Laser wars are over in the North End

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

A South Windsor attorney and the owner of Andy's of Manchester grocery store, facing pressure on several fronts, have bowed out of an agreement that would have allowed a space-age laser stadium in the North Main Street shopping center.

Harold Cummings, who had proposed to open LaserLand in September, was negotiating with Loren Andreo of Manchester, the owner of Andy's, to sublet the 25,000-square-foot store. Cummings had said that he had an agreement with Andreo and would take control of the building March 15.

However, both said this morning that they ended the agreement Tuesday afternoon after church leaders, area residents and the building's landlord all opposed Cummings' LaserLand project.

The stadium would have featured players "armed" with infrared laser guns who could travel down hidden corridors and shoot at computer-controlled monsters and alien beings.

As part of the agreement, Cummings said, GLK Realty Ltd. Partnership, which has owned the shopping center since the early 1970s, will allow Andreo out of his lease, which runs until 1991.

Andy's of Manchester will close at 6 p.m. Saturday, Andreo said, and GLK Realty will take control of the building March 15.

In a prepared statement, Andreo said that employees at the North End store have all been offered positions at the Andy's "super store" in East Hartford. He added that he and Cummings "mutually agreed to terminate the agreement due to the concern it was causing in the neighborhood."

Andreo refused to comment further.

Local residents, church leaders and area businessmen had denounced Cummings' plans to open LaserLand in the Andy's grocery store. Many said that it would attract noise, drugs and traffic to the shopping center, and they expressed concern for the residents of the Mayfair Gardens elderly housing complex across the street.

"This should be the end of the laser wars in the North End," Cummings said this morning. "The end result is, everybody comes out of this with something to gain."

Cummings, who is a principle of Laser Games of Hartford Inc., the company that would have operated LaserLand, said he felt he could have worked out his differences with neighbors and church groups which called his game anti-Christian and said it would encourage violence among youths.

But Cummings said he was hesitant to move into the building because GLK Realty was set against him. The landlord had vowed to fight Cummings "all the way."

"The primary thing was the landlord," Cummings said.

Andreo, who also has stores in East Hartford and Simsbury, couldn't compete against Manchester's larger grocery outlets, sources have said.

Although Andreo will not talk about his profits or when he approached GLK about ending the lease, Cummings said.

Confusion, frustration in the skies

By Rick Gladstone The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Many air travelers looking for bargain rates are finding frustration because of small-print restrictions placed on the discount tickets.

Customers in search of the low fares find that only a limited number of seats are available on most flights, especially on busy routes, and that the sale has a no-refund clause.

Travel agents, who book the vast majority of airline tickets, say they have had to spend much time explaining the restrictions to clients, many of whom become angry and exasperated after learning they cannot get an advertised fare or that their plans disqualify them.

"There's a lot of confusion, a lot of disappointment, a lot of irate customers," said Bernice Rosmarin, co-owner of Edison Travel Inc. in Edison, N.J. "I think most people look to get something for nothing. They don't really look at the fine print."

Eric Munro, head of the Travelwise agency in San Diego, said airlines were not making it clear enough in their advertisements that the number of seats available at the special fares is limited.

"This is one of our biggest problems," Munro said. "The airlines keep calling it marketing. It's really a deceptive practice."

The airlines report that their reservation centers have been awfully busy with calls seeking the discounted fares, and some say they have received complaints from consumers who allege the discounts are unavailable. The fares are available through mid-May.

Airlines executives blame the problem on public failure to understand that each destination has a different number of seats allotted for discounts, depending on how heavily traveled the route.

Popular New York-Florida routes, for example, may have only a few

Post office plans for move in '88

By George Lovvo Herald Reporter

If all goes according to plan, the U.S. Post Office in Manchester will be moving to another, larger location in town sometime in 1988, superintendent of Manchester postal operations Thomas Tomkunas said today.

The post office has begun soliciting bids for a new site. Offers will be accepted through Feb. 27, after which negotiations will begin. A deal is expected to be made a year after that, according to a post office spokesman.

Tomkunas said the department wants to find a location near the center of town, but he said this might be difficult because there is little open land and few vacant buildings that would be acceptable.

Most of the Manchester postal operations are in two buildings, and officials say space has become cramped as operations have grown. Mail processing is done at the main office located at Main and Center streets, and delivery is handled through the Broad Street office. The department hopes to combine both operations in a single building.

Post office branches at Buckland and Bolton Notch would not be affected by the plan.

Last year, postal officials looked at a number of Manchester sites, including the former Pic 'n' Save grocery store on East Middle Turnpike. A number of other supermarket buildings, including Mott's Shop Rite on East Middle Turnpike, have become vacant in the past year, but postal officials are no longer considering existing structures.

Tomkunas said today the post office would prefer to find open land on which to build a new facility. He said the department is "trying to stay away from too much rehabilitation."

Warren Larrick, vice president of USLIFE Real Estate Service Corp. of New York, owner of the Mott's building, said today his firm will continue making an offer to the post office. However, Larrick noted that the Mott's site is smaller than that being sought by the post office.

The Center and Broad street post offices have a total of 16,000 square feet, housing 160 employees. Tomkunas said the post office wants its new building to have between 32,000 and 35,000 square feet. When the requirements for parking and other operations are included, the minimum amount of land needed is 158,900 square feet, or about 3.6 acres.

Larrick said the Mott's building has 49,000 square feet, but the total site measures about 2.1 acres. He said, though, that the large amount of parking at the vacant store would be an advantage.

Tomkunas said the post office has looked at some sites, but only to determine space needs. He said that a new location cannot actually be sought until bids are solicited.

Once offers are received, the post office's real estate division will examine each site, negotiate with owners and try to reach an agreement.

Tomkunas said consolidation of Manchester's postal operations has been needed for the past nine years.

The building at the corner of Main and Center streets has been mentioned as a possible site for town of Manchester offices if it becomes vacant. It is across the street from town offices in Lincoln Center, and town officials have been seeking ways to relieve overcrowding in town departments.

seats per flight for sale, if that many, but a largely empty St. Louis-Cleveland flight may be 100 percent discounted to fill it.

"We've had some calls from people who say they cannot get the advertised fare," said Charles Novak, spokesman for United Airlines. "You have the problem of people wanting to go to areas that are booked or overbooked. In high-density markets, you're not going to have seats available."

None of the airlines will disclose how many discount seats are offered for specific flights. But they do give estimates for their overall system.

American Airlines has said it is selling 35 percent of all seats at a discount, Continental Airlines 40 percent, and Eastern 10 percent to 20 percent.

Texas Air Corp., the biggest U.S. airline operator, announced the fare cuts Jan. 30 to stimulate business for its Continental and Eastern subsidiaries, recently expanded through the acquisition of People Express.

All major competitors quickly matched the discounts, which are as much as 50 percent lower than regular coach prices and up to 40 percent cheaper than the "supersaver" rates offered previously. For example, a New York to Chicago roundtrip ticket that sells for $560 without any discount is going for $68 under the special fare. The restrictions generally require purchase at least two days in advance, roundtrip travel, a Saturday night stayover, no Friday or Sunday flights, and no refund.

"One of the hardest things we have to do is make people truly understand that the fare is not refundable," said Ms. Rosmarin at Edison Travel. "Before anyone wants to take advantage of it, they have to be absolutely certain they won't change their plans."

Most airlines are taking a tough position on the no-refund rule, rejecting almost all excuses. Weather problems that force flight delays or cancellations are an exception.

"The only way we'll waive a penalty if you or a member of your family are ill, or if there's a death in the family," said Stephen McGregor, spokesman for American Airlines.

'Platoon,' 'Room' lead Oscar nominees

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Platoon," the grim saga of a soldier's loss of innocence in Vietnam, and "A Room With a View," a turn-of-the-century comedy of manners and youthful passion, took top honors with eight nominations apiece today in the 9th Academy Awards race.

Both were nominated for best picture of 1986, along with "Children of a Lesser God," "Hannah and Her Sisters" and "The Mission."

Scoring seven nominations apiece were "Alien," the sequel to the space fantasy "Alien"; "Hannah and Her Sisters," about the lives and loves of three women in Manhattan; and "The Mission," about the struggle between church and state in colonial Brazil.

Paul Newman was nominated for a seventh time as best actor for his role as a pool hustler in "The Color of Money." He has never won an acting Oscar but was given an honorary award last year for his work in jazz saxophonist Dexter Gordon, playing a semi-autobiographical role in "Round Midnight," was a nominee for best actor in his film debut. Other nominees were Bob Hoskins in "Mona Lisa," a story of the London underworld; William Hurt in "Children of a Lesser God," about the relationship between a young deaf woman and her teacher; and James Woods, who plays a maverick photojournalist in "Salvador."

Two-time winner Jane Fonda was nominated for best actress for her role as a faded actress in "The Morning After."

Another Oscar winner, Sissy Spacek, was a nominee for "Crimes of the Heart," about three eccentric sisters, along with first-time nominee Marlee Matlin in "Children of a Lesser God"; Kathleen Turner in "Peggy Sue Got Married," the story of a housewife who travels back in time to her high school years; and Sigourney Weaver in "Aliens."

Two actors from "Platoon," Tom Berenger and William Batta, were named for supporting actor, along with four-time nominee Michael Caine in "Hannah and Her Sisters"; Denholm Elliott in "A Room With a View"; and Dennis Hopper in "Boyz n the City."

Maggie Smith, previous winner for both lead acting and support, won another nomination as supporting actress for "A Room With a View." Others in the race are Team Harper in "Crimes of the Heart"; Piper Laurie in "Children of a Lesser God"; Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio in "The Color of Money"; and Dianne Wiest in "Hannah and Her Sisters."

PEOPLE

Kris speaks
 Kris Kristofferson, star of a 14 1/2-hour TV miniseries "Amerika" that has come under United Nations' fire, has agreed to tape a 30-second public service spot promoting U.N. peacekeeping.
 U.N. spokesman Francois Gulland said Tuesday in New York that Kristofferson would extol the virtues of peacekeeping without mentioning ABC's controversial miniseries. It to be broadcast Feb. 15-22.
 The United Nations has objected to the miniseries' depiction of the occupation of the United States by Soviet-backed troops posing as U.N. peacekeepers.

Dolly thanks crew
 Dolly Parton, who inspired a nickname for the ballooning suite of the yacht Stars & Stripes, thanked the America's Cup crew for honoring her.
 In a telegram to skipper Dennis Conner, Miss Parton also invited the crew to her Tennessee amusement park, her publicist, Lee Salters, said Tuesday in Los Angeles.
 "Congratulations, skipper, for bringing the America's Cup back here and thank you and your fabulous crew of the Stars & Stripes for naming the ship's revolutionary new sail Dolly after me because it fills with air and balloons out. I'm very flattered," the telegram said. "Please accept thanks from a girl who, before you guys, used to think America's Cup was a 44-D."
 Meanwhile, the America's Cup and Conner got a ticker tape parade Tuesday up New York City's Fifth Avenue.
 "This is a dream come true," Conner said. "I can't tell you what a thrill it is to be here with the fantastic people of New York City. Thank you from the bottom of my heart."

Stallone calls boy
 Angelo "Rocky" Krakoff, the 10-year-old boy who played Sylvester Stallone's son in the film "Rocky IV," got a call from Stallone after he heard the youngster had collided with a car. Angelo underwent surgery on his left leg Monday and was in fair condition Tuesday at Childrens Hospital of Los Angeles, said spokeswoman Susan Reeder.
 He ran into a car Sunday while skateboarding. The driver of the car was not cited, police said.
 "Mr. Stallone has been writing 'Rambo III.' He stopped what he was doing and called the boy's mother. We were very concerned," said Stallone publicist Paul Bloch.

Kunitz gets prize
 Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Stanley Kunitz is the 1987 recipient of the Bollingen Prize in Poetry awarded by the Yale University library in New Haven.
 Judges said Tuesday that Kunitz, 81, is a "subtly powerful presence in the poetic world of his day." The prize is given every two years and carries a $5,000 award.
 Kunitz won a Pulitzer for "Selected Poems" in 1958 and was a visiting professor of poetry at Yale in 1970.

Never saw cocaine
 Motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel, testifying at the federal drug trial of his friend Robert Lee, said he often dined at Lee's restaurant in Portland, Ore., but never saw cocaine being sold there.
 Lee, 53, is one of nine people charged with participating in a Pittsburgh-based cocaine distribution network.
 Knievel said Monday he ate at Lee's "Rickshaw Charlie's" restaurant because he could do so without being recognized.
 Prosecutors allege that cocaine was smuggled from Colombia into the United States and then distributed nationwide. In the Portland area, the drug was distributed from Rickshaw Charlie's, the prosecutor alleged.

New movie
 Hollywood producer Edward Pressman is gearing for a movie based on the case of Danish socialist Claus von Bulow and which may star Klaus Maria Brandauer, a spokesman said in Providence, R.I.
 Brandauer, who won an Oscar for his role in "Out of Africa," has expressed interest in playing von Bulow "but we don't have any kind of deal," said Neil Weisman, Pressman's spokesman, on Monday.
 Von Bulow was acquitted of trying to murder his heiress wife, Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, by injecting her with insulin.

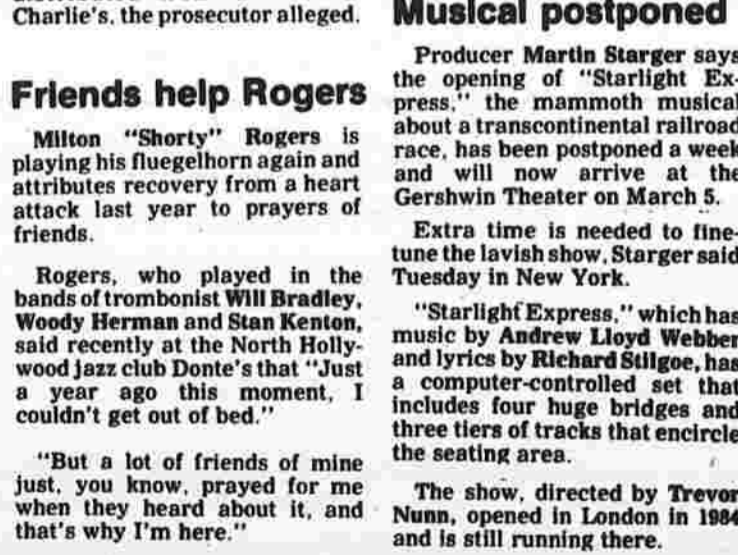

Musical postponed
 Producer Martin Starger says the opening of "Starlight Express," the mammoth musical about a transcontinental railroad race, has been postponed a week and will now arrive at the Gershwin Theater on March 5.
 Extra time is needed to fine-tune the lavish show, Starger said Tuesday in New York.
 "Starlight Express," which has music by Andrew Lloyd Webber and lyrics by Richard Stilgoe, has a computer-controlled set that includes four huge bridges and three tiers of tracks that encircle the seating area.
 The show, directed by Trevor Nunn, opened in London in 1984 and is still running there.

Graham in wetlands
 U.S. Sen. Bob Graham traded a business suit for a park ranger's uniform to work in the wetlands of Everglades National Park, Fla.
 The "workday" Tuesday was No. 200 for the first-term Democratic senator, who started his practice of spending a day working alongside average people while a state senator in 1974 and continued it as governor.
 "There are a number of environmental issues represented here. This is not just a Florida issue," said Graham.
 He patrolled Florida Bay late Monday for poachers and drug smugglers, but didn't catch any. On Tuesday, he went on a helicopter search for panthers and spotted three.

Friends help Rogers
 Milton "Shorty" Rogers is playing his flugelhorn again and attributes recovery from a heart attack last year to prayers of friends.
 Rogers, who played in the bands of trombonist Will Bradley, Woody Herman and Stan Kenton, said recently at the North Hollywood Jazz club Dante's that "just a year ago this moment, I couldn't get out of bed."
 "But a lot of friends of mine just, you know, prayed for me when they heard about it, and that's why I'm here."

Speakers remember MCC's Lowe

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

FREDERICK E. LOWE JR. — pioneer at college

When Stephen T. Cassano led the student body at Manchester Community College in 1968, the campus was caught in the throes of student protest. Like other college students across the country in the late 1960s, MCC students had become more politically conscious, expressing views that often clashed with the administration.
 One thing that amazed Cassano through this period was the openness of the school's founder and then president, Frederick E. Lowe Jr. "Fred Lowe taught me what open-door policy meant," said Cassano, now an MCC sociology professor and a member of Manchester's Board of Directors. He spoke during a memorial service for Lowe, who died Jan. 29 in Sarasota, Fla., after a long fight with cancer.
 Cassano was one of 60 executives, school officials and friends who gathered Tuesday at MCC's Lowe Program Center, in the building named after Lowe, to honor the educator. At the hour-long service, about 20 people spoke, praising Lowe's creativity and the mark he left on Manchester.
 Lowe, who served as president of the school for 12 years, came to the college as its first dean in 1963. The college, at first an agency of the town Board of Education, was major role when Cassano approached Lowe to ask about working at the school. "The last thing he needed was a teacher without experience," Cassano said. "He wasn't afraid to take chances and see things develop."

 "Fred Lowe was one of the pioneers of the community college movement," said William E. Vincent, current president of MCC. Vincent said he remembered walking Lowe through the exposed beams, girders and piled debris that would eventually become the building bearing his name. "I detected pride," Vincent said. "Lowe saw the town translating the dream he began into reality."
 Andrew Lowe, the former president's son, was the only member of the family in attendance Tuesday. He sat quietly in front and listened to each speaker, although didn't say anything himself.
 "His was the leadership of ideas," said Andrew McKirdy, executive director of the Board of Trustees of Regional Community College. He said he met Lowe the first time in 1968 when they worked together on a federal grant proposal for the college. "I guess like E. F. Patton, when Fred Lowe spoke, people listened."
 Teachers spoke of Lowe's passion to make MCC more than a secondary college.
 John F. Sutherland, a history professor and director of the Institute of Local History, remembered Lowe as a call from an outraged citizen who contended that an assignment was obscene. When the assignment was brought before the regional council, Lowe informed the governing body that "there is such a thing as academic freedom," according to Sutherland, and that was the end of it.

 Lowe encouraged teachers to be innovative, Sutherland said. "Fred said 'Try it out, and if it didn't work, try it again.'"
 Frank B. Housell, an associate professor of mathematics at MCC, said the former president taught him to show passion in the classroom. Housell added that Lowe's legacy was the challenge he left for teachers to liberate bureaucratic intrusion in education.
 Manchester residents who knew Lowe were thankful for the mark he left on Manchester.
 "MCC has become exactly the place we would like to be," said Mary Ann Handley, a history teacher at MCC.
 Eleanor Conner, a retired MCC faculty member, served on a citizens' advisory committee that helped plan the building named after Lowe. She said Lowe was admired for his courage, conviction and courtesy.
 "He has given us something to glory in, in this institution," she said, giving up efforts to fight back her tears.

Fire destroys house in Coventry
 COVENTRY — A house on Vernon Branch Road was destroyed by fire early Tuesday morning, a fire official said today.
 The fire, at 142 Vernon Branch Road, was brought under control at about 4 a.m. Richard Cooper, the Coventry fire chief said. Vernon and Bolton fire departments arrived at the scene at 3:28 a.m. Cooper said the homeowner mistakenly called the Vernon fire department, and the fire was already extinguished when Coventry and Tolland firefighters arrived on the second call.
 Raymond Villa, the owner of the house and the only occupant at the time of the fire, was not injured. Cooper said the cause of the fire, which is not considered suspicious, is under investigation.

Seminar on IRAs is next week
 A free seminar on Individual Retirement Accounts will be held next Wednesday, Feb. 18 at 7 p.m. at the Manchester Community College Low Program Center.
 The seminar, which is sponsored by the Savings Bank of Manchester, will feature two speakers: Joseph R. Toce Jr., a tax partner in the Hartford office of Arthur Anderson & Co., and Anne L. Beechler, the community representative of SBM's INVEST office.
 Reservations are recommended and can be made at the bank. An announcement of the seminar in Tuesday's Herald gave the incorrect date.

Environment talk set in Andover
 ANDOVER — An informational session on how to protect groundwater supplies has been scheduled Feb. 19 at Andover Elementary School, the citizens' group Andover Concerned Residents for the Environment has announced.
 The meeting, sponsored by ACRE and the state Department of Environmental Protection, is the first "Quality of Life Program" planned for Andover, according to Earleen Duchesneau, one of the leaders of ACRE.
 Duchesneau said the DEP is using the Andover meetings as a pilot program to see if residents are interested in environmental issues. If it is successful, similar sessions will be planned for other communities, she said.
 On Feb. 19, Douglas Cooper, principal environmental analyst for the DEP's water resources unit, will speak on wetland protection. Bruce Morton of Geotoni Associates Inc. of Glastonbury will speak on land use and its impact on groundwater.

Glass works council sets meeting
 The Pitkin Glass Works Executive Council will meet on Feb. 24 at Lincoln Center, a spokeswoman for the council said.
 The executive council oversees the continued restoration and preservation of the Pitkin Glass Works, the first successful glass manufacturer in Connecticut and one of the earliest in New England.
 Pitkin Glass items are on display in museums throughout New England and items have been sold for as much as $25,000. The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m.

Future of commission on agenda
 Past and present Commission on Children and Youth members will meet with Mayor Barbara Weinberg Feb. 18 to have an open discussion on the future of the commission, Weinberg said.
 The town Board of Directors and the Commission on Children and Youth, an advisory board, have been discussing the role the committee should serve.
 The meeting will be at 7 p.m. in the Lincoln Center gold room.

Interest growing in missionary work

NEW HAVEN (AP) — American interest in Christian missionary work abroad appears to be on the rise, a Yale University expert on missions says.
 The number of young people devoting a few years to work on behalf of their religion has tripled to 30,000 in the last several years, Charles W. Forman, a professor of missions at the Yale Divinity School, said Tuesday.
 Americans have also been giving more than $1 billion annually to mission causes since 1979, Forman said.
 "American Christians are reaching out more and more to the world," Forman said in a lecture during a divinity school convocation.

 Forman has taught at Yale for 34 years and is retiring in the spring. He taught in India before that, he is the son and grandson of missionaries.
 There are about 42,000 career missionaries in addition to the 30,000 short-term missionaries from the United States, Forman said.
 More than 700 organizations in America send missionaries abroad, he said.
 About 70 percent of Protestant missionaries worldwide are from the United States, Forman said. This percentage bothers some Europeans, who are concerned that mission work will become associated with the national interests of the United States, he said.

 Forman noted that only about 5 percent of the 138,000 Roman Catholic missionaries are Americans. In part that may be because until early in this century the United States itself was looked upon as a target for missions, he said.
 But the number of Catholic American missionaries has dropped by a third recently, from 6,000 to 4,000 people, he said.
 Forman said there was no objective way to gauge the total effect of the missionary work of Americans.
 "There is a diverse, uncoordinated, often bifurcated impact," he said.

The impact in part can be measured in the numbers of people converted to Christianity, but by effects on social and economic conditions, Forman said.
 Forman said different movements can also contradict one another. For example, different missionary groups may compete for the same people, he said.
 The number of missionaries in a country often is related to how fast the faith of a particular church grows there, Forman said.
 For example, in South Africa, there are 8,800 Roman Catholic missionaries and 1,400 Protestant and Anglican missionaries, Forman said. Between 1950 and 1970, the number of Roman Catholics in the country jumped by 500 percent, as compared to 80 percent for Methodists and Anglicans, he said.
 Latin America has changed the outlook of Catholic missionary work, Forman said.
 "What used to be a mission for building up the church has become a mission for working for social change," he said.

State wants America's Cup here

BARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut's "tremendous history of seafaring adventure" makes it the perfect state to host the 1990 America's Cup sailing races, say three state lawmakers and the state Department of Economic Development.
 The legislators — Reps. William J. Cibes Jr. and Jay B. Levin, both D-New London, and Sen. Mark H. Powers, D-Niantic, said Tuesday they were being joined by the state agency in promoting New London as the host city for the next series of races.
 The races would be held in the eastern end of Long Island Sound, south of Fishers Island, under their proposal.
 "Connecticut would be an ideal place to bring the America's Cup race," said Powers at a state Capitol news conference.
 The race was held for decades off Newport, R.I. In 1983, the Australian team won the cup and the race was held in Fremantle, Australia.
 "The America's Cup sailing races, Stars & Stripes, won the cup last week and the race will return to the United States in 1990."
 Powers said it was up to the syndicate that won the race, Sail

America, to decide where the next race will be held. San Diego, Calif. home of Stars & Stripes skipper Dennis Conner, is expected to be a strong contender for the next series of races.
 "For a long time, it was a given that this was held in Newport," said Levin. "Then, the cup was lost. There's going to be a lot of competition."
 Dennis Driver, director of marketing for the Department of Economic Development, said he held the races out of New London "could pump millions of dollars into the tourist economy."

If you could have a cleaner environment... And more energy for less money... Would you do it?

Naturally. So would we.

That's why Connecticut's three natural gas companies are working together to bring more natural gas to Connecticut.

Right now, Connecticut relies on oil—including oil from OPEC—for 64 percent of its energy. That's far more than other parts of the country.

But Connecticut does not have to be held captive again, as we were in the 1970s. We could be using more natural gas. And gas burns cleaner than oil. That's good for the environment.

Connecticut already has two underground transmission pipelines—500 miles of lines, in fact, passing through Greenwich and Farmington, Southbury and Stratford...under the Housatonic and Connecticut Rivers...under forests and streams and fields. These pipelines have been here since the 1950s, quietly and efficiently fueling our state's growth...and many people don't even know they're there.

The existing pipelines are not enough to meet the energy needs of a growing economy.

There's plenty of additional natural gas out there. But we need a way to deliver it to Connecticut.

Working together, your Connecticut natural gas companies have contracted for a new source of clean, safe, cost-effective energy—natural gas from our neighbor Canada through the Iroquois pipeline.

While laying this new 24-inch diameter line will require temporary excavation work and tree and brush removal along the route, in a short period the line route will blend back into the environment, just as has happened in the case of the two existing pipelines.

Cleaner air and an underground pipeline will help protect Connecticut's natural beauty for generations to come.

The Iroquois pipeline. Connecticut's gas companies... working together...for Connecticut's future.

Crime figure gets 5-year sentence

BRIDGEPORT — A reputed organized crime figure received a concurrent five-year prison sentence in federal court for his alleged role in an international heroin trafficking conspiracy.

U.S. District Judge T. F. Gilroy Jr. on Monday ordered that the sentence be imposed on Guy "Toke" DiGirolamo, of Bridgeport, to run at the same time as the 16-year sentence the defendant received in 1984 on two cocaine-trafficking charges.

DiGirolamo's lawyer, John Iannuzzi of New York, asked Gilroy to strike the government's version of the offense from the U.S. Probation Department's report.

"It's 12 pages of heroin," Iannuzzi said of the government's version.

Homeless family gets an apartment

NORWALK — A Norwalk couple and their terminally ill 2-year-old daughter, who have been without a home, have been given an apartment in Bridgeport by an anonymous donor.

"It's like Christmas time for us. This man is like Santa Claus," Venessa Rogers said Tuesday after learning of the gift.

Rogers and her husband, Michael, have lived in the lobby of Bridgeport Hospital for the past month while their daughter, Amber, underwent treatment.

The child is suffering from spinal muscular atrophy, a disease affecting the nerves of the spine, and cannot breathe for more than nine hours without special respiratory equipment.

Vets home official faces charges

ROCKY HILL — The financial officer for the state Veterans Home and Hospital has been arrested on 10 criminal charges, marking the second time he's been arrested since his suspension last spring.

Raymond Biloz, 54, of Terryville was charged on Tuesday with 79 counts of third-degree forgery and a single count of first-degree larceny, state police said. He was released on $25,000 bond and scheduled for arraignment Feb. 23 in New Britain Superior Court.

Committee joins pipeline opposition

HARTFORD — A legislative committee has joined the chorus of voices against construction of the proposed Iroquois natural gas pipeline through western Connecticut.

The Energy and Public Utilities Committee on Tuesday night voted unanimously to approve a resolution that says unless more study is done on the pipeline, the permit for its construction should be denied.

Before approving the resolution, the committee changed the wording to make its opposition hinge on whether more study is done, whether information on the need for the project is provided and whether the Iroquois plan is the best to meet increased energy needs.

Car makers challenging 'Lemon Law'

HARTFORD (AP) — Backers of Connecticut's "Lemon Law" say many consumers couldn't afford to pursue complaints against automobile manufacturers if they had to resort to the courts instead of state arbitration panels.

A lawyer representing foreign and domestic manufacturers, however, argued before the state Supreme Court on Tuesday that the panels are unconstitutional because they in effect deny carmakers access to the courts to settle disputes with customers.

Connecticut's first-in-the-nation lemon law took effect in 1982. It provides that if the manufacturer of a new car can't be fixed after four attempts or if it's in the shop for more than 30 days in the first two years or 18,000 miles, the owner can get his money back or a new car.

The Legislature established the three-member arbitration panels in 1984 because manufacturers were spending huge sums of money to fight complaints in court as a way to discourage future claims, according to state Rep. John Woodcock, D-East Windsor, author of the lemon law.

Buyers unhappy with the arbitration panel's decision can disregard it and pursue their cases in court. But dealers and manufacturers are barred from appeal, unless it can be shown the decision was capricious or unfair.

"These are ... private disputes between private litigants over private rights," attorney Mark Kravitz said in arguing that the manufacturers couldn't constitutionally be denied the right to a jury trial.

"It's not consumers' rights. It's not manufacturers' rights. It's everybody's rights," he said. "These are constitutional rights."

Assistant Attorney General Robert Langer argued that manufacturers can avoid having complaints submitted to the state arbitration panels by establishing their own arbitration panels. Such panels must meet state guidelines. To date, the attorney general has not certified any manufacturer's complaint procedures.

The court challenge was brought by more than a score of auto makers two trade organizations, the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association and the Automobile Importers of America. The only major automaker not party to the suit is General Motors Corp.

The suit, filed last year in Hartford Superior Court, names the governor, attorney general and departments of Motor Vehicles and Consumer Protection as defendants.

No verdict in fire that left five dead

STAMFORD (AP) — Fire officials have completed their investigation into a fire that killed five people including a Haitian couple and their two children in a blaze one official called one of the worst tragedies in Stamford's history.

Officials said Tuesday they have sent evidence to the state police forensic laboratory and are awaiting results. Stamford Fire Chief Joseph Vitti said it would probably be a few days before the cause of Tuesday's pre-dawn fire is determined.

Investigators said the blaze might have started in the second-floor kitchen of the apartment building that was being repaired to correct housing code violations.

Fire officials identified the victims as Anne Marie Camen, 36, Jean Camen, 38; Isabelle Camen, 12, and Linden Camen, 10. The Camens, from Fort-au-Prince, Haiti, suggest a fire about 25 years ago at a city apartment complex claimed five or six lives.

"This is the worst tragedy in at least the past 10 years as far as loss of lives," Vitti said.

Investigators enter the cellar of a house on South Pacific Street in Stamford where five people died and eight were hurt in a fire early Tuesday. It took about three hours to bring the blaze under control.

Educators fear effects of suicide suit

MILFORD (AP) — Educators said they fear a lawsuit filed against local school officials by a man whose teen-age son committed suicide at home could dry up liability insurance and deter school volunteers.

However, the plaintiff's attorney, Penn Rhoden, said Tuesday the case is "just about this factual situation. What gets made of it, is for others to say. We're not litigating an abstract principle."

In the lawsuit filed Dec. 29, plaintiff Douglas Brown of Milford alleged that school officials should have known his 13-year-old son Gregory was likely to harm himself and that they failed to take adequate steps to safeguard him.

Court documents say that the day before Gregory's Nov. 28, 1984 suicide, the boy had stolen a blank report card and forged entries in it to present to his parents. The boy's mother realized the forgery and informed officials at the Orchard Hills School, where Gregory was an eighth-grader, according to the suit. The suit said the boy was distraught and the teachers and principal should have known that he could not control his behavior. It claimed school officials should have contacted the boy's parents at work the day he shot himself to death.

The suit seeks damages in excess of $15,000 naming as defendants three teachers, a school principal and an acting principal, the Milford school board chairman and the superintendent of schools.

In another lawsuit, also pending, Brown is seeking $14 million in damages from Milford police, claiming they should have contacted him or other relatives after their visit to the Brown home.

"One of the friends of this boy, told repeatedly he was going to kill himself, called police," Rhoden said. "The cops came to the house, looked for a weapon ... (and) were assured by the boy he wasn't going to do this. Within a couple of hours, he was dead."

Police have said the boy was calm during their visit and showed no signs he was about to harm himself. They said they found no weapons.

School officials fear that possible fallout from the suit could harm school districts across the state.

"The source of worry that school administrators should have is the fact that we're getting down to the point where just about everything is the school's responsibility," Nicholas E. D'Agostino, executive director of the Connecticut Association of School Administrators, said in an interview Tuesday.

Reagan won't ask aides to break silence on deal

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is heading advice that it would be unwise for him to order former White House aides Oliver L. North and John M. Poindexter to break their silence and appear before a presidential board investigating the Iran-Contra scandal.

Reagan was to meet today with the three-member panel, headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, to answer questions for a second time. On the eve of the hour-long session in the Oval Office, board members were allowed to look at — but not keep — typewritten excerpts of Reagan's handwritten notes dealing with the subject.

Reagan personally reviewed his notes and determined what was relevant to the panel's inquiry before sending them to the commission, White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said. A courier picked them up at the White House and took them to the board, waiting to take them back to Reagan, board spokesman Herbert Hetu said.

Meanwhile, a state source said Tuesday that investigators have concluded Reagan's former national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, attempted suicide when he took 25 to 30 tablets of the tranquilizer Valium. But a police spokesman said there would be no official finding.

In other developments related to the sale of arms to Iran and the alleged diversion of profits to Nicaragua's Contra rebels: Reagan, speaking to American Legion leaders, denounced Nicaragua's government as a "communist totalitarian state" and vowed to support efforts in Congress to cut off U.S. assistance to the Contras fighting the Sandinistas.

"It is both in our national interest and consistent with our traditions as a free people to assist those brave souls who are struggling for freedom and national independence," the president said.

Reagan is seeking an additional $105 million in assistance to the Nicaraguan rebels while some members of Congress are trying to cut off $40 million in aid already approved but not yet sent.

The Washington Post today reported that congressional investigators have tallied $10.5 million believed diverted to the Contras from Iranian arms sales money. Of that total, $2 million came from Iran's payments for the weapons and $8.5 million from a loan from Saudi arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi, the newspaper said, quoting congressional sources.

"Amr' the Los Angeles Times reported today that the federal probe into possible criminal activity concerning the Iran-Contra affair has extended to include recently discovered indications that key figures in the operation tried to cover up the scandal. The newspaper cited unidentified sources for the report.

The expansion of independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh's investigation came as FBI agents reviewed National Security Council computer records, but it was not immediately clear whether information in those records is linked to the broadened scope of the investigation, the newspaper said.

In a statement Tuesday night, Fitzwater revealed that Tower had asked Reagan a week ago, in the president's role as commander in chief of the armed forces, to order Poindexter and North to appear before the board investigating the Iran-Contra matter.

Both men are still on active duty. Poindexter is a Navy vice admiral and North a Marine lieutenant colonel. Both have refused to appear voluntarily before the Tower board.

Appearing under subpoena from congressional committees, North and Poindexter have refused to answer questions, invoking the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Replying to Tower's board on Reagan's behalf, White House counsel Peter Willison said an order for Poindexter and North to appear "would be unlawful because it would in effect be ordering Admiral Poindexter and Colonel North to testify against themselves," Fitzwater said.

Willison said his letter to the board was based upon a written opinion from the Pentagon's general counsel.

Nine of the 12 youths indicted in the racially motivated Howard Beach attack walk up the ramp leading from the Queens Criminal Court Building in New York on Tuesday. They were charged with crimes ranging from murder and manslaughter to inciting a riot.

McFarlane still faces questions over sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert C. McFarlane's apparent suicide attempt is prompting an outpouring of shock and sympathy, but lawmakers say that after his recovery the president's former national security adviser will still face tough questions over the sale of U.S. arms to Iran.

McFarlane, 49, was visited Tuesday by his wife, Jonda, but did not receive telephone calls at Bethesda Naval Hospital. He was expected to remain there at least until today, hospital spokesman Lt. Russ Sanford said.

"Tough questions will be asked" about the arms sales, said Rep. Michael DeWine, R-Ohio, a member of the House select committee investigating the sales and possible diversion of funds to Nicaraguan rebels.

The House panel, like a similar special Senate committee, is not expected to begin public hearings in the case until mid-April.

Teens face murder charges

By Virginia Byrne
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A judge, calling a racial attack that left a black man dead "an American tragedy," unsealed indictments charging three white teenagers with murder and nine others with offenses ranging from manslaughter to inciting a riot.

The defendants, ages 16 to 19, were arraigned Tuesday before Judge Alfred D. Lerner after they surrendered to police. All pleaded innocent.

Two of the three youths charged with second-degree murder, Jon Lester and Scott Kern, both 17, previously faced the same charge, which was dropped after surviving victims refused to testify.

The other youth charged with murder was 17-year-old Robert Riley, described by special prosecutor Charles J. Hynes as the only defendant who cooperated in the investigation.

Riley came forward Jan. 19, the holiday honoring the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., giving investigators a major break in the case, Hynes said in an interview published in today's New York Times.

Riley was released on his own recognizance. Bail was denied for Kern, and Lester was already imprisoned on an unrelated weapons charge.

The murder charge carries a possible 15 years to life in prison on conviction.

"This case is an American tragedy," Lerner said.

The indictment said several of the defendants saw the three victims at a restaurant. Lester told his friends, "There were some niggers in the pizza parlor ... let's go back and kill them," according to the indictment.

Prosecutors say the teen-agers chased and beat three black men in the predominantly white Howard Beach section of Queens on Dec. 20. Michael Griffith, 23, died after he fled onto a highway and was struck by a car.

OPINION

NRC's plan a threat to nuke safety

Although the nuclear power industry in the United States has enjoyed a relatively good safety record, it has had its share of mishaps. While none have approached the magnitude of the Soviet accident at Chernobyl last April, it may only be a matter of time before an accident at an American nuclear power plant poses a serious threat to life.

Crucial to preventing a major loss of life is careful planning for nuclear emergencies.

Following a poorly coordinated response to the 1979 accident at the Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission took steps to ensure that disaster planning became part of the licensing procedure for nuclear power plants. Before a plant can obtain an operating license, it must offer "reasonable assurance" that residents within 10 miles of the plant could be evacuated swiftly and offered any necessary medical treatment in the event of an accident.

As the winds that blew from Chernobyl demonstrated, 10 miles isn't a long way from a radioactive release. But given practical limitations, the disaster-planning regulation is a reasonable safeguard that most operators of nuclear power plants and communities have been able to satisfy.

But now the staff of the NRC is proposing to scuttle the regulation, apparently in an effort to clear the way for the start-up of two controversial reactors — Seabrook in New Hampshire and Shoreham on Long Island.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, whose state is downwind of Seabrook, and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo have jeopardized the plants' ability to obtain operating licenses by refusing to participate in the disaster planning.

Under the NRC's proposed change in rules, plants would be allowed in some instances to begin full operation when state or local governments refuse to participate in off-site planning for emergencies.

The NRC's position is highly irresponsible. The commission is supposed to regulate the nuclear industry and ensure its safety.

Its sudden shift concerning disaster planning appears to be nothing more than a surrender to pressure from investors in the multi-billion-dollar Seabrook and Shoreham plants, which have become sources of financial distress and symbols of the controversial future of nuclear power in the U.S.

Communities that feel the safety of their citizens cannot be guaranteed should not be forced to participate in evacuation plans they regard as charades, and their concerns should not be ignored by federal authorities.

Nuclear plants located in areas where a reasonable level of safety cannot be guaranteed should not be allowed to operate. Far more is at stake than just the financial health of a few utilities.

Washington Today Dems in Carter country

By Evans Witt

WASHINGTON — The Democrats are going to Jimmy Carter territory to select a presidential nominee in 1988, but there's been barely a mention of the southerner who last won the White House for the party.

If the thousands of Democrats who gather at the Omni Center in Atlanta in July 1988 go little ways out of town, they will find a new library — the Carter presidential library. And the former president still lives down the road a bit, in Plains, Ga.

But there was no talk about Carter on Wednesday when Democratic Party chairman Paul Kirk announced that Atlanta had been selected as the convention site.

Kirk, the Massachusetts lawyer who heads the party, talked of the need to reach out to the once solidly Democratic South, to build on the election victories in the region in 1986 for victory in the 1988 presidential contest.

"If we're to be a competitive national party, we have to be competitive in the Southern part of this country," Kirk said. "I think people recognize that the capital and heart of the South is Atlanta."

continued to beat on the Carter record even as he won re-election in 1984.

There were echoes of that rhetoric as the Democrats chose Atlanta over Houston.

Texas GOP Chairman George Strake of Houston said: "In effect, the national Democratic Party has chosen to ignore the importance of Texas and has returned to the malaise of 'Jimmy Carter' land."

A key lesson for Democrats from Jimmy Carter comes not from partisan memories like Strake's, but from a look at the map.

Both Democrats and Republicans are holding their 1988 conventions in the South because the region is growing rapidly, gaining both popular and electoral votes in presidential elections.

And the map for the Democrats is a daunting one.

WHILE THE SOUTH was once solid for the Democrats, it's been a disaster area for them since Carter won the ticket. In 1988, the Democrats under Hubert Humphrey won one Southern state — Texas. In 1972, none went Democratic in the South.

In 1976, Carter swept the South except for Virginia.

In 1980, Carter managed to carry only Georgia in his home region. And in 1984, it was another Republican sweep.

As the Democrats work to grab a good portion of the South's electoral votes to win in 1988, Carter is working his way back into the party's view and memory.

The rehabilitation of Jimmy Carter within the Democratic Party may well be complete by 1988. And you can count on his showing up at the 1988 Democratic convention.

Evans Witt is a Washington-based political writer for The Associated Press.

Democrats set quick pace in Hartford

Capitol Comments
Bob Conrad

The Democrats are determined, as they return to power after two years of stewing in the minority, to show how the Legislature in Hartford should really be run.

It is their contention that the Republicans, unaccustomed as they were to being the majority in the House and Senate, never got their show on track and wound up with horrendous backlogs of bills at adjournment time in both years.

One Democratic tack that is obvious already in this month-old session is leadership's pushing some of the big, potentially-draggy bills up front. It's no accident that an educator enhancement bill and one to revise state policy on helping the elderly and prescription drugs have sailed through House and Senate. Both issues were troubling for the Republicans when they were in control.

Interstate banking — whether the state should go or who — is another big one on the early agenda. And while feelings cross party lines, the new Democratic majority intends to show once again it can be more effective than the Republicans in moving legislation.

DEMOCRATS WOULD rather talk about producing better laws and running a more orderly session, but the political fact is that they hope to impress the public (we'd rather say "voters") with their performance this year and next.

Senate President Pro Tem John Larson of East Hartford and House Speaker Irving Stolberg of New Haven are the instigators.

Larson and Stolberg say they discussed this strategy of handling the big issues early in the session as a way of contrasting what they hoped would be Democratic effectiveness with Republican ineptness in the previous two years.

majority.

Capitol lobbyists say the Democratic push this year is obvious to all, and won't affect their work significantly. Pat Sullivan of New Britain isn't so sure the Democrats can avoid a session-end crush of business anyway. Jay Malczynski, also of New Britain, says he and his colleagues fear the hurry-up effort may have legislators sending bills along before lobbyists have adequate opportunity to provide enough input.

Meanwhile, deadlines for filing and reporting on bills have been advanced this year and are producing an earlier-than-usual flow.

Larson says many duplicative and poor bills are being weeded out. Stolberg says the result will be less volume and better quality.

But the bottom line is nifty political. A shining performance should return a Democratic majority in 1988. Then, in two more years, the assembly must tackle the job of reappointment. Not that they would mess around with that, of course, but it won't hurt Democrats to be in control then. And who knows, Larson and/or Stolberg may want to run for governor some day.

Both took their message to their respective caucuses, then began leaning on committee chairmen to hold down the number of bills and to minimize the GOP presence.

Watch now for early action on other issues — including tort reform — that could gum up the works if left to the final weeks.

Larson and Stolberg are prodding the Appropriations Committee co-chairmen, Sen. Joe Harper of New Britain and Rep. Janet Polinsky of Waterford, to bring out a budget bill as soon as possible.

Republicans have another view of what is happening. Veterans among them fear the GOP will be muzzled right out of the process even by Stolberg, particularly, talks loftily of giving the opposition a fair break. Sen. George "Doc" Gunther of Stratford, a legislator and leader for 20 years, charged last week that Stolberg has ordered the chairmen to keep Republicans humble, if not invisible.

STOLBERG'S REPLY, in essence, is that politics is the name of the game and has been practiced by both sides when they were in the

No amateurs in handling terror story

WASHINGTON — As the bizarre plotting of the Iranian embassy bombings were unfolding on the nation's front pages, we cast an ill-considered slur on the competence of certain White House aides. We described their handling of the media as "amateurish." On reflection, we feel an apology is due.

What we forgot in the heat of the moment was their near-total success in convincing the media that President Reagan was tough on terrorists — when, in fact, he was secretly siding up to the most abominable terrorist of them all, Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini.

Although their dealings with the Khomeini hierarchy had a Maxwell Smart quality, the Reagan proconsuls were deadly efficient in portraying the president as the scourge of terrorism. But they focused media attention errantly on Libya's Moammar Gadhafi, whom Reagan called "this mad dog of the Middle East." The president's rhetoric positively bristled with righteous outrage. "State-supported terrorism is a form of warfare, and you can't sit by and let somebody else declare war on you and pretend that you're still at peace," he thundered. The pundits of the press, with few strays, swallowed every word.

Given the abuse we received for saying otherwise, we might be excused now for rubbing their noses in the print. Here is the autopsy of a disinformation campaign:

WE LEARNED in December 1985 that the White House had opened back channels to Iran. When we began poking into the story, a top Pentagon official telephoned urgently and asked for an off-the-record meeting. He pleaded with us not to run the story because it would "endanger the lives of the hostages."

We held up the story. But it became obvious to us that the White House was deliberately setting up Gadhafi as a scapegoat to divert attention from its assessment of Khomeini. The more Reagan turned up the heat on Gadhafi, the more we insisted he was assailing the wrong terrorist. "The most remorseless perpetrator of terrorist actions aimed at Americans is not Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi," we wrote, "but the messianic mullah of Iran... Khomeini is our public enemy No. 1."

We thought the story so important that I wrote a dozen columns in December 1985 and January 1986 describing Khomeini's terrorist operations. We accused him of "waging an undeclared war on the United States." We called the terrorists he had recruited and trained "the New Savages." We cited intercepted communications as evidence that Khomeini was behind the bombings, hijackings and hostage-taking that have plagued Americans in the Middle East.

The American casualty count in Iran's undeclared war, we reported, had reached 264. One was a high U.S. official, William Buckley, who was kidnapped off the streets of Beirut and savagely tortured until he died. The Senate Intelligence Committee has reported that the White House learned of Buckley's terrible death "in late 1985."

WE REPORTED the story in grim detail on Dec. 13, 1985, despite the emphatic denials of White House and State Department spokespersons. One staff member of the National Security Council literally screamed at Dale Van Atta on the telephone for printing the story. If we continued such reports, the staffer warned, the White House would portray us publicly as irresponsible, even traitorous. Other White House aides conveyed the same message.

Then we spoke to a Washington Post staffer who said Buckley might still be alive, according to his "CIA sources." We not only ignored the White House threats and stuck to our story, we repeated it. The Post thereafter deleted all references to Buckley until it ran its own front-page account of Buckley's death almost a year later — on Nov. 25, 1986. The U.S. government's acknowledgement finally came on Jan. 26, in a speech by Vice President George Bush.

In all this dismal record, there is one bright spot. We thought the president, unlike his aides, would not lie about his Iran overtures. He agreed to see Van Atta on Feb. 4, 1986. Without hesitation, he indicated that the White House had opened negotiations with Iran. He asked only that we not quote him until the hostages were safe.

But on April 23, Reagan declared: "No one can kill Americans and brag about it." By this time, 264 Americans had been killed by Iran-sponsored terrorists. And Ayatollah Khomeini unfurled a taunting banner above the road to Tehran's Mehrabad airport. It boasts: "America can't do a damn thing."

Brown, representing Grooton at that time, became Speaker in 1987.

President of Iran says country has no moderate leaders

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran President Ali Khamenei said today the United States was wrong to believe there are moderate leaders in Iran with whom it could resume contacts.

But he declared in a speech broadcast by Tehran radio, monitored by Nicosia, that Iran's attitude to the United States could change if Americans tried to "win the hearts of the nation" by ending their "hostility, their enmity and their hatred."

"Gradually, in the course of many years, it is possible that the views of the people concerning the leaders of the American regime might change."

"However, this nation today...

"However, this nation today... continues decisively, strongly and realistically to regard America as the Great Satan and as its greatest enemy," Khamenei said.

President Reagan said in November that he had opened contacts with moderate elements of the Tehran leadership in an effort to resume ties with Iran, severed since November 1979.

Reagan also said that he had shipped arms to Iran as part of a deal to establish relations.

Khamenei was the first Iranian leader to comment on the American claim that there is what could be considered a moderate faction in revolutionary Iran.

In recent days, political analysts inside and outside the U.S. administration have questioned Reagan's assertions that a moderate element exists in Tehran with which the United States could deal.

Over the weekend, it was reported that an Israeli official, Amir Nir, told Vice President George Bush in July that the administration was in fact dealing with radicals. The White House dismissed the report as a "semantic difference."

Khamenei said even if there were moderate elements within the Iranian leadership who supported ties with the United States, the Iranian people would not have accepted resumed links at this time.

"Would the people have ever allowed such a thing? Would this nation permit such a thing?" he declared.

Khamenei has been portrayed as one of the top five leaders in Iran who has favored some form of contact with the United States.

The others are Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, Supreme Court Judge Ayatollah Abdolkarim Musavi Ardebil, Prime Minister Hussein Musavi and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's son, Ahmad.

"There are no moderates among the officials of our country," he said at a rally in Tehran marking the eighth anniversary of the Islamic revolution.

Imam is the title of Iran's revolutionary patriarch, Khomeini.

A rival group, supporters of Khomeini's designated successor, Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, has criticized contact with the United States.

Panel calls for greater sanctions

By George Geddo
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An advisory panel on South Africa is recommending that President Reagan persuade U.S. allies to impose sanctions against Pretoria similar to those adopted by the United States.

The panel, officially known as the Secretary of State's Advisory Committee on South Africa, said in a report released Tuesday that the administration's favored policy of "constructive engagement" does not work and that a "concerted international effort" is the most effective external pressure that can be applied against South Africa.

"It is clear that constructive engagement has failed to achieve its original objectives," the report concludes.

The 12-member committee, appointed by the Reagan administration in December 1985 when in a report released Tuesday that the administration's favored policy of "constructive engagement" does not work and that a "concerted international effort" is the most effective external pressure that can be applied against South Africa.

"The administration continues to maintain its skepticism about the efficacy of broad punitive sanctions in bringing about peaceful change in South Africa," he said.

Redman noted that the committee was not unanimous on the sanctions recommendation, saying it was a reflection of a comparable division in American public opinion.

There were three dissenters: John R. Dellenback, president of the Christian College Coalition; Lawrence Eagleburger, a former undersecretary of state for political affairs; and Roger E. Smith, chairman and chief executive officer of General Motors Corp.

The three disagreed with the recommendation that heavy reliance on intensified sanctions will contribute to the elimination of apartheid and assist its victims.

"Intensified sanctions, whether unilateral or multilateral, cannot serve as the cornerstone of a policy aimed at the positive and creative goals so carefully outlined in the basic committee report," the three said.

"Indeed, the evidence suggests that it is in the context of a growing economy that South Africa has the greatest likelihood of resolving its basic problems."

The committee said Reagan should seek the support of U.S. allies, especially Britain, Canada, West Germany, France, Japan and Israel, for a multilateral program of sanctions.

The panel said such a program should be modeled along the lines of U.S. sanctions now in effect, which include a ban on new American investments, and a prohibition on many South African products, such as steel, iron and farm products.

Both House of Congress voted decisively to override Reagan's veto of the sanctions.

U.S./World In Brief

Local officials urge budget fight

WASHINGTON — Local and state officials are asking Congress to fight President Reagan's plan to slash spending on development grants, vocational education and other programs important to their regional economies.

But lawmakers say that blaming the White House cutting tax could be difficult when Congress needs to find some $60 billion in savings for next year, fiscal 1988.

Mayor Joseph Riley of Charleston, S.C., representing the U.S. Conference of Mayors, told the House Budget Committee on Tuesday that it was a "breach of faith" for the federal government to take away programs for revitalizing the cities.

Riley estimated that Reagan's fiscal 1988 spending plan would cut $21 billion from programs that help urban residents. Eight major programs, including development grants and job training, face a combined two-thirds reduction from the amounts provided in 1978 if the president's proposals are adopted, he said.

Iran says Iraqi casualties heavy

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran said it launched a new attack against positions in Iraq territory early today, inflicting heavy casualties. Iraq said it carried out two bombing raids on Tehran, where millions of Iranians marched to celebrate the anniversary of the 1979 Islamic revolution.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, did not give a location for the attack but claimed the Iranians had moved "deep inside Iraq territory."

The state-run Iraqi News Agency said Baghdad's warplanes twice bombed Tehran, scoring "destructive hits" and setting their targets ablaze.

Earlier, IRNA had reported that Iraqi jets "violated the airspace" of Tehran but claimed they were driven back by Iranian anti-aircraft fire. Iranians were wounded in bombing raids in other cities, however, it was reported.

Students confuse car, peace signs

PRAIRIE VILLAGE, Kan. — Students attempting to turn back the clock for a high school "Hippie Day" got their symbols mixed up, confusing the peace symbol with the Mercedes-Benz logo.

"Only at Shawnee Mission East would they mistake a Mercedes sign for a peace sign," English teacher Bill Boley said Monday. The school draws many students from affluent areas of suburban Kansas City.

The peace symbol is a long vertical line with two shorter lines extending at angles from it to the bottom of an enclosing circle. The auto company's logo is three converging lines in a circle. "I guess we were kind of ignorant about that," said Beth Jennings, 17, one of several students who painted the sign. Boley said after the error was discovered, the sign was discreetly fixed.

Doc testifies against surrogate mom

HACKENSACK, N.J. — A woman should be barred from seeing the daughter she bore for a childless couple because the child would always believe her biological mother tried to sell her, a psychologist has testified.

The psychologist, Lee Salk, also recommended Tuesday that the 10-month-old girl known in court papers as Baby M be raised by her biological father and his wife.

The woman who bore the girl, meanwhile, said in an interview published today that she expects to lose the Superior Court trial but eventually would win custody of the girl she calls Sara.

"I know I won't be getting Sara back at the end of this trial... but I believe I will get my daughter when I appeal to a higher court," Mary Beth Whitehead told the New York Daily News.

Prisoner grabs gun, shoots deputies

DE WITT, N.Y. — A manacled prisoner opened fire with the gun he grabbed from a deputy during a courthouse scuffle, killing one officer and seriously wounding another, authorities said today.

Deputy David Clark, 33, of Salina, died hours after Tuesday night's shooting, said Beverly Abt, spokeswoman for Crouse-Ingvar Memorial Hospital in Syracuse.

Clark and Deputy Bernard Meleski were leading three prisoners from the De Witt town court when the scuffle broke out, said Onondaga County Sheriff's spokesman Robert Burns. William Blake, 23, who was handcuffed with two other prisoners, grabbed a gun from one of the officers and opened fire, said Burns.

Blake tried to drag the other prisoners with him but didn't get far and was quickly recaptured, said Fred Johnson, 21, a witness.

Koop says condom aids will be ailed

WASHINGTON — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop says he believes television networks eventually will accept condom advertising because they will recognize it is needed to help combat the spread of AIDS.

Koop told a House panel Tuesday that the only sure way to avoid contracting AIDS from a sexual encounter is to avoid sex and the second surest way is to have a monogamous relationship with someone who does not carry the virus.

But recognizing that not many people will follow that advice, he said it is imperative that the American public understand that the third and only other protection is to use condoms.

Koop said condom advertising should promote disease prevention rather than sex and that ads structured along those lines would provide a valuable health service to a nation coping with a growing epidemic of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Rain hinders earthquake efforts

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea — Aftershocks and torrential rains are hampering relief work for 4,000 people left homeless by Monday's earthquake, officials said today.

The quake registered 7.4 on the Richter scale and was centered near Umboi, an isolated island several miles off the northern coast of Papua New Guinea's main island. Papua New Guinea is north of northern Australia.

Gus Sweinforth, a provincial secretary from Morobe province, said about 4,000 people were without shelter. He said boats carrying relief supplies from the mainland were forced to turn back because of treacherous conditions in the Vitias Strait, which separates Umboi from the Huon Peninsula.

Sweinforth told Australian Associated Press that relief parties reported hundreds of homes destroyed.

Bush takes to campaign trail

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush, confronted with fresh questions about the Iran-Contra controversy that may be eroding political support, is stepping up the pace of his travel in pursuit of the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

Once the early, unchallenged front-runner for the party's 1988 nomination, the undeclared candidate sets out today on a two-day trip to Michigan and Illinois with his political pursuers closing in, according to the latest public opinion polls.

A recent survey in Iowa indicated Bush was struggling to keep up with Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole for support among Republicans in Iowa, which holds an early presidential caucus next year.

Bush also plans trips to Ohio, New York, Louisiana, Massachusetts and New Hampshire in the next few weeks, before setting out for Iowa on March 5-6 on the seven-city tour.

Shiite leader says swap lists readied

By Mohammed Salam The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Nabih Berri said today Palestinian factions and his Shiite Muslim Amal militia are preparing lists of Arab prisoners they want freed in a swap with Israel for a captured Israeli soldier and four hostages.

Berri also predicted, as he had last weekend, that missing Angli-Church hostage negotiator Terry Waite will be released "very soon."

Berri, Lebanon's justice minister, renewed the swap offer he made last Saturday and said, "Although there has been no secret or public contacts, there are still some positive indications that such a swap can be worked out."

He cited the decision by Islamic Jihad to release 11 of its Palestinian prisoners, the group holding three American teachers and an Indian professor, to extend "until further notice," as evidence that such a swap can be worked out.

New Englanders are discovering the unique benefits of fish

By Nancy Pappas Herald Reporter

There's something mighty fishy going on around here!

We folks in New England are eating more fish than ever. We're increasing our intake of fish, and becoming more adventurous in the kinds of things we'll try.

About eight years ago, the average American ate just 10 pounds of fish each year, and nearly all of that was eaten outside the home. Today we've nearly doubled that sum, and there are far more of us willing to bring home the bluesfish.

But New England does not rank highest in consumption of seafood. We're surpassed by the trendy folks on the West Coast, and by our neighbors to the south. We could learn to love our fish even more, according to figures from the National Fisheries Council.

Health and nutrition professionals have been telling us for years that we should increase our consumption of fish. It's highly nutritious, lower in calories than most meats, and low in cholesterol, the fatty acid which is increasingly implicated in heart disease.

So many cooks are afraid to buy, clean or cook fish. What a shame, because it's really faster, and in many cases simpler, than preparing other meats! Most fish dishes cook in about 15 minutes. Any longer, and you're probably overcooking your finny friend.

So here's our primer on Fearless Fish. As you'll note, there isn't a deep-fryer fish fillet in sight. Instead, we're poaching, baking, broiling and pan-frying. And, although we've suggested particular fish in the various dishes, you can usually substitute whatever you find that's on sale.

The first dish was developed by Chef Tad Handley at the Brownstone in Hartford, and introduced to food writers at an American Heart Association luncheon. Don't be frightened by the full head of garlic. Poaching the garlic in water makes it mild, almost sweet in flavor, with little of the traditional dragon-breath aftertaste.

Poached salmon with tarragon and garlic

1 head garlic
1 quart broth for poaching (see note below)
4 "medallions" of salmon (3-ounce circular chunks)

1/2 cup soy sauce
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons oil
1 teaspoon flour
1/2 cup dry white wine
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
2 pounds halibut fillets

Combine first six ingredients in a small saucepan. Bring to the boil, then reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes. Allow to cool. Marinate fish fillets in this mixture for 15 minutes. Brush a broiling pan with a little oil and place fish on it. Broil 3 to 6 inches from the broiler for about 4 minutes on each side, until fish is done through. Yield: six to eight servings.

Curried fillets amandine
1/2 cup flour
2 teaspoons curry powder
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
1 pound fresh or frozen halibut, perch, flounder, cod or sole
3 tablespoons margarine
1/2 cup chopped almonds
Chutney, if desired

Combine flour, curry powder and pepper, and sift to thoroughly coat fillets. Melt margarine in your largest skillet. When it is sizzling, saute the fillets until nicely browned, about three minutes. Turn carefully with a spatula and cook on the other side for about the same amount of time. Remove to a warmed platter. Repeat, if necessary, until all fish is cooked. Put almonds into the skillet with any remaining melted margarine. Cook, stirring constantly, until lightly browned. Scatter over fish and serve with chutney, if desired. Yield: four servings.

Greek-style fish
12 ounces scrod or perch fillets
2 teaspoons olive oil
1 cup sliced onions
1 teaspoon minced fresh garlic
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1 medium tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped

1/2 cup chicken broth
Dash each, oregano leaves, salt and pepper
2 teaspoons oil
2 tablespoons white wine
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
4 strong-flavored black olives, pitted and chopped

1/2 teaspoon lemon extract
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Wipe fillets with paper towels and set aside. Heat oil in a small skillet. Add onions and garlic and saute until translucent. Add mushrooms and tomatoes and cook stirring constantly, until mushrooms are just tender. Add broth, oregano, salt and pepper. Simmer a few minutes. Add all remaining ingredients.

Arrange fish in a shallow baking pan. Pour vegetable mixture on top. Bake at 400 degrees for approximately 15 to 20 minutes. Serve immediately. This is excellent with rice.

Baked fish in yogurt
2 pounds white fish, red snapper or monkfish
Salt and pepper to taste
3 tablespoons margarine
1 teaspoon ground coriander
1/2 teaspoon ground cardamom
1/2 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 pint unflavored yogurt
2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill, or 1 teaspoon dill

1/2 cup flour
Sprinkle fish with salt and pepper. Set aside. Melt margarine in a small saucepan. With a whisk, add salt and pepper, coriander and cardamom. Stir cornstarch into lemon juice. Add to pot and bring liquid to the boil, mixing until sauce clears and loses its starchy taste. Add yogurt, heat but do not boil.

Spoon about half of the sauce over fish. Bake in a preheated oven for 10 to 15 minutes, or until fish is cooked through. Reheat lemon yogurt sauce over low heat, without boiling. Remove fish to serving platter, and garnish with parsley. Pass the remaining sauce with a spoon.

Teriyaki halibut
1/2 cup soy sauce
1/2 cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons oil
1 teaspoon flour
1/2 cup dry white wine
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
2 pounds halibut fillets

These Valentine's Day selections take the cake

Why not bake a sweet treat for your Valentine? You've all heard the adage, "Nothing says I love you" like something from the oven. Well, that oven can be a microwave oven, and you'll love the ease and speed with which your microwave can bake.

Today's column will give you some cake and frosting recipes that will certainly please a sweetheart. Before you begin to bake in your microwave, here is some information that will guarantee you a success with either bundt cakes or layer cakes.

If making a bundt cake, use solid shortening to grease the microwave bundt pan. Don't use spray-on vegetable coatings as they tend to make cakes sticky. Don't flour the pan because it has a tendency to lump. For a layer cake, cut wax paper to fit the bottom of the pan. Layer cake pans for the microwave are deeper than regular cake pans.

Microwave Kitchen

Marge Churchill

Since microwave ovens lack heat needed to create a brown crust, sprinkle graham cracker crumbs or finely chopped nuts into the greased cake pans before adding batter.

Use the crumbs or chopped nuts to "flour" the greased pans.

Sift the dry cake mix as this prevents lumps and helps blend ingredients. Unless specifically using a microwave recipe, reduce the amount of liquid by one-fourth. Be sure that one-third cup of oil is added as well. If using a pudding in the mix type, additional oil beyond the package instructions will not be necessary.

Your pan is the correct size if it is half full of batter. Use any remaining batter for layer cake or cupcakes. Let batter rest in pan for 10 minutes to allow leavening to begin working. This will result in a fluffier cake.

For a better-quality cake, begin on 50% (medium) power for the first stage of microwaving, and then on high power for the remainder of time. Remove to a warmed platter. Repeat, if necessary, until all fish is cooked. Put almonds into the skillet with any remaining melted margarine. Cook, stirring constantly, until lightly browned. Scatter over fish and serve with chutney, if desired. Yield: four servings.

2 pounds halibut fillets

Combine first six ingredients in a small saucepan. Bring to the boil, then reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes. Allow to cool. Marinate fish fillets in this mixture for 15 minutes. Brush a broiling pan with a little oil and place fish on it. Broil 3 to 6 inches from the broiler for about 4 minutes on each side, until fish is done through. Yield: six to eight servings.

Curried fillets amandine
1/2 cup flour
2 teaspoons curry powder
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
1 pound fresh or frozen halibut, perch, flounder, cod or sole
3 tablespoons margarine
1/2 cup chopped almonds
Chutney, if desired

Combine flour, curry powder and pepper, and sift to thoroughly coat fillets. Melt margarine in your largest skillet. When it is sizzling, saute the fillets until nicely browned, about three minutes. Turn carefully with a spatula and cook on the other side for about the same amount of time. Remove to a warmed platter. Repeat, if necessary, until all fish is cooked. Put almonds into the skillet with any remaining melted margarine. Cook, stirring constantly, until lightly browned. Scatter over fish and serve with chutney, if desired. Yield: four servings.

Greek-style fish
12 ounces scrod or perch fillets
2 teaspoons olive oil
1 cup sliced onions
1 teaspoon minced fresh garlic
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1 medium tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped

1/2 cup chicken broth
Dash each, oregano leaves, salt and pepper
2 teaspoons oil
2 tablespoons white wine
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
4 strong-flavored black olives, pitted and chopped

1/2 teaspoon lemon extract
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Wipe fillets with paper towels and set aside. Heat oil in a small skillet. Add onions and garlic and saute until translucent. Add mushrooms and tomatoes and cook stirring constantly, until mushrooms are just tender. Add broth, oregano, salt and pepper. Simmer a few minutes. Add all remaining ingredients.

High 1 1/2 to 2 minutes.

Rum cake
1/2 cup finely chopped pecans
1 yellow cake mix (2 layer size), sifted
1 package (4 serving size) instant vanilla pudding
4 eggs, beaten
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1/2 cup rum
1 tablespoon rum flavoring

1 (2-layer size) package cake mix
One-third cup vegetable oil
Water (subtract 1/4 of the amount called for on the package)

Eggs (follow the amount given on package)

For pudding-in-the-mix cake mixes, do not use additional oil beyond package instructions.

Sift cake mix into mixing bowl. Add oil, water and eggs; blend with a wooden spoon or mixer. Pour into prepared pan and microwave according to chart below. Rotate cake as needed.

Bundt cake - Microwave on 50%: 8 minutes then microwave on High 3 1/2 to 4 1/2 minutes. Layer cake - Microwave on 50%: 5 minutes then microwave on High 1 1/2 to 2 minutes.

Rum sauce
1/2 cup margarine
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
1 tablespoon rum flavoring

Combine above ingredients in a 4-cup glass measure and microwave on high for 2 minutes, or until mixture bubbles. Stir and microwave on high for 1 minute, after a ball is reached. Using either a cake tester or toothpick, poke holes at 1 inch intervals over cake surface. Immediately pour sauce over cake still in the pan. Let stand for 5 minutes. Invert on cake plate.

Register-tape rules can lead to long line

By Martin Sloane United Features Syndicate

DEAR MARTIN: Some manufacturers' refund offers have begun to ask for cash-register receipts that show the name of the store and the date of purchase.

By the time she repeated five more times, the line behind us was a block long. Not only was the cashier annoyed, but so were all the other shoppers who were standing behind us watching this fiasco.

DEAR GENEVIEVE: Honestly, I don't. Your letter paints a very clear picture of one of the unhappy consequences of overly zealous register-tape requirements.

Dutch pianist proves a sweet addition

Center Stage Renee Taylor

As its musical valentine, the Manchester Symphony Orchestra made some romantic overtures to the audience assembled at Manchester Community College Saturday evening.

But it was Dutch pianist Vaughan Schiepp who took the rose, receiving a standing ovation for his elegant interpretation of Saint-Saens' Concerto for Piano No. 2 in G Minor, opus 22.

Schiepp painted a lovely watercolor scene, delving long, legato scales between low chords in the first slow Andante section.

PHILLIPS HAD the same problem with the finale in the brief and usually slow Wagner overture.

Tardy violins were also sluggish for pauses, and brass twice had obvious intonation problems.

Violent passages and the famous love theme from Tchaikovsky's ballet suite brought the best out of the orchestra.

Phillips did allow too slow a pace through the love theme by flutes and violins.

Advice

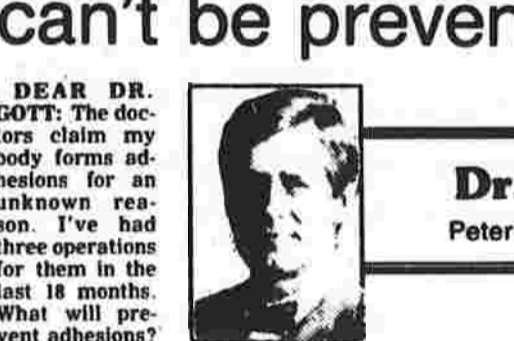

Best way to fight racism is to call a bigot a bigot

Dear Abby: Not long ago, an acquaintance told me that his 5-year-old son had an accident. She told me that when she took him to the hospital for emergency care she said, 'I want a white, American doctor, and don't let my son bleed to death while you're looking for one.'

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently had five couples to our home for dinner. It was a lot of work, as an extensive menu had been requested. We spent the entire day preparing the dinner and were busy in the kitchen until the time we served it. We didn't even have a chance to sit down and converse with our guests.

Unknown adhesions can't be prevented

DEAR DR. GOTT: The doctors claim my body forms adhesions after surgery. These adhesions are internal blockages that can cause intestinal blockage. I am unaware of any method to prevent adhesions. Perhaps your surgeons could give you specific advice.

DEAR SENSITIVE: The behavior you describe is not "unacceptable." It's downright rude! You say your menu had been "requested," which would indicate that your dinner guests came primarily to eat. Well-mannered guests would have remained after dinner to converse. These folks obviously came only to eat, so all you missed was the company of a lot of "ink-sinks" to round out the evening.
