FEDS NAB SCHIZOID CON SITTING WITH ATTORNEY

Docs say man has 24 faces

By Richard Cole
The Associated Press

MIAMI — William Milligan, a dangerous mental hospital escapee with up to 24 personalities, was in federal custody Friday after FBI agents nabbed him in a posh Key Biscayne bar as he talked with his attorney.

Milligan, 31, was found innocent by reason of insanity in 1978 of raping three women in the Ohio State University area in Columbus. He also had been charged with kidnapping and robbing the women.

"We considered him armed and dangerous, but there was no incident and no resistance in connection with the arrest" Thursday night, Miami FBI spokesman Paul Miller said Friday. "I think he was surprised we found him."

U.S. Magistrate Patricia Kyle on Friday ordered Milligan held without bond on a charge of unlawful flight to avoid confinement. She set a Dec. 1 hearing for his removal to Ohio, but federal Public Defender Kenneth Swartz said he was trying to work out a way to get Milligan back to Ohio as quickly as possible because he needs treatment.

Japan volcano bursts open, forcing thousands off island

TOKYO (AP) — Thousands of people fled a small island south of Tokyo on Friday after a volcano burst open, spewing rocks and flames and sending molten lava toward the island's largest town.

There were no reports of injuries directly related to the eruptions, but an elderly man died of a heart attack en route to a rescue vessel, police said.

The volcano, Mount Mihara, began rumbling last Saturday on Oshima island, where 11,000 people live. Shortly after 4 p.m. Friday, the volcano started spewing bright orange flames from several openings, including a 600-yard-long fissure on the side of the mountain. Giant plumes of black smoke shot two miles into the sky.

The eruptions were accompanied by hundreds of earthquakes, some of them major tremors.

"There was a sudden blast and then another and in a matter of about 15 minutes, there were three (erupting areas). I didn't know what was happening," said Tsugumichi Matsumoto, an Associated Press photographer who was about 500 yards from the mountain.

"The jolts from the eruption and the earthquakes were beyond words," an elderly resident told Japanese television. "It was like being on a boat all day," added an elderly woman, also a resident.

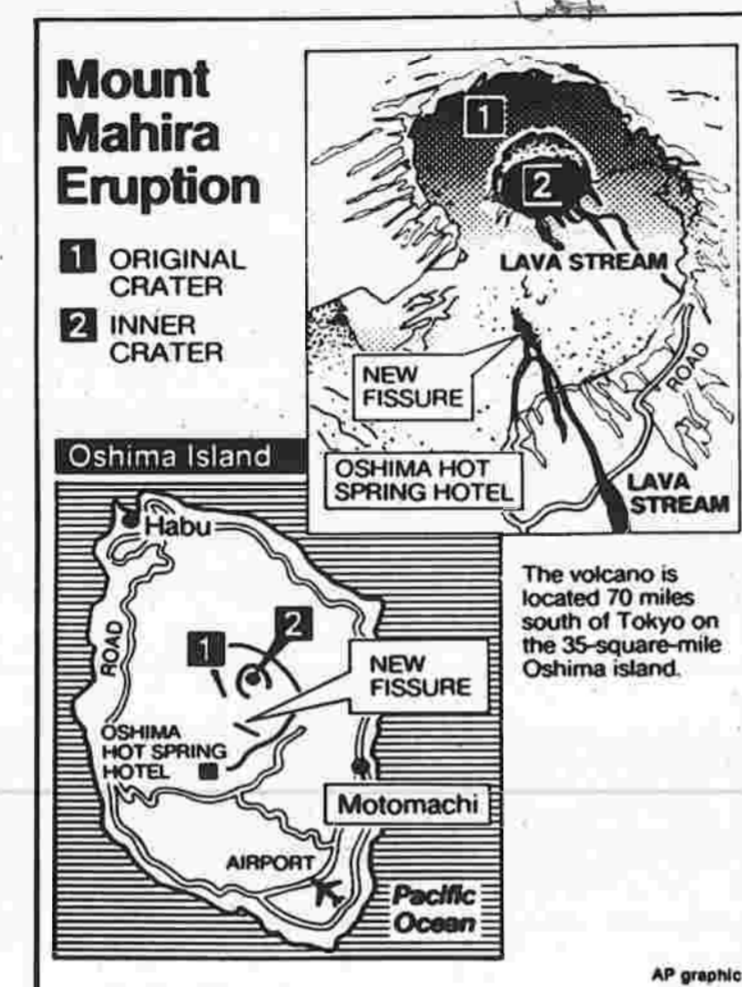

Molten lava flowed toward Motomachi, a town several miles west of Mount Mihara, said a police official who spoke on condition of anonymity. About one-third of the island's residents live in Motomachi.

The official also said about 40 forest fires were reported.

Authorities ordered the evacuation of everyone on the 35-square-mile island, which is 70 miles south of Tokyo. In addition to the 11,000 residents, an undetermined number of tourists also were on Oshima.

Police said that about 8,000 people had left in rescue boats and that evacuations would continue through the night.

more than two dozen vessels to evacuate residents.

"Those crowded onto the ships seemed stunned," said Matsumoto. One evacuee, 74-year-old Iwazo Aoki, died of a heart attack while being taken by ambulance to a rescue vessel.

Police said about 120 riot police were sent to the island to help with the evacuations.

Japanese television interrupted regular programming for several hours to broadcast live footage of the eruption, showing bright orange flames spewing from a line along the mountain.

Close-up shots taken by a helicopter and an unmanned camera showed fountains of fire and explosive bursts of flames resembling fireworks shooting simultaneously from several openings in the 2,349-foot-high mountain.

Volcanic rock was hurled about 600 feet into the air, and the Central Meteorological Agency reported black smoke reached more than two miles high.

Schizoid nabbed as he sits talking in bar with attorney

Doctors had testified at his Ohio trial that Milligan suffered from a disorder which gave him as many as 10 personalities. In a 1981 book about Milligan, writer Daniel Keyes claimed Milligan had 24 distinct personalities, including those of women and children.

Milligan, ordered confined to the Central Ohio Psychiatric Hospital, walked away from it July 4.

FBI agents in Miami were tipped off by the Columbus FBI, which had been tracking Milligan around the country, said Miller.

He denied the escape was traced through Ohio Public Defender Randall Dana, who was sitting with his client in the bar of the Key Biscayne Hotel when agents walked in.

"The defense attorney and the FBI were each just as surprised to see each other," said Miller. But he said Dana knew Milligan was an escapee and should have reported his whereabouts.

The fact that Dana was with Milligan has been brought to the attention of the FBI office in Columbus, which in turn will discuss it with the U.S. Attorney's Office there, said Miller.

Dana, who represented Milligan in numerous court appearances, said he was in Key Biscayne for a legal conference when Milligan called him.

Town votes to keep gallows

DOUGLAS, Wyo. (AP) — West-ern Justice, the sort delivered with a tight noose and a short drop, went on trial Friday as residents decided that a gallows built for Douglas' centennial should remain on display as a tourist attraction.

Built from rough-hewn logs as part of the central Wyoming city's celebration earlier this year, the gallows divided residents, so the local newspaper decided to conduct a referendum.

The tally completed Friday evening by the weekly Douglas Budget showed that 491 people favored leaving the structure in the middle of Douglas' business district, with 138 in favor of its removal.

"I'm tickled," said Peter Mike Curtin, a leader of the Wild Bunch, a group of Douglas businessmen who built the gallows. "We had a lot of good support. This is a ... good community."

But Curtin's jubilation may be short-lived.

Merwin Moore, Casper District engineer for the Wyoming Highway Department, said his department may seek a court order calling for the removal of the gallows, which is on a highway right-of-way.

"I had spoken to him on the phone and told him I would be in Miami if he needed me and I gave him the telephone number to the hotel," The Miami Herald quoted Dana as saying.

Dana said Milligan had called him since the escape, "but I had no idea where he was."

He said Milligan called his room 15 minutes after he checked in. They met and talked for only a few minutes before the FBI agents walked in, Dana said.

C. Dan Miller, the psychiatric hospital superintendent, said Milligan was not considered dangerous and lived in a ward that allowed residents to leave if they followed established procedures.

Milligan was committed to the Lima, Ohio, State Hospital for the criminally insane after being transferred in 1979 from a mental health center in Athens, Ohio. He later was moved to a home in rural Athens County and was due for a sanity hearing that could have freed him.

However, he was charged with vandalism in November 1984 for driving a vehicle from which a shot allegedly was fired at the property of a mental health center supervisor.

Milligan was placed in psychiatric custody in Columbus while awaiting trial. Charges were dismissed in 1985, but Milligan was ordered to stay in the hospital.

Three days after his escape, he released videotapes to Columbus news media, saying he left the hospital because he feared for his safety and was confused about contradictory statements by his doctors about his medication.

Erotic arts draw crowds to London auction house

LONDON (AP) — London's first-ever auction of erotic art, for adults only, drew a packed audience and bidders who mostly preferred to remain anonymous.

Bonham's auction house stopped short of offering plain brown wrappers for goods purchased, but it did check with Scotland Yard's vice squad before holding its "Sale of the Erotic Arts" on Thursday.

Buyers from throughout the world eyed an array of suggestively shaped ancient oil lamps, decorated chamber pots, books by the Marquis de Sade, loving cups, paintings, drawings, prints and a Roman marble panel fragment depicting what the catalog described as "close encounters of a sexual kind."

Other items included a Japanese "pillow book" of explicit pictures given to wedding couples and miniature carvings showing lovers in athletic sexual positions.

Bonham's spokeswoman, Isabel Glenny, said the only complaint came from bidders who thought the erotica wasn't erotic enough.

Such sales are common in continental Europe, but it was something new for London. A guard was posted at the door of the saleroom in Knightsbridge district to make sure no one under 21 came in.

"Of course, on the Continent they have always had a much more grown-up attitude to this sort of thing than we Britons," Miss Glenny told The Associated Press.

"We got in touch with Scotland Yard some weeks ago and spoke to an inspector in the vice squad who gave us guidelines for the sale," she said.

"He told us to use our common sense and exclude bestiality, the degradation of women or anything involving children. We did have some things like that, but we returned them to the owners because we didn't regard them as art or of sufficiently good quality."

The top-priced item was an 18th-century Chinese export porcelain teapot with lovers painted on it. It sold for $3,666.

Eight unframed etchings of lovers, published in Paris in 1932, brought $1,156.

The sale fetched $31,000 for 160 lots. "We are very happy with that," said Nicholas Bonham, managing director.

"We always knew it wouldn't be a highflier, but it's been a lot of fun and everybody enjoyed themselves. We might hold another one next year," he said.

Man who killed as kid hangs himself at work

WAYLAND, Mass. (AP) — A former town official who stirred headlines when it was learned that as a child he had killed a playmate has now committed suicide, and friends said Friday he had never forgiven himself for the crime.

The body of Albert Thompson, 32, the former executive director of the housing authority in this Boston suburb, was found hanging by an electrical cord from a drain pipe in the basement of the Sweet Sis Cheesecake Co. in Newton, where he worked as an assistant to the manager. His death Wednesday night was ruled a suicide.

"We all knew he was suicidal," said Marion Powers, administrative assistant at the housing authority. "He had a lot of friends that care about him, but I don't think he knew it."

"He just couldn't forgive himself," said Patricia Nichols, who had been his assistant at the housing authority. "He couldn't accept it."

Housing Authority members knew Thompson's background when he was hired and supported him when his past became public. Differences with Thompson over how his job should be performed led to the board voting 4-1 not to renew his contract in May.

But Thompson told The Associated Press in June that his firing stemmed from pressure the board came under because of his past.

In 1967, Thompson had killed 6-year-old Mark Dupuis by stabbing him 26 times. Thompson, who was 12 at the time, said he lost control after a stray flip of the knife in a game of mumblety-peg hit the boy's chest and he would not stop crying.

Thompson went to reform school for the killing, then drifted for years before getting a job running a prison pre-release program in New Hampshire. He returned to his hometown 18 years after the murder and was hired in June 1985 as the housing authority's executive director. He became involved with tenants' organizations and a local theater, where he landed a bit part in a musical earlier this year.

But rumors about his past began to circulate and hate mail began to arrive at the theater, his car window was smashed and residents in the town of 12,000 people began to question why the housing board had ever hired him.

Although he initially denied knowledge of the boy's death, Thompson decided to tell his story last year to dispel the rumors.

"The publicity just made him more aware of what was going on inside him. I think if he could have forgiven himself, the publicity wouldn't have bothered him," said Ms. Nichols.

A friend from Voke's Theater said Thompson was upset about his new job when he saw him two months ago at auditions for a new musical.

"He went through a very tough time but he seemed to have overcome at least some of the problems that were associated with the incident," said Robert Gibson Sr.

Newton police Lt. James O'Donnell said he did not know if a note was found. Ms. Smith, who discovered his body, was not in the shop Friday, which was closed, said a woman who answered the phone.

Thompson's family declined to discuss him or the death. "Nobody wants to tell you anything," said a woman who identified herself as Mrs. LaRochelle and answered the telephone at the home of Thompson's mother, Shirley LaRochelle.

Friends had often tried to persuade Thompson to seek counseling, but he never seemed to stay with it for more than a few sessions, said Ms. Powers. "I think facing it was just too painful," she said. "He was an actor and he just put up a wall around himself."

Child killer agrees to talk about two missing children

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — The lawyer for child killer Ian Brady said Friday his client agreed to talk to police searching for two children he and his lover are suspected of murdering more than 20 years ago and burying near other victims on the Yorkshire moors.

Drifting snow on the moors forced police Friday to suspend their hunt for the remains of the children. Police sought government permission to take Brady's one-time lover, Myra Hindley, from her prison cell to help locate the remains.

Brady, 48, was convicted in 1966 of killing three children whose bodies were found on the moors, while Miss Hindley, 43, was convicted in two of the murders. Both are serving life sentences, with Brady in a hospital for the criminally insane.

Police believe Brady and Miss Hindley, known as the moors murderers, killed Pauline Reade, who was 16 when she disappeared in 1963, and Keith Bennett, who disappeared the next year at age 12.

Miss Hindley said this week that she was distressed by a letter from Bennett's mother and used photographs and maps of the moor to point out to police possible gravesites for the two children. She hinted that Brady killed them alone.

Her disclosure prompted police to begin a search for the remains Thursday, using trained dogs. They used white tapes to mark out more than one square mile of Saddleworth Moor, 12 miles from Manchester. Police said the search would resume Monday.

Officials at the Home Office, responsible for prisons, conferred Friday with Manchester detectives and later said no decision had been made on whether to take Miss Hindley to the site.

Brady's lawyer, Benedict Binberg, said his client has full access to radio, television and newspapers and has been highly conscious of the renewed publicity given the case.

After talking with Brady by telephone, Binberg told The Associated Press, "He said he would talk to police providing I am present."

Manchester police said a senior officer expects to interview Brady next week.

Binberg said of his client, "He was quite coherent and sounded quite cheerful. It does somewhat weigh (on him) the fact that there is so much media interest in this."

Graphic compares specifications of the Hawk surface-to-air missile and TOW heavy anti-tank missile. U.S. arms shipments to Iran, including 2,000 anti-tank and 200 anti-aircraft missiles, were more than previously published estimates.

CIA director defends secret sales of arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William Casey defended President Reagan's secret arms sales to Iran on Friday before disbelieving lawmakers, and a senior GOP senator said the president needs "to bring in some big leaguers to run things" at the White House.

House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas, after hearing Casey's report, said Iranians paid $12 million for the weapons they received, including 2,000 anti-tank weapons. Wright, the likely speaker of the House when Congress convenes in January, said "several other countries" besides the United States and Israel had been involved in shipping weapons to Iran, but he declined to identify them.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, asked whether Poindexter was going to quit, replied, "I haven't heard him say so." Asked whether Reagan wants his national security adviser to remain in his post, Speakes said, "I'm sure he wants him to stay on the job."

But pressure seemed rising in Congress for a change in personnel at the White House. Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., outgoing chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters at a breakfast that the Reagan White House "... is not falling apart. But it needs to be strengthened. They need to bring in some big-leaguers to run things."

Lugar later said in an interview that Reagan's credibility had been damaged by the controversy, and "a good common-sense prescription for the president to end all this would be for the president to admit it was all a mistake."

Democrats maintained intense criticism of Reagan's secret sale.

Wright said a law permitting the president to withhold information from Congress about covert operations is "clear and unambiguous."

"I don't think there is any question that the law has been broken," he said after the two-hour meeting with Casey. Wright said 1,000 of the 2,000 anti-tank TOW missiles shipped to Iran were assembled last February in San Antonio.

U.S./World in Brief

Shultz admits talk on Iran

OTTAWA — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Friday that he took part in two "full-scale discussions" last winter on the secret U.S. policy toward Iran, but continued to distance himself from involvement in the affair.

He also denied a report in Friday's Los Angeles Times that he asked President Reagan to fire Adm. John Poindexter, the White House national security adviser and one of the chief architects of the arms sale to Iran.

Shultz has expressed opposition to the plan to send military equipment to Iran and has said previously that he had only "fragmentary knowledge" of the operation. Giving a bit more detail Friday, he said, "There were discussions and I participated in two of them that were full-scale discussions."

Aquino's cabinet under attack

MANILA, Philippines — The military chief of staff asked on Friday that several Cabinet ministers be fired for incompetence, piling further pressure on a government faced with a growing polarization between the left and right.

An adviser of President Corazon Aquino, meanwhile, claimed the CIA might have been involved in recent political violence, but he offered no proof. The U.S. Embassy issued a statement stressing Washington's "unequivocal support" for the Aquino government.

Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, the military chief of staff, said after a 90-minute meeting with Mrs. Aquino that the military urged changes in her 9-month-old Cabinet.

No tests, so no drug agents

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Customs Service said Friday it is instituting a hiring freeze for 3,000 positions involving narcotics interdiction because a federal judge overturned the agency's employee drug-testing program.

Customs Commissioner William von Raab said in a statement filed in U.S. District Court in New Orleans that the hiring, part of the Reagan administration's and Congress' stepped-up war on drugs, "cannot go forward at this time without drug screening."

He said the agency wants to test incoming agents in sensitive positions for drug use to protect the integrity of the Customs Service's drug interdiction efforts.

Woman opens fire in court

PHILADELPHIA — A distraught woman who had filed a harassment complaint against her former boyfriend opened fire in a City Hall courtroom Friday, wounding him and a court employee, authorities said.

"I heard a bang, bang, and ducked," said Common Pleas Court Judge Matthew Coppolino.

Court officer Ramona E. Beverly was shot in the lower side, and was admitted to Hahnemann Hospital in stable condition, said hospital spokeswoman Leslie Clossy. Defendant Ricky Stephenson, who was grazed on his hand, was treated and released.

A sheriff's deputy subdued Diane Brown, who had filed the criminal complaint against Stephenson. She was crying as she was taken into custody, witnesses said.

Seven held in corruption probe

CHICAGO — Seven people, including two aldermen, were indicted Friday in an FBI investigation of alleged City Hall corruption that employed a high-rolling "mole" who sought to buy influence in the awarding of city contracts.

The charges are the first to be brought in the case and include racketeering, mail fraud, extortion, federal income tax violations and federal firearms violations, according to U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas. He praised Mayor Harold Washington for his cooperation in the inquiry, dubbed Operation Incubator, and said the investigation continues.

The indictments centered on payments to past and present officials made by Systematic Recovery Service Inc., a New York-based bill-collection agency, and Michael Raymond, a convicted swindler and con man who operated as the company's Chicago representative.

Robert Krauser of Greenwich holds his "Viralizer," which he says is the next best thing to a cure for the common cold. It's a hand-held device which emits a warm stream of air which, when directed into the nose, can reduce the duration of a cold, Krauser says.

Cure for common colds: You blow it up your nose

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — It looks like a hair dryer, but you point it up your nose, and despite pooh-poohs from some immunology experts, its inventor says his device is the closest thing to a cure for the common cold.

Securities analyst Robert Krauser invented the Viralizer in 1982 and formed a company, Viral Response Systems of Greenwich, Conn., to market it. Then, he said, he added a mist of decongestant or anti-bacterial spray to increase the Viralizer's odds at fighting colds.

The hand-held device looks like a hair dryer and even sounds like one but is intended to relieve symptoms of the unbeatable common cold, Krauser said. Krauser said the device, which measures 2 1/4 inches by 6 inches and costs $32.95, is expected to be sold in stores early next year. While initial models will use wall outlets, Krauser said another model is in the works that could be plugged into a car's cigarette lighter.

It follows in the footsteps of zinc, medicine-soaked paper handkerchiefs, grandma's chicken soup and other alleged cold remedies of yore.

But Krauser contends his device is the best, zapping cold-causing viruses with a spray of hot air.

Cold viruses cannot survive temperatures of more than 115 to 120 degrees, Krauser said. By directing a stream of warm air into the nostrils, people can reduce the duration of a cold, he said.

"That would bake your nose," said Dr. Robert Goldstein, chief of clinical immunology and immunopathology at the National Institutes for Health's allergy and infectious disease division.

By the time cold symptoms appear, the virus that causes them has spread from the nose to other parts of the body, Goldstein said in a telephone interview Thursday from his Bethesda, Md., office.

Even if the Viralizer kills cold germs in the nose, it can't reach other infected parts of the body, he said.

"If it really worked, we could all go into the steam room tomorrow and cure the common cold," he said.

Krauser called Goldstein's criticism "absolutely not true," saying that the cold virus only lives in the nose, and that his device is effective because it stops germs there.

Krauser has received permission to market the device from the Food and Drug Administration, "not on the basis that it would do anything medicinally, only that it would provide heated, humidified air," said Carolyn Derrer, deputy director of the FDA's Division of Anesthesiology, Neurology and Radiology Devices.

Dr. Allan Aven, an Arlington Heights doctor acting as technical adviser to Krauser, is testing the device and estimates that 90 of about 100 of his patients who were treated with it have been relieved of their cold symptoms.

"The first time you use it, you'll have relief. Each time you use it, the relief will be more and more extensive. Why do you think chicken soup works? You lean over the bowl and inhale boiling water," he said.

"What I can envision is a Viralizer hooked up to a (car) cigarette lighter—a guy going to work on the expressway and trying to get rid of the cold before he gets to work," he said.

But Dr. Elliot Dick, professor of preventive medicine at the University of Wisconsin Medical School in Madison, expressed skepticism.

Ruby's rabbi: Oswald faced 'Texas justice'

GREENWICH (AP) — Jack Ruby meted out "Texas justice" when he shot the accused assassin of John F. Kennedy 23 years ago in Dallas, says a rabbi who became Ruby's confidant.

"He did this in a fit of anger and passion," said Rabbi Hillel Silverman. "He was a great patriot and he thought he was doing a great favor for the people of the United States. He was doing justice, Texas justice, to a terrible man who had shot his beloved president."

Silverman, 61, has headed the Temple Shalom in Greenwich the past six years, but on Nov. 22, 1963 he was at the Dallas Trade Mart with about 500 other community leaders awaiting Kennedy's arrival at a luncheon. Ruby was a member of his Dallas congregation.

"It was a nightmare, and I don't really think about it anymore," Silverman told The Time newspaper of Greenwich in a copyright story published Thursday.

As Ruby's confessor, Silverman is convinced that Ruby acted alone and not as part of a conspiracy when he shot Lee Harvey Oswald.

"He was very neurotic, very psychotic. A number of times (in prison) he would go off the deep end in a very neurotic way. He would start accusing everyone of conspiring against him. He would duck under his table when he heard sirens outside."

On the night of the assassination, Silverman led a sabbath service at Temple Shearith Israel, where he had been rabbi since 1954. He recalled greeting Ruby after the two-hour service ended.

"To me it was very curious. Here everyone was in tears, the president of the United States had been assassinated, and he says, 'Thanks for visiting my sister.' I didn't think it peculiar at the time. But when I think back about it, that's where his mind was. He wasn't functioning on all of his cylinders," Silverman said.

Later that evening, Ruby stopped at the Dallas Police Department, where Oswald was being held. Ruby claimed to be an interpreter for an Israeli newspaper. On Sunday, Nov. 24, 1963, as Oswald was being transferred, Ruby fatally shot him in the abdomen with a .38-caliber revolver.

"He always carried a gun because he would empty the nightclubs' cash registers at night," Silverman said. "He told me he didn't know they were transferring Oswald that morning. He didn't even know it. He thought he (Oswald) was already transferred. He saw people gathered ... he got right in and that's when he did it."

Silverman said the Ruby was upset by the thought of trial for Oswald in which Jacqueline Kennedy, the president's widow, might have to testify. Ruby thought "he had done something great for America."

"He said, 'How could they do that to that poor woman with two little children. I am going to prevent that from happening.' It began to dawn on him later what a terrible mistake he had made."

Ruby was sentenced in Oswald's death by a Dallas jury on March 14, 1964 and sentenced to die in the electric chair. An appeal was filed, but before it was acted upon, Ruby died of cancer Jan. 3, 1967 at the age of 56.

Silverman believes there was a miscarriage of justice in Ruby's case. He said Ruby's attorneys erred when trying to argue that Ruby suffered the effects of brain damage and epilepsy.

The attorneys, Silverman said, should have said, "Look, he felt like any American felt. He was appalled and in a fit of passion he thought he was doing the right thing."

Silverman recently was in London to take part in the television production, "The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald." The courtroom drama was produced for Showtime Cable. Silverman was on hand as a defense witness, but was never called upon.

Reflecting on his involvement in the tragedy, Silverman said, "The whole thing is bizarre. It was a fluke that I was connected with Ruby. He just happened to be in my congregation. Someone had to befriend the poor guy. I felt sorry for him."

Did utilities pass the test?

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — Authorities said Friday they will scrutinize the performance of the state's big three public utilities in restoring electric and telephone service knocked out during this week's snow storm.

John T. Downey, chairman of the Department of Public Utility Control, said the agency will review the performance of Northeast Utilities, United Illuminating Co. and Southern New England Telecommunications Corp. as soon as all services are restored.

A snow storm on Wednesday knocked out electricity to more than 210,000 people and about 4,600 telephone customers. As of 6 p.m. Friday, all but about 5,000 Northeast Utilities customers were back on service, NU officials said.

The utilities were ordered to prepare storm emergency response plans after lengthy delays in restoring service to all customers after Hurricane Gloria in 1985.

"This storm provided the first real test of those plans," Downey said Friday. "I believe it is appropriate to ask how well they worked in an actual crisis situation."

Generator fumes kill two

NEWTOWN (AP) — The deaths of two elderly Newtown residents is being linked to a portable gasoline-powered generator used in the wake of a storm Wednesday that left more than 200,000 Connecticut electric utility customers in the dark.

The bodies of Oliver Hull Sr., 74, and Eisele Pieron, 73, were found Thursday in their home in the Sandy Hook section of Newtown after a neighbor suspected a problem and called police, dispatcher Steven Munger said.

Munger said the two apparently had been asphyxiated by fumes from the generator which was located in the basement-garage area of the home. He said the generator had been in use since the home lost power Wednesday morning.

Connecticut in Brief

Leak caused Stamford blast

STAMFORD — Stamford fire investigators said an explosion that blew apart a steel building at a chemical plant was caused by a leak of highly flammable fumes from a faulty machine valve.

Fire Marshal Stuart Hulbert said the blast at Isis Chemicals Inc. was caused by "mechanical failure, not human error. It was an accident."

The machine was breaking down about 20 gallons of three chemicals — acetone, methyl ethyl ketone and toluol — when the leak occurred Wednesday, Hulbert said. The chemicals are made by the company to make nail polish and lacquer for wood furniture. No one was injured.

O'Neill rethinks open primary

HARTFORD — With Democrats back in control of the General Assembly beginning in January, Gov. William A. O'Neill says he hasn't decided whether to go ahead again with a bill to open primary elections to unaffiliated voters.

If he does, he says he'll propose — as he did when the GOP was in control — that all primaries be open, not just those at the top of the ticket as Republicans prefer. "I'll certainly be sitting down and talking to the Democratic leadership about that issue, to see how they feel about it," O'Neill told reporters this week. "It'll be from the top to the bottom, or not at all."

A suit filed by the Connecticut Republican Party against the O'Neill administration is now pending in the U.S. Supreme Court.

Fargo suspects may get out

HARTFORD — Lengthy delays awaiting trial are unconstitutional and bail should be set for two of the defendants in the Wells Fargo robbery case, a federal judge has ruled.

The decision by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York Thursday said that waiting in jail for 18 months to be tried would be unconstitutional.

The court put much of the blame on the federal government and prosecutors for failure to speed up the process.

U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said he was certain the government would "seek an appropriate review," which could involve asking the U.S. Supreme Court to delay the appeals court ruling while a formal appeal is filed.

Petition seeks SNET probe

NEW HAVEN — More than 3,000 people have signed a petition asking utility regulators to investigate service during an eight-week strike at Southern New England Telecommunications Corp., a labor leader says.

Frank Carrano, president of the Greater New Haven Central Labor Council, said the petitions were mailed to the state Department of Public Utility Control on Thursday.

Carrano said the signatures are evidence of wide dissatisfaction with SNET's service during the strike that ended Nov. 7.

SNET spokesman Michael Gomez said "the overwhelming majority" of SNET customers were not affected by the strike and that the estimated 3,500 signees were a minority of SNET's 1.3 million customers.

Three of four back in jail

NEW HAVEN — Three of four New Haven men who escaped Thursday from a courthouse cellblock by overpowering two deputy sheriffs are back in custody, police said.

Detective Nicholas Franco of the New Haven Police Department said Friday that Vernon Cowan, 17, and Shawn Robinson, 16, were apprehended Friday on the street and taken into custody without incident. Nathan Teague, 20, turned himself in to the Connecticut State Corrections Facility in New Haven, Franco said. He said Leroy "Jock" Harris, 26, remained at large.

New Haven County Sheriff Henry Healey said the escape occurred when one of the deputy sheriffs was jumped as he brought one of the men into a cell occupied by the three others. A second deputy sheriff was knocked to the ground when he came in to help, Healey said.

The two deputy sheriffs were not seriously injured, officials said.

Kym Zorn, 15, holds her pet Haitian boa constrictor, Grendel, who disappeared four weeks ago in the family's Louisville, Ky., house. Grendel turned up in a pile of towels, but Kym's mother didn't know it and dumped the load in the washer. Grendel got the works — and he survived.

Boa bright after spin in washer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Except for a few bleached-out spots, Grendel the boa constrictor looked as bright and shiny as ever after a spin through the family washing machine.

"I think what saved him was I didn't use permanent press," said Nancy Zorn, whose daughter, Kym, owns the 5-foot snake.

"I guess I just threw Grendel in with all the white things," she said.

Kym, 15, said she wasn't alarmed when Grendel got out of his aquarium about four weeks ago because "I knew when the weather turned cold, Grendel would turn up in some warm place." Like a pile of laundry.

He looked all right after the washday adventure, Kym said, "except he was due to shed his skin and it all balled up at the bottom. I guess it was the agitator cycle that did that."

"He was real clean," she said.

Grendel did exhibit some post-spin-cycle trauma. For the first few minutes after his release he stood up — straight as a stick — about three feet off the floor.

A South Windsor woman fractured her wrist in a four-car accident on Chapel Road Wednesday afternoon.

Marie Comtois, 38, was treated and released from Manchester Memorial Hospital. The accident occurred after her car, traveling south, skidded off an icy curve on Chapel Road, spun around and was struck in the rear by another skidding car, operated by Elizabeth M. Avedisian of Windsor, police said.

A third car, operated by Kathleen M. Frattaroli, 22, of 17 Columbus St., skidded on the same curve and struck the front of Comtois' car. A fourth car, operated by Mary M. Shatz, 31, of 21 Kenwood Road, Vernon, skidded into Frattaroli's car.

No charges were made in the accident.

Woman hit by tree sues town

A Dale Road woman intends to sue the town of Manchester for injuries she suffered in May when a tree fell at the intersection of South Alton Street and West Middle Turnpike, causing power lines to come crashing down on her car, according to papers filed at the Town Clerk's office on Thursday.

Virginia A. McGill suffered "burns to her neck; scarring; strain and strain to the lumbar spine ... headaches and a severe shock to her nervous system," according to the papers, which were filed by her attorney, Hartford lawyer Norman Ebenstein.

The notice said McGill intends to sue the town because the tree that fell "was completely rotted."

Icy standoff

Scott Van Hatten, 16, looks like he would rather be anywhere else after his car slid on icy pavement and hit a transformer pole in Marcy, N.Y. Friday. He was not injured but was forced to stay in the car a half an hour until utility crews rendered the transformer harmless.

Roadblock yields no new leads

Manchester police questioned motorists at roadblocks at two Spruce Street intersections Friday night as they continued their investigation into the murder of a Vernon teenager.

Twelve officers from the department's detective division and two patrol officers set up the roadblocks at the Spruce Street intersection with Bissell and Birch streets from 8:30 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Lt. Russell Holyfield said police were asking motorists four questions and showing them a photograph of Michael S. Linders, 17. Linders was found dead Nov. 14 behind the apartment building at 125 Spruce St. The death was ruled a homicide after medical examiners determined that Linders had suffered a fractured skull, apparently caused by a blunt object.

Holyfield would not discuss details of the investigation, except to say that police hadn't learned anything new from Friday's roadblocks. He also asked that the questions not be listed in the newspaper, adding that naming them might hurt the investigation. Holyfield said that Linders had spent a lot of time in the Spruce Street neighborhood. Police had combed the area last week, interviewing residents.

"People are creatures of habit," Holyfield said. "We're looking for people who had a reason to be here last Friday night."

"This is kind of textbook police work you're looking at," he said.

Turnpike resident unhappy with scaled-down road plan

By George Lavin
Herold Reporter

The head of a neighborhood group fighting the reconstruction of Tolland Turnpike criticized Friday a scaled-down plan worked out by the Democratic majority on the Board of Directors.

Under the plan, much of Tolland Turnpike would not be widened, a bikeway and sidewalk would not be built and much of the road's rural character would be preserved.

But Catherine Lankford, who heads the North Manchester Property Owners Association, said she's not pleased.

"A lot of the questions haven't been answered," said Lankford. "I think they're trying to appease us."

In particular, she said, the proposal does not mention whether utility lines will be installed along the road. Nor does it address the amount of traffic that will use the street if a proposed mall is built in northwestern Manchester, she said.

Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg said Friday that under the Democratic proposal, sidewalks would not be built until they are needed. She said residents will be allowed to decide whether they want to install sidewalks now, with the understanding that if they are built later, property owners will have to pay part of the cost.

Town Manager Robert Weiss sent letters this week to about 85 Tolland Turnpike residents, asking them if they want the sidewalks. Weinberg said she expects the town to receive most of the responses within two weeks. She said the Democratic directors will go along with what a majority of the respondents want.

Lankford said she will not return the questionnaire because she said there is no specific plan for when sidewalks would be installed.

At a public hearing held in September, most of the property owners along the road strongly criticized the plan to install the sidewalk. Under the original proposal, sidewalks would run along the southern side of the road from the intersection with Tolland Turnpike east to the Jesters Court restaurant.

Manchester Public Works Director George Kandra said Friday that if the sidewalk were built later, those with property abutting the sidewalks would have to pay one-third of the cost, with the town covering the remainder. He said the current cost of installing a sidewalk is $5 per square foot.

The other aspects of the original plan called for widening the right-of-way from 50 feet to 60 feet, installing an 8-foot-wide bike path on the north side of the road, and redesigning the intersection of Tolland Turnpike and North Main Street. The federal government is expected to pay for 85 percent of the $5.5 million project, which is to be finished by 1991.

Weinberg said under the Democrats' plan, the right-of-way would be kept at 50 feet for the entire length of the road "as much as possible." She said that would mean no property would have to be taken, except where the road is widened.

One of those areas is at the intersection of Tolland Turnpike and North Main Street, Kandra said. He said that will require moving a historic home at nearby 755 N. Main St.

Lankford complained that the proposal does not specify if and how the road itself would be widened. She feared that the road could still be widened and property taken within a 50-foot right-of-way.

The property owners' association hired Manchester attorney Bruce Beck in October to consider legally challenging the road reconstruction. Lankford said that there are no immediate plans to file a lawsuit, although the group wants to make sure that there are no dramatic increases in Tolland Turnpike traffic.

The group includes about 50 households. Lankford said the group hopes to meet with the town directors.

MARKET REPORT

Activity over the past 30 trading days

One pact can't stop 10,000 more layoffs

DETROIT (AP) — Negotiators tentatively settled a strike Friday at a General Motors parts plant in Indiana, but not soon enough to prevent the automaker from laying off an additional 10,000 workers at four assembly plants, a company official said.

The additional layoffs starting Monday bring to 47,550 the number of non-striking workers idled by the parts plant walkout.

If the tentative agreement is approved when the 7,700 striking workers vote Saturday afternoon, some could be called in Sunday to fire up furnaces and start parts production, Delco Electronics spokesman Bill Draper said.

But it probably would be Monday afternoon at the earliest before the General Motors Corp. subsidiary begins shipping essential parts such as radios, heater controls and computer components to auto assembly plants, Draper said.

The Thanksgiving holiday means GM will have only three days to work on getting parts to the plants that need them, said GM spokesman John Grix.

The workers to be laid off starting Monday include 3,700 at a Kansas City, Mo., assembly plant; 2,000 at a Truck and Bus group plant in Shreveport, La., and 2,500 at a similar plant in Moraine, near Dayton, Ohio. About 1,800 workers at a Truck and Bus group plant in St. Louis will come in Monday but will be laid off as soon as the plant runs out of parts, said GM spokesman Frank Cronin.

"They've completely exhausted the (parts) pipeline," Grix said, adding that company officials were trying to figure out how long it would take to return to full production at the affected plants.

The agreement came about 2 a.m. Friday after a 17-hour bargaining session between negotiators for Delco Electronics and United Auto Workers Local 292, which represents the striking workers, said GM spokesman John Mueller. Details of the agreement were not disclosed pending the ratification vote.

Local 292 President Ron Cassis predicted strikers would approve the proposal. "I don't think the negotiating committee would have accepted anything less than what we were looking for," he said.

GM told 37,550 workers to stay home Friday as a strike-spawned parts shortage idled plants in Michigan, Kentucky, Missouri, Ohio, Kansas, Delaware, New Jersey and Indiana. More than 16,500 of them had been laid off Thursday and the rest were told to stay home starting Friday.

"We knew that we could shut them down," Cassis said. "It wasn't the fact that we wanted to shut down all (GM) divisions, but just that we had some issues that we wanted to settle."

Some laid-off workers expressed support Thursday for the Delco walkout, which stemmed from a dispute over subcontracting and transferring radio production to Mexico.

"Even if it's going to hurt me, we've got to start sticking together as a union or forget it," said Jim Dolinger, laid off from his job at the Willow Run, Mich., plant.

The plant ships parts to GM assembly plants as they are ordered, so little or no inventory of the parts existed when the strike began Monday.

Some say trade scandal was good for the market

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's insider trading scandal sent a strong jolt of trauma and anxiety through the stock market this past week. And some traders believe the experience was just what the market needed.

They said the scandal was prompting a fundamental change in attitude and strategy among investors — back to basics, and away from the temptations of fast-and-easy joyrides in the takeover game.

Looking at the numbers, Friday's close was not all that different from where it was the previous Friday.

But what came in between was something else again: two wild swings of trading that included the Dow Jones industrial average's fourth worst plunge in history — a 43.31-point drop on Tuesday.

That came after a 13.07-point slide on Monday, but the net loss of 56.38 points was followed by a three-day rally that left the closely watched index at 1,893.56, up 19.97 for the week.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose .22 to 140.94, but the American Stock Exchange market value index fell 3.68 to 262.95.

Volume on the Big Board jumped to an average of 172.11 million shares a day, compared with 147.39 million the previous week.

The dizzying ride was sparked by a Securities and Exchange Commission announcement — after the close of trading last Friday — that Ivan F. Boesky, Wall Street's best-known and richest arbitrator, had agreed to settle insider trading charges.

The agency said Boesky would pay $100 million and plead guilty to one felony count that could send him to jail for five years. He also will be barred from the U.S. securities business.

By Tuesday there had also been reports that Boesky had secretly recorded his conversations — implicating other as yet unidentified Wall Street figures for SEC investigators — and that Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., the leading investment banking house specializing in corporate takeovers, was also the target of at least two investigations.

Worried that the growing scandal could spread to some of the other major investment firms that back takeover deals, — and concerned some of the deals might not even go through, traders rushed to sell the "deal stocks" that had become the market's main support over recent months.

In the beginning, the rush to sell brought the rest of the market down, too. But that began to change by midday Wednesday, when instead of selling just about everything, traders began moving into blue chips, buying more on strength than rumor or speculation.

"What the Boesky thing did was to take complacency and turn it into fear overnight," said Ralph J. Acampora, technical analyst for Kidder, Peabody & Co. "That alone may have done us a favor."

Although the market was gripped by a heavy mood of pessimism and uncertainty in the beginning of the week, Acampora said this also set the stage for the rally — "and you got a flight into quality."

At E.F. Hutton & Co., analyst Hildegard Zagorski called the Boesky affair "a plus for the market."

"For the past three or four months, it has been nothing but a junk market. Rumor after rumor after rumor. There was very poor leadership," she said. "We needed an end to that speculative excess, and the Boesky thing put a damper on that."

Ed Nicoski, chief technical analyst at the Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood securities firm in Minneapolis, agreed, but for a slightly different reason.

"At 1,900, we needed a 'correction' to build a base for the next move upward," he said. "The Boesky affair gave an excuse to do that."

Nicoski and Ms. Zagorski both said that they believed the correction — Wall Street's term for a decline — would have happened with or without the Boesky development.

Nicoski said he believed prices had just gotten too high, and, in lacking direction, were getting ready for a fall.

Ms. Zagorski said she thought the speculative binge would have died down simply because the year is running out, and with it, time to benefit from some of the tax advantages for takeovers that will be lost with the new tax law.

Tax law confuses lawyers

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Tax lawyers who understand the new federal tax code probably won't be spending the holidays with their families.

The code's changes are so drastic that businesses are clamoring for help as they struggle to meet a Dec. 31 deadline in order to get a tax break later, says a University of Bridgeport law professor.

"The 1989 tax code was deemed the most complex piece we've ever had, and each additional law has been equally as complex," said Stuart Filler, who also has a taxation consulting practice. "But this '86 one takes the cake."

Under the latest code, the tax implications of many investments "are turned 180 degrees and if people go plodding along making decisions based on the old bill, they'll make major mistakes," Filler said. He said there is a huge demand for tax lawyers and accountants who understand the tax code because there are two aspects of the new law that make it especially difficult.

First of all, he said, there are a number of changes coming in 1987 and 1988 that make it advantageous for some people to complete certain business transactions this year to get a tax break later. But since the code was just signed into law in October, people are rushing to make last-minute tax decisions.

"This means individuals and corporations have to make significant decisions and execute them before Dec. 31, which is when all transactions for 1986 have to be completed," Filler said.

"Investment lawyers are sleeping two hours a day and they won't spend Thanksgiving or Christmas with their families because the consequences of missing the deadline is extremely significant," he said.

Once the lawyers get their clients through this phase, they have to educate them on how to invest in 1987, he said.

"And in 1988 the Treasury is supposed to report back to Congress on how corporations ought to be taxed and that could cause another major change," Filler said.

Filler also said there are holes in the 962-page code, which means no one knows what some of the new laws are, and therefore it's difficult to advise clients.

"Because of the political nature of the process, this bill delegates to the secretary of the Treasury the responsibility... to legislate by filling in the holes," Filler said.

Comic Jerry Colonna dies after long illness

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry Colonna, the mustachioed, saucer-eyed comedian who made more than 12 overseas tours to entertain troops with Bob Hope during three wars, died Friday of kidney failure following a long illness. He was 82.

Colonna died at 4:19 p.m. at the Motion Picture and Television Country House and Hospital in Woodland Hills, with his wife, Florence, by his side, said nursing supervisor Michelle Patterson.

Colonna appeared in a number of light comedies with Hope, including "Road to Singapore" in 1940, "Star Spangled Rhythm" in 1942 and "Road to Rio" in 1947. "He was a dear friend, a great entertainer whom I traveled all over the world with for 25 years," Hope said in a statement issued through his spokesman Ken Cantor.

"He provided millions of laughs for millions of people," Hope said. "He delighted the entire world with his unique style of comedy — a great loss to the entertainment industry. I'll miss him."

Cantor said Hope, 83, would preside at Colonna's funeral, but no date was immediately set for the services.

A native of Boston, Colonna started as a trombone player, but turned to comedy because of his saucer eyes, walrus mustache and bellowing voice. After a stint in nightclubs and musical revues, he signed a radio contract with Hope in 1938 and remained with him for 25 years, until he first became ill, Cantor said.

Cantor said Colonna made about a dozen overseas trips with Hope, appearing as a sailor for Navy audiences, a GI for Army crowds and a flier for Air Force shows. "He appeared in all these guises in the audience. They all loved him, as did the public," Cantor said.

Other pictures featuring the antics of Colonna included: "52nd Street" in 1937; "College Swing" and "Little Miss Broadway" in 1938; "Naughty but Nice," 1939; "Comin' Round the Mountain," 1940; "Sis Hopkins" and "Ice Capades," 1941; "True to the Arm" "Priorities on Parade" in 1942; "Atlantic City," 1944; "It's in the Bag," 1945; "Kentucky Jubilee," 1951; "Meet Me in Las Vegas," 1956; "Andy Hardy Comes Home" in 1958, and "Road to Hong Kong," 1961.

Colonna also appeared in "The Bob Hope Vietnam Christmas Show," which was originally made for television, but was later released in theaters in 1966. He is survived by his wife, of Woodland Hills, and his son, Robert, of Providence, R.I.

JFK kin quietly mark 23rd death anniversary

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy family is remembering President John F. Kennedy privately this weekend, the 23rd anniversary of his assassination in Dallas, a spokeswoman for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Friday.

Melody Miller said Sen. Kennedy and Ethel Kennedy, widow of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, went to the gravesites of the two slain brothers on Thursday and then participated in a ceremony for winners of the Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights Award.

Thursday would have been Robert Kennedy's 61st birthday.

Ms. Miller said Sen. Kennedy planned to visit the graves at Arlington National Cemetery again Saturday and then go to Massachusetts to be with his mother, family matriarch Rose Kennedy. Other family members also are likely to go to the cemetery Saturday, the anniversary of the president's death, she said.

President Kennedy was assassinated on Nov. 22, 1963, as he rode in a motorcade in Dallas. Robert Kennedy was slain in June 1968 in Los Angeles, where he was campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination.

OPINION

Seat-belt law does the job

The repeal of seat-belt laws in Massachusetts and Nebraska earlier this month is sure to bring about a serious push in Connecticut to doom the state's 11-month old belt requirement.

Indeed, one group that contends mandatory seat-belt laws violate motorists' privacy is already calling for an end to the requirement that all front-seat occupants must wear seat belts.

"The people of our society have been brainwashed for over 20 years now on the alleged safety benefits of seat belts," said David Solan, director of the Citizens Coalition Against A Mandatory Seat Belt Law. Solan went on to say that while seat belts can provide some measure of safety in some instances, "at other times and under other conditions, they are stupid and virtually suicidal."

Statistics released earlier this week by state police simply don't bear out such claims, and efforts to repeal the state's belt law should be fought by all those who care about the staggering death and injury toll on Connecticut highways.

Since the state's seat-belt law took effect in January, serious injuries to front-seat occupants have dropped 20 percent, even though the number of automobile accidents has increased, state police say.

Although the death toll increased during the comparison period from 110 to 114, police say injuries have been less serious "and more people are walking away from accidents."

While it would not necessarily be accurate to conclude that the reduction in serious injuries is due entirely to the use of seat belts, the statistics certainly indicate that seat belts do help and do not produce the kind of injuries predicted by belt opponents. Police estimate the overall compliance rate in the state is about 69 percent.

Whether motorists like it or not, the federal government has ordered that future cars have some type of passive restraint system — either belts attached to the door that fasten around the occupant when the door is shut or air bags, which are extremely costly and pose some dangers not found in safety belts. The order will not take effect if states containing two-thirds of the nation's population enact seat-belt laws.

The statistics this week should give motorists a clue as to which system they are better off with. Connecticut's seat-belt law has proven its worth and should not be repealed.

Vidiots have too much clout when it comes to elections

By Chuck Stone

The '86 elections and subsequent political developments are depressing proof that TV has turned this democracy into a "videocracy."

It's bad enough that a national obsession with electronic images has caused test scores to decline and reading comprehension to wither, and relegated American students to the back of the cognitive bus among industrial nations.

A major factor in the recent challenge to Democratic Sen. Robert M. Byrd's claim to be majority leader had been his dismal TV performances.

I'm no fan of the West Virginia ex-Ku Klux Klansman. (If Kurt Waldheim's Nazi past is not forgiven, why should Byrd's former KKK involvement be shrugged off?)

But no one should ever have considered denying Byrd a position to which he is entitled because of his TV image. Patch him up with cosmetics, and give him speech lessons.

THE NOVEMBER ELECTIONS almost became a non-event after two of the major networks — ABC and NBC — announced they would not provide "wall-to-wall" coverage.

"The Election Night That Wasn't," read a tongue-in-cheek Washington Post headline, reminding us that if all three TV networks don't announce simultaneously that an event is happening, "It ain't happening."

CBS hung in there with "wall-to-wall" coverage and came in dead last in the ratings. CBS learned the hard way that "Greater than the tread of mighty armies is an idea whose time has come."

No idea has arrived with more irreversibility than the networks' concession that "Moonlighting" and "Matlock" must not be replaced by returns from Massachusetts and Maine.

ABC and NBC simply authenticated what TV really is and always has been — home-based theater wrapped up in a minstrel show inside a situation comedy systematically interrupted by animated Barbie dolls reading news stories.

Don't misunderstand me. I'm no print-media purist.

I'VE HOSTED TWO TV shows and appear occasionally as a guest on TV news shows. Like death and taxes, TV is a permanent certainty in our lives.

That historical certitude may be the main reason why the San Francisco Examiner is standing like King Canute before the ocean, commanding the tides not to advance.

Confronted with a catatonic circulation, the paper's publisher, William Randolph Hearst III, decided to fight the videocratic invasion.

Hearst struck a blow for liberty (and literacy) by saturating San Francisco with newspaper ads, billboards and TV commercials, all ridiculing TV as an apostle of ignorance.

And it is indeed. Studies document that the more TV kids watch, the lower their test scores are. The statistical correlation between TV-watching and low grades is almost perfect.

"Television is not too bad for your brain," declared one ad.

ANOTHER DEPICTED two immaculately coiffed blond, blue-eyed Barbie dolls, with the caption, "These people have everything it takes to be an award-winning TV news team."

My favorite is the billboard that laments: "A TV writer is an oxymoron." But Hearst won't win his battle.

He picked the worst of all possible cities for his stand against the invasion of the videocrats.

If any one American city is fastidiously dedicated to total immersion of the senses in 24-hour hedonism, it is this charismatic Gomorrah by the Bay, where reading is slowly disappearing as one of the last treasures of our civilization.

But at least we can thank William Randolph Hearst III for alerting us to the tragic shift from learning by reading to enjoying by watching and reminding us that TV "cannot raze yur intelygents."

Embassy communications could be cut

WASHINGTON — In the world's troubled spots, U.S. embassies are the eyes and ears of the president. Yet many of these vital outposts could be prevented from keeping Washington informed in a crisis because of the vulnerability of their communications systems to terrorism, civil strife, natural disasters or technical breakdowns.

A State Department survey of 34 embassies identified nine posts with a "high risk" of communications interruption. Twelve others were classed as "medium risk."

The high-risk category includes such crucial embassies as Cairo, Seoul and New Delhi. Among the medium-risk embassies are those in Mexico City, Hong Kong, Bangkok, Buenos Aires and Madrid.

The State Department's concern is no theoretical speculation. One of the high-risk posts is in Manila. A high-ranking government communications official told our associate Donald Goldberg that during the tense days last February, as embattled President Ferdinand Marcos was deciding whether to flee into exile or stand and fight, Washington could communicate with the Manila embassy only through the Philippine government.

THE INTERNAL State Department report points out that many embassies in the high-risk category are in areas of poor security because of terrorist activity or political strife.

Jack Anderson

In addition, routine problems like labor unrest and the lack of even rudimentary security at local telephone companies contribute to these embassies' vulnerability.

The most important embassies can communicate without going through local government or telephone networks, but the report notes a problem here: Interruption of service at a "gateway" — a satellite terminal where signals are received, or the point at which a phone cable enters the host country — may effectively isolate the post. And such interruptions are not unheard of.

During a recent 14-month period, 274 outages on commercially leased circuits were found to have occurred. The largest number — 97 — were caused by technical problems, and the outages lasted for an average of 20-plus hours, with at least one continuing for more than six days.

Most of the remaining outages were also technically related. But in 26 cases, State Department investigators suspected that the host countries were responsible for the interruptions. In six cases, weather was to blame: typhoons, hurricanes and minor flooding.

IN ONLY ONE CASE could the blame be placed definitely on a military coup; in another, there was an identified security breach, and in a third there was a problem with the coding equipment.

One solution the State Department is studying is an increased use of satellite transmissions directly to the embassies, which would bypass local phone companies. The most reliable satellites, of course, would be those owned by the host countries, but this would necessitate formal agreements that would probably be hard to get — and these satellites are usually not designed for international transmissions anyway.

That leaves commercial satellites operated by international consortiums, but their reliability has been less than satisfactory on several occasions in the past.

The internal report noted two other problems with reliance on direct satellite transmissions: "Earth terminals are susceptible to sabotage or natural disasters," and Third World phone companies, usually government-owned, would probably object to the loss of revenue from the U.S. embassies' accounts. "This could result in restrictions on the post to prevent direct satellite service," the report points out, "or the negotiation of payments to offset the revenue loss."

SEMINARS and exhibitions to stir renewed interest in Pound have been held from Maine to Italy.

Resentment is rising among Egyptian oilfield workers in Iraq, and many are quitting and heading home despite the high wages that they're giving up. The trouble, according to State Department sources who are keeping an eye on the situation, is that Iraq, effectively bankrupt after six years of war with Iran, is putting strings on the paychecks it gives to the Egyptian workers. Instead of being sent home — where they are badly needed by the workers' families, and welcomed as a source of hard currency by the Cairo government — the paychecks must be held in Iraqi banks.

Pound revisited

We've reported on the unsuccessful campaign by admirers of the poetry — if not the politics — of the late fascist, anti-Semitic poet Ezra Pound to have his remains buried in the United States to mark his 100th birthday last year. Pound, who made propaganda broadcasts for Mussolini in World War II, expressed a dying wish to be buried in his birthplace, Halley, Idaho. But the volatile poet was too controversial when he died in 1972, and was interred on the "isle of the dead" in Venice, Italy.

For years his tomb was adorned with only a simple stone marker and the stray bouquet. Now a determined effort is being made, both in Italy and this country, to rehabilitate the poet.

His friends and admirers have placed handsome signs directing visitors to his grave in the Protestant section of the Venice cemetery, and have decorated the site with ivy, a large shrub, grass and a perpetual flame.

Seminars and exhibitions to stir renewed interest in Pound have been held from Maine to Italy.

Reagan should hear truth about business

WASHINGTON — During a single half-hour recently, the Associated Press transmitted, in almost uninterrupted succession, five stories that reveal a great deal about the nation's economy:

Robert Walters

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — BankAmerica Corp. has announced that it intends to shed up to $8 billion in assets. BankAmerica, the nation's largest banking concern after New York's Citicorp, has lost more than $1 billion in the past 18 months.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — General Electric Corp. said Tuesday it will close its color television tube manufacturing plant here in July 1987, eliminating 790 jobs. GE also said demand for color television has not kept pace with worldwide competition, especially from Japan and South Korea.

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's trade surplus with the United States hit a record $5 billion in October, the Finance Ministry said Tuesday. Brisk sales of Japanese cars and business machines boosted Japanese exports to the United States in October to $7.5 billion.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — International Business Machines Corp. said Tuesday it was closing a parts distribution center in Greencastle, Ind., displacing 985 workers, in the biggest closing of a facility in company history.

DETROIT (AP) — A Ford Motor Co. plant, believed to be the last to produce small agricultural tractors in North America, will be closed by 1988 and its work transferred to Europe to cut costs, the automaker said Tuesday. The tractor plant in Romeo, Mich., employs 650 hourly and salaried workers.

These events are part of a larger pattern. Less than one week before, for example, General Motors disclosed plans to close 11 plants employing 29,000.

In mid-1983, President Reagan appeared to understand the need for national leadership to strengthen U.S. manufacturing. He established the President's Commission on Industrial Competitiveness, a panel of 30 business, labor, government and academic leaders.

After completing work in late 1984, the commission warned that "at stake is our world leadership, our national security and, most importantly, our legacy of opportunity for future generations."

Among the panel's conclusions: "U.S. productivity growth lags far behind that of our competitors... U.S. leadership in world trade is declining... Nations of the Pacific Rim and elsewhere are producing high-quality, attractively priced products — in direct competition with our own successful industries."

While stressing that "the ability to compete lies primarily within the private sector," the commission said major government initiatives were needed to enhance industrial competitiveness in both domestic and export markets.

Those proposals included a national trade policy, a reduced rate of government budget growth and establishment of two new cabinet-level departments — one in charge of science and technology and another to promote international trade.

But Reagan now seems oblivious to the fact that, in the 1980s, the leading threat to national security is trade competition. Instead, he persists in waging a Cold War struggle against the Soviet Union.

In addition, the president and his advisers are so committed to the "free market" as the solution to all economic problems that they automatically reject any calls for government intervention.

Finally, the commission's tough assessment of this country's severe problems conflicted with Reagan's that, under his leadership, the economy was booming.

As a result, he disowned the commission and its work. The report was released quietly at the Commerce Department instead of with fanfare at the White House. Unfortunately, the fundamental problems cannot be as readily dismissed.

Thoughts

"That which is morally wrong can never be politically right." There are many times in the life of a nation when the need for justice and honor becomes the need of the hour; when the personal integrity of every individual citizen becomes a standard that determines our future destiny. That moment is when each and every one of us must make a choice upon entering the voting booth to cast our ballot.

Such an occasion has just passed. When moral values are taught, understood, accepted, and acted upon by the majority of our citizens, the vision spoken of in the book of Revelation shall become a reality.

Great and wonderful are thy deeds, O Lord. God the Almighty! Just and true are thy ways, O King of the Ages! Who shall not fear and glorify thy name, O Lord? For thou alone art holy. All nations shall come and worship thee, for thy judgments have been revealed. (15:3-4)

Come join us in giving thanks together.

DON'T SPEND Thanksgiving alone. Come have Thanksgiving dinner with us at St. James School cafeteria at noon. Meet new friends or bring a friend. This will be a sit-down dinner with fruit and cheese platters, fruit salad, beef soup, turkey and ham, yams, mashed potatoes, carrots, peas, homemade breads, pies, cakes and cookies — all made and served by the wonderful folk at St. James.

There will be entertainment and gifts for all. Everyone is welcome. Tickets are free and can be obtained from the MACC Department of Human Needs, Center Congregational Church. For a ticket, or if you do not drive, call 643-4129 and make a reservation.

Baby Boomers are returning to churches in significant numbers, according to a recent study, the results of which appeared in newspapers this week. This is a reversal of a trend seen in the late 60's and early 70's. Increased church attendance is evident only among those who have married and are raising a family.

The foregoing is good news to religious people, for it heralds a revival of faith and involvement in the American people. At that, however, only a little more than 40% attend religious services in a given week.

"If a man's religion won't take him to worship meetings, it's doubtful it will take him to heaven." Evidently absenteeism was a problem in first century Christianity — "Let us not give up meeting together, as some are in the habit of doing," Hebrews 10:25. Our Lord desires that we assemble each week on the first day to break bread (the Lord's supper), Acts 20:7.

Carl alerts us to winter

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Joe Diminico
Activities Specialist

Storm Carl passed through Connecticut Wednesday and certainly alerted all of us in bold fashion that winter has finally arrived. Besides depositing up to 9 inches of snow, many homes were left without power. Consequently, seniors are encouraged to do the following:

- Dress warmly with natural fibers and keep the thermostat at 70 degrees to prevent hypothermia.
- Avoid snow shoveling regardless of how light the snowfall. Every year many seniors die while shoveling snow. Please pick up a snow shoveling list at the center.
- Obtain an energy kit at the center, compliments of Northeast Utilities. Kits contain weatherization materials to prevent drafts and save fuel.

If you need fuel assistance for the winter months, contact Betty Markee, CRT outreach worker, at 647-3095.

Speaking of bad weather, seniors are reminded that all activities at the center are canceled when school is canceled. The office will be open for business purposes. Individuals should listen to WTIC, WDRG or WKHT if in doubt.

The center is collecting canned food items for people in need during the holiday season. If you would like to donate food or money to those less fortunate, please stop by the center. All items should be received no later than Dec. 18.

People who missed the driver education class Nov. 19 because of the weather are reminded that the class makeup will be this Tuesday at 12:30 p.m. In addition, there are still openings for the driver class Dec. 2 and 3. The fee for the course is $7, payable only by check made out to AARP and dated Dec. 2. Those completing the class will receive a 5 percent reduction in their insurance premiums.

PLEASE MAKE NOTE of the following Thursday programs:

- Nov. 27 — Closed. Happy Thanksgiving.
- Dec. 4 — Bennet Junior High Choral Group — Birthday party for Peter Peppertus (100th).

Senior Citizens

The center is contemplating a weekly round dancing and ballroom dancing session. If interested, sign up in the front office.

Pool players interested in participating in an "eight ball tournament" are asked to register downstairs in the Recreation Hall. The tourney will begin when the pairings are filled.

The Health Department will sponsor a program Dec. 1 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. entitled "Coping with the Holidays." The Rev. Ernie Harris will be the guest speaker. If interested, register in the front office.

THE FOLLOWING TRIPS are scheduled:

Dec. 9 — Christmas Party at Glastonbury Country Club (filled). The bus will leave the center at 10:30 a.m.

March 9 to 12 — Fallsview Trip. Registration will be Dec. 12 at 9:30 a.m. The price is $200 per person (double occupancy) and includes four days/three nights, transportation, nine meals, cocktail party, nightclub entertainment and much more. If interested, stop by the center and pick up a flier.

May 16 — Western Caribbean Cruise on the Song of Norway. The price is $1,075 for category "J" and includes air and land transportation, meals, entertainment and port taxes. A $250 deposit (per person) is required at registration. Register in the office. Fliers are available in the office.

JUST A REMINDER: The center will be closed on Nov. 27 and 28 due to Thanksgiving.

Our condolences to the Nelson family over the recent loss of good friend Dick, secretary of the Men's Golf League and Senior Orchestra member.

Best wishes to Joe Roginka, greenhouse enthusiast, who is home recuperating from surgery.

Lastly, on behalf of all the staff, we wish everybody a Happy Thanksgiving.

Disabled, elderly plead for buses

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Public transportation should be considered a basic civil right for disabled persons, but the service is nowhere near adequate in Connecticut, an advocate for the handicapped told state officials Friday.

"The time has long past when we should have the right to go down to the nearest bus stop, and get on that bus, or that subway or that plane, and go to whatever destination it goes," said Arthur Pepine, the treasurer and a former president of the Connecticut Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities.

Pepine was one of the speakers at a meeting held by the state Department of Transportation at South Central Community College to discuss transportation issues affecting the elderly and the handicapped. "I can't find the glass even half full. It's particularly empty," said Pepine. "It is a basic right of a person with disabilities to have the same access of public transportation as anyone."

The cost of such transportation should not be a consideration, said Pepine, who uses a wheelchair. "Persons with disabilities are the first group since slavery over whose heads a pricetag is dangled," he said. "What is the cost of a person's civil right?"

The elderly and handicapped are often barred from taking many forms of public transportation, because they may not be able to negotiate steps, curbs and other barriers. Many public buses do not have wheelchair lifts.

The story behind the story

By Josie

Q. Please tell me all about Jessica Lange. Victoria Siegel, Kenner, La.

A. She's 37 (born April 20, 1949), from rural Minnesota, one of four children of Al Lange, a traveling salesman, and his wife, Dorothy. (Her grandparents were Finnish and Dutch-German immigrants to the area.)

Because of her father's job, the family moved 18 times while she was growing up. To survive the constant upheaval, she retreated into a fantasy world. She was fascinated by Hollywood in general and the movie "Gone With the Wind" in particular. She saw it four times and read the book over and over — so to amuse herself, she would act out Melanie's death scene. One time, as she remembers, she did the scene for hours and actually brought herself to tears. An actress was clearly evolving.

At Cloquet High School in Cloquet, Minn., she was an A student, a good athlete, the star of the senior class play, etc. But as she complained later, she wasn't liked by the ruling elite and was therefore not admitted to the National Honor Society (members were chosen by the students) or the cheerleading squad. She obviously survived and went on to the University of Minnesota on a fine arts scholarship.

In her freshman year, she met Spanish photographer Paco Grande, dropped out of school and traveled with him through the U.S. At some point in their travels, they got married and the following year, 1968, went to Paris and loved it. When they returned, she discovered that she disliked the U.S. which was just beginning its Nixonian years; so in 1971 she returned to Paris, this time on her own. She stayed there for two years, studying mime with the man who had taught master mime Marcel Marceau, doing street theater and dancing at the Opera Comique.

Finally, though, she got tired of her life there and sensing, through the beginning Watergate hearings, that the Nixonian years were coming to an end, she decided to return to the U.S. She settled in New York, where she worked as a waitress at the Lion's Head, the writers' hangout in Greenwich Village, while studying acting and modeling part-time. She hated modeling but it was through that career that she got her first screen role, that of the blonde who takes up involuntarily with King Kong in Dino de Laurentiis's 1976 remake of the classic film. Her selection for the role was met with much publicity, but the film was met with unanimous jeers. She didn't work for two years after it as a result.

She read for the co-starring role in "Goin' South," to be directed by Jack Nicholson, but lost the part to Mary Steenburgen. She did, however, get roses and a note from Nicholson promising that they would work together in the future, have lots of fun and make lots of money. He turned out to be right.

In the meantime, director Bob Fosse finally rescued her from unemployment by casting her as Angelique, the filmy angel of death in his autobiographical saga "All That Jazz." (The two were also romantically involved for a while.) She followed it with the forgettable "How to Beat the High Cost of Living" and then the steamy remake of "The Postman Rings Twice" opposite Jack Nicholson, who had urged that she be cast.

While shooting the film, she began to develop a film based on the life of Frances Farmer, an actress from the '30s and '40s. Editor of "Postman" Graeme Clifford wanted to do one too, and together they did it; the harrowing "Frances" was released in 1982. She followed it with "Tootsie," for which she won an Academy Award; "Country," which she also produced; the cable version of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof"; and last year's "Sweet Dreams."

Her next film is "Crimes of the Heart" co-starring Diane Keaton and Sissy Spacek. It's due out next month. Romantically, her life is also interesting. She and past lover Mikhail Baryshnikov have a 5-year-old, Alexandra, nicknamed Shura, and she and present live-in Sam Shepard have a 10-month-old daughter, Hannah. (She and Grande were finally divorced in 1982.) They live in New Mexico and in her cabin on 120 acres in Minnesota when they're not working.

Ralph Macchio

Q. I need to know a few things about Ralph Macchio. I think he's wonderful. Kassie Slover, Fruitland, Idaho

A. He's 24, from Huntington, Long Island, in New York, where his family owns a trucking business and where he still camps out when he's not making a movie. He's been taking dancing lessons since he was 3. When he was in high school, he acquired a commercial agent who sent him into New York to read for spots.

Occasionally he got one, but his big break occurred back on Long Island when a talent agent spotted him in a play at Hofstra University. That led to his film debut in a film very few people saw, "Up the Academy," which in turn led to appearances on the TV series "Eight Is Enough" and "Family," and the movies "The Outsiders" and "The Karate Kid." The latter, as you undoubtedly know, made him a star and led to the sequel last summer.

He also appeared in the less-than-successful "Teachers" and "Crossroads," turned down "St. Elmo's Fire" and "The Breakfast Club" and recently made a stunning Broadway debut opposite Robert de Niro in "Cuba and His Teddy Bear." As we go to press, that show has just closed and he's figuring out what to do next, although a film called "Running" seems to be in the works.

Q. Is Janet Jackson going on tour for her new album? If so, will she be coming to Connecticut? A.H.S., Waterbury, Conn.

A. According to her manager, she just got back from a promotional tour of Europe and Japan and is in the process of putting together a concert tour in the U.S. possibly to start early next year. Unfortunately, it's too early to know whether or not a Connecticut stop will be included, but she'll probably do one in the New York area at least.

Anything you'd like to know about prominent personalities? Write to Josie, Between the Lines, King Features Syndicate, 239 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Q. Settle an argument that my daughter and I are having. Who is the black female singer on the Diet Coke commercials? I say it's Tina Turner; my daughter says otherwise. Who's right? Charles E. Cromie, Cape May, N.J.

A. Your daughter. The singer in question is Whitney Houston. Tina Turner has a deal with archival Pepsi.

Q. When Tony Bill finished Notre Dame, he went to Hollywood and became an instant success. Can you tell me what he's doing now? Phil Meixel, South Bend, Ind.

A. At the moment, he's directing a movie with Jodie Foster called "Five Corners" which is shooting in New York. Other films that he's directed, as you may know, are "My Bodyguard" and "Six Weeks." He's also been successful as an actor and a restaurateur — his 72 Market Street restaurant in Venice, Calif., is a big hit.

Dieters dodge the fat facts in many ways

By Marcia Corliss Johnson

Perhaps no one is quite so dextrous at mental maneuvers as the individual who wants to lose weight but shuns the responsibility of really effective dieting. The human mind is a wondrous thing, and, in a pinch, it can come up with rationalizations so intricate we fool even ourselves.

Below are just a few of the games we all sometimes play to con ourselves into believing we are doing something about our weight problem without the uncomfortable necessity of actually changing the way we eat and exercise:

Diet Dodge-It. This is a game for one or more players in which the goal is to dodge all diets successfully, while at the same time convincing oneself that a dramatic weight loss is just a throw of the dice away.

The byword of the Artful Dodger is, "I can stop any time I want," followed by, "And I'll start Monday...or New Year's Day...or April Fool's Day." That way, skilled players get to have their cake and eat it too, all the while enjoying the tantalizing anticipation of that trim new physique they'll be sporting "soon." The catch: They'll never get any further than the anticipation.

For some, this diet rut may be comfortable. But if you're after results, not daydreams, it's time to stop procrastinating and take immediate action. To put yourself in the right frame of mind, stop thinking of dieting in terms of beginning and end points, suggests Rita Cohen, Ph.D., an assistant professor of psychiatry with the University of Pennsylvania's Obesity Research Group.

Instead, think of permanently changing your eating habits. If you consistently put off a diet until Monday and tonight is Saturday, the night you usually polish off a pound of cookies,

Dr. Cohen suggests you take some positive action now. Put those cookies back in the cupboard — or at least limit yourself to one or two. Then set yourself another small goal for Sunday. By Monday morning, you'll already have two small successes to your credit. And a succession of successes will build the confidence to start losing weight in earnest.

Monotony. In this the players have no opportunity to buy Marvin Gardens or Park Place because they're always in Jail. The object is to come up with some crushingly boring food regimen — pomegranates and watercress, for instance, or codded eggs and herbal tea — and consume these foods exclusively, day after day. Eventually, the players' eyes glaze over, their hands begin to shake, and the very sight of a codded egg sends them running, screaming, from the table.

At this point, the players escape from Jail and throw themselves into an eating binge of mammoth proportions. Then it's back to Jail with no chance of collecting $200 — or of reaching their goal weight.

The key to getting out of Jail permanently, of course, is variety. Not only will eating a wide range of foods from each food group keep you well nourished, it will also help you maintain enough interest in your food plan to stay with it over the long run.

Experiment with the choices available to you: Have you tried okra? Kiwi fruit? Pita bread? Tofu? Have you explored the differences between flounder and bluefish, Camembert and Brie? Why not try new methods of cooking — stir-frying julienneed vegetables, poaching fish in wine? Serve meat or poultry tossed with fruit in a salad for lunch, or choose salmon or Swiss cheese for breakfast. And remember: Variety may be the spice of life, but it's the lifeblood of a successful weight-control program.

Giant Step ("May 17"). Here's another way to diet without actually getting anywhere. The goal is to take at least two steps backward for every giant step forward. These players are easy to spot: They're the ones with the latest diet book under their arms, a calorie counter in their pockets, an electronic scale in their bathroom. Yet, despite her constant preoccupation with the business of losing weight, this player never makes any real progress. In fact, a very skilled player can actually gain weight. No easy feat on a weight-loss diet!

The process of becoming thin is such a focus of these players' lives that they might not know what to do if they succeed. James Prochaska, Ph.D., a professor of psychology and director of the Self-Change Lab at the University of Rhode Island, has found that some individuals' personal styles make them more effective at planning for change than actually achieving it.

Such people do a lot of thinking about losing weight and are more aware of their problem than most people, yet they find it difficult to make a firm commitment to a weight-loss program and have little confidence in their potential for success. As a result, they spend too much time thinking about their problem and not enough time doing something about it.

If you fit this description, Dr. Prochaska suggests you take some specific action to change your eating habits. Once the process of change has begun, the time spent thinking about it often decreases automatically. Then, he says, shift that attention to pleasurable activities other than eating: volunteer work, gardening, redecorating, and especially exercise. Once your days are enriched with a variety of absorbing things to do, you'll have the foundation on which your new life as a thin person can be built.

Chutes and Ladders. This game offers the breathless excitement of astounding leaps of progress, followed by the agony of equally impressive defeats. The players spend days, weeks, even months climbing the diet ladder of success. Just when they're a few rungs from the top — whoosh! — down the nearest chute they slide, clutching the chocolate-covered bananas or whatever particular weakness they've just binged on.

Then the whole laborious process starts all over again. Like Sisyphus, the legendary Greek king condemned to roll a boulder up a mountain only to have it roll back down again, these players seem doomed to repeat the loss-regain cycle endlessly.

To break this cycle Dr. Prochaska advises that the dieters stop to analyze the situation, rather than just repeating the same mistakes over and over. "What happened the last time I went on a diet?" they should ask. "What did I do right? What were my mistakes? What should I do more — or less — of next time?" They should devise a variety of techniques for dealing with their weakness in the future. In this way, they can view their most recent bout with dieting as a learning experience instead of as just another failure — and profit from it.

One Potato, Two Potato. The object: Overtax your willpower by tempting yourself to eat "just one." The game pieces usually consist of french fries or potato chips, although cookies and any other small, caloric edibles will do. After "just one" of these little goodies, the players' appetites reawaken and the rules are changed to "just two," "just three," "just a dozen." In this game, there are no losers — only gainers.

While some people seem to be able to deal with all kinds of foods without losing control, others have one or two specific items that cause them trouble.

Barbara Sternberg points out that the ultimate goal should be to learn to eat any food in a controlled way. But until the dieter gets enough success under the belt to build up confidence, it may be wise to avoid these temptations totally for a while.

Then there are "yellow-light" foods, those you can handle, but may lose control of in certain situations. For example, you may have no trouble with cheese and crackers at home, but you find yourself popping them indiscriminately into your mouth at parties. These foods don't have to be avoided completely, but they should be approached cautiously.

Making a list of your red- and yellow-light foods can help you get ahead in the losing game. But keep in mind that these lists might change and that your goal is to learn to handle all foods in moderation.

Go on playing games until at last the game-playing catches up with us? Or get honest with ourselves and take a serious approach to weight control? The choice is ours and it's vital. For there is yet another game each of us must participate in eventually, whether we choose to or not: Truth or Consequences. ■

That's Julie Andrews' life

Time flies faster than this actress wants

By Jane Ardmore

In the lovely white sitting room, right next to the grand piano, is the picture of a beautiful and very assorted family, which Julie Andrews had taken as a surprise for husband Blake Edwards' birthday. In the picture are hers, his and their children, surrounding Andrews who looks almost as serene and fulfilled as Julie Andrews in person.

At our first interview, she had just finished "Mary Poppins" and baby Emma was a round-faced diapered cherub splashing in the shallow end of the pool. Andrews held on to her undershirt while we chatted. Emma is now a slender, lively 21-year-old who has paid her dues in the off-Broadway theater and is now playing her first major role in a major film as Julie's daughter.

"What Blake has done for the two of us is one of the dearest and most amazing gestures — for him to allow me as her mum to be in her first major film in a starring role, to be able to share the experience together was lovely," Andrews says.

"And we really enjoyed. I mean it was so special. Take the little bedroom scene we do together, when she thinks she has lost her boyfriend! I'm sure you can imagine that when she wept, my blouse was soaking, and I felt as if time had slipped back 10 years. It was so moving for me. The whole film was so moving, almost like extending our family, our lifestyle to the screen."

The picture is "That's Life." She plays the wife of Jack Lemmon who is approaching his birthday in a state of nervous breakdown. "Blake has a wonderful sense of humor, the ability to translate his own experiences into universal terms. He's very human; he has what is called the main dilemma of reaching certain stages in one's life," says Andrews. "So here is this man, falling apart while the family puts together details of the gala party which will celebrate the birthday."

"It was incredible," says Jennifer Edwards, who recently completed a starring role in

"The Perfect Match," a romantic comedy with Mark McClure, and now plays Andrews and Lemmon's older daughter. "Other than Jane and Henry Fonda working together in 'On Golden Pond,' I can't think of a family that has made a film together like this. Dad was saying one night that there's so much talent in this family, it's a shame we weren't working together, and eight weeks later we were."

"It was such a family feeling for all of us," Andrews says. "Jack, who is a dear friend, is playing Blake actually; his wife, Felicia Farr, is playing the fortune teller; Robert Loggia and his wife are very close to us and Robert plays the priest; Jack's son, Chris, plays our son; and 'neighbor' Sally Kellerman is a great friend. Everyone in the film was someone we know well and although Blake's hand was always on the tiller, we each improvised our own parts, drawing on personal experiences for whatever we thought the role needed."

"Blake had sort of tested the water in a film called 'The Party,' in which there was a great deal of improvisation. But our film has gone much further. You might think that egos would be rampant, but perhaps because we were family and close friends, or perhaps because of the nature of the piece, there was generosity on everyone's part. We just naturally fed each other and worked for the good of the film. It was just a lovely adventure."

Constant laughter, no sense of tension, and as-if to make it more than ever like a real life, the film was shot at their home in Malibu! How did that work? "Well," laughs Andrews, "I think it worked because we shot in only one room in one day. Oh, it was a lark. I ended up being sort of head cook and bottle washer as well as actress because I felt obliged to take care of everyone."

"In spite of the fine catering service always set up outside on a location, dinner was prepared at our house as usual by our housekeeper, and since everyone could see and sniff, we would just prepare an enormous meal for 20 or 25 people. Then, at 4 in the morning, I would be scrambling eggs or stirring oatmeal because everyone was starving again.

"You can't help but be protective when it's your house. I'd find myself arranging flowers, moving a vase here and there, making sure Emma's skirt wasn't hiking up in back or Jenny's hair was OK. Just those hundred little things that go with being a mother."

Which she consummately is. As we talk I keep studying the picture of her with the children. Here are Blake's son and daughter, Geoffrey and Jennifer, who were 7 and 9 when Edwards and Andrews married; Emma, the daughter of her first marriage to set designer Tony Walton; and Amy and Joanna, 11 and 10 respectively, the adorable Vietnamese orphans they were lucky enough to bring from Vietnam when they didn't seem to be producing the family they so wanted together.

Long ago Julie told me that being a mother was, she thought, the most important thing in her life. That was before Blake. Today she enlarges that statement. "I haven't changed my thinking about that, but being part of a very real family is closer to what I mean. If you don't do that well, you don't do much else in life very well, do you? Also, if you're not happy there, what's the point of being married and having a family? You learn so much as you go along."

"During one's 20s one is so busy sorting out, making sense out of the world and of your own life, you sort of have tunnel vision. It wasn't until my 30s that I began to feel generous enough to take on other commitments, extend my range of awareness. And it is only now I'm beginning to feel adult."

The growing up really started when Andrews married Edwards. "That certainly was time for making a family, adjusting to a new marriage, making a home for my stepchildren, making it all work. Uniting two families is a hard thing to do."

Andrews never uttered protestations. She simply changed her life. The children were all with her and Edwards during the filming of "Darling Lili"...which was when she lost a bet to Jenny and had to write her a story (it turned into her first book, "Mandy," published by Harper & Row). But after her marriage, Andrews didn't make a film for three years.

They bought their house in Switzerland after holidaying in Gstaad and loving it. "Blake was working on the 'Pink Panther' pictures, Geoff was living with us and he and Emma had to adjust — there are just two years between them — then Jenny came to live with us. It was a very difficult time and Blake was working so hard; it seemed wise just to stick to being a family for a while."

"In Switzerland, I really keep house: shop, cook. Those years were the longest span off work I'd had since I was 12. Nobody was more surprised than I to discover that I really enjoyed my leisure. I think it was a matter of timing. This very happy marriage, the books I was writing (after "Mandy," "The Last of the Great Whangdoodles").

"I'd never been as busy in my life as I was running that household, chauffeuring the children, being wife and mum." After three years, it did seem time for her to get back to work and they all came to Hollywood for the TV show, "The Julie Andrews Hour," which debuted actually with a day in the life of this family. L.A. Times' critic Charles Champlin described it as "Blake Edwards' love letter to his wife." After a year on that series and a number of TV specials, back they went to their "hideaway."

"We were residents of Switzerland for many years. The difficulty was that whenever Blake made a film, he had to go to Paris, London, America or Rome. It meant being separated from him or bundling everyone up and going with him. You can't always gear a location to the children's summer vacations. Sometimes it cut into school time; but as much as possible, we stayed together. That's family policy."

"I did a film in London earlier this year, 'Duet for One' (for December release), Blake was finishing 'A Fine Mess,' beginning 'Blind Date' and editing 'That's Life.' There was no way he could be with me and it was the first time in our almost 17 years of marriage that we'd been away from each other for any length of time. I was miserable. He was miserable. I felt abandoned. He felt abandoned."

"It, or course, was a challenging and difficult and wonderful picture, that's why I'd accepted the part. It's based on the play, 'Duet for One' — very, very loosely based on, much more fleshed out — the story of a famous concert pianist who is stricken with multiple sclerosis."

"In 'That's Life,' I am a woman waiting for the results of a biopsy which might mean I'd not sing again, but in 'Duet' I'm a woman definitely facing the loss of career and the loss of husband — yes, in the film he leaves her. Alan Bates plays the part so well."

"The fact that illness like this can wreck marriages I know to be true. I did a lot of research and met marvelous people who shared with me what M.S. has meant to them. Just imagine being Itzhak Perlman or any other superbly talented person whose music was your very life; indeed all you had was music. Lost husband. No children. It's devastating and she has to face the breaks."

Andrews was that woman for 11 weeks when what she really feels she can maintain in terms of separation from Blake is about 10 days. "Just enough time to get my hair and nails done, my household (wherever it is at the time) organized and look pretty. I can be a very independent woman. I was on the road in England, playing the music halls, as a child; but I guess I am dependent too. I miss being able to talk with my husband, touch base, share the tempo of each day."

"I'd be foolish to say that I'd never be away from him that long again. This was one of those roles I'd have been a fool to refuse, and I'm thrilled I was asked to do it. I just hope the next time, we can do it together."

"The absolute truth is that great roles don't float past one's nose every minute and Blake has offered me some of the nicest things I've done in recent years. "Victor Victoria," for example. On the other hand, we know each other so well, he's certainly going to look out for my interests and make me look wonderful; but I feel so responsible. It somehow matters twice as much when it's your husband's picture. You've watched him write it, seen him in the throes of production. I find myself sort of coming around corners; as actress/wife, you want to be sure you've covered every base."

And the reward after covering the bases? This summer the whole family cruised the inland waterways of British Columbia. "Oh, it was glorious!" Andrews says. "We chartered a boat, just cruised, did some fishing and puttered about for two-and-a-half weeks. It was tranquil and peaceful and we just had the best time. Emma was with us — she's mostly based in New York now, but whenever possible, she comes to see me or we go East to see her. She's very dedicated about a career in this crazy business and has studied every facet of it, she's disciplined and talented and it's just a question of from now on, will she have the breaks?"

"Amy and Joanna adore her. Emma is the one who wears the earrings and the lipsticks and they wish they could and try to emulate. The children all get along. Jenny lives two miles down the road from us at Malibu and is with us every weekend, she and her husband, Peter Chittell, and their 9-year-old daughter, Katie. I'm a step-grandmother! What's really wild is to watch Katie play with my 10- and 11-year-olds who are her aunts."

Geoff Blake is a busy writer and he's at their house in Malibu most weekends, too. The Edwards stay close. "We're an odd family," Andrews says. "It's amazing that it works, but work it does, and it is very beautiful in its complexity, the rough and tumble of it." Something like the mix that has made America, you remind her, and her face glows. The story of how they got the children would make a film of its own.

"At the time, I think people were so aware of children needing homes, particularly from Southeast Asia, but also, Blake and I weren't getting fortunate in having children of our own. What it boiled down to is something as crass as speed, the possibility of a quick adoption. We would have taken a child from anywhere in the world, and this agency had been recommended to us a year faster than other agencies."

"Friends of ours had adopted very successfully, so we said 'sure.' Even so, it would take 11 months for adoption to come through. We got Amy in the allotted time, including home research and studies on the part of the agency, back and forth, and she got Ho Chi Minh City which was then Saigon, where she became so ill she couldn't be sent to us for a while."

At the end of 11 months, Amy duly arrived, but within five or six months, it became apparent that Saigon was going to fall. That avenue of adoption would no longer be open to them. They'd fully intended to adopt again, but the war dictated that they do so in a hurry. They wrote again to the agency and in about two months, their second child was on their doorstep. This one came with 325 others on one airplane — something totally unprecedented, no passport, no birth certificate, one entry visa for all of them.

"Our babies changed our lives," she says serenely. "And, of course, it works both ways. I think 20 years ago there was a very different attitude toward adoption. These days no one thinks about it twice. If my two ever question whether they were wanted, I'm going to take them down to the judge who legally made them ours. The words he used, the ceremony was done so beautifully. It has to do with their being far more wanted because you have actually chosen them."

She continues, "I find our children fascinating. They are close, have a fairly intense sibling rivalry, but they would defend each other to the death. The older one wants to keep her superiority, the younger is determined to catch up with her. That's natural. There are only 11 months between them. They are very special, and our older children are wonderful with them."

"So is Blake. He's rather a good dad, enormously instinctive, and that's good. They get truth from him. Absolute, he never pretends to something he isn't feeling. If he's busy or preoccupied or doesn't want to know, that's how he is. But there are times when he is amazingly aware. If they're in any trouble, he has an antenna that picks it up, and he's there for them."

And for her. She is that rare being, Julie Andrews, an actress who is a happy woman. Time flies, faster each year, and she wants every second to count. Right now she's desperately trying to finish her current children's book, she is planning trips back to Vietnam and Cambodia to help Operation California continue its work of raising money for the Mexican children hurt in the earthquake. And all the while, she and Edwards are talking projects for films. That's Julie Andrews' life. ■

'Hanoi Hilton' recreated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "Hanoi Hilton," the infamous North Vietnamese prisoner of war camp, has been re-created for a movie by the Cannon Group on the grounds of the Veterans Hospital in Westwood. "It's eerie, according to the former POWs who've seen the set," said Joel Glickman, production manager for "Hanoi Hilton." "The real 'Hanoi Hilton' was a building the French built in the 1800s," he said. "We're using a building the Veterans Administration built in the 1800s. Both are Mediterranean-style buildings. The VA hasn't used it in about 20 years. We've added a courtyard and a wall." The technical adviser for the movie is retired Air Force Col. Leo Thornasen, a Medal of Honor winner and later a U.S. senator from South Dakota, who was a prisoner in the "Hanoi Hilton." The movie stars Michael Moriarty, Paul LeMat, Jeffrey Jones, Stephen Davies and Gloria Carlin, who plays an American celebrity who visits the camp. Lionel Chetwynd is the writer and director. ■

Loni Anderson likes her new TV comedy

By Jerry Buck

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Loni Anderson says the idea for her new NBC comedy "Easy Street" harks back to her childhood in Minnesota where she lived in a house with some much older kinfolk.

"I'd lived with my grandparents when I was little," she says. "My great-grandfather lived downstairs. He was my best friend."

"We were very family-oriented and the importance of them not going to a nursing home was uppermost in my mind."

These thoughts emerged when Anderson was looking for a new series after the quick demise of "Partners in Crime" two years ago. Her secretary, Jeannie Jensen, suggested a series in which she has to deal with older people.

Husband's phone habit shocks wife

A qualified sex therapist may be able to give some clues

By Dr. June M. Reinisch

The Kinsey Report

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 24 and have been married for four months. Before getting married, I had known my husband for two years and we were engaged for one year.

I recently discovered something about my husband that has left me unable to look at him or be near him. When paying our phone bill, I discovered that he has been calling a telephone sex service. When I confronted him about this, he admitted he gets great sexual satisfaction by masturbating when making these calls. He has been doing this since he was in his teens.

I find it extremely repulsive and I feel hurt, inadequate and confused. I thought we had a satisfying sex life until I found out about this. These calls are more than just "dirty talk" they are extremely crude and often describe unnatural sex acts.

I have told him that he has a serious problem and should get psychiatric help. He has told me he doesn't think it's a problem and has no intention of giving up this practice.

Is this normal? What should I do?

DEAR READER: See if you can find a qualified sex therapist or psychotherapist who is knowledgeable about sexual behavior to help you sort out your feelings about your relationship and to help boost your self-esteem. This area is too complicated and emotionally charged for many people to face by themselves.

Your reaction to your husband's behavior is not unusual. Many women who discover that their partner masturbates (or has sexual fantasies that do not include them) assume that this occurs because they are not good enough as lovers. Another common reaction is that the partner must not really love them or he would not be thinking about someone else.

It's important for you to accept the fact that you did not cause this behavior in your husband. Further, you probably will learn that it does not change or diminish his love for you or his satisfaction with your sex life as a couple.

Researchers have reported that more than 70 percent of husbands and nearly 70 percent of wives masturbate during marriage and see this as an additional source of pleasure, while also being happy with their marital sex lives. The widespread assumption that people masturbate only when they have no partners is not true for most people.

Fantasizing during masturbation or intercourse is also common and can serve several different purposes. In one study, 71 percent of men and 72 percent of women used fantasy to enhance sexual arousal. Some other functions of fantasy are to initiate sexual arousal, to move from the excitement phase to orgasm and to provide a safe arena in which to imagine activities in which one would never actually engage.

The contents of fantasies are surprisingly similar for males and females; they include group sex, forced encounters, and observing others having sex. One of the most popular fantasies is for a person to visualize experiences he or she has never had.

Most clinicians agree that fantasies can cause problems if a person becomes aroused solely by one particular fantasy and no longer responds sexually to his or her partner. The vast majority of people do not act out their fantasies, nor do they even wish to.

There is less scientific information about use of telephone services, but most of these play a role similar to that of erotic books, magazine stories

See if you can find a qualified sex therapist or psychotherapist who is knowledgeable about sexual behavior to help you sort out your feelings about your relationship and to help boost your self-esteem.

The customer pays to have a professional talker play out a sexual fantasy, based on cues provided as the call progresses.

According to Dr. John Money, an authority on "love-maps" (or how a person defines that which is sexually stimulating) such calls can serve as occasional recreation, as a supplement to a more regular sex life or as a repeated routine that is the caller's sole sex life or is essential to the sex life with a partner.

A skilled therapist can help you to determine what role these calls play in your relationship with your husband and can suggest options that are appropriate to your relationship. Although it would be best if you and your husband went to the therapist together, you should go even if he will not.

Hot flash news

DEAR DR. REINISCH: There must be thousands of older women like me who would like to know about any new research on how to prevent hot flashes.

When I was in my mid-50s, my doctor prescribed Premarin, which controlled the problem, but he felt there were risks with long-term use.

I am now 67 and have had no medication for eight years. Every night I wake up every hour-and-a-half, as though an internal alarm goes off, to dry my face and neck and fan my heated body. My doctor contends that this is "nerves," but I disagree.

Will this problem go on indefinitely?

DEAR READER: It's time for you to consider getting a second medical opinion. Try to locate a gynecologist or endocrinologist who specializes in treating menopausal women. Many medical schools or large hospitals have such a staff member.

If that's not possible, ask your friends if they can recommend a gynecologist. When you call for an appointment, ask if the physician ever prescribes hormone-replacement therapy (HRT) to alleviate menopausal symptoms. If the answer is "no," try to find a physician who will at least consider this option.

Blood tests can show your level of estrogen and other hormones. This information, combined with your medical history and other tests, will help a physician to decide whether HRT would be appropriate for you.

It's important for you to accept the fact that you did not cause this behavior in your husband. Further, you probably will learn that it does not change or diminish his love for you or his satisfaction with your sex life as a couple.

You're correct: Many thousands of women continue to have hot flashes for years after they stop menstruating. In all fairness to your physician, there was earlier research that linked the use of estrogen to increased cancer of the endometrium (the lining of the uterus).

However, recent studies have shown that the risk of endometrial cancer is not increased if a woman takes smaller doses of estrogen than were formerly used, combines estrogen with a progestin drug for part of each month (usually for 10 days) and takes no hormones for five or six days each month — the HRT patterned cycle. Moreover, estrogen replacement offers important benefits for many women, such as reduced hot flashes and protection against osteoporosis.

It's important that you have a thorough examination before beginning HRT. Some women have hot flashes and disrupted sleep from stress rather than from low estrogen levels, but tests can determine whether this is happening in your case. You must have regular checkups, including Pap tests, while you are on HRT.

Size worries

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am a 20-year-old man who is having trouble having sex with young ladies because I have an overly large penis. It seems to hurt them too much. Have you ever heard of this problem? What can be done?

DEAR READER: The vaginas of most women will comfortably accommodate most male organs, but there have been clinical reports of difficulties like the one you describe.

Before you assume that you're too over-endowed to function satisfactorily, you should consider other possible explanations. For example, perhaps your partners were not fully aroused before intercourse was attempted. If there was little lubrication or if the vagina did not expand in the manner characteristic of the excitement phase, insertion and/or thrusting might be painful.

Or you might want to try positions in which the woman can control the depth of penetration and movements. These would include having the woman on top, or being side-by-side. Regardless of position, let your partner decide if she is ready for penetration and let her control insertion, so she can use an angle that's comfortable for her.

If discomfort or pain occurs, you should stop deep thrusting. Many women find that shallow thrusting is more pleasurable. If her pain persists, withdraw. If trying different techniques doesn't increase your partner's comfort, consider consulting a sex counselor, who can offer suggestions that are more specific to you.

Send questions to Dr. Reinisch in care of The Kinsey Report, P.O. Box 48, Bloomington, Ind. 47402. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest may be discussed in future columns.

Make caviar at home with salmon eggs

By Sonja Heinze

I do a lot of salmon fishing and get a lot of salmon eggs. I don't know what to do with them. How can I cure them for caviar? Stanley Zeglen, Twin Rocks, Pa.

The following instructions for making caviar at home were given to us by Doris Hicks, a seafood technology specialist with the University of Delaware's Marine Advisory Service:

1. Begin with eggs that are less than 24 hours old and show no signs of spoilage (particularly an ammonia odor). The eggs should be of clear color and good consistency and free of blood. The roe of coho, pink and chum salmon are best for making caviar.

2. Gently remove the individual eggs from the egg sacs and place in bowl, being careful to remove the pieces of membrane, blood and bits of intestine or black skin.

3. For every two cups of cleaned eggs, stir 1/2 cup of salt with two cups of cold water in a large bowl until the salt is dissolved.

4. Pour the eggs slowly into the salt solution. Gently stir the eggs to allow contact with the brine and allow them to sit 30 minutes.

5. Pour the caviar into a strainer and rinse with cold water.

6. Transfer the finished caviar into a container which can be sealed tightly, and store in the refrigerator.

Your homemade caviar should stay acceptable in the refrigerator for several weeks. It should be served chilled by nesting the serving bowl in a larger bowl filled with crushed ice. Caviar should never be frozen.

UNSALTED BUTTER

How about recipes that specify unsalted butter, then two or three ingredients later call for salt? This makes no sense to me. I feel it's an affectation. Candace Rack,inking Spring, Pa.

A recipe calling for unsalted butter may be an affectation, since the word "unsalted" is a current health buzzword, but then again, it may not. It depends on how much butter is called for and what is being made. There are approximately one and a half teaspoons of salt in one pound of butter. If you're going to use a quarter of a pound of butter in a delicate recipe, using salted butter could make a difference.

Gourmet magazine made the following comment on this subject (December 1973):

"Unless otherwise specified, Gourmet's recipes (and those in most cookbooks) are designed to be prepared with unsalted butter. Although the difference might not be serious in many preparations, the use of unsalted butter is critical to the success of frostings and other confectionary."

JELL-O FROM ANIMAL HOOVES?

I have just read that Jell-O gelatin comes from boiled animal hooves. Is this true? I enjoy Jell-O, but if this is true I may think twice before eating it again. Janyce Kurns, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Personally I don't understand why one should find eating boiled animal hooves any more offensive than eating barbecued muscle, braised liver or kidney pie. What's so bad about making desserts from an animal's feet?

Contrary to common belief, however, Jell-O gelatin doesn't even come from animal hooves, or even horns. It's made from animal hides, which contain collagen.

Hide trimmings, explains Jocelyn Walter, a nutritionist with General Foods, are soaked in alkalies and/or acids and washed in clean water to remove almost all the non-collagen constituents, including meat. During this soaking period the collagen is converted to gelatin, which is then cooked in water and further refined. The extract is then evaporated and dried to produce gelatin.

If you're still squeamish about eating something made from hides, try looking at it the way General Foods does: "During this process chemical changes take place so that the composition and identity of the original material is eliminated."

MUSCAT RAISINS

A recipe I have for Christmas cake calls for Muscat raisins, and for the life of me I can't find them anywhere and I don't even know what they look like. Could you please tell me what they are and where I can get them?

Muscat raisins are different from ordinary raisins in that they are larger, extra sweet and exceptionally fruity. So advises lantha Goulart, the consumer relations manager of Sun-Diamond Growers of California.

The Muscat raisin is plump and dark brown and is prized for baking, especially in fruit cakes. This variety of raisin originated in Egypt several hundred years before the birth of Christ. In Egypt it was called the "Muscat of Alexandria" and was introduced into California in Jello is made from animal hides, not hooves or horns, as commonly believed.

1851. "The Muscat variety of grape is produced on a small scale as compared to the production of the Thompson grape. Therefore, wide distribution of the product to all areas of the country is limited."

Goulart advises us that these raisins are harvested in late September and can be found in your store prior to and during the holiday season. If you purchase them at that time, you can freeze the raisins in vapor-tight bags, for they freeze well and thaw quickly for use throughout the year.

READER FEEDBACK: THE FINAL WORD ON OPENING STUBBORN JARS

Walter Hennessey, supervisory editor, Stars & Stripes, N.Y.C.: "I couldn't help noticing all the readers who say the best way to open a vacuum-sealed jar is to use church-keys, ice picks and such. Well, I'd like to toss my two cents worth in as well.

"I discovered a way to open them which has yet to fail, and which doesn't involve the use of a gadget at all. Just your bare hands and — most important of all — the proper mental attitude. I pick up the jar and say to myself, 'Walter, there is no way in the world that you are ever going to be able to open this jar.' Then I put all my strength (limited as it is) into the first attempt, twisting the lid as if my life depended on it. The lid comes off every time."

IRIDESCENT STREAKS ON HAM

Can you tell us why fried ham sometimes get an iridescent look on top? Mrs. M. Vicario, Waterbury, Conn.
Opinions vary as to what causes a patch of iridescence, or rainbowlike streaks, on pieces of ham. It looks like a sign of spoilage and one's immediate reaction is to discard it. But apparently it's harmless, unless of course it's accompanied by a foul odor or covered with a slimy coating.

Mary Webber, consumer representative with Armour Foods, claims the iridescence is caused by the product coming into contact with a metal surface such as aluminum foil, a metal pan or rack, a metal or stainless steel knife, etc.

Minnie Bernardino, a food writer, states that when the surface of the ham is exposed to oxygen or light, some of the nitrate-modified iron content of the meat undergoes a chemical reaction that changes the coloring of the ham.

The University of California Wellness Letter explains the strange color another way: "Ham has a high fat and water content, and when these liquids ooze out they reflect light, like oil on a puddle."

Though the cause of this phenomenon seems to be under contention, there is general agreement that it's perfectly safe to eat it.

There is now a hotline you can call with questions about meat and poultry safety. It's a Department of Agriculture toll-free number: 800-535-4555.

RIPENING HONEYDEW MELONS

Is there a way to get honeydew melons to ripen after I get them home? I've tried waiting as long as three weeks but wasn't totally successful. Mrs. Carl Vega, Shreveport, La.

You have to be careful when selecting a honeydew melon because many of them are picked too soon. Joe Carcione, in his book "The Greengrocer," advises: "There's nothing better than a fully ripe honeydew but it takes some skill to choose one. First look for color, creamy white or creamy yellow. Rind that's dead-white or has a greenish tinge indicates a melon that was picked too soon. Don't you pick it, either. Next, feel the skin for 'bloom.' A good one will have a soft and velvety feel, slightly sticky or oily. One that feels like a billiard ball — smooth, hard and shiny — was picked too soon. A little give to the rind indicates ripeness."

Jane Brody, in "The Good Food Book," tells us that after picking, melons don't get sweeter, only softer and juicier. She recommends that you ripen them faster in a perforated paper bag. When ripe, refrigerate. Cut melons should be wrapped in plastic to contain the odor. Do not remove the seeds until ready to eat because the seeds keep the flesh from drying out.

Half of a five-inch melon has about 82 calories and provides the day's requirements for vitamins A and C.

READERS' FEEDBACK: PIE CRUSTS
Mrs. F. J. Schillow, Moscow, Pa.: "In response to a reader's request for advice on how to keep the bottom crust of a pie from getting soggy or moist, I brush the bottom crust with egg white before baking. Just break the egg in a cup and brush on with a pastry brush. It uses so little that the egg can be used as a whole egg for other cooking or baking. It makes the crust crispy in fruit, custard or pumpkin pies."

Fani's Kitchen

By Sondra Astor Stave

Fani's Kitchen has been open for 14 years at 1015 Main St. but only one item on the menu suggests that for the past year it has been owned by Choi Il Ho. That item is the fried wontons, 10 to an order, and one of the best things we had for lunch on a recent Saturday.

The restaurant is comparatively small with a half dozen booths, two tables and a counter for about a dozen. But with the constant flow of patrons, the three waitresses and two cooks were kept more than busy preparing and delivering platters of generally good food at prices that were, with only one exception, reasonable by any standards.

There is one soup daily and the bowl of clam chowder that we enjoyed was well endowed with clams and chunks of potato in an only slightly thickened milky broth.

The special platter of the day was a pepperburger served with french fries and coleslaw. While the hamburger was not thick enough to be cooked rare as ordered, the meat was flavorful and moist and there was such a profusion of peppers that at least as many surrounded the sandwich as were within it. The coleslaw was satisfactory and the crinkle-cut potatoes excellent, staying fresh tasting until the last.

The kitchen obviously does well with things fried as the onion rings were also pleasing. Real rings were covered with a crunchy batter that crumbled agreeably on bite.

A pastrami sandwich had a genuine New York deli taste. The meat was tender but with character and the rye bread had the proper slightly sour tanginess.

The chef's salad was served in a manner different from any other I have encountered. Iceberg lettuce chunks, sliced tomatoes and a hard boiled egg, halved, were topped with swirls of meat and cheese. Turkey, ham, roast beef and cheese were rolled together, jellyroll fashion, and then cut into one-inch pieces. I think I prefer the ingredients served separately, but it did make for an arresting presentation. Several bottled dressings are offered to patrons right from the containers.

The wontons, which really looked more like dumplings, were the stars at our table. Filled with ground meat and vegetables, these little pastries combined a flavorful interior with a well-fried noodle wrapper. The accompanying packaged sweet and sour and soy sauces would have diminished the integrity of the dumplings if used.

Apple pie tasted like the kind that was standard before new cuisines were introduced. A pleasant tasting crust enveloped a generous helping of apples baked to the stage of translucent crunchiness.

A coffee milkshake was served in the container in which it was blended. There was enough of the rich mixture to almost fill the glass twice.

Fani's Kitchen is another of the unique kind of restaurant that seems to flourish in Manchester and is a treat for those who are not looking for the standardized, always-the-same-taste kind of food found in a chain. With sandwiches ranging from $1 to $3.25 and platters peaking at $3.75, only the chef salad at $4.75 seemed less than a bargain.

Fani's well-prepared food, prompt and efficient service and good value make it worth a visit. ■

Advice

Rage over husband's affair fuels wife's fire for revenge

DEAR ABBY: Fifteen years ago, when I was 43 and pregnant with my seventh child, I found some pictures of a pretty young girl in my husband's wallet. Steve swore he didn't know how they got there, but I'm not stupid. I had enlargements made and hung them all over the house. My kids thought I was nuts, and Steve and I have been fighting ever since.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Abby, I hate my husband and want to make his life miserable. What should I do? I know he loves Jill, but why should I step aside after what he did to me?

HURTING BAD

DEAR HURTING: Don't make any decisions while you are in this bitter, vengeful state. You desperately need to vent your anger and unload your hostility. See a counselor and try to get your emotions under control. Then decide if you will be better off with him than without him, under the circumstances.

Living to make someone miserable will only make you a miserable old woman in the end. Think about it.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, a reader came down hard on you for using the term "Army brat" in your column. For your information, that term is alive and well. As a matter of fact, at my husband's 50th West Point reunion last June, Gen. Bruce Palmer said, "Many of us were 'Army brats' — as my mother used to call us."

Since Gen. Palmer is over 70, that term has been around for at least that long. My son a retired colonel, was an Army brat, and his son was an Army brat, and we're proud of it. MRS. R.J. QUINN JR., SAVANNAH, GA.

DEAR MRS. QUINN: Finally! Many wrote to say that they were called "Army brats" and never felt that the term was offensive, but I had hoped that some high-ranking Army officer would use that term publicly, thereby officially confirming its respectability. Your letter made my day. And a 21-gun salute to Gen. Palmer.

DEAR ABBY: A family problem has arisen recently and I'd like your opinion. My parents' divorce was final a year ago. They had been married for 33 years.

Every year our family (parents and seven brothers and sisters) goes to Colorado on a skiing trip. This year my dad wants to bring his girlfriend along, and our mother refuses to go if the girlfriend goes. My older sister says Mom and Dad are divorced so Dad has the right to bring anyone he wants, and Mom has nothing to say about it. I say, this is a family trip, and Dad's girlfriend is not "family" — she's just a girlfriend — so she should stay home, especially since she and Dad would share the same cabin if she went along.

What is your opinion? And would your answer be any different if my Dad and this girlfriend were married?

Unusual disease sends kids to the refrigerator

DEAR DR. GOTT: At 22, after a lifetime of searching, my daughter was told she had Prader-Willi Syndrome. Few doctors are knowledgeable about this disease. What can you tell us about it?

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: Prader-Willi Syndrome is an unusual disease marked by lack of muscle tone, mental retardation and a phenomenal appetite. Children with the condition literally will eat everything in sight: It's not unusual for them to clean out the refrigerator in one sitting unless parents have padlocked the door. The cause is thought to be a lack of hormones from the pituitary gland or a malfunction of the brain's appetite center. Mild diabetes often accompanies the syndrome. The biochemical cause of Prader-Willi disease may be due to a chromosomal abnormality. The disease usually occurs sporadically, but familial cases have been reported.

DEAR DR. GOTT: On my package of K-Lyte there is a warning that in cases of hyperkalemia, it could cause cardiac arrest. What is hyperkalemia?

DEAR READER: Hyperkalemia is too much potassium in the bloodstream. Excess potassium causes nausea, diarrhea, muscle weakness and a form of heart stoppage called ventricular fibrillation. The product you are taking contains potassium, hence the warning about overdose.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had glaucoma for 30 years. I was able to keep the pressure down using a variety of drops until last year, when I had laser treatments. Now the pressure is up again. Should I have another laser treatment or should I try more drops? My doctor is so busy that I've had to tell him about the new drops available.

DEAR READER: I don't know whether you are a candidate for further laser therapy or if you will need to take medicine. One way or another, the eye pressure must be kept down. An ophthalmologist can help you decide which type of treatment to use. Find one who is not too busy to give your eye the attention they need.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Recently, during a physical exam, the blood test showed I have an SGOT level of 63. I do not drink alcohol or take aspirin. Could you tell me what this test indicates? My doctor does not feel it is a problem.

DEAR READER: SGOT is medical shorthand for serum glutamic oxaloacetic transaminase, an enzyme found in the liver and heart and muscle tissue. Ordinarily, small amounts of the enzyme are released into the bloodstream and can be measured. If liver damage is present or if there has been heart or muscle damage, more of the enzyme appears in the blood. In hepatitis or heart attacks, for example, SGOT can be elevated to several hundred times normal. Your value seems to be minimally elevated. If at all, I'd have it rechecked in several months. If your other blood tests were normal.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report on Alzheimer's Disease discusses symptoms, management and new studies of this tragic and irreversible disease. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

Film Capsules

Blue Velvet (R) — Kyle MacLachlan, Laura Dern, Isabella Rossellini, Dennis Hopper. Director David Lynch's nightmarish black comedy is a coming-of-age story like no other. Home from college, Jeffrey (MacLachlan) discovers a human ear in a field, which leads to his involvement in a small town's seamy underworld of drugs and sexual brutality. Sadistic and funny by turns, the film is an emotional roller-coaster ride that never ceases to be visually stunning. The actors are excellent, and Hopper, as a maniacal drug addict, gives one of the most satanic performances ever committed to celluloid. Grade: A-minus.

Children of a Lesser God (R) — William Hurt, Marlee Matlin, Piper Laurie, Phillip Bosco. (Drama) This Tony-award winning play makes the transition from stage to screen with dignity intact. Both Hurt and Matlin deserve Oscar nominations for their physically and emotionally draining roles as a teacher and student who fall passionately in love. Matlin is especially wonderful, and her transcendent beauty and unique expressiveness are inspirational. This is the first must-see fall film of 1986. Love does have a language all its own. Grade: A-minus.

Crocodile Dundee (PG-13) — Paul Hogan, Linda Koslowksi, Mark Blum. (Comedy) The leather-skinned Dundee, best known for his Australian tourism commercials, makes a likable leading man in this comedic travelogue. An attractive reporter (Koslowksi) meets Hogan in the Australian bush, takes him to New York City and falls in love with him. Yuks abound when the naive Dundee makes his way around the big city, and there is just enough action (crocodile killing, snake wrestling, fish spearing) to keep audiences from squirming at the silliness. This is light fall fare. Grade: B-minus.

Jumpin' Jack Flash (R) — Whoopi Goldberg, Stephen Collins, John Wood, Carol Kane. (Comedy-Adventure) Whoopi Goldberg plays a lonely and bored transactions clerk who starts getting strange messages on her computer terminal — and suddenly finds herself in the middle of an international spy plot. Goldberg has a wonderfully expressive face, and she is ably assisted by Stephen Collins and Carol Kane, among others. This one won't start anyone pondering the meaning of life or the nature of the universe, but it is good diverting fun. Grade: B.

The Name of the Rose (R) — Sean Connery, F. Murray Abraham, Christian Slater. (Mystery) How do you adapt a 200,000-word mystery novel set in a 14th century cloister? Surprisingly, Umberto Eco's best-seller, directed by Jean-Jacques Annaud ("Quest for Fire") makes the transition with style and wit. Connery has his best role in years as monk-turned-sleuth William of Baskerville, and Abraham relishes his role as Grand Inquisitor. This wholly original film deserves to be seen. But the screenplay is taxing; pay attention to the action to reap the benefits. Grade: B.

Peggy Sue Got Married (PG-13) — Kathleen Turner, Nicholas Cage, Barry Miller, Catherine Hicks, Joan Allen, Kevin J. O'Connor. (Comedy) Turner goes to her 25th high-school reunion, faints and is thrust back to the time just before her graduation. "Back to the Future — Part II"? Hardly. Director Francis Coppola has crafted — at least for the first hour — a charming and engaging set of circumstances that explore the traumas of unresolved relationships. But Coppola loses control halfway through, and an outrageous scene involving mysticism and a weepy conclusion destroy the mood. Grade: B-minus.

Stand by Me (R) — Richard Dreyfuss, Wil Wheaton, River Phoenix, Corey Feldman, Jerry O'Connell. (Adventure-Drama) It's a shame Rob Reiner's latest film is rated R (for strong language), because those who stand to gain the most — the under-17 crowd — can't see it without parental supervision. The skeletal plot is based on Stephen King's autobiographical novella, "The Body." Four boys, living in the '60s, journey to find another boy's dead body. There is no horror, simply well-defined characters, lulling comedy and one of the best studies of friendship and coming of age to hit the screen. The case is flawless, and Reiner has directed with a heartwarming sensitivity. Bring tissues! Grade: B-plus.

'The Mission' has faults

By Bob Thomas
The Associated Press

Cinema Review

Deep in the South American jungle, a semi-conscious priest is being strapped to a wooden cross by Indians. They carry him to the river and push him into the quickening water.

Barely aware of what is happening to him, the priest is carried along the river. The current grows swifter, and an ominous roar begins to sound. Suddenly, the crucified priest is swept over the colossal Iguazu Falls.

This stunning vision marks the beginning of "The Mission," a new film by Roland Joffe and David Puttnam, makers of the acclaimed "The Killing Fields." Once again they delve into the subject of genocide, this time the mistreatment of Indians by 18th-century Spaniards and Portuguese, a process which the film's postscript tells us is still going on.

Impressive in many respects, falls. The story is seen through the eyes of the papal delegate (Ray McAnally) who must decide on the fate of the missions. His decision is predetermined in favor of the Europeans, and soldiers destroy the Indian communities with savage cruelty.

"The Mission" is filled with impressive vistas, especially of the magnificent falls. The human drama is less compelling. De Niro's conversion negates the conflict between him and Irons, and both are no match for the powerful and heartless politicians.

Roland Joffe has directed an earnest and well-meaning film but the crushing inevitability of the climax makes it a less than rewarding experience.

Robert Bolt ("A Man for All Seasons") wrote the script. David Puttnam and Fernando Ghia produced. The rating is PG, perhaps because of the violence. Running time: 125 minutes.

Pressure all around

By James Jacoby

Mike Edwards had an interesting deal to show me at the St. Louis regional in August. Mike, sitting South, arrived in three no-trump. Prospects weren't great after the opening lead, but there are always chances when you have eight tricks off the top. Cash-ing a lot of tricks can put the defend-ers under some pressure, and that was Mike's plan.

He grabbed the first trick and ran four rounds of clubs, West throwing a spade. Declarer next played king and ace of spades, West shedding a heart. Now Mike played the heart 10. His plan was to force West to lead away from the king of diamonds he presu-mably held. Although East had the king all along, look what happened. West blithely took all four of his heart winners. On the last heart East had to re-duce to two cards, and he telegraphed his agony. Eventually, to keep a high spade, East blanked his diamond king. By this time Mike had the right read-ing, and so when West led the jack of diamonds, declarer played low from the Q-6 in dummy and made his con-tract when the king came up.

Although declarer played well, West could still have won the day had he taken only three high hearts and then played the jack of diamonds. Then East would have been able to both pre-serve a high spade and keep his dia-mond king guarded, and the contract would have failed.

Marty Barrett of the Red Sox (left) and Mookie Wilson of the Mets came to the UMass campus in Amherst Friday to talk to students about racial relations in wake of a racially motivated brawl following the seventh game of the World Series.

World Series rivals ask UMass students to cool it

By Carolyn Lumsden The Associated Press

AMHERST, Mass. — New York Mets outfielder Mookie Wilson and Boston Red Sox second baseman Marty Barrett asked University of Massachusetts students Friday to put behind them a racial brawl that followed the final game of the World Series.

"In life there's some things you can't change," Wilson said at an assembly. "I was born ugly, I can't change that. ... You can't change the way society was formed hundreds of years ago, but you can influence the way you treat people."

Barrett, who is white, and Wilson, who is black, were invited to speak to a lunch attended by 175 leaders of white and black student organizations.

The lunch was followed by an assembly, in which about 700 students, most of them white, packed an auditorium and 500 watched the speeches on television monitors.

Wilson urged members of the luncheon audience to forget about the racial clash the night of Oct. 27. After the Mets defeated the Red Sox 6-5 to win the World Series, 1,000 students gathered outside the Southwest dormitories on the campus. An ensuing brawl between mostly white Red Sox fans and mostly black Mets fans sent more than a dozen students to the infirmary, police said.

Barrett told the assembly: "Life goes on. There are too many problems in the world that not having won the World Series shouldn't matter a whole lot. But some of the 700 black students on the 26,000-student campus said any argument over the series was only a symptom of racism at the school. And some called the appearance by the ballplayers "window-dressing."

"As a black man and a student I'm concerned about the results of what happened," said Charles Sheffield, 19, of Hempstead, N.Y. "The problem is that this is being hung on a Mets-Red Sox fight. We will get a report on what exactly happened that night, (but) will miss the larger picture."

Students criticized university Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey for not doing enough about racial tensions. Duffey has ordered two investigations of the incident. But he has rejected suggestions from students that the school conduct seminars on racism and increase policing on campus, saying such measures would not help.

The Padres, meanwhile, are negotiating with the city to extend their stadium lease, which expires after the 1988 season.

Padres hang out 'for sale' sign

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The owner of the San Diego Padres hung a for sale sign on the team Friday, saying she and her son-in-law had lost interest in running the club.

"I think you're all aware baseball is not my first love in the world," owner Joan Kroc said at a news conference with club president Ballard Smith, who is her son-in-law.

Both Smith and Kroc said any sale would be contingent on the buyer keeping the team in San Diego.

No formal offers for the 18-year-old franchise have been made and no negotiations are under way. Kroc and Smith denied that oil and real estate magnate Marvin Davis was among the potential buyers.

The Padres, meanwhile, are negotiating with the city to extend their stadium lease, which expires after the 1988 season.

Exciting Tyson gunning for Berbick

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Mike Tyson, who likes to read about and watch films of oldtime fighters, will try and become the youngest heavyweight champion tonight.

The aggressive, exciting Tyson is a 3-1 favorite to beat Trevor Berbick and win the World Boxing Council title at the age of 20 years, 4 months, 22 days.

"This is a chance to prove myself as the greatest fighter in the world," Tyson said. "If I break the record for being the youngest champion ever, that's immortality. No one's going to break it."

Floyd Patterson has been the youngest heavyweight champion. He was 21 years, 11 months, when he won the vacant undisputed title with a fifth-round knockout of Archie Moore on Nov. 30, 1956.

Patterson has said he is rooting for Tyson to break his record, secure in the knowledge that he was the first fighter to regain the heavyweight championship. The careers and lives of both Patterson and Tyson were heavily influenced by Cus D'Amato, who died Nov. 4, 1985, at the age of 77.

Tyson will take a 27-0 record, with 25 knockouts, into the scheduled 12-round bout at the Las Vegas Hilton. The fight will be televised live by HBO and start about 7:30 p.m. PDT.

"Most definitely, I will go for the knockout," Tyson said.

But Berbick predicts he is the one who will get it. "I'm looking to take him out by the seventh round," said the champion, who has a 31-4-1 record, with 23 knockouts.

Berbick has met unbeaten fighters in championship bouts twice before.

In a bid for the WBC title April 11, 1982, Berbick became the first fighter to go the distance with Larry Holmes in a championship bout. He lost a 15-round decision.

Last March 22, at Las Vegas, Berbick, a 6-1 underdog, won the title with a 12-round unanimous decision over Pinklon Thomas.

Berbick also was the first fighter to beat Greg Page and the last fighter to beat Muhammad Ali. He scored a 10-round decision over Ali on Dec. 11, 1981.

But Ali was the star of that show despite his eroded skills, just as Tyson is the star of Saturday night's show even though he still has boxing lessons to learn.

"He's just fighting maybe 30 percent of his capabilities," said Kevin Rooney, the former junior welterweight who trains Tyson.

"What's going to happen when he reaches his potential? What will people say then?"

It doesn't seem that Tyson ever will be a personality on the order of Ali, who transcended the bounds of boxing. But Tyson could become a major star in a sport that has seen many of its stars fade in the last couple of years.

Should Tyson beat Berbick, then beat the World Boxing Association champion (currently Tim Witherspoon) and the International Boxing Federation champion (Michael Spinks) and win the undisputed title, he would be one of the most valuable attractions in sports.

The youngster, who learned street fighting in Mike Tyson (right) watches as Jose Ribalta falls backward in their match last August in Atlantic City. Tyson will attempt to lift the WBC heavyweight boxing title from Trevor Berbick tonight in Las Vegas.

Brooklyn's tough Brownsville section and who was in reform school at 13, stirs a crowd from the moment he appears.

He enters the ring wearing black trunks, but no robe and no socks. He stands with his arms as his sides waiting for the business at hand to begin, giving the impression he intends to get the job done quickly.

He appears nerveless. But, he said, "I always have butterflies." Then, he added, "But as far as being intimidated, no one intimidates me."

Tyson, who is listed at 5-foot-11 but appears to be closer to 5-9, is extremely quick. In many fights, he has been on an opponent almost before the sound of the opening bell has died.

Tyson has scored 15 first-round knockouts, and five of those were in a span of from 30 to 50 seconds. His 27 fights have totaled 76 rounds. His longest layoff since he turned pro was 76 days, and all of his fights have been packed within 18 months. That's how the oldtimers he admires fought.

But Tyson has been past six rounds only three times — he won 10-round decisions over James Tillis and Mitch Green, and scored a 10th-round knockout over Jose Ribalta — and a question about this fight is what will happen if a battle-tested veteran like Berbick forces him into the late rounds.

Berbick, who has exhibited excellent stamina in the past, dominated the second half of his fight against Thomas. The native of Jamaica, who lives in Miami, has fought 249 rounds and has gone between six and 10 rounds 15 times and between 11 and 15 rounds five times.

The fight will be the fifth in the eight-fight HBO series of heavyweight title bouts. No. 6 will be Witherspoon's defense of the WBA title Dec. 12 at Madison Square Garden in New York. Then, the WBC and WBA champions will fight March 7 at the Las Vegas Hilton, with the winner to meet Spinks at the Hilton in May.

take up some of the slack caused by Washburn's departure.

"We can wrap up the wrist and he can't hurt it any more if he plays, but there's just the small problem that he can't use his right hand, and he's right-handed," Valvano said. "He can run and jump. But he can't catch the ball, he can't throw it and he can't shoot. And this isn't football, where you can just send him in and tell him to knock someone down."

Shackelford suffered a hairline fracture of the wrist while dunking in an intrasquad game Nov. 1. It should be healed within another three weeks, Valvano said, "but we have to play Navy tomorrow."

The 6-9 Lester, from Roxboro, N.C.,

"can play," Valvano said, "but he's never played against anybody but us. This will be his first college game."

In addition to Robinson, 6-1 point guard Doug Wojcik, who averaged 7.2 assists last season, is back for the Midshipmen, ranked ninth in the preseason poll.

"Doug's the starter and David's the finisher," Navy Coach Pete Herrmann said of his inside-outside combination. "Robinson has the potential to be the best big man in the country and Wojcik already is one of the top point guards."

"And they are great friends. They have been all along," Herrmann said. "David won the Most Valuable Player Award in a tournament in Japan and he had it engraved to Doug."

Pam Shriver bends to make a forehand return in her doubles semifinal match Friday at the Virginia Slims tennis championships in New York. Shriver and teammate Martina Navratilova eliminated defending champions Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia and Australia's Wendy Turnbull 1-6, 6-1, 6-1 to advance to the finals.

Line calls help Graf into semis

NEW YORK (AP) — Helped by a controversial line call, second-seeded Steffi Graf escaped the steadiness of Bulgaria's Manuela Maleeva 3-6, 6-3, 7-5 Friday night to reach the semifinals of the $1-million Virginia Slims Championships.

The other quarterfinal match saw No. 4 seed Helena Sukova against her doubles partner, Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, who is seeded sixth in this 16-woman, season-ending event.

Martina Navratilova and Pam Shriver shifted into high gear in the second set to advance to the doubles final of the championships.

The top-seeded team eliminated defending champions Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia and Australia's Wendy Turnbull 1-6, 6-1, 6-1.

Navratilova and Shriver will play Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany and Sukova of Czechoslovakia in the doubles title match on Saturday. The winners will share $45,000, while the losing team will split $23,000.

One singles semifinal was set Thursday night when Navratilova, the No. 1 seed, and Shriver, seeded fifth, won their quarterfinal matches.

On Friday, Mandlikova and Turnbull were devastating in the opening set, hitting crisp shots from all over the court and completely dominating the top-seeded duo. And it was Navratilova, the world's top-ranked player, who had her service broken twice.

But in the fifth game of the second set, the eventual winners broke Mandlikova's service after the two teams battled through five deuces. After that, it was no contest as Navratilova and Shriver displayed the brand of tennis that once carried them to 109 consecutive match victories.

"We haven't lost a doubles match since last March," Shriver said.

"Yeah," Navratilova interjected. "It was here on this court, and also in the semifinals."

In March, Navratilova and Shriver lost in the semifinals to Mandlikova and Turnbull, who went on to defeat Kohde-Kilsch and Sukova in the title match.

In the third set Friday, Turnbull held her service in the second game to level the score at 1-1. It was all Navratilova and Shriver after that.

Bowl picture is sharpening

By Herschel Nissenson
The Associated Press

Games at State College, Pa., and Lincoln, Neb., on Saturday will determine whether the Miami Hurricanes, the nation's No. 1 college football team, can stay home for the holidays.

The Fiesta Bowl, which has lined up Miami and No. 2 Penn State in the biggest postseason coup since the Sugar Bowl sweet-talked Alabama and Notre Dame into their 1973 game, will be rooting for Penn State to beat Pitt.

The Orange Bowl, which has produced three of the last five national champions, will be pulling for Pitt to upset Penn State and for fifth-ranked Nebraska to beat No. 3 Oklahoma. If Pitt and Nebraska win, Miami will play the Cornhuskers on New Year's night in the Orange Bowl and the Fiesta will be left with once-beaten Penn State and dreams of what might have been.

Besides 10-0 Miami, 10-0 Penn State, 9-1 Oklahoma and 9-1 Nebraska, the only other team in position to make a pitch for No. 1 is fourth-ranked Arizona State, 9-0-1, which will represent the Pacific-10 Conference in the Rose Bowl. The Sun Devils end their regular season Saturday at No. 14 Arizona.

Contrary to NCAA regulations, most of the bowl invitations already have been issued. Saturday is merely RSVP day.

College Football

The visiting team in the Rose Bowl will be decided when sixth-ranked Michigan plays No. 7 Ohio State at Columbus for the Big Ten crown. The loser goes to the Cotton Bowl.

Eighth-ranked Louisiana State has clinched at least a tie for the Southeastern Conference championship and can move closer to a Sugar Bowl berth by defeating Notre Dame Saturday night at Baton Rouge. Ninth-ranked Alabama can tie the LSU for the SEC title by defeating No. 15 Auburn next week (both teams are idle this weekend).

That would leave the decision up to the Sugar Bowl, which prefers Alabama but has said it would invite the highest ranked team in the Associated Press poll to represent the SEC against the Oklahoma-Nebraska loser.

The rest of Saturday's schedule involving the AP's Top Twenty finds No. 10 Southern California at No. 18 UCLA, No. 11 Arkansas at Southern Methodist, No. 12 Washington at Washington State, Texas Christian at No. 13 Texas

A&M, No. 16 Stanford at California, Texas at No. 17 Baylor, and South Carolina at No. 19 Clemson. Georgia, the No. 20 team, is not scheduled.

If things go according to form, the anticipated bowl lineup looks like this:

Fiesta — Miami-Penn State; Rose — Arizona State vs. Michigan; Ohio State winner; Orange — Oklahoma-Nebraska winner vs. Texas A&M or Arkansas; Cotton — SWC champion vs. Michigan-Ohio State loser; Sugar — LSU or Alabama vs. Oklahoma-Nebraska loser.

Citrus — Auburn-Southern Cal; Sun — Washington vs. LSU or Alabama; Aloha — Arizona vs. undecided; Gator — Clemson-Stanford; Bluebonnet — Baylor-Georgia Tech; Freedom — UCLA vs. Air Force or Brigham Young; Hall of Fame — Boston College-Georgia.

Holiday — WAC champion vs. Iowa; All-American — Florida State-Indiana; Peach — North Carolina State-Virginia Tech.

Navy ready to sink declawed Wolfpack

By Trudy Tyson
The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — With sophomore Charles Shackelford nursing a broken wrist, North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano may use freshman Avie Lester against Navy's All-America center David Robinson in Saturday's Tip-Off Classic.

"And if he goes down, I may have to go in," said Valvano, whose team, ranked 17th in The Associated Press' preseason poll, has been hobbled by injuries and the decision by 6-foot-11 Chris Washburn to leave school two years early for the NBA.

"I never had anything like this happen in preseason in 20 years of coaching," Valvano said. "None of the injuries are anything we won't be over in a few weeks, but this is a fun game and I'm really disappointed that we won't be at our best against a once-in-a-lifetime player like Robinson."

The 6-11 Robinson, who averaged 22 points and 13 rebounds last season for the Midshipmen, was the top vote-getter on the AP's first preseason All-America team.

Valvano's wounded include starting 6-7 swingman Walker Lambiotte, who has a pulled groin muscle; junior guard Vinnie Del Negro, with a twisted ankle; 6-9 forward Mike Glomi, a transfer from Indiana, with a blistered foot, and Shackelford, who had been expected to

NFL plans steroid testing in '87

NEW YORK — The National Football League plans to begin testing players for steroids in 1987, a league spokesman said Friday.

The tests will be conducted when players report to minicamp or training camp under the current labor agreement in effect through Aug. 1, 1987, spokesman Joe Browne said.

The NFL bans the use of steroids, which builds muscle but has serious side effects, although it previously has not specifically tested for the drug.

NFL Capsules

Pittsburgh (4-7) at Cleveland (7-4)

1 p.m. Sunday, NBC.
AFC Central co-leading Browns try for first season sweep of Pittsburgh since '69. Cleveland won earlier meeting 27-24. Teams have split home-and-home series past 4 seasons but Steelers have not won in Cleveland since '81. Last week the Steelers beat division rival Houston 21-10 as Cleveland was losing to the Los Angeles Raiders 27-14. Steelers QB Mark Malone has thrown a TD in each of past 7 games; has not thrown an interception in last 127 attempts. RB Earnest Jackson has rushed 119 times for 478 yards, 4 TDs. PK Gary Anderson 138 straight PATs longest active in NFL. DE Keith Willis has 9 1/2 of teams 33 sacks. Steelers have allowed NFL-low 14 sacks. Steelers have scored last 13 times inside their opponents' 20 (11 TDs, 2 FGs). Browns QB Bernie Kosar held to just 188 yards vs. Raiders, completing 15 of 34 with 2 interceptions. WR Reggie Langhorne has a reception in every game this season for 31 catches, 529 yards, 1 TD. Cleveland only controlled ball for 24:41 vs. Los Angeles.

Atlanta (5-5-1) at San Francisco (6-4-1)

4 p.m. Sunday, CBS.
NFC West contest has San Francisco looking for their 4th straight home win over Falcons. 49ers lead overall series 21-17-1, which includes 10-10 OT tie on Oct. 19. A Falcon win, coupled with a New Orleans victory over Los Angeles this Sunday would put all four West Division teams within one-half game of each other (Rams and Saints, 7-5; Falcons and 49ers, 6-5-1). Both teams come off losses outside the division: Falcons fell 13-10 to Bears, while the 49ers dropped Monday night game to Washington 14-6. QB Turk Schonert replaced David Archer (shoulder, out) vs. Bears and will start against San Francisco. Of the 198 points Falcons have given up, 116 have been scored in 2nd quarter. San Francisco outgained Washington 501 yards to 266, but came away with only 34 and 38-yard Ray Werschling FGs. QB Joe Montana set club records for attempts (60) and yards (441) on 33 completions vs. Redskins. WR Jerry Rice has 12 catches for 204 yards against Washington. Joe Morris and the Giants will match up against the defense of the Denver Broncos Sunday at Giants' Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

Giants, Broncos match defenses

By Tom Canavan
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Denver Broncos will not be looking for revenge or anything close to that when they return to Giants Stadium for the second time this season, says quarterback John Elway.

All they want to prove is that they are a good football team, something Elway says they failed to do in a 22-10 loss to the New York Jets about five weeks ago.

The opponent Sunday will be the New York Giants, the other New York Metropolitan-area referee playing in the New Jersey Meadowlands.

Both New York and Denver come into the game with 9-2 marks. The Broncos have a two-game lead over Kansas City and the Los Angeles Raiders in the AFC West, while the Giants are tied with Washington for first place in the NFC East.

"I think it would be more a revenge type of deal if we were playing the Jets again," Elway said. "As far as the Meadowlands, we have to play better than we did last time. I don't think we can think of revenge or redemption knowing the type of team the Giants are. We have to go back there and play our football game because we want to go back there and win."

The biggest problem Elway and the Broncos faced against the Jets was falling behind 22-0 in the first half.

"We looked at that film," said Giants Coach Bill Parcells. "When you get in front 21-0 or 22-0, whatever it was, it's a lot different situation than when you are behind. The defense gets to concentrate more on one phase."

And the Jets really concentrated on stopping the Denver passing attack, saddling Elway five times before sending him to the sidelines a little woozy.

The Giants' defense also is capable of putting pressure on the quarterback and it comes into the game leading the NFC in sacks, with 43. Linebacker Lawrence Taylor leads the NFL with a club-record 16 1/2 sacks.

"I think the key for us will be if we are able to run the ball and not have to throw it a lot," said Broncos Coach Dan Reeves, adding that the key for his team on defense will be to stop the rushing of Joe Morris, who has gained 1,040 yards this season.

Bengals generated 425 yards vs. Seahawks and came up with season-high 5 takeaways (2 interceptions, 3 fumble recoveries). WR Chris Collinsworth has 42 catches for 769 yards, 5 TDs. CB Louis Breen had 2 interception against Seattle.

Eric Dickerson of the Rams fights for yardage against the Saints in an NFC West game two weeks ago in New Orleans. The clubs meet again Sunday in Los Angeles with Dickerson and the Rams hoping for a better fate. The Saints won the first game, 6-0.

NFC West squads collide

By The Associated Press

The NFC West, where the San Francisco 49ers and Los Angeles Rams have ruled for years, can be turned into one huge knot this weekend by the Atlanta Falcons and New Orleans Saints.

In a rare all-division scheduling situation Sunday, the Falcons visit the 49ers and the Saints play the Rams at Anaheim. If the visiting teams win, all four teams would be within a half-game of each other.

New Orleans is largely responsible for the situation, having won five of its last six games, including a 6-0 victory over the Rams in the Superdome two weeks ago — one week after defeating the 49ers 23-10.

Now, the Saints are 6-5, one game behind the first-place 7-4 Rams and in between San Francisco, 6-4-1, and Atlanta, 5-5-1.

"Anyone can win it (the division title)," San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh said. "I wouldn't be surprised to see a 9-7 record or an 8-7-1 come out on top."

The NFL's 12th week opened Thursday night with the Los Angeles Raiders beating the San Diego Chargers 37-31 in overtime. Marcus Allen ran 28 yards for the winning touchdown 8:33 into the extra period. The Chargers forced the overtime by rallying from a 21-point deficit in the second half, then blocking Chris Bahr's 35-yard field goal attempt on the final play

In regulation.

In other games Sunday, Buffalo will be at New England, Denver at the New York Giants, Detroit at Tampa Bay, Green Bay at Chicago, Indianapolis at Houston, Minnesota at Cincinnati, Pittsburgh at Cleveland, Kansas City at St. Louis, Dallas at Washington, and Philadelphia at Seattle.

The New York Jets are at Miami Monday night. New Orleans' defense has been the main instrument in the rise of a team that never finished over .500 or made the playoffs in its previous 19 years of existence.

But Coach Jim Mora, whose Saints limited Eric Dickerson to 57 yards on 21 carries in their first meeting, warns that the Rams aren't the same team that the Saints blanked two weeks ago. He points to rookie quarterback Jim Everett, who made his long-awaited debut for the Rams against New England last week and completed 13 of 19 passes for 193 yards and three touchdowns.

"Everett makes a big difference in how we prepare for them," Mora said. "Before, you could zero in on stopping their running game, and it's still their strength. But now you have to prepare for other things. I get the feeling they're going to throw the ball more with Everett." But Coach John Robinson of the Rams suggests he will bring Everett along slowly.

"We have to be careful not to assume he's going to go out and play at an All-Pro level each week," Robinson said. "This is only his second game coming up."

Atlanta, which began the season with four straight wins, heads into San Francisco with four straight losses and five straight winless games — the Falcons played a 10-10 tie with the 49ers in their first meeting.

Quarterbacks also are the story in this game.

David Archer, Atlanta's starter, suffered a separated shoulder in last Sunday's 13-10 loss to Chicago and is lost for the season. He will be replaced by Turk Schonert, who complained of a bruised shoulder after spelling Archer against the Bears and will be making his first start in two years.

"We will push on, and I think Turk will play well," Coach Dan Henning said.

San Francisco, meanwhile, will be playing its third game since the return of Joe Montana, out seven weeks after undergoing surgery on a ruptured disc in his back. Jeff Kemp played the first game against Atlanta.

Celtics bomb the Warriors

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird hit on four three-point bombs and scored 32 points Friday night as the Boston Celtics whipped the Golden State Warriors 135-120 for their 48th consecutive home court victory.

Kevin McHale had 23 points, Robert Parish 19, Danny Ainge 17 and Jerry Sichting 15 in helping the Celtics dominate the Warriors, who have not won in Boston since Jan. 29, 1978.

The Celtics, unbeaten at Boston Garden for nearly one year, ran a 17-4 surge in the second period to a 67-56 halftime lead, but the Warriors, led by Chris Mullin, pulled to within five points early in the third period.

Then, with the score 82-77 shortly after Boston veteran Dennis Johnson was ejected on two technical fouls, the Celtics came alive again.

McHale scored two baskets and Parish and Sichting one each, all on layups, as Boston scored eight points in a row and went on to a 104-87 advantage after three periods.

The Celtics then breezed to their fifth consecutive victory, raising their season record to 8-2.

The Warriors were led by Sleepy Floyd with 30 points. Mullin had 19 and Greg Ballard and Chris Washburn 15 each.

Pistons 120, 76ers 110

At Philadelphia, Isiah Thomas and Adrian Dantley each scored 27 points to lead the Detroit Pistons to a 120-110 NBA victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Friday night.

Detroit led 59-54 at the half and held on throughout the third quarter as Vinnie Johnson scored eight of the Pistons' 28 third-quarter points.

Tim McCormick scored eight points for the 76ers in the third quarter, but Philadelphia could not pull any closer than six points down in the period.

Early in the fourth quarter, Philadelphia closed the gap to three points when Sedale Threatt hit a three-point shot with 11:56 left in the game. Detroit, however, scored the next eight points, capped by Rick Mahorn's two free throws with 9:35 left in the game.

The Pistons never relinquished the lead through the second half, keeping the 76ers at least three points down the rest of the way.

Bullets 115, Rockets 99

At Landover, Md., Jeff Malone scored 38 points and Moses Malone set a team record for foul shots in scoring 34 points Friday night as the Washington Bullets defeated the Houston Rockets 115-99 in the NBA.

Moses Malone made 20 of 33 free throws, the most ever made by a Washington player.

Washington scored the first seven points of the game and led the entire way. The Bullets were ahead 27-16 after the first quarter.

The Malones combined for 40 points in the first half as Washington led 60-53. The Bullets increased the margin to 93-72 after three periods and went on to win their third straight game.

Jim Peterson scored 16 points for Houston and Akeem Olajuwon added 15. The Rockets again played with injured forward Ralph Sampson.

Bulls 101, Knicks 99

At Chicago, Michael Jordan set an NBA record by scoring Chicago's final 18 points, including an 18-foot jump shot with one second remaining Friday night that gave the Bulls a 101-99 NBA victory over the New York Knicks.

Jordan, leading the NBA in scoring with a 38.4 average, finished with 40 points. With the score 99-99, Jordan took an inbounds pass near his own basket and drove down the left sideline before connecting on his lean-in shot. After a timeout, Gerald Wilkins missed a three-point shot as time expired.

Jordan's burst surpassed the previous NBA record for consecutive points by a player for his team of 16, set by Washington's Leon Wood last season.

Jordan had tied the score 85-85 with 6:29 left to start his big scoring spurt. He later scored 10 points in an 87-second span.

Jordan had given the Bulls a 97-95 edge on a driving layup and free throw after New York's Bill Cartwright had put his team ahead 95-94 with two free throws.

After Wilkins' two free throws tied the score at 97-97, Jordan hit a short jumper with 13 seconds remaining for a 99-97 Chicago edge, but Wilkins' short jumper with 33 seconds left again tied the score.

John Paxson came off the bench to score 20 points for the Bulls. Rory Sparow had 22 for the Knicks and Kenny Walker added 20.

East Catholic head football coach Jude Kelly (right) gives some instruction during a pre-season practice session. Kelly's next set of instructions will be against Manchester High on Thanksgiving Day as East's ACC championship game was canceled.

Game canceled, East co-champs

It's a far cry from the way Coach Jude Kelly and his East Catholic High School football team would want it. But the Eagles, if Kelly has been informed correctly, are co-champions of the All Connecticut Conference with Notre Dame of West Haven following the cancellation of their title game scheduled for Fairfield University.

The game was originally scheduled Friday night, then rescheduled for noon today, but wet field conditions at Fairfield University made it impossible to play the game. Kelly said he called George Fasolo, secretary of the ACC, and asked him if all avenues had been explored. "He said he had (looked all over)," Kelly said. "He (Fasolo) said either sites were not available or that they didn't want us."

Kelly also asked Fasolo in regards to the championship. "He said we (East and Notre Dame) would be co-champs. That's based on that the game was to determine the champion. Since no game was played, both teams are (to be) considered co-champions. I said that's okay, if that's the case," the Eagle coach said.

Kelly said his feelings about not playing the game were mixed. "They're mixed in a couple of different ways. I'm disappointed in that I felt if we played the game, we were physically and mentally ready to give an outstanding effort."

"From that respect, I'm disappointed. Notre Dame is an outstanding team and I don't know what the outcome would have been, but I'm sure our kids would have played up to their potential. The kids were ready," he continued.

"(But) on the other end, it was good not to be in the middle. We were wondering when, if we were going to play. Are we going to play Friday? Saturday? Or cancel? It was hard to concentrate with a lot of ifs. Now with that over, we can start concentrating on Manchester," Kelly said, referring to his team's traditional Thanksgiving Day matchup with crosstown Manchester High School.

Notre Dame was 6-0 in ACC play during the regular season while the Eagles were 4-1-1, their lone loss a 28-16 setback to the Green Knights. Both Notre Dame, 9-0-1 overall, and East, 8-1-1 overall, have two games left. Each has a date on Thanksgiving and each has qualified for a state championship game. Notre Dame will meet Trumbull High in the Class LL championship game while East is one of the qualifiers for the state Class MM title game, a championship it won back in 1983.

Sator canned by Rangers

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Phil Esposito, general manager of the New York Rangers, Friday fired Ted Sator as coach and named himself interim coach.

Saying he had been "thinking about the move for three weeks," Esposito announced the firing prior to the Rangers' game Friday night against the Vancouver Canucks. The game was the third in a four-game road trip for the Rangers, who had lost three in a row and were in last place in the NHL's Patrick Division with a 5-10-4 record.

Seven of the Rangers' defeats have been by one goal, including Wednesday night's 5-4 overtime defeat by the Edmonton Oilers.

Added to the team's problems has been a clash of philosophies between Sator, a defensive-minded coach, and Esposito, a former NHL scoring star and an offensive-minded general manager.

"Ted was a disciplinarian to the point that it hurt him," Esposito said. "I'm convinced that we have a pretty good team. The playoffs last year were unbelievable."

"I told him (Sator) this morning I was going to make the change," Esposito added. "This is one of the toughest decisions I've every had to make. We are eight points out of a playoff spot and I didn't see it getting any better. I will coach... until we find someone else who can coach."

The Rangers also dismissed assistant coaches Reg Higgs and Jack Birch.

Esposito, who never has coached an NHL team, emphasized his new job was temporary and that a new coach would be named "as soon as possible."

Although Esposito said, "There was no last straw, just a buildup of a lot of things," he pointed out that two losses this season to the division-rival New Jersey Devils and an 8-6 loss to the Oilers at New York Sunday night, in which the Rangers blew a 5-1 lead, influenced his decision.

"The game against Edmonton blew me away," Esposito said. "It was the way it happened, four-goal leads disappearing in addition to two- and three-goal leads."

"And both games against New Jersey were decisive, and that's a team we have to beat. I never really thought I'd be replacing Ted. I did think about replacing the assistant coaches."

Sator's original two-year contract was extended through the 1987-88 season after he led the Rangers to the Patrick Division postseason championship and the Stanley Cup playoffs last season. The Rangers lost to eventual Stanley Cup champion Montreal in the Wales Conference finals.

This season, however, the Rangers started with three straight losses and have remained in last place.

Sator was hired by Craig Patrick in June 1985 after two years as assistant coach for the Philadelphia Flyers. The Rangers were forced to give the Flyers two players as compensation for hiring Sator.

Sator's record as New York's coach was 41-48-10 in regular-season play and 8-8 in the playoffs.

NHL looks at brawl

MONTREAL (AP) — Brian O'Neill, the executive vice president of the National Hockey League, has requested films of a fight-filled game between the Boston Bruins and the Montreal Canadiens to assess whether he'll take disciplinary action.

Referee Andy Van Hellemond meted out 124 minutes in penalties in Thursday night's game, including eight player ejections that resulted from a bench-clearing brawl late in the second period.

The brawl spilled into the corridor behind the Bruins' bench, prompting Van Hellemond to suspend play with 4:51 left in the second period. The 4:51 was tacked on at the start of the third period, and Montreal went on to win 3-1.

Ryan Walter of the Canadiens received an automatic three-game suspension for being the first player off the bench.

Montreal enforcer Chris Nilan and scrappy winger Claude Lemieux both received automatic one-game suspensions, as did Bruins tough guy Jay Miller.

Nilan fought with the Bruins' Ken Linseman on the rampway to the Canadiens' dressing room after linesman Kevin Collins tried to escort him to the dressing room.

Whalers have Blues singing

HARTFORD (AP) — Goalie Mike Liut stopped 22 shots to post his 14th career shutout as the Hartford Whalers blanked the St. Louis Blues 4-0 in the NHL Friday night.

Hartford used power-play goals by Stewart Gavin and Kevin Dineen to support Liut. Doug Jarvis and Mike Millar also scored for the Whalers, who stopped a five-game unbeaten streak by the Blues.

Liut was severely tested just twice — on hard and low shots by Greg Paslawski and Rick Meagher — en route to blanking St. Louis, the team that traded him to Hartford on Feb. 22, 1985.

The Whalers took a 1-0 lead at 16:56 of the first period on a 5-on-3 power-play. A low shot by Dave Babych struck Gavin who was screening goalie Greg Millen.

The Whalers made it 2-0 on the power-play at 8:21 of the second period when Ray Ferraro poked the puck away from defenseman Brian Benning and assisted Dineen.

The goals by Jarvis and Millar, a rookie, came in a 2:13 span of the second period. Jarvis scored at 12:01 as he slipped past the defense after a nice feed from Dave Tippett. Millar hit from the slot on a pass from Paul Lawless.

Liut ranks behind only Glenn Resch (26), Gilles Meloche (20) and Billy Smith (19) among active goaltenders in shutouts.

Nordiques 6, Sabres 1

At Buffalo, N.Y., Michel Goulet scored three goals and Mark Hunter added two to spark the Quebec Nordiques to a 6-1 NHL victory Friday night over the Buffalo Sabres.

Hunter opened the scoring at 14:51 mark of the first period, batting in a rebound from directly in front of Sabres goaltender Jacques Cloutier.

In the second period, Paul Gillis gave the Nordiques a 2-0 cushion when Mike Eagles knocked Buffalo defeneman Mike Ramsey off the puck in the corner, and the puck went directly to Gillis.

Capitals 3, Red Wings 3

At Detroit, Gerard Gallant and John Ogrudnick scored third-period goals Friday night to lift the Detroit Red Wings into a 3-3 NHL tie with the Washington Capitals that extended winless streaks for both teams.

Trailing 3-1 entering period, Gallant and Ogrudnick scored 2:46 apart.

The tie extended Detroit's winless streak to five games. Washington is winless in its last six.

Kings 4, Jets 1

At Winnipeg, Manitoba, Morris Lukowich scored two goals during a four-goal third-period rally as the Los Angeles Kings beat the Winnipeg Jets 4-1 Friday night.

Phil Sykes and Sean McKenna, who scored into an empty net, registered the other goals as the Kings extended their unbeaten streak to four games.

JOHANNESBURG, (AP) — Barclays Bank's largest divestment yet in South Africa, is selling its stake in Barclays National Bank of South Africa — the biggest commercial bank in the country — to a consortium of South African companies for $236 million.

Barclays Bank of Britain said the sale is 100 percent of the bank's stake in the bank since gradually has sold its stake. The governor of the South African Reserve Bank, Gerhardus van der Merwe, said the sale "is not expected to exert any effect internationally on the banking system."

However, South African officials expressed fears it would set off a chain-reaction of divestment by other British companies. The sale would result in the loss of foreign capital in the nation's already faltering economy.
