PEOPLE

Hawn proud

Actress-producer Goldie Hawn said in New York that she's discovered pride in her Jewish heritage during a recent trip to Israel.

"For the first time in my life, I really felt Jewish," said Ms. Hawn, 41, whose mother was Jewish.

"To think that I ever classified myself as half-Jewish is a little bit of a surprise," she said in an interview to be published in Sunday's Parade magazine.

"The one thing I've learned here is that I would never do that again, because I am very proud now."

Ms. Hawn, who got her start as a dizzy blonde on TV's "Rowan & Martin's Laugh In," made a successful switch to movies, starting in and producing "Private Benjamin" and "Wildcats."

MILTON BERLE published first story

Berle writes

Comedian Milton Berle has published his first short story.

"Closing Night at the Zebra Lounge," in the March issue of Redbook, tells the story of Freddy Maxwell, a falling standup comic who encounters surprises when he climbs the stage of the sleazy Zebra Lounge.

Next month, Berle, 79, will be the host of a one-hour syndicated special of his favorite "Texaco Star Theater" skits from the 1940s and '50s. His memoirs, "I S Love You," will be published this fall.

Sally will move

Sally Jessy Raphael says she will move her nationally syndicated television talk show to New Haven from St. Louis in June so she can be closer to her family.

"I could no longer do the long-distance parenting and there isn't a mother who doesn't know what I'm talking about," Ms. Raphael said Thursday.

She has commuted for more than three years to St. Louis from her home and three children in New York.

The show is broadcast by about 90 U.S. stations, said executive producer Burt Dubrow.

Appeals X rating

The makers of "Angel Heart," a movie featuring "The Cosby Show" actress Lisa Bonet in a sex scene, have appealed an X rating given the film.

Tri-Star Pictures on Thursday in Los Angeles appealed the Motion Picture Association of America rating, prompted by a scene featuring Bonet and co-star Mickey Rourke.

An arbitrator, MPAA officials, Tri-Star executives and the film-makers were to meet today in New York to screen the movie and decide whether the X rating should stand, said studio spokesman Shawn Reisinger.

Americans discard hundreds of thousands of tires each year. Ironically, the tire was invented by an Irish vet who specialized in taking care of the automobile's predecessor—the horse. John Boyd Dunlop discovered the tire in 1888 when he fixed up his son's bicycle wheels with some air-inflated rubber. Dunlop soon abandoned his horses and began mass-producing tires for motorcycles. In 1895, the Michelin brothers in France became the first to use tires on automobiles.

Latin regains limited popularity at Manchester High

By John Mitchell
 Herald Reporter

Latin isn't exactly the hot new "in" course at Manchester High School, but the numbers sure look rosier than they did a few years ago.

Bill Pfeiffer, the high school's part-time Latin teacher, said there are 38 students enrolled in the two-year program this year. The number is 17 more students than last year.

Other school systems can show more impressive enrollment figures than Manchester. Bolton, a much smaller school system than Manchester, for instance, has 130 students enrolled in its Latin program.

But Manchester officials have reason for guarded optimism. They say interest in Latin here is on the upswing, mirroring a trend seen in the rest of the country.

"There's an ever-increasing interest in Latin," Pfeiffer said.

LATIN FELL out of favor in the late 1960s when teen-agers began to question the relevance of studying a language which hasn't been spoken since the fall of the Roman Empire. By the mid-1970s, people started pushing for a return to the basics, and Latin once again came back into favor.

In Manchester, Latin was reinstated at the high school four years ago, after an eight-year hiatus.

Some Manchester school officials say the curriculum still has a way to go.

"There aren't many students enrolled in Latin, when one compares the numbers taking Spanish,

German and French, said Allan B. Chesterton, the school system's curriculum director. "It's a language that you keep holding your breath, hoping you're going to offer it the next year."

Bernadette Musseman, head of the foreign language department at Manchester High School, said students who take Latin believe it will help them in achievement tests. "We don't have a big Latin curriculum," she said.

PEIFFER HAS taught the program part time for the last two years. He said he's been happy with the turnout, though it is considerably less than in other area towns.

In Bolton, for instance, Bolton High School Latin teacher Susan Murray said she has six Latin classes enrolled this year. The full-time Bolton program regularly features students who receive state and national recognition, she said.

"Latin has always been a very strong language in this town," she said. When she started teaching in 1967, there were about 25 students taking Latin.

Ruth Czerbinksi, foreign language department head for South Windsor High School, said the Latin program has about 110 students. The number has slowly increased since the school opened in the 1960s.

Kenneth Lester, the foreign language consultant for the state Department of Education, said 100 of the 140 high schools in the state offer Latin. Most are offered at the third- or fourth-year level.

In 1982-83, 6,500 students across Connecticut studied the language, he called the third most popular, statistics. Lester estimated that about 8,000 students now take Latin courses.

He called the Manchester program small but effective. "They're doing it pretty well," he said. "There's still surely room for improvement."

PEIFFER ADMITTED that taking Latin looks good on college applications. And because 90 percent of the English language has Latin roots, it helps in spelling and the testing process. But Latin has more practical uses as well, he pointed out.

"The language has a neat kind of application, even in English," he said. "It gives kids skills people really are in need of."

Students in his classes learn how to use 250 Latin expressions called from daily life, he said.

On the negative side, Pfeiffer said there is a lot of work to the language, adding that it tends to weed out a majority of students.

"Most of the smarter kids are more attracted to taking Latin," he said. "Its grammar is simple, but to translate is extremely difficult."

With other teachers starting to help promote the language, Pfeiffer said he can only see an increase in enrollment. "Language doesn't go away," he said. "I think Latin is going to keep growing because it's being encouraged by the English Department."

Because Pfeiffer keeps his students on guard in class, he said the old myth of Latin as a boring field of study, as his college friends would refer to it in verse, doesn't apply today.

"None of the kids can identify with that because we won't let it happen," Pfeiffer said.

Phase-in plan for revaluation has good chance in Legislature

By George Lovno
 Herald Reporter

A measure that would allow Manchester and other towns to phase in new property tax assessments after revaluations is likely to pass the General Assembly's Finance, Revenue and Bonding Committee, officials said Thursday.

"That bill should have a good chance of passing because it makes a lot of sense," said state Sen. William A. DiBella, D-Hartford, co-chairman of the panel.

On Tuesday, DiBella had said such legislation probably would not pass, but he explained Thursday that he had inadvertently confused the bill with another piece of tax legislation.

Manchester's elected officials consider the phase-in legislation one of the most important bills they would like to see passed during this session of the General Assembly.

The town is working on a property revaluation that should be the basis for levying taxes July 1, 1988.

The phase-in legislation would make it easier for property owners to pay the increase in their real estate taxes that occurs after a revaluation. The higher assessments from the revaluation would be gradually imposed over a period of years instead of all at once.

The municipal tax rate usually declines after a revaluation because the value of taxable property has increased.

The tax bills for motor vehicles and personal property, or business inventories, will decline once the mill rate is lowered. These categories of taxable property are revalued every year.

However, because real estate is reassessed only every 10 years, the change in value is abrupt after a revaluation, and real estate tax bills usually increase despite the lower tax rate. The phase-in would ease the shock of the higher real estate assessments, which account for the bulk of most people's tax bills.

The effect of the revaluation is to shift the tax burden to real estate property from the other two types of property.

Manchester town Director Stephen T. Cassano said Thursday that he supports the measure.

D-Glastonbury, the sponsor of one of two phase-in bills, will brief the town Board of Directors on the board's March meeting.

Cassano said he is confident the Legislature will pass phase-in legislation. "They don't want to take the option from us," he said.

Manchester had phased in new assessments over a five-year period following its last revaluation in 1977. The legislation that permitted phase-ins expired in 1985.

Rep. Ronald Smoko, D-Hamden, co-chairman of the finance panel, said Thursday the previous legislation was not renewed earlier because there was not a pressing need for it. He said most towns conduct their revaluations between the seventh and tenth years of a decade.

Meotti's bill would allow a three-year phase-in. Rep. John W. Thompson, D-Manchester, has introduced a bill, also being considered by the finance committee, that would allow a phase-in over five years.

Manchester officials have said they prefer a five-year phase-in.

By allowing revaluations of real estate every two years or so, the abruptness of the new assessments would not be as great. However, DiBella said this would not be practical for small towns, because more frequent revaluations are done on computers instead of on-site appraisals.

Employers give ROTC work program good report card

By John Mitchell
 Herald Reporter

Ron Schuster has hired eight students from the Regional Occupational Training Center to do assembly work at Empire Tool and Manufacturing Co., where he is plant manager.

All but three have been successful, including one who was upgraded to a supervisor's job "which he's filled with no problem at all," Schuster said.

"A little bit of drive toward the job is something we're looking for," he said, adding that being dependable is also important. Students at the vocational school for the handicapped meet those requirements better than some Manchester High School students, Schuster said.

Schuster was one of seven employers who discussed the rewards and regrets of hiring the handicapped at a Thursday teachers' conference at the school, at Wetherell Street and Hillstown Road. While one employer admitted she had a bad experience hiring from the ROTC because the job didn't fit the student's personality, others agreed that the strengths far outweighed any weaknesses.

The speakers recommended that businesses and teachers work together to help bridge the gap in the ROTC students' transition to the "real world."

Vocational Counselor Donna Nakos said the school works with more than 15 employers who are willing to hire ROTC students. Although the school has an employers' breakfast every year, Thursday's program was the first formal attempt to listen to the business sector, she said.

Because of a worker shortage in Connecticut, the handicapped have begun to be tapped more to fill jobs. "We have found this year, more than any other, we're getting calls from people looking for help," Peak said.

There are good reasons, employers said. Students from the ROTC and similar programs are slow but reliable. They show up every day, they take extra pride in their positions and they go out of their way to prove they are as productive as the rest of the work force.

The difficulty arises in those first few months the former student is in the job, trying to adjust to life outside the school.

Kevin Quinn, who hires at Cavvey's Restaurant, said employers would appreciate knowing more about an individual's social skills before they're hired, so management and other employees can be better prepared.

Jim Lombardi, a manager at McDonald's, suggested that teachers watch the student for a day on the job.

Like other fast-food chains, McDonald's has begun to hire people to do more specific tasks, the types of jobs suited to ROTC students. "We have no choice but to pull in somebody who can only work in a certain area," he said.

The business representatives mentioned minor problems such as losing patience with the special students, the extra supervision they can require and personality clashes with other employees.

"Most of the people will be understanding until it affects their job," Quinn said.

Holly Cassano, who helps run a nursery called The Children's Place, said the job is grueling, which is one of the main reasons an ROTC student didn't work out. "It depends on how fast they react. It depends on their personality," she said.

One student, she said, "could not be creative enough to keep the kids stimulated." Other employees became resentful because they ended up doing more work, she added.

One way that Crestfield Convalescent Home hoped, said Pamela Owencheck, director of staff development, was by choosing the right mentors. Just having a patient person for support was important, she said.

Schuster said it took him five years of prodding from ROTC officials before he began hiring the school's students. The turning point, he said, was a tour he took of the facility. He said the tour opened his eyes to what ROTC was really all about.

The school battles to overcome the stigma of the label "mentally retarded" every day, school officials said. That's why communication and more understanding are needed in the business world, they agreed.

"There are people out there that will want no part of you," Owencheck said. "And that's sad."

DEP hasn't scrapped volunteer tank checks

By Andrew Yukovsky
 Herald Reporter

The state Department of Environmental Protection may still seek volunteer fire marshals to enforce regulations on underground fuel-storage tanks, even though most fire marshals want no part of the DEP's proposal.

The fire marshals for the towns of Manchester and the Eighth Utilities District, who expressed reservations at a December hearing on the DEP plan, this week spoke against the program.

Carmen DiBattista, director of program coordination for the DEP's Environmental Quality Division, said Wednesday that he is still working on a hearing report to be sent to the DEP commissioner. He said he has not decided whether he will recommend going forward with the plan, but he said that despite opposition the DEP may be able to enlist enough fire marshals statewide to make the program feasible.

The DEP had been hoping to organize the inspection program through the Bureau of State Fire Marshal, a unit of the state police. Local fire marshals who volunteer would be given the authority to inspect existing non-residential gas- and oil-storage tanks to make sure they complied with state environmental requirements.

The DEP has said it does not have enough staff to inspect the 52,000 tanks throughout the state.

But John Rivos, town of Manchester fire chief and fire marshal, said that a voluntary system is the wrong approach because those who do not volunteer to be inspectors would eventually be pressured into offering their services by the example of those who do volunteer.

"That's the wrong attitude. Either we all do it or nobody does it," Rivos said. "I don't have any problem if we all agree to take it on."

He said his position is shared by most fire marshals in the state. He also said there was confusion over how frequently tanks would have to be inspected.

Ted Lingard, fire marshal for Manchester's Eighth Utilities District, said that his responsibility is to ensure the fire safety of underground tanks, not check for possible leaks. He said he would probably not volunteer as a DEP inspector.

The reasoning behind the DEP plan was that fire marshals could inspect underground tanks for compliance with state environmental regulations at the same time they checked for fire safety.

The DEP has a similar voluntary program for water and air compliance, in which local health directors serve as enforcement officers. DiBattista said that although many health inspectors opposed that program, the DEP found it was a successful service of those who were willing to participate.

Stamford apartment tenants illegal

STAMFORD — The second-floor apartment in which a fire that killed five people started was illegally occupied, according to a city Health Department official.

Michael Kravak, housing code enforcement director for the Health Department, said Thursday that the apartment was unoccupied and under renovation late last year when the building was last inspected. A permit and another inspection would have been required before it could be rented, he said.

The landlord, John Bunch of Stamford, never applied for the permit that would have allowed that apartment to be occupied, Kravak said.

Three survivors of the fire told The Stamford Advocate they were among five people living in rooms into which the apartment had been divided. Red Cross staff and fire department sources told the newspaper confirmed that there were no vacant apartments in the building.

The tenants said they were paying between $75 and $80 a week to rent the rooms.

Diocese to get first Hispanic deacon

NEW HAVEN — The first Hispanic person to become a deacon in the Episcopal Diocese of Connecticut will be ordained on Saturday, the diocese announced.

Yernell Alford-Brown, a social services case worker in Norwalk, will be ordained along with Carolyn Eve Stevenson in St. James' Church in New Haven. The ordination service is the first step toward becoming an Episcopal priest.

Alford-Brown is a graduate of New York's Instituto Pasoral Hispano and the New York Theological Seminary. She will continue to assist at the Church of the Ascension in New Haven.

Her ordination "is a landmark in the process of reaffirming Hispanic ministry as an integral component of the life and mission of our diocese," said the Rev. Wilfrido Ramos of St. Luke's Church in Bridgeport.

Yale women plan porn publication

NEW HAVEN — A group of women students at Yale University is preparing to start a new magazine that will feature heterosexual and homosexual pornography.

"This magazine will not be reflecting misogynistic values," said Sarah Bassett, an English major and one of the organizers. "We'll be looking at what pornography is, the problems associated with it, and reduce some of our own."

The organizers took their cue for the magazine from two women students at E. Wain University who last year published "Positions," a magazine with a similar theme and a restricted circulation of 40 or 50 readers.

The Yale publication will rely on story contributions and photographs from contributors of both sexes. It will be distributed free. The magazine does not yet have a name and is scheduled to appear after spring break.

Concert pianist sues over dog bite

BRIDGEPORT — University of Bridgeport President Leland Miles is being sued by a concert pianist who claims Miles' dog bit her on the hand, preventing her from performing to her full capacity.

Irene Schneidmann-Nugent's attorney, Paul Tremont of Bridgeport, said Thursday that the incident occurred May 7, 1986 at Miles' home and that the civil lawsuit was filed Feb. 4 in Bridgeport Superior Court.

"She was attacked by the dog, which bit her on the left hand and precluded her from playing the piano in the same manner. She can't flex her wrist," Tremont said.

West Hartford restaurant reopens

WEST HARTFORD — A restaurant closed for 10 days after an outbreak of salmonella food poisoning has been allowed to reopen by West Hartford health officials.

Six food handlers and 10 waiters and waitresses were cleared to work at the BT II restaurant Thursday. The total staff is about 110.

The salmonella poisoning affected about 113 workers and patrons. At least seven items on the restaurant's menu were found to have contained salmonella, but no specific cause of the contamination has been found.

"We have inspected and re-inspected the kitchen and food facilities and have checked out each employee allowed to return," said Mary Jane Drew, town assistant health director.

Fatal fire blamed on furnace

PLAINVILLE — A woman was killed Thursday when a fire, apparently caused by an oil-fired furnace, broke out in the metal hut in which she had been living, a fire official said.

The woman, believed to be in her early 60s, was living alone in the Quonset-type hut constructed of corrugated metal, appeared to have died from asphyxiation, and was apparently not burned, said Jim Posadas, assistant fire chief and deputy fire marshal.

The woman was known throughout the community only as "Elsie," and was often seen pushing around a shopping cart which she used to collect bottles, Posadas said.

The fire, still under investigation, broke out around 5 a.m., and was reported by a neighbor, he said.

Agency delays irk lawmaker

HARTFORD (AP) — Officials in Gov. William A. O'Neill's office say the governor is moving as fast as he can to set up the new Department of Veterans Affairs, despite claims from one lawmaker that nothing is being done.

Rep. Eugene A. Migliaro Jr., R-Wolcott, the legislature's most ardent spokesman for the state's 420,000 veterans says he constantly gets calls from veterans asking about the new agency.

"It was supposed to be in place Jan. 1," Migliaro said this week. "Nothing to date has been done. I say to the governor: Come on, baby, let's get with it."

The new agency was created by the Republican-controlled General Assembly in 1986, with the strong backing of O'Neill, a Democrat. It will be responsible for gathering and disseminating information on benefits available to veterans and their dependents and helping them apply for those benefits.

The agency is to be run by a commissioner and five service officers, all of whom would be appointed by the governor. At least one of the officers must be a woman.

Jon L. Sandberg, O'Neill's spokesman, said about 250 people applied for the service officer posts before the Dec. 17 deadline. Applicants will take written examinations Feb. 21 and oral tests will follow shortly thereafter, Sandberg said. He said the appointments would not likely be made before April.

He said 20 to 30 applications had been received for the commissioner's job. He said that the appointment would be made soon.

"The governor probably would have liked to have had it in place by Jan. 1, but they're moving forward," Sandberg said.

Migliaro said O'Neill had told him last fall that he didn't want to get moving on the appointments until after the November elections.

"I went along with that," Migliaro said. "But now, what the hell is he waiting for? I know he's as pro-veteran as I am."

Bill would bring back Mickey Mouse votes

HARTFORD (AP) — State Rep. Richard Torpey wants the state to change rules requiring a write-in candidate to register prior to elections so that voters feel less disenfranchised.

"I've gone out and met a lot of voters," the veteran East Hartford Democrat said. "A lot of people take the position that it's like fighting city hall, that the politicians have the whole system locked up."

"I told them that if they think they can do a better job, they should run a write-in campaign. But if they can't, they should vote for Mickey Mouse or the local disc jockey."

Torpey wants to go back to the old way and this week he convinced the Government Administration and Elections Committee to draft and hold a public hearing on a bill to return the system to the way it was, with some minor changes.

"I think it actually does open up the system, or at least give the appearance of having it more open," Torpey said. "And it's a great selling point to (registering) voters."

One reason the system was changed was to eliminate the number of recording votes for Mickey Mouse or the local disc jockey.

Up until 1983, town clerks were required to record all write-in votes. In 1983, the law was changed so that in order to be counted, a person had to register as a write-in candidate. Those who don't aren't counted.

One reason the system was changed was to eliminate the number of recording votes for Mickey Mouse or the local disc jockey.

Overall, the poll found a higher compliance among those over age 60 compared to those under 30.

The number of people using seat belts is much higher than in March 1985, about the time state lawmakers made it mandatory for front-seat occupants to wear safety belts.

The recent poll was conducted between Jan. 27 and Feb. 3.

Three cars, including two state police vehicles, remain at the scene of an accident in Durham Thursday morning that claimed the life of a Clinton teenager and injured five others.

Cruiser-car crash kills youth

DURHAM (AP) — The teen-aged driver of a station wagon in which another youth was killed tried to make a left turn across Route 17 before the second of three state police cruisers racing to an emergency call could pass, authorities say.

Three teenagers and two troopers were treated for minor injuries Thursday at Middlesex Memorial Hospital in Middletown and released, said state police Lt. Edward Dailey.

Dailey identified the dead youth as the driver's brother, Jeffrey Guidi, 14, of Clinton. The driver, Christina Guidi, 17, was not injured in the crash, state police said.

The crash occurred in the center of Durham around 8 a.m. as three cruisers were headed south in response to an emergency call regarding an untimely death of a 72-year-old man, Dailey said.

The three cruisers, sirens and emergency lights operating, were traveling about 40 yards apart when the northbound station wagon tried to turn left into a convenience store, Dailey said.

"The driver let the first one (cruiser) go by, sees the second and thinks she can beat it and guns it," Dailey said. "It was like trying to outrun a train."

The second cruiser rammed the station wagon broadside and the third cruiser slammed into the second cruiser, he said.

All the injured were taken to a Durham home. Another state police trooper not involved in the crash eventually made it to the home, where a death had occurred.

Police didn't release information in the untimely case, saying it was under investigation.

Sgt. James Lucacso said it is routine procedure to send two cruisers to investigate what state police call a "sudden death." He said a third trooper decided to join the two others because he was in the area. Lucacso said he didn't know which trooper had volunteered.

In a memorandum, Young voiced concern about the shuttle's ability to withstand the dynamic forces it encounters at launch, the newspaper said, quoting unidentified sources.

The memo, written by Young, refers to unprecedented wind shear that buffeted the shuttle as it passed through the moment of maximum stress just before the explosion. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is studying new information by the American Meteorological Society suggesting that the wind turbulence was even stronger than originally believed, The Post said.

The memo also discusses new data indicating that the agency's method for analyzing the amount of stress that flight hardware can tolerate may have been inaccurate.

WASHINGTON — Three executives who worked for top Wall Street investment companies have been charged with insider trading that prosecutors say reaped millions of dollars in illegal profits.

Wall Street veterans were shaken by the arrests announced Thursday, the latest in a series of insider-trading cases that have plagued the securities industry during the past year.

U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani said the investigation was continuing, but would not say if he expected more arrests.

"You don't know how far this goes how deeply imbedded it is," said Monte Gordon, a vice president and director of research for the Dreyfus Corp.

ATLANTA (AP) — Emotional support plays an important role in the well-being of people with arthritis, says the Arthritis Foundation.

It says studies have shown that something as simple as a regular telephone call from a health professional can not only make people with arthritis feel better psychologically, but also may have a positive effect on how well they function.

Freighter comes to rescue of ship

NEW YORK — A German freighter rescued 21 crew members from a merchant ship sinking fast in the Atlantic today, and three people were missing after their life boat capsized in the stormy sea, the Coast Guard said.

Four others remained aboard the 387-foot Turkish merchant ship Bora 1.

"She's going down pretty much like a rock," said Coast Guard Petty Officer Randy Midgett.

Petty Officer Matthew Pleasant said rescue efforts by the freighter Colombo had been temporarily halted.

"The seas are just too rough," Pleasant said. "They'll start a search for the missing men and continue the rescue efforts at daylight."

A C-130 rescue plane sent by the Coast Guard to search for the three missing men was expected to arrive about 10 a.m. EST.

Pleasant said, adding that 21 crew members were safely aboard the German vessel.

Botha says censorship will stay

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The sponsor of a major high school track tournament withdrew its support today and 100 white athletes threatened a boycott because a black student was barred from competing.

President F. W. Botha meanwhile canceled negotiations with newspaper publishers on easing the government's tight censorship rules, citing "the abuse of the media by revolutionary elements."

The foreign minister said U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz would not be welcome in South Africa to discuss dismantling apartheid.

The decision to keep a black student athlete from taking part in the Annual South African Foundation Schools Athletics Meeting, scheduled for this weekend, prompted 100 out of 275 white athletes from 13 Natal province schools to announce a boycott.

PLO in hostage talks, aide says

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A top aide to Yasser Arafat said the PLO is working quietly to free foreign hostages in Lebanon, but denied he contacted a Shiite leader to halt kidnappers from killing three Americans and an Indian.

"What has been published about certain contacts with certain groups, and especially the names mentioned, is inaccurate," said Salah Khalaf, also known as Abu Iyad, told The Associated Press.

Al-Anwar, a conservative Christian daily in Beirut, reported Thursday that Khalaf had warned a militant Shiite leader that the United States would "definitely attack if any of the hostages was executed." Khalaf is chief of security for Arafat's Fatah guerrilla faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Astronaut questions booster design

WASHINGTON — John Young, head of the astronaut office at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston, has questioned the design of the solid-fuel rocket booster that caused the Challenger accident in light of new information on wind shear.

In a memorandum, Young voiced concern about the shuttle's ability to withstand the dynamic forces it encounters at launch, the newspaper said, quoting unidentified sources.

The memo, written by Young, refers to unprecedented wind shear that buffeted the shuttle as it passed through the moment of maximum stress just before the explosion. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is studying new information by the American Meteorological Society suggesting that the wind turbulence was even stronger than originally believed, The Post said.

The memo also discusses new data indicating that the agency's method for analyzing the amount of stress that flight hardware can tolerate may have been inaccurate.

Legislators laud health-care plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposal to provide the elderly with Medicare protection against massive hospital and doctor bills is being greeted as a welcome but limited step by health care activists in Congress.

While the plan embraced Thursday by Reagan also outlines potential coverage for the elderly take health insurance for Americans under 65, as well as long-term nursing home care, the immediate focus is on acute care for Medicare beneficiaries.

Under the proposal, Medicare recipients could insure themselves against major hospital and doctor bills by paying an additional $4.92 a month under the Part B coverage that now costs $17.90 monthly.

Part B generally covers doctor bills and is voluntary, although about 98 percent of the elderly take the coverage. Part A of Medicare pays hospital bills and is financed through Social Security tax deductions.

Still not covered under the expanded Medicare program drafted by health and human services Secretary Otis R. Bowen would be bills for drugs and eye and dental care, as well as long-term nursing home care.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House Commerce health subcommittee, said the president's move was an important first step, but noted the plan does not offer a specific solution to paying for long-term nursing home care.

Rep. Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif., chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, said the plan falls short of the president's promise for a broad, national solution for uninsured and underinsured people and predicted Congress would go beyond the Reagan proposal.

Sen. David Durenberger of Minnesota, ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee's health subcommittee, praised Reagan's decision and said, "It is unconceivable that we have let senior citizens and the disabled impoverish themselves at the very time they are the sickest, under the most stress and have huge medical bills."

Durenberger called the increase in the monthly premium "modest" and said "the most serious criticism that can be offered of this proposal is that it is far too little."

Israel continues air raids

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israel today attacked Palestinian guerrilla bases in a refugee camp in south Lebanon. U.N. officials prepared to move trucks with desperately needed food into besieged Palestinian camps in Beirut.

U.N. officials said food was being loaded to go simultaneously into the Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp and surrounding Shiite slums under a new compromise with Shiite fighters besieging the camp.

Officials said the supplies would be delivered as soon as they received a "green light" from the Shiite Arab militia.

Three trucks were allowed for the camp's famished population and three others for Shiite inhabitants who have suffered from Palestinian bombardment in the three months of Shiite-Palestinian fighting.

The siege of Bourj el-Barajneh reportedly has forced its 35,000 Lebanese population to eat cats, dogs and rats.

Meanwhile, U.S. and Israeli jet fighters dropped illuminating flares as three helicopter gunships blasted five targets in and around the Mieh Mieh refugee camp on Sidon's southeastern outskirts at 1 a.m. They said four PLO guerrillas were wounded.

It was the second Israeli air raid in Lebanon in 20 hours and the sixth this year. Israeli jets Thursday bombed Fatah bases near Mieh Mieh. Police said one civilian was killed and three people, including two guerrillas, were wounded in that raid.

Police in Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, said all strikes targeted in the 15-minute raid belonged to Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat's mainstream Fatah faction.

Two rockets also slammed in a Lebanese army barracks in Mieh Mieh.

U.S. District Judge Alex T. Howard Jr., who presided over the three-day trial, will hold a hearing within 90 days to determine the assets of the United Klans, which has about 2,500 members and operates in the Southeast.

"I hope the jury's decision will put it out of business," said Morris Dees, a lawyer for the family of 19-year-old Michael Donald, who was beaten and strangled in 1981 and whose body was left dangling from a tree.

"I'm just glad justice was done," said Beulah Mae Donald. "Money doesn't mean a thing to me. I want to bring my child back. But I'm glad they caught the guilty and brought them to court."

Steps will be taken to gain title of a spacious office building occupied by the United Klans in Tuscaloosa, six past or present members, including the two sent to prison for the slaying.

OPINION

Town unable to plan for more traffic

When a citizens' group last month called on the town of Manchester to hire a full-time traffic engineer, its suggestion was quickly dismissed by town officials.

Town Manager Robert Weiss said at the time that Manchester could not justify the expense of a full-time traffic engineer. Besides, the town had an officer in the police department trained in traffic matters and a newly hired town engineer with a background in transportation, Weiss said.

While the Manchester Police Department still has a traffic officer, the town lost its transportation-oriented engineer after just three days on the job. His resignation left the Engineering Division back at square one and the possibility of an intelligent traffic policy in doubt.

Meanwhile, traffic on Manchester's streets continues to grow. Plans for future development make it likely that the town's resources will be taxed for many years to come.

Just last week the Planning and Zoning Commission expressed concern over traffic problems on Oakland Street and agreed that town leaders should approach state legislators about obtaining state funds to widen portions of the overburdened road.

Much of the Oakland Street problem is the result of rapid development that outpaced the road's ability to absorb additional traffic.

As more and more open space is lost to development, the problem will continue to repeat itself around Manchester until town authorities can adequately anticipate traffic demands and plan accordingly. With the departure last week of Town Engineer Thomas R. Currin, that ability is in doubt.

The PZC's concerns about Oakland Street, which arose during a review of a North End traffic study, indicate that the citizens' group known as Town Residents And Friends For Infrastructure Control might not have been as far off the mark in calling for a traffic engineer as town officials seemed to suggest.

The PZC's recognition of traffic problems does not automatically mean the town would be justified in rushing out and hiring a full-time traffic engineer. However, if the town ever expands its Engineering Division, it should give serious thought to hiring an engineer who specializes in transportation matters.

In the meantime, the town should consider hiring an engineering consultant to conduct a comprehensive traffic study of the entire town. Development — and the additional traffic it brings — will not stand still while town officials waste their energy defending the status quo and patching up the damage piecemeal.

Turks guard Soviet border with diligence

WASHINGTON — The Soviet soldiers down in the valley at the Arpacay dam were so close that their facial features and their foggy breath in the chilly air could be made out through low-grade binoculars from the Turkish side of the border.

No magnification was needed to identify the face painted in red and white, nearly 14 feet high, on the side of the Soviet protocol building. It was Lenin, and when it appeared some years ago, the Turks responded by painting a portrait of equal size on their protocol building — of modern Turkey's founder, Kemal Ataturk.

Aside from the artistic competition, there was a deceptive feeling of tranquility when Dale Van Atta made a rarely permitted visit to this key position on the 378-mile Turkish-Soviet border. He interviewed Turkish soldiers put there to block what has been a traditional Russian invasion route over the centuries.

"Because it's the border, we're proud to serve here," said a 21-year-old soldier who had been on duty there for a year, one of 500 at the post overlooking the shared dam in the valley.

THERE IS A BORDER FENCE — on the Soviet side. "We have no concern that Turks will escape to the Soviet Union," an official explained with a smile. Once a month, the Soviets and Turks have a protocol meeting at one or the other of the border buildings. There is no camaraderie between the two opposing forces.

A 20-year-old Turk explained that his standing orders were to arrest anyone who crossed the border from Soviet Armenia. If the intruder opened fire, the Turk had orders to shoot back.

What if a full-scale Soviet attack came? "We will try our best or die in the attempt," said a 32-year-old tank commander calmly. Under questioning, he conceded that the Turkish border force wouldn't stand much of a chance.

Tactically, the best bet would be to fall back on the nearby town of Kars and then to Erzurum, where NATO nuclear weapons are stored. Retreat would be in order because the Turks' weaponry is antique by military standards. Their principal tank, the U.S.-made M-48, dates to the Korean War.

No tank traps have been constructed, even though the Soviets have a contingent of some 5,000 modern T-64 and T-72 tanks ready to roll less than 30 miles away. And a chemical attack preceding a Soviet invasion "would wipe the Turks out," Turkish intelligence officers said.

"We know that from the lowest-ranking private to the highest-ranking general, they will fight to the last man," said an American colonel in the capital city of Ankara. "They'll do it. They are exactly the kind of ally we need at that point." Then he added, with some exasperation: "But we expect them to fight with slingshot and crossbows in this modern era."

The Turkish military is not so pessimistic. They understand that they would not fight alone — that America would be with them. They count on U.S. nuclear deterrence to keep the Soviets from invading. "If there were a war with Russia, it is going to be (in alliance) with the United States," Turkish intelligence officers said.

The Turkish know it would be no picnic, though. Standing in the office Florence Nightingale used in Istanbul's Selimiye Barracks during the Crimean War, the same officer was asked if the barracks would again house wounded in a future war. "We won't have time to think about it," the Turks said. "We won't have a chance to think about it."

Mini-editorial: It was a Greek, Aesop, who told of the kindly peasant who found a snake half-frozen and put it in his bosom to save it, only to be fatally bitten when the reptile woke up. The classic ingratitude of Aesop's snake was matched recently by Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu, who took refuge from the Nazis here in World War II and became a U.S. citizen. When anti-American leftists dynamited a statue of President Truman — who saved Greece from the Soviets — the pusillanimous prime minister decided not to put it back up in a prominent Athens position. Fortunately for Greece's honor, a Greek-American delegation changed Papandreu's mind.

Grocery needed in the North End

To the Editor:

I can't say that I'm surprised by the closing of Andy's supermarket, but I am saddened at the idea. I feel sorry for the residents of the Mayfair Gardens because it's just a little too convenient for them to hop right across the street for anything they need. But, there are those of us who shop at Andy's that come from farther on the east and north sides of Manchester.

I make frequent stops there to supplement my biweekly shopping excursions; it's just a little too expensive for me to do an entire grocery shopping there. However, when I've run out of something, when I've needed some fresh meat or a deli item I had Andy's close by. In fact I usually do all my holiday food shopping there because of the relaxed, uncrowded atmosphere.

The "super" stores are not for me. While they may be the least expensive of all grocery stores, I don't like the crowds, the sullen cashiers and the long lines at the deli counters, not to mention the traffic I have to contend with. Those of us from this part of town now have no alternative except to make that trek into the congested areas of town.

I would like to see another food store open up in that spot. It doesn't have to be as big as Andy's, but I wouldn't like to see one of those extremely expensive convenience stores occupy that spot, either.

The thought of a giant arcade going in there scares me a little bit. People coming from the east would more than likely use

Woodbridge Street as a short cut. It's bad enough now with people speeding through this residential neighborhood and not stopping at the stop signs! There are a lot of young children in this area and the traffic problem that could be caused by an arcade is a virtual nightmare. There would be racing back and forth all day, way into the night. We don't need that kind of aggravation or worry.

I'm sure the majority of patrons to an arcade of that sort would be teens and young adults who, for the most part, are ignorant of the awesome responsibility that comes with driving and obeying traffic laws. I'm nervous enough now every time my 16-year-old son goes out to ride his bike. This isn't just another street in Manchester, it's a raceway.

If it could all be done, I would greatly prefer another food store opening up near Andy's is now for the benefit of all of us, rather than a giant arcade for the benefit of a resident of South Windsor.

Costly vandalism is discouraging

To the Editor:

The Keeney Street School community is becoming very discouraged as once again, costly vandalism was committed to the children's playspace.

The building of two playspaces and the purchasing of new playground equipment was an expensive and time-consuming PTA project. It spanned two years and combined the students' fundraising efforts and parents' hard work. Since then, the students have proudly enjoyed the results of everyone's work.

To come to school on several occasions and find broken equipment, graffiti-marred wood and stolen pieces is very demoralizing to them. "Spur-of-the-Moment" acts of vandalism would be bad enough, but some of the damage at Keeney Street required special tools and planning. Clearly, some person or persons have too much time on their hands.

Unfortunately, all that can be done is to continue to repair the damage and bring the problem to the public's attention. The Building and Grounds Department has been very prompt and cooperative in making these repairs. Hopefully, neighbors or passersby will report any suspicious activity on the school grounds in time for the police to take action.

on matters in which one was previously involved," Wolpe said. "It is too narrow and permits too much activity on behalf of foreign interests. My bill tries to close the revolving door."

WOLPE AND REP. MARCY KAPTUR introduced a bill in the last Congress to prohibit those who represent the U.S. in trade matters from serving former governments and firms and from advising or assisting other lobbyists for 10 years. After the Deaver scandal, 125 co-signed the bill.

It's now the Foreign Agents Compulsory Ethical and Trade Act (FACE-IT) with a four-year prohibition of working for foreign interests, and it covers former members of Congress and staff as well as the executive branch.

"In any other nation, the wholesale employment of former senior government officials as lobbyists for foreign governments and economic interests would be unthinkable, even a national scandal," says Pat Choate in his penetrating new book, "The High-Flex Society."

"Just as retired chiefs of staff of the armed services are banned from becoming national security advisers for foreign governments, high-level U.S. trade officials must also be prevented from becoming foreign agents once they leave government.

"The culture of Washington politics has become jaded and permissive," he adds. "Indeed, it is corrupt... While the easy purchase of influence is not the primary source of American trade loss, it does restrict the capacity and flexibility of the U.S. government to confront the many loopholes and flaws in its trade policy," said Choate.

Decline in union membership slows in '86

WASHINGTON (AP) — After backpedaling through the early 1980s with rapidly declining memberships, wage concessions and other lost benefits, American unions may be on the verge of a resurgence.

Union membership in terms of hard numbers is still falling, according to soon-to-be-published data from the government, but the losses in 1986 are a tiny fraction of what they were the previous six years, and the number of women carrying union cards rose by 70,000 last year. In addition, Labor Department statistics show that union members last year enjoyed more than twice the average wage gains of their non-union counterparts in absolute dollars.

As a result, the pay gap between union and non-union workers widened from $108 a week in 1985 to an average $119 per week in 1986. The Bureau of Labor Statistics figures, which were obtained by The Associated Press, showed the weekly wage earnings of union

Texaco loses effort to have $12.4 billion fine dismissed

By Michael L. Graczyk The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Pennzoil Co. won a new round in its high-stakes battle with Texaco Inc. as an appeals court upheld most of an unprecedented multibillion-dollar award against Texaco for interfering in a planned merger.

A three-judge panel of the 1st Texas Court of Appeals rejected 89 claims of error in the November 1985 state district court trial in which Pennzoil sued Texaco for interfering in a planned Pennzoil-Getty Oil Co. merger.

The appeals court, in its 162-page ruling issued Thursday, accepted one claim from Texaco, that the $3 billion in punitive damages awarded by the jury was excessive. The court cut that figure to $1 billion but upheld the $7.53 billion in compensatory damages.

"There is a point where punitive damages may overstate their purpose and serve to complicate rather than to deter or punish," the panel said. "In this case, punitive damages of $1 billion are sufficient to satisfy any reason for their being awarded."

The court said the compensatory damages were large but supported by the evidence. Adding interest, the reduced judgment comes to $10.2 billion, down from $12.4 billion, said Pennzoil spokesman Bob Harper.

Even with the reduction, the judgment remains the largest in U.S. history. Texaco angrily criticized the ruling, promising an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

The company does not have to pay any money while appeals continue. "Today's decision continues to support an outrageous judgment totally at odds with both the law and the facts surrounding Texaco's acquisition of Getty Oil Co. in 1984," said James W. Kinneer, chief executive officer of White Plains, N.Y.-based Texaco.

"The court's reduction of the unlawful and outrageous punitive damage award cannot be allowed to mask the absurdity of today's basic ruling. The modified judgment of the $8.53 billion plus accrued interest is so clearly unlawful and grossly excessive that it demands reversal by a higher court."

"There is going to continue to be an organized labor movement," said Richard Belous, a labor market analyst for the Conference Board, a New York-based business research house. "The interesting thing will be to see if they can reverse the numbers," Belous said. "It's going to be extremely difficult for unions to get back up to the point where they again represent 25 percent of the work force."

Unions' share of the U.S. labor force peaked at 35.5 percent in 1945. All is not rosy, however, for the American labor movement. Unions' share of the rapidly expanding job market continues to erode, and outside experts are skeptical that organized labor will ever regain the clout it enjoyed immediately after World War II and through the early 1950s.

Inside knowledge helps foreign interests

Have you ever wondered what makes U.S. trade negotiators so inept?

When I was in Japan a few years ago, for example, I was astounded that the Japanese were paying $20 a pound for beef, when U.S. beef could be shipped in for a quarter of the price. Given the Japanese trade deficit ($15 billion at that time, now $31 billion), why couldn't we sell beef?

Some U.S. negotiators may be disloyal — seeking only personal gain.

The Japanese, for example, now spend $30 million lobbying Congress and the executive branch. And who do they hire? Many former U.S. government officials who once designed and administered our trade and foreign policy.

Some distinguished Americans, with unique inside knowledge of the U.S. government — have sold their services to foreign interests:

■ Clark Clifford, former secretary of defense, is a registered foreign agent of the Mexican Foreign Ministry and of the Australian Meat & Livestock Corp. (which would not want American beef to be sold to Japan).

■ Michael Deaver was a deputy chief of President Reagan's staff when he handled a dispute with Canada over acid rain. Even before he quit, he had talked to Canada about consulting on acid rain, and was soon doing so. And he lined up additional accounts with Pacific Rim countries. (However, due to an investigation by a special prosecutor, he has lost accounts.)

■ Former Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana now works for NYK Lines of Japan.

■ Former Sen. John Culver is retained by Toyota and Perrier.

■ Former Rep. Billy Lee Evans' client is the Hong Kong Trade Council.

■ Former Rep. Thomas Evans represents the governments of Cyprus and Jamaica, Princess Bermuda Ltd., and others.

MORE OFTEN, the American insiders hired by foreigners are less famous. Eric Garfinkel was an attorney working for the U.S. Trade

Northern Perspective Michael J. McManus

Representative who joined the White House staff from 1982 to 1983. There he was involved in the debate about whether sanctions should be ordered on imports of machine tools. The White House decided not to impose sanctions.

Shortly after that decision, Garfinkel joined a law firm which had the Japanese Machine Tool Association as a major client.

The question is, which side of the table was Garfinkel really sitting on when he worked at the White House — that of America or Japan?

"Top-level government officials have a special inside knowledge, access and status that can give foreign interests a special advantage in dealing with the government," says Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich.

"Someone who is supposed to be negotiating for American interests sits across from someone who could be his or her future employer upon departure from government. And many are brought on for $100,000 to $600,000 a year! It calls into question the integrity of the process," Wolpe adds.

"You can not have confidence of such people advocating for American interests if we continue to permit a system which allows improper temptations of Cyprus and Jamaica, Princess Bermuda Ltd., and others.

"Present law requires a one year ban on any deals with one's previous employer, and two years

Ronald M. Grose, 65; UT program manager

Ronald M. Grose of Bolton, 65, husband of Ruth Grose, died Wednesday at Manchester Memorial Hospital after a short illness. He was a senior program manager at United Technologies Research Center. A veteran of more than 43 years with United Technologies, he joined Pratt & Whitney as a junior engineer in 1942. From 1943 to 1958 he held various positions with UTC's Missiles and Space Systems Division, Corporate Systems Center and Hamilton Standard.

He returned to the Research Center as senior systems engineer in 1970 and was named program manager in 1976. In his current position he was involved in the overall planning, control and coordination of the high-technology activities at the Research Center. Closings signal shift in education students in 112 schools and 20 years ago, 32,800 youths were enrolled in 22 schools, he said. Bridgeport, the next largest diocese, has 15,193 students in its 44 elementary and seven high schools, Helfrich said. In 1970-71, there were 27,400 students in 70 elementary and seven secondary schools, he said.

Sister Marie Treanor, associate superintendent of schools in the Diocese of Norwich, said the 1986-87 enrollment is 7,186 in elementary and five high schools. She said the diocese hasn't closed a school in at least 10 years. Enrollment is down from 7,575 students in 1981-82. Annual tuition varies widely. In the Bridgeport diocese, the average tuition for the first child from a family in an elementary school is $800, $500 for the second, and $400 for the third, Helfrich said.

For non-Catholics, who make up about 10 percent of the enrollment, the cost is about $150 more per child, he said. In Norwich, the average tuition is $395 for the first child, $608 total for two children and $777 for three children from a family, Sister Treanor said. She said non-Catholics pay $810 for the first child.

Secondary school tuitions are much higher — up to $2,800 in the Bridgeport diocese at St. Mary's in Greenwich, Helfrich said. He added that the average tuition of the secondary schools is $2,000.

Much of the dropout in Catholic school enrollment mirrors what has happened in public schools as the "baby-boom" generation completed its education. The Catholic schools also suffered losses of students in the early 1970s because of movement into the suburbs, where there were fewer such schools, and because religious teachers left their orders and were replaced by lay teachers.

For the Record

A house in Coventry destroyed by fire Tuesday morning was Vernon Branch Road. Because of an editing error, a story in Thursday's Manchester Herald gave an incorrect address for the house in a second reference to its location.

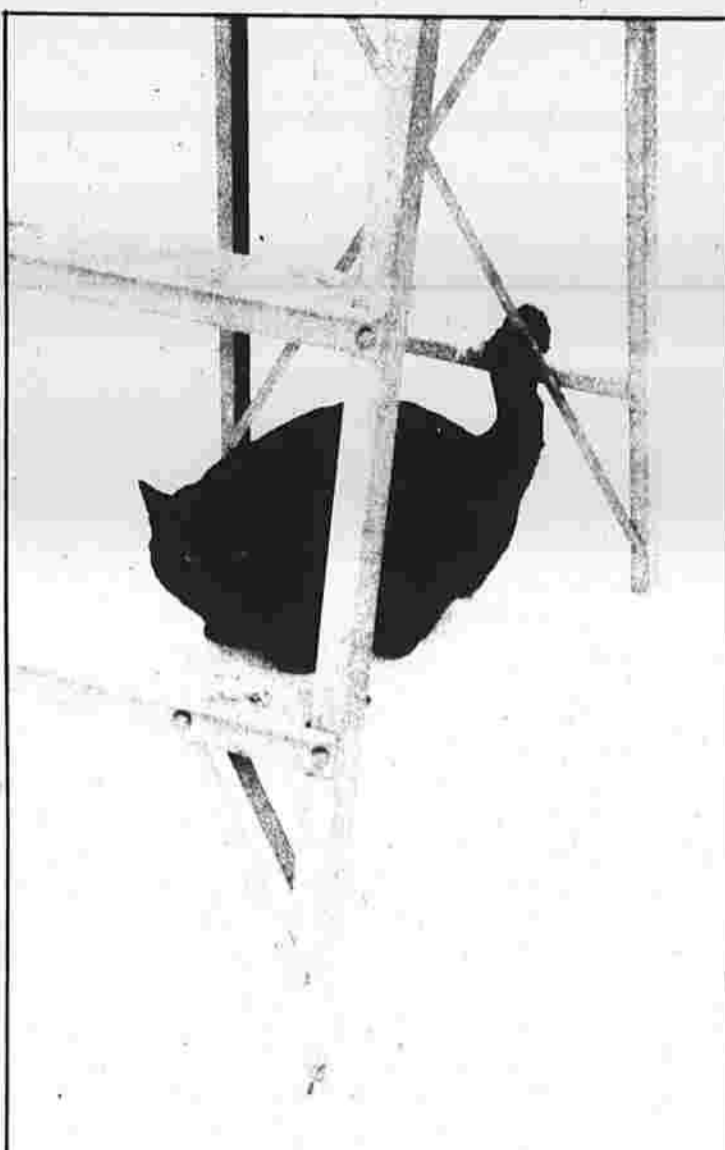

Dad assaults baby sitter, grabs baby

A Manchester man was arrested Thursday after he broke into a School Street home, assaulted a pregnant baby sitter, and fled with his 14-month-old daughter, police said. William R. McCue Jr., 44, of no certain address, broke into the house at 148 School St. at about 3 p.m. when the baby sitter refused to let him in, police said. He allegedly threw the baby sitter against a refrigerator, tore a telephone off a wall, then left the home with his baby daughter. Police said McCue was intoxicated during the incident.

While McCue was in the house, his two sons, ages 4 and 11, hid in an upstairs bedroom, police said. McCue was later apprehended at Manchester Memorial Hospital, where he brought the baby. Police had no information this morning on where the baby or other children are now staying. Police were also unable to say who the owner of the house is.

The baby sitter, Joanne Wohlge-muth, 27, of 278 Hendea Road, was treated at Manchester Memorial Hospital and released. McCue was charged with third-degree assault, threatening, risk of injury to a minor, breach of peace and interfering with an officer. He was held on $15,000 cash bond pending an appearance today in Manchester Superior Court.

A Manchester man arrested Wednesday night on an assault warrant was charged with possession of cocaine while police were serving the warrant. Police said they found a packet of suspected cocaine in the home of Scott R. Royer, 22, of 13 Cedar St. He was held on $10,000 cash bond pending an appearance today in Manchester Superior Court. No information on the assault charge was available.

Take heart

There's plenty to do on Valentine's Day whether or not you have a sweetheart

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter

Looking for a last-minute suggestion on a way to sweep your sweetheart off his or her feet? Or are you hoping that you won't have to spend Valentine's evening alone?

There's plenty to do on Saturday evening, from a candlelight dinner in a 19th century inn to a dance with a decidedly punk flavor. Like to swing and dip? Al Gentle and his WRCQ Band will perform in the huge ballroom at Hershey Lake Campground on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The evening begins with a lavish dinner, and dancing continues until 2 a.m. Cost is $34.95 per person, which covers dinner, dancing to the big band sounds, tax and tip.

Prefer something more freestyle? Dance Hartford will host an evening it calls "expressive, freestyle movement to a variety of music." Everyone is welcome to come and dance, whether they know how to or not. It's aimed at singles, although everyone is welcome. It'll be at the Masonic Hall, 11 S. Main St., West Hartford, from 8:30 to midnight. Call 666-5144.

SINGLES OR COUPLES are welcome at the Hartford Gentlemen's Valentine's Dance in the El Torito Restaurant, 350 Roberts St., East Hartford. For $10 — just $8 if you're wearing red clothing — you'll get six hours of dancing, a full buffet dinner, door prizes and the chance to win a free trip to Mexico. It all starts Saturday at 7 p.m.

Many clubs are featuring dances with low cover charges on Saturday evening. For instance, you'll get in free at The Russian Lady, 191 Ann St. If you're dressed all in red, admission to Wizard's in Tolland is free before 8 p.m., to hear Fountainhead. Then there are the prizes: Ashley Love Connection, in the K-Mart Plaza, Cromwell, promises romantic nights, chauffeured limousine rides, dinner for two at the Hawthorne Inn and an overnight stay at the Grandmoor in Newton to some of the lucky couples — or singles — who show up Saturday night.

You'll find romance of a different kind in Leonard Bernstein's "Trouble in Tahiti."

This brief opera, sung in English, is about a couple who bicker over their morning coffee and toast, until they come up with a rather creative solution to their marital difficulties. It will be presented tonight and Saturday at 8 p.m. by the Connecticut Opera in Bushnell Memorial Hall, Hartford, and will share the bill with "I Pagliacci" by Ruggiero Leoncavallo. Tickets range from $7 to $38. For reservations, call 246-6591. If you're interested, call 617-347-3365.

Not quite extravagant enough? How about a $100 evening, which includes dinner for two at the Homish Oyster House in Hartford, a night at the Ramada Inn on Asylum Street, and a continental breakfast on Sunday morning. Call 246-6591 if you're interested. You say you'd drive anywhere for a good show? Why not head for Springfield, to hear a Springfield Symphony program called "Sweetheart Pops" on Village, Sturbridge, Mass., for a concert and dinner. Bancho Musicale will perform music by Bach and Handel in a 7 p.m. concert in the Visitors' Center Theater. This will be followed by a candlelight dinner in Bullard Tavern. The entire evening costs $25 per person. For reservations, call 617-347-3365.

Want to involve the kids? You'll find love in the Wadsworth Athenaeum's galleries, in a program called Holiday H-Arts. At 11 a.m., you'll begin with a tour of scenes of romance in the museum's paintings and sculptures. A poetry and Valentine-making workshop will follow. It costs $3 for children or adults.

The Valentine's Day "happening" at the Lutz Children's Museum will run from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday. Kids can celebrate this special holiday with a variety of crafts and games. Make valentines for your special friends and even for a pet in your home. It's free for members; $1 for non-members.

A mother's survival guide during winter break week

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter

The mid-winter vacation from school looms. There are snowmen to build and frosty hills to be scaled. But there are engaging activities to enjoy indoors, as well. Here are some activities offered at nearby museums for those days when your younger comes in from the cold, declaring he's just too chilled to go back outside.

Attress and storyteller Gertrude Blanks will weave fascinating Afro-American tales at the Wadsworth Athenaeum on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 1 p.m., in conjunction with black history month and the exhibition called Images of Black American History. The presentations are free, as is admission to the museum, for those who are 13 or under. On Tuesday, the storytelling will be followed by a free 50-minute tour of the black history collection, appropriate for children and adults. For more information, call 278-2876. The museum is at 600 Main St., Hartford.

IT WILL BE a week full of special classes and events at the Lutz Children's Museum. Four films on dental health will be shown each day at 4 p.m., including "The Munchers: A Fable." There are classes every morning. Each is $3 for members, $4.50 for non-members. But enrollment is limited, so be sure to call or stop by at the museum on Saturday to reserve your spot. Tuesday: Use your nose, knees and toes to do balancing tricks you never thought possible. Grades 1 and 2, 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.; Grades 3 through 6, 11 a.m. to noon. Wednesday: Do some simple magic tricks. Kindergarten and grade 1, 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.; grades 2 through 6, 11 a.m. to noon. Thursday: Make 200 of animals from balloons. One class only, grades 3 through 6, 11 a.m. to noon. Friday: Practical jokes, of the harmless variety. Kindergarten and grade 1, 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.; grades 2 through 6, 11 a.m. to noon. Saturday: Juggling. Grades 4 through adult, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. For vacation week only, the hours at the museum will be: Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m., Thursday noon to 8 p.m.

SEND THE KIDS on a scavenger hunt through the halls of the Wadsworth Athenaeum. At 2 p.m.

Wednesday, children will be escorted on a treasure hunt through the museum, which lasts approximately 50 minutes. They'll look for an Egyptian mummy, precious objects made of silver, and much more. The tour is free, as is admission for youngsters age 13 and under. Tours will meet in the main lobby of the museum. Children will make their own puppets and present a show with an ecological theme in a class called Natural Playwrights, at the Connecticut Audubon Society's Holland Brook Center, 1361 Main St., Glastonbury. Kids in kindergarten through grade 2 are welcome, at 2 p.m. Wednesday or 4 p.m. Thursday. Cost is $5 for members, $8 for non-members. Reservations are necessary; call 633-8402.

THERE ARE special activities planned at Old Sturbridge Village in Sturbridge, Mass., for this vacation week. Hands-on activities, such as learning to bind a book with a profile of Washington on the cover, and making a militia-style hat will be offered in the Visitor Center throughout the week. There will be a celebration in honor of George Washington on Monday afternoon, and candle dipping demonstrations Tuesday through next Saturday. Admission is $8.50 for adults, $4 for children ages 6 to 15, and free to those under 6.

The Manchester Recreation Department is sponsoring ski trips to Ski Sundown on Monday and Thursday, and a number of roller skating trips to East Hartford. For details about registration, call 647-3089.

There will be three free showings of the full-length Walt Disney film, "Sleeping Beauty" in West Hartford. The first will be Wednesday at 10 a.m. in the Bishop's Corner Branch, 15 Starkei Road; the second will be Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the main library, 20 S. Main St.; and the last will be at 2 p.m. on Thursday. Advance registration is necessary only if you plan to go to the Bishop's Corner program. Call 556-6286.

It's going to be a busy week at Mystic Seaport Museum, where the winter school vacation period means Family Fun Days. Children and their parents may learn to tie the knots, sew canvas sails and make scrimshaw, roll a cask in the cooperage and use a sextant and other instruments of navigation. At 11:15 a.m. and 2:45 p.m. each day, seaport alumnus will present a special program of sea songs and tales for children. For more information, call 572-0111.

Forget birthdays

Rudolf Firkusny is 75 years young

By Mary Campbell
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — As concert pianist Rudolf Firkusny turned 75, he was asked to think about music rather than birthdays. He remembers things pianist Artur Schnabel, with whom he studied in 1932, and conductor Bruno Walter told him about musical interpretation.

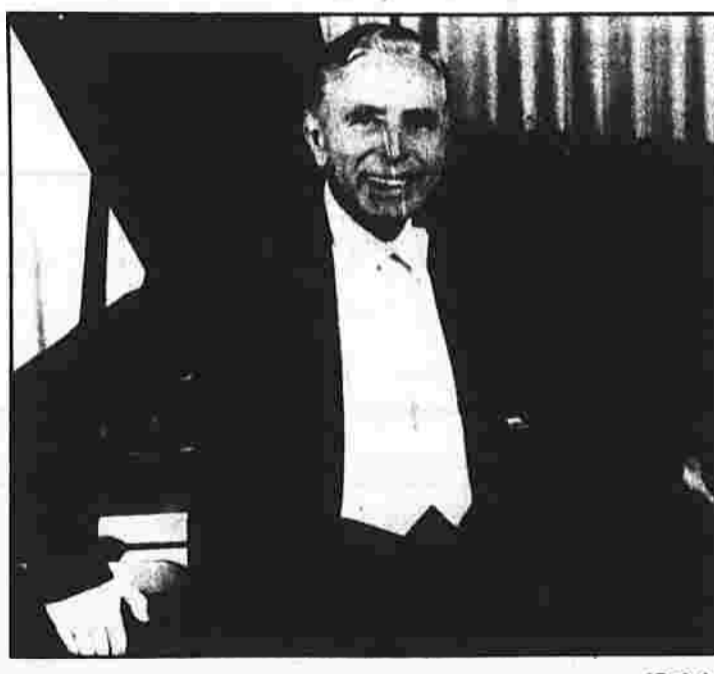

"Walter said we are trying to follow the music as much as we possibly can, as guidelines," said Firkusny, whose birthday was Feb. 11. "But he always thinks of the chapter in Dostoevsky's 'The Brothers Karamazov' in which Dmitri goes on the sleigh and says, 'Now I am driving.'"

"When you finally come to the concert, you say, 'Now I am driving.' We want to be very faithful. At the end, we want to show we are doing it, you know. Schnabel used to say that the ground has to be solid. Then you can fly. That is what we call preparation."

Firkusny was born in Napajedla, Czechoslovakia, and made his debut in Prague at age 10 with the Czech Philharmonic. He's appearing with that orchestra this season in New York City. He is married to Bohuslav Martinu's Concerto No. 2. "He will play in the United States 32 times this season."

"I wasn't quite comfortable for me," Firkusny said of the concerto. "He had me very much in mind. We met about the time he started writing this piece... Martinu was writing violin in an orchestra. He was able to manage on the piano. As we became friends, he usually came and showed me pieces which he was doing and asked if it was pianistic. Strangely enough, it was. He wrote very well for piano."

"When we moved to New York during the war we lived in the same street. With the third concerto, which he dedicated to me, he came practically every day with what he did. He wanted to do something which would be played after the war in Prague."

Concert pianist Rudolf Firkusny stands before the tool of his trade. He turned 75 on Wednesday.

war started and went to New York in 1941. "I consider my real debut playing the Antonin Dvorak 'Piano Concerto' at a Dvorak celebration concert in Ravinia, near Chicago, in the summer of 1941," he said.

He went to South America in 1943 and was very successful. His career developed slowly as he played first in small American towns and then with major orchestras. "I wasn't a big meteor which comes and very soon also drops down," he said. "I was very happy about this. I had time to mature, study and prepare repertoire. I'm still playing."

The pianist, who married 21 years ago, has a daughter and son in college. He met his wife in Czechoslovakia during a visit to his mother. The family speaks Czech at home. "I think it is good to keep the native language. I always feel very close to my roots." Firkusny's father died when he was 3. Soon thereafter, he started to "produce some kinds of sounds which were very agreeable to my ear" on the piano. His mother moved to Brno to find him a teacher. All but one said he was too young. To his mother's embarrassment, her stubborn son soon quit that teacher but continued playing.

"Word went around," Firkusny said. "Men came and told my mother that somebody who understands about music should decide if I had talent or not. They arranged an audition for me with (composer) Leoš Janacek. After success in Vienna he was respected in Brno as a great authority. He had a reputation of being very critical and an enemy of children prodigies. Friends of my mother warned her. I wanted to go. I was 5."

Schrader, Parsons race to victories at Daytona

By Dick Brinster
The Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Ken Schrader began celebrating the moment he hit the finish line even though he didn't know who had won. The victory Thursday, the first of Schrader's Winston Cup career, wasn't confirmed until a photo of the finish was examined. It showed him edging Bill Elliott by four inches to win the first of two 125-mile qualifying races for Sunday's $1.8-million Daytona 500.

"I didn't know, but I started celebrating anyway because we finished at least second," said Schrader, whose showing demonstrated that Elliott's is not the only Ford to be reckoned with Sunday. But the cars also gave hope to General Motors drivers, who had taken a backseat to the faster Fords all week.

lose control of his car. He gathered it back in, but was forced to wait until the final lap to make a move. "It felt like all four wheels came off the ground," said Elliott, the 1985 Daytona 500 winner. "That sort of changed my strategy."

Fred-up Burns leads Williams

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

LA JOLLA, Calif. — George Burns says part of the credit for his pace-setting, course-record 63, should go to veteran Ray Floyd. "When you're paired with Ray Floyd, you're playing with one of the greatest competitors in all of sports," Burns said.

The scoreboard reflected that estimate. The seven best scorers all played on the 6,659-yard North course.

But defending champion Bob Tway was not able to take advantage of the shorter, easier course in the cool, cloudy weather.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain, making his debut in the 1987 season, reached three of the par-5s in two.

"One of the best rounds I've played in a long time," Burns said. "I'm pretty proud of it. It was a pretty good round."

Burns did not make a bogey. He hit the green on the 18th hole and reached three of the par-5s in two.

"I had a chance to shoot even lower," said Burns, who missed one birdie putt from about three feet but failed to get the putt in.

Holyfield and Tillman together again, but as opponents on Valentine's Day

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
The Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — Evander Holyfield and Henry Tillman haven't seen each other since they were roommates at the 1984 Olympics.

"They will get together again on Valentine's Day. I'm not in the name of friendship," Holyfield said.

Holyfield will defend his World Boxing Association junior heavyweight title against Tillman Saturday in a scheduled 15-round bout at Billy's Reno Hotel and Casino.

"Henry and I were friends in the Olympics and we're still friends, but he wants something I have, and I'm not willing to give it to him," Holyfield said Thursday at a news conference.

"What Holyfield would like to do Saturday is move inside on Tillman and keep the pressure on," Tillman said.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Johan Kriek slammed a dozen aces, three straight in the final game, to defeat John McEnroe 7-5, 6-4 and eliminate the No. 5 seed in the third round of the U.S. Indoor Tennis Championships.

Kriek, seeded 11th, said Thursday night he has been working hard on his serve.

"I've completely changed my serve around and just this week it seems to have sparked. I've never served so well in my life," he said.

"I played about a near-perfect game," Kriek said. "I can't be any happier than I am right now."

McEnroe said he has not returned to top form since taking a nearly seven-month layoff last year.

"Things just don't seem to be going my way recently," he said. "I'm disappointed to put it mildly," he said.

Kriek, ranked 27th in the world, defeated McEnroe in the final round of the U.S. Indoor in 1982.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After a virtually mistake-free first set, top-seeded Hana Mandlikova was brought back to reality in the second round of the $150,000 Virginia Slims of California tennis tournament.

Alycia Moulton, an aggressive player from Sacramento, Calif., who has taken Mandlikova to three sets before, did it again Thursday night. But the Czechoslovakian

Then, Tillman won a gold medal in the 201-pound class at the Los Angeles Olympics, while Holyfield had to settle for a bronze medal at 178 pounds following a controversial disqualification in a semifinal bout.
