Iran may get request for details

By Susanne M. Schafer
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The special Senate panel investigating the U.S. arms sales to Iran might consider limited immunity for White House officials and seek help from Iran to learn the truth about the transactions, says the committee's chairman.

"I'm not closing any of the doors," Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate Select Committee, said Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

"If it takes a grant of immunity to get to these questions, they'll be considered, yes."

Inouye, whose panel is looking into the arms sales and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan rebels, also said he intends to proceed cautiously because the integrity of the president and the nation are at stake.

"I think the potential we have before us can be very explosive," he said.

The former member of the original Watergate panel said that at the "appropriate time" channels would be opened with any other nation to aid the inquiry.

"I don't see Iran being out of the picture at all," Inouye said.

Congressional investigators from both parties have agreed that testimony from the two pivotal figures in the controversy — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North and Vice Adm. John Poindexter — is key to solving the mystery of what happened to the money and how such a plan was hatched.

North was fired from the National Security Council staff and Poindexter resigned as national security adviser. Both refused to answer questions about the matter before congressional panels, citing their constitutional rights against self-incrimination.

Last week, President Reagan asked Congress to grant limited immunity to Poindexter and North to compel them to testify.

But lawmakers differed on the question of whether immunity should be granted. And Vice President George Bush, in a speech in Iowa, said that he and President Reagan should have been better informed about the activities of their subordinates.

"I think everybody, to the degree there were mistakes, I think everybody should share in the blame," Bush said in an interview published by The Washington Post.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, head of the House Intelligence Committee, said Independent Counsel Lawrence E. Walsh should get a chance at determining whether criminal acts have been committed before any decision on immunity is made.

"Let's get the facts first," said Hamilton, D-Ind., on the CBS program "Face the Nation." "We don't know a lot of the key facts here. Let's get the facts before we judge about immunity and a pardon."

House Speaker-designate Jim Wright, D-Texas, reiterated on the syndicated program "McLaughlin: One on One" that Reagan might consider an executive pardon of North and Poindexter to bring forth their testimony.

"Presidential pardon is the ultimate immunity," Wright said.

Hamilton's panel is scheduled to meet on Tuesday in hopes of hearing testimony from another player in the controversy — retired Maj. Gen. Richard Secord — to determine whether any money from the arms sales went to the Nicaraguan rebels.

But Hamilton has said he expects Secord to repeat his performance before the Senate Intelligence Committee, where he refused to testify after citing the Fifth Amendment.

Inouye's vice chairman, Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., said on the ABC program that if lawmakers become stymied they must decide "whether or not the possible imprisonment for a short time of a few people for something they thought they were doing right" is worth "the national anguish that we could go through for many, many months."

Rudman said he agreed with

Area's poor hide, but don't disappear

By George Lavng
Herald Reporter

On the day local schools hold Christmas parties at which gifts are exchanged, students might be expected to use just about any excuse to attend.

But some children stay at home — and not because they suffer from a cold or the flu, according to Coventry Human Services Director Dorothy Grady. Instead, they may be staying away as a result of embarrassment over their family's inability to afford a gift.

Such incidents are typical of how the poor try to avoid being noticed, Grady said.

While she and other officials said the number of Manchester area residents living in poverty has gone down in recent years, they admitted in recent interviews that the exact number is difficult to measure.

"They are so hidden," Grady said.

In Manchester, as in other towns, the number of people receiving assistance is less than it was one or two years ago. Part of the reason is the region's strong economy, said Manchester Social Services Director Ellen Jones.

Being poor can be a temporary situation, both Jones and Grady said.

"You come with a good wardrobe because you've been working and will be working again," Jones said of Manchester's less fortunate citizens.

But the same can't be said of all of Connecticut's poor.

In a state where the average 1985 income of $18,089 was the second highest in the nation, three of the largest cities — Hartford, Bridgeport and New Haven — rank among the top 10 in the country in terms of child-poverty rates.

In Hartford, for instance, 39.3 percent of the children are living in poverty.

Similar statistics are not available for the smaller towns, but the number of people receiving assistance has gone down, figures show.

The major aid program is Aid to Families with Dependent Children, which is funded by the state and federal governments. A typical family of three can receive $505 a month if they have no other income, according to Claudette Beaulieu of the state Department of Income Maintenance.

Beaulieu said for the fiscal year that ended June 30, the average number of people per month being helped by AFDC in Manchester was 720, down from 931 in 1982-83.

Minimum-wage proposal has town retailers up in arms

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

As legislators in Hartford debate a proposal to raise the minimum wage in Connecticut from $3.37 to $4.50 an hour, local retailers are watching from the sidelines with alarm.

Most local merchants interviewed in an informal survey Friday and today said that raising the wage that amount would hurt small businessmen. While many said the minimum wage should be increased somewhat, they called $4.50 an unreasonable amount to pay.

"I think that's pushing it a little," said Joseph Garman, who owns a clothing store on Main Street. "There are some jobs that don't deserve $4.50 an hour."

"You have people who do menial things," said Michael Dworkin, owner of Liggett Rexall Parkade

Pharmacy at the Manchester Parkade. "To pay them $4.50 an hour is absurd. You're only going to increase the price of your items in order to adjust to the extra cost."

The results could mean cutting employees' hours or reducing staffs, retailers cautioned, and could decrease the services available to customers.

Rep. Joseph A. Adamo, D-West Haven, incoming House chairman of the General Assembly's Labor

Committee, has proposed raising the minimum wage to that level. The bill also has the support of the state's labor unions.

And in spite of the criticism from many merchants, a representative of one restaurant chain that depends largely on low-wage labor said his company did not oppose raising the minimum as proposed.

Brian Maher, a vice president of Wendy's restaurants, said that due to a tight labor market, the company is already paying teenagers close to $4.50 an hour and would not be affected by the increase should it be passed.

"In Manchester as in other locations, we are at that level or higher," Maher said. "McDonalds, Burger King, Wendy's — we're all big chains, we can absorb this thing. I would have to think that the small mom-and-pop stores would have to be hurt by this."

Although even the smaller merchants agreed that the tight labor market has forced retailers to offer more than the minimum now, they said locking merchants into the $4.50 level would hurt in the long run, when and if the economy slips into a recession.

"It's going to be exceedingly difficult for retailers to keep up," Dworkin said.

HARTFORD — 'Tis the season to swipe a videocassette recorder, a compact disc player, or car stereo.

George D. Brower, an assistant professor of business administration at the University of Connecticut, says more thefts are committed during the Christmas season than any other time of the year.

While studying for his doctorate at the State University of New York in Buffalo, Brower examined FBI crime statistics from 1933 to 1975 and found that the number of thefts rose and fell in a predictable pattern every year.

Statistics in the bureau's annual Uniform Crime Report show that more robberies and burglaries are committed in December than in any other month, Brower said.

In 1984, for example, 9.8 percent of the year's 485,000 robberies and 9 percent of the 2,984,000 burglaries were committed in December. In 1984, 10.4 percent of the year's 112,000 robberies and 9.5 percent of the 1,111,000 burglaries were committed in the last month of the year.

Brower said the same pattern holds true for larceny.

Manchester police confirmed that view, saying shoplifting is on the rise at this time of year. But several local merchants said crime is not a significant problem during the holidays.

Gary Wood, Manchester Police Department spokesman, said that shoplifting increases in December, but did not provide specific figures. He said the trend covers all ages, races and classes.

"The shoplifting by amateurs picks up somewhat," said George Kelly, vice president of security at D&L Venture Corp. of New Britain, which operates D&L, Weathervane and J. Putnam stores. "We have problems with young kids who don't have enough money to buy gifts."

But Kelly said that professional shoplifters tend to shy away from the busier stores during the Christmas season.

One of those is the Channel Home Centers chain, where Regional Director Charles Bowman said widespread shoplifting is not a problem in December. He said one problem Channel does have is professional thieves stealing between $200 and $300 worth of batteries for holiday gifts. He declined to discuss security measures.

According to Brower, the shopping season offers thieves many opportunities: Homes are empty more often, and thefts can go unnoticed in crowded stores and shops.

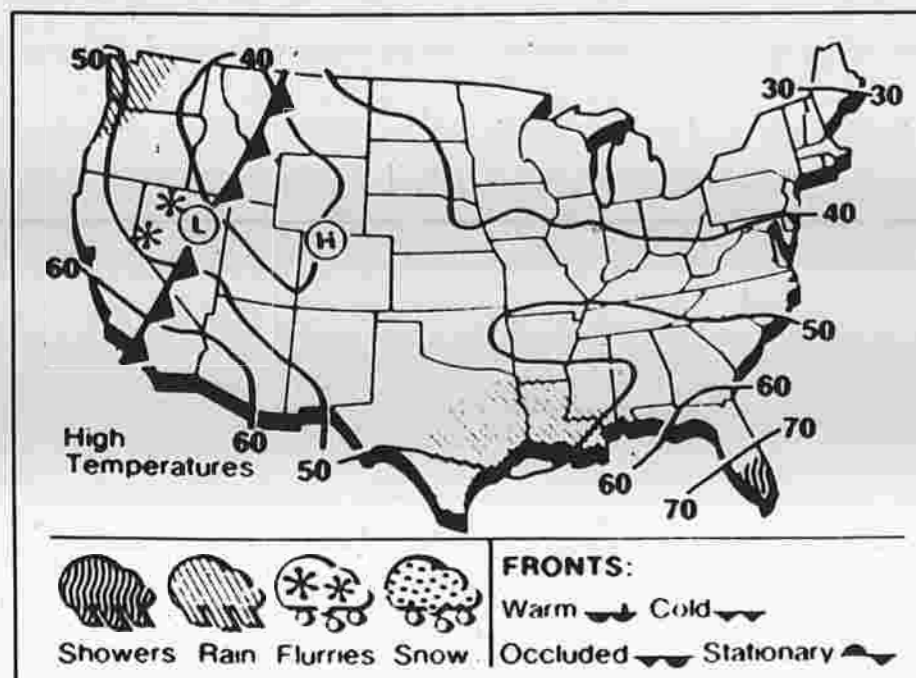

"Shoplifters don't like empty stores," he said.

For the most part, Brower said, thieves have the same wish lists as other people: Videocassette recorders, compact disc players and car stereos. Citizens band radios, which used to be the rage of motorists and thieves, now are relatively unpopular, he said.

"As the popularity of an item passes with consumers, thieves lose interest in it, too, because the market dries up," Brower said. "I look at crime as an economic activity, like being a plumber."

West Coast and East Coast: Partly sunny Tuesday with highs in the mid-40s. Christmas Day outlook: Rain likely. Highs in the 40s and lows in the 30s.

Northwest Hills: Mostly clear tonight with lows around 20. Partly sunny Tuesday with highs near 40. Christmas Day outlook: Rain likely. Highs 40 to 45 and lows 30 to 35.

Coastal forecast

Long Island Sound to Watch Hill, R.I., and Montauk Point: Winds northwest 10 to 15 knots shifting to the southwest by afternoon. West around 10 knots tonight and Tuesday.

Seas 2 feet or less through Tuesday.

Fair through Tuesday.

Across the nation

Snow fell over parts of the Northwest and Southwest today on the first full day of winter, while rain was scattered from Texas to Mississippi.

Snow was scattered over southeastern South Dakota, from western Montana across eastern Washington, over the mountains of Arizona, the mountains of New Mexico and into western Texas.

Rain was scattered along the northern Pacific Coast, and across southern Texas and southern Louisiana into southern Mississippi.

Fog was widespread, from northern Louisiana across southern Minnesota, and from northern Texas through southeastern South Dakota.

Skies were partly cloudy or clear across much of the Atlantic states, the upper Ohio Valley, the Tennessee Valley and the eastern Gulf Coast.

Fair skies and light winds also brought cold temperatures to the Northeast, reaching the teens and single digits by midnight Sunday across much of northern New England.

Today's forecast called for freezing rain and snow over the northern and central Plains. Snow should fall over western Texas, southeast New Mexico, the mountains of the Pacific Northwest and the northern Rockies. Rain should extend from the northern Pacific Coast across central California, and from the rest of Texas across the central Gulf of Mexico Coast. Winds should be strong and gusty along the eastern slopes of the northern Rockies.

Highs will be in the 30s and 40s for much of the nation, in the 20s over northern Maine, the 50s and 60s from the southern Atlantic states across the Tennessee Valley to the western Gulf Coast and from southern Arizona to central and southern California, and in the 70s over central and northern Rockies.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 6 degrees at Lebanon, N.H. to 70 at Key West, Fla.

NATIONAL FORECAST — Rain is forecast today for eastern Texas, Louisiana, parts of Arkansas, Mississippi and the Pacific Northwest. Showers are expected in southern Florida.

EVENING CLOUDS — Weather satellite photo taken at 8 p.m. Sunday shows cloudiness spreading from New Mexico eastward across the southern Plains to the lower Mississippi Valley. High, thin clouds cover the southeastern states. Frontal clouds are moving over the Pacific Northwest while high clouds push into the Intermountain region and northern Rockies.

Brooke Shields says she wants to get married eventually, but wonders if she'll be as close to anyone as she is to her mother.

The actress, model and college senior also said in an interview in the January issue of Cosmopolitan that macho men turn her off and that she has to take the initiative to get dates with her Princeton University classmates.

Shields said she has received many marriage proposals.

"I want more than anything to get married," she said. "But not now."

"I don't want to replace my mother's affections with someone else's," she said. "This may sound strange, but I've wondered, 'Will I ever find a husband who I will be that close friends with?'"

"I'm still holding out to my mother. I don't want to let go."

On men, the 21-year-old star said she prefers the "sensitive type."

"I find that I'm somewhat turned off by macho men," she said. But she finds that men in general are intimidated, simply because "I'm a girl."

"Most of the guys I've gone out with, I've had to make it completely obvious that I'd like them to ask me out. Or I've had to ask them."

The celebrity Christmas tree, featuring 200 ornaments, is at the Country Music Hall of Fame & Museum on the city's glistening Music Row.

Reba McEntire, the Country Music Association's 1986 Entertainer of the Year, this year contributed a brass saddle ornament while Campbell sent a dough snowman wearing a cowboy hat and vest.

Skaggs donated a photograph of himself with his family surrounded by a wreath. Singer John Schneider, who played Bo Duke on television's "Duke and the Dukes," sent a wooden rocking horse.

Last year, Nelson contributed a wreath featuring a dough figure of himself and one of his trademark bandanas, while Cash sent a toy train ornament.

Twitty City is predicting more than 175,000 holiday visitors this year, up from 130,000 last year. The museum expects 12,900 visitors this month, compared to 7,600 in December 1985.

Almanac

Today is Monday, Dec. 22, the 356th day of 1986. There are nine days left in the year. This is the first day of winter.

Today's highlight in history: On Dec. 22, 1844, during World War II, the Germans demanded the surrender of the Americans at Bastogne, Belgium. U.S. General Anthony C. McAuliffe gave his famous one-word reply: "Nuts!"

On this date: In 1775, a Continental naval fleet was organized in the rebellious American colonies under the command of Ezekiel Hopkins.

In 1897, Congress passed the Embargo Act, designed to force peace between Britain and France by cutting off all trade with Europe.

In 1864, during the Civil War, Union Gen. William T. Sherman sent a message to President Abraham Lincoln from Georgia, saying, "I beg to present you as Christmas gift of the city of Savannah."

In 1864, French army officer Alfred Dreyfus was convicted of treason in a court-martial that triggered worldwide charges of anti-Semitism. Dreyfus was ultimately vindicated.

In 1941, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill arrived in Washington for a wartime conference with President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Five years ago: President Reagan met at the White House with Poland's ambassador to the United States, Roman Spasowski, who received political asylum following the imposition of martial law in his homeland.

The next day, Poland's ambassador to Japan, Jozef Zdzislaw Ruzarski, also defected to the West.

One year ago: South African black activist Winnie Mandela was arrested when she defied the white-ruled government by returning to her home in the township of Soweto.

Today's birthdays: Lady Bird Johnson is 74. TV personality Gene Rayburn is 69. House Speaker-elect Jim Wright is 64. Actor Hector Elizondo is 50. Baseball player Steve Carlton is 42. Baseball player Steve Garvey is 38. Singers Maurice and Robin Gibb are 37. Golfer Jan Stephenson is 35.

Town workers scoop frozen leaves off the street this morning at the corner of Oxford Street and West Middle Turnpike. All leaves are expected to be collected by sometime next week.

Town offers to build sewer

Manchester's chief administrator has reiterated his demand that outlet charges assessed to property owners who hook up to a planned sewer in the Buckland section — charges the Eighth Utilities District says it needs to fund the sewer.

The dispute over the outlet charges first flared earlier this year.

The district is currently appealing the DEP's decision so that the sewage would flow into its North Main Street line and it could collect the outlet fees. All lines eventually flow to the town's Olcott Street sewage treatment plant.

The dispute over the outlet charges first flared earlier this year.

The Eighth District has long assessed outlet charges to new development using its sewer lines, but in May 1985 the town Board of Directors voted to allow the town to collect the money. The result was that some new Eighth District customers received bills from both the town and the Eighth District.

In his letter, Weiss offered to have the town sewer Buckland, just as it sewers the Buckland Industrial Park and the Pioneer Industrial Park, which are both located in the Eighth District. In those instances, the Eighth District allowed the town to provide the service.

If that happened, Weiss said the town would recoup the expense of building the line by dividing the total cost by the number of properties benefiting. He estimated this would result in a $3,200 charge for each acre served — a cost that would be collected over 10 years.

In a letter to Eighth District President Walter Joyner on Friday, Town Manager Robert Weiss said outlet charges "are a payment to the town for downstream improvements that have already been made or are required to be made to the sewer system. This would include such items as oversized piping for the system, pump stations, and treatment plant improvements."

Last week, Joyner estimated that the outlet fees, which are paid once for use of the sewer, would total about $1 million. When added to initial hookup charges, they would nearly cover the estimated $1.7 million cost of the sewer project, he said.

Joyner said last week that if the Eighth District, which provides fire protection and sewer service to most of northern Manchester, cannot collect the outlet charges, it will not be economically feasible for it to proceed with plans to build the sewer line.

If the sewer is not built, development planned for northwestern Manchester might have to be curtailed. A large shopping mall, hotels and retail stores are planned in the area and are expected to generate millions of dollars in tax revenue.

In his letter, Weiss suggested that cancellation of the development plans would not be to the benefit of Manchester residents. "Significant developments served by these sewers are ready to start," he wrote to Joyner. "It would indeed be regrettable if both the town and district taxpayers were to suffer due to continued delays or misunderstandings."

Under a 1978 agreement between the town and Eighth District, the town would collect the outlet charges and the sewer line would flow into the town's Adams Street line. When the state Department of Environmental Protection approved the Eighth District's Buckland sewer plan this year, it gave the town control of a key valve that would allow the town to channel the flow into its own lines.

Raise in minimum pay opposed

Men's Shop on Main Street, agreed and said store owners should decide what starting wage to pay.

"Now help is hard to find," Apter said. "But in two years from now, when the market is not so tight, we'll be stuck on the higher wages."

Mohr disagreed, saying it was unlikely the Northeast would see a loosening of the labor market soon. When it does happen, he said, retailing businesses would be the first to feel the pinch.

George Marlow, who owns Marlow's Department Store on Main Street, said he was not opposed to raising the wage. But the minimum should be set according to the skill of the worker, he argued.

The minimum wage has been at $3.37 since 1981, according to C. Richard Ficks, spokesman for the state Department of Labor. Before that the minimum wage increased annually for several years, going from $2.31 an hour in 1977 to $3.12 in 1980.

Ficks said there are no exact figures on how many jobs in the state are currently working at the minimum. But most are in the retail and fast food industries, he said.

Meanwhile, members of Manchester's Capitol contingent said they favored a wage increase, but were not married to $4.50.

"I expect there'll be an improvement," said Rep. John W. Thompson, D-Manchester, "but I think $4.50 is another story."

Democratic Sen.-elect Michael P. Meotti and Rep. James R. McCavanaugh both agreed they said the minimum was needed to keep people up with the cost of living.

McCavanaugh said he was concerned that raising the minimum might cause some businesses to cut their staffs.

Fourth-grade math tests better

Manchester's new arithmetic program helped cut the number of fourth-grade students who scored below the passing level on the math portion of the Connecticut Mastery Test this year, the director of curriculum for the town schools said today.

Below-standard scores on the math portion of the testing were "cut in half" from last year, according to Director of Curriculum Allan B. Chesterton. "That's our single biggest thing to crow about," he said.

While primary results on the tests — which are intended to help identify students in need of remedial help — showed that many more were up to the state math standard this year, the number who failed to meet reading standards stayed constant.

Last year, 25 to 27 percent of the fourth graders in Manchester scored below the remedial level in the reading and writing portion of the test and 20 percent scored below the standard set for math.

The primary results of this year's tests, given in October, showed that only 10 percent of fourth grade students were below math standards.

"We would expect that," Chesterton said of the math results. He said the number of below-average scores decreased because the mathematics program in the schools is now congruent with the mastery test.

"The writing and the reading is not where we would like to see it," Chesterton admitted. He said he did not have exact figures, but about a quarter of fourth-grade students still can't read or write up to the standard. "We would like to see it lower," he said.

Chesterton predicted scores will improve when students become more used to the test, which was given for the first time to sixth- and eighth-grade students this year. "By next year, we may begin to impact on reading," Chesterton said.

The mastery tests will eventually replace the proficiency tests given to ninth-graders, which Chesterton said are less specific and are given too late to help students needing remedial instruction.

State results of the tests will be released within the next two weeks. Officials will analyze the data after the holidays.

Not charity, just friendly sharing

Editor's note: This is one of a series of vignettes provided by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches, which seeks to provide needy people with food baskets, gifts and clothing.

At first there was just the diabetes to cope with. No problem, lots of folks manage.

Then a year ago, Sam had a stroke which left him with considerable loss of function and poor circulation on his right side. Shortly after the stroke, he suffered a heart attack. When he finally recovered enough to return home, he fell and shattered (not broke) that same right leg so badly that it could not heal properly.

Sitting in the wheelchair for very long causes him considerable pain. He needs to keep the leg elevated because of the poor circulation. When he could sit in their old recliner, he was not only more comfortable but the leg was elevated. Unfortunately, the elderly recliner was not up to the wear and tear and fell apart.

There is money for the essentials — food, fuel, medication. And Sam is far too proud to ask for help. Having worked hard all of his life and fiercely independent, he is offended by the mere thought of accepting "charity."

There is no room for handout charity in the spirit of Christmas. Only sharing between neighbors. A recliner would be a love gift to one of our own.

Sam is among the more than 340 households MACC hopes to help during the Christmas season. Non-perishable foods, new and good-as-new us toys and gifts for shut-ins and elderly people are sent to the town's Center Street fire headquarters, the Eighth District fire station at 32 Main St., the Main Street offices of Heritage Savings and Loan Association or the Manchester Mall at 811 Main St. Checks can be mailed to MACC Seasonal Sharing, P.O. ## Dispute leads to gunfire

Man shot wife as kids were near, police charge

By Andrew Yurkovsky Herald Reporter

A Manchester man who allegedly shot his wife Sunday afternoon while his children were standing nearby was apprehended minutes later after being injured in an automobile accident on St. James Street, police said this morning.

Gregory J. Fontaine, 27, of 22B St. James St., was charged with attempted murder, first-degree assault and first-degree reckless endangerment in connection with the shooting of his wife, Karen Fontaine, 31, of the same address, following a domestic dispute at their home, police said.

Karen Fontaine was listed in satisfactory condition at Hartford Hospital this morning. Fontaine suffered an injury to the right side of her body and was treated at Manchester Memorial Hospital before being transported to Hartford Hospital for surgery, officials said. Fontaine was treated for an arm injury at MCH, a hospital spokesman said this morning.

Police said when the couple argued in their children's bedroom, Gregory Fontaine threatened to shoot his wife if she attempted to leave the house with their two sons, ages 3 and 5.

Fontaine went to another bedroom where he obtained and loaded a 12-gauge shotgun, then returned to the bedroom, police said. Gregory Fontaine then shot Karen Fontaine while she was standing next to the two children, police said.

Fontaine fled the scene, traveling west on St. James Street in a 1973 AMC Hornet, police said. A witness told police he saw Fontaine lose control of his car and crash into a tree on the right side of the road, according to a police report. The witness said he saw Fontaine leave the vehicle and walk west on Park Street.

A police officer dispatched to the scene reported that while being treated by paramedics, Fontaine kept repeating, "Help my wife," according to the police report. Shortly afterwards, at about the same time police received a report of the shooting, Fontaine said something to police about a gun going off.

When police arrived at the St. James Street residence, they found a shotgun behind the front door, according to the police report. Karen Fontaine was seated on a step near the rear door and a neighbor was holding a compress on the right side of her body.

Gregory Fontaine told police he was in the process of putting the gun away when it went off accidentally, according to the police report. But Karen Fontaine maintained the shooting was intentional and said her husband had been violent in the past, police said.

In addition to the charges lodged in connection with the shooting, Gregory Fontaine was charged with driving while intoxicated, failure to have insurance, misuse of registration, operating an unregistered motor vehicle, evading responsibility and traveling too fast.

He was held on $500,000 non-surety bond pending arraignment today in Manchester Superior Court.

AIDS, taxes top issues awaiting new Legislature

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Bills to be taken up by the 1987 General Assembly have been filed almost daily by legislators since the day after the November election, and almost 300 are ready for consideration. The bills range from one requiring AIDS testing before a marriage license can be issued to another requiring motorists to turn their headlights on during inclement weather. Others call for tax cuts, smoking bans and a town historian in every Connecticut municipality. There will be another attempt in 1987 to revise the state's death penalty statute, to increase the minimum wage, and to lift the sales tax on books. Rep. Robert D. Bowden, R-Glastonbury, has drafted a bill barring the governor from declaring Good Friday a state holiday, as it is now. He's got another bill that would allow for a referendum on whether to change the date of the election to Nov. 1. The 1987 legislative session begins Jan. 7 and adjourns June 3. Thousands more bills will be filed over the next couple of months. THERE ARE several bills dealing with AIDS, all of them sponsored or co-sponsored by Rep. J. Peter Fuscus, R-Marlborough. In addition to the pre-marital AIDS test, Fuscus wants to require

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, screening tests for anyone accused of sexual assault. "In order to identify persons who are suffering from such disease and disclose such information to the victims of such crimes." Because the state is expecting another large budget surplus this year legislators are once again talking about tax cuts. The surplus is now estimated to be at least $142 million, but some say it could well hit $200 million. Another bill drafted by Tulisano would eliminate the office of inspector general, created only in October to ferret out waste, fraud and abuse in state government. Rep. Francis X. O'Neill Jr., R-Guilford, and a couple other lawmakers have drafted a bill that would reduce the state sales tax from 7 1/2 percent to 6 1/2 percent. Other tax bills would repeal the levy on income from interest and dividends, increase exemptions on inheritance taxes, and exempt those 65 and over from the capital gains, interest and dividends taxes. Those taxes would also be reduced under a separate bill. FOUR LEGISLATORS led by Rep. Eugene A. Migliaro Jr., R-Wolcott, the legislature's most vocal supporter of veterans, have submitted a bill requiring the flying of flags honoring prisoners of war and those missing in action. Another bill filed for consideration would allow the marketing of insurance for Alzheimer's disease. State law now prohibits the sale of insurance for specified diseases. Rep. Richard D. Tulisano, D-

Connecticut In Brief

Milford man receives new heart
NEW HAVEN — A 56-year-old Milford man was in critical but stable condition following heart transplant surgery at Yale-New Haven Hospital, officials said. Raymond Mercier, who had been suffering from cardiomyopathy, a degenerative heart disease, received the heart Sunday from an eastern Massachusetts donor in a 6 1/2-hour operation that concluded at about 11 a.m., hospital spokesman Tom Urtz said. The transplant, performed by surgeon John Elefteriades and three assistants, was the eighth at Yale-New Haven since the hospital began performing the surgery in November 1984 and first since October, Urtz said.

Police await autopsy on train victim
STONINGTON — Police are awaiting the results of an autopsy to determine the identity of a man who was struck and killed by an Amtrak train. Police said the white man, believed to be between the ages of 20 and 35, was struck by the train at about 6:18 a.m. Sunday by a northbound train in the Pawcatuck section of Stonington. The body was dragged along the tracks for 141 feet by the train, which had been slowing for a scheduled stop in Westerly, R.I. An Amtrak police officer estimated the train was traveling at 60 miles per hour when the accident occurred. Police appealed for the public's help in identifying the victim, who had curly, brown, shoulder-length hair, and was wearing a plaid shirt, jeans, sneakers, and a maroon, imitation leather jacket. The body was removed to the office of the state medical examiner in Farmington for an autopsy.

UConn cop hurt when horses flee
STORRS — A University of Connecticut police officer and 14 horses were injured when the animals got out of their stalls at a campus stable, authorities said. Lt. Donn Herindson of the university police department said the stalls were opened early Friday morning and the horses got blocked into a section of the stable with a 16-foot wide aluminum door. The horses kicked through the door and several were badly cut. Herindson said. Officer Darlene Laurin was injured when she was pinned against a door, but she was not hospitalized, police said.

Milford raids net drugs, suspects
MILFORD — Ten people were arrested and nearly $100,000 worth of illegal drugs were seized during weekend raids, police said. Officer Art Godbout said Saturday that police executed two search warrants in Milford and another in Shelton, confiscating about seven ounces of cocaine, more than two pounds of marijuana, approximately $14,000 in cash and several guns, including a semi-automatic assault rifle. Godbout said the drugs seized included crack, a highly potent cocaine derivative, that was already packaged and street-ready.

Bridgeport artist makes calendar
BRIDGEPORT — Edna Meyer names her own harsh art critic in a single word: "Me." Meyer, a client at the Kennedy Center for mentally or emotionally disabled teenagers and adults, acknowledges with pride, however, that a painting of hers made the cover of People's Bank's corporate calendar for 1987. "I was pretty pleased," she said recently in an interview at the center. "I've been in art for quite a while." Meyer's picture, chosen from among numerous entries, envisions the bank's new headquarters planned for downtown Bridgeport. It is like the work of some of the other participants in the center's art therapy program: "Vibrant in color... fairly representational, fairly abstract, but not stiff," says Pat Blossom of G W S Gallery in Fairfield.

Company gives seniors gift of gab
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Anna Palance placed a teary call to her hometown of Kalbidorf, Germany, while her husband, Phillip, phoned family members in Italy. Margarita Valdespines called Spain, Argentina and Miami, but failed to reach relatives in Havana, Cuba. These senior citizens were among about 200 from the Hartford area treated Saturday to an hour of free phone calls by Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc. in the company's offices. Nelson Cyr, an assistant vice president for Merrill Lynch, said 1986 was the third year the company sponsored the free telephone calls. The phone bill was expected to be between $5,000 and $10,000. Palance had to borrow a box of tissues when she called her brother in their German birthplace.

City vigil highlights homeless

NEW HAVEN (AP) — About 60 people remembered the plight of homeless people Sunday with a candlelight vigil at a park bench where a man was found dead earlier this month. "We want to increase awareness, especially during the holiday season," said Cynthia DeLouise, who runs the Columbus House shelter in New Haven. She said there are about 4,000 homeless people in Connecticut. Columbus House, the Downtown Cooperative Ministry and the Connecticut Coalition for the Homeless sponsored the vigil, which started with a service in the Trinity Episcopal Church. The group, braving freezing temperatures, then carried candles a short distance to the wooden bench on the green. On Dec. 3, a homeless man identified by police as Howard Snedeker was found dead on the bench. An autopsy showed that he died of natural causes. He was the second homeless person to die on the green this year. Another homeless man, 34-year-old Jose Nieves, burned to death Nov. 19 in a makeshift home in Hartford's Pope Park.

Library aids parents' choice of toys

FARMINGTON — Nancy DeSalvo is knee-deep in kids and toys at the Farmington Library most of the year. As a children's librarian, DeSalvo helped pioneer in Connecticut the idea that toys can be just as important as books in the development of young minds, librarians around the state say. Unfortunately, many parents are reluctant to buy the wrong toys for their children by flashing television ads, says DeSalvo, who became something of a celebrity when she organized Farmington's television turnoff two years ago. "Americans buy a lot of junk and I think it's mostly because of television," DeSalvo said a few days ago as she surveyed the Farmington Library's children's room, where the books compete for space with hundreds of plastic ziplock bags of toys. Against one wall is an enormous, two-story playhouse where children can test the toys they want to borrow. In the 1970s, the Farmington Library and the Fairfield Public Library became the first in the state to add toys to their collections, said Faith H. Hektoen, a consultant with the state library and editor of "Toys to Go," a brochure about toy libraries in Connecticut. Now, about half of all libraries in the state with children's collections lend toys, Hektoen said. And a growing number of libraries nationwide have added toys to their collections, said Judith Iacuzzi, president of the U.S. Toy Library Association in Deerfield, Mich. She doesn't include war toys in the library's collection, but rejects the contention by some that soldier dolls and toy guns turn children into little war-mongers. She began using toys in story hours in 1969 after she returned to work from raising her own six children. It wasn't until 1975 that the library included money in its budget to buy toys to circulate. DeSalvo now has an annual budget of $2,000 for toys, compared to the $18,000 she gets for new children's books. Among her favorite toys for children under 3 are Fischerform's a crawling mirror, which gives the child an image of himself as he pushes the little cart along the floor, and Ambi Toys' rock 'n' roll.

Towns take on dirty job of trying to trace landfill trash

NEW HAVEN (AP) — It's a dirty job, but some towns have to do it. Connecticut municipalities with landfills are battling to keep out-of-town garbage from filling up their dumps. Officials in some towns have resorted to trailing trucks, sorting through garbage by hand to determine where it came from, and arresting haulers who violate ordinances barring out-of-town trash. In some cases, haulers are required to sign statements that the trash came from the town in which the dump is located. If municipal officials find out otherwise, they can use the statements as evidence in court. Towns that do not charge haulers every time they dump a load but only once a year and those with low dumping fees face the worst onslaught of trash from outside their boundaries, officials say. "I've been staked out there at 2 a.m., and just followed them," said one local official, who spoke on the condition he not be named. He didn't want haulers to find out power of the law behind workers who turn away haulers. Hamden residents have complained that trash from other communities has shortened the lifespan of their landfill. It was expected to last until 1988, but now officials say it will reach capacity in eight weeks or less. Hamden Mayor John DeNicola Jr. said a new waste ordinance is now being drafted in attempts to keep out the out-of-towners. Last year, New Haven put more punch into regulations against out-of-town trash, putting the

Desire for peace fuels couple's bond

MILFORD — Romance sparked for Howard and Alice Frazier during a yoga lesson, as she taught him how to stand on his head. Their relationship has been fostered since by a mutual commitment to peace. The Fraziers are co-directors of Promoting Enduring Peace, based in a seaside house in the Woodmont section of Milford. They organized a very successful goodwill trip known as the Mississippi Peace Cruise last summer, where 47 Soviets met thousands of Americans. "We've been doing everything we can to improve relationships between the two countries," Howard Frazier said recently. Acting through their organization, the Fraziers foster people-to-people contact between nations and act as a clearinghouse for articles on the peace movement and weaponry. Once a year Promoting Enduring Peace hands out its Gandhi Peace Award, whose recipients include Eleanor Roosevelt, Linus Pauling and Dr. Helen Caldicott.

HOWARD FRAZIER, 75, spent years in government and consumer affairs and Alice Frazier, 65, was a school psychologist before they met in the early 1970s at a yoga camp. They married in 1974, and a week before Howard was to become executive director of Promoting Enduring Peace, Alice eventually became the co-director of the group with her husband. The organization was founded by the late Jerome Davis in 1952, a time of high suspicion of communists in America. Davis, a professor of social ethics at the Yale Divinity School, viewed Promoting Enduring Peace as an educational organization that, in part, would help counter the communist-hunting of Sen. Joseph McCarthy, said Mrs. Frazier. Part of the organization's functions is the republishing and mailing of articles discussing peace. The Fraziers estimated the organization mails about 1 million copies of such articles a year. For years, the Fraziers have escorted Americans to the Soviet Union to meet with Soviet citizens. About five years ago, Soviet and American citizens began cruising together down the Volga River in the Soviet Union, often holding

Peer counseling plan based on trust

WEST HAVEN (AP) — Since Mercutio advised Romeo about his love life, teenagers have gone to other teenagers with their problems. Now Notre Dame Catholic High School is taking advantage of that affinity with a peer counseling program. If students are worried about grades, girls or parents, "the first person they'll talk to is someone they can trust," said Maceo Cleaver, 17, of New Haven. "We're all going through the same things at the same time." Cleaver is one of 43 seniors who are counselors in the program. The all-boy Roman Catholic high school is taking advantage of that affinity with a peer counseling program. Patrick J. Cliford, a professional school counselor, designed the program with Brother Gregory Ryan, former director of the campus ministry. It began in the 1981-82 school year. Through a four-day summer training session held at a retreat center, Cliford said, training emphasizes good listening skills and provides tips on how to lead small group discussions and public speaking. A crucial part of the program is adult support and guidance for the counselors, Cliford said. A peer counselor is expected to be open to any student who approaches him or her regularly with groups of six to eight freshmen. The counselors also help teach freshmen classes on self-image and adjustment to school. Cliford and Ryan wrote a guidebook on setting up a peer counseling program and have sold 500 copies since May. Joseph Veletz, 17, of New Haven says there is satisfaction in helping others.

UConn center aids treatment of colds

STORRS — Student, beat thyself. That's the approach the University of Connecticut is taking as it battles the common cold. The university's self-care center, created last March, helps students diagnose and treat their colds without having to see a doctor. "It's probably more fun checking on your own," said Molly Kane, a senior from Middletown. "You get your own mirror and you can check your tonsils and your mucus." Sandy Figottien, the school's health education coordinator, said the program was set up in response to too many people waiting to see a doctor at UConn's acute care center. "And it's saving the sanity of a lot of people," she added. There are some 20,000 students on the Storrs campus who are served by four medical teams, each made up of one physician and two nurse practitioners. "We needed to see people with injuries, not colds," Figottien said. In the spring, Figottien joined with Diane Gagne, the coordinator of the acute care unit, and Joe Racicot, the school pharmacist, to streamline an existing but ineffective cold self-care program. "The old program consisted of Xeroxed information posted on a wall next to a triage (unit)," she said. "That was the problem. It was next to triage and instead of reading the information, they'd say, 'Well I'll just go ask the nurses.'"

Leaders can learn from firefighters

Town and Eighth District firefighters who are meeting informally in an effort to smooth the relationship between the departments deserve the community's thanks.

They may succeed with their low-key approach, in eradicating some of the lesser conflicts that divide the town and work against the interests of its citizens. More important, they may set an example of cooperation for those in higher authority who must resolve major policy problems before Manchester can become the unified community it always should have been.

It has often been said that if matters of dispute between the Eighth District and the town were left to firefighters, with politicians staying out of it, everything would be solved.

That, of course, is a naive oversimplification.

The conflicts involve broad policy decisions that have to be made by elected officials who are charged with representing diverse community constituencies. Differences over fire protection cannot be talked out of existence by a handful of firefighters, no matter how well-intentioned. Nor, quite obviously, can those about sewer service in northern Manchester.

Basically, firefighters on both sides of town have always had a simple unifying common interest that transcended their differences.

Their primary concern is with providing fire protection and serving the public. Over the years they have generally done that quite well.

For elected officials of the two governments, the situation is more complicated, involving services to groups with conflicting interests and separate pocket-books as well as a common one.

Over the years they have not handled their differences well, and egos have too often gotten in the way.

Commenting last week on the firefighter-to-firefighter talks, one participant said that all were "tired of the conflict and the fighting."

Almost everyone in Manchester feels the same way.

While the firefighter-turned-diplomats can't solve all town-district problems, it's worth hoping they can at least show the way.

...And to assist the independent counsel, we hope to get VANNA WHITE!

Antenna invasion scares country folk

NEW BERN, N.C. — There are a parcel of extraordinary rumors attached to the 299-foot radio antenna that has recently been erected in an otherwise bucolic pasture, hard by an irregular row of manufactured homes on the northern fringe of this tucked-away tidewater community.

Some people think the antenna keeps account of the drug traffic along the lower reaches of the Atlantic seaboard. Others believe it has something to do with the new tax laws. A few even say the apparatus has been built to receive European television programming. Old World cable, don't you know?

The truth of the matter, however, is stranger than the fiction. The antenna in fact is a kind of doomsday tower. It has been planted in the field by the U.S. Air Force — and, dead as a doornail, it is intended to help the military fight, win and survive a protracted thermo-nuclear war.

What's more, the antenna doesn't stand alone in this regard. The Air Force is constructing scores of the towers around the country. They are in the aggregate called the Ground Wave Energy Network, or GWEN, and they are designed to keep America communicating in the event the bombs start to fall.

RICHARD McCLUSKEY is the government officer in charge of explaining the system. He works out of the public relations office at Hanscom Air Force Base in Massachusetts. He says communication is the heartbeat of successful combat, and it would be particularly important in atomic combat.

McCluskey says the fact is that ordinary communications might be destroyed in a nuclear war. It could happen, for example, after a series of atmospheric detonations. Those kinds of explosions would generate electro-magnetic impulses, which, in turn, might knock out customary message networks.

So GWEN has been conceived as a backup

Dole walks a fine line

By Evans Witt

WASHINGTON — If the last few weeks are any guide, Bob Dole won't just be sliding quietly into the background as he moves from the prominent slot of Senate majority leader into the minority leader's job early next year.

The Kansas Republican seems to be everywhere since the Iran-contra affair has exploded.

Time and again, Dole has taken the lead. Calling for a special session of Congress, pushing to get a special congressional committee operating, pressing President Reagan to call in aides and pump them to get on top of the controversy.

This activism has made Dole a familiar face on the evening news and a frequent source of quotes in news accounts. Sunday after Sunday, Dole has been one of the network talk shows, all but guaranteeing he will be featured prominently in Monday's newspapers.

THIS HIGH PROFILE is not what one would have predicted less than two months ago. Dole was, in one sense, a casualty of the Republicans' stunning loss of the Senate in the Nov. 4 elections. No longer will he be majority leader, shaping the flow of Senate business and being the point man for the Reagan administration on Capitol Hill.

When the new Congress convenes in January, Dole will only be the minority leader. That's a powerful role, to be sure, but far less so than that of majority leader. And the focus of the television cameras in the Senate chamber will swing over to the other side of the aisle, as the question becomes what will the Democrats do with control of Congress after six years of Republican rule.

Such a lowered profile could spell trouble for Dole's presidential hopes, which need a high public profile through 1987 to get ready for 1988.

Dole's leadership role among Republicans in the Iran-contra scandal reclaimed, at least temporarily, great visibility for the politician from Kansas. The voters knowing your name and face is a plus when they enter the booth to pull the levers in the 1988 presidential primaries.

But Dole is not just visible — he is taking the lead.

"HE HAS WON A lot of friends around the country," said GOP political consultant Paul Wilson, who has worked for a variety of Republican candidates.

Dole has walked a careful line. He has not — as several other Republicans have — called for the resignation of White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan, CIA Director William Casey or Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

"We ought to circle the wagons. Maybe a couple would go over the cliff. And there have been two over the cliff," Dole said on Nov. 30, system, McCluskey says that when it's completed it will be all but immune to total destruction. The network is secured by ground-hugging radio wave frequencies (150 to 175 kHz) that are not affected by electro-magnetic buffering, and it's also not particularly redundant.

McCluskey says construction of the system began in 1984, without much public notice. And the program remains largely unknown. He says the network has cost $136 million thus far, and consists of three principal components: There are receiving stations, input-out stations and tower relay nodes.

THE TOWER RELAY NODES are most important. And they are represented by the structures in the New Bern pasture. They occupy 700-by-700 foot areas, leased from private owners in many cases; they operate with commercial or diesel-generated electricity, and they produce 2,000 to 3,000 watts of broadcast power.

McCluskey says the doomsday towers will eventually be placed at 150-to-200-mile intervals throughout the country. And here is where the redundancy comes in. If one or more of the towers were destroyed in a war, a likely event, communications could be rerouted by theoretically being rerouted through the rest of the lot.

The Air Force thinks the system is happily ingenious. There are critics, however, who wonder

Asian bolts falling apart under stress

WASHINGTON — Many of the millions of steel bolts that hold America's bridges and skyscrapers together may be dangerously brittle or stretching loose because they are counterfeit bolts made by Asian manufacturers.

The counterfeits are substandard steel and alloy bolts made to look like the genuine article, right down to the head markings used by the industry to identify the various grades. Engineers and federal investigators have discovered several cases of below-par bolts in construction projects across the country since the scam was discovered last summer.

The workhorse of industrial fasteners is the A325, a high-quality bolt that has been counterfeited by factories in Japan, Taiwan and South Korea. Our associate Stewart Harris has documented four instances of substandard A325s:

- Imported bolts on a highway guard rail broke when a car slammed into it, according to Bill Windt, president of Texas Bolt, a Houston company that is one of the largest domestic manufacturers of A325s. Testing in Texas Bolt's laboratory found that the imported bolts weakened considerably when dipped into molten galvanizing solution — a standard weatherproofing process that involves subjecting the bolts to temperatures of 840 degrees to 860 degrees. The dipping will turn a bogus low-carbon boron bolt brittle on the outside and soft on the inside, and it'll stretch and break under stress.
- "That guard rail should have pushed the car off," Windt said. "With counterfeit bolts, it just went right through."
- A drawbridge on PGA Boulevard over the Intercoastal Waterway in West Palm Beach, Fla., began emitting strange noises when it was raised and lowered. In tests of two bolts on the 7-year-old bridge, one was found to contain only about half as much carbon as required by the industry standard. State officials are testing additional bolts on the bridge and a 6-month-old building nearby will also be examined.
- A Texas company building an offshore oil rig in Japan had to replace Japanese-made A325s that failed during a test erection of the platform. Donald Branham, president of the company, told Engineering News Record the bolts were replaced with American-made A325s.
- About 4,000 bolts on a steel-framed garage being built for the town of Beachwood, Ohio, had to be replaced because they were stretching when workers tightened them to specifications. Laboratory tests showed that four out of five bolts failed to meet the tensile-strength standard for A325s.

The reason for making inferior steel bolts is to cut costs. Not only is the harder bolt expensive, but the wear and tear on the manufacturer's machine tools is obviously less severe when they're cutting softer steel. In addition, the tempering process for lower-quality bolts costs less.

By cheating on materials, Asian counterfeiters can sell their fake A325 bolts for about 35 cents a pound; American firms must charge from 55 to 58 cents a pound. The labor cost differential is not significant, Windt said, because the industry is mostly automated.

Competition from Asian counterfeiters has forced many U.S. bolt makers and distributors out of business. Those that have managed to survive are hoping for a federal regulatory crackdown on the substandard imports.

Last summer, Tommy Grant, a Houston-based distributor, and the Industrial Fastener Institute in Cleveland alerted federal officials to the presence of counterfeit bolts in government supply channels. Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., has been investigating the dangerous fraud, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is checking power plants for counterfeit bolts that could fail under high heat or stress.

referred to national security adviser John Poindexter and NSC aide Oliver North, both now off the White House payroll.

But there is a potential problem for Dole has been "too far out in front, too eager to make news over the corpse of a popular president," said John Buckley, an aide to Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., another presidential hopeful.

And White House Communications Director Patrick J. Buchanan tossed a blast at Republican leaders on Dec. 8, even though he did not mention Dole by name.

"With a few honorable exceptions — J. Strom Thurmond and Ted Stevens come to mind — the whole damn pack has headed for the tall grass," Buchanan wrote in a column for the Washington Post.

IT IS EASY to see how Dole's constant public statements for more disclosure and more presidential action could generate resentment among Reagan loyalists who want Republicans to back the president without question. Such resentment could be an obstacle for Dole as he tries to win the hearts, minds and votes of Republicans in the 1988 primaries.

Dole rejects such criticism. "I've been supporting the president since he was elected," he said on Dec. 14.

head winds would erase the gains.

"The fuel looks all right, even with the headwinds, even if we push the power up," said mission spokesman Peter Riva. "It looks like we have enough fuel when we get back to go on toward halfway across the Pacific Ocean today as its weary crew members, bruised and buffeted by turbulence, headed for early completion of their historic unrefueled global flight."

The landing initially had been expected Wednesday afternoon, but beneficial tail winds advanced the schedule even as flight planners worried about erratic fuel consumption estimates and fears that

Suspects arrested after racial attack

NEW YORK (AP) — Arrests have been made in connection with the attack on three blacks stranded in a predominantly white neighborhood that ended when one of the blacks was fatally struck by a car, police said today.

The number and nature of the arrests was not divulged in the brief announcement this morning by police spokesman Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell.

Fearful of other incidents in the neighborhood in the wake of the Saturday morning attack, police officials had assigned extra officers to patrol the area. And a priest condemned racism to parishioners attending Mass the Sunday before Christmas.

"We want to make sure nobody causes any more trouble," police Inspector Frank Wallace said of the stepped-up patrols in the Howard Beach section of Queens where Michael Griffith, 22, was killed as he and his companions fled their assailants.

Griffith and two other men were attacked early Saturday as they left a pizzeria where they had stopped after their car broke down on the Belt Parkway, police said. Griffith was hit by a car as he tried to run across the parkway.

The gang fled, and no charges were filed against the driver.

At Our Lady of Grace Roman Catholic Church, the Rev. Kenneth Leona spoke sharply against racism and violence in his Sunday sermon.

"Racial prejudice is a sin. Discrimination is a sin. Violence and hatred are sins. And all the beautiful Christmas lights of our neighborhood cannot hide that type of darkness," Leona said.

"The reality of sin and evil has shown forth in our own neighborhood," he added. "But there is more to our neighborhood than that, and we must show that more."

The Rev. Herbert Daughtry, leader of the African People's Christian Organization, called on Mayor Edward I. Koch to form a task force to study bigotry in the city and propose policies and

Church blaze

Sparks fly from the windows of the former St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church in Buffalo, N.Y., over the weekend as a fire of unknown origin destroyed the 137-year-old structure. The main steeple of the church had fallen to the ground only minutes earlier. The church was closed in 1981 and has since been sold.

Voyager wings through turbulence, expected back Tuesday

Chief meteorologist Len Snellman said the 15-knot headwinds, the first significant headwinds of the journey, were expected all the way up the Pacific coast, but the turbulent air was a more immediate concern.

"The problem is that they are moderate to severely fatigued," Snellman told ABC television today, "and so we may keep them high with higher headwinds so that they will have less turbulence."

The alternative was to fly at lower altitudes, with less headwind but more turbulence. "Just talking to Dick (Rutan), he said, 'I don't want any more turbulence.' But he's going to have to suffer some," Snellman said.

"This was partly expected, but we were hoping Mother Nature would give us a little better deal than we have right now," the meteorologist said.

"It looks like Voyager will take about another roughly 30 hours to get home and we have roughly 60 hours of fuel on board, so fuel is not the problem," Snellman said.

Rutan, 48, was at the controls early today after resting for several hours while Yeager, 34, flew the plane.

"Voyager's exact position won't be disclosed for the remainder of the flight because support crews want to discourage curious pilots from flying near the experimental craft," said project spokesman Bob Brubaker.

"From the performance standpoint, a head wind is just murder," said Rutan, 43, designer of the Voyager and brother of Dick Rutan. A day of head wind will "wipe out

Chad rebels repel Libyan attack

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — Former Chad rebel forces allied with the government have repelled a tank-led Libyan offensive in northern Chad, killing about 400 enemy soldiers, officials said.

In Tripoli, Libyan leader Col. Muammar Gadhafi said today his country would counter with "all its strength" any threat to its southern border by French- and U.S.-backed forces in Chad.

Libyan forces launched the offensive Saturday against three strongholds of forces loyal to Goukouni Oueddei who, until two months ago, was allied with Libya in an effort to overthrow Chad's government under President Hissene Habre.

Western intelligence sources in the capital of N'Djamena confirmed Sunday that the Libyans suffered a severe setback.

The Chad government said in a statement that 400 Libyan troops were killed in an attack on Bardai, the administrative center of the Tibesti region and once the capital of Goukouni's rebel "government." The statement said one rebel was killed and three were wounded.

The intelligence sources, who insisted on anonymity, said the Libyans were badly hurt at Bardai, their attack hindered by a sand storm that limited use of Libyan air power.

The government said Goukouni's forces resisted Libyan troops at two other outposts, Wour and Zouar. The intelligence sources said, however, that the Chadians had staged a "tactical retreat" into surrounding mountains.

The Libyans are believed to have

Philippine Cabinet OKs peace talk plan

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The cabinet today approved a series of proposals for a new round of peace talks with Communist rebels, including amnesty and rural development programs. But rebel spokesman said land reform and U.S. relations will be the toughest issues.

A 60-day cease-fire between the government and Communist New People's Army took effect Dec. 10, the first in the 17-year "insurgency" quelled by President Ferdinand Marcos in a new broadcast from Hawaiian exile, today denounced the cease-fire and accused President Corason Aquino of having "sold out to the communists."

Government negotiator Teofisto Guingona reiterated today that the government was not willing to share power with the rebels.

He said a draft constitution that goes before the voters Feb. 2 is not enough to accommodate rebel demands such as land reform and noted that former rebels are free to run for office absent a series of goals from the National Assembly.

Guerrilla leaders have said the talks, which resume Tuesday, must produce a means of accommodating groups now outside the government.

"They have accused the government of trying to bribe them with offers of amnesty instead of addressing the social and economic problems that triggered the insurgency."

"They have accused the government of trying to bribe them with offers of amnesty instead of addressing the social and economic problems that triggered the insurgency."

Antonio Zume of the Communist National Democratic Front, which has represented the rebels in peace talks, said land reform and national sovereignty would be the major issues. He did not elaborate.

In speaking of national sovereignty, the rebels are referring to U.S. military bases in the Philippines that they want closed and U.S. troops to leave the country.

Prospects for a negotiated peace have worsened, partly because Aquino has called on soldiers to prepare for war if the talks fail.

In his taped speech broadcast by a private radio station, Marcos said "As far as I can see, Madame Aquino has sold out to the Communists."

"They (government officials) face a fiasco," he said. "The cease-fire may have collapsed already."

Marcos has lived in Hawaii since February when he was ousted by military-civilian revolt that swept Aquino into office. He has said he wants to return to the Philippines for Christmas, but the government says it will not permit him to return.

Armed forces Chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said today he has received reports of 25 possible cease-fire violations by the rebels, but he determined that the New People's Army was not involved in at least three of the incidents.

A national committee monitoring the cease-fire so far has not labeled any incident a truce violation.

In another development, the country's largest labor movement pledged Sunday to campaign against the proposed new constitution.

The leftist Mayist Movement, which claims more than half a million members, also said it would end a self-imposed policy of restraint in calling strikes to defend workers' rights.

The union previously said it would back the proposed constitution. But the group's newly elected chairman, Crispin Beltran, said the document is not in the interest of workers. He also expressed concern over what he called the government's "irreversible drift to the right."

Aquino abolished the old constitution shortly after taking office and dissolved the National Assembly that had been dominated by Marcos' party. She has said a new assembly will be elected next year.

Uruguay approves amnesty plan

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay — The House of Deputies today overwhelmingly approved an amnesty plan for soldiers accused of human rights violations during the 1973-85 military rule. The vote came after a brawl-marred all-night debate. One legislator reportedly suffered a heart attack and was hospitalized after being attacked during violent street protests against the proposed amnesty. The Senate approved the amnesty Sunday, and the House's 60-37 vote averted a showdown between the powerful armed forces and the elected government of President Julio Sanguinetti.

Lava from Hawaii volcano stops

KALAPANA, Hawaii — Residents offered prayers at a Catholic church and a gift to the Hawaiian goddess of volcanoes after lava from Mount Kilauea stopped its destructive advance through this seaside village. After destroying 15 homes since Friday — bringing the total to 28 — the flow of molten rock slowed to a virtual stop over the weekend and began to cool, and civil defense officials considered lifting an evacuation order today. Some of the more than 4000 residents were allowed to cross police roadblocks Sunday to retrieve valuables from their homes or to attend Mass at Star of the Sea Catholic Church, which stands in the path the lava had been expected to take.

Sakharov says he'll speak his mind

MOSCOW — Andrei Sakharov said he generally won't give interviews when he returns to Moscow this week after nearly seven years in internal exile, but stressed he has not been muzzled by officials and will always speak his mind. "There are no conditions" on his return to Moscow, Sakharov told The Associated Press in a brief telephone interview Sunday from Gorky, a city 250 miles east of Moscow that is closed to foreigners. He said he and his wife, fellow dissident Yelena Bonner, would return to the capital by train Tuesday. Soviet authorities announced Friday that Sakharov's exile was lifted and that Mrs. Bonner's conviction on anti-Soviet slander charges and five-year banishment were set aside. Authorities have not said why. Sakharov, 65, told the AP that he did not know why his exile was ended. Asked if he would meet with a small group of reporters upon his return to Moscow, he replied, "I won't in general give interviews, with any kind of group." The physicist and 1975 Nobel Peace Prize winner said the decision was his, and gave no indication how long he would maintain that policy.

Hall says he joined 'foreign legion'

NEW YORK — An American held as a spy in Nicaragua says he belonged to a counterintelligence "American foreign legion" formed after a meeting at the Pentagon and backed by industry. In an interview broadcast Sunday on CBS News' "60 Minutes" program, Sam Hall said the "Phoenix Battalion" was formed in 1984 and once numbered 540, but later disbanded, leaving him as the only remaining member. "It was started by being invited to the Pentagon" on Nov. 28, 1984, said Hall. He would not say who invited him. "That name I will give behind locked doors at a congressional hearing." Hall said he knows of no connection between the group and the CIA or National Security Council. Congress is investigating whether officials of those agencies violated any laws in aiding the Contra rebels in Nicaragua. A spokesman at the Pentagon, Maj. Greg McGuckin, said, "Hall and his claims have nothing to do with us. It's really a State Department matter, anything Hall might have to say." State Department spokeswoman Sandra McCarty said, "I don't know anything about any meeting like that."

Aronson hit West German stores

HAMBURG, West Germany — Acid-filled bottles left by arsonists exploded Sunday night in Hamburg retail stores, causing millions of dollars damage but no injuries, police said. A bomb blast Sunday night outside the Friedrich Ebert Foundation building near Bonn shattered windows and caused serious damage but no injuries, police said. The foundation is linked to the Social Democratic Party. There were no claims of responsibility for the attacks. Hamburg police spokesman Reinhard Siedler said investigators suspected the arson attacks were linked to a protest by some 10,000 people against the eviction of tenants from public housing scheduled to be torn down for a road-building project. Ninety-three policemen and 31 demonstrators were injured in the fighting and there were four arrests. The acid-filled bottles exploded in six retail outlets, including a supermarket, furniture store and clothing boutique, which were closed and unoccupied, according to Siedler.

'Slashed model' decries label

NEW YORK — A 25-year-old model whose former landlord was convicted of hiring two men to slash her face with razors says the worst thing about her ordeal is the label "slashed model." Steven Roth, 28, was convicted Saturday of assault in the June 5 attack that left Maria Hanson with 15 facial cuts requiring about 150 stitches. He is jailed on $250,000 bond, and faces up to 15 years in prison. Sentencing was set for Jan. 27. Hanson said she is relieved that Roth's trial is over, "but yet I have two more trials to go through and I'm not looking forward to it." Steven Bowman, 27, described by Roth as his homosexual lover, and Darren Norman, 20, have been charged as the men Roth hired to cut Miss Hanson's face. Their trials are to begin next month. Hanson testified at Roth's trial that she angered him when she told him she wanted her $850 deposit back from an apartment she had rented from him. She said she also resented her refusal to go out with him. "I'm trying to focus on the fact that I'm really lucky to be walking around and lucky that I can resume my career," Hanson said during a news conference Sunday. "I think the worst thing is being labeled 'the slashed model,' or 'the victim.'"

Country faces major health problem

WASHINGTON — While the nation is on the way to meeting about half of its 1990 goals for better health, targets for reducing infant mortality and teen-age pregnancy will likely be missed, the Public Health Service says. In a review of progress toward meeting the agency's 226 objectives for 1990, the agency projected that the nation probably will meet 110 of the goals — including improved public awareness about high blood pressure, smoking and alcohol abuse. "We can be extremely pleased at the high level of public awareness about lifestyle factors and their contribution to health," Dr. Robert E. Windom, assistant health secretary, wrote in the preface to the 233-page report titled "The 1990 Health Objectives for the Nation: A Midcourse Review."

Fighting to delay envoy's Beirut trip

LONDON (AP) — Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite said fighting around the Lebanese capital likely would prevent him from returning at Christmas to resume negotiations for the release of American hostages. "Ideally, I would like to be there over Christmas because these Islamic groups know how they feel about their religious festivals and they recognize the importance of Christmas for us. It leads to a bit more flexibility," Waite said Sunday. "All the hostages in Beirut must be feeling pretty dreadful, especially at Christmas. It would be nice to be there to maintain their hopes," he said. But the Anglican layman, who is an aide to Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, said it was unlikely he would be able to arrange the visit in time because of the lack of security in Beirut. "I spoke to a friend who returned from Beirut yesterday and he said it was literally carnage in some of the refugee camps," he said. "It's very dangerous there at the moment."

Waite, 47, has made numerous trips to Beirut and other Middle East capitals since 1985 in efforts to win freedom for Americans and other foreigners held hostage by underground Lebanese groups. Two Americans were released this year by the group calling itself Islamic Jihad, and Waite was believed to have played a role. Six Americans remain missing in Lebanon. Last year, Waite left Beirut on Christmas Eve, saying his negotiations with the kidnappers had suffered a setback and his life was perhaps in danger. He said Sunday that the main security problem this year centered on transportation. Waite previously has used U.S. military transport and facilities. But he came under strong criticism when a former U.S. State Department official said the Anglican envoy met several times with Lt. Col. Oliver North, the National Security Council official who was fired for allegedly diverting funds from the sale of U.S. arms to Iran to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua. Waite has refused to comment on whether he met North, but has said his efforts to free the hostages have been complicated by the Iran-Contra scandal. He insists his work "has been, and will continue to be, independent of any government."

TERRY WAITE "very dangerous"

7 years after mishap, fate of TMI uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) — In about two years, the $1 billion cleanup of the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident is due to end. Now, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission finds itself an arbiter in a dispute over what happens to the crippled, contaminated Three Mile Island reactor after that. As in so many other areas involving the March 1979 accident, the NRC is walking on uncharted ground. "The accident was a unique event and the cleanup is unique," said spokesman William Travers. "It's been a feel-your-way process in a number of respects." The volatile issue of what to do with the infamous Unit 2 in the middle of Pennsylvania's Susquehanna River surfaced on Dec. 3 when reactor officials announced plans to put the facility in storage indefinitely, probably at the end of 1988. The reactor building would be locked up and unneeded systems deactivated. The plant would sit for perhaps 30 years, its radiation decaying. To members of the anti-nuclear Three Mile Island Alert, the announcement of the "unretired storage" phase signified that the cleanup was stopping before the job was really complete. The group argued that at the time storage begins the reactor building basement may not be completely decontaminated, and uranium will be left in the plant. The group also is demanding more details of the plan: How many utility staff members will monitor the sleeping giant? How long will the dormant phase last? GPU Nuclear Corp., the plant operator, has said such questions are premature.

Chinese prison inmates get long terms, hard work, hope

By Jim Abrams
The Associated Press

PEKING — No bars are on the windows and there are no cells, but the Peking City No. 1 Prison has no heat for these winter nights when the temperature falls to 10 degrees. It seems to symbolize the Chinese prison system where, officials say, inmates are given hope as well as a heavy dose of regimentation and austerity.

"Reform your thinking for a bright future," says one of the numerous red banners hanging on the walls that enclose convicted murderers, thieves and rapists.

The 1,950 inmates at the capital's largest penal institute work long hours, live in clean but cramped quarters and appear to be constantly under guard. Sentences are harsh, and many inmates still have long years to wait before even a chance at parole.

"We're aiming to remodel them, to turn them into new men," Warden Xing Zhongde told a group of foreign reporters invited to take a rare tour of the prison. "We make them realize the harm they have done to society."

The inmates, including 140 women, work eight hours a day, six days a week in unheated workshops, turning out brightly colored stockings and plastic sandals.

Unarmed guards watch closely. At night, the prisoners return to their 9-by-15-foot rooms, each with 12 bunk beds lining the four walls. Several rooms had guitars in them. Others had medallions on the wall for working hard and Chinese-style paintings. The women's cells had mirrors and calendars. Several had small bookshelves with such selections as the works of senior leader Deng Xiaoping and collections of essays on law.

Each cell had hot water pots for making tea and neatly piled blankets, essentials for the winter. Small coal heaters were seen in the corridor of the women's section but there was no heat in any of the rooms. Prisoners were padded cotton uniforms.

The rooms have no toilets or running water. Baths are permitted once a week.

The prisoners receive three meals a day, and looked healthy on a fare that costs the state 22 yuan ($6) a person a month. In the prison kitchen this particular day inmates were making onion bread, to be served with tea, for lunch.

The men receive 2.50 yuan (68 cents) and the women 3.10 yuan (84 cents) a month to buy soap, subjects as calligraphy, painting, music and foreign languages.

Xing said, "Although they are prisoners, they are treated as human beings."

Most of the prisoners were serving time for robbery, larceny, rape and murder.

The average worker in China earns about 100 yuan ($27) a month.

Many prisoners receive monetary bonuses for exemplary work, and prison walls held production charts showing the output of each prisoner.

A few who show particularly good attitudes can win such privileges as trips home for the New Year holiday or private visits with their wives. The large majority are allowed to write one letter home a month and one or two supervised monthly visits from family members.

The recalcitrant can be put in solitary confinement, and in some cases have their sentences extended. But Warden Xing said 12.5 percent each year receive reduced sentences or paroles for good behavior. An inmate sentenced to life in prison can be considered for parole after 10 years.

There were no TV sets in sight, although inmates have a basketball court and a library and are offered about 40 courses in such subjects as calligraphy, painting, music and foreign languages.

Xing said, "Although they are prisoners, they are treated as human beings."

Most of the prisoners were serving time for robbery, larceny, rape and murder.

Inmates at the Peking City No. 1 Prison practice traditional Chinese music during a recent visit by journalists. Prisoners have much time to hone their talents under a prison system where work is hard and sentences are long.

NASA official's departure delayed O-ring investigation

By Laura Tolley
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Erosion of O-rings on space shuttle booster rockets after a 1984 flight prompted former NASA Deputy Administrator Hans Mark to order a review, but he left the agency and the study was delayed more than a year.

Mark said Sunday he requested a review of the "whole seal and joint situation and the due date for that review was May 30, 1984." He resigned from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in April 1984 to become chancellor of the University of Texas system.

The May review "didn't happen as far as I can tell," Mark said in a telephone interview from his Austin home. "There was a review in August of 1985. As far as I can tell that was the first time someone responded to that memo."

Mark said he requested the review because of erosion of the O-rings between joints of the solid fuel booster rockets that was discovered after the 11th flight in April 1984.

"I didn't think it was that serious," Mark said.

Failed rocket seals have been blamed for the Jan. 28 Challenger explosion that killed the seven astronauts aboard.

Mark said he thought the review should have been held earlier, but added he could not blame the accident on the delay. He said the review would have been an exchange of information, and would have not necessarily prevented the explosion.

David Garrett, spokesman for NASA in Washington, said the fact that the O-ring problem was identified in 1984 was covered in the report of the presidential commission that investigated the Challenger disaster.

"This is nothing new," he said Sunday.

The commission's report noted Mark's April 1984 directive for a "formal review of the Solid Rocket Motor case-to-case and case-to-nozzle joint sealing procedures to ensure satisfactory consistent closures."

The commission said NASA headquarters did not have enough evidence of the seal problems to act until summer 1985, and that the evidence only came to the attention of mid-level officials.

Seven months after waters recede, flood victims struggle

By Michael Hirsh
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Nearly seven months later, John Gamble says he still can't believe his brother is gone, swept away by a wall of water that crashed through a normally quiet creekbed.

"I really don't want Christmas to come," said Gamble, 35, of suburban Cheswick. "It's not going to be the same. A big part of my life's gone now."

William Gamble, 27, disappeared May 30 when flash floods raged through two tributaries of the Allegheny River, ripping walls from buildings and tossing cars and bodies in a cataclysm of mud and debris.

The disaster that hit 11 of Pittsburgh's North Hills suburbs killed eight other people and caused up to $25 million in property damage, authorities said.

In an interview, John Gamble said he and other family members, including William's wife and 5-year-old son, are still hoping he'll turn up somewhere. "It's possible he's suffering from amnesia."

"That's what we hope," he said. "We try not to think the worst about it. We want him to come back."

WITNESSES SAW Gamble miss a rope thrown to him as he floundered in the powerful current.

"Knowing what I know about our river, either (he) was washed away into the Mississippi or he was swept up and smothered under water. Or, God forbid, he could be in one of the dumps" where tons of debris ended up, said Joseph Moses, director of the Allegheny County Maintenance Department.

For others like Katherine Price, 78, there are no ifs or maybes. The muddy body of her son, the Rev. John Price, pastor of St. Joseph Roman Catholic Church in nearby O'Hara, was found downstream from his car in Little Pine Creek.

"It was the will of God. I've accepted it," she said.

As a missionary in Peru for more than a decade, he had survived a major flood and a 1970 earthquake that killed thousands.

"The fact that he had lived through major disasters, and came out unscathed, then got in his car one day to go to the store and visit a sick person and never came back... God had plans for him, obviously," said a friend, the Rev. Nicholas Dattilo.

THE DEVASTATING flash floods were blamed on a freak thunderstorm that in several hours drenched the region's steep valleys with about 5 inches of rain, nearly twice the average amount for the entire month of May.

The National Weather Service

issued no warning until half an hour after Pine Creek and Little Pine Creek overflowed their banks and began to flood the streets of Shaler and Etna, cresting within minutes.

"The storm was so localized and so fast that it was impossible for us to pinpoint," Theresa Rossi, a NWS meteorologist, told The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

"We didn't know about any deaths until we heard news reports at 9 o'clock."

The movement of small, concentrated storms cannot be tracked by the weather service's outdated 30-year-old radar system, said John J. Cahir, a meteorology professor at Pennsylvania State University.

A new system that can detect them, called NEXRAD, won't be in place until the early 1990s, according to Michael D. Hudlow, director of the weather service's Office of Hydrology.

But Cahir warns it won't be a panacea, particularly without some kind of national program to educate people in what to do in case of floods.

Jay Butela stands in his back yard recently, pointing out where the water crested on his home in Shaler Township, Pa., in the May flood. Little Pine Creek, shown at its normal low level, turned into a torrent, washing cars and buildings into the area behind Butela and causing over $48,000 worth of damage to his home alone.

disaster aid, but federal officials concluded the damage was not extensive enough.

"It makes me sick," Moses said. "We're not second-class citizens of the United States. They could send aid in the millions each month to Mexico, and here we are and we don't get a cent."

The Federal Emergency Management Agency awarded $7.4 million in aid to homeowners and businesses, but $5.6 million of it was in the form of low-interest loans, said FEMA spokesman Guy Brackett.

John Corney, a spokesman for the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency, said the state has already spent $2.5 million repairing roads, bridges, sewer systems and other essential public properties and expects to authorize an additional $2.3 million.

For cops on Spokane's Odd Squad, arrest is a last resort

By Karen McGrath
The Associated Press

SPokane, Wash. — Officially, it's called the Office of Special Police Problems. Unofficially, they call it the Odd Squad.

Mainly, it's Patrolman Robert Grandinetti, a 20-year veteran of the Spokane Police Department with a face like Fred Flintstone and a personality that's earned him the nickname of "Mr. Glad."

Grandinetti's easygoing nature made him the perfect candidate for the Odd Squad, where he and a partner take care of all of the police calls no one else knows how to handle.

They deal with problems like the woman who had 67 dead cats stored in her freezer, another with 4-foot piles of debris in her home, street kids who defecate in vacant buildings where they sleep, the elderly who are easily exploited out of their life savings, sorry hobos who subsit on occasional meals and cheap wine.

"WE HAVE SITUATIONS where we either deal with them, or we're dealing with their remains," Grandinetti says. "I do what any reasonable person would do. I can't walk away from it. I've got to do something."

The work started in 1974, with a grant from the state Department of Ecology intended to help clean up Spokane for its World Exposition.

Grandinetti became a police officer in September 1966, after deciding he needed to give his family more financial security than was provided by his job playing drums in bars at Stateline, Idaho.

Grandinetti's training includes years on the force and the empathy he gained by watching his father, Carmen, die a painfully slow death years before. Today, Grandinetti believes doctors would say grandfather suffered from Alzheimer's disease.

"I have real compassion because I understand," Grandinetti says. "I know it's real easy to make fun of people who are suffering, but I always think, 'Hey, you could end up like any of them.'"

His current partner is Patrolman D.V. Williams, one of 13 officers who applied to join the Odd Squad last year when the operation fell hopelessly behind in its calls.

Even with Williams's assistance, the squad, which enforces the city's public nuisance ordinance, is 200 to 300 calls behind, Grandinetti says. He and Williams now act on only the most important calls — those in which lives may be in danger.

"We get there and she says she keeps hearing voices coming out of her sink. So I scratch my head a while and then walk over to the sink and bend over and yell, 'Shaddup!' down the drain hole."

Williams and his partner received a call about a woman having problems at her home.

"We get there and she says she keeps hearing voices coming out of her sink. So I scratch my head a while and then walk over to the sink and bend over and yell, 'Shaddup!' down the drain hole."

The woman tells me the voices are gone, but my partner looks at me as if I'm crazy.

Even with Williams's assistance, the squad, which enforces the city's public nuisance ordinance, is 200 to 300 calls behind, Grandinetti says. He and Williams now act on only the most important calls — those in which lives may be in danger.

THE ODD SQUAD'S tiny office, which also serves as a police storage room, has an answering machine. The two officers are rarely there.

Like the rest of city government, the Odd Squad is threatened by 1987 budget cuts. Still, it's a bright spot for a department hit hard recently by scandals ranging from a former female officer's charges of sex discrimination — a suit eventually settled out of court — to a recently fired corporal who kept evidence photos of murder, battered women in his locker.

Social workers in other agencies say eliminating the Odd Squad would leave many people out in the cold.

"Job awaits a lot of problems that could get bigger," says Bob Hanson, an official with the state Department of Social and Health Services. "He's unique in that he's got a real social conscience and compassion for people in addition to, or even greater than, his law-enforcement presence."

The council of the League of Nations held its first public meeting in 1920 at St. James Palace in London.

China protests keep on growing

By Ino Chong
The Associated Press

SHANGHAI, China — Hundreds of students today broke through police lines and headed toward City Hall in the fourth day of pro-democracy marches. Police made no effort to drive them back despite a citywide ban on assemblies.

The students gathered at People's Square, their rallying point for the last four days, and then marched down Nanjing Road toward City Hall, about a mile away.

Many of the students walked behind banners of Shanghai University, Shanghai Drama Institute and Shanghai Arts Institute. Protesters said other students from Jiaotong and Fudan universities, who led weekend demonstrations involving tens of thousands of students, had their banners confiscated and were under tight surveillance as they tried to leave their campuses.

About 15,000 onlookers crowded around the square and on an overhead bridge.

Authorities posted notices today around the city banning assemblies without a permit, and told protesters through loudspeakers that "it is a safety hazard when people gather and criminals may take advantage of the chaotic situation."

Nonetheless, police made no effort to drive them back to People's Square.

Beginning Friday, tens of thousands of students have rallied daily in Shanghai, demanding greater democracy in the largest spontaneous demonstrations in China in a decade.

The government said when the protests began that the students had a constitutional right to demonstrate, but since has sharply rebuked them.

Inquiry that other nations will have to be included in the probe. "This investigation should go wherever we have to go to find the truth," he said.

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, appearing on the CBS program, argued "you're not going to get an answer to this until you get Ollie North in here, because he was the one who ran the whole operation."

Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., said it is "unrealistic" to expect Poindexter and North to give up their rights. "I think we ought to consider the idea of limited immunity... We'll have to decide whether we want prosecution of individuals or whether we want to clear the air," said Cheney, chief of staff for President Ford.

White House pressure on North and Poindexter has increased in recent days, with Bush calling on them to "tell the whole truth" and Nancy Reagan saying they should testify.

Even so, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said in an interview with the New York Times that while the president has tried, he has not done enough to convince the public and his GOP allies that he has done all he could to get to the truth about the arms sales.

Nicholas Brady, the former New Jersey senator who is one of Bush's inner circle of advisers, said the vice president's unofficially declared candidacy remains on course.

and Coventry show a similar decline. In Andover, the average number of people being helped per month dropped from 22 to 19 in Bolton from 10 to nine; and in Coventry from 96 to 84.

In addition, food stamps are available for those who qualify. Beaulieu said a typical family of three receives about $95, although that can range to more than $200 a month.

In January 1986, which is when the last figures were compiled, Beaulieu said 682 Manchester residents were being helped by food stamps, down from 991 in November 1985.

A similar drop occurred in other towns. In Andover, it went from 31 people to 23; in Bolton from 20 to 4; and in Coventry from 122 to 69, she said.

People waiting to receive AFDC assistance, or who do not qualify for it, can receive general assistance from towns in Manchester. It takes the form of vouchers redeemable for food, clothing and shelter, she said.

She said that in November, the town had 72 general assistance cases. The highest it has ever been was 100, Jones said.

"It's gone down considerably from what it's been in the past," she said.

Beyond these programs, there are a variety of privately supported charities that depend upon donated

Texas crash leaves 9 dead

EL CAMPO, Texas (AP) — A station wagon carrying 10 people returning from a funeral veered off a highway and slammed into a semi-trailer parked on the shoulder, killing nine people, including four children, police said today.

The driver and five passengers in the station wagon were pronounced dead at the scene, which occurred just before midnight Sunday on U.S. 59, said Texas Department of Public Safety dispatcher Deron Cherry. The driver declined to be identified. A 4-year-old girl was taken to a hospital in Houston, 58 miles away, where she died early today.

The only survivor, 7-year-old Luis Rodriguez, was in stable condition today at El Campo Memorial Hospital, said a spokesman who declined to be identified. A 4-year-old girl was taken to a hospital in Houston, 58 miles away, where she died early today.

Two other passengers were dead on arrival at El Campo Memorial Hospital, said a spokesman who declined to be identified. A 4-year-old girl was taken to a hospital in Houston, 58 miles away, where she died early today.

Dineen's hat trick gives Whale OT win

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Rangers saw an apparent game-winning slip away in the final seconds of regulation, and then watched Kevin Dineen and the Hartford Whalers win in overtime.

Whaler goalie Steve Weeks handles the puck in a recent game at the Civic Center in Hartford. Weeks was in goal Sunday night as the Whalers, behind Kevin Dineen's overtime goal, topped the New York Rangers, 4-3. Weeks is unbeaten in New York area rinks since being traded to the Whalers.

Playoff picture set — almost

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

The NFL playoff lineup is set. Almost.

With just one game remaining in the regular season, eight of the 10 qualifiers for the race to the Super Bowl are set, including all five in the AFC. Tonight's game in Miami between the defending AFC champion Patriots and Dolphins will determine the other two teams. A New England victory or tie gives the Patriots the AFC East crown, making the New York Jets and Kansas City the wild-card teams. A Miami win knocks the Patriots out and puts Cincinnati at Kansas City for the wild-card game, with the Jets taking the AFC East.

Things became slightly less scrambled Sunday as the Chiefs beat Pittsburgh 24-19 to earn their first playoff spot since 1971, and the Bengals routed the Jets 52-21. Kansas City, by virtue of its conference record, clinched a wild card, something the Jets had done last week, even though they now have lost their last five games.

Cleveland, which romped past San Diego 47-17, took the AFC Central and has the conference's best record at 12-4, giving it the home field advantage throughout the AFC playoffs. Denver, which is a 4-11 loser in Seattle on Saturday, nevertheless is the AFC West winner at 11-5.

The Seahawks, who won their last five games and were the hottest team in the AFC, won't be in the playoffs.

In the NFC, the 49ers clinched the West title on Friday night with a 24-14 decision over the Los Angeles Rams. The Rams will play at Washington, a 21-14 winner over Philadelphia on Sunday. In the wild-card game next Sunday, Cleveland took the lead on a 46-yard halfback pass from Herman Fongent to Webster Slaughter in the first quarter. Later, Kolar scrambled away from a heavy rush at his own 43 and threw to Brennan, who fell as he caught the ball at the 6, got up and ran for the score with six seconds left in the second quarter. Brennan caught seven passes Sunday for a career-high 176 yards.

Sunday night to give Hartford a 4-3 NHL triumph over the Rangers. The Rangers, however, thought they had the game won in regulation. With three seconds left, Tony McKegney's shot hit the goal post and appeared to carom into the Hartford net. But goal judge Sol Maslow did not turn on the red light, and Whalers netminder Steve Weeks pounced on the puck.

"I thought the puck was in," McKegney said. "I could see it hit the post and I was sure it went in. I went right to the goal judge, but he wouldn't say anything."

Weeks said he was not sure what happened.

"I have no idea," he said. "I grabbed it as fast as I could. As far as I know, it wasn't in. But I wouldn't want to go to the bank on it."

Maslow said "the puck was dancing on the line."

"I couldn't tell how much of the puck was over the line. I didn't see it all the way over and that's what I told (referee Terry) Gregson."

The final 10 minutes of the game turned into a duel between Dineen and McKegney.

Dineen tied the score 2-2 with 8:05 remaining before McKegney put New York ahead 3-2 late in the third. Then Dineen retied it. McKegney was thwarted and Dineen won the game in overtime.

"I was fortunate to get those goals. I had a lot of chances in the first and second period," Dineen said after his second career hat trick.

You think up the quotations about Kevin in this one," said Whaler coach Jack Evans. "I'm at a loss for words." And Evans walked a w a y s t a m m e r i n g .

NFL Roundup

Bengals 52, Jets 21
Late in November, the Jets were 10-1, riding a nine-game winning streak to the best record in the league. Since then, it's been nothing but disaster, as they've been outscored 183-61.

Meanwhile, the Bengals' potent offense, which scored 408 points this season, was sparked by Boomer Esiason's five touchdown passes, three to Cris Collinsworth. The Bengals trailed 21-17 at halftime before turning the game into a rout on the arm of Esiason, who completed 23 of 30 passes for a personal-high 425 yards. He set a team single-season passing record of 3,889 yards.

"It was a good way to end, if it's the end," Esiason said. "It's a good way to head into the playoffs. If we head into the playoffs, it's a good way to find a way where our offense doesn't have to score every time to keep us in the game."

Jets linebacker Bob Crable said of the injury-riddled defense.

Browns 47, Chargers 17
Bernie Kosar capped his sensational second season in the NFL with 21 completions in 28 passes for 258 yards and two touchdowns, including a 57-yarder to Brian Brennan. He finished the season with only 10 interceptions in 531 attempts this year, the best mark in the league.

Cleveland took the lead on a 46-yard halfback pass from Herman Fongent to Webster Slaughter in the first quarter. Later, Kolar scrambled away from a heavy rush at his own 43 and threw to Brennan, who fell as he caught the ball at the 6, got up and ran for the score with six seconds left in the second quarter. Brennan caught seven passes Sunday for a career-high 176 yards.

Giants are home for the playoffs

New York's Tom Flynn (28) breaks through and blocks the punt of Green Bay's Bill Renner (13) in their NFL game Saturday at Giants' Stadium. Flynn, an ex-Packer, recovered the fumble and ran it in for a touchdown. The Giants won, 55-24.

Defensive end Leonard Marshall said the only frustrating note was allowing the Packers, 4-12, to score 17 second-quarter points. They drew within 24-17 at halftime. New York led 24-0 with eight minutes left in the half.

"It's exactly what the Giants wanted. It's certainly not what the Packers wanted," Marshall said. "When you do that, we're playing their game, lazy and lackadaisical."

The 14-2 Giants capped their best regular season Saturday, trouncing the Packers 55-24 at Giants Stadium, with the help of three touchdown passes by Phil Simms.

The victory was the Giants ninth straight and assured the NFC East champions they would be at home for their conference playoff games.

The first playoff game will be on Jan. 3 or 4 against San Francisco or the Los Angeles Rams. Los Angeles would be the opponent if the Rams beat Washington next Sunday in the NFC wild-card game. A Washington victory brings San Francisco to Giants Stadium, where New York is scheduled to play its season's first unbeaten home game since 1939.

"We've got confidence like we never had before," Simms said. "Several Giants capped off great regular seasons. Halfback Joe Morris rushed for 115 yards, raising his team record to 1,516 yards, and scored 14 TDs, including a 3-yard run against Green Bay.

Tight end Mark Bavaro caught five passes for 59 yards, raising his season totals to 65 catches and 1,091 yards, both club records for tight ends. Bavaro had 70 catches of 24 and 4 yards against Green Bay.

Simms' three touchdown passes raised his season total to 21 and his Giants' career total to 104, the second-most in club history behind Charlie Conerly, who threw 173.

"I'm really proud of this team," Coach Bill Parcells said. "We still have a lot to do, but they've done something that no other team in the history of this organization has done — win 14 games."

Playoff lineup almost set

The Lions, hampered by four turnovers, ended up 5-1. A crowd of 35,255, the smallest of the season at the Silverdome, cheered the Lions throughout the game.
 Detroit running back James Jones said he did not think his team "gave 100 percent, including me."
 "I'm sure a lot of guys had their minds on the highway," he said.

Oilers 16, Bills 7
 Tony Zendejas kicked field goals from 51, 26 and 22 yards and Houston lined the homecoming of Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly, who played for the USFL's Houston Oilers, was sacked six times, lost a fumble and threw an interception.
 The Oilers won their final two games and finished 5-11. The Bills were 4-12.

Seahawks 41, Broncos 16
 Denver, the AFC West champion, was embarrassed in its regular-season finale as Seattle's Curt Warner ran for three touchdowns and Dave Krieg threw two TD passes to Darrell Turner.

Colts 30, Raiders 24
 Gary Hogeboom threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Bill Brooks with 7:32 remaining as Indianapolis, which lost its first 13 games during the season, defeated Coach Ron Meyer. The host Raiders lost their final four games of the season. Los Angeles finished 8-8 and missed the playoffs for the first time since 1981, the last year in Oakland.
 The Raiders drove 90 yards to the Indianapolis 6 with eight seconds left, but reserve quarterback Rusty Hilger threw two interceptions and time ran out.

Simsbury retains wrestling title

The sixth annual Manchester High Invitational Wrestling Tournament held Saturday at Clarke Arena saw Simsbury High School notch its fifth consecutive championship accumulating 192 points. Also, Glastonbury narrowly beaten with 190 points, took the runner-up position for the fifth year in a row. The host Indian grapplers placed fourth in the eight-team tournament with 78 1/2 points. Rockville finished third with 83 1/2 points. "We wanted to be in the top three," Manchester Coach Barry Bernstein said. "Everyone except for our heavyweight won one or two rounds. I was pleased considering we started five freshman."

Manchester's Aaron Dixon and East Catholic's Jeff Villar lock up in their 132-pound match. Dixon won the bout and took fourth in the weight class. Villar took third place.

The tournament was concentrated by Glastonbury and Simsbury, but we had kids from a lot of teams in the finals," Bernstein said. "Placing well for the Indians was senior Scott Liscomb, who finished fourth in the 185-pound weight class. Junior Eric Gremmo placed fourth in 119 while freshman Aaron Dixon finished fourth at 132. Aaron's older brother, John, secured fourth place in the 138-pound division. Senior Todd Grossman was third at 145 for the Indians. Dave Odum placed fourth for the Indians at 155. Greg Vincent took second in the 185-pound class. The match between Vincent and Rockville's Bob Slack, which went East Catholic's Larry Wyland is on top of Glastonbury's Chip Tanner in their 155-pound match at Saturday's Manchester High wrestling tournament. Wyland went on to win the match and eventually took second place in the weight division. East finished eighth in the team standings with 55 points.

MHS icemen improve play

SOUTH WINDSOR — It was an improved performance turned in by the Manchester High ice hockey team against Farmington High Saturday night at the Hartford Arena. But the Indians remained winless as host Farmington prevailed, 4-1, for its second win in two outings. Manchester, 0-3, is back in action tonight against Shelton Valley at the Manchester High ice hockey rink at the Hartford Arena. Manchester's second-year coach Eric Forno. "We played much better than we did against Farmington last night. We had a lot of opportunities. But the goalie would make a save or we'd have an open net and either fan on it (shoot) or just miss it. I guess wasn't with us."

East is encouraged despite second loss

BOLTON — Although outshot by a 2-1 margin, East Catholic High's ice hockey team put up a tough struggle before being subdued by unbeaten Fairfield Prep. Saturday night at the Bolton Ice Palace. The Eagles, 0-2, resume action tonight against North Haven High at the Nord Arena at 8:15. "Overall, we played extremely well," cited East coach Dr. Vic Russo. "We had a lot of chances. We were playing the man instead of the puck. We're coming along."

It was a scoreless first period with East coming out of the middle session with a 3-3 lead. Prep's Bud Brown, with a power-play goal, tallied first at 4:10 before Keith Hobbe (A) scored East's first goal, an individual effort at 10:52. Hobbe stole the puck in the Jesuit end, broke the goalie down and sent to his backhand to fire it into the net.

East can't handle quick South five

HARTFORD — It was a case of a quick South Catholic High team taking advantage of a young East Catholic backcourt in the 1986-87 All Connecticut Conference boys' basketball season for both schools Saturday night. The Rebels, who had opened the previous evening with a win over East, made it two straight as fullcourt pressure zone press all evening long. "We had a tremendous amount of trouble against it the first half," said East third-year coach Ray Page. South, utilizing the small home floor to trap East all over, had a 17-4 lead after one period and 36-19 halftime bulge.

East did manage a spurt in the third period to trim it to eight points, and came away from the quarter trailing by a 45-33 margin. "We started handling their pressure," Page explained the third-period segment. East, however, couldn't maintain the pace in the final quarter and again fell victim to the Rebel pressure. "We didn't handle it again in the fourth quarter," Page said. Compounding East's miseries was the fact that its projected starting guards, Rob Stanford and

Girl wrestler to continue

NEW LONDON (AP) — Pinned in her first two high school wrestling matches, 15-year-old Randi Lago still thinks her decision to grapple with the boys was the right one. And so does her first opponent. "I'm not discouraged at all. It feels good just because I went out there," she said Saturday after getting outmuscled in the 98-pound class of the 12-school Whaler Invitational Tournament at New London High School. The 5-foot-1 sophomore from Fitch High School in Groton, the first girl in Connecticut to wrestle on the boys' team Saturday, is getting outmuscled in the 98-pound class of the 12-school Whaler Invitational Tournament at New London High School. Tulimieri assisted on both goals with Scott Jensen also drawing an assist on Grant's first tally. That was a power-play goal, too. "We had a goal disallowed. Grant had three goals in the second period. They called it a hand pass," Russo offered. Prep's Tony Gravani tied it at 1:15 of the final period with a power-play goal and Mike Jones tallied the game-winner at 11:22, assisted by Craig Duddy and Chris Messina. Prep outshot East, 29-15. George Jordan was in goal for East and Bob Oliver was between the pipes for the Jesuits. "Ross Perry on defense played a good game. He didn't make a mistake all night," Russo said. "And Tulimieri and Grant played very well. They killed a lot of chances. The kids played well. This was a good team we played against."

SCARBOROUGH, England — The notoriously hostile fans of Leeds United partially were blamed Sunday for the death of a soccer club chairman who went to help police quell a riot in his semi-professional team. Barry Adomson, chairman of Scarborough, a part-time team from outside England's 92-club professional league, was butted on the head by a fan Saturday as he tried to break up a fight during a cup match between his team and Morecambe. Adomson, 57, was giving a statement to detectives 15 minutes later when he collapsed. He died on the way to the hospital, apparently from a heart attack.

Yanks deal Nielsen to White Sox

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees have traded right-handed pitcher Scott Nielsen and minor league shortstop Mike Saper to the Chicago White Sox for left-hander Pete Filson, according to published reports. Both the New York Times and the Daily News reported the trade in their Sunday editions, but a spokesman for the Yankees said he had no knowledge of the deal. The newspapers said the trade apparently settles a dispute that arose when the Yankees agreed to trade right-hander Doug Drabek to the White Sox, but backed out and included Drabek in a Nov. 26 trade with Pittsburgh for right-hander Rick Rhoden. The Yankees announced earlier that they would not offer contracts to pitchers Mike Armstrong and Bob Shirley. Both automatically become free agents.

Seattle's Moyer undergoes surgery

SEATTLE — Strong safety Paul Moyer of the Seattle Seahawks underwent surgery in Swedish Hospital Sunday after suffering a ruptured testicle in his team's 41-16 NFL victory over Denver. Moyer suffered the injury when he was kicked in Saturday's game in the Kingdom. Seahawks Coach Chuck Knox said Moyer, who took over as Seattle's starting strong safety after Ken Easley underwent ankle surgery, returned to the game after he was injured. Moyer's injury initially was described by the Seahawks as strained abdominal muscles.

Penguins' Lemieux out three weeks

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh Penguins center Mario Lemieux will be out for three weeks because of a sprained right knee suffered in an NHL game against the Philadelphia Flyers on Saturday, a team spokesman said Sunday. Lemieux, who entered Saturday night's game as the league's third-leading scorer, was helped from the ice early in the third period after he was checked into the boards by Ron Sutter. Lemieux did not return to the game, which the Flyers won 6-4. Lemieux was examined by team physicians Sunday, according to team spokesman Harry Sanders.

Bittner cops giant slalom race

HINTERSTODER, Austria — Armin Bittner ended eight years of West German frustration by winning a slalom ski race to wrap up the pre-Christmas portion of the men's World Cup schedule. Bittner, one of the least likely candidates to give West Germany its first slalom victory since 1979, blazed out of third place after the opening run to edge Yugoslav's Bojan Križaj, who was seeking his second victory in as many days and the eighth of his career. It was only the fourth top-15 finish in the 22-year-old racer's career.

Little League is holding sign-ups

Manchester Little League will conduct sign-ups for the 1987 season on consecutive Sundays, Jan. 4 and 11, 1987, at the American Legion Hall on Legion Drive between the hours of 1 and 4 p.m. Signups are for all children between the ages of 7 through 12. Youths must be seven before July 31, 1987 and not turn 13 after July 31, 1987. Birth certificates are required at time of registration and either a parent or guardian must accompany each youth. League registration fee is $10 per player or $15 per immediate family. Tryouts are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, March 21 and 22, weather permitting. Anyone interested in coaching, umpiring, serving as a commissioner or in any other capacity is asked to be at the signups. For further information, contact Ed Detore at 643-4482 or Paul Schelbun at 648-6470.

Youth soccer registration is set

Manchester Rec Department will conduct youth soccer registration on three Monday nights, Jan. 5, 12 and 26, from 6-8 p.m. at the Illing Junior High cafeteria each night. There are four divisions: Pee Wee (ages 6-7), Midget (ages 8-9), Junior (ages 10-11) and Intermediate (ages 12-14). Pee Wee is co-ed and the other three offered to boys and girls separately. Age is determined as of Dec. 31, 1986. A $4 Rec membership card is required at time of registration and there is a $5 registration fee. To speed registration, Rec membership cards may be purchased at the East Side Rec. Community Y, Mahoney Rec Center and Highland Park Community Center. There is a maximum number of participants that will be accepted and once that number is reached, no further registrations will be accepted. There will be no registrations accepted after Jan. 26, 1987.

Sabres to name Sator head coach?

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Ted Sator, the disciplinary ex-coach of the New York Rangers, is expected to be named coach of the struggling Buffalo Sabres today, according to a published report. Sator would replace Craig Ramsay, named coach Nov. 5, when former Sabres General Manager and Director of Hockey Operations Scotty Bowman stepped down as coach. In a season that has seen the Sabres compile a league-worst 7-22-4 record, Bowman was fired Dec. 2. Ramsay led the team to a 4-15-2 record. Details of Ramsay's future were not immediately apparent, according to a report in this morning's Buffalo News. A long-time player for the Sabres, he was an assistant coach for the team under Bowman before taking the job. Sabres spokesman John Gurtler declined comment this morning and interim General Manager Gerry Meehan could not be reached for comment. Sator, 37, posted a 41-48-10 record with the Rangers. His team was 3-10-4 when he was fired this season.

Alcott-Charles win Mazda golf title

SANDY BAY, Jamaica — Amy Alcott's 10-foot birdie putt on the first hole of sudden death on Sunday gave the team of Alcott and Bob Charles a victory over two other teams in the Mazda Championship Golf Tournament at Jamaica's Tryall Golf Course. The Alcott-Charles team, which began the day two strokes off the lead, split the first prize of $500,000 from a total purse of $750,000. They were joined in the playoff by the teams of Jan Stephenson and Billy Casper, who began the day with a one-stroke lead, and Ayako Okamoto and Jim Ferrie. Alcott-Charles combined for a best-ball score of 64, one shot better than Okamoto-Ferrie and two better than Stephenson and Casper. Each group finished 54 holes over the 6,324-yard, par-71 course in 193, 20 strokes under par.

Blues can't solve Philly hex

NHL Roundup

By The Associated Press

The St. Louis Blues must be wondering if they'll ever find a way to win in Philadelphia. The Flyers, despite blizzing rookie goaltender Ron Hextall, the Blues came up short again Sunday night, as the Flyers survived St. Louis five-goal second period to earn a 7-6 victory. Tim Kerr scored three goals and Dave Poulin got the game-winner midway through the third period, as Philadelphia extended its unbeaten streak over the Blues at the Spectrum to 22 games. They're 25-0-3 since the Blues last won in Philadelphia on Jan. 6, 1972. There were a lot of goals. Some bad ones, some good ones. It was one of those nights when everything went in. Unfortunately they got more than we did," St. Louis goaltender Rick Wamsley said. Hextall, who beat out last season's starter, Bob Froese, for the No. 1 goaltending job on the Flyers, gave up five goals on 23 shots before being replaced by Glenn Resch. Hextall has given up 13 goals in his last three appearances. "I didn't come up with the big saves. When your goalie doesn't make big saves, the team gets behind the eight ball," said Hextall, whose strong play prompted the Flyers to recently trade Froese, the young tally midway through the Vezina Trophy as the best goaltender in the league, to the New York Rangers in a trade.

St. Louis goalie Rick Wamsley (left) reaches for the puck in front of the Flyers' Peter Zedel in their NHL game Sunday night at the Spectrum in Philadelphia. The Flyers won a wild shootout over the Blues, 7-6.

In other games, Hartford beat the Rangers 4-3 in overtime. Chicago defeated Detroit 7-4 and Quebec and Winnipeg played to a 4-4 tie. Poulin broke a 6-6 tie with by jamming home the puck at 11:32 of the third period. Poulin, the Flyers' captain, has eight goals and six assists in his last seven games. "It wasn't a very glamorous goal," Poulin said. "We would like to have given him (Hextall) an easier game. But it wasn't the case." The Blues got a lot of chances and luckily didn't capitalize on all of them. "Three minutes before Poulin scored, Kerr tied it 6-6 with his third goal of the night, his 12th career hat trick. "We weren't mentally prepared tonight and had to come back. The team opened up offensively and maybe a little too much," Kerr said. "Hextle has been keeping us in games tonight was one of those nights he just didn't get the bounces." Kerr's first goal came on a power play at 5:07 of the second period, and he scored again four minutes later for a 3-1 lead. Rookie Wayne Presley scored twice during a four-goal first period that carried Chicago past visiting Detroit. Presley has scored five goals in his last three games and has 18 points in 13 games. The Red Wings pulled within 4-3 at 1:19 of the second period before the Blackhawks struck back as Steve Larmer and Troy Murray scored goals 35 seconds apart, as Chicago won its third straight game.

Winnipeg defenseman Dave Ellett scored two goals, including the tying tally midway through the third period, as the Jets rallied from a 4-1 deficit for a tie at home. Brent Ashton scored twice at the visiting Nordiques. Anton Stastny added a goal and two assists. The Jets are 6-6-3 in their last nine games.

Ole Miss caps roller coaster year with win in the Independence Bowl

By Don Evans The Associated Press

SHREVEPORT, La. — During a roller coaster season, nothing came easy for the University of Mississippi football team. And the Rebels lived up to the script in their season-ending Independence Bowl victory. "That's about the way the season went — good times, bad times and in the end we had our backs to the wall," senior safety Jeff Noblin said after his last-minute interception preserved a 20-17 victory over Texas Tech in the 11th Independence Bowl Saturday night. The bowl victory topped off an 8-3-1 season, Mississippi's best since 1971, and put a happy ending to a season that saw the Rebels break into the Top 20 for the first time in a decade and then get slapped with a two-year NCAA probation for recruiting violations. An emotional Coach Billy Brewer broke down in tears in the Rebel dressing room after presenting game balls to assistants Mickey Merritt and George Smith, who were released in the wake of the NCAA-ordered sanctions. "This victory means so, so much to all of us. It was a very emotional game. I think we won it in part for George and Mickey," Brewer said. "But this team has shown great determination and depth all season." Record-setting sophomore quarterback Mark Young and a big goal-line stand made the difference as Ole Miss spoiled the coaching debut of Texas Tech's Spike Dykes. "We showed people we could play. We made some believers tonight," Young said after smashing several Independence and Ole Miss bowl records by completing 31 of 56 passes for 343 yards. "We won't be on TV or get to come back to a place like this for another year, but we're not going to quit next year. We'll still be a good team," he said. Only seven of Ole Miss' top 46 players are seniors. "This was a tough game to get ready for from the start, probably the toughest all year," Brewer said. "We've had so much happen. You can only hope you'll get them ready. I don't know how they did what they did. This is a tough team but both mentally and physically."

Texas Tech's Ervin Farris rumbles through University of Mississippi defenders Wesley Walls (left) and Rodney Lowe (31) during action in the Independence Bowl Saturday night in Shreveport, La. Ole Miss topped the Red Raiders, 20-17.

Rebel defensive coordinator Carl Torbush, who is leaving to become head coach at Louisiana Tech, said the goal-line stand was typical of the team's 1986 effort. "Those guys just don't believe anybody can score on them down close," Torbush said. "I just knew they were going to keep them out of there." Another big winner was the Independence Bowl itself, which drew a record crowd of 48,389. The bowl had been trying for a long time to match teams from the Southeastern and Southwest conferences.

Paye sidelined

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Stanford senior quarterback John Paye says his injured right shoulder will prevent him from playing in the Gator Bowl next Saturday. Paye started behind Saturday when the Carolina departed for Jacksonville, Fla., and said the only way he will make it to the game against Clemson is as a spectator. Stanford officials announced Sunday that Paye will undergo arthroscopic surgery Monday afternoon at Sequoia Hospital in Redwood City. Sophomore Greg Ennis, who relieved Paye in Stanford's regular-season finale against Arizona at Tokyo, was named by Coach Jack Elway to start against the Tigers. "The decision" was all up to me. Whether I thought I could play or not," said Paye.

Lowly Jets in playoffs

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

While the New York Giants, Chicago Bears, Kansas City Chiefs and Cleveland Browns surged into the NFL playoffs, the New York Jets, Denver Broncos and Washington Redskins made people wonder just how they got that far.

And the Seattle Seahawks are trying to figure why they're left out. Kansas City, Cleveland, Chicago and the Giants put together impressive streak runs — ranging from nine- and seven-game winning streaks by New York and Chicago, respectively, to the Chiefs' three-game run. The Browns won eight of their last nine, including the final five.

The Seahawks also were hot in the final weeks of the season, winning their last five. But it wasn't enough as their 7-5 conference record and head-to-head loss to the Bengals knocked them from contention.

The Jets, who allowed 22 more points than they scored because the first team in league history to lose their last five games and still make the playoffs. They were outscored 183-61 during that slide. The New England loss tonight at Miami would give the Jets the AFC East crown. A Patriots victory or tie means New York would host the AFC wild-card game against the Chiefs.

The Broncos winners of their first six and eight of nine, were only 3-4 down the stretch. That includes a 41-16 rout at the hands of Seattle on Saturday.

Washington was tied with the Giants for the NFC East lead before losing at home to New York in the 14th week. The Redskins made a ton of mistakes in falling to Denver 31-30 and continued those errors through three periods at Philadelphia on Sunday. That they woke up for 21 fourth-quarter points to down the Eagles doesn't necessarily mean the Redskins are back on track.

Certainly the biggest surprise team in what has been a strange season is Kansas City. With only one winning record in the last five years — and no playoff action — little was expected of the Chiefs this year. But they secured one of the AFC wild-card berths with a 24-19 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"We finally did it, we're finally here, we're in the playoffs," Pro Bowl safety Deron Cherry said. "I can't tell you how I feel, how sad we worked and how many people wrote us off."

The Chiefs built a 7-3 record through 10 weeks, then in part to a weak schedule and in part to a fifth-place finisher last year. Under the NFL's scheduling formula, that meant Kansas City avoided the NFL's preseason poll while other members of their division, the AFC West, were going up against that tough sector.

Then the Chiefs lost three straight and seemed out of contention. But they rallied with wins over Denver, the Los Angeles Raiders and the Steelers to make the playoffs for the first time since 1971, when they lost to Miami in an overtime game. Kansas City's last postseason victory was a 23-17 win of the Minnesota Vikings in Super Bowl IV.

"We found a way to win," said nose tackle Bill Masas, who blocked a field goal that Lloyd Burruss grabbed and returned 78 yards for a Kansas City touchdown. "It was 10 years old the last time we were in the playoffs. That goes for a lot of guys here. I'm glad for veterans... who have gone through the lean years and now are here when we're in the playoffs."

The Browns sneaked into the 1985 Super Bowl championship game and record that was the worst of any division winner in NFL history. But they were the AFC's best team in the second half of this year and are riding just the kind of momentum a team wants heading into the playoffs.

"They really played hard," Coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "I think that quality about our football team is what gives us great excitement about what lies ahead. While the playoff teams think of what lies ahead on the road to Pasadena, Calif., and the Super Bowl, the Seahawks can only dream of what might have been. "I can't be distressed about it because that's the game," Coach Chuck Knox said. "Those things happen unless you are a super, super football team."

The Seahawks played as well as anybody in the league the last five weeks after a four-game losing streak which eventually cost them a playoff berth.

"We're a pretty good football team right now. We really are," Knox said.

Hawkeyes causing fuss on Iowa campus

By The Associated Press

One more victory and thoughts around the Iowa campus might just turn to the days of their last Final Four team.

The Hawkeyes won their ninth straight game Saturday night when they handed Iowa State the second-worst defeat in the intra-state rivalry 98-game series, 89-64. The last time Iowa won 10-0 at the start of a season was 1979-80, when Ronnie Lester led the Hawkeyes to a berth in the Final Four.

Iowa can match that 10-0 mark with a victory tonight over Rider. First-year Coach Tom Davis, who came to Iowa from Stanford to replace George Raveling, remains unimpressed by his team's 9-3 ranking.

"I'm not sure we're that good, but we're sure trying to be," Davis said after six Hawkeyes scored in double figures to end Iowa State's three-year winning streak over Iowa. "We've got a lot of room for improvement and that's what we're trying to do. We're trying to improve each time out of the box."

Iowa was ranked 10th in The Associated Press' preseason poll and has improved every week. The Hawkeyes jumped to fifth, fourth and their current ranking.

The Chiefs lost three straight and seemed out of contention. But they rallied with wins over Denver, the Los Angeles Raiders and the Steelers to make the playoffs for the first time since 1971, when they lost to Miami in an overtime game.

"I have nothing but praise for the Hawkeyes," Orr said. "I think they outdid us in every department. I can't think of a single thing they didn't do better than we did. They deserved the victory by that margin."

The only game of the intrastate series to be more one-sided was Iowa's 85-59 victory in 1980-81. Iowa State rallied from an 18-6 deficit to get within 28-25 with eight minutes left in the first half. Iowa won an 18-1 burst and the Hawkeyes took a 52-34 halftime lead and led by as many as 26 in the second half.

"I was just elated with the type of effort we got from this ballclub," Davis said. "I have to say to Coach Orr and his players that we haven't always been that good. It was just one of those nights when we put it all together."

Ed Horton led Iowa with a career-high 17 points and 11 rebounds.

Semifinal yachts set after extensive testing

FREMANTLE, Australia — Following extensive testing, all four semifinal challengers for the America's Cup, including New Zealand's controversial fiberglass entry, were declared legal today.

The testing included drilling an unspecified number of holes in the New Zealand boat. Michael Fay, the Auckland investment banker who heads the New Zealand syndicate, said he agreed to the drilling "somewhat" against my better judgment to end all this lunatic and sometimes irresponsible talk about whether New Zealand was breaking the rules.

Lakers flame Rockets

By Bill Barnard
The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Lakers' embarrassing loss to the Houston Rockets in the NBA playoffs last season is becoming a distant memory.

With Magic Johnson collecting a season-high 38 points and 16 assists, the Lakers outscored Houston 17-5 down the stretch for a 103-96 victory Sunday night.

Houston, with Twin Towers Akem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson, appeared to be the dominant power in the Western Conference just a few months ago. Today, however, Los Angeles is 19-6 and the injury-plagued Rockets 9-15.

The Lakers outscored the Rockets 48-37 despite the absence of center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, due to an eye problem. Forward A.C. Green had a career-high 16 rebounds and 18 points.

"A.C. is like a machine," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "He is front-line material, a very gifted athlete. At 6-9, he plays extremely well against Ralph and Akem under the basket."

In other games, it was Cleveland 104, Indiana 84; Portland 128, Washington 101; and Golden State 121, Seattle 112.

The Rockets led 91-86 with 4:29 left, but Johnson scored eight points down the stretch to key the 17-5 surge.

"He showed a lot of grit and character in this win," Riley said. "I told the team that we had to keep our turnovers to a minimum and Tom Chambers led the Sonics with 25 points. Dale Ellis added 20 points, but committed nine turnovers.

look for good shot selection. We did that."

"Los Angeles was a better club the last two or three minutes," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said. "Magic took over and they outplayed us."

Lewis Lloyd scored 25 points for the Rockets, who have lost four straight games. Dirk Minnifield added 20 points and 13 assists and Olajuwon had 19 points and 13 rebounds.

"We feel good because this was a big win against Ralph and Akem," Johnson said. "Despite the Rockets record, I believe they will be there when the playoffs begin."

Golden State forced 32 turnovers, most in the NBA this season, and Eric Floyd scored 27 points against Seattle.

After leading by 10 points early in the second quarter, the SuperSonics wilted under the Warriors' trapping defense, turning the ball over 13 times in the period. A 22-6 Golden State run turned the game around.

In the second half, Golden State increased the margin to 21 points before Seattle rallied to make it close.

Tom Chambers led the Sonics with 25 points. Dale Ellis added 20 points, but committed nine turnovers.

Cavaliers 104, Pacers 94

Ron Harper scored 21 points and fellow rookie Brad Daugherty added 16 for Cleveland against Indiana.

The Cavaliers led 66-62 with 6:17 remaining before another rookie, Mark Price, hit a three-point shot and Harper added a pair of free throws to give them a nine-point advantage with 5:07 left.

The Cavaliers led by at least seven the rest of the way.

Rookie forward Chuck Person had 23 points and 11 rebounds for the Pacers.

Blazers 128, Bullets 101. Like the Lakers, Portland also had a big night against a much bigger opponent, outbounding Washington 58-48 en route to its 11th consecutive home victory.

Riki Vandeweghe scored 29 points for the Trail Blazers, Jim Paxson added 20 off the bench and Kenny Carr had 18 points and 13 rebounds.

The Bullets trailed by six points with 7 1/2 minutes to go in the third period, but Portland scored seven straight points for a 77-64 advantage and Washington never came closer than eight points again.

Moses Malone logged the Bullets with 19 points, but managed only five rebounds, seven under his average.

Warriors 121, Sonics 112. Golden State forced 32 turnovers, most in the NBA this season, and Eric Floyd scored 27 points against Seattle.

Use a personal shopper but keep the sales slips

As we march straight into Christmas and New Year's, gift buyers become so frantic, department stores can open their doors to a personal shopper.

You, the customer, are to be guided away from the mobs and the irritable salespersons. You actually are to enjoy the experience, even if you have less time and less energy to share with all.

Some stores view their personal shopping services as "exclusive" clubs and try to create a "boutique-like atmosphere" for their clients.

In the middle of the bustle of the rest of the store, steady customers are guided around by the personal shoppers who know their styles and tastes.

"It's not unusual for our clients to come in to buy a blouse and end up spending over $3,000," confides one shopping consultant.

While, traditionally, personal shoppers were reserved for the rich, this is changing. As more women enter the work force, they have less time and less energy to waste through a large department store.

"For some, the selling floor does not offer enough service," says Joan Cuomo, director of the Beatrice Dale service, one of the personal shopping services offered by Bloomingdale's at 42nd Street.

"We're here to make shopping as effortless as possible," she adds.

Sylvia Porter

Shopping coordinators report that it's commonplace for a customer to drop off an extensive gift list and ask a personal shopper to make the selections.

When you finish shopping, you can pick up, pay for and ship. If necessary, all your purchases at one time.

Men, on the other hand, tend to like a personal shopper's input. Often a husband comes in looking for a present for his wife, but after touring the store with a shopping consultant, decides to buy gifts for distant relatives, forgotten friends and business associates, as well.

Whether you are wealthy, famous or Bloomingdale's at 42nd Street customer, "We're here to make shopping as effortless as possible," she adds.

Wisconsin effort revives folk arts. Madison Wis (AP) — Ancient crafts and traditions, from Indian finger-woven beadwork to Hmong sacred songs, are being passed down to apprentices under a state program that hopes to revive these folk arts.

"It would be a shame for us to lose these cultural resources," said Richard March, coordinator of the Folk Arts Apprenticeship Program. The program, sponsored by the Wisconsin Arts Board and the National Endowment for the Arts, was founded two years ago. Eleven apprentices participated in the program the first year; 18 are the second.

Most of the crafts taught so far have involved ancient Indian traditions, and include different forms of basket making, beadwork, birch bark canoes, tanning leather, making cradle boards and traditional Indian costumes.

World growth poses trouble

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four new babies are born somewhere on Earth every second, a rate that is expected to help push the planet's population to 6.2 billion by the year 2000, the Census Bureau reports.

The anticipated growth of 1.3 billion people between 1985 and 2000 will add more than five times the population of the United States to the world's total during 15 years, according to the Census Bureau's "World Population Profile: 1985" published Sunday.

"Approximately four persons were born each second in 1985; this is expected to increase to four and one-half births per second by the year 2000," the Bureau reported. And even subtracting deaths, the world gains between 2 and 3 new people every second, the figures in the study show.

"This rapid growth 'dramatically underscores the need to redouble population assistance for the Third World,'" said Werner Fornos, president of the private Population Institute.

Efforts to stem population growth in the next few years will have "monumental consequences for the world's resources, energy, employment and the quality of life on this planet," said Fornos, who has been sharply critical of U.S. government programs reducing international population assistance programs.

The United States reduced international population assistance earlier this year, citing allegations that some countries — primarily China — were using coercive tactics to get parents to have fewer children.

The Census study comes as a day after a private research group reported that changes in world population are threatening to trap the poorer nations in a cycle of rapid population growth and dwindling resources.

"In just over half the world, time is running out in the effort to slow population growth by reducing birth rates," said Lester R. Brown and Jodi L. Jacobson of the Worldwatch Institute.

"More and more, the choice will be between a vigorous family planning program or declining living standards," they said in the study. "Our Demographically Divided World," published Saturday.

Joseph Speidel of the private Population Crisis Committee observed that Census figures and other studies show that the majority of growth and urban crowding are occurring in the poorer developing nations.

"The absolute size that is causing difficulty... is the rate of change that prevents countries from catching up in terms of agricultural productivity, creating new jobs, delivering health care and all the other advances needed for development," said Speidel.

The Census study projected that the world's population will reach 6.2 billion by the turn of the century — just 14 years away.

The world's population has nearly doubled since 1950 when it was 2.6 billion. The Census study showed.

Both birth and death rates have declined, but death rates fell faster than birth rates, allowing the number of people in the world to continue to grow, the Bureau said.

There were about 2.6 billion people in the world in 1950, and 4.9 billion in mid-1985, the report said. Thus, even with similar annual growth rates, there were 38 million people added in 1950 and 79 million added in 1985.

By 2000 the world's population will generally be better educated, more urbanized and older than today, but there will be sharp differences from country to country, the study says.

Sub-Saharan Africa currently has the world's highest rate of growth at 3 percent per year, the Bureau reported. At that rate the population of the region will double in 23 years, the study said.

Second in growth is the Near East and North Africa at 2.7 percent, followed by Latin America, growing at 2.3 percent. Growth is at 1.5 percent in Asia.

Diseased lovers turn to suits

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Lovers who in years gone by might have quickly taken their venereal diseases to the doctor are increasingly turning to the courts for help and suing their partners.

"There's definitely been an increase in these cases. Three or four years ago we weren't seeing any," said Stephen Befort, an associate professor of law at the University of Minnesota who has led several panels on AIDS litigation.

Most of the suits still are pending and the few settlements have been made out of court. But court settlements could set precedents and prompt more suits, attorneys say.

"If we get one or two cases where liability is established and damages are awarded, we could see a lot of suits," Befort said.

Among those concerned about the increasing frequency of sex-related lawsuits are insurance companies, who may be forced to pay damages under homeowners' insurance policies.

Stewart Perry, a lawyer in the Minneapolis suburb of Wazylva, won a $25,000 out-of-court settlement last year for a female herpes sufferer from her former lover's insurer. Since then, Perry said he's received numerous calls from herpes sufferers and has taken about a dozen cases.

One client, a divorced sales representative, is seeking $100,000 in damages from the man she believes gave her herpes two years ago.

The woman, who spoke on condition that her name not be used, said her life has been dramatically altered by herpes. She said she has been celibate since her first outbreak because intimacy would require her to warn a potential lover of her condition, and she doesn't want to risk the rejection.

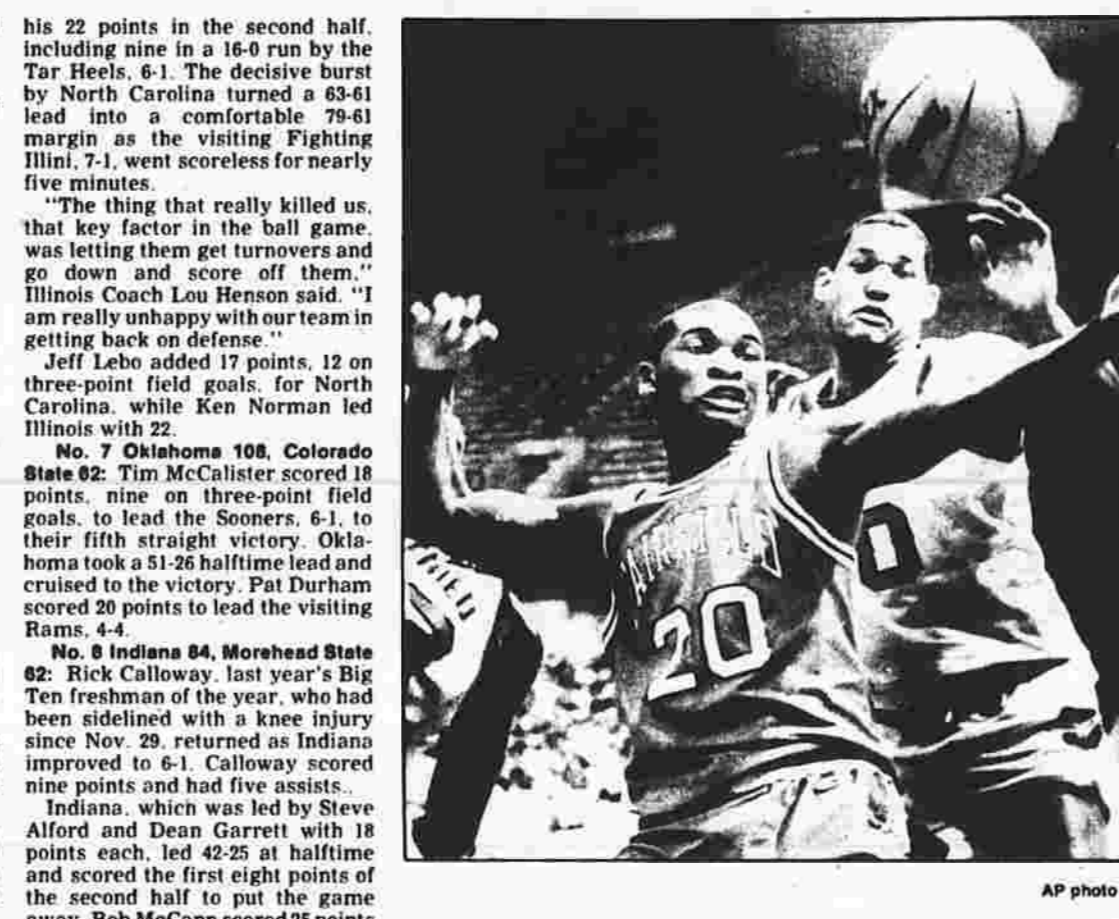

The judgment Perry won in 1985 caught insurance companies by surprise, and many are now seeking to close what they consider a legal loophole.

"Premiums were never based on the expectation of something like this," said Robert Provost, president of the Minnesota Insurance Information Center.

The Insurance Services Office, a New York-based corporation that offers various services to insurance companies, has drafted a model for companies seeking to exclude communicable diseases from their policies, said spokeswoman June Bruce.

Prudential Spokesman and Casualty Co., the insurance company involved in Perry's 1985 case, has asked insurance commissioners in several states to approve such an exclusion, said spokeswoman Laurita Warner.

"If you open the door, the list of communicable diseases does not end. I would hope in the next couple years, all our policies will have the exclusion," Ms. Warner said.
