Volunteer worker Liza Deacon of Rehoboth, Mass., holds a wet blanket on a pilot whale that beached itself on First Encounter Beach in Eastham, Mass., Thursday morning.

Jobless rate stays stuck at 7% level

WASHINGTON — The chances of civilian unemployment dipping below 7 percent this year faded today as the government announced that joblessness remained stuck at that level in November for the third straight month.
As 1986 began, with unemployment steady at 6.7 percent from November through January, Reagan administration officials had predicted joblessness for the year would average 6.8 percent, compared with 7.2 percent for 1985.
But the rate has dropped below 7 percent in only three months: January, July and August.
A stagnant labor force, which had kept the jobless rolls down over the summer, began rising again in October. That trend continued in November.
The Labor Department said that the economy created 131,000 jobs in November, according to a household survey, but that the pool of people competing for those jobs grew by 172,000.
The number of unemployed Americans rose by 41,000 to 8,283,000.
A separate business payroll survey indicated larger employment growth last month, 250,000, almost all of it in the service sectors.
Job growth in services has accounted for all of the 2.4 million job expansion over the last 12 months.
The department said 120,000 of the new November jobs were in business and health services.
Some economists had predicted as much.
expands in November due to pre-Christmas hiring, grew at a somewhat slower pace than is typical."
Figures from the payroll survey showed that employment in general merchandise stores rose by 103,000 to 2.49 million in November. After seasonal adjustments, however, such employment was recorded as having fallen by 35,000 jobs.
Some economists had predicted as much.

Volunteers plead for whales' lives

EASTHAM, Mass. — Volunteers who helped rescue about 25 beached whales pleaded with veterinarians not to kill other stranded animals, but officials said the lethal injections ended the whales' misery.
One whale was launched back into the water Thursday by rescuers who slipped a tarpaulin under its 15-foot body as veterinarians prepared to administer the injection.
"It was a happy ending," volunteer Marilyn Schmidt said of the whale, which rescuers nicknamed Bianca. "She's swimming around out there right now. We watched her swim out to the ocean."
About 50 pilot whales beached themselves Wednesday, mostly in the vicinity of First Encounter Beach here. They averaged 15 feet in length and weighed up to 2 tons.
Rescuers and officials said Thursday about 22 had died or been put to death and about 25 had returned to sea. Two whales were being cared for in a small body of water called Salt Pond and two others had been taken to the New England Aquarium in Boston.
The status of two other whales, including Bianca, was unknown, said Andrea Conley, a aquarium spokeswoman.
The volunteers who had spent Wednesday night trying to calm the beached whales and keep them wet were angered at the decision to put some of the animals to death.
Schmidt said a veterinarian was preparing to kill Bianca before rescuers managed to get it off the beach.
"The veterinarian from the New England Aquarium had made a determination to kill her," she said. "In the interim, we pulled her out to a deeper channel."
Dr. Joseph Geraci, of Ontario Veterinary College in Canada and a research veterinarian for the New England Aquarium, said the injections were the "most humane solution" for the beached whales, which were suffering under the crush of their own weight.
"We got eye contact from her. We talked to her and she was doing OK," Schmidt said of Bianca.

Probe of Iran deals keeps growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional probe of the Iran-Contra scandal is expanding as both the House and Senate move to establish investigative units and one committee casts a net of subpoenas for a growing list of witnesses and documents.
The widening investigation is part of the increasing pressure being placed on President Reagan and some of his closest aides by members of Congress and Reagan's own administration.
The Senate Intelligence Committee on Thursday spent more than four hours under tight secrecy quizzing Robert M. Gates, the No. 2 official at the Central Intelligence Agency, on what he knows about the deal that sent plane loads of arms to Iran and diverted as much as $30 million of the proceeds to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.
Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., the committee's chairman, said the committee's list of potential witnesses had been expanded and now included the National Security Council, except for the president and Vice President George Bush.
While he did not name them, that list potentially includes CIA Director William Casey, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger and Adm. William J. Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.
The probe now also encompasses a long list of documents, and committee staff members were dispatched around the country Thursday to subpoena papers from a number of sources, including several businesses, Durenberger said.
"We're putting together a lot of people and a lot of pieces and a lot of documents in order to come to an answer, which I'm afraid the American public assumes the president already knows," Durenberger said.
Weinberger said in an interview in Brussels, Belgium, that it would be "clearly the exception" if the president did not know all essential details about something as important as the arms deal and the diversion of cash to Central America.
Weinberger said the episode was the result of bad advice from Reagan aides who told the president to seek rapprochement with Iranian moderates. The comment

Creche display on public land said legal

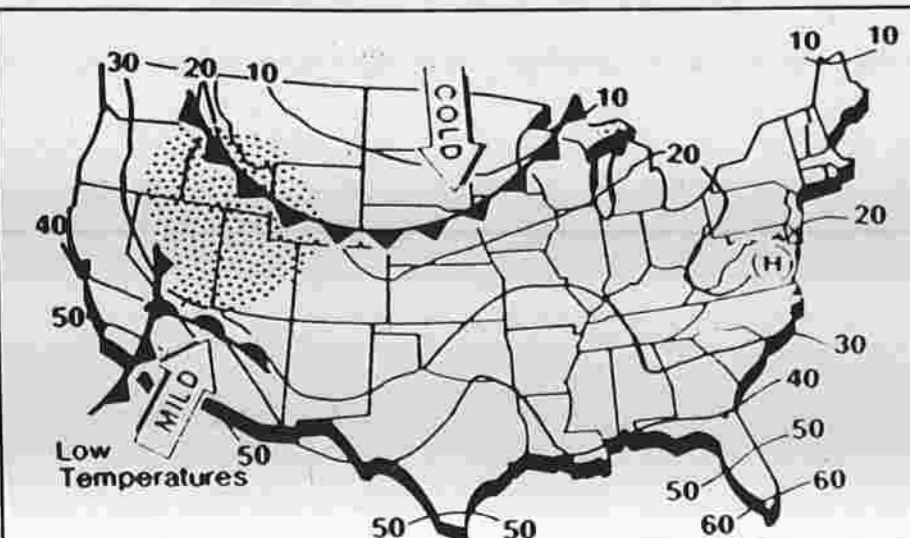

The law does not prohibit display of a privately-owned nativity scene in a public park along with a sign indicating the sponsors of the display, Town Attorney John Conroy said in an opinion made public today.
The opinion was requested by Mayor Barbara Weinberg in connection with suggestions that a newly purchased nativity scene for the center of town be put up in Center Park instead of on the lawn of Center Congregational Church.
For this year, the display will apparently remain on the church lawn, where it will be the focal point of a carol sing tonight. But armed with Conroy's opinion, the advocates of displaying the scene in the park could well win their way next Christmas season.
"The erection and display of privately owned nativity scene or creche on public property, particularly in a public park along with a visible sign indicating the sponsors of the display, is not prohibited under present law," Conroy said in his opinion.
The scene is now owned by the Nativity Scene Committee, which is in the process of incorporating as a non-profit organization.
The committee has not decided whether it will retain permanent ownership of two new nativity scenes bought to replace two destroyed by fire Oct. 17.
In his opinion, Conroy cites three federal court cases, one of which was decided by the United States Supreme Court in 1984. In that case, the court held that a city-owned nativity scene displayed in a private park did not violate any First Amendment clause because the city had a secular purpose for including the creche in a display.
In a later case, a federal court Thursday held that it was permissible for a group of private citizens to display a nativity scene in a public park because a park is a public forum.

Fire marshals wary of taking tank task

The state Department of Environmental Protection hopes local fire marshals will lend a hand in enforcing regulations concerning the installation of underground fuel tanks, but a group representing area fire marshals is far from enthusiastic about the idea, which they say would add to their already heavy workload.
Last month, a group representing fire marshals from 27 area communities voted to municipal executive officers expressing their opposition to the plan, which follows the adoption of regulations last year to protect ground water. Richard Metcalf, secretary of the Capitol Region Fire Marshals Association and a signer of the letter, said Wednesday the organization's intent was to discourage executive officers from volunteering the fire marshals' services to the DEP without first consulting them.
Both Ted Lingard, Eighth District fire marshal, and Town Fire Chief John Rivoia, who also serves as fire marshal for his department, said they would reserve judgement on the DEP's plan until examining it more thoroughly.
"At this point I haven't decided," Rivoia said. "I'm not sure what this entails," Lingard said.
Noting that fire departments are often called on for environmental problems, Lingard added, "It always seems to fall on their shoulders."
Rivoia said his department already ensures that installation of

PEOPLE

Black remembers

Shirley Temple Black says she didn't think it was unusual that as a child she was cheered by thousands of people.
 Black recalled traveling to Hawaii in 1937 and singing "The Good Ship Lollipop."
 "My mother made it seem perfectly normal for thousands of people to be cheering me, as if there was nothing special going on. I thought all children must live as I did," she told Parade magazine in the issue to be released this weekend.
 Black, 48, began her film career at age 3. She switched to politics years later, serving as ambassador to Ghana and U.S. chief of protocol.
 She said she clasped herself with German shepherd movie star Rin Tin Tin.
 "People in the Depression wanted something to cheer them up, and they fell in love with a dog and a little girl."

Speaking Easy
 On December 5, 1933, Prohibition was abolished. After 13 long years, truckloads of beer like these could finally travel legally. The ban on alcohol had never really worked well. In New York City, 32,000 speakeasies replaced the 15,000 legal saloons that operated before Prohibition. When crooner Bing Crosby was arrested for drinking, the judge asked him, "Don't you know about the law?" Crosby replied, "Nobody pays much attention to that." Crosby got sixty days.

5-ton boulder latest strange birthday gift
MANKATO, Minn. (AP) — The 5-ton boulder in the yard of a farm owned by Ray Thorn Jr. is a belated birthday present, the latest in a string of weird gifts.
 The gag gifts among six couples who started playing cards together about 15 years ago began innocently enough — some denture paste here, some Ex-Lax there.
 Then Karl Johnson got a nicely wrapped box one year, opened it and found a live chicken. Another time, gagsters commiserated a manure spreader, stuck a rickety old outdoor on it, dubbed it a "self-cleaning porta-potty" and left it on Joe Lorentz's lawn.
 Last spring, Richard Timm got a case of beer, some snacks, and a goat, which was thought to be pregnant, but wasn't.
 "It's been progressively getting worse or better," says Thorn, 44.

Bids lively for unusual auction items

By Andrew Yurkovsky
 Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Perhaps the liveliest moment at the Women's Club auction Wednesday in the Community Hall occurred when a bidding war erupted between two friends over a small glass jar of Hersey's Kisses.
 "Wait, wait — I want to know what's in it," one spectator said as the bids climbed to the $20 mark.
 The top bidder, Frances Keenan, paid $23.50 for the jar — a highly inflated price to judge from the laughter that spread through the audience. Anne Lorch, Keenan's friend and rival, didn't appear to have any hard feelings over being outbid, but said she was concerned that her husband would find out what happened.
 Wednesday's auction was the 18th sponsored by the club, and proceeds benefited a variety of local causes. One result will be a $200 scholarship award for a college-bound Bolton High School graduate.
 Club Vice President Cindy Carvalho said that last year the event raised about $1,000. Attendance at this year's auction was about the same as in 1985, Carvalho said, with about 60 residents, mostly women, present.
 Members of the club donate handmade items to be auctioned off and two-and-a-half dozen cookies for a bake sale.
 The most unusual item auctioned Wednesday was word processing software. The most unusual item auctioned Wednesday was word processing software. The most unusual item auctioned Wednesday was word processing software.

Joe Carvalho brings the gavel down on the sale of a tree ornament — one of many handmade items the Bolton Women's Club auctioned off Wednesday at the Community Hall.

Another item — a houseplant in a ceramic holder — went Wednesday to a woman who made her $10 winning bid by raising her toddler in the air. Later, the same woman offered the winning bid on a wicker baby cradle, but it proved too small for the woman's young girl.
 Joe Carvalho, Cindy Carvalho's husband, served as auctioneer for the event, maintaining a tradition of husband-auctioneers. Carvalho, whose last talk and quick gestures made an impression he was a seasoned pro, insisted that he had never served in that capacity before nor practiced for the job.

Town to move forward with dam projects

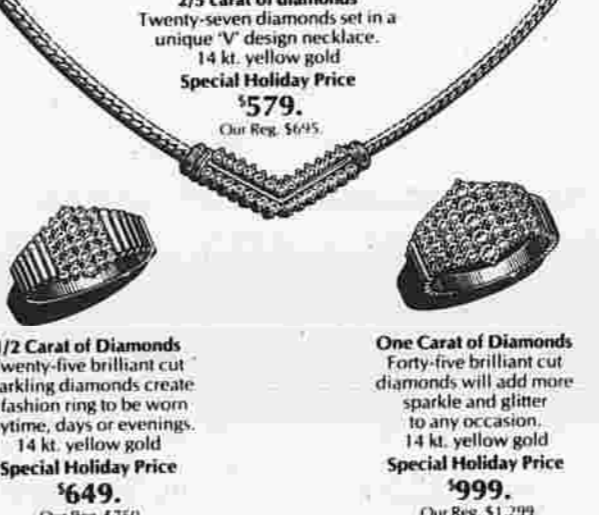

By Alex Girelli
 Associate Editor

Construction permits for improvements to the dams at four town reservoirs have been issued to Manchester by the state, and town officials will discuss final plans for the work next week with consulting engineers who designed the improvements.
 The dams involved are those at Globe Hollow Reservoir, Howard Reservoir, Porter Reservoir and Brook Reservoir in Glastonbury.
 Public Works Director George Kandra said Thursday that the cost of changes in the plans will be discussed with representatives of Lenard Engineering of Storrs, but the changes are minor.
 He said he hopes to come up with a cost estimate for the dam repairs. Earlier estimates put the cost at more than $200,000, but Kandra said that as a result of changes in the plans to satisfy the state Department of Environmental Protection, the cost will be higher.
 The dams first came under study by the Army Corps of Engineers in 1979. The corps found deficiencies in each dam and asked for further study.
 The town engaged Lenard for the studies. The town and Lenard disagreed with a DEP requirement that the dam at Globe Hollow be brought up to a standard for a full probable maximum flood — an almost zero chance of happening. The final dam plan by Lenard calls for a standard of less than a full probable maximum flood, but greater than one-half PMF, according to David Battista of Lenard. He said that the cost of providing a dam spillway that would pass through the flow of water from a full flood would be prohibitive. Instead, the plan call for building a wall atop the dam to hold back more water and using riprap on the downstream side of the dam to increase its strength.
 To calculate the effect rushing water from a full flood would have on the Globe Hollow Dam, the firm used a computer model, programming into the computer such data as the area and soil characteristics of the watershed and the characteristics of the dam. Battista said. The same method was used to help determine what work was needed on the other dams.
 The Howard Dam and Porter

Young said the engineering firm likened bringing the Globe Hollow dam to the full PMF standard to building a roof on a house to withstand the impact of a falling airplane.

Documents explain charges

Enfield manager says corruption is everywhere

By George Lovoy
 Herald Reporter

ENFIELD — When two Manchester developers were charged this week with conspiring to bribe a top planning official, the town manager said that unfortunately, his community had plenty of company.
 "What's happened here in Enfield has happened or is happening in every other town in Connecticut," said Town Manager Robert J. Mulready.
 Although municipal corruption is nothing new, this year has been unusual because some major cases have been tried in the state, generating large amounts of publicity.
 Former Waterbury Mayor William Rado was convicted this summer of receiving bribes between 1980 and 1984. In New Haven federal court last month, several former New York City officials and politicians were found guilty of racketeering, conspiracy and mail fraud.
 In the Enfield case, Neil H. Ellis, head of the Manchester-based First Hartford Realty Corp., and company Vice President Leonard Seader were charged with conspiracy to commit bribery. The accusations followed charges against William J. Boudah, former chairman of the Enfield Planning and Zoning Commission, the alleged recipient of a bribe.

The arrests followed a grand jury investigation into the matter that began in 1985.
 Boudah, Ellis and Seader all have refused to comment on the allegations.
 The alleged actions that led to the charges span from May 1980 to December 1981, according to the affidavit. As a result of purchasing the land — 8.8 acres on Broad Brook Road — and later selling most of it at a higher price, Boudah "realized a net profit of approximately $45,000," the affidavit said.
MEANWHILE, FIRST HARTFORD'S senior housing complex, which is to comprise 40 apartments on Hazard Avenue, will have a value of approximately $2,285,000 when it is built, the affidavit said.
 In the affidavit, police say Seader conducted the negotiations with Boudah for the sale of the Broad Brook land and that all transactions were approved by Ellis.
 "During this entire time, William J. Boudah did not disqualify himself from participating as Chairman of the Enfield Planning and Zoning Commission when First Hartford Realty's applications were before the commission for approval," the affidavit said. In fact, the affidavit charges that Boudah participated "actively" in the panel's deliberations.

SIMILARLY, SEADER "never disclosed to the commission his personal business dealings with William J. Boudah," the affidavit said.
 When asked during grand jury testimony why First Hartford sold Boudah land at $50,000 less than its appraised worth, Seader said "the selling price was reduced to $32,000 because of a water problem that he could not explain," according to the affidavit.
 The affidavit said South Windsor attorney Thomas Donnelly, who was employed by First Hartford during the time of the transactions, testified he did "not remember any discussions concerning water problems while he was present during negotiations or conversations with Leonard Seader."
 The affidavit said that two outside appraisers hired by the Hartford State's Attorney's Office to assess the fair market value of the Broad Brook property as of the sale date found it worth between $82,000 and $86,000.
 Seader and Ellis are scheduled to be arraigned at Enfield Superior Court on Dec. 16. Boudah has said that their cases will then be transferred to Hartford Superior Court for prosecution.
 If found guilty, each could receive a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $1,500 fine.

Hamilton Standard plans job cuts

HARTFORD (AP) — United Technologies Corp.'s Hamilton Standard Division plans to reduce its salaried work force of 5,100 by 1,600 positions in 1987, the company announced.

The reductions will be accomplished through special retirement inducements, job eliminations and job consolidations at the Windsor Locks and Farmington facilities.

Layouts, if necessary, will be made only if there are not enough voluntary departures to meet the reduction goal, the company said.

Another UTC division, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, said last month it plans to cut up to 2,000 salaried workers from its payroll over the next year. The moves were seen by analysts as part of a trend to reduce overhead in response to uncertainty over the economy and the future of defense spending.

Smaller-scale cutbacks totaling some 415 workers at UTC's corporate headquarters in Hartford, Sikorsky Aircraft in Stratford and Hamilton Standard were announced earlier this year.

Today's is the first mention of the cutbacks may affect hourly workers.

"We have studied all our operations and have concluded that we must streamline our company and reduce layers of management in order to meet increasing global competition, cut overhead and be responsive to our customers' demands for lower costs," Hamilton Standard President Terry Stinson said Thursday.

Hamilton Standard manufactures propellers and also designs and manufactures an array of aerospace control systems and components including gas turbine engine controls, environmental systems, spacecrafts for astronauts, flight controls, avionics and test and ground-support equipment.

This late model sports car owned by Diane Fusco of Southington was among 25 cars damaged Thursday when an explosives crew accidentally blasted rocks from a quarry into an adjacent supermarket parking lot in Waterbury.

Coventry seeks school plan answers

By Jacqueline Bennett
Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — Questions about a proposal to realign the town's two elementary schools were considered at a meeting this week, but thoughts of accepting the plan were dimmed.

"I don't think we should scrap the plan or dissolve the committee because of negativity encountered," said Jean Ballok, president of the Robertson School Parent-Teacher Organization.

"This is a new, dynamic concept, with visible changes that will impact a large number of families.

I think we should continue to enlighten people who may not be ready to be enlightened," said parent Connie Moore, a member of the town's School District Realignment Committee.

The plan calls for holding kindergarten through second-grade classes at Coventry Grammar School and putting students in grades 3 and 4 at Robertson. Special education classes would continue at both schools, which currently offer all five grade levels.

Board of Education member Lawrence Mickel, co-chairman of the committee that drafted the plan, conducted the meeting Tuesday at Coventry High School, which was attended by about 25 parents, board members and school administrators and staff members.

In light of criticism from nearly 150 parents who attended recent PTO meetings, Mickel said that a number of issues have to be addressed.

By the time a public hearing is held in January, officials said they need to have answers about transportation concerns, the educational plan, the success of similar plans in other towns, costs and whether the changes would accommodate population growth.

Lang bus rides — some lasting as much as an hour — from North Coventry to Robertson School in South Coventry is one prime concern among parents.

Patricia Watson, school transportation chairman and co-chairwoman of the realignment committee, said bus routes are already being reviewed but agreed to have three parents from each school on the Transportation Committee.

The realignment panel plans to contact other towns beyond the three initially studied with similar grade divisions, officials said.

Robertson School Principal Clarence Edmondson said an implementation plan should be put together spelling out things like coordination of curriculum, one of the anticipated benefits of the plan.

Others, such as opportunity for teachers to plan cooperatively, budget savings and the elimination of some positions, were also discussed.

Mickel said one of the most important problems to be dealt with is a misconception that the board had already decided to accept the plan. "It hasn't been cast in stone," he said.

The public hearing is scheduled for Jan. 13, at 7:30 p.m. at the high school.

The shopping center is several hundred yards from Waterbury Rock's property.

"The whole building shook," said Lynn Bernardini of Oxford, who was in the Bradlee's department store. "There was a shower of rocks, and when I got to my car I found out I didn't have a windshield. A side door window was gone and my car is dented. I don't think my husband's going to believe a rock did."

Mary Beth Rinaldi of Waterbury, who works in Stop & Shop, said she and others "just heard a loud bang."

Baboon baffles Greenwich police

GREENWICH — Police in patrol cars and a van reserved for stray dogs stalked the placid Chickahominy neighborhood here in search of a baboon reported to be on the loose.

The hunt ended in a truck where 3½-year-old Maximilian lives in between short performances at children's birthday parties and in stores.

Police said their call came from an employee of an office building who reported seeing the animal loose about 1 p.m. Wednesday.

But Max's owner, Greg Demmel of Florida, said the baboon was never far from his side.

"I put him here when I was cleaning his container," Demmel, 25, said, pointing to an area near the truck. "Somebody said he was going down to the river. You know how stories travel."

Demmel said he is visiting Greenwich while his truck is being repaired. He said he also charges customers at nightclubs in Mississippi and Louisiana up to $5 to pose with the baboon for a picture.

Yale doctor offers hip advice

NEW HAVEN — Ultrasound examinations of newborns can determine those who suffer from dislocated hips and prevent the need for "stressful" X-rays, a pediatric radiologist has found.

Dr. Marc S. Keller studied 28 newborns at Yale-New Haven Hospital suspected of severe hip dislocations. Ultrasound confirmed a serious problem in half the group and found less serious complications among the rest.

"Using ultrasound, which provides images constructed from sound waves and is free of ionizing radiation, the baby is not distressed. Furthermore, the parents can be present in the room to comfort the infant during the procedure," Keller said.

Keller said the traditional method of examining newborns with suspected dislocations is an arthrogram in which an X-ray is taken after a dye has been injected into the joint. He said even with sedation, the procedure is painful and stressful.

Up to 3 percent of all newborns suffer from either a loosened hip joint or dislocation, he said. A pediatrician is usually the first to discover the problem.

Inmate pleads innocent to threats

A prison inmate has pleaded innocent to accusations he sent death threats to people who put him behind bars, including police, prosecutors and a robbery victim, authorities said.

Roy E. Cline, 30, of Hartford, who is near the end of a five-year Somers prison sentence for a 1982 robbery conviction, entered the plea Wednesday in Manchester Superior Court.

According to a Manchester police affidavit, Cline in July sent a menacing letter to Peter Ponziani, a former deputy assistant state attorney who prosecuted Cline on the 1982 robbery charge, and sent similar letters to Hartford County State Attorney John M. Bailey.

Both men on Wednesday said that they have received threats before, but that Cline's violent reputation made them particularly wary.

Famine charity releases finances

HARTFORD — USA for Africa spent $7.61 million on foreign assistance in 1985, with about 12 percent of those funds used to purchase food items and 66 percent to buy equipment or transportation, according to its federal tax statement.

The Los Angeles-based organization also spent about 22 percent of the money, or $1.62 million, on medical supplies and medical equipment, the documents show.

On a dollar basis, more than $5 million was used to purchase a variety of trucks, to transport food and clothes, and to construct facilities such as silos.

The $869,900 for food included the purchases of seeds and "nutritional supplements."

Copies of the organization's tax statements were filed with the state of Connecticut, which required USA for Africa to register as a charitable organization.

Colombia gunman kills at least 27

BOGOTA, Colombia — A 52-year-old man fatally shot his mother, set her afire and went on a shooting spree in his apartment building and a nearby Italian restaurant before being killed by police. A total of 27 people died.

"I have never seen so much blood in my life," said criminal investigator Judge Gloria Lucena.

Authorities said the gunman, Campo Elias Delgado, fired about 400 rounds from his .38 caliber weapon. His motive was not known.

Police said the bloodbath began early Thursday evening when Delgado fatally shot his mother, 72-year-old Rita Delgado, in the apartment they shared.

He covered her body with newspapers and set it on fire before going to three other apartments in the building and shooting whoever opened their doors, killing four women.

Newfoundland crash blamed on ice

WASHINGTON — A yearlong investigation into the airline crash that killed 248 U.S. soldiers returning home for Christmas has narrowed the likely suspected cause of the accident to ice buildup on the wings, Canadian and U.S. aviation sources say.

The Canadian Aviation Board and the other two agencies are to be final for several months, although investigators have begun writing a draft report on the accident, which occurred last Dec. 12 in Gander, Newfoundland.

But sources familiar with the investigation said in interviews that the evidence clearly points to ice contamination on the wings of the chartered Air West DC-8 as the primary cause of the crash, while other factors might have contributed to the accident.

EEC leaders talk unemployment

LONDON — The leaders of the 12 Common Market nations today began two days of economic and political consultations, including an informal discussion of the sale of U.S. arms to Iran.

The meeting of the European Economic Community leaders, accompanied by their foreign ministers, began with a luncheon given by Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace.

Officials said that at a meeting this afternoon, the leaders will discuss ways to cut their nations' high unemployment rates. The Common Market unemployment rate now averages 11 percent and forecasts are that 1987 will bring no significant reduction among Europe's 16 million jobless.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, French President Francois Mitterrand, Italian Premier Bettino Craxi, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and the other eight leaders are to hold political talks starting with dinner at 10 Downing St., Thatcher's official residence.

Feds weigh drug tests for airlines

WASHINGTON — The government, concerned about possible drug abuse in aviation, is exploring for the first time minimum federal requirements for drug testing and rehabilitation of airline employees, although officials suggested requirements for random drug testing seem unlikely.

The Transportation Department said Thursday it stands ready for suggestions from a broad spectrum of the industry on what kinds of new regulations might be needed "to help ensure the traveling public a drug-free transportation system."

Several Transportation Department sources who spoke on the condition they not be identified, suggested random drug testing is unlikely to become part of the new regulatory package because of strong opposition from airline unions and expected lukewarm support from the industry.

NATO allies question arms deal

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The NATO allies have avoided direct criticism of U.S. arms deals with Iran, but raised questions about the affair's potential impact on U.S. leadership in the Western alliance.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Thursday at the outset of a two-day meeting of NATO defense ministers that the European allies and Canada understood what President Reagan ordered the secret transfer of weapons to Iran, despite an official arms embargo.

Weinberger said the deal was aimed at reopening contact with moderate elements in Iran, a key powerbroker in the Middle East.

The Iran controversy was not on the formal agenda, but it was discussed in individual meetings between ministers Thursday.

French students clash with police

PARIS — The government announced today it would modify a bill aimed at revamping the state-run universities after clashes between police and hundreds of thousands of protesting students injured at least 180 people.

Dennis Baudouin, a spokesman for the premier's office, said Education Minister Rene Monory would make the "governmental declaration" later today in a nationally televised address.

He said Monory would announce moves "toward modification of the three points (of the bill) which trigger anxieties among students and has created among them a certain unrest."

Courthouse elevator a temporary prison

BOSTON (AP) — A man trapped for two hours in a courthouse elevator on his way to plead guilty to income tax evasion was sentenced to the time he spent in the stuck lift, a federal judge said.

Joseph J. Silvano Jr., 51, appeared in court to enter his plea Thursday after climbing through a hatch in the elevator where he'd been trapped with 11 other people.

"My God, they (defendants) are not supposed to be punished before they go to court," said U.S. District Judge Walter Jay Skinner.

He said Monory would announce moves "toward modification of the three points (of the bill) which trigger anxieties among students and has created among them a certain unrest."

U.S. firms to leave South Africa

By David Cray
The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Two huge American corporations, citing poor economic conditions and pressure from the anti-apartheid movement, joined the growing list of U.S. firms withdrawing from South Africa.

Honeywell Inc. and Revlon Group Inc., with almost 600 employees, announced Thursday they were pulling out, following a pattern set by General Motors Corp., IBM and dozens of other U.S. companies.

At Honeywell's Minneapolis headquarters, spokeswoman Susan Eich said: "I think it's generally acknowledged that the business environment in South Africa is volatile."

In New York, Revlon said it was leaving South Africa because of "the uncertainty in the economic and political situation... created by the government's lack of progress in dismantling its system of apartheid and its failure to achieve racial equality."

A major South African industrial group, Murray and Roberts, is to purchase the Honeywell operation in Johannesburg for an undisclosed amount and all 175 employees probably will keep their jobs, said Markus Tambakeras, Honeywell's local managing director.

Ma. Eich said: "We took into account the total business environment in that country and came to the conclusion it's in our best interest to sell the affiliate to Murray and Roberts."

The Honeywell affiliate, which employs about 300 people, the company, which posted total revenues of $2.4 billion in the nine months ended Sept. 30, does not break out the results from its South African operations, but the unit's annual sales are believed to be less than $20 million.

It was not known whether there is a prospective buyer of Revlon's South African operations.

More than 60 American companies have left South Africa since January 1985, including at least 24 this year.

The American companies remaining in South Africa — including Mobil Corp. and Caltex, a joint operation of Texaco Inc. and Chevron Corp. — have investments totaling an estimated $1.3 billion.

While most departing companies are American, the Bata shoe company of Canada and Barclays Bank, Britain's second largest, also have announced they will sell their interests to local owners.

Britain is by far the largest foreign investor in South Africa.

President's spokesman quits

WASHINGTON (AP) — With most attention in the Iranian arms dealings riveted on the fate of top administration officials and other White House aides, three presidential assistants, including spokesman Larry Speakes, are leaving their jobs under no apparent pressure.

Speakes announced his own resignation Thursday to accept a lucrative job offer from Merrill Lynch & Co., the Wall Street investment firm. His office also announced Reagan had accepted the resignations of Dr. T. Burton Smith, the president's physician, and Carlton T. Turner, Reagan's adviser on drug abuse policy.

Smith, a Los Angeles urologist Reagan named to look after his health two years ago, was said to be planning to return to California to attend to family business.

White House spokesman Albert R. Brashear said Turner, who joined the Reagan administration at its outset and often accompanied Reagan on her trips to drug treatment centers, has not decided whether he will do so.

Speakes, who faced a daily grilling by White House reporters longer than any of his recent predecessors, said he had spoken with Reagan about his leaving in the midst of a scandal but felt comfortable with his decision because "I think we've got it on the right course" with the outside investigations that are just beginning.

"I think we can put it behind us in short order," the spokesman told a group of radio correspondents in an interview.

Speakes, who said he knew nothing about the secret weapons deals with Iran or the use of profits from them to help Nicaraguan Contras, has escaped the spotlight focused on other senior officials in the burgeoning scandal.

Substitute gets bullet intended for teacher

LEWISTOWN, Mont. (AP) — A teenager intended to kill his French teacher because he was flunking, but instead shot to death her substitute, classmates said after a shooting rampage that left three other people wounded.

Kristofer Hans, 14, went to a Fergus High School classroom on Thursday, knocked on the door and asked the teacher to come to the door, police said.

Henrietta Smith, who was substituting for Wayne Simony, was shot in the face and died. Ms. Simony was helping with a girls' basketball tournament in the gym.

Several other students who were in the hall, authorities said. He then ran about a mile to his home, where his parents turned him over to police.

Classmate Shannon Foucher said Hans had threatened to kill Ms. Simony on Wednesday but he said he couldn't get a gun. When Hans repeated the threat Thursday, Foucher thought he was joking.

"He turned around and looked at me and said 'I'm going to blow Simony's head off.' I laughed and said 'Sure you are,'" Foucher said. "I did not see the gun until he pulled it out of his coat. He just shot once. It was supposed to be Simony, but he shot Miss Smith."

Hans was charged in youth court with deliberate homicide in the death of Smith and with attempted deliberate homicide in the wounding of Vice Principal John Moffatt, said Fergus County Attorney Craig Buehler.

Other classmates said Hans was falling French until he talked about shooting his teacher.

"Some of the kids laughed at him and said they didn't believe he'd do it," said freshman Rachel Stein, 14.

Principal Bob Raver said the students were speculating and that he had no information about any threats. Officials in this central Montana community of 7,000 declined to discuss motive until witnesses were interviewed.

Immediately after the shooting, fans attending the basketball tournament were confined to the gymnasium and students were taken to the auditorium until word came that the suspect was in custody, Raver said.

School Superintendent Jim Turner said classes would be held today.

"We felt it was important to have school not have kids hanging out there Friday, Saturday and Sunday just hearing rumors and so forth," he said. "People are going to have some tough feelings to deal with."

Police Chief Russell Dunnington said Hans had gone to the classroom where Smith was teaching and knocked on the door.

OPINION

No simple answer for GOP's woes

Public disputes among Republicans in Manchester are nothing new. Eternally, it seems, one member of the GOP Town Committee is criticizing another, some faction is making the most of its grudge against another, and few really want to devote much thought or effort to party affairs.

A leadership change hasn't helped, nor have all the soothing words used in the efforts to cover longstanding divisions.

Now the fur is flying again. At a meeting Wednesday night, the town committee members who found the time to attend turned their guns on those who weren't present. There was talk about forced resignations, and one member proposed the compilation of a list of those who have contributed to the party and those who haven't, along with attendance records and other such data.

That might be a means for some to gain political capital, but it's no way to foster unity. And unity — or at least a consensus on some kind of common purpose — is what Manchester Republicans need if they're ever to become anything but an example of how pettiness and backbiting can decimate any cause.

In the Nov. 4 election, the local results mirrored those statewide, so few specific conclusions can be drawn from the demise of two local GOP incumbents. But some of the story is told by the subsequent disclosures that a handful of town committee members — one of them the head of the candidate selection committee — quit right around election time, and that the organization's fund-raising total from members was a pathetic $880.

Before that, there were the 1985 contests, in which Manchester Republicans got control only of those seats they are guaranteed under the state's seniority representation law. There was the aborted effort to force a gubernatorial delegate primary before this year's state convention, a comedy of errors that led to four arrests. And there were the slights, and the perceived slights, surrounding committee selections for the convention.

Clearly, more than hollow calls for more work are needed at this point if the town committee is to regain its sense of purpose — or even sufficient credibility to attract the number of members it is allowed to have, something it currently lacks.

Instead of working toward a purge, drawing up an enemies list or saying more nasty things about each other, the Republicans should turn to more productive pursuits. They should look to themselves for the reasons the party can't offer the Democrats any genuine challenge, and they should seek to resolve their problems.

That won't be easy, and it will involve some painful introspection as well as a lot of hours on the phones and at the books.

But if the party just follows the course that appears likely at the moment, the Democrats might as well quit worrying about the 1987 town election and turn their attention to 1988, when they'll face a real contest.

Pheromonic seduction and the male virus

While the struggles in Afghanistan and Nicaragua dominate the news, the longest going war, the one between the sexes, is only fitfully reported. A front-line bulletin on the struggle appeared some months ago in a New York Times story about maleness. The newspaper reported that scientists were baffled by why nature had created males of any species in the first place. According to the latest calculations, they serve no earthly purpose which couldn't be better carried out by self-fertilizing female hermaphrodites.

Thus an inquiry was launched into the origins of maleness and it was determined that males only exist as a result of a quirky mistake. Males, it turns out, are the result of an early virus infection of an amoeba. The man a woman goes to bed with every night, it has been scientifically determined, is little more than a herpes simplex cold sore, or if he is a very difficult person, a herpes complex cold sore. Inoculation will give women a high degree of protection against the flu but no vaccination has yet been developed to save her from the male virus infection, recovery from which can take years.

NEVERTHELESS, MALE STATURE and dignity has been lowered by the knowledge that the gender's evolutionary ancestor is something less than a germ, that the father of all fathers is a half-animate, half-invert virus.

The Washington Post has struck back with news more favorable to the male cause. A recent article reports that scientists at the University of Pennsylvania medical school have discovered that

Silence complicates probe

By Harry F. Rosenthal

WASHINGTON — There are problems ahead when the president says he wants the truth to come out, when the attorney general says only two men know the full truth, and when those two say they're not talking.

President Reagan can say, as he did Wednesday, that "all Americans are entitled to have their questions answered" in the puzzling affair that saw profits from the sale of weapons to Iran flow to Nicaraguan rebels. And he can issue orders to that effect.

But even with a command that "there must be a full and complete airing of the facts," the president of the United States cannot waive another individual's constitutional right against incriminating himself.

Vice Adm. John Poindexter, the president's recently resigned national security adviser, invoked his Fifth Amendment rights Wednesday in an appearance before the Senate Intelligence Committee just as Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a principal figure in the diversion of funds to the Contras, had done two days before.

Last week, in disclosing the Iran-contra linkage, Attorney General Edwin Meese III said North was the only person in the U.S. government who knew exactly what happened and that Poindexter "did know that something of this nature was occurring but he did not look into it further."

SEN. PATRICK LEAHY, D-Vt., vice chairman of the committee, said the two men's testimony "could have made our lives easier, but it doesn't make it impossible. I was surprised only because it was said at the White House they would testify, but the White House cannot order anyone to give up their constitutional rights."

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., the committee's chairman, said the panel would get the facts with or without Poindexter and North's testimony.

"Nobody has the whole story about this subject," he said. "Their refusal to testify will put a hole in the story, but we can work around it and fill it in and find out what happened."

Poindexter's lawyer, Richard Becker, told reporters his client "sees the president and wishes to cooperate with every committee that wishes to investigate."

But he said in view of the expected appointment of an independent counsel and requests for testimony at other places he didn't specify, "I would be doing a disservice unless I asked my client to invoke his rights."

One way the Reagan White House could demonstrate its cooperation with the investigation is by not attempting to throw a cloak of executive privilege over presidential aides.

WHEN RICHARD NIXON was confronted in 1973 during the developing Watergate scandal with demands that his closest aides testify before the Senate Watergate Committee, he sought to claim executive privilege.

The White House has not yet said what it will do, but if sources are correct that all requested documents have been supplied to the committee, it would not seem that executive privilege will be invoked.

"The executive privilege is not North's right or Poindexter's or (Robert) McFarlane's right, that's the president's right," said Earl Silbert, who as principal assistant U.S. attorney in 1973 prosecuted the Watergate burglars. "President Reagan can say he is not going to invoke that."

McFarlane, who preceded Poindexter as national security adviser, testified before the committee Monday.

The Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, he said, can be overcome only if the committee grants immunity, a step that has been discussed.

"By granting immunity," said Silbert, now in private law practice, "you are saying 'you won't be hurt by what you say.'"

Prosecutors, however, have a means of protecting their cases if it appears immunity will be granted to get a reluctant witness to talk.

The Air Force plans to buy about 250 mid-range RPVs for a supplementary reconnaissance role, but is generally not enthusiastic about the little planes. The General Accounting Office, which favors wide use of the low-cost drones, attributes the Air Force's lack of interest to a longstanding "pro-pilot bias" and a "perception of RPVs as too drab and unexciting to generate much enthusiasm."

A GAO report adds: "Therefore, while RPVs are accepted during wartime for very high risk missions of mundane jobs such as chaff dispensing and leaflet dropping, during peacetime they are not regarded with as much favor as the high-technology manned aircraft."

THE SOVIETS, alerted to the RPV's usefulness in Lebanon, have deployed dozens already with Syrian troops. A secret CIA report predicts that the Soviets will eventually produce hundreds, possibly thousands, for mass deployment in Eastern Europe.

Meantime the Israeli RPV producer, Mazlat, is promoting the little planes' civilian potential. Among the missions that could be cheaply and effectively handled by an RPV are police observation of smuggling or other criminal activity; pipeline patrols checking the sabotage or natural threats; river patrols; disaster rescue coordination; patrols of offshore oil rigs and livestock surveys over vast areas of open range.

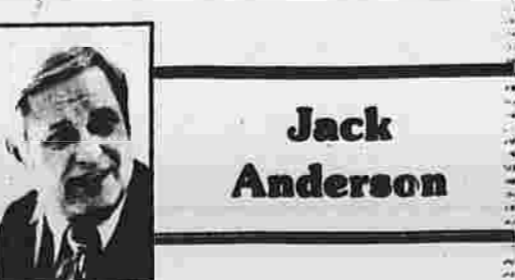

One of the more interesting — and potentially lucrative — uses for RPVs would be as TV platforms for sporting events. The large-size model airplanes could provide more flexibility than the blimps now in use. We may someday see tricky-angle shots of the Super Bowl taken from the Goodyear Drone.

Disappearing documents While the debate over Iran still rages, we can report that U.S. intelligence agencies at least learned something from the earlier run-in with the Ayatollah Khomeini. Many secret documents fed into the shredders when Iranian militants were storming the U.S. Embassy in Tehran were later painstakingly pieced together by the Iranians. Now we're told that top-secret information is being printed on a type of paper that dissolves almost instantly when dunked in water.

Mini-instantiator What would we do without "American Foreigner 1987" to tell us what the trends will be doing in the new year? According to the author, Kim Long of Denver, "yuppie gardening" will be big in 1987. We're not at all sure what the phrase means, but we assume it would involve gardeners in three-piece suits growing Oriental greens and wild fruit on the roof of their buildings, using trowels from Cartier and insecticide atomizers from Givency.

Drones offer intelligence with low risk

WASHINGTON — In a series of secret programs, the Pentagon and the CIA are developing and deploying nearly $3 billion worth of sophisticated flying drones (known formally as Remotely Piloted Vehicles or RPVs).

This flying transmitter may become the workhorse of the intelligence business. Already, some are operating as spy planes over El Salvador and Nicaragua.

The Israelis demonstrated the usefulness of RPVs in Lebanon where they provided "live" television coverage of Syrian and other forces, tricked anti-aircraft missile batteries into turning on their radars (thus giving away their locations) and served other battlefield purposes.

Oddly enough, it was the Americans' use of drones in Vietnam that led to Israel's interest. Jet-powered target drones launched from transport planes flew more than 3,000 reconnaissance missions in Vietnam, and it was an American engineer, Alvin Ellis, who sold the Israeli military on RPVs in the early 1970s. His concept was in effect an over-size remote-control model airplane equipped with a small TV camera.

The advantages of RPVs over manned aircraft are many and obvious: They cost relative pittance compared to the price of fighters and reconnaissance planes. Needing none of the equipment that keeps pilots alive, drones burn a fraction of the fuel used by manned planes and can also be maneuvered at speeds that no pilot could withstand. Their ground controllers are far cheaper to train than pilots — and of course when a drone is shot down, no one is killed or captured.

The RPV is extremely hard to knock down because of its tiny radar "signature" — derived from its size of no more than about 14 feet — and from its minimal heat output, which thwarts infra-red trackers and heat-seeking missiles. Its single, muffled low-horsepower engine makes little noise, and at high altitudes the drone is practically invisible.

The Air Force plans to buy about 250 mid-range RPVs for a supplementary reconnaissance role, but is generally not enthusiastic about the little planes. The General Accounting Office, which favors wide use of the low-cost drones, attributes the Air Force's lack of interest to a longstanding "pro-pilot bias" and a "perception of RPVs as too drab and unexciting to generate much enthusiasm."

A GAO report adds: "Therefore, while RPVs are accepted during wartime for very high risk missions of mundane jobs such as chaff dispensing and leaflet dropping, during peacetime they are not regarded with as much favor as the high-technology manned aircraft."

THE SOVIETS, alerted to the RPV's usefulness in Lebanon, have deployed dozens already with Syrian troops. A secret CIA report predicts that the Soviets will eventually produce hundreds, possibly thousands, for mass deployment in Eastern Europe.

Meantime the Israeli RPV producer, Mazlat, is promoting the little planes' civilian potential. Among the missions that could be cheaply and effectively handled by an RPV are police observation of smuggling or other criminal activity; pipeline patrols checking the sabotage or natural threats; river patrols; disaster rescue coordination; patrols of offshore oil rigs and livestock surveys over vast areas of open range.

One of the more interesting — and potentially lucrative — uses for RPVs would be as TV platforms for sporting events. The large-size model airplanes could provide more flexibility than the blimps now in use. We may someday see tricky-angle shots of the Super Bowl taken from the Goodyear Drone.

Disappearing documents While the debate over Iran still rages, we can report that U.S. intelligence agencies at least learned something from the earlier run-in with the Ayatollah Khomeini. Many secret documents fed into the shredders when Iranian militants were storming the U.S. Embassy in Tehran were later painstakingly pieced together by the Iranians. Now we're told that top-secret information is being printed on a type of paper that dissolves almost instantly when dunked in water.

Mini-instantiator What would we do without "American Foreigner 1987" to tell us what the trends will be doing in the new year? According to the author, Kim Long of Denver, "yuppie gardening" will be big in 1987. We're not at all sure what the phrase means, but we assume it would involve gardeners in three-piece suits growing Oriental greens and wild fruit on the roof of their buildings, using trowels from Cartier and insecticide atomizers from Givency.

Fire marshals wary of taking tank job

underground tanks is properly carried out, but warned that inspection of existing tanks could pose a problem.

"That's a substantial workload for them," continuing monitoring of the tanks," he said. "I'm going to have to take a good look at that."

As part of its tank regulation program, the DEP in November of 1985 began efforts to determine the location of existing non-residential storage tanks of oil and gasoline, said Carmen DiBattista of the DEP. He added that the new regulations require recently installed tanks to be constructed of either fiberglass or coated steel. They also call for existing tanks to be inspected within a certain period and to be replaced or repaired if defective.

The fire marshals' letter questions how much enforcement may cost municipalities. It also raises the possibility that liability protection currently provided fire marshals by the state may not apply to enforcement of the DEP regulations.

"It is not possible to accomplish everything that is required of us now, without volunteering to enforce someone else's regulations that are not truly germane to our goal of protecting life and property from the effects of fire," the letter reads.

Although he doesn't know what the potential cost of enforcement would be, Metcalf said the question should be answered.

This month the DEP will hold a hearing on whether to delegate authority to the fire marshals. John Cimshawski, a senior analyst at the DEP, said that if delegation is approved, the DEP could begin accepting applications by the middle of next year. The DEP hopes to organize the effort through the Board of State Fire Marshal. Fire marshals could not act as enforcement officers until completing a training program, he said.

Adam Berluti, spokesman for the Board of State Fire Marshal, said that the bureau's understanding is that the delegation of authority by the DEP is voluntary. "In that case, it makes it a local issue, and the department has no stated position on it," he said.

Cimshawski said the DEP would not be able to inspect the approximately 52,000 storage tanks statewide without local assistance. He said the job would require practically no additional work on the fire marshals' part because fire marshals, by inspecting tanks for fire safety, could at the same time determine that the tanks meet current state specifications.

School pact reached

School officials and the union that represents supervisory employees have reached a tentative two-year contract agreement after four months of negotiating, education officials said today.

Assistant School Superintendent William E. Deakin Jr. said this morning that members of the Manchester Association of School Administrators, which represents about 30 principals and supervisors in the school system, unanimously ratified the contract Thursday afternoon at Illing Junior High School. About 25 members attended the meeting, a union official said.

No details were given, but Deakin said the contract covers salaries, job protection clauses and the schools' grievance procedure.

Deakin said the administration is recommending that the Board of Education adopt the contract when it meets Monday night. If it is passed, the contract moves to the town Board of Directors for final consideration, Deakin said.

The contract would take effect July 1, 1987, and run until June 30, 1989, Deakin said.

Cops catch man on illegal roll

Police charged a Vernon man with risk of injury to a minor, possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia during a stakeout Wednesday evening at the Acadia Restaurant on Tolland Turnpike.

Michael Martin Lane, 16, was observed in an automobile rolling a marijuana cigarette at about 8:40 p.m., police said. Police said that when they searched Lane, they found a plastic bag containing one-eighth of an ounce of marijuana and a pipe with marijuana residue.

Lane was charged with risk of injury to a minor because three occupants of the automobile were under age, police said. Lane was released on $1,000 non-surety bond and is to appear Monday in Manchester Superior Court.

Village Crier

Yule thoughts may be worth a blt o' green

What do you remember best about Christmas Days of the past? Is it a funny tale? Or a touching bit of nostalgia?

The Manchester Herald's Village Crier would like to hear about your most interesting Christmas, or the most unusual tradition which your family shared.

Get down your memories, and bring them or mail them to the Herald by Dec. 17. Please keep your thoughts to 250 words, or about one typed page.

The most interesting recollections will be published in the Herald on Dec. 23. And cash prizes will be given to the top three writers.

So get out the pens or typewriters!

Be sure to put your name, address and telephone number at the top of each page. Our address: P.O. Box 591, Manchester 06040.

WORLD CLASS — Manchester has joined the ranks of Paris, Rome and London. The name of each great city, with a picture of a well-known local structure, appears on sweatshirts sold at the Manchester Memorial Hospital Gift Shop. Trying to identify the picture of the building on the Manchester shirt may start some conversations. Or lead to a trivia quiz.

CAT RESCUE — Percy Boucher spent about two hours on a ladder Sunday night, holding a flashlight and trying to coax her new kitten down from a pine tree in her yard on Chester Drive.

She finally had to give up her efforts late at night. The kitten just wouldn't come down from its 20-foot-high perch. And come Monday morning, the kitten was sitting at the very top of the 40-foot tree.

Boucher had to seek aid. She tried the police, the dog warden and the humane society. No one could help. Then she called the Eighth District Fire Department — by mistake, as her home isn't in the district. Two volunteer firefighters offered to help. They climbed the tree and got the kitten down, much to the relief of Boucher and her daughter, Michelle, 14.

ROYAL TREATMENT — Has anyone ever visited the throne room at Manchester Hardware?

The toilet seat display is in the back of the downtown store. Lift up the toilet seat lids and you'll see pictures of some prominent Manchester merchants, including Joe Garman and Bernie Apter.

FIFTY YEARS AGO — From the Manchester Evening Herald of Dec. 4, 1936:

A crowd of 200 fans greeted wrestling's return to Manchester at the State Armory last night after a lapse of two decades, finding keen enjoyment in the two-hour exhibition of the entertaining art of modified murder as exemplified by eight experienced grapplers of varying bulk, brawn and ability.

The new Glenwood, a remarkable gas range on display at the Manchester Division of the Hartford Gas Co., specially priced for Christmas at $74.50, includes Minute Minder clock and a handy condiment set, beautifully finished in black and white.

Wesleyan Guild groups are jubilant at the interest taken in their Christmas bazaar. "The House That Jack Built," which opened yesterday afternoon at the South Methodist church.

KUDOS — Congratulations to some Manchester people honored in the recent United Way campaign in Greater Hartford.

In the bank division, Savings Bank of Manchester coordinators Carol Houghton and Donna Cammeyer reported a passcetter campaign, with an 88 percent increase over 1985. The effort won a bronze award.

Meanwhile, in the third key firms division, the Lydall Inc. campaign, run by Renee Beaudry, took a bronze award for a 19 percent increase. And the J.C. Penney Distribution Center drive, with Ron Heilman and Jim Franchere as coordinators, won a silver award for a 34 percent increase. Dick Meduski of SBM was the chairman of that division.

In human services, the United Way recognized the Manchester Board of Education, whose campaign was coordinated by Ray Demers.

TUMBLING DOWN — Visitors to the Manchester Herald's downtown office have noticed that demolition work has begun on the newspaper's old building on Bissell Street.

The structure once housed the entire newspaper operation. It was built in 1922 by the Knights of Columbus and acquired by the Herald in 1928. In 1972, the building was left vacant when the Herald built a large addition on Brainard Place.

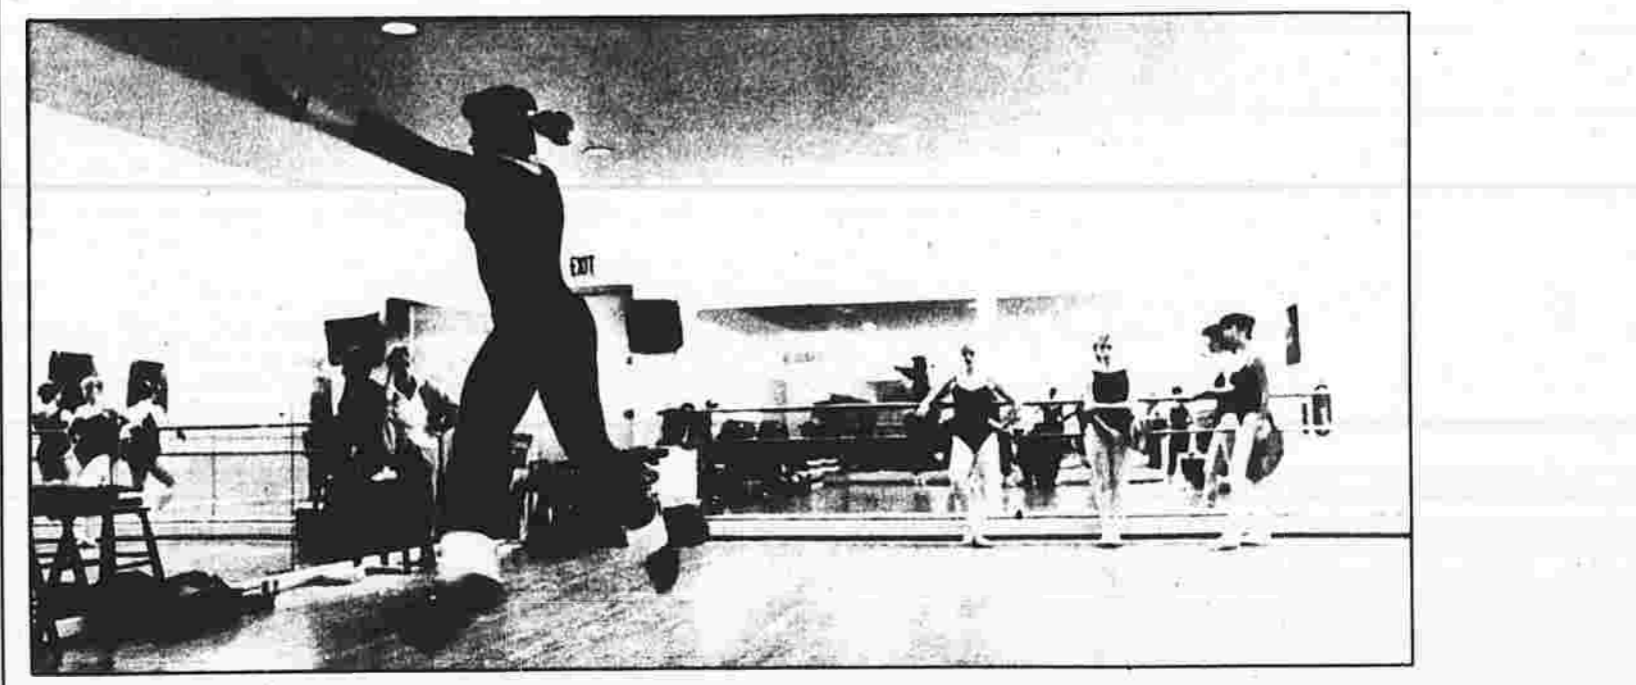

Not much was worth saving from the old building — except for the prominent gold-leaf sign which faces Main Street. The Herald plans to restore the sign, which was painted years ago by Ed Tomczuk of Edsine's.

Believe what you see: holidays are here

NEW YORK — If you absolutely don't believe anything until you see it on your home screen, you will shortly become aware that Christmas is upon us.

Charlie Brown, the Chipmunks, Babar, Perry Como, Kermit the Frog and Dolly Parton are all among those hoping to become as much a part of holiday tradition as Scrooge himself.

The yuletide bing starts tonight with "The Smurfs Christmas Special" and "A Chipmunk Christmas" on NBC. The titles tell it all.

Home Box Office starts its seasonal programming tonight, meanwhile, with "Babar and Father Christmas," in which the elephant king searches for the Jolly old elf in an animated special.

ABC gets the spirit on Saturday with Kermit the Frog and friends on "Kraft Presents — Jim Henson's Christmas Toy," Kern does a sort of Alistair Cooke gig, introducing a bunch of new puppets and then disappearing until the grand finale.

Adults should encourage kids to watch this delightful hour, which tells of the sadness that overtakes last year's favorite toy as a new load of loot appears under the tree. Rugby the Tiger's trauma might just dampen childish greed, if only for a moment.

The season's first retelling of "A Christmas Carol" is on ABC on Saturday, this version called "John Grin's Christmas," featuring an all-black cast headed by Robert ("Ben-ton") Guillaume.

ABC ends the night with the video equivalent of a warm glass of milk. "The Perry Como Christmas Special." The world's most relaxed crooner is in San Antonio, Texas, with opera star

Julia Milagres-Johnson, country singer George Strait and Angie Dickinson.

"Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" makes an encore appearance Tuesday on CBS, where the animated special was first seen in 1972.

More repeats from CBS are due next Friday with "A Charlie Brown Christmas" and "Frosty the Snowman," which is worth seeing just for the late Jimmy Durante's narration. CBS is also repeating "How the Grinch Stole Christmas" on Dec. 16.

If your taste runs to wretched excess, don't miss "Christmas at Radio City Music Hall" on Home Box Office on Dec. 13. Joel Grey and Leslie Uggams are listed as the stars, but let's not kid ourselves: the attractions here are those leggy Rockettes in Santa hats and black boots, high-kicking along the apron of the stage. Not to mention live camels, dancing Christmas trees and teddy bears, toy soldiers and ice skaters.

Edward Asner stars Dec. 14 in "The Christmas Star" on "The Disney Sunday Movie" on ABC. Asner plays a crafty robber who escapes from prison hoping to recover some loot hidden in some Christmas ornaments, but he's mistaken for Santa Claus by two children. You can guess the rest.

Asner is followed on ABC by Dolly Parton in her made-for-television debut in "A Smoky Mountain Christmas," complete with a lecherous sheriff (Bo Hopkins), a witch (Anita Morris), a mysterious mountain man (Lee Majors) and six new songs by Dolly.

ABC ends the night with the video equivalent of a warm glass of milk. "The Perry Como Christmas Special." The world's most relaxed crooner is in San Antonio, Texas, with opera star

Carolers to welcome new nativity scene

Join your neighbors tonight for a townwide carol-sing in honor of the new nativity scene, which will be placed on the lawn of Center Congregational Church.

Participants should meet on the lawn of St. James Church at 6:30. The Manchester Gilbert & Sullivan Players and the Townwide Chorus, a group of elementary school children, will sing. Everyone will then proceed to Center Congregational Church, singing as they go. Songbooks will be provided. Flashlights are suggested.

William R. Johnson, emcee for the event, will carry the baby to the nativity scene. Each child will be asked to carry an armful of straw. At the lawn of Center Congregational Church, the straw and baby will be placed in the manger. Mayor Barbara Weinberg will switch on the spotlights to illuminate the new nativity scene.

The Bernet Jazz Band will play. Winners of the Manchester Herald choiciness contest will be announced.

After the musical portion of the program, the group will go inside Center Congregational Church for free refreshments and a visit from Santa.

Baskets will be passed for donations to the Nativity Replacement Fund. The original nativity scene was destroyed in a fire in October.

Officials transplant caribou

HOLYROOD, Newfoundland (AP) - Two helicopters carrying Canadian wildlife experts this morning began a roundup of 30 caribou that organizers hope will help re-establish the majestic, reindeer-like beasts in Maine.

Armed with tranquilizer dart pistols designed to knock out their targets, the biologists headed some 25 to 30 miles into the Avalon Wilderness Area at North America's easternmost point, seeking to capture 28 pregnant cows and four stags from the estimated 5,000 that roam a 250-square-mile section.

Once their targets are sighted, the teams aboard the choppers planned to fly within 10 to 20 feet and fire tranquilizer darts into their quarry. Then, technicians would tie the legs of the animals, which are larger than deer but smaller than moose, and lift them aboard the helicopters for transport back to a staging camp where the caribou are weighed, measured and checked for disease.

The roundup, postponed by rain and fog on Thursday, is expected to take two days.

Most of the caribou will have likely lost their antlers for the season, but officials hoped to land two stags with full racks, which would be wrapped for safety.

"The idea is to show the people of Maine what a mature male looks like in full breeding regalia," said Shane Mahoney, a big-game biologist for Newfoundland who helped to organize the roundup.

Smoker claims rest rooms as sanctuary for employees

DEAR ABBY: You're agreeing with "Holding My Breath," the smug and self-righteous columnist who explained about having to use smoke-filled rest rooms in restaurants and other places because their employees use them as a place to smoke. Then you went along with her, saying that one day you hope to see "No Smoking" signs in public rest rooms.

DEAR ABBY: My letter was one of many you published from men who had to let their loved ones know (by code) their whereabouts during World War II. Later you published a letter from a reader who said that Lord HaHa and Tokyo Rose must have received a lot of valuable information from those sources, which probably cost us many lives. Nonsense. First of all, I flew 35 combat missions with the 8th Air Force and I was not about to tip off the enemy. All our plans were clearly marked. Our whereabouts cost no lives. None of the writers disclosed where they were headed — only where they had been.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have reported an incompetent doctor to the medical board because I have never personally involved with a doctor whom I consider to be incompetent. I don't agree with the manner in which some of my colleagues handle medical problems, but this doesn't mean that they are incompetent. They may not agree with what I do, either.

UConn does its board work against Central

By Len Ausler Sports Editor

STORRS — The one characteristic of a Jim Calhoun coached basketball team is its ability to rebound. When his teams are successful on the glass — at both ends of the court — they're going to have a shot of winning. When they don't...

The decision leaves both clubs at 2-1 for the season. UConn may be biting off more than it can chew in its next game as the Huskies host nationally ranked Purdue Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Hartford Civic Center. The Bolleermakers were No. 4 in the latest AP poll, including four first-place votes.

What does UConn need to combat Purdue? "Two recruiting years" quipped Calhoun, who is going to wear out a path in front of the Connecticut bench before the season is over.

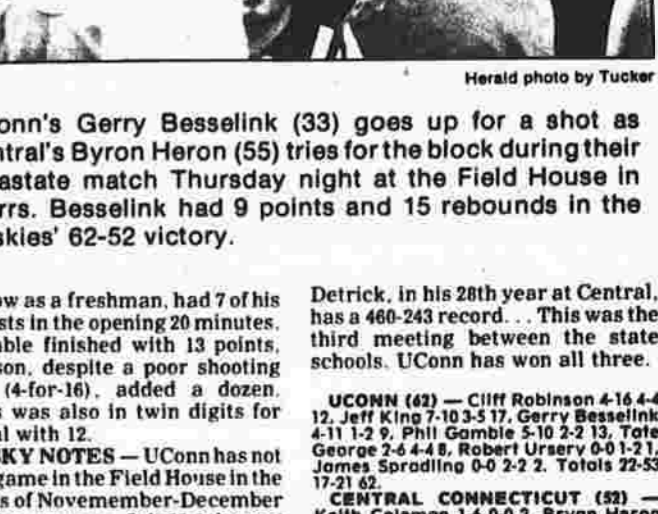

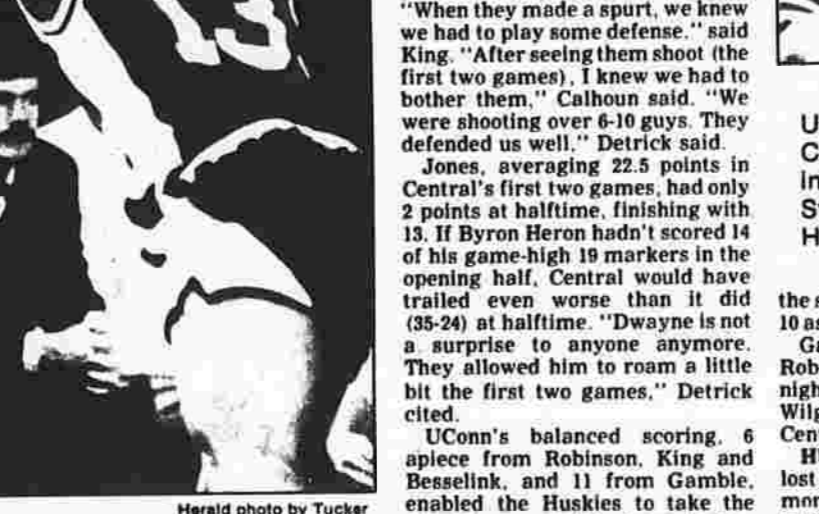

The Yale game was a perfect example for his Connecticut Huskies.

UConn returned to its glass-eating tendencies Thursday night in a 62-52 victory over intrastate rival Central Connecticut State University before a crowd of 3,676 at the Field House.

Bruians play beat-the-clock in nipping Nordiques

All the Boston Bruins were looking for was a tie. What they got was a victory that was totally unexpected by both the Bruins and the make-bitten Quebec Nordiques.

BYU and Air Force shoot it out for bowl bid

By The Associated Press

Brigham Young has already lost its chance to win the Western Athletic Conference for the 11th straight season.

But the Cougars can still earn their ninth straight bowl appearance with a victory Saturday over Air Force — because an invitation to the Freedom Bowl and a meeting with UCLA await the winner.

"It's nice that we still have something to shoot for," BYU Coach LaVell Edwards said. "BYU will be playing without three starters who were suspended from the team this week after being charged with altering drug prescriptions.

J.C. VonCollin, a junior linebacker, Trevor Molin, a junior tight end who was all-WAC last season, and Ladd Aike, a senior quarterback, will not play Saturday in the game at Air Force.

The Brigham Young-Air Force meeting is one of only three major-college games this weekend. Fourth-ranked Rose Bowl-bound Michigan plays at Hawaii while Army takes on Navy in the annual service academy clash.

BYU's bid to win the WAC ended Saturday with a 10-3 loss to San Diego State, which won the conference and a trip to the Holiday Bowl.

The Cougars, known for their passing attack, have had trouble in the air recently and have lost two of their last three games. Sophomore quarterback Bob Jensen will start over senior Steve Lindsey against the Falcons, 6-4.

"We hope he'll give us a spark,"

Edwards said. "It wasn't all Steve's fault. Unfortunately when your offense is not going well, the quarterback draws a good deal of the blame. He also gets more than his share of the credit when things go well. We've had several problems on offense — our line has had some injuries and has never solidified, and we've been plagued by turnovers.

"We just haven't progressed offensively like we have in other years. Quarterback is part of the problem, but not all of it."

Prior to San Diego State's victory, both BYU and Air Force were hoping their matchup would decide the WAC.

"It's not what we had in mind, but there's still something to look forward to," said Air Force Coach Fisher DeBerry, whose team has lost three of four. "We'll be playing on national television (ABC) with a chance to go to a postseason game. It's exciting climax to the end of the season."

In other college football this weekend, the Division I-AA, Division II, and Division III playoffs continue.

The quarterfinals of the Division I-AA tournament have Arkansas

State, 10-1-1, at Delaware, 9-2; Nicholls State, 10-2, at Georgia Southern, 10-2; Tennessee State, 10-1-1, at Nevada-Reno, 12-6; and Eastern Kentucky, 9-2-1, at Eastern Illinois, 11-1.

The semifinals of the Division II playoffs, 10-6-1, at North Dakota State, 11-0, and Troy State (Ala.), 10-1, at South Dakota, 10-2.

In the semifinals of Division III playoffs, it will be Salisbury State (Md.), 12-0, at Ithaca (N.Y.), 11-0; and Concordia (Minn.), 11-1, at Augustana (Ill.), 10-3.

East graders gunning for second state title

By Jim Tierney Herald Sports Writer

For the second time in three years, East Catholic will be participating in a state championship football game. The Eagles, 9-1-1, who beat Hand High of Madison 14-12 in the state Class MM title game, will try for their second consecutive state championship in the Class MM division Saturday at 1:30 p.m. against 8-3 Masuk High at Southington High School. East Coach Jude Kelly, who in his eighth season at the Eagle helm, sees some similarities in his club this year and his championship team of '85.

"They (the 1985 team and this year's club) are similar in some respects," Kelly said. "Every team develops its own characteristics. The common ingredient (between the two teams) is that they play aggressively as a team and have learned the concept of team play. Quickness and strength were characteristics on both teams."

East's opponent is certainly no stranger to state champion status, having been in one last year. The Monroe-based school, a representative of the Western Connecticut Conference's Briggs Division, lost to Hillhouse-New Haven, 16-16, in the Class MM state championship in 1985. For third-year Masuk coach

Dominick Quinto, Sr., Saturday's contest will be his second state championship appearance in three years as head coach.

"This would be the biggest win in Masuk football history," Quinto said.

After dropping its two opening games of the year, Masuk went on to post eight straight victories before losing its regular season finale on Thanksgiving to Immaculate of Danbury, 14-0. During the string of eight wins, Masuk shut out its opponents in each game, tying state record for shutouts in a season. Masuk's defense is an obvious concern for Kelly, who is gunning for his 50th career victory at East.

"I think that they (Masuk) play a fine defense," Quinto said. "They are not going to do that (record eight consecutive shutouts) unless you're a pretty good defensive team. They play an aggressive style of defense and have good athletes in the secondary." Senior linebacker Mark Christo announced the Panther defense which has allowed only 14 points since its second game of the year.

East's main weapons in its winless offense are senior tailback Kevin Ricci (21 touches, 101 yards), senior quarterback T.J. Albricio, junior Aaron Mullin (seven touchdowns, 763 yards) and Junior Jason Talbot (six touchdowns, 572 yards).

"Our main concern will be RicciCassi," Quinto said. "You don't see too many fullbacks scoring that many touchdowns."

Masuk's offense will be led by junior quarterback Richard Gallos, fullback Dave Rusk, and Jason Accello at tailback. Rusk also is the Panther kicker and has a 46- and a 49-yard field goal to his credit, a factor definitely favoring Masuk in a tight game.

Coming off the loss on Thanksgiving Day, will Masuk be ready for East Saturday? "Our kids were down after the loss to Immaculate," Quinto said. "But, now, they are confident and are looking forward to playing East."

Kelly and his machine-like wish-bone offense will certainly face its toughest challenge Saturday from Masuk's stingy defense. However, he knows his troops are prepared.

"The kids are certainly looking forward to the game," Quinto said. "They are emotionally ready to play a hard game. We're confident in our ability to move the ball offensively. We're going to try and sustain our blocks a little longer. Our defense is ready to stop Masuk's offense."

Kevin RicciCassi has rushed for 22 TDs and 1,014 yards on the ground leading the way for East Catholic's football team. RicciCassi and the Eagles take on Masuk Saturday for the state Class MM championship.

Knicks 95, Clippers 81

NEW YORK (AP) — New York's 40th victory over Los Angeles on Saturday ended a four-game losing streak for the Knicks.

In the semifinals of the Eastern Conference playoffs, New York defeated Los Angeles, 95-81, at Madison Square Garden.

New York's victory was capped by a dominant performance in the second half, when the Knicks outscored the Clippers 38-22.

Center Bill Cartwright led the Knicks with 22 points and 11 rebounds. Forward Elvin Hayes added 17 points and 11 rebounds. Point guard Steve Kluckner scored 14 points and 4 assists.

Los Angeles' highest scorer was guard Lennox Lewis with 21 points and 4 rebounds. Forward Scottie Broome added 17 points and 5 rebounds.

The Clippers' defense was out of sync in the second half, allowing New York to score 18 unanswered points to seal the victory.

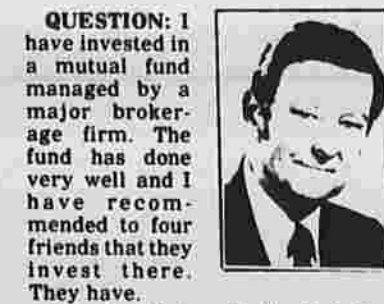

"We were out of sync in the second half," Clippers coach Jerry Sloan said. "We need to be better if we're to have any chance of making the playoffs."

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

QUESTION: I have invested in a mutual fund managed by a major brokerage firm. The fund has done very well and I have recommended it to four friends that they invest there. They have.

account - registered in the name of the brokerage firm with which I do business. Is the brokerage required to provide me with insurance, similar to the $100,000 Federal Deposit Insurance Corp or Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. coverage?

Business In Brief

Bank board faces expense probe

WASHINGTON - Top officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board face a Justice Department investigation of loan expenses they have received from the savings and loan industry they regulate, published reports say.

In addition, reports said the Office of Government Ethics has ordered the bank board officials to stop accepting travel and entertainment reimbursements, which has been common practice at the federal agency for 30 years.

Dollar gains strength in Europe

LONDON - The dollar strengthened against European currencies today, taking its cue from a rally in New York the day before. Gold was mixed.

The dollar gained 1.7 centimes against the Swiss franc and 1.75 pfennigs against the West German mark. It strengthened against the Japanese yen for the fourth straight day, closing 1.07 yen up on the week.

Dealers said the gains were attributable to market feeling that the arms-to-Iran crisis is not hitting the U.S. economy as hard as was initially feared. They also cited the refusal of U.S. officials to "talk down" the dollar in recent weeks.

Another factor is the traditional December demand for dollars by corporations wishing to square their dollar accounts before the year's end.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he can provide answers only through the column.
