women were rolling it out as fast as she could throw them the balls of dough. At another table, Robin Vollaro heaped the pie pans high with apples, sugars and spices.

Betty Lou Nordeen, a music teacher at Jilling Junior High School, added the top crust and fluted the edges, trying several techniques. "I'm the fluter because I'm the musician," she said. She yelled at the pie makers, "That was a little small. You're not putting enough flour. It doesn't stick."

The whole assembly-line pie-making process is a tradition that the Covenant Women have been seven years ago to provide pies for the group's annual church fair.

"Instead of everybody making them at home, we thought it would be more fun to do it together," said Vollaro.

The pie making has been done on Veterans Day ever since, said Gloria Swensen, wife of Trinity's pastor, Norman Swensen. The fair is Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Other features will include Swedish rolls sold until lunch time. Booths include: Treasure Chest; Craft Corner; a Magic Show by Billy

In the group who have the day off, she explained.

Jan Skiff of Wetherfield, a friend of the pastor's wife, gave her the recipe for the joint pie-making effort. Skiff's beach association does a similar project every summer in the Old Saybrook area.

Holmes mixed the huge batch of dough with her hands, using 12 cups of flour at a time. "I never make a pie at home, but I can make 12 at a time here. The older generation taught us," she said.

How does she know when the pie dough is the right consistency? "My fingers know when it's right, or the people rolling yell back to me if it's too dry or too wet," she replied. She obviously enjoyed this particularly messy job. "The first year this was my job and I've been doing it ever since," she said.

Marge Nelson showed how she rolls the perfect pie dough. "You roll to the outside and use a light touch," she said.

Swensen said the secret to the Covenant Women's luscious apple pies is that everyone helps. With 14 to 15 women of all ages pitching in, the pie-making venture is usually completed in one morning. The women take the pies home and freeze them until the day before the fair when one or two women bake them at the church ovens.

Smyth; Candy Cupboard; Kids Corner; "Lotta Knots-Macrame"; Baubles and Beads. Also in the baked goods section will be other kinds of pies made by women of the church.

For those who are expecting a huge crowd for Thanksgiving or Christmas, here is the Covenant Women's recipe for making 12 apple pies at once. Some of the women make other types of pies from leftover dough. Two of those recipes, Barbara Guigoli's Dixie pecan pie from her Texas heritage and Judy Marteney's blueberry pie, are also offered.

Pastry for 12 pies
12 cups flour
1 large can shortening
3 cups water
2 tablespoons salt
Mix all the ingredients together in large bowl. Mix until sticks together in fingers.

Filling for 1 apple pie
1/4 cup sugar
Alspice
Sprinkle bottom pie crust with sugar before filling pie pan full of apples in desired amount, higher than the pie crust. Sprinkle the sugar and alspice over the filling. Cover with top crust, seal and flute the edge of crust.

Dixie pecan pie
3 eggs
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1 1/2 cups dark corn syrup

Supermarket Shopper

The price is not marked on universal code symbol

By Martin Sloane
United Features Syndicate

DEAR MARTIN: I am a disabled veteran living on a fixed income, and we need all the help we can get to save money in our groceries.

How do you read the code on the label of a product, the one that goes over the scanner so the register rings up the item and price? Could I learn to read it?

The supermarkets in this area stopped marking the prices on the shelves, and although there are price tags on the shelves, they are sometimes missing or unreadable.

It would be very helpful if I could get the price from reading the code. — Martin Block, Fort Pierce, Fla.

DEAR MR. BLOCK: Unfortunately, it is impossible to read a price from looking at the Universal Product Code — the thick and thin black lines that now appear on all packaged-goods products.

The Universal Product Code is used solely to identify a product and does not contain a price. The code also contains a main 10-digit number. The first six digits represent the number assigned to the manufacturer. The last four digits identify the name and size of the product. There are two digits outside the main code. One is assigned for store-department identification, and the other is an equipment-check digit.

When the cashier passes the Universal Product Code over the scanner, this electronic device reads the code and sends the identification to the store's computer. Prices are kept in the computer, and it is the computer that sends the price of the item to the cash register.

What can you do when there are no prices marked on the products and you can't read the price marked on the shelf sign? You can ask for a price check on the item before the cashier rings it up. It will take an extra minute of your time (and the cashier's time), but this is one of the few ways consumers can indicate to the stores that shelf signs must be in readable condition and must be in their proper places if item pricing is removed.

Universal Product Code Note: If the Universal Product Code with the 10 main digits does not particularly impress you, you'll be interested in knowing that a price has been made to double the number of bars in the code and increase the number of main digits to 20. This expanded Universal Product Code would allow the supermarkets to keep track of random-weight items. It would also be the source of information on supply and sales trends. In addition, it would make it a lot easier for the stores to scan cents-off coupons.

It is in the area that the stores expect to achieve substantial cost savings. The stores now charge manufacturers an 8-cents-per-coupon handling fee, and some chains say they lose money on coupons. Scanning could reduce the cost of redeeming coupons by as much as one third. But even if the proposal of a 20-digit Universal Product Code is accepted, it would take several years for the code and necessary equipment to be developed — and several more years before most retailers would be ready to use it.

Enjoy Thanksgiving by cooking turkey in the microwave

Microwave Kitchen

Marge Churchill

It's time to think about turkey. Just the thought of that large, golden bird cooking creates anticipation for the Thanksgiving feast.

The use of a microwave for cooking turkey can make the preparation of your Thanksgiving dinner much easier and quicker than conventional methods. You can enjoy some extra sleep, and still have Thanksgiving dinner ready in plenty of time.

Turkey can be microwaved on high in one-quarter of the time needed conventionally. Microwave techniques speed both defrosting and cooking turkey.

Wave depends upon the size of the oven cavity. If your microwave is full size (1.4 to 1.6 cubic feet) the ideal turkey is 12 to 14 pounds. A larger bird may fit, but the top of the breast will be too close to the top of the microwave and may dry out, even when shielded with aluminum foil.

Turkey defrosting chart
Whole or half turkey — 5 to 8 1/2 minutes per pound at 30% power
Turkey parts — 7 to 9 minutes per pound at 30% power
Turkey cutlets — 9 1/2 to 12 1/2 minutes per pound at 30% power

To defrost a whole turkey, unwrap the turkey so that you can feel the warm spots as it defrosts. Place the breast side down in a baking dish. Defrost for 1/4 of the total time. Use foil to shield areas which feel warm. Turn the turkey breast side up. Defrost for one-quarter of the time. Check for warm or brown spots, shielding them with foil. Also shield the legs and wing tips. Turn the turkey breast side down, and defrost for one-quarter of the time. Rotate the turkey legs point to the opposite side of the oven. Turn turkey breast side up.

Check for warm spots. Shield the top of the breast with aluminum foil. Defrost for the remaining time. Spread legs and wings from the body; loosen giblets.

Place turkey in cool water. Let turkey stand 20 to 30 minutes, until giblets and neck can be removed, and cavity is cool but not icy. Make sure the breast is defrosted under the wing area.

To defrost turkey breasts or half a turkey, unwrap turkey and place on a rack in a baking dish, breast side down. Defrost for half of the time. Shield any warm or brown spots with aluminum foil. Turn breast side up. Defrost for remaining time and rinse in cool water. Let stand for 5 to 10 minutes, or until breast is completely defrosted in the area behind the wings and the cavity is no longer icy.

To defrost turkey hind quarters and leg, arrange on a rack in a baking dish with meaty areas to the outside of the dish. Defrost for half of the time. Shield leg tips and warm areas with aluminum foil. Defrost for remaining time until surface is soft but not hot. Rinse under cool water. Turn the turkey breast side up. Defrost for one-quarter of the time. Check for warm or brown spots, shielding them with foil. Also shield the legs and wing tips. Turn the turkey breast side down, and defrost for one-quarter of the time. Rotate the turkey legs point to the opposite side of the oven. Turn turkey breast side up.

Basic roast turkey
1/4 to 1 cup basting sauce
8- to 10-pound frozen whole self-basting turkey, thawed (with giblet and gravy package if present) or 7 1/2- to 9 1/2-pound frozen whole turkey, thawed (without giblet and gravy package)

Prepare basting sauce from the recipe below. Remove giblets from turkey. Twist wing tips behind back. Tie legs with string or replace legs under band of skin, if present. Make a small slit in back skin for release of steam. Brush whole turkey with basting sauce.

Place turkey breast side down on a microwave rack in a large size oblong or oval baking dish. Cover with a tent of greased waxed paper. Microwave on high (100% power) for 15 to 18 minutes.

Turn turkey breast side up. Brush with basting sauce. Give the baking dish a half turn. Shield the wings, ends of drumsticks and top of the breast with small pieces of foil if these areas brown faster than the rest of the bird. Secure foil with a wooden toothpick where needed.

Cover with tent of waxed paper. Microwave at 50% power for 70 to 90 minutes, or until juices run clear when turkey is pierced with a fork between the leg and thigh and at the thickest part of the breast meat. Give dish a half turn twice during the 50% cooking time. When done, brush turkey with more sauce and cover tightly with foil. Let stand 10 to 15 minutes.

Herb-butter basting sauce
1/4 cup butter
2 teaspoons dried leaf rosemary
2 teaspoons dried parsley flakes
2 teaspoons dried leaf thyme
2 teaspoons dried rubbed sage
1 teaspoon Kitchen Bouquet

Place butter in a small bowl. Microwave at medium high (70%) for 1 1/2 minutes, or until just melted. Stir in remaining ingredients; mix well. Stir well just before brushing on turkey.

To make turkey gravy: after removing the turkey from the oven, pour collected juices into a 2-quart glass batter bowl. Set turkey aside for standing time. For each cup of liquid, use 1 tablespoon of flour for thickening. Do not stir the flour into the hot juices as it will lump. Make a smooth paste of flour and water. Using a wire whisk, blend flour paste or other similar item, the microwave on high until gravy thickens, stirring with a whisk 2 or 3 times. Add salt and pepper as desired. For brown coloring, add Kitchen Bouquet.

If you are planning to stuff your turkey, you might like this apple and sausage stuffing. The flavor combination with roast turkey is excellent.

temperature is reached.

Tip: The purpose of the initial cooking time at full power is to heat the turkey quickly. Figure the weight of the turkey without the giblets, which weigh about 12 ounces. If your turkey has a gravy packet or other similar item, the weight of this should be subtracted and not counted as a part of the turkey weight. To figure the minutes at full power (high) for your turkey, multiply the corrected weight of the turkey by 2. This will give you the number of minutes at full power. In testing, it has been found the number of minutes at the second cooking 50% cooking is an estimate only. Check the turkey for doneness when minimum cooking time has elapsed. To be sure of getting an accurate temperature reading, insert the microwave meat thermometer in more than one section of the bird. For an additional test, cut between the leg and thigh to be certain that the juices run clear.

Apples and sausage stuffing
1 pound ground pork
1 large onion, chopped
3 apples, peeled, cored and chopped
4 stalks celery, thinly sliced
4 tablespoons butter or margarine

2 cups chicken broth
1 tablespoon parsley flakes
2 teaspoons seasoned salt
4 to 5 cups seasoned cornbread stuffing mix

Microwave pork 3 minutes on high, or until set. Drain fat and set aside.

Microwave onion, apples and celery in butter for 4 to 5 minutes on high, or until the onion is transparent.

Combine all ingredients and mix well. Stuff loosely into both cavities of the turkey. Yields enough dressing for a 10- to 12-pound turkey.

The living trust is flexible and popular planning vehicle

America's concept of the dependent elderly has changed dramatically over the years. Profit-sharing and retirement plans, deferred compensation, and the increased value of the family home have created a comfortable and active existence for many of the elderly and near elderly today.

may either terminate or become a well-organized vehicle for the state plan itself. Each trust may be specifically tailored to meet each donor's needs by his counsel, yet the instrument itself doesn't have to be complicated. A complete trust plan, for example, can be a two-page agreement written in plain English. Who stands to benefit from living trusts? One group is certainly that of "retirees" — in an era in which the term is no longer synonymous with elderly. Successful entrepreneurs, sports and entertainment stars, and others who amass fortunes at a reasonably early age frequently opt for a more leisurely lifestyle "while they can enjoy it."

atorship proceedings, and by preferences and overall intentions. A second group that may benefit considerably from a living trust is the still-active professional or corporate executive who is being amply rewarded, but doesn't have the time, or the experience, to manage his or her own portfolio. A trust may prove an ideal vehicle for coordinating current investment, tax strategies and future financial plans; and for making certain that they are being properly managed. A third group that may benefit from a living trust includes children who may inherit sizable fortunes. Even though they have reached their legal majority, they may be ill-prepared for such responsibility. The young person can be encouraged to test and develop his or her own management skills gradually. And the terms of the trust may be altered by the donor at any time. In all of these cases, the use of a trust utilizes sound, traditional money management, without sacrificing the flexibility that is essential in today's investment market. Since the trustee or trustees assume responsibility, not only for financial management, but for executing legal requirements as well, the selection of a qualified trustee (or co-trustee) becomes a paramount consideration for success. LOCAL PODIATRIST ATTENDED SURGICAL SEMINAR

HERSHEY, PA. — Dr. Loren J. Schneider from Manchester attended the 18th Annual Hershey Surgical Seminar sponsored by The Pennsylvania Podiatric Medical Association. The four day meeting, which attracted over 800 doctors nationwide, took place at the Hershey Lodge & Convention Center and the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center in Hershey, Pennsylvania November 6-9.

The Hershey Surgical Seminar, one of the largest and most prestigious podiatric programs of its kind in the country, is designed to present concentrated in-depth courses featuring state-of-the-art surgical techniques on the foot and ankle, as well as the most current breakthroughs in podiatric research.

Over 50 renowned lecturers in the field of podiatric medicine, general medicine and related fields comprise the 1986 faculty, providing a total of 33 hours post-doctoral podiatric education. The opportunity to attend general lectures, workshops, optional cadaver surgery, panel discussion, and mini-courses in specific areas of interest was given to each registrant, which enabled concentrated emphasis and thorough coverage of each topic.

William L. Goldfarb, DPM, from Bristol, Pennsylvania, General Chairman, stated that it is felt this annual meeting creates the opportunity for the best and the brightest in the podiatric profession to come together once a year for four days of dedicated study in a "True Meeting Of The Minds".

Dr. Loren J. Schneider is in practice at 483 West Middle Turnpike, Manchester, 646-5153.

Defense minister's friend ambushed

MANILA, Philippines — A band of gunmen dressed as women today ambushed the car of a right-wing businessman who was Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile's friend, killing him and two other people. David Pazon, 45, was slain six days after the killing of Rolando Olalla, a leftist whose death supporters blamed on "fascist elements" allied with Enrile. The defense minister has denied involvement. No arrests have been made in either attack. President Corason Aquino in a television interview today said she was unsure who was behind the recent violence, which has helped fuel rumors of a coup.

U.S. missile plan questioned

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is prepared to testify before Congress that the military has not endorsed President Reagan's idea of eliminating nuclear ballistic missiles within 10 years, officials say. Adm. William J. Crowe, in testimony expected next week, will strongly back the goal of seeking an arms accord with the Soviet Union that would one day eliminate all long-range ballistic missiles. But Crowe will stress that accomplishing such a step in 10 years is "overly ambitious" and potentially destabilizing, the officials said. Crowe will also acknowledge, if asked, that the Pentagon brass was kept in the dark about President Reagan's decision to ship military supplies to Iran as part of a bid to improve relations with that country.

Laser tests on arteries promising

DALLAS — The first human trials of laser-powered devices to burn through clogs in arteries supplying the heart show they could be cheaper than bypass surgery and more effective than balloon treatments, researchers say. Clogged coronary arteries were opened at least partially in six of the first seven Americans to undergo the procedure that could help prevent heart attacks, said Dr. Timothy Sanborn of Boston University Medical Center. Sanborn, describing his findings Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association, said laser thermal angioplasty could become widespread within two years if the success continues.

Pope calls for end to mistrust

DHAKA, Bangladesh — Pope John Paul II today urged the estimated 50,000 people attending an outdoor Mass to brush aside "fear and distrust" between 200,000 Christians and almost 100 million Moslems in desperately poor Bangladesh. "Everyone, especially the young, must learn always to respect one another's religious beliefs and respect freedom of religion which is the right of every human being," he said in a homily at the Ershad Army stadium where he also ordained 18 Bengali priests. The Mass was held just hours after the 66-year-old pontiff arrived for a one-day stop in Bangladesh.

Rift over arms shipments grows

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan wants his national security adviser to remain on his job and is not annoyed at Secretary of State George Shultz for speaking his mind about U.S. arms shipments to Iran, a White House spokesman said Tuesday. John Poindexter, the president's assistant for national security affairs, has been widely reported to have coordinated the administration's secret diplomatic contacts with Iran, which have brought sharp criticism from Capitol Hill and elsewhere. The New York Times, meanwhile, reported in its Wednesday edition that Shultz has asked Reagan for a firm commitment not to provide more military equipment to Iran and to agree that future diplomatic contacts with Tehran have State Department participation. The newspaper quoted unidentified officials as saying that Shultz had told Reagan that unless those requests were honored, it would not make any sense to keep serving in the administration. And spokesmen for both the State Department and White House denied a report Tuesday night that Shultz had offered his resignation to Reagan. "The whole story is false," said Charles E. Redman, the State Department spokesman. In related news, The Washington Post, quoting informed sources, reported in Wednesday's editions that the administration's secret shipments of arms to Iran are part of a seven-year-long pattern of CIA operations — some that date back to the Carter administration — designed both to gain favor with the Iranian government and to support Iranian exiles seeking to overthrow it. The newspaper, quoting sources, said that in 1983, for instance, the CIA provided a list of Soviet KGB agents and collaborators operating in Iran to the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. The regime then executed as many as 200 suspects and closed down the communist Tudeh party in Iran, the newspaper's sources said. At the same time, the newspaper reported its sources as saying, the CIA also was authorized to support Iranian exiles opposed to the Khomeini regime, and provided nearly $6 million to the main Iranian exile movement, financed an anti-Khomeini exile group radio station in Egypt and supplied a miniaturized television transmitter for a clandestine broadcast by Reza Pahlavi, who vowed to return. In a separate story, the Post also reported that administration sources said components for Hawk anti-aircraft missiles were included in the secret arms shipments to Iran. Those missiles could become an issue, the newspaper said, because Congress earlier this year blocked an administration request to sell Hawk missiles to Jordan, a U.S. ally.

North Korea accused of death hoax

By Edwin Q. White
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — The South Korean press today accused North Korea of trying to discredit and destabilize the south with a hoax about North Korean President Kim Il Sung had died. Questions about Kim were raised Monday when the South Korean Defense Ministry said North Korean propaganda loudspeakers along the demilitarized zone between North and South Korea announced Kim had been shot to death. The Defense Ministry later said North Korean loudspeakers were blaring that North Korea's defense minister, O Jin U, had seized power. North Korea ignored the reports, and on Tuesday distributed a television film of Kim greeting Mongolian Premier Jamban Batmunkh at North Korea's Pyongyang Airport. A senior South Korean government official, speaking to reporters on condition of anonymity, said the Seoul government had not fabricated its reports. However, asked if it would make available any tapes of the broadcasts, he said, "It is general practice for the government not to disclose how any intelligence report was obtained, nor to present any data thus obtained in public. It has been general practice for South Korean forces assigned along the border to monitor all North Korean broadcasts ever since the armistice was signed in 1953," he said. In Tokyo, a Japanese Foreign Ministry official quoted the Seoul government as saying there were recordings of the broadcasts, but that they were virtually indecipherable. The Foreign Ministry said its Asian affairs director, Kimio Fujita, was going to Seoul next week for a trade conference, and would seek explanations of how the Kim death report came about. But the South Korean national daily Joong-ang Ilbo, quoting Defense Ministry officials it did not identify, said there are no tape recordings, "the newspaper quoted officials as saying. Both Koreas maintain loudspeakers at the DMZ, primarily to broadcast propaganda and music. Lee Min-woo, president of the South Korea's opposition New Korea Democratic Party, was quoted as saying today the government should produce evidence "to recover its lost prestige." The Korea Times, independently owned, said there were two theories of what may have happened, one involving an abortive coup attempt by "old guards" in the North Korean military opposed to Kim Il Sung's plan to pass power to his son, Kim Jong Il, 45.

New tax form unveiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 million workers are about to have their first encounter with the new overhaul of the federal income tax. Within the next several days, employers across the nation will begin receiving supplies of a revised Form W-4 that every worker is required to file to adjust the amount of taxes that will be withheld from paychecks once the new law takes effect Jan. 1. The sooner the form is filed, the better for most workers, says the Internal Revenue Service. Under the law, employees have until Oct. 1 to complete the form, but a person who waits that long could face a penalty for having too little withheld earlier in the year. Whatever simplification is expected from the new tax law, it is not evident in the new W-4 forms. The old form and its instruction covered two pages; the new version, unveiled by the IRS at a news conference Tuesday, covers four pages and includes a 22-column table of figures.

Government urges safety in toy buying

By Randolph Schmid
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consider whether those darling toys beckoning from the store window are safe and sturdy before buying them as Christmas gifts, federal safety experts are urging. "Nothing should spoil one of the real highlights of this time of year — the sight and sound of children happily playing with their new toys," Consumer Product Safety Commission Chairman Terrence M. Scanlon said Tuesday, at the agency's annual Christmas toy safety news conference. "Most parents are pretty careful of what they buy, but still there is a need for annual reminders, added Barbara Bush, wife of Vice President George Bush. "In spite of all that's been done through the years to make toys safer, the final responsibility always rests with parents," she said. "It's up to us to shop wisely and to evaluate the safety of the toys we're buying our children and grandchildren before we bring them home," said Mrs. Bush. Scanlon stressed choosing the proper toy for children of various ages, and announced that the Consumer Commission has issued two new pamphlets to help parents do this. Entitled "Which Toy for Which Child: A Consumer's Guide for Selecting Suitable Toys," the booklets come in versions for ages birth through 5 and for ages 6 through 12. They can be obtained, at no charge, by calling the commission at 800-438-2772, or writing the Office of the Secretary, Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C. 20207. Scanlon noted that if this year is equivalent to last, Americans will spend more than $7 billion on toys between Halloween and Christmas. That amounts to more than half of all toy sales during the year, making it an especially important time to concentrate on buying safe items, said Scanlon. Some 123,000 children were treated in hospital emergency rooms for toy-related injuries last year, Scanlon said. Most of the injuries were minor cuts and bruises, but 22 accidents were fatal, including incidents of children choking on small toys or parts, tramping on crib toys and being run over by vehicles while riding tricycles and other toys. The Safety Commission's event stressed general safety concerns and was co-sponsored by the Toy Manufacturers of America, a trade group. In contrast, the consumer affairs committee of Americans for Democratic Action will hold its annual toy safety event in a couple of weeks. That group singles out specific toys it considers both good and bad, either for reasons of safety or taste.

Evangelist with eye on presidency says he's no 'straw man'

By Donald M. Rothberg
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Rev. Pat Robertson, trying to build support for a presidential campaign, says he often is portrayed as a "straw man" that makes him appear as a single-issue candidate.

"People are responding to me as if I were a caricature," Robertson said Tuesday at a luncheon with The Associated Press.

"I am simply astounded by the lack of information that there is about who I am and what I've done," said the TV evangelist and founder of the Christian Broadcasting Network.

Robertson has said that if 3 million people pledge to September 1987 to work for his election he will seek the 1988 Republican presidential nomination. He said Tuesday that since he appealed for that show of support in September, he has received about 10 percent of the pledges he seeks.

He also is asking people to send $100 with their pledges, but said not all are doing so.

Robertson said that the issues in his campaign would be reduction of the federal debt, dealing with trade deficits, maintaining a strong defense and his concern for "the moral climate of our nation."

Like President Reagan, Robertson is a strong opponent of abortion and an advocate of school prayer.

When asked why he thought he would have more success as president implementing a conservative agenda than Reagan has, Robertson replied, "With all due deference to the president, he hasn't had my experience out on the street with the people."

He said Reagan "doesn't have the liaison I have out in the black community and the Hispanic community."

Robertson said he has spent 25 years working with blacks and Hispanics in literacy and other social programs.

"I believe I could be successful building bridges to the leaders of these communities instead of setting up antagonisms," he said.

While saying "I don't know that there's necessarily been confrontation" between the Reagan administration and minorities, Robertson did not reflect either my views or my abilities."

He complained that he has been "presented as a narrow-issue or single-issue candidate and that is just not the case."

added, "I think the black leaders feel that. It may be in error that they feel it, but nevertheless, there is that feeling."

As for the political impact of that impression, Robertson said that in this year's Senate elections, in which the Republicans lost eight seats and control of the Senate, "91 percent of the blacks voted against the Republican candidates."

Robertson said that as he tries to build support for a presidential campaign, "people are responding to me as if I were a caricature, a straw man that was set up that does not reflect either my views or my abilities."

Delco strike shuts down GM plants
DETROIT — General Motors Corp. said it sent about 3,000 workers home Tuesday when assembly lines in New Jersey, Kentucky and Delaware ran out of parts from a strikebound Delco Electronics factory.

The automaker said it would shut down two Detroit plants until further notice and eliminate the first shift at another Detroit factory Wednesday because of the parts cutoff. The three plants employ 7,340 workers.

About 7,700 members of the United Auto Workers went on strike on Monday, following a price tumble Friday in New York.

"It's a typical knee-jerk reaction," he said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose against the Japanese yen for the third straight day to close at 162.50 yen, compared with Tuesday's 162.45. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 163 yen.

Firm can trace value of stock

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

QUESTION: After closing my account at a major brokerage firm, I asked for a stock certificate I had given the broker several years ago. The broker said that since the stock is in the brokerage firm's name "and is now worthless, there is no way we can submit the certificate to be transferred to your name."

He added that if I request the firm to take the stock off its books, "our New York office will send you a letter for your records, declaring the stock worthless."

Other than taking the brokerage firm's word for it, how can I determine if the stock has any value? Since companies are sold, merged and otherwise reorganized, is there any sure way to tell me what happened to the company whose stock I own?

ANSWER: You can try R.M. Smythe & Co., 24 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10004. That firm, the best source I know for tracing old securities, charges $20 for each U.S. company and $25 for each foreign company.

can be listed as having a "zero" value as of Dec. 31 of the year in which it lost all value.

The ticker is that you are supposed to report that loss on the return you file for that particular year. If that happened before 1986, you can file an amended return — Form 1040X — back for seven years.

QUESTION: On Feb. 24, 1985, I paid $100 for 1,000 shares of stock. I lost track of this stock and, over the years, have attempted to trace it by writing to the bank that formerly was its transfer agent and to various brokers.

In 1982, I finally received a written reply from a brokerage firm. It stated the stock is offered at one-tenth of a cent and has "no bid at present." What is the significance of "no bid"?

ANSWER: It means that no one is willing to buy shares of that stock — at any price. That makes your stock worthless.

You can take a $100 capital loss by filing an amended income tax return for 1982, the year in which the brokerage letter showed it had no value and the year in which you assumed it lost all value.

A word of caution: If the IRS questions your amended return,

Logging sales

Ken Meyer, quality controller at American Lincoln Homes in Battleground, N.C., inspects his firm's new Frostline log before shipment. The thicker, tighter, tongue-and-groove log was developed in anticipation of an unusually hard winter. Log home sales are rising and 50,000 families are expected to spend approximately $1 billion to buy log homes this year, the company said.

Business In Brief

Value of dollar slips in trading

LONDON — The dollar fell against most major currencies in early trading today. Gold prices moved up in what one dealer described as a knee-jerk reaction to sharp falls earlier in the week.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $392.30 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $391, but fell back later. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $391.50.

In Zurich, the bid price was $391.75, up from $390.50 late Tuesday.

One London dealer said the market experienced "a little bit of reaction on the upside" after its sharp fall below $400 an ounce in Europe on Monday, following a price tumble Friday in New York.

"It's a typical knee-jerk reaction," he said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose against the Japanese yen for the third straight day to close at 162.50 yen, compared with Tuesday's 162.45. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 163 yen.

Takeover fever on Wall Street cools

By James F. Peltz
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Wall Street's takeover fever is rapidly cooling because of the government's widening investigation into insider stock trading.

Investors dumped several takeover-related stocks Tuesday in large part because of fears that the investigation might weaken the market for "junk bonds," the high-yield, high-risk securities often sold to finance major acquisitions.

The silicon takeover issues also pushed the broader stock market into a severe decline. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plunged 43.31 points on Tuesday to 1,817.21, its fourth largest point loss.

Should the junk-bond market run into trouble, investors reasoned, it could be a harbinger for corporate suitors to obtain financing for takeovers. And that might lead to takeover-related stocks Tuesday in large part because of fears that the investigation might weaken the market for "junk bonds," the high-yield, high-risk securities often sold to finance major acquisitions.

The silicon takeover issues also pushed the broader stock market into a severe decline. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plunged 43.31 points on Tuesday to 1,817.21, its fourth largest point loss.

Milwaukee.

The junk-bond market was jolted specifically by widespread reports that the investment firm Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., the dominant underwriter and market maker of the securities, is being investigated by the Securities and Exchange Commission as part of its probe of insider trading.

The SEC reportedly wants to know any ties Drexel might have with Ivan Boesky, the takeover speculator who last Friday settled government charges that he engaged in insider trading.

As part of his settlement, Boesky, 49, paid a $100 million penalty and agreed to help the SEC with its investigation.

The SEC does not comment on investigations in progress, but Drexel confirmed it was subpoenaed by the SEC and was cooperating fully with the agency. Drexel has declined further comment on the case.

Wall Street is worried that Drexel's involvement in the case might disrupt the firm's junk-bond business and thus hinder its clients' ability to quickly raise the necessary financing for takeovers.

Drexel's executives, however, have said they are confident of its ability to continue its current and planned corporate financing efforts.

Still, the market for junk bonds that already have been issued also felt the impact of the Drexel reports, as prices of many of the bonds fell for the second consecutive day, traders said.

All the right moves

Digital Equipment Corp. technician Ted Gaj uses two pistol drills to "teach" a robot the moves required to do painting jobs in Westfield, Mass., recently. Once the robot, nicknamed "Eve," has been walked through the routine, it can continue to do the painting on its own. The Westfield plant has a second robot, whose nickname is "Adam."

Financing for Lear buy proves elusive

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) - Wickes Cos. Inc. said difficulties in getting bank loans may prevent its $1.7 billion acquisition of aerospace and manufacturing conglomerate Lear Siegler Inc. Wickes said Tuesday it sent a letter to Lear Siegler saying it had "thus far been unable to arrive at a satisfactory agreement with its prospective bank lenders" to finance the deal. The company said Tuesday it will continue to seek funding through other sources "but it is not optimistic that it will succeed in these efforts."

Michael Strick, a Wickes spokesman, said the company's financing troubles resulted from an insider-trading scandal that has rocked Wall Street in recent days, making many investors unwilling to buy high-yield "junk bonds" often used to finance corporate takeovers. Wickes declined to elaborate on the brief statement issued from its Santa Monica headquarters. On Nov. 12, Wickes agreed to acquire Lear Siegler for $93 per share in cash. Wickes made its Friday bid unconditionally after Lear Siegler had become the target of a hostile takeover bid by AFG Partners, a combination of American International, Irvine, and Midland, Texas-based oil company Wigan & Brown. AFG Partners indicated previously that the Wickes deal collapsed, it would resume efforts to buy Lear Siegler at a lower price and sell off some of its components. Lear Siegler makes sophisticated aircraft systems, automobile seats, suspension systems and windshields, Smith & Wesson handguns and Cal and

Week is typical for TV ratings

NEW YORK (AP) - Plenty of viewers dropped in Sunday on "Fresno," CBS' comedy miniseries, but many of them were packing their bags before the end of the first two hours. In last week's prime-time A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings, ABC's "Moonlighting," "Who's the Boss" and "Growing Pains" recorded all-time highs and made the top 10, but NBC continued its even decline for the eighth week in the network news ratings race. The week was typical - no elections, no championship sports.

"The Cosby Show" was in first place and the rest of the top 10 was dominated by NBC's other half-hour comedies. NBC averaged a 17.4 prime-time rating, followed by CBS with 15.8 and ABC with 11. Each rating stands for 4.0 million homes in television.

"Fresno," a takeoff on such nighttime soaps as "Dynasty" and "Dallas," started with a 38 percent share of the audience in the first half hour of the two-hour first installment Sunday, but only a 29 share remained in the last half hour.

A share is the percentage of the viewing audience. Viewers apparently departed for less satiric climes over on ABC, where the movie "Sudden Impact" starring Clint Eastwood edged up during the evening, starting with a 25 share and ending with a 33. "Fresno" airs one hour each night through Thursday.

DeLaine Erickson, a Cumberland seamstress, has praised Bordeaux for providing work. "All our farm income is tied up with the Farmers Home Administration," she said. "My income is what we live on before working for Bordeaux. We are now self-supporting. But some seamstresses say the work is difficult and that they are underpaid. Connie Jorgensen told a congressional hearing that she earned about $1.85 an hour, stayed up all hours and that her children had to help her finish her work. Each piece takes an average of between 15 minutes and 50 minutes to complete although seamstresses are given a mixture of assignments, with workers determining their total workload, said Negley. "Home-work is not for everyone."

Union may force garment jobs to Mexico

By Roger Munns
The Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa - Three women whose cottage industry grew into a multimillion-dollar business say a union may force them to move jobs to Mexico with allegations that their use of home workers violates anti-sweatshop rules. Bordeaux Inc., founded by Jean Negley, Bertha Turner and Julie Lisle in Clarinda six years ago, has blossomed from a tiny cottage industry into a major wholesaler of jogging suits, with sales of $3.5 million expected this year. The two former teachers and a decorator said they formed the business because they were "bored" with their jobs and needed "dough," hence the name "Bordeaux." The backbone of the company is the piecework by 100 to 150 women, many of their wives of farmers, who work at their own sewing machines attaching appliques to jogging suits that sell in exclusive boutiques for about $70. The women receive $2.45 per item, with fast workers earning up to $9 an hour, some employees said in letters written to the U.S. Department of Labor in support of the company. The New York-based International Ladies Garment Workers Union says Bordeaux is violating a 43-year-old anti-sweatshop rule prohibiting the manufacture of some women's clothing in the home, and has threatened to sue if the federal government does not take action. "It just doesn't seem fair that you can make men's clothing at home and not women's clothing," Negley said, adding that the company did not know about the rule banning some home work before the union complaint. "Make a shirt buttoned one way it's legal and the other way it isn't," she said. "It's so ridiculous."

Bordeaux, which says its local payroll is about $1 million a year, has threatened to export its jobs to Mexico if the union wins the battle. "It's the last thing we want to do," Negley said in a telephone interview last week, adding that the company has set up a factory at Clarinda in southwest Iowa but that most workers prefer to sew at home. "We haven't been able to save the family farm, but we've put food on the table," she said. Susan Cowell, spokeswoman for the 250,000-member union, said in a telephone interview that Bordeaux's piecework exploits workers. "The employer doesn't have to pay overhead. There are no paid vacations, no benefits," Cowell said. "Women work long hours and in the end they may earn less than the $3.25 an hour minimum wage."

Labor regulation was designed to protect workers, even from each other, she said. "If one worker says, 'I want to work for $1 an hour, it hurts other workers. What the Bordeaux situation means to us is the fear and desperation for work.'" Jim Valvi, assistant administrator of the Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division, said the case had drawn large numbers of letters from both sides. While the department will not tolerate

Parkade sale means a mall, merchant says

By John F. Kirch and George Lyng
 The Manchester Herald

The section of the Manchester Parkade shopping center surrounding Sears is scheduled to be sold today to a three-man partnership that plans to enclose the structure and turn it into a mall, an informed source said this morning.

The source, a Parkade merchant who asked that his name not be used, said he did not know the sale price.

One of the three people who will purchase the popular strip shopping center on West Middle Turnpike is Amran Oron, the merchant said, but he did not know the names of the other two partners or where any of the three are from.

The sales agreement is scheduled to be signed later today, the source said. Officials with the Cutter Operating Corp., the Parkade's landlord and part owner, could not be reached for comment.

Cutter owns the West Middle Turnpike side of the Parkade, which contains the Sears store, a D&L department store, a Channel Home Center and other smaller stores. The Broad Street side of the shopping center is owned by the Boston-based Wilder Manley Associates, Parkade officials have said.

The sale of the Sears side of the Parkade would end months of speculation by merchants at the Parkade, who have said repeatedly that a developer was interested in purchasing the large shopping center. Since last winter, rumors have spread throughout the Parkade that Cutter would be selling. However, until today nobody knew who the potential buyer was.

"This is a new owner who wants to upgrade the shopping center," the source said. "It's what we've needed. It's going to give us new life ... and increase the traffic coming to the shopping center."

He said he has met with the
