Rents may rise at Bennet

By Alex Girelli, Associate Editor

A proposal to hike rents at the Bennet Apartments by 8 percent met with strong opposition Tuesday night when Kenneth Garrity, the tenant member of the group that oversees the project.

After heated discussion, the Board of Directors of the Bennet Non-Profit Housing Corp. adjourned its meeting until Jan. 13 and asked the management of the town-sponsored housing complex for elderly people to present more information on financial projections for next year.

Robert Heavildes, a Republican member of the board, joined Garrity in opposing the rent increase. He argued that the increase should be no more than 3 percent, which he said is the current rate of inflation.

James Finnegan, who presided at the meeting in the absence of Chairman John FitzGerald, said "we can't ignore" future financial obligations that will be incurred in the operation of the Main Street complex when investors' contributions diminish.

Sтивен Eriq, managing director of the Community Development Corp., which manages the 45-unit apartment complex, said the CDC feels the 8 percent increase is the amount needed to provide a reserve for when investor contributions diminish.

Rents now range from $397 a month to $418 for one-bedroom apartments and from $470 to $528 for two-bedroom units.

About 50 of the tenants of the converted school building attended the meeting, which was held in the community room at one point when Eriq said rents might have to be increased drastically in the future if they are not increased now, some of the tenants said in union. "We won't be here."

It was Garrity who first broached the subject of a rent increase, noting that while there was apparently no direct reference to a rent increase in the financial projections, there was a provision for an 8 percent increase.

Supreme Court rules Connecticut can't close primaries

By James H. Rubin, The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled today that if political parties wish to hold open primaries, states may not bar independent voters from casting ballots to determine the parties' nominees.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices refused to resurrect a Connecticut law challenged by Republican leaders who sought participation in the party's primaries by unaffiliated voters.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, writing for the court, said the law violated the right of free political association guaranteed by the Constitution.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, writing for the court, said the law violated the right of free political association guaranteed by the Constitution.

He said that while it is obvious that until Poindester and North give their testimony "you'll never know for sure what happened," it is also true that "you don't rush out there immediately to get their testimony before an independent prosecutor has been named ... and starts making decisions that could affect the entire process of inquiry."

Another Democratic member of the committee, Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana, said the issue of immunity needs to be discussed but he thought it was too early to grant it.

But, Faccell, speaking to reporters after CIA director William Casey entered the hearing room to begin a morning of private testimony, said there is still "a lot of work that needs to be done on this matter."

No contest

A vehicular manslaughter charge against singer Luther Vandross was dropped in exchange for a no-contest plea to reckless driving and an agreement to hold a benefit concert.

The 33-year-old rhythm-and-blues singer, whose latest album is No. 2 on the soul charts, agreed to stage a concert in New York or Los Angeles within 12 months to benefit a scholarship fund named for Lawrence Salvemini.

Salvemini, 27, was killed and another passenger in Vandross' car was injured when the vehicle went out of control and smashed into oncoming traffic Jan. 12. Three people in two other vehicles also were injured.

In dismissing the misdemeanor manslaughter charge, Los Angeles Municipal Court Judge Arika K. Bobb on Tuesday placed Vandross on summary probation for 12 months, ordered him to pay restitution to the victims, any civil judgments stemming from the case and hold the concert.

The proceeds must be no less than $2,000, the amount of the maximum fine.

Vandross' current album is titled "Give Me the Reason."

WILLIAM KENNEDY ... turkey of a complaint

Kennedy's award-winning "Ironweed," set in nearby Albany, "won" the runner-up Silver Turkey award, Philip Roth's "Portnoy's Complaint," got the Golden Turkey.

In a letter published in Tuesday's Albany Times Union, Kennedy said the awards, conducted before Thanksgiving, were based on "a poll of book borrowers of all ages and mentalities."

"This, I think, has the potential for being seasonal — the Rotten Egg award at Easter, for instance, for the most four-mouthed author of the year; at midsummer, the Overripe Tomato Award; and the most excessive feminist novel; and say, how about an Up-The-Chimney Christmas Party?" he wrote.

Responsible shows

Episodes of CBS-TV's "Cagney & Lacey" and NBC's "The Cosby Show" won awards for sexual responsibility on television.

Also honored Tuesday were NBC's movie "An Early Frost" about AIDS and the CBS School Break Special, "Babies Having Babies."

Al Rabin, executive producer of the soap opera "Days of Our Lives" was voted a special award before the ceremony, at which the presenters included Cybill Shepherd, Norman Lear, Patty Duke, Ben Arthur and Mike Farrell.

Harris to speak

Julie Harris, a five-time Tony Award winner and two-time Emmy recipient, will be the featured speaker at the Willa Cather Spring Conference in Red Cloud, Neb.

VI Borton, president of the Willa Cather Pioneer Memorial Foundation, said Harris was asked to speak because she is a fan of Cather, an author who grew up in Red Cloud and whose works include "My Antonia."

The annual conference will be May 2.

A Boy Or A Girl?
 Drought, disease and pollution have caused a serious oyster shortage along U.S. coastlines. But under the right conditions, the oyster is one of nature's more prolific creatures. The mollusk is ambisexual. Young oysters begin life as males. Later they become females. As a female, an oyster may produce as many as 500 million eggs a year. After laying eggs, the oyster again becomes a male. An oyster makes this change many times during its lifetime.

DO YOU KNOW? — What valuable jewel grows inside some oysters?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were executed in 1953.

Town offers Buckland split

and Eighth District boards said they want the talks between the two negotiating committees to be secret so that comments will not get sensationalized in the press.

But district Director Joseph Tripp disagreed, saying, "We have to do an outstanding job of selling whatever it is we would agree to. We're not going to do that by being secretive."

Weinberg explained that Democrats agreed to have the town pay for the firehouse expansion "in a spirit of cooperation," because the town is the larger entity. She said the move represents a "giant step" in the town's effort to share the firehouse with the town.

Weinberg said the expansion would probably involve adding a story to the building. There is limited space to widen the facility because of a nearby hillside and rock ledge underneath some of the property, she said.

In 1984, a proposal to expand the firehouse so that Eighth District firefighters could use it was estimated at a cost of $200,000. Those plans, which were rejected by the town, called for construction of a second living area above the bay area.

District Director Tripp refused to comment on the town's latest offer. And Lassow, while willing to consider the proposal, said he is "still not convinced they (the town) need that firehouse."

Since a referendum last month in which townspeople voted overwhelmingly against the removal of provisions in the Town Charter that allow the Eighth District to fend off

Talk was first in seven years

The informal discussion Tuesday between directors of the Eighth Utilities District and the town was the first since 1979, according to town Director Peter DiRosa.

DiRosa said that the 1979 meeting, held in the Eighth District's Main Street firehouse, lasted only 20 minutes before the two sides parted without resolving anything.

"It was tense," he said.

"We started like this once before and it ended that night," district Director Gordon Lassow recalled.

In contrast, Tuesday's joint meeting was marked by courtesy and humor.

"Let's work things out and try to get together for the good of the entire community," urged Mayor Barbara Weinberg.

"We, too, feel this is one town, one community," said Eighth District President Walter Joyner.

"In the last nine years, we've met only once as a board, and that's not good," DiRosa said. "I really think we should have a continuing dialogue."

Both sides Tuesday agreed to discuss setting up talks on a proposal to expand the town's Buckland firehouse so that firefighters from both departments could use the facility.

At one point in the 50-minute meeting at Lincoln Center, the discussion broke off so that directors from both camps could individually introduce themselves to each other. When it was the turn of town Director Stephen Penny — a longtime critic of the Eighth District — he merely said, "I'm sure everybody knows me."

The comment was met with laughter from both sides.

After the session ended and members left their chairs, individual chats were held, with frequent smiles crossing the faces of both town and district directors.

The two boards agreed to hold another joint meeting after the negotiating committees come up with a proposal on how to hold a more formal series of talks on the expansion proposal. That will probably occur in early February, they said.

The town will use its own staff to design and build a highway garage on Olcott Street but will spend $35,000 for outside help in construction of a Water Department garage on Spring Street.

The decision Tuesday by the Board of Directors to hire former Planning Director Alan F. Lamson to design the Water Department garage came despite questions about the selection from Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg.

Weinberg said the choice — proposed by a three-member selection committee — created the appearance of favoritism and asked why the committee was composed of town employees instead of members of the Building Committee. Weinberg said Lamson's bid of $15,000 was the lowest of three considered, he said.

Weinberg said that after learning of Lamson's selection, he had asked Kandra if Lamson's previous town employment was a factor and he was assured it was not.

"As long as he's going to be a former director we're always going to have this problem," town Director Stephen Cassano said of Lamson, who has been awarded a number of other municipal architectural contracts.

The decision to have the outside work done was backed by all members except Democrat James "Dutch" Fogarty, who opposed the move, and Republican Director Director William J. Diana, who did not attend the meeting.

However, Weinberg said she voted with the majority reluctantly and criticized the town administration for not providing the necessary information beforehand.

The criticism over the selection comes in the wake of complaints last month by members of the Building Committee over the hiring of Lamson by another selection panel to draw preliminary designs for a senior housing project on North Elm Street. The committee's three Republican members wanted a different selection process — one involving more people — used to make such choices.

Kandra said that in addition to hiring outside architectural help to design the five-bay, $270,000 garage, $20,000 will be spent to subdivide and sell watershed land the town owns in Glastonbury.

That land comprises 16 acres and the proceeds from its sale would be used to cover the cost of the garage. If the land is not sold, Kandra said, the outside services will not be obtained.

As for the highway garage, the board agreed to waive bid requirements for the project and have town workers build the facility for $50,000. The move came after Kandra said bids from private firms ranged from $70,000 to $128,763.

He said the town should be able to do the work for no more than $50,000. Materials will cost $35,000, with the labor being the remaining expense, he said.

The money is being given to the town by the federal government to replace a tobacco shed damaged during Hurricane Gloria in 1985. Under the terms of the grant, the facility must be built by March 1, 1987.

Non-union teachers waiting

The union representing Manchester teachers will meet Thursday to discuss contract negotiations, but 28 non-members who petitioned for the right to have a voice in the talks still don't know whether they will be allowed to attend.

"We don't know what we're going to do tomorrow," said William Edwards, a history teacher at Illing Junior High and one of those who does not belong to the Manchester Education Association, which represents most of the town's 500 teachers. "They (MEA) just don't talk to us."

A letter opposing the meeting, from which non-union teachers are barred, was signed by 70 Illing teachers, including Edwards, and forwarded to MEA President Catherine Mazzotta over the weekend.

According to Edwards, non-members are required to pay 80 percent of the normal union dues to cover the cost of collective bargaining, contract administration and grievance adjustments. The fee is withheld from their paychecks, he said.

Mazzotta said this morning that she expected "some of them (non-members) will be there" at Thursday's meeting. She has been open to the idea of allowing non-union teachers to attend and

Condo expansion proposed

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

Two Coventry developers have asked the Planning and Zoning Commission to increase the number of condominium units they are allowed to build at the corner of Park and St. James streets from 15 to 25.

The zoning commission, which is scheduled to consider the general site plan Jan. 5, approved the Frechettes' request to build on the site a year ago but cut the number of units from the proposed 25 to 15. At that time, commission members argued that local streets could not handle the additional traffic generated by so many new units.

The decision prompted the Frechettes to file a lawsuit charging that the commission did not have the right to lower the number of units proposed, said South Windsor attorney David Schulman, who represents the developers. Although that suit is still pending, the Frechettes decided to submit another general site plan for 25 units.

Explosives net jail term

Golway Street man's 'hobby' got out of hand

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herald Reporter

A Manchester man whose home was said to have contained a small arsenal of weapons and explosives was sentenced Tuesday to two concurrent five-year prison terms, with all but one year suspended, and was fined $1,000.

John A. Lawler Jr., 39, of 39 Golway St., faced a sentence of up to 25 years. He pleaded guilty in October to charges of manufacturing a bomb and possession of a shotgun with a silencer. The charges stemmed from an incident in July when police responded to a report of explosions behind Lawler's house.

Lawler, dressed in a gray suit, appeared impassive when Judge Raymond Noroko delivered the sentence in Manchester Superior Court, but his mother, Mary Lawler, was visibly upset and rested her head on the shoulder of a friend, Lawler, who has no previous convictions, began serving his sentence immediately at the Hartford Correctional Center.

While he praised the defense put forth by John Tunilla, Lawler's attorney, Judge Noroko said the responsibility was to protect the public safety. Before sentencing, Tunilla asked the court to take into consideration Lawler's "creative" spirit and the fact that at the time of the incident Lawler was an alcoholic. An evidence of the former, he displayed an example of Lawler's handiwork — a bottle containing a wooden chair. "It's our contention that Mr. Lawler is a very creative person," Tunilla said. "Knowing a little bit about his creativity helps put things into perspective."

Business zoning sought

A West Hartford firm is seeking a change for land in northern Manchester that was once slated for high-density residential development.

The parcel is south of Interstate 84 and east of Buckland Street and abuts land owned by the Red Roof Inn Inc. of Hilliard, Ohio, which has won approval from the PZC to build a 112-room motel on the 26 acres. The site is also part of the 400-unit Brentwood Condominium project being planned by the Brentwood Manchester Associates, which owns the land. Kenover is seeking the zone change for.

The association had originally planned to build about 80 units on the 4.1 acres. Brentwood officials could not be reached for comment.

Officials have decided not to allow homeless people from Bolton long-term use of the shelter operated by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches on Main Street.

Robbery suspects await freedom after bail set

HARTFORD (AP) — Three more defendants in 1983 Wells Fargo robbery are expected to be freed within days after a federal judge set bail ranging up to $1 million.

U.S. District Judge T. Emmet Clarke on Tuesday set $1 million bail each for Isaac Camacho Negron and Orlando Gonzalez Claudio. He set a $500,000 bail for Elias Samuel Castro Ramos.

Bail hearings were scheduled today for five other defendants: Hilton Fernandez Diamante, Yvonne Melendez Carrion, Enrique Segarra Palmer, Luz Berrios Berrios, and Luis Alfredo Colon Osorio. A bail hearing for Filiberto Ojeda Rios was to be held Friday.

The defendants have been held since their arrest on Aug. 30, 1985, under the 1984 Bail Reform Act, which allows a defendant to be held without bail on the grounds of being potentially dangerous.

However, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York ruled last month that the continued imprisonment of Gonzalez Claudio and Camacho Negron while awaiting trial would be unconstitutional. Clarke said he would set bail for all nine defendants still imprisoned.

Fourteen men and two women have been charged in the September 1983 robbery, in which an estimated $7 million was taken from Wells Fargo depot in West Hartford. Seven defendants already are free on bonds as high as $1 million.

Backers of multi-state lottery seek to remove legal hurdles

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A proposal to have Connecticut participate in a multi-state lottery would appear to violate a moratorium on new forms of state-run gambling and that's one reason why backers of the idea want legislation introduced next year sanctioning such a game.

Further, there's no law on the books now allowing Connecticut to enter into that kind of agreement with other states. The proposal is on the agenda for Thursday's meeting of the state Gaming Policy Board, which oversees state-run gambling.

State Lottery Chief J. Blaine Lewis Jr. said Tuesday that "standby legislation" is needed. A bill he'd like to see the 1987 General Assembly pass would allow the state to participate in a multi-state game "if something comes along that looks good."

Steady legislation would not give us carte blanche to do anything we want, but it would give us carte blanche to join something if we can convince the executive director and the policy board it is a good thing," Lewis said. "We're not asking for a blank check. If I get standby legislation and the thing never materializes, nothing's lost."

"If it comes about and we're not involved, we could get hurt badly," Lewis said.

In an opinion issued last year, Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman had said it was "beyond question" that the legislature would have to "give its approval to any such type of novel enterprise."

Judge rules suicide notes inadmissible

MILFORD (AP) — The suicide notes of a man who admitted to raping and killing an unnamed girl have been ruled inadmissible as evidence in the defense of Daniel Stuart, on trial for the second time on charges he committed the same crimes against a 5-year-old Milford child.

The notes were left by Joseph Salomone, 24, before he hanged himself from a tree in 1983 while jury deliberations were going on in Stuart's first trial.

The notes were left by Joseph Salomone, 24, before he hanged himself from a tree in 1983 while jury deliberations were going on in Stuart's first trial.

Stuart was convicted of murder, but Salomone's notes, in which he didn't name his alleged victim, were the basis upon which a Superior Court judge last year granted Stuart a new trial.

The body of 8-year-old Constance Roberts, who had been beaten and sexually assaulted, was found behind a school in Milford shortly after she was reported missing in 1982.

On Monday, the eighth day of Stuart's trial in Milford Superior Court, Judge Hugh C. Curran suppressed the notes as evidence after a hearing without the jury present.

"I don't think the evidence is clear" that Salomone was telling the truth, Curran said. "In this case there is proof that it could not have been true."

Defense attorney Robert Casale declined comment on the ruling. "I just have to move forward," he said.

During the hearing, Casale argued that Salomone claimed to have committed the crime at about the same time Miss Roberts was killed. There were no other similar incidents at the time, the defense lawyer said.

OPINION

Town invites aquifer death

Once an underground water supply is polluted it is extremely difficult, if not impossible, to reclaim for drinking purposes. Wells in northern Manchester that were contaminated with degreasing compounds years ago still show traces of the substance, though the polluting has apparently ceased. Not far away live families whose wells, laced with ethylene dibromide, can't be used. Water will have to be delivered to their homes for the foreseeable future because their natural supply has been turned to cancerous poison by careless chemical applicators.

Given the fragile nature of an aquifer, it's hard to understand why officials failed, when drafting the Comprehensive Plan of Development, to assure the protection of the ones that remain pure in town. But fail they did, and steps must be taken to remedy the situation.

Over the New State Road wells, the planners have actually paved the way for an industrial area. That is nothing short of ridiculous given the loud warnings from the Connecticut Department of Environmental Protection that industrial development is the type that most often spells doom for ground water.

Now members of the Conservation Commission are seeking changes, but they seem a bit shy as they argue their case. They must quickly change their approach and become active advocates for their cause, which should not be theirs alone.

When the comprehensive plan was put in place this past summer, administrators assured townpeople it would be kept current, unlike the one that was adopted in the mid-1960s and ignored ever after. Obviously, the first revision needed is the inclusion of greater protection for key water sources. Although the mechanism is in place for the creation of an aquifer protection zone, one does not currently exist.

If the development predicted and pursued by town officials is to pass, the old North End tobacco fields soon will be covered with concrete. Stores, condos, houses and industry will be crammed in everywhere, and there will be a geometric expansion in the use of hazardous chemicals. With few protective measures in place, that doesn't bode well for Manchester's future.

New regulations alone won't solve the problem, though.

Even as the safeguards are developed, a more active role should be carved out for the Conservation Commission. Just as the Cheney National Historic District Commission is asked for input on development decisions within the area it has been appointed to watch, the Conservation Commission's opinion should be sought when development is proposed in environmentally critical areas. Impact statements should be required and more detailed consideration should be given to construction proposals.

That might stall things at times, but it would pay off in the end.

For now, no one should stand by and watch if they feel a particular land-use decision might endanger a precious resource. Commotion that seems unfortunate for the moment might just mean the preservation of something that cannot be replaced.

Iraqis see Israeli plot in arms deals

WASHINGTON — Iraq's leaders are deeply offended by the Reagan administration's secret sale of arms to Iran, but they don't plan to break diplomatic relations with the United States. The reason is a little strange, even for the mysterious Middle East: The Iraqis believe the whole scheme was cooked up by Israel to throw a monkey wrench into U.S.-Iraq relations, and they don't want to give the Israelis the satisfaction of having succeeded.

"We can conclude that the Israelis lured their American allies into the quagmire," Iraqi foreign minister Tariq Aziz told Dale Van Atta in Baghdad. "This operation is neither a victory for the Iraqis nor the Americans. Israel is the sole beneficiary."

This single-minded view of the situation was also reflected by Aziz's undersecretary, Wisam Az-Zahaawy. He expressed confidence that the White House would be able to call on the "Israeli lobby" in Washington to bail it out of its present difficulties.

"It is an old story," Az-Zahaawy said. "The Israelis' primary aim is to undermine relations between the U.S. and Iraq. To destroy relations between the U.S. and Arab world, they continue to do everything they can to damage relations with the United States and any Arab country."

Reagan put U.S. on its feet again

To the Editor:

The following is a copy of a letter I recently sent to President Reagan.

Dear Mr. President:

American citizens have had very little to feel proud of since the death of John F. Kennedy. When you became president and took office you reminded me a lot of Harry Truman. Your attitude towards the presidency was that the buck stops here and you restored my faith in the government after the devastation caused by Nixon and Ford and the idiotic replies by Carter to questions about the USSR.

When a man stands up and takes credit for errors in bad judgment, as well as for when things go right, it shows that he is doing things. And people who do things tend to make mistakes. I firmly agree with your policy on the Iranian situation that only those that needed to know were informed. For as you know, there are more leaks in Washington than there are holes in a sieve. The Senate and Congress should take care of senatorial and congressional business and leave the running of the country to the man who is ultimately responsible for the final decision.

But now I honestly feel that you are trying to make justification to appease many for your actions in the past 18 months. You should not have to do that. Anyone who

Leaves remain for Christmas

To the Editor:

I would like to comment on the town of Manchester's leaf pickup program. It has been nearly two weeks since the proposed date of Nov. 16 as the last day of leaf pickup by the town crews. The project was extended because of an unexpected snow storm a few weeks ago. The snow has come and gone and still the leaves line Delmont Street.

According to plans each street was supposed to have their leaves picked up at least two or three times during the pickup schedule. Each section of the town, a total of six, was supposed to have been assigned a leaf removal vehicle. There was such a vehicle in our section, but our leaves were never picked up one time in all those weeks. Here it is already the first week in December, a month from the start of leaf pickup. What must we do? Put brightly colored bows on our leaf piles and add them to our seasonal Christmas decorations.

There must be a better solution. Right now a Public Works leaf removal truck would be a welcome sight as the Northeast Utilities trucks were after Hurricane Gloria.

I speak for a lot of Americans who feel that the presidency hasn't stood this high in a decade and a half and it is about time those who doubt it face the fact that America is on its feet again.

Every lawmaker wants an extra title

As the big boys in both parties finish their orgy of handing out leadership titles for the new General Assembly, outgoing House Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand of Darien could go down as Mr. Eight-Tenths.

House Republicans, a bit gun-shy over reaction to the growing game of having my chiefs and few Indians, are limiting themselves to 20 percent of their 59 members. That works out to 11.8 leaders for the minority next year.

Rep. Bob Jackie of Stratford, the new minority leader and author of the 20 percent idea, named 10 deputies and assistant leaders who will report to him — the 11th — in the next session. That left him with 8 or, rounding it out to the next percent, room for a 12th leader.

Because the House doesn't want former speakers walking around without a cloak of recognition — naked in the public square, as it were — they devised an honorary title about 15 years ago. Jackie, with the .8 fraction available, used it to name Van Norstrand the minority leader-at-large.

Bill Ratchford of Danbury and Jim Kennedy of Hartford, both Democrats and former speakers, are predecessors at at-large roles.

REP. BOB FRANKEL of Stratford, who will be Democratic majority leader in January, says the Jackie formula isn't a bad idea. It may wind up in House rules when the assembly convenes.

The Legislature's rules put no restraint on how many deputies or assistants either party may name, nor on creativity at cooking up titles. Capitol Comments
Bob Conrad

Incoming Senate Majority Leader Con O'Leary of Windsor Locks admits there is a "proliferation" of titles now. He joins Frankel and House Speaker-designate Irving Stoberg of New Haven in arguing that the expense is justified because of the demands on modern-day legislators in time and effort.

All of the top leaders reject any suggestion that the spreading around of so many leadership jobs amounts to any kind of pay grab. In terms of present-day earnings for services rendered, they say, the state is getting a bargain.

Political notes

- U.S. Sen. Chris Dodd is slightly miffed because Gov. Bill O'Neill failed to tell him either about tapping Vin Mauro of New Haven for Democratic state chairman or, when Mauro declined, tapping John Dronoy of West Hartford for the job. The governor tells aides it was an honest slip of the mind.
- Democratic National Committeeman Pete Kelly of Hartford advised or otherwise helped in the campaigns of 18 successful Democratic candidates for the U.S. Senate last month.
- U.S. Rep. Nancy Johnson of New Britain will nominate U.S. Rep. Robert Michel of Illinois as House minority leader next month, a signal of recognition for the Connecticut congressman.
- One of the callers when Stoberg appeared on C-Span last week after being installed as president of the National Conference of State Legislatures was Rep. Tom Dudgeon of Ansonia, a Republican, who called the Democratic leader "a wonderful man."

Brokers siphoned profits from arms, sources say

By Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators say there are growing signs that middlemen and brokers may have siphoned off large amounts of the millions of dollars in profits from the Iran arms sales that were meant for Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

While the Reagan administration has said $10 million to $30 million in proceeds from the sale was deposited in a Swiss bank account for use by the Contras, it seems much of that money may have gone for sales commissions and fees, said congressional sources.

The House and Senate intelligence committees are making the trail of the money that paid for the weapons a focus of their investigations, members of both panels said.

"There's a lot of money unaccounted for, an awful lot of money. There were people trying to get their piece of it," said one congressional source.

"I'm personally a little disgusted with the rip-off by some of the international arms merchants," said another source familiar with the investigation. "I think they may have ended up getting more money than the Contras."

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, raised several possibilities that will be probed by the intelligence panels, including the appearance that commissions totaling one-third or more of the proceeds were raked off by various middlemen in the deal.

One source also suggested that brokers may have collected excessive commissions, then used part of the money to make a "private donation" to the Contras that might be intended to skirt legal problems of misuse of government money.

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said that without access so far to his committee's files, he cannot say whether there was full cooperation from some witnesses, but committee has been unable to pinpoint how much money was involved and who benefited from it.

"There were a lot of brokers" between the Iran and Contra deals, said Durenberger. "I'm obviously they were compensated."

CIA analysts who have testified before the Senate intelligence panel over the past week have described the weapons that have been flowing to the Contras and concluded that there is no evidence the rebels are receiving substantial new aid from the Iranian deal, Durenberger said Tuesday.

Some of the key figures in the arms deal have been called to testify before both intelligence committees and the House Foreign Affairs Committee, but have invoked their Fifth Amendment rights against self-incrimination and have refused to answer questions. That has left gaping holes in the panels' knowledge, investigators concede.

Philippine cease-fire begins in spite of weapons dispute

By Robert H. Reid
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — The first nationwide cease-fire of the 17-year communist rebellion began on schedule today, with no reports of violations and President Corason Aquino expressing hope for a "longer and honorable peace."

The two sides, however, had yet to settle differences over where guerrillas could carry their weapons.

Government negotiator Teofisto Guingona, appearing with a rebel counterpart, declared the 60-day truce in force at noon. He called on both parties "to exercise the utmost restraint and good faith" in the mutual search for peace.

Aquino, who made peace with the communists a cornerstone of his administration, said he had been pressed by the government into going ahead with today's starting time before adequate security mechanisms were in place.

Guingona swore in the five-member national cease-fire monitoring committee and said the group would begin work immediately on guidelines and procedures for ensuring compliance.

The truce began more than 12 hours after the two sides announced agreement on a compromise between the military's right to patrol and seize illegal weapons and the rebels' insistence on retaining their weapons.

Negotiators from the government and the rebel National Democratic Front said armed guerrillas would stay out of "population centers" during the cease-fire period.

They said the military could continue patrols against criminals but would not seize weapons from the rebel New People's Army.

Fate of creationism rests with high court

By Richard Carell
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a case that could be subtitled Darwin vs. the Book of Genesis, the Supreme Court is studying whether states may require public schools teaching evolution to teach creationism also.

The court today was to hear arguments over a Louisiana law that lower courts struck down as a violation of the constitutionally required separation of church and state.

The justices' decision, expected by July, could bury or revitalize the creationism movement, which previously suffered a major setback in Arkansas.

The Louisiana Legislature in 1981 enacted the Balanced Treatment for Creation-Science and Evolution-Science Act. Creation-science parallels a literal translation of the biblical version in Genesis, stating that Earth and most life forms came into existence suddenly about 6,000 years ago.

Evolution teaches that Earth is billions of years old and that life forms began developing gradually several million years ago.

Representing Louisiana before the high court is Atlanta lawyer Wendell Bird, a creationism activist who served as lead lawyer for Arkansas in that state's unsuccessful defense in lower courts of a nearly identical law.

Arkansas officials decided not to seek Supreme Court review.

The Louisiana law's sponsor, state Sen. Bill Keith, acknowledged the religious foundation of creation-science. Keith said Charles Darwin's theory of evolution is a tenet of the humanist movement, which he called "a bona fide religion" itself.

But Louisiana Attorney General William Guste said in a recent interview the state law has nothing to do with religion and requires only that students be exposed to competing scientific theories.

"We are defending the student's right to be exposed to all the evidence," said Guste, a candidate in his state's 1987 gubernatorial race.

"There is nothing in the act that implies the Bible should be taught, that God should be taught," Guste said. "All that it provides is that scientific evidence be taught."

As it had in Arkansas, the Supreme Court heard the attack on Louisiana's law, labeling it an attempt to teach religion disguised as science.

Trades are at minimum at meetings

By Alan Robinson
The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — There's been plenty of talking but no wrapping as major-league executives trade stories and rumors at winter meetings.

As the meetings wound down today, the last official day of business, not a single trade transaction involving a name player had been completed.

Los Angeles Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda has a theory why the wintertime session — which once routinely saw 40 or more players switch teams — has suddenly become a wheeler-dealer's nightmare.

"There are a lot of reasons, most of them dealing with money, contracts, a player's time of service, the fact there's no (December inter-league trading) deadline," Lasorda said.

"I used to be a team would call you about a player and ask what you wanted for him. Now, they want to know what a player is making, whether he's a 5-and-10 player, does he have a no-trade contract? It's tough to make a trade," he said.

The inter-league trading deadline once was the final day of the winter meetings but is now July 31. That lessens the pressure for teams to make deals before they return home for the holidays.

Veterans with 10 years in the majors, five with the same team, complicate matters because they have the right to veto trades.

"We have gotten a reputation for not wanting to trade and it's not deserved," Pittsburgh Pirates General Manager Syd Thrift said. "The trouble is it's just so tough anymore to make a trade and it takes so long to make one."

Players such as Tim Lincecum, Mark Gubicza, Danny Jackson, Chili Davis, Don Pasqua, Ron Oester, Damaso Garcia, Bret Saberhagen, Phil Bradley, Danny Tartabull, Gary Redus, Orel Hershiser and Willie Hernandez have been mentioned in trade rumors. But even their reported availability hasn't kept general managers from playing let's-not-make-a-deal.

San Diego Padres General Manager Jack McKeon, nicknamed "Trader Jack," doesn't know when the trade legion will finally break. "Somebody's going to panic soon and make a trade. But it's not going to be us," he said, puffing on a cigar.

The Padres, Kansas City Royals, Dodgers and aging Chicago Cubs have been mentioned in plenty of trade talk.

The Dodgers are said to be shopping four-time batting champion Bill Madlock, a disappointment since his August 1985 acquisition from the Pirates, and would like Expos third baseman Tim Lincecum as his replacement.

The Dodgers also want pitching help for their stopper-less bullpen and are said to covet Montreal right-hander Jeff Reardon. But they have balked at the Expos' reported request for right-hander Hershiser, a 19-game winner in 1985.

Gubicza and Jackson, two young pitchers who helped the Royals to the 1985 World Series, are also being discussed and Kansas City would like to deal for Cleveland shortstop Julio Franco. The Royals also would like either Seattle's two young outfielders, Bradley or Tartabull.

The Mariners are said to be disenchanted with Tartabull's work habits, even though the son of former major leaguer Jose Tartabull hit 25 home runs and 96 RBI in his rookie season. Bradley batted .310 in 143 games but had only 12 homers and 50 RBI in 526 at-bats.

Garcia is so eager to leave the Blue Jays that the second baseman showed up at the meetings Tuesday to dispel rumors he has a damaged throwing arm. He hit .281 last season.

Also at the meetings was Montreal outfielder Tim Lincecum, who has rejected the Expos' contract offer but can reach terms by as late as Jan. 8 without becoming a free agent. After that, the Expos can't re-sign him until May 1.

In other news Tuesday: — The 26 major-league teams unanimously approved the sale of the Cleveland Indians to brothers Richard E. and David H. Jacobs for $83 million and the transfer of the New York Mets' ownership to Nelson Doubleday and Fred Wilpon.

The Jacobs brothers are partners in a major shopping mall ownership-management company.

— The NL approved the purchase of Taft Broadcasting's interests in the Philadelphia Phillies by the existing general partnership headed by team President Bill Giles.

— The Sporting News named Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens, the American League Cy Young Award winner, as its major league player of the year and Mets General Manager Frank Cashen as its executive of the year.

Ray Knight was a happy man with the Mets in the '86 World Series, hitting a homer in the seventh inning of the seventh game. Now, Knight and the Mets have had a parting of the ways and both sides are at fault.

Mets, Knight both to blame

By Hal Bock
The Associated Press

The difference was $200,000, petty cash in today's baseball economy. But for $200,000, the New York Mets let World Series MVP Ray Knight walk away.

Like many divorces, the blame here can be shared by both parties. After earning $645,000 last year ($600,000 in salary, $45,000 in bonuses), Knight said he was looking for a $1.5 million contract. That would be a suitable reward, he thought, for his comeback season. The Mets said $650,000.

So both sides approached this contract negotiation a bit unrealistically. Next, Knight said $1 million and the fiduciaries at Shea Stadium said $800,000 and no more.

The irony is that both sides were probably a little off base. Knight, at 34, is probably looking at the down side of the baseball hill and there aren't many $1 million contracts located in that territory. He may not find many teams rushing up to sign him at his fancy figure.

He was worth more, though, to the Mets than he will be to anyone else. He could have served as a season-long symbol of their championship season, the centerpiece of that improbable sixth-game comeback in the World Series and the author of the go-ahead home run in Game 7.

There is a certain seriousness about all of this.

In 1969, the last time they won the World Series, the Mets' first postseason move was to release third baseman Ed Charles, an aging but integral part of that team.

The replacement would be Joe Foy, acquired from Kansas City for outfielder Amos Otis and minor-league pitcher Bob Johnson. Otis would play 14 years for the Royals. Foy would last 99 games in New York. And the Mets' search for a third baseman would continue.

The solution for Knight would have been arbitration. Let him submit his $1 million figure. Let the Mets submit their $800,000. And let a third party decide who was right. But the club rejected that solution, a remedy that would have cost at most $200,000 more than they had prepared to spend.

Do you know what $200,000 amounts to for a team that drew 2,762,417 fans? For a team sold for $80 million? For a team that gets a piece of the action every time one of its $18.95 season highlight videos — in which Knight is a featured player — is sold?

Pin money. That's what. Say the Mets average $4,000 per game at an average price of $6. That's $240,000. That's all it would have taken to keep the third baseman. One night's receipts.

They could have given Knight July 3, to commemorate the game he won on that date last year with a 10th-inning home run against Houston. Or April 21, for the game-tying eighth-inning home run he hit to bring his club back against Pittsburgh. Or Aug. 7 or Aug. 26 — both four-hit days for him in the Mets' championship season. Or any of a number of other games in which he played a key role.

Instead the Mets said no deal, deciding that they could spend the money more wisely elsewhere. Armed with the added bankroll, they went out and drafted minor-league pitcher Charlie Corbell from the pitching-poor San Francisco Giants for $50,000. And now they still have another $750,000 left over.

Who do you think Shea's nearly 2.8 million fans would rather see? Charlie Corbell or Ray Knight?

So the sixth-game World Series tableau will be frozen in memory. There is Mookie Wilson's ground ball skittering through Bill Buckner's legs. And there is Ray Knight racing home with the winning run, climaxing the most unlikely comeback in Series history.

As he scored, Knight held his head with both hands, looking like a man in shock, like a man who had just been told that the World Series MVP would be cut loose over a mere $200,000.

ENTERTAIN in Style

'Tis the season to pull out all the stops and time to share the joys of the holidays' many pleasures. All too often these celebrations hold memories of too many hours spent in the kitchen.

Make a year-end resolution to break away from tradition! Create a worry-free entertainment plan. Invite friends and neighbors to an afternoon open house, a relaxing setting in which to enjoy one's company while making entertaining a lot easier. Have all the food prepared ahead and suitable for buffet presentation. Dress the table with ferns and boughs or ivy.

Serve a selection of eye-catching, non-alcoholic beverages. These two drink ideas can add to the fun and lift everyone's spirits in a whole new way. Sunshine Punch is a sweetened blend of citrus and vegetable juices, which can be made ahead and is a refreshing change of pace. For a lift of a different sort, try Rosy Glow Sparkler. The seltzer makes it effervescent; nutritious "V8" Vegetable Juice adds flavor while the apricot nectar smooths it all out.

Bright nuggets of pistachios stud ground sausage and chicken in the California Pistachio Appetizers. The roll can be made a day ahead and kept chilled in the refrigerator. Arrange in a pinwheel configuration accompanied by a honey-sweetened mustard. And what's a party without a cheeseball? California Pistachio Party Cheeseballs, a clever combination of simple ingredients is inexpensive, easy and fun to eat.

Wrapped and stuffed foods such as calzone, wonton and dumplings have been making the pages of food publications from Tulsa to San Francisco. You may well start a trend of your own with the recipe for California Pistachio Turnovers. If you wish, make them the night before and bake them as the first guests arrive. These hearty tidbits conceal a double dose of pistachios — in the filling and pressed into the dough. They are equally good hot out-of-the-oven or warm.

Time to stand back, feel the warmth of the hearth, experience the rewards of your labor and congratulate yourself on a job well done.

California Pistachio Appetizers

- 8 ounces ground pork sausage
- 4 ounces ground chicken or turkey
- 1 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese, divided
- 1/4 cup bread crumbs
- 1 egg, beaten
- 2 tablespoons milk
- 1 teaspoon minced fresh garlic
- 1/2 teaspoon each oregano and thyme, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/2 cup chopped shelled natural California pistachios
- 1/2 cup sliced black olives

Combine sausage, chicken, 1/2 cup cheese, bread crumbs, egg, milk, garlic, oregano, thyme, salt and pepper; mix thoroughly. Place meat mixture on a greased 14 x 8-inch sheet of aluminum foil. Pat pork mixture into a 12 x 6 x 1/2-inch rectangle. Combine remaining cheese, pistachios and olives; spoon along center of meat. Roll tightly, jelly-roll fashion, from long edge; pinch seam ends together to seal. Remove foil and place roll on greased baking sheet. Bake at 350° F. 25 minutes or until meat is cooked and feels firm when pressed. Remove and chill at least 2 hours. Cut roll into 3/8-inch slices. Makes about 36 pieces.

California Pistachio Party Cheeseballs

- 1-1/2 cups shredded Swiss cheese
- 6 ounces minced cooked ham
- 1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese, softened
- 1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley
- 1 tablespoon brandy (optional)
- 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
- 3/4 cup finely chopped shelled natural California pistachios

Combine all ingredients except pistachios; mix well. Form into 1-inch balls. Chill 30 minutes. Just before serving, roll each ball in pistachios. Makes about 24 balls.

California Pistachio Turnovers

- 8 ounces ground beef
- 1/2 cup chopped mushrooms
- 1/3 cup chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon dill weed
- 1/4 teaspoon each salt and black pepper
- 1/4 cup coarsely chopped shelled natural California pistachios
- 3 tablespoons dairy sour cream
- Pastry for two crust (9-inch) pie
- 1/2 cup finely ground shelled natural California pistachios, divided

Lightly brown ground beef; pour off all but one teaspoon drippings. Add mushrooms, onion, parsley, dill weed, salt and pepper; cook over low heat about 3 to 4 minutes or until onion softens. Remove from heat; stir in coarsely chopped pistachios and sour cream. Sprinkle pastry board or lightly floured surface with 2 tablespoons finely ground pistachios. Lay one sheet of pastry over pistachios; sprinkle 2 tablespoons finely ground pistachios over top. Lightly roll rolling pin over surface to make pistachios adhere to dough. Cut out 12 (3-inch) rounds. Repeat with second crust. Place 2 teaspoons meat filling on one side of each round. Fold over dough and seal edge with fork. Place on ungreased baking sheet and bake at 375° F. 15 to 18 minutes or until golden. Serve warm. Makes about 24 turnovers.

Holiday California Pistachio Spread

(not shown)

- 2/3 cup each mayonnaise and grated Parmesan cheese
- 1/2 cup chopped shelled natural California pistachios
- 2 tablespoons each chopped red pimiento and green chiles
- Chopped shelled natural California pistachios for garnish

Combine mayonnaise, cheese, 1/2 cup chopped pistachios, pimiento and chiles. Bake in an oven-proof 1/2-quart dish at 350° F. 25 minutes or until golden and bubbly; sprinkle 1 to 2 tablespoons chopped pistachios over spread during last 10 minutes of baking. Serve hot. Makes 1-1/4 cups.

Serving Tip: Serve Holiday Pistachio Spread with assorted crackers, toasted bread slices or toasted pita bread quarters.

Rosy Glow Sparkler

- 4 cups Vegetable Juice, chilled
- 2 cups chilled apricot nectar
- 3 tablespoons lime juice
- 2 cups chilled seltzer water
- Sliced lime

In pitcher, combine "V8", apricot nectar and lime juice; mix well. Stir in seltzer water. Serve over ice cubes in 12-ounce glasses. Garnish each glass with slice of lime. Makes 7 cups or 8 servings. Recipe may be halved.

Sunshine Punch

(not shown)

- 4-1/2 cups Vegetable Juice, chilled
- 1-1/2 cups orange juice
- 1/3 cup each lemon and lime juice
- 3 tablespoons honey

In pitcher, combine all ingredients; mix well. Serve over ice cubes in 12-ounce glasses. Makes about 7 cups or 8 servings.

This couple met under some rather unusual circumstances. They found each other in the Yellow Pages, under "D" for "Dancing Lessons." Back when dancing schools became a part of life in Connecticut, naturally they became a part of The Original Yellow Pages' from Southern New England Telephone. In fact, for more than 100 years, whenever something new has appeared in the Connecticut community, it's appeared in The Original Yellow Pages. You see, when you've been around as long as we have, people not only depend on you for just about every conceivable product and service. But sometimes even for husbands and wives. This is last chance for tax choice on end-of-year sales

Sylvia Porter

This is the last year you get a tax choice when you sell publicly traded securities (stocks and bonds) during the final five trading days of the year. In 1986, if the sale takes place on or after Dec. 24, you can treat the transaction as an installment sale and pay tax in 1987. Or you can elect out of installment tax treatment and pay tax in 1986.

Prentice-Hall Information Service. I offer you this tax advice. The tax flexibility you have by selling listed stocks or bonds during the final five trading days is especially important in 1986. You can benefit from having net short-term gain taxed at lower rates in 1987 with the installment sale treatment. Or you can have net long-term gain taxed at the lower 1986 rates by electing out of installment sale treatment.

The new law takes away the choice of when to pay tax on sales of publicly traded property in the final five trading days. Starting in 1987, you must pay tax in the year you receive payment for the stock.

Wednesday, Dec. 31, is the last trading day in 1986 — and is a key date. An investor can wait until the final trading day of 1986 to sell stock for a 1986 loss, even though the stock isn't actually delivered and payment isn't received until 1987. Whether stock is sold at a profit or a loss, it is the sale date — not the settlement date — that counts for purposes of the long-term holding period. For example, say stock was purchased on June 27, 1986, and sold Dec. 23.

The regular way on Dec. 26, 1986 or 1987, the profit will be short-term gain since the stock was not owned for more than six months on the sale date of Dec. 26, 1986. But suppose the stock was purchased June 23, 1986, and sold on Dec. 24, 1986. Then the profit would be long-term capital gain, whether the taxpayer chooses to report it in 1986 or 1987. The critical date for options sold at a loss is the same as it is for stocks sold at a loss. Dec. 31 is the last trading day.

Keogh plan form needs revision

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

QUESTION: I opened a Keogh self-employed retirement plan in 1982. At that time, the annual contribution to a defined contribution plan such as I have was limited to $15,000 or 15 percent of self-employed income. Now that you can put in 20 percent and up to 25 percent, can I do this automatically or do I have to sign new agreement forms?

ANSWER: By this time, the trustee of your Keogh plan should have drawn up a new or revised prototype plan, submitted it to the Internal Revenue Service for approval and sent a copy to you. Then you fill in the necessary parts of the plan form, sign it and send it back. Are you sure you haven't received a new or revised plan form? Check your files. If you can't locate the papers, contact the Keogh plan trustee.

Even if you don't have the papers — or on the off chance you Keogh plan trustee has been awful about getting the work done — you should be able to make larger

July, I'll be allowed to file a Form 5500R for 1986. Under the rules, I must file a Form 5500C every third year. I dread the thought of filing Form 5500R for 1987. Is there any hope the rules on this will be changed?

ANSWER: Good news! Those rules already have been changed. Those terrible Form 5500Cs no longer have to be filed for one person Keogh plans. You can file the much simpler Form 5500R each and every year.

QUESTION: My individual retirement account is at a brokerage firm. One of the stocks in my IRA is way down in price. I would like to sell it and take a loss for tax purposes. My broker says I can't take any loss on my income tax unless a stock that is in my IRA. Can I?

ANSWER: No. Your broker is correct. When you have a "self-directed" IRA or Keogh plan at a brokerage firm, you can buy and sell stocks and other securities for that account. You don't pay income tax on any profit you realize from selling stocks in an IRA or Keogh at higher prices than you paid. Nor do you get any tax loss for selling stocks in an IRA or Keogh at lower prices than you paid.

QUESTION: We have our IRA at a brokerage firm. We are not pleased with our broker, but we really do not want to change our IRA investments. What is the most tactful way to change brokers?

ANSWER: That depends on how big a change you have in mind. If you want your IRA to stay at that brokerage firm, but you want some other broker to handle your account, talk to the manager of the brokerage office. Ask the manager to assign a different broker. Don't be shy. That happens all the time.

If you want to move your IRA to a different brokerage firm, pick your new firm and talk to the manager there. You'll get papers to sign and the account will be shifted — with all your investments intact. But brace yourself for possible headaches. There's a never-ending string of complaints about slow transfer of accounts — especially IRA and Keogh plans — from one brokerage to another.

Xerox moves execs in reorganization bid

Analysts hail UTC streamlining move

STAMFORD (AP) — Four top executives of the Xerox Corp. have been assigned to new posts in an organizational rearrangement designed to strengthen delivery of products to customers, the company announced.

UTC said $35 million of the fourth-quarter charge would represent pre-tax losses expected to result from the sale, reduction in size or termination of several manufacturing units and operations. The company, which has 300 plants worldwide, would not say how many business units would be affected.

As of Jan. 1, a new unit called the Business Products and Systems Group will be responsible for most of Xerox's product planning, development and manufacturing previously done by the Reprographics Business Group and the Xerox Systems Group.

"We're in the process of negotiating the sale of some small units and defining the downsizing or termination of other units in our operation," UTC spokesman Tom Drohan said.

A new Special Markets Group will be developed to manufacture and market entry-level and specialized products such as electronic typewriters, engineering copiers and graphics equipment, electrostatic plotters and printers and impact, electronic and ink jet printers, and market supplies and software for Xerox products.

"The remaining $27 million represents the estimated cost of companywide reductions in the workforce, primarily salaried workers, the company said. UTC has announced plans to cut

The Special Markets products will be distributed mainly through channels other than the Xerox direct-sales force, including dealers, distributors, value-added resellers, private-label sellers, and telemarketers, the company said in a statement Tuesday.

The remaining $27 million represents the estimated cost of companywide reductions in the workforce, primarily salaried workers, the company said. UTC has announced plans to cut

Another new marketing unit, the Custom Systems Division, will develop and produce customized systems for large customers such

New job wages renew debate over changing economy

By Matt Yancy
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than one-fifth of the 8.7 million new full-time jobs created by the U.S. economy between 1979 and 1984 were at the federal minimum wage of $3.25 per hour or less, a study commissioned by Congress says.

same period, the study said. The 36-page report, released Tuesday by Democratic leaders of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, is sure to renew debate on whether the transition from a goods to a services economy is improving or reducing U.S. living standards.

The authors — Barry Bluestone and Bennett Harrison, political economists at the University of Massachusetts-Boston and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, respectively — argue that a proliferation of low-wage and part-time jobs points to growing income inequality.

They cite Census Bureau figures showing that the share of low-income earners among full-time workers rose from 4.1 percent to 6 percent during the five years. The middle and high strata, when part-time workers are combined with full-time job holders, fell from 52.1 percent to 52.7 percent and from 16.5 percent to 14.9 percent, respectively, the report said.

"If this pattern of development continues, the standard of living of a growing proportion of the American workforce will be significantly jeopardized," Bluestone and Harrison concluded.

Meanwhile, a group of business leaders, citing previous work by Bluestone and Harrison, released their own 84-page aimed at "dispelling this notion of a downward spiral" and that poor-paying service jobs are replacing high-wage manufacturing employment.

"Too much of the current debate over structural change is focused on the fear of change and not enough on the employment opportunities being created by the 40-year-old private Committee for Economic Development.

The committee's study said 600,000 of the manufacturing job losses between 1973 and 1985 were in low-wage industries, such as textiles and shoes, while slightly more than half of the jobs added during the same period were in higher-paying professional and managerial occupations.

Of the nearly 16 million new jobs expected between 1984 and 1995, the study said 5.1 million of them will be in managerial, professional and technical occupations increasingly occupied by workers with college or post-secondary training.

"The structural shift in occupations suggests that the distinction between manufacturing and services is becoming less important than when people actually do and whether they have the education and skills to help them move up the earnings ladder," it said.

But to ease the transition, several adjustment policies are needed to help those displaced workers "undergoing the often painful and costly move to a new job," the study said.

BayBanks sues ATM network

BOSTON (AP) — BayBanks Inc. has filed an antitrust suit against the operators of the Yankee 24 automated bank teller network and five New England regional banks, alleging they are trying to monopolize the automated teller market in Massachusetts.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Boston Tuesday, names Wallingford-based Connecticut Switch Inc., which operates the network, as well as four Boston banks, Bank of Boston, Bank of New England, Shawmut Bank, State Street Bank & Trust Co. and Fleet National Bank of Providence, R.I.

BayBanks said the suit asserts that Connecticut Switch and the five banks conspired to restrain trade, to monopolize the market for automated teller services in Massachusetts and to employ unfair methods of competition.

BayBanks' Vice Chairman William T. Sandella Jr. said the rules developed by Yankee 24 and the five regional banks would intimidate smaller banks from joining other networks. BayBanks operates one of the larger networks in Massachusetts, X-Press 24, which would not be tied into Yankee 24.

Yankee 24 was begun in 1984 by Connecticut's largest banks. It allows bank customers to use automated teller machines of different banks to withdraw cash. The network is run as a not-for-profit business and has about 750 machines in the state in its system. The five regional banks would nearly double that number New England-wide.

Hooker buys realty firm

STAMFORD (AP) — Hooker Corp. Ltd., an Australian-based real-estate company, has acquired Merrill Lynch Commercial Real Estate, officials of the two companies announced Wednesday.

Terms of the acquisition were not disclosed. The new company, L.J. Hooker International, is based in Stamford, with offices in Miami, Orlando and Tampa, Fla.; Washington, New York City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Beverly Hills and San Diego, Calif.; Tucson and Phoenix, Ariz.; Dallas and Atlanta.

The acquisition was announced by George Herscu, Hooker Corp. executive chairman, and Edward F. Kincaid, president and chief executive officer of L.J. Hooker International.

"L.J. Hooker International is a natural complement to our business," said Herscu. "We have acquired a 10-year-old company with $2.4 billion in volume in 1985, and more than 250 specialists in a range of corporate and investment real-estate disciplines."

Herscu said Hooker Corp. which is based in Sydney, is Australia's largest publicly owned real-estate corporation. Chartered in 1958, the company is involved in land development, construction and property management in Australia and internationally.

Hooker Corp. also has housing and commercial development operations in the U.S. through a U.S. subsidiary, Hooker-Barnes.

Kincaid served as president of Merrill Lynch Commercial Real Estate since that company's formation in 1976.

Clubs teach of diversity

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

In Manchester's school system, educators are doing whatever they can to lessen racial tensions — and they say their efforts seem to be paying off.

At the beginning of the year, he said, the club set out to make the students feel more at home. A pizza party was held in September at which the exchange students were asked to talk about their countries using slides or whatever visual aids they needed.

And it doesn't stop there. In the illing club there are Laotians, Hispanics, blacks, whites, Asian Americans and Indians. The mix makes for healthy discussions during club meetings, organizers said.

Coventry celebrates

City Council gunfire caused by sewer

MOUNT PLEASANT Iowa (AP) — A 69-year-old man who had complained about a backed-up sewer walked into a City Council meeting and opened fire, killing the mayor and seriously wounding two council members, witnesses and officials said.

Mayor Edward King, who was shot in the head at point-blank range, died Wednesday night at University Hospitals in Iowa City, about 60 miles from this southeastern Iowa city of 7,300 residents, said hospital spokesman Dean Borg.

Davis stood with arms folded during the 10-minute hearing and twice answered "Yes, sir," when asked if he understood the charges against him. He did not enter a plea and McCoid scheduled another hearing for Dec. 19.

McCoid set bond at $100,000 on each of the attempted murder charges and $500,000 on the murder charge. Davis laughed when McCoid asked him if he could pay the cash bond.

Casey testimony stuns panel

WILLIAM CASEY learned late

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William Casey told a House committee that a New York businessman, not his own intelligence operation, tipped him in October to a diversion of profits from Iranian arms sales, says a published report.

Casey, who testified in private before the House Intelligence Committee for less than 30 minutes today, told the House Foreign Affairs Committee Wednesday he received the tip from businessman Roy M. Furmark on Oct. 7. The Washington Post reported in today's editions, citing congressional sources. That was about six weeks before Attorney General Edwin Meese III says he turned up the scheme in late November.

closed session were said to be stunned when Casey asserted that his conversation with Furmark was the first hint he had that funds from the sale of U.S. arms to Iran might have been diverted to Central America.

HARTFORD — Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill says a U.S. Supreme Court ruling affirming the right of political parties to open their primaries to unaffiliated voters could damage the two-party system because there would be little incentive to join a party.

The high court struck down a Connecticut law requiring that voters be members of a political party to vote in that party's primaries. The court said the law violated the right to free association guaranteed by the constitution.

O'Neill said he would file a bill in the 1987 legislative session that would allow the state's 556,000 unaffiliated voters to vote in all primaries, if a party wanted its primaries open.

side, said he personally opposed open primaries but said he wanted to hear the opinions of all Connecticut Democrats.

O'Neill said he had asked the new Democratic state chairman, John F. Droney Jr., to survey Connecticut Democrats to see if they wanted open primaries. The governor said he would avoid making a recommendation either way.

Registrar warns of vote confusion

The Supreme Court decision giving the Republican Party the right to let unaffiliated voters take part in any primary election the party wants to open to them may cause confusion if voting machines break down, according to the Manchester's Democratic registrar of voters.

Under the current Republican rules, unaffiliated voters would be permitted to participate in a primary for the U.S. Senate post but not in a primary for the others.
