Shelter proposal a first

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

Manchester will soon become home to a first-of-its-kind residence for teenage girls if proponents can turn six years of dreaming and planning into reality.

Shelter For Women Inc., the non-profit organization that operates the Hartford-based Gray Lodge treatment facility, hopes to open the home for girls who need minimal social support in a family environment by early summer. Executive Director Rose Senatore said today.

The home would provide a place for girls who are almost ready to live independently but still lack some skills needed for self-sufficiency, Senatore said.

She said the state does not have any facilities of this kind, putting pressure on younger teenagers who have stayed in group homes or foster homes to live on their own too quickly. Many do not have families to go home to, Senatore said.

"These are adolescents who don't have any family support," Senatore said. "We are the support group. It will be very family-oriented."

UNDER THE PLAN, a house on Hartford Road would become the residence of eight girls between 16 and 18 years old, all of whom would attend Manchester schools. The teenagers would be supervised by one director and a number of child-care workers who would teach them skills such as cooking, budgeting and interviewing for jobs.

The state Department of Child and Youth Services, which issues licenses for such facilities, will set the rates and pay a daily rate for each child, Senatore said. She said it would cost about $50 a day for each child at the home.

Shelter For Women plans an operating budget of $185,000 for the first year, she said.

Most of that would come from the state, but the organization is going out into the community for contributions to cover the remainder. Grants from private groups have been exhausted for now, Senatore said.

EACH TEENAGER would work a part-time job in town while attending school and most would stay until 18, Senatore said. Some exceptions could be made for those needing further service.

Shelter For Women Inc. has already bought a house at 151 Hartford Road for $290,000, which Senatore said came from private donations. Organizers are trying to raise at least $30,000 more to bring the house up to fire, health and safety standards.

Senatore said her group has been planning the operation for nearly six years and picked Manchester because the town has shown some interest in supporting other homes of its nature.

Already in the works is a plan to open a group home for troubled teenagers on North Street. That plan, which has received financial support from the town, is being developed by the Transitional Living Center Foundation Inc.

"We chose Manchester because of the community support I have continuously read about," Senatore said. "I feel Manchester is a very warm and caring community."

SHE SAID MANCHESTER offers a variety of educational opportunities, including public, technical and parochial schools and a community college.

Hanna Marcus, the town's director of human services, said Manchester has followed a national trend in providing help for teenagers. She said she was unaware that the Shelter For Women plan was the first of its kind in the state, but praised the program because it would help 16- to 18-year-olds, the toughest age group to find help for.

"This group home will certainly fill a gap in this area," said Marcus. "The more we can teach them these skills before releasing them, the better."

Old Herald comes down

Oscar Gibbs, an employee of Dunn Bros. Inc. of South Windsor, burns through a truss on the Bissell Street building that once housed the offices and plant of the Manchester Herald. Demolition of the 64-year-old building continued today. It was built in 1922 by the Knights of Columbus and it was bought by the Herald in 1928. It has been vacant since 1972.

Nicaragua charges American had maps of military targets

By Filadelfo Aleman
The Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The government said it arrested an American who had maps of military targets stuffed in a sock and claimed to belong to a private espionage unit. Reports in the United States said he was the brother of a congressman.

It was the second arrest in Nicaragua in less than three months of an American alleged to be working against the leftist Sandinista government.

Officials on Sunday identified the arrested man as Sam Nesley Hall, 49, a native of Ohio. They said he was under investigation but was not charged.

They said his case would be treated like that of U.S. mercenary Eugene Hasenfus, who was convicted last month of terrorism, violating public order and criminal association and sentenced to 30 years in prison. Hasenfus was captured Oct. 5 after Nicaraguan troops shot down a plane carrying arms to Nicaraguan rebels.

Officials said Hall was arrested at 10 a.m. Friday at the Punta Huete air force base 13 miles northeast of Managua.

"He said he was working for an organization that ... specialized in intelligence and espionage on military objectives ... and that he was working for the U.S. government interests," Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Angela Saballos said Sunday.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Al Laun said the embassy sought permission to see the man "so that we can know if an American citizen is really involved."

"We have no way of identifying him since they have not given us access to him. Neither do we know where he is," Laun said.

Reports in the United States said the man under arrest was the brother of U.S. Rep. Tony P. Hall, D-Ohio. In an interview with The Associated Press in the United States last year, the congressman's brother said he taught commando tactics to Miskito Indians fighting the Nicaraguan government.

In Washington, the congressman said in a statement: "I am surprised and concerned over press reports about my brother, Sam. I have received no confirmation from the State Department. I do not share the same views on U.S. policy in Central America as my brother does, but I love him and pray for his safety."

Sen. Patric Leahy, D-Vt., vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said, "I don't think that this is the last American we're going to see captured in Nicaragua."

"We've been conducting the Central American policy with a wink and a shrug from our government, sending money down to the soldiers of fortune," he said, speaking on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Ms. Saballos said Hall probably would be brought before journalists this week.

Nicaraguan officials said Hall first identified himself as a writer, then as an adviser to the Miskito Indians. The Interior Ministry said Hall eventually told officials he worked for a group called the Phoenix Battalion.

The Nicaraguan Embassy in Washington issued a statement describing the battalion as a unit "which specializes in works of intelligence and espionage on objectives of military interest of different places in the world."

It said Hall "pointed out that it is a private organization, but that it works in terms of the interest of the U.S. government."

White House wants Regan to go public

By W. Dale Nelson
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's chief of staff, Donald T. Regan, is willing to testify before Congress in open hearings on what he knew about the secret sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to Contra rebels in Nicaragua, the White House said today.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes also gave new emphasis to the administration's recommendation that former White House aides tell Congress what they knew. Several officials, including former national security adviser John Poindexter and his fired aide, Oliver North, have refused to answer any questions, invoking the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

"We do reiterate, underscore and publicly proclaim that we would like for them to testify; we would like for them to work out a means to testify; we would like for them to tell the entire story; we would like for them to tell it in open session, and we would like for them to do it as quickly as possible," Speakes said.

Regan has said he supported the sale of arms to Iran but did not know profits were being diverted to the Contras. It had been uncertain whether Regan would be willing to testify before Congress or whether the White House would invoke executive privilege and refuse to let him appear.

"Don Regan is willing to testify if the committee thinks he can add anything to their investigation," Speakes said.

"He'd be glad to do so; he'd be glad to do so in open session," Speakes said.

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said his committee expects to call Regan and Attorney General Edwin Meese III to testify at closed-door hearings this week.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas quoted Regan as saying to him Saturday evening: "I'll tell you one thing, I'm not leaving the White House."

Some lawmakers in both parties have suggested Regan step down or be dismissed, but Dole said he believes the chief of staff "has done a pretty good job."

As for whether the president, himself, would be willing to testify, Speakes said he did not anticipate a request from any committee for Regan's testimony. "Generally they don't do that," Speakes said.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., speaking on the "CBS Morning News" today, said the president would be welcome to testify before a congressional committee.

In another development, Vice President George Bush was calling his top national security aide to account for all contacts with a former CIA employee who has been described as a coordinator of supply flights for Nicaraguan rebels.

The aide, Donald P. Gregg, disclosed over the weekend that he arranged a meeting in August between Felix Rodriguez, a former associate of his at the CIA, and U.S. officials after Rodriguez expressed concern that supplies to the Contra rebels were moving too slowly.

The disclosure was the first time Bush's staff had been linked with Rodriguez in connection with the private supply flights, which came during a congressional ban on U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Bush's press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater, said Sunday that Gregg first told the vice president about the August meeting last week.

"Gregg apparently had taken it upon himself to put Felix in touch with various people," Fitzwater said. "He had not previously told the vice president. ... I think the vice president feels that he should have been told."

"At this point there is no indication of wrongdoing, but we sure want to find out all the facts," Fitzwater said.

He said the report was to be on the vice president's desk today and, after review, to the appropriate congressional committees and to a special counsel expected to be appointed soon to look into Iranian arms sales and profits from them being diverted to the Contras.

Gregg declined comment beyond saying, "I suppose everybody could think of additional questions, but there is nothing more to add."

Meanwhile, The Washington Post reported in today's editions that the CIA has secretly given Iraq detailed information to assist Iraqi bombing raids on Iran's oil terminals and power plants in the war between the two countries.

The Post quoted unidentified sources as saying the United States has supplied the intelligence, including data from U.S. satellite reconnaissance photography, to Iraq for nearly two years. During the same period, the Reagan administration was covertly selling arms to Iran.

The Post also quoted sources as saying CIA Director William Casey met in October and again in November with senior Iraqi officials to make sure an improved communications link was functioning and to encourage more attacks on Iranian installations.

In another phase of the investigation of the Iranian arms sales, Lawrence E. Walsh, a former federal judge and diplomat from Oklahoma City, said he had no official word of his selection as independent counsel. National Public Radio and the Los Angeles Times reported his selection over the weekend.

In a related development, there were reports that fired White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver North helped a conservative group's advertising campaign gain support for Reagan's Nicaragua policy and target members of Congress on the Contra aid issue.

Across the nation

Fog reduced visibility today in the Plains and Mississippi Valley scattered showers in the rest of the nation's northern tier of states, but most of the country enjoyed tranquil weather.
A storm system over Washington produced scattered rain and snow. There were scattered flurries across northern portions of the Great Lakes and New England. Travelers advisories for locally dense fog were posted in central and north-central Kansas and parts of west Texas. Dense fog was also reported across western Montana, Iowa and Oklahoma.
A weak storm system over south Texas brought clouds and occasional rain.

Today's forecast called for rain for east Texas across the lower Mississippi Valley and the Tennessee Valley into Georgia and South Carolina. Heavy showers scattered along the northern Pacific Coast. Light rain or snow flurries should dot portions of the northern Intermountain region.
Highs across most of the nation will be in the 40s or 50s. Highs will be in the 30s across much of the northern tier and the central Rockies and in the 20s from northern Minnesota into upper Michigan and across northern New England. Highs will be in the 60s from Southern California to the southern half of Texas, along the central Gulf Coast, and across Northern Florida and southern Georgia, with readings in the 70s and low 80s over the Florida Peninsula.
Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 10 degrees at Eau Claire, Wis., and Craig, Colo., to 77 degrees at Homestead, Fla.

Towering Over All Others

Gustave Eiffel was born on this day in 1832. Eiffel owes his world fame to a family feud. He had planned to work at his uncle's vinegar distillery until an argument led him to seek other employment—ultimately, as a builder in metal. The tower that bears his name was actually based on a design by his chief of research and some others. Not everyone liked the Eiffel Tower at first. Some called it "useless and monstrous." Others labeled it a "Tower of Babel."

DO YOU KNOW — In what city is the Eiffel Tower located?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Soils in tropical rain forests are poor in nutrients.

Teacher contract welcomed

Several town directors said today they're generally pleased with the contract negotiated last week between the Board of Education and the union that represents most Manchester teachers.
"But one director, Republican Geoffrey Naab, said teachers got 'a heck of a raise' and should have agreed to work a longer year before the third year of the agreement, which was drafted so the town could get funding allocated under the Education Enhancement Act passed by the General Assembly."
Naab said he has not yet decided whether he will vote to accept the contract, which was approved Thursday by the 500-member Manchester Education Association.
Upon acceptance by the Board of Directors, the contract would replace a two-year agreement that took effect July 1.

Mayor Barbara Weinberg said this morning her main objection to the process was that in order to obtain the Education Enhancement Act money, the General Assembly required that towns reopen contract talks to boost teacher salaries. Weinberg said this created the potential for difficulties, especially since the current contract "had in fact been negotiated."
She said the board may consider the agreement next month.

Democratic Director Peter DiBona, who taught social studies at Manchester High School between 1969 and 1973, said he supports the agreement because both the teachers and the administration are happy with it.
Democratic Director James "Dutch" Fogarty also said he has no problem with the proposed contract and will likely vote for it if the Board of Education approves it as expected.

The other directors could not be reached for comment today.
The contract would mean salary increases of just under 34 percent in the three-year period for about 65 percent of the teachers in the system, who are now at their maximum step, according to Wilson Deakin, assistant superintendent of schools. For others, who will move up a step with each succeeding year, the increases from 1985-86 to 1988-89 will amount to 39.3 percent when the step increments are considered, Deakin said.

The present contract for 1986-87 calls for a 12 percent increase over 1985-86. Under the revision 2.5 percent in state salary enhancement money would be added for a total increase of 14.5 percent.

Victim's brother hits request

Dennis Charest says Pagano shouldn't practice

By George Lovng Herald Reporter
Although more than two-and-a-half years have passed, Dennis Charest's feelings about the involvement of Manchester attorney Anthony Pagano in his brother's death have not changed.
"It still hurts and I do miss him," Charest said this morning of his brother, whose name was David.
Pagano was suspended from practicing law indefinitely in the fall of 1985 after he was convicted on the felony charge of misconduct with a motor vehicle in connection with the crash that took David Charest's life.
Early next month, judicial officials will hold a hearing on Pagano's request to practice law again. Dennis Charest said today he will attend the Jan. 8 hearing and testify against the request.

A courageous couple needs help

Editor's note: This is the third in a series of vignettes provided by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches, which is seeking to provide needy people with Christmas gifts, food and clothing.
In spite of increasing loss of muscular control he fought to finish his college degree and succeeded. Unfortunately, the disease progressed so rapidly that he could not find work and finds himself confined to a wheelchair. Already too weak for any kind of physical activity, he spends his days reading, watching TV and listening to tapes of his hobby was Indian culture. His wife sits beside him, crocheting and sewing.
Family and physicians have urged her to put him in a convalescent home and go on with her life, but she badly wants him to have as much and as normal a life as possible. She doesn't mind the work. They have no phone — it was long since disconnected in the financial crisis of soaring medical costs.
His visiting nurse tells us the phone is "more than essential." If he has a severe breathing spell she needs to be able to call 911 immediately. MACC would like to install a phone and provide a year's coverage as a Christmas gift to a courageous couple.

Some in district cool to fire plan

By George Lovng Herald Reporter

A date will probably be set this week for the start of preliminary negotiations between the town and the Eighth Utilities District over a proposal to share the Buckland firehouse and other matters, Mayor Barbara Weinberg said this morning.
Weinberg, one of the three town negotiators who will meet with district counterparts to establish ground rules for future talks, said no response has been received from the utility authority about the proposal to add on to the firehouse that was advanced last week by Democratic members of the Board of Directors.
The addition — probably in the form of another story on the station — would be paid for by the town and would provide living quarters for Eighth District firefighters, according to the proposal. The Toland Turnpike station, owned by the town, is located in an area where district volunteers have the right to provide fire protection.

Although Eighth District President Walter Joyner initially called the Democrats' offer "quite generous," other district officials have suggested they would like to keep other options under consideration.
Eighth District Director Thomas Landers said today that when the district directors meet tonight, he will propose that the district go ahead with a study of the fire protection needs of all of Manchester.

Landers has said the study should focus on where to build a second firehouse for the Eighth District, and the fire-protection needs south of Interstate 384.
Landers said today he expects the Eighth District directors to discuss parameters for the talks with the town at tonight's meeting, which is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the Eighth District's Main Street firehouse. The discussions follow rejection of a proposal in the Nov. 4 election that would have made it easier for the town to force the district — which provides sewer service as well as fire protection in most of northern Manchester — into consolidation.

Another topic likely to come up tonight is whether the Eighth District should seek bids for construction of a new sewer line to handle planned development in Buckland.
The Eighth District has delayed moving forward on the $1.4 million project because it is appealing a state Department of Environmental Protection requirement that the sewage from Buckland be sent into the town's lines. That would give the town control of lucrative hookup fees for the sewer.
Last week, the DEP and the town agreed to allow the Eighth District to build the sewer line and resolve the dispute later.

Store, housing plans will be aired tonight

The J.C. Penney Co. will seek permission tonight from the Planning and Zoning Commission to open a 100,000-square-foot retail store inside its giant catalog warehouse on Tolland Turnpike.
If the proposal is approved, J.C. Penney plans to open the store in September 1987, company officials have said. The outlet would sell overstocked and discontinued merchandise.
Tonight's public hearing on the request will begin at 7 in the Lincoln Center hearing room.
According to site plans, the company wants to add 500 parking spaces to one side of the building to accommodate the anticipated traffic from the store. The company would not add on to the building.
J.C. Penney needs a special exception from the PZC to open the store because it plans to do work on more than 40 parking spaces. The entire warehouse site is 46 acres and is located north of Interstate 84 in the Buckland Industrial Park.
Under Manchester regulations, retail operations are prohibited in industrial zones unless they are secondary to a much larger operation.
Planning officials have said that although the proposed store would be large, it is small compared to the 2-million-square-foot distribution center in which it would be located.

After the public hearing on the J.C. Penney request, the PZC will hold one on a proposal by the president of the Manchester Manor nursing home to build a congregate housing complex for elderly people off of West Center Street.
The complex would be located on 7.7 acre zoned Residential B at 403 W. Center St., adjacent to Manchester Manor, Manchester Manor President Paul T. Liistro has said that the nursing home will play no part in the congregate housing operation.
If approved, the complex would be between three and four stories high and would contain 100 one-bedroom, two-bedroom and efficiency apartments.
Congregate housing is designed to allow elderly people to have their own living units, but it provides some joint services such as a dining area and laundry facilities.
The project would have all of these plus a mail room and bus service to complement the city bus line, Liistro has said.
The PZC passed new zoning regulations this summer that allow congregate housing in any residential zone as long as it does not change the character of the neighborhood.

Critics' picks

Woody Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters" won best picture and Bob Hoskins was voted best actor by the Los Angeles Film Critics, one of four groups considered a barometer of Academy Award sentiments.
The critics on Saturday put Allen's movie exposing the complex relationships among a hypochondriac, his ex-wife, her current husband and her two sisters ahead of the controversial David Lynch film "Blue Velvet," which lynchtopped small town America and sadomasochism.
Lynch was director of the year, and his movie was runner-up for screenplay to "Hannah and Her Sisters." Allen was runner-up for director.

WOODY ALLEN ... best picture
BOB HOSKINS ... best actor

Hollywood Women's Press Club. "It is a witty show," Arthur said Sunday of the reason for its popularity. "We're adorable," McClannahan said.
Jimmy Stewart presented that award, and Cloris Leachman presented the award for most noteworthy male star for Paul Newman, who did not attend because he is directing his wife, Joanne Woodward, in "The Glass Menagerie."
Pia Zadora and Mark Harmon won the Golden Apple as discoverers of the year, and outgoing NBC president Grant Tinker was given the Louella O. Parsons award as the Hollywood personality who presents the best image of the entertainment industry to the world.

HARTFORD — Deputy Economic Development Commissioner Peter F. Burns said he will donate $2,000 to charity to settle an ethics complaint with the Ethics Commission, which investigated a special deal which he purchased a 1985 automobile from Saab-Scania of America Inc.

Burns said Saturday in an interview from his home in Ansonia that he must make the contribution within 60 days of Ethics Commission certification of the agreement, which he signed on Thursday.

"The Ethics Commission says that as far as they are concerned, this matter is over," Burns said. "They indicated that this was based on their decision that I did this with no willful intent to profit from it."

Jolie Peck said the panel would likely vote on certifying the agreement today. She said the commission has ordered charitable donations in other cases.

"I think most of us thought that this was a more meaningful thing to do," she said when reached at her New Haven home.

Burns purchased a Saab-Scania automobile in 1985 under Saab-Scania's employee leased-use vehicle program. Gov. William A. O'Neill suspended Burns the week of August 10 after determining Burns used "bad judgment" in accepting the deal.

Saab-Scania in 1982 received industrial research bonds totaling $9 million through the Economic Development Department to construct a bus manufacturing plant and automobile parts distribution center in Orange. Burns, in defending the deal in August, said he had no role in his department's approval of the bonds.

Under the special sales program, the Saab sells to a variety of select customers its cars that have been driven by employees. The cars are sold at reduced prices that take into consideration mileage and condition of the car.

The Saab purchased by Burns was a 1985 Saab 900. Burns paid $13,198. Burns, in a report to the governor, put the value at $14,464, including sales tax and other fees.

Saab, which does not have a license to sell or trade cars, used two Connecticut auto dealers to complete the deal.

Burns received $6,000 for his 1982 Chevrolet Celebrity, which he traded in at Stephens World of Wheels in Bristol. That part of the deal was arranged by Stephen Barberino, a principle partner in Hershey-Lake Compounce Associates. Burns helped arrange a federal loan to Hershey-Lake Compounce amusement park in 1985.

Burns said that in memory of a friend who died recently, he would contribute $2,000 to Connecticut Hospice in Brandyville, which cares for the terminally ill.

Burns said the amount of the contribution was based on the Ethics Commission's opinion that the difference between what he paid for a Saab automobile and what he should have paid was $1,200 and the difference between what he received on a trade-in in the deal and what he should have received was $1,600.

Undertakers and police remove the body of one of four people shot to death in a log cabin in rural Essex, N.Y. A 17-year-old family member was charged in the massacre.

Teen held in log cabin slayings

EAST CHATHAM, N.Y. (AP) — A 17-year-old honors student has been charged with fatally shooting his father, brother, 3-year-old cousin and a woman who shared their log cabin, authorities say.

Wiley Gates allegedly shot the four repeatedly with a pistol Saturday night, then drove down the road to his grandmother's house and reported finding the bodies, according to Columbia County Sheriff's officers said Sunday.

"It's a little hard to believe," said Howard Hatch, the brother-in-law of Robert Gates, one of the victims. "We never saw any real animosity (between father and son)."

The victims were identified as Gates, 39; his son Robert Gates Jr., 15; 3-year-old Jason Gates, and Cheryl Brahm, 26, described as a housemate of the elder Gates, who was divorced.

"We've had a massacre," said Sheriff Paul Propper. "The bodies were found around the house. They had been shot several times each."

Blinking back tears, Propper described the shootings as "worse than anything I saw in Korea."

Propper said a second person was being questioned, but would give no further details nor discuss a motive. Deputy James Sweet said Sunday night that more arrests were expected in the case.

"You just can't believe something like this could happen, especially in a rural community," said Hatch. "Wiley is an extremely quiet individual. He spent most of his time working with computers. He was an honor student."

"It's got us stymied," investigators spied most of Sunday searching for the murder weapon in the woods around the large log cabin, set back from a rutted dirt road in this village about 20 miles southeast of Albany near the Massachusetts border.

They found the weapon Sunday night, Sweet said. He would not describe it or say where it was located. Propper said earlier it appeared the weapon used was a medium-caliber pistol.

Hatch said several weapons, including hunting rifles and pistols, had been stolen from the Gates home about a week ago. Sweet confirmed that the robbery had taken place, and said no suspects had been arrested.

Wiley Gates, a senior at Chatham High School, was arraigned Sunday before a municipal judge on four counts of second-degree murder.

Death probe possible after cocaine arrests

HARTFORD (AP) — A prosecutor wants to re-examine the death of a woman who told authorities about alleged drug involvement by her estranged husband, a former assistant U.S. attorney, 18 months before she committed suicide.

Paul Sherbacow, 46, of Simsbury, an assistant U.S. attorney in Connecticut in 1984, was one of four men arrested Thursday in what police described as an interstate smuggling operation that brought about $300,000 worth of cocaine a month into Connecticut.

Hartford State's Attorney John M. Bailey said he was unaware that Sherbacow was the focus of a drug investigation at the time of Roberto Sherbacow's death in June.

Bailey said he wanted to review reports on her death in light of evidence state and federal investigations uncovered about Sherbacow's alleged drug dealings and associates.

Mrs. Sherbacow's body was found in a closet in the family's home, said Simsbury police Sgt. Richard G. Beck. Accelerated rehabilitation is a special program that provides a clean record for those who successfully complete probation. Sherbacow's probation under the program was to expire on June 10, 1987, the Journal Inquirer reported.

In October 1984, Sherbacow was accelerated into a Canton safe deposit box that was in his wife's name of $250,000 in jewelry, money and a cassette tape that Mrs. Sherbacow claimed could ruin her husband's career, the Journal Inquirer reported.

On June 12, 1985, Sherbacow pleaded no contest to a charge of third-degree criminal mischief in the West Hartford Superior Court case. He was given a four-month suspended sentence, a public reprimand and one year of probation. The Journal Inquirer reported the cassette was not recovered.

In April 1985, while the safe deposit case was pending, Sherbacow was charged with threatening a male victim to his wife's home and first-degree trespassing. He was granted accelerated rehabilitation in the Windsor Superior Court case on June 10, the Journal Inquirer reported.

Sherbacow was eligible for accelerated rehabilitation because the West Hartford case was still pending and he had no criminal record at the time. Accelerated rehabilitation is a special program that provides a clean record for those who successfully complete probation. Sherbacow's probation under the program was to expire on June 10, 1987, the Journal Inquirer reported.

"Let's see what the evidence is that the state police are making claims about," he said.

The others arrested were Thomas Cardillo, 37, of Wethersfield; John Novitsky, 31, of Clinton; and Charles M. Kehoe, 34, of Hartford. Kehoe was charged with possession of cocaine, possession of marijuana with intent to sell, possession of marijuana with intent to possess, possession of controlled substances and conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Connecticut In Brief

Murder suspect held in S. Carolina

WALLINGFORD — Police say a man they've been hunting since last spring has been arrested in South Carolina and will be brought back to Connecticut on a first-degree murder charge.

Police spokesman Thomas Curran said Saturday that Steven Borelli, 24, was arrested in South Carolina on a drug charge on Thursday.

Local authorities have a warrant charging the former New Haven man with murder in connection with the shooting death of Michael J. Molloy in Wallingford on March 17.

Authorities already had another former New Haven man in custody in connection with the killing.

Power project would divert water

WINDSOR LOCKS — The Department of Environmental Protection said it will likely issue a permit to a company asking to divert 16 million gallons of water a day from the Connecticut River to cool a power plant it wants to build in Windsor Locks.

The Dexter Corp., which is proposing the plant, wants to use heat from its paper and carbon fiber manufacturing process to produce electricity in the plant. It would then sell the electricity. The water would be used to cool the power plant, then be returned to the river.

While diversion of the water would apparently have no adverse effect, the temperature of the water when it re-enters the river could, DEP officials said.

Because of the water temperature issue, the DEP's water compliance unit will also monitor the proposal.

The plan would discharge 110-degree Fahrenheit water back into the river, but the heat would dissipate into the atmosphere or be cooled by the river.

UCConn 37th in research spending

NEW HAVEN — The University of Connecticut has retained the 37th spot in a national ranking of institutions of higher education that spent more than $30 million in research during the last fiscal year, while Yale University dropped from 20th to 21st place on list.

The National Science Foundation's ranking of 91 institutions was headed by Johns Hopkins University, with a research expenditure of $383 million. UConn spent $75,155,000 in fiscal 1985. Yale spent $107,245,000.

UConn President John T. Casten III said he was delighted to be on the list, but that his university should be further up, in the range of 15 to 20.

Robert K. Bickerton, the director of Yale's Office of Cooperative Research, said he doesn't believe the drop in Yale's ranking is significant.

Both state and federal funding for research at UConn and Yale decreased in 1985. UConn received $813,000 from the state and Yale got $2,785,000, down from $326,000 and $2,862,000 respectively in 1984.

Casten speculated that the bulk of state research funds went to the Connecticut Mental Health Center in New Haven.

Accord to end Bridgport strike

BRIDGEPORT — Carpenter Technology Corp. has postponed plans to begin hiring replacement workers today after a tentative agreement to end a 15-week strike by nearly 500 steelworkers was reached.

Union negotiators and Carpenter reached the tentative agreement Sunday, a federal mediator said.

Company officials agreed to postpone hiring the replacement workers until the union membership votes on the tentative contract, mediator Patrick Hart said in a statement released through the company Sunday.

No details of the pact or when it will be voted on were disclosed. The 498 union workers had voted unanimously to strike after union leaders said they could not endorse the earlier proposal. Gomes said, Gomes said he was one of those arrested during the strike.

Leftover campaign funds aid youth

DERBY — Leftover funds from a failed congressional campaign can be used to set up a trust fund for a Derby teen-ager whose mother committed suicide in June, the Federal Election Commission has ruled.

Vincent Carrafiello, 46, a Democratic candidate in the 5th District, did not gain enough support at the party convention to enter the primary. He was left with $3,842 in unspent campaign funds.

The Federal Election Commission recently approved Carrafiello's request to use his leftover campaign money to set up a trust fund for 16-year-old John Sherwin.

"This is something that had never been done before," said Karen Flinacan, a commission spokeswoman, though she added, "It is possible someone else did it without asking us about it."

Federal Election Commission guidelines prohibit the use of leftover campaign funds for the personal benefit of candidates or members of their families. Many candidates donate leftover campaign funds to a charity.

Acid-rain control could be costly

NEW HAVEN — United Illuminating Co. would have to raise electricity rates by an estimated 2 percent to 5 percent to comply with acid-rain control proposals before Congress, a private study says.

Management Information Services Inc., a for-profit research company based in Washington, released the estimates in a study of the impact on customers of different acid rain bills that were considered this year by House and Senate committees.

The legislation is expected to form the starting points in 1987 for a major push by environmentalists to legislate curbs on sulphur dioxide emissions from coal fired boilers.

The proposals could cause rates to increase from almost nothing in Oregon to 37 percent in West Virginia, the study found. The amount of a utility customer's bill increase would depend largely on which power company is supplying the electricity, the study said.

UI was the only Connecticut utility company mentioned by name in the report. It said the statewide average rate increase would range from 2 percent to 4 percent under the legislation.

Woman slain in 'third-rate burglary'

NEW CANAAN (AP) — A 63-year-old woman who was beaten and thrown into a swimming pool at her elegant country home was the victim of a "third-rate burglary gone bad," police Chief Ralph M. Scott said today.

Tyrone Wilson, 21, was charged with felony murder in the death of Ann W. Viner, whose body was found floating in the pool Wednesday night. It was the first homicide in this affluent community in 16 years, police said.

Wilson, also charged with third-degree larceny and theft of a motor vehicle, was being held on $500,000 bond pending his arraignment today.

Scott said intruders apparently entered the house through an unlocked back door in the kitchen shortly after Mrs. Viner had returned home from a League of Women Voters fund-raiser in New York. There was a struggle, Mrs. Viner was struck in the head with a piece of wood and her body dumped into her swimming pool, Scott said.

Police discovered Mrs. Viner's body after being alerted by her husband, Arthur Viner, about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday, police said.

"Viner, president of the investor Central Management Corp. in New York, had returned home from an office Christmas party to find Mrs. Viner and the couple's 1986 Volvo missing. The family dog, still in the house, was bleeding from a head wound, police said.

An autopsy showed that Mrs. Viner had been struck several times on the head, then dumped into the pool where she drowned, authorities said. The pool is about 100 feet behind the house, which is nestled on 4.1 acres of land.

Drawers and closets in the home had been rifled and police determined that jewelry, stereo equipment and a small amount of cash had been taken. The Volvo was found the next morning in an elementary school parking lot about a mile from the Viner house, police said.

Scott said the arrests followed reports that the suspects were stealing stolen goods and purchasing drugs.

The secluded area, where homes are valued at $600,000 and higher, has frequently been a target of burglars. Lt. Gene Ready said, "Burglars consider this the Gold Coast." Ready said last week, "It's close to the Merritt Parkway, the houses are isolated and there's Tyrone Wilson, one of two suspects in the New Canaan burglary in which 63-year-old Ann W. Viner was murdered, is escorted into town police headquarters Sunday after being arrested at his home. The 21-year-old New Canaan man was held on felony murder and larceny charges.

lots of goodies inside."

New Canaan's last reported murder was in 1970, when a man killed four family members, Ready said.

Mrs. Viner was a prominent member of the National League of Women Voters and a self-employed art consultant for corporations and individuals.

Several hundred mourners attended a memorial service Saturday for her at the First Presbyterian Church in New Canaan.

"She worked hard but never got burned out," said Nancy Neuman, national president of the League of Women Voters. "She always looked ahead."

Nature study is strictly for the birds

By John Gustavsen
The Associated Press

WOODBURY — A lot of what goes on at the Flanders Nature Center is strictly for the birds, because having it any other way at this time of year would certainly ruffle some feathers.

The center, one of about 25 such private, non-profit nature and environmental educational organizations in the state, is about a month into its first 18-week program of collecting data on the kinds of birds that frequent home bird feeders.

The center is using about 40 volunteers throughout west central Connecticut to see what, in short, is coming to dinner.

"Organizations like ours are always looking for ways to get people active in things in which we have a common interest," says Patricia Christgau, executive director of the center and a spirited promoter of the winter bird feeder survey.

"But if you're going to start to feed the birds, you're going to have to continue through March," Christgau cautions. "And it's expensive. It's like having pets. You have to keep filling the feeder."

Susan Davis of Woodbury, director of education at the center, says birds become dependent on what they find in feeders and some will starve if the food stops.

She estimates the cost of providing a modest array of seed varieties to continue through March is about $100 for the winter feeding period — Nov. 15 through March 13. Both women say that anyone can take part in the survey, and that bird feeding is ideal for people who like to watch birds but can't get outdoors.

"I frequently used to see sunflower seed and a wild mix of cracked corn, millet and peanut hearts," says Davis, who came to the center in June after three years as naturalist at the Children's Museum in West Hartford.

Cracked corn attracts mourning doves, Niger seed will draw finches and goldfinches, cardinals are partial to safflower seed, and woodpeckers and chickadees flock to suet. Raisins, fruit and jam will attract robins, mockingbirds and catbirds.

Davis says the results from surveys conducted in succeeding years will be more valuable than this year's because the number of volunteers is expected to be more than double. Also, several years of experience will help to establish reliability of data.

Information from the survey will be used in a national bird population survey.

The Flanders Nature Center was founded in 1963 by Natalie Van Vleck, whose 200-acre estate became part of the center in 1983, three years after her death at the age of 80.

In 1983, a sheep farm that had been in the Van Vleck family was added to the property managed by the center's 13-member board of directors.

The nationally recognized breeding flock of 100 Hampshire sheep is owned and shepherded by David Harmon, who calls it "one of the bigger flocks in this state."

The center also leases 700 acres of forest and bog for the Whittemore Sanctuary in Woodbury, and holds more than 1,000 acres of land trust.

In addition, it operates a maple syrup house where more than 100 gallons of syrup are produced annually, and conducts nature classes reaching more than 900 children in eight municipalities including Waterbury each year.

Sub launch advances Navy's new weapons

GROTON (AP) — The Navy's most powerful weapon ever has moved a step closer to becoming operational with the launch of the nuclear-powered submarine Tennessee.

A total of 58 anti-nuclear protesters were arrested Saturday outside the Navy submarine base at the Electric Boat shipyard, where the vessel was built and launched.

About 400 demonstrators took part in the non-violent protest against the Tennessee, which Adm. Frank B. Kelso II said would be the most potent weapon in the Navy arsenal when it joins the fleet in 1989.

Police carried away those who obstructed the entry of the Electric Boat, a division of General Dynamics Corp. Fifty protesters were charged with creating a public disturbance, an infraction that carries a $58 fine payable by mail.

After the launch, demonstrators marched to the nearby Navy submarine base, where another eight were arrested on charges of creating a public disturbance. Groton town police reported that more than 1,000 guests huddled in makeshift shelters inside the shipyard located on the Thames River

Report says Reagan wants to sell Amtrak's Northeast line

NEW YORK (AP) — The most successful portion of Amtrak's passenger system would be sold and federal aid to mass transit would be cut under President Reagan's draft budget for the next fiscal year, The New York Times reported.

The government would sell Amtrak's Northeast Corridor line connecting Washington, New York and Boston under the proposal. Reagan plans to submit to Congress next month, The Times said in its Sunday edition.

Amtrak, which operates in 43 states and carries 20.5 million passengers a year, would retain the rest of its system under the proposal.

The eight states served by the Northeast Corridor — New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Massachusetts — account for 10.5 million of Amtrak's passengers.

Ross B. Capon, executive director of the National Association of Railroad Passengers, a consumer group with 13,000 members, also said there would be no private buyer and called the sale proposal "the dumbest idea I ever heard."

The Times quoted administration officials as saying budget makers have not decided whether the line would be sold to a single private corporation or through a public stock offering.

The draft budget for fiscal 1988, which begins Oct. 1, also would cut the $3.4 billion currently earmarked for the Urban Mass Transportation Administration to $1.6 billion, the Times said.

The proposal would give $1.3

billion raised through the federal gasoline tax to local areas according to a formula that takes into account population size and density.

The other $300 million, raised from general revenue, includes $130 million to continue building the Washington area subway system and funds for planning and administration of transit programs.

Priest will continue sex-change ministry

HARTFORD — God may have created men and women equal, but he doesn't always get the sex right, the reverend says.

By Brent Lovmon
The Associated Press

Many people don't have the actual surgery because it is extremely expensive — up to $8,000 for the male-to-female operation and up to $20,000 for the female-to-male operation, he said.

Jones began ministering to sexual minorities along by accident in 1982. Jones then chaired the inter-church committee on alcohol and drug abuse, was given the case of a homosexual who had molested a boy.

Jones, realizing he was unqualified to counsel such people, went to New York for more training. He studied pastoral counseling for two years at the Postgraduate Center for Mental Health, York Theological Seminary. His thesis was "Counseling the Male Homosexual."

"As I ministered to these (homosexuals) I also began to find some people who were not homosexuals but transsexuals," Jones said.

"Here were people telling me that they think they are of another sex, that I'm not interested in other males. All I want to be is a female myself."

The clinic has its administrative headquarters at the cathedral. The men and women, lesbians, bisexuals, transvestites and transsexuals.

"God knows where they've come from," Jones said. "I don't know why people are gay. I don't know why people are transvestites. I don't know the answer to any of those whys. It's God's business, not mine."

Jones founded the Gender Identity Clinic of New England in 1972, along with a group of doctors that included a gynecologist, a psychologist and a psychiatrist and an endocrinologist. It remains one of the few clinics in the country to offer people for sex changes.

His role has been to counsel transsexuals before they decide to have sex-change surgery and after they have had the surgery.

Jones defined a transsexual as a person who has "the body of one gender, but in all reality... is the opposite gender."

The clinic has arranged sex-change surgery, called sexual reassignment surgery, for about 30 men and

Here is a deal that illustrates many interesting aspects of the game. First there is the bidding. The only justification East had for opening such a strong hand with a pre-emptive bid was the unfavorable vulnerability. West was right in deciding there was no future in bidding after partner's pre-empt. North had a problem that could be solved only by taking a chance with a takeout double. Cheap cars come back

DETROIT (AP) — The $5,000 new car was facing extinction just two years ago, but the species is making a strong comeback as automakers scramble for shares of the rapidly growing market for cheap wheels. The rebirth came with the successful U.S. introductions of the $3,990 Yugo, built in Yugoslavia, and the $4,995 Korean-made Hyundai Excel, which sold more cars in this country in its first year than any other import.

"We saw a vacuum at the low end of the market," said William Prior, the newly named president of Brilkin Industries, Yugo of America Inc.'s parent corporation. Now that the waters have been tested, other makers in countries with younger auto industries are jumping in, turning the entry level category abandoned by the Japanese into one of the hottest segments of the new-car market.

"Yugo and Hyundai have reopened the market. Once a few companies start to arrive with brand-new cars, everyone has to get in. That's why five years from now this segment is going to be very cluttered," said Maryann Keller, an auto industry analyst at Furman Selig, Mager Dietz & Birney in New York.

The entry level represents different things to different makers: first-time access to the lucrative U.S. market, an opportunity to hold onto market share or a chance to hook future buyers for more expensive and profitable cars.

"It's the fastest-growing segment of the car business today. Between now and 1987 there'll be about 17 new entry-level cars on the market.

Switch to convertible bonds can have many advantages

QUESTION: I have 800 shares of common stock currently trading at $19 a share. It pays no dividends. The same company has convertible bonds paying 7 percent interest. The bond's conversion price is "23."

ANSWER: You've spotted the advantages. By selling the stock, you'll receive $15,200 less broker's commission. Let's say you buy $15,000 face value of those convertible bonds. Because the bonds pay interest at 7 percent of face value, you'll have $1,050 annual income.

However, while you own the convertibles, you won't have to worry about their market price falling away down — unless interest rates in general shoot up or the company defaults on interest payments. Because they pay fixed annual interest, the market value of these convertibles should stay in line with the price of bonds of similar quality and maturities.

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

By presenting $15,000 face amount of bonds for conversion, you will be entitled to 652.17 common shares. Actually, you will get 652 shares and cash for the fractional amount.

The disadvantage might be that you have to pay more than face market price of your stock should go up. Perhaps it has risen already, in anticipation of the court victory.

ANSWER: It means the brokerage firm is recommending a certain bank stock for "capital gains oriented accounts." Can you define that phrase?

ANSWER: The brokerage firm is recommending a certain bank stock for "capital gains oriented accounts." Can you define that phrase?

ANSWER: Assuming your company wins, that money will go into the corporate treasury. Your company will be that much richer. What happens to that money? Do stockholders receive any share of it?

How do you measure the market?

By John Cunniff
The Associated Press
NEW YORK — When the stock market was a much smaller and probably more orderly place you could read its strength or weakness in the average.

percent; the Standard & Poor's 500-stock average rose 10 percent. But other readings on the market's level tell a very different story.

Value Line's measure of 1,700 stocks, mostly broader-gauged than the Dow and triple the breadth of the S&P 500, rose just 6 percent since mid-September, and remains 5 percent below its all-time peak of last May.

Wright cautions against overestimating the strength of the market, and its statisticians produce even more supporting data.

Yule season brings cheer to nation's battery makers

By Dean Golembeski
The Associated Press

BETHEL — The battery industry gets its biggest charge each Christmas because of the phrase "Battery Not Included" stamped on millions of toys and electronic gadgets.

"Battery" sales nationally, totaling $2.5 billion last year, are expected to hit $3.3 billion by 1990, Duracell market studies indicate.

"The battery market (overall) is growing about 4 percent a year," he said last week. "The alkaline segment is growing about 9 percent

TOWN OF MANCHESTER, CONNECTICUT

ADOPTION OF NOTICE OF ORDINANCE

IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE PROVISIONS OF CHAPTER 3, SECTIONS 1 AND 2 OF THE TOWN CHARTER, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN OF THE ADOPTION BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE TOWN OF MANCHESTER, CONNECTICUT, ON DECEMBER 9, 1986.

AMENDMENT TO ORDINANCE

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE TOWN OF MANCHESTER, CONNECTICUT, THAT THE FOLLOWING AMENDMENT TO ORDINANCE BE ADOPTED:

(1) Any provisions of this article to the contrary notwithstanding, the policeman and officers of the police department shall have completed at least twenty-five (25) years of service in the police department and have met the age requirement on the appropriate effective date listed below:

a. Effective July 1, 1974 attained age fifty-five (55).
b. Effective July 1, 1975 attained age fifty-three (53).
c. Effective July 1, 1976 and thereafter attained age fifty (50).

Policeman and officers may retire and receive a pension commencing the day of the month of retirement, the completion of the above requirements. Effective July 1, 1975, each policeman and officer will be required to take a physical examination, as determined by the general manager, once he attains his fifty-fifth (55th) birthday. Beginning July 1, 1976, each physical examination will be required after each policeman's and officer's fifty-fifth (55th) birthday, he must, by written application, request that the general manager extend his period of employment on a year to year basis beyond his fifty-fifth (55th) birthday, and, if such application is approved by said general manager, said policeman or officer shall remain on the pension board. In writing, of such approval, however, each policeman or officer shall be required to pay a fee of $100.00. IN EXCEPTIONAL CASES, THE GENERAL MANAGER MAY EXTEND THE PERIOD OF EMPLOYMENT OF A POLICEMAN OR OFFICER AT LEAST THREE (3) MONTHS PRIOR TO HIS SIXTIETH (60TH) BIRTHDAY. MAY EXTEND THE POLICEMAN OR OFFICER'S EMPLOYMENT TO HIS SIXTIETH (60TH) BIRTHDAY BEYOND HIS SIXTIETH (60TH) BIRTHDAY. FAILURE TO APPLY FOR A POLICEMAN OR OFFICER BY THE GENERAL MANAGER SHALL BE SUBJECT TO JUDICIAL OR ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW.

EDWARD TIMBRELL, PRINCIPAL AT THE SCHOOL AND A MEMBER OF THE FINE ARTS COMMITTEE WHICH SPONSORED OLSON'S VISIT, SAID HE HAS SEEN THE MAGICIAN PERFORM AT THE WOOD-STOCK COUNTRY FAIR AND "KNEW HE WOULD BE GOOD WITH CHILDREN."

Timbrell said Olson is able to present a historical perspective while being entertaining. "It's a chance for kids to see something live," he said.

In recreating the character of the 19th century traveling magician today, Olson used countless props, sweeping motions and plenty of audience participation.

For one trick, Olson-Potter said the secret words and moved a girl's ring from an apprentice's hand to a locked box.

"You are doubters," he constantly told the crowd in an English accent.

Robert Olson, in character as 19th century magician Richard Potter, enthralled a crowd of students and parents at Buckley School this morning. Olson, who regularly performs at Old Sturbridge Village, was assisted during one card trick by sixth-grader Lori Miller.

Heritage posts new losses as merger vote approaches

The financially troubled Heritage Savings and Loan Association of Manchester could be under new ownership by the end of the year if stockholders approve a merger agreement with the Massachusetts-based ComFed Savings Bank, Heritage President William H. Hale said this morning as he announced further losses in the fiscal year that closed Sept. 30.

Heritage reported a net loss of $2,392,000 for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30. Hale said. The company needs a two-thirds vote for approval of the merger, Hale said. He said the company's board of directors, which holds 38 percent of the stock, strongly supports the buyout.

Heritage, which has posted huge losses over the past several years due to a loan portfolio it acquired in a 1984 merger with Fidelity Federal Savings and Loan of New Haven, signed a definitive agreement in October to be bought out by ComFed for $7.7 million.

Under the terms of the agreement, each of Heritage's 496,000 shares of stock would be purchased by ComFed for $15, with per-share price subject to downward adjustment of up to $1.

White House asks immunity for top aides

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan today called on the Senate Intelligence Committee to grant limited immunity to former White House aides John Poindexter and Oliver North to compel them to testify in the investigation into the Iran-contra scandal.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, in a hastily called but nationally televised briefing for reporters, read a statement from Reagan declaring that limited immunity is "not amnesty or clemency."

Both Poindexter, Reagan's former national security adviser, and his former aide North have refused to testify before congressional committees probing the secret arms sale to Iran and diversion of profits to the contra rebels in Nicaragua. They claimed their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

Richard Potter is really Robert Olson, who regularly performs at Old Sturbridge Village and "knew he would be good with children."

Timbrell said Olson is able to present a historical perspective while being entertaining. "It's a chance for kids to see something live," he said.
