WEATHER

NATIONAL FORECAST — The Accu-Weather forecast for Saturday predicts rain and thunderstorms for most of the eastern half of the nation with continuing snow expected for the eastern and southern Plains.

MORNING WEATHER — Today's weather satellite picture recorded at 3:30 a.m. shows snow-producing clouds over the Central Rockies and the Northern Plains. Scattered showers and thunderstorms are visible over the Texas panhandle and the Central Gulf Coast. Layered rain clouds stretch from the lower Mississippi Valley to the Southeast Coast. High clouds cover the lower Great Lakes region.

Connecticut forecast

Eastern Interior: Tonight, partly cloudy. Low 20 to 25. Saturday, cloudy with a 50 percent chance of mixed rain and snow late in the day. High in the low 40s.

Central, Southwest Interior: Tonight, partly cloudy. Low 20 to 25. Saturday, cloudy with a 50 percent chance of rain late in the day. High 40 to 45.

West Coastal: Tonight, partly cloudy. Low near 30. Saturday, cloudy with a 50 percent chance of rain during the afternoon. High 40 to 45.

Northwest Hills: Tonight, partly cloudy. Low near 20. Saturday, cloudy with a 50 percent chance of snow or mixed rain and snow during the afternoon. High around 40.

Across the nation

A powerful storm howled into the Plains today with snow and winds up to 30 mph, while heavy rain fell along the lower Gulf Coast.

A mixture of rain, sleet and snow slickened roads from the North Carolina mountains to West Virginia.

The storm spread snow from western Nebraska into eastern Wyoming, and its gusty 20-30 mph winds generated considerable blowing and drifting snow in the Nebraska Panhandle.

In Nebraska, at least 12 inches of snow fell in Chadron, with 10 inches in Kimball and Sidney and 9 inches at Scottsbluff.

In six hours overnight, 4 inches of snow fell at Casper, Wyo.; 3 inches at Fort Collins, Colo.; 2 inches at Cheyenne, Wyo., and Rapid City, S.D., and an inch in Denver and Akron, Colo.

Winter storm warnings were posted for the Nebraska Panhandle, east central Wyoming and the southern New Mexico mountains. Travelers' advisories for snow and hazardous driving conditions were issued for sections of Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona.

Heavy rain fell from east Texas across the lower Gulf Coast, dumping heavy rain and flooding watches for the Texas panhandle and the Southeast Coast. High winds were reported in Texas, Alabama and in the Florida Panhandle.

Travelers' advisories for slippery roads were in effect in the mountains of southern West Virginia, northern South Carolina and southwest Virginia.

New England and much of New York state and Pennsylvania had fair skies, and skies were generally clear to partly cloudy in California, Nevada and Utah.

RX For MD's?

New proposals seek to ease the financial burdens a catastrophic illness can impose on a family. The ancient Chinese had a unique way of avoiding the poverty that illness can cause. They only paid doctors for keeping them well. And doctors often had to make payments to PATIENTS who became sick. If a patient died, a special lantern was hung outside the doctor's house. A doctor who collected too many of these lanterns might find himself short of paying customers.

Youth commission will try to find youths to be members

By John Mitchell Herald Reporter

Commission on Children and Youth members agreed Thursday that their group should continue to function as an advisory committee for youth concerns, even though the youngest person present was 24 years old.

During a meeting called by Mayor Barbara Weinberg and attended by nine adults in Lincoln Center's gold room, members decided to study restructuring the group and work to involve more youth.

"If it's the youth commission, the emphasis should be on youth," said Greg Kane, a former member. "They are Manchester's future."

The commission was created in 1978 to get teenagers to address town and youth concerns.

Along with Kane, former members Mary Sears, Corrine Lonsio and Robert Comolito described how important the commission was in its early years. Safe Rides, TLC's home for troubled teens, and a girls' soccer field all were ideas which grew from commission discussions.

"I'm amazed how much we did do in those years," Kane said. "Lately the commission has had few meetings because, members said, students do not attend regularly. In addition, the panel has never really known exactly what role it should play. Sears noted that a lot of the time, members had to find causes themselves.

Most concerned students, Comolito said, have so many outside activities that they never had time for the commission. "You've got to have a project to keep their interest," he said.

The panel now has eight youth members from various schools in Manchester and five adult members. Chairman Steve Gates said three students at most have ever attended at any one time. "I don't know who we're representing if there's three students here," he said.

"My frustration is the legitimacy of this committee," said member Tom Lattagoo. He said the panel needed to report to other town bodies. "It's not plugged in," he said.

Members agreed the commission should continue to exist, despite a letter from Town Director Steven T. Cassano calling for abolishing the group and replacing it with townwide youth forums, involving participants from public and private schools.

"Doing away with it will, I think, just create a need later," said chairman Gates. "It's got to stay," said Lonsio. "There's too much here."

Kane suggested that members draft a policy to present to the Board of Directors.

Other ideas included getting student government leaders involved on school time, focusing the commission on organizing summer activities for local young people, and putting the commission on the Board of Directors' agenda regularly.

"I think it's too important a resource for us to walk away from," Weinberg said. The Board of Directors will meet March 10 and she will inform them of the commission plans.

Making it a forum for youth about youth, with as little adult interference as possible, will give it purpose, continuity and goals, Kane said.

But the problem remained. George Emmerling, a commission member who is a former principal at Manchester High School, looked around and wondered, like the others, where the young people were.

"Do we really know and understand what these kids want today," he asked. "If there's no interest here, then we'd be wasting our time."

Man admits assault in wife's shooting

By Andrew Yurkovsky Herald Reporter

HARTFORD — A Manchester man charged with attempted murder in the Dec. 21 shooting of his wife pleaded guilty to lesser charges Thursday in Hartford Superior Court.

Gregory J. Fontaine, 27, of 22B St. James St., pleaded guilty to first-degree reckless assault. Last month, he had pleaded innocent to the original charges of attempted murder, first-degree assault and first-degree reckless endangerment.

Fontaine's new plea was entered under the Alford Doctrine, which permits a defendant to acknowledge the state's evidence without admitting guilt.

State's Attorney Lawrence Daily recommended a 15-year suspended sentence, with five years of probation, on the condition that Fontaine undergo alcohol and drug treatment and submit to random drug analysis. Daily said that Fontaine's wife, Karen Fontaine, 31, agreed with the recommendation.

Mr. Fontaine believes he is innocent of attempting to disfigure his wife in this manner," said public defender Susan Storey, explaining the new plea to Judge Herbert Barall.

Fontaine stood before the bench in jeans and a checkered shirt, answering "yes" as Barall asked him whether he understood the ramifications of his plea.

Fontaine is accused of firing one round at his wife from a 12-gauge shotgun while his 3- and 5-year-old sons stood by. After the shooting, he fled from his home and crashed his car into a tree a short distance from the house, police said. He left the car on the road and was later apprehended nearby on Park Street.

"According to police, the shooting followed a quarrel by the couple over the children and money matters. Karen Fontaine, who was injured in the right arm, was released from Hartford Hospital Jan. 5.

Fontaine faces additional charges of drunken driving, failure to have insurance, misuse of registration, operating an unregistered motor vehicle, evading responsibility and traveling too fast. He is scheduled to appear March 6 in Hartford Superior Court for sentencing. On the assault charge, he faces a maximum penalty of 20 years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

State Bank gets OK for branch

Manchester State Bank has been given the go-ahead by the Banking Commission to open a new branch office on Tolland Turnpike, the department announced.

The office, to be located at 1046 Tolland Turnpike, will be the second branch of the Manchester-based bank. The other branch was opened at 185 Spencer St. in 1977, according to department spokesman Larissa Hull. The bank's main office is at 104 Main St.

The bank applied for permission to open the new office in January, and the decision was made last week, Hull said. Among the criteria involved in the decision was the financial condition of the bank, whether the new location would provide a good market and if the expansion would comply with state laws.

Bolton teacher headed for Mystic

BOLTON — Denise Kennedy, an English teacher at Bolton High School, has been accepted to attend a Mystic Seaport Museum teachers' institute, "19th Century Life at Sea and Ashore," to be held March 13 to 16.

The school said the institute involves a weekend workshop on board the Joseph Conrad, the museum's 1822 Danish square-rigged training vessel; three Saturdays of guided independent study; and a class field trip for Kennedy's American literature students.

The project is supported by a grant from the Connecticut Humanities Council, the state committee of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Directors will hear complaints

Manchester residents who have complaints, comments or suggestions can talk to members of the town Board of Directors Tuesday from 9 to 10 a.m. at the directors' office in the Municipal Building.

Sessions will be held on the first Tuesday of each month at 9 a.m. and the third Thursday of each month from 8:30 to 7:30 p.m. today.

Town seeks bids to clear trees

The town of Manchester is seeking bids to cut down trees on 40 acres of town-owned watershed land near the Buckingham Reservoir in Glastonbury, Water Administrator Robert Young said today.

Approximately 77,000 board feet of timber have been marked to be cut and sold on land east of Sawmill Road. The wood must be cleared between May 1 and July 30, he said.

Young explained that the project is part of the normal process of clearing trees from the roughly 34,000 acres of town-owned watershed land.

Board accepts Keeney school report

The philosophy and objectives report of Keeney Street School was accepted by the Board of Education as part of the formal evaluation of the school, a chairman of the committee which drafted it said.

The philosophy states that the school exists "to provide an enriching environment in which the individuality of each student is of the highest consideration."

With that in mind, the reports notes, the objective is to "help each child to discover, develop and enjoy his or her own potential as a rational, creative human being, able and willing to sustain his or her well-being and to contribute to the well-being of others."

Keeney Street School, along with Nathan Hale School, have begun a three-to-five-year pilot program to become the first elementary schools in town to gain accreditation from the New England Association of Schools and Colleges. Almost 300 New England elementary schools, including 49 in Connecticut, have become pilot schools for the program.

More Magnum P.I.

Actor Tom Selleck says CBS's offer of more selective freedoms has persuaded him to return for an eighth season of "Magnum, P.I." despite uneven ratings for the Hawaii-based detective drama.

"Universal Studios and the network have offered 'Magnum' creative opportunities that we have had in mind for the series for a long time," Selleck said Thursday in Los Angeles.

"Magnum" had been among the network's top-rated shows until it fell victim to NBC's "The Cosby Show." Moving to Wednesday, the show beat ABC's "Dynasty" for several weeks and now runs a close second.

Shultz a tiger

Secretary of State George P. Shultz has no secrets left. His wife has had the last "tiger" out of the bag.

Helena Shultz told reporters Thursday her husband has a tiger tattoo, which he got while a student at Princeton University. She made her comments aboard the secretary's plane en route via Anchorage, Alaska, to Hong Kong and China.

Shultz had declined to confirm a report that first surfaced in a society column last month that he had a tiger tattoo on his buttocks. "I don't have any secrets left," he said then. "That's the only thing I have left, what is on my rear end."

The actor, whose recent movie "Top Gun" soared at the box office, received 27,037 of the 70,980 votes received from viewers in a special call-in Feb. 19 show spokeswoman Jan Fisher said Thursday in Los Angeles.

Don Johnson of "Miami Vice" was second with 19,565 votes, Paul Newman third with 14,865, Denzel Washington fourth with 8,878 and William Hurt fifth with 6,006, she said.

Brady meets kids

James Brady, the presidential press secretary critically wounded in the 1981 attack on President Reagan, has met with a group of children in Houston recovering from head injuries to give them encouragement.

"If this fat old bum can make it, they can make it, too," Brady said Thursday at Houston Medical Center.

Brady was confined to a wheelchair after being shot by John Hinckley, who also wounded the president. Doctors initially did not expect Brady to survive his head wound.

Brady's wife, Sarah, said she tells parents of recovering children to be patient.

Connecticut In Brief

Union pushes for end to consultants

HARTFORD — A union representing state employees wants the legislature to restrict the use of outside consultants by state agencies, claiming the consultants are sometimes used to circumvent state hiring regulations.

To make its point, the Connecticut State Employees Association on Thursday brought in a former state consultant to testify before the legislature's Labor and Public Employees Committee.

Donald Deitch of West Hartford worked seven years as a mechanical engineer under the state's "personnel service agreement" with the state Bureau of Public Works before he was finally hired as a regular state employee last year.

"It is time to stop the abuse of the personnel service agreement," Deitch testified. Such agreements "should not be used as an end-run around proper and normal hiring practices and to circumvent state regulations," he said.

State works on transportation plan

HARTFORD — State Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns is recommending a plan under which Connecticut would spend $3 million to improve transportation services for its elderly and disabled residents.

The proposal was developed by the state Department of Transportation following a series of 12 regional public hearings and a two-year planning study of the transportation needs of the elderly and disabled, the department said in a prepared statement issued Thursday.

Elderly and disabled people at the meetings had the opportunity to present their opinions of the quality of the transportation services provided to them, the department said.

"We learned first-hand from the users and providers of specialized transportation services what problems they have with these services and what suggestions they have for solving any problems," Burns said.

Uretex appears more willing to talk

NEW HAVEN — A union official who wants to negotiate a contract for the striking employees of Uretex Inc. says there is "some movement" toward getting the company to talk with the workers.

Daniel Perez, an organizer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, said Thursday that the company may be more willing to sit down with the union in light of recent court developments regarding Uretex. The company has been hit with a string of reports concerning environmental and worker-health issues in the last weeks.

Superior Court Judge Thomas Minard decided on Wednesday to take into account Uretex's current work practices when he sentences the company on a hazardous waste disposal and storage conviction, Perez noted.

If the company shows a willingness to talk to its workers, it might reflect well to the judge, he said.

The sentencing is for March 23. Uretex and one of its officials face a fine of up to $50,000 while the executive, John Andrews, could get a two-year prison term.

Critics slam Meotti's bill

HARTFORD — Passing a law aimed at protecting public agencies from harassment would only give those agencies an excuse to refuse legitimate requests from the public, the head of the state Freedom of Information Commission says.

"This thing is potentially very damaging," said Mitchell W. Pearlman, executive director of the commission. "It could be used by agencies to get around supplying copies of everything. Every agency in the world is going to do this all the time (and) say everything is harassment."

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Michael P. Meotti, D-Glastonbury, was to be aired at a public hearing before Government Administration Elections Committee today. Pearlman is expected to testify.

Under the measure, a municipality would be able to seek permission from Pearlman's commission to deny requests for information or copies of records "from a person who makes repeated requests which constitute harassment."

Meotti said he submitted the bill at the request of Glastonbury officials who say they've been harassed by a local resident demanding copies of everything from the town's sewer pipes to obscenities and "quasi-truths." He said Glastonbury officials would testify at the hearing.

L.L. Bean sued over painting

DANBURY — An irate artist is suing L.L. Bean, claiming the outdoorsmen he depicted in a painting for the cover of the mail-order company's fall catalog was altered to make him look like a "supple" in his attorney says.

Walt Spitzmuller drew a hunter and a golden retriever wading through water. But L.L. Bean removed the hunter's full beard, changed his hat and also changed the face of the dog, according to William Laviano of Ridgefield, attorney for the West Redding artist.

"It's a good thing the dog can't see them," Spitzmuller said in an interview Thursday with the Danbury News-Times.

Woman charged with murder released

HARTFORD — A Hartford woman who had been charged with murder in the death of her newborn baby girl has been released on probation in case described by court officials as pure tragedy.

Carleen Cruz, 21, who had been jailed since August after police discovered the dead newborn in a pile of plastic and paper bags, was released Thursday.

According to court documents, the woman had admitted she had given birth unattended in the bathtub of her apartment and said the newborn appeared dead after it landed in the tub.

The state medical examiner's office ruled the infant had been born alive but had suffocated.

Investigation of the matter led Hartford State's Attorney John M. Bailey to reduce the charge to manslaughter.

Hundreds rally outside hospital

NEW HAVEN — Several hundred supporters joined members of Yale and New Haven labor groups on picket lines outside Yale-New Haven Hospital to protest the hospital's handling of a labor dispute with its food service workers.

The rally Thursday was called to draw support for the 180 members of the Hospital Health Care Employees, District 1189, whose previous contract expired at the end of December. They rejected a contract offer Feb. 1.

At the rally, Jerome Brown, president of District 1189, said a management proposal that employees pay part of their medical bills is unfair. He said the hospital is doing well financially and many employees are single women who support families on an average wage of $7 an hour.

Meteor showers stretch across sky

People across Connecticut reported a bright orange flash zoomed eastward across the sky Thursday night, turning to bright green and blue as it spun towards Earth and disappeared.

"A cigar-shaped orange glow appeared in the sky with sparks coming from the tail end of it. It was travelling so fast I just knew it wasn't an airplane. It was doing warp-factor five. If you know what I mean," said Edward Adams of Wallingford, referring to a common phrase from the popular 1960s television show Star Trek.

Dr. Phillip Lu, an astronomer with the Danbury Weather Center, said that although he didn't see the lights, he believes from the descriptions he's heard that it was a fireball.

Auditors slam comptroller's office

HARTFORD (AP) — The estimated cost of a new computer system at the state comptroller's office has ballooned from $4 million to $62 million over the last decade, prompting state auditors to question whether the project is worth the money.

"It comes on line, the computer system is supposed to streamline the handling of payroll, accounting and retirement systems and provide state agencies with information to help planning and budgeting."

In an audit report released today, the state auditors detail the latest snarl in the computer project, problems in the comptroller's office, including weak controls over inventory and air travel by state employees. The comptroller's office has also been lax in acting on recommendations to tighten operations, the auditors said.

"The costs are far beyond what anyone anticipated," Leo V. Donohue, Democratic state auditor, said of the computer project.

"I have to wonder whether it's worth the money," said Henry J. Becker Jr., the Republican state auditor.

But Comptroller J. Edward Caldwell insists that "everything is under control, good control."

Donohue and Becker repeated a series of recommendations from their 1986 report on the office and made several new ones in the audit, which covers the year ending June 30, 1986.

Caldwell agreed that the effort to install the new computer systems has been troubled and said he has been surprised by the magnitude of the delays cost overruns. About $20 million of the projected $62 million already has been spent.

"The original estimate was ridiculous and the original time frame was ridiculous," Caldwell said of a 1977 report that it would take four years and $4 million to develop a computerized payroll and accounting system.

He said there were different problems with the air travel account criticized by the auditors. Caldwell said the travel agency used by the state reneged on its contract and the state is now fighting the agency in court.

"We issue (airline) tickets and then people change their plans," Caldwell said. "They don't always come right in and drop off the original ticket before they get the new ticket. Then it looks like we have all kinds of things outstanding. We're working on that one."

Said the auditors on the air-travel account: "... cash controls over the travel account continue to be weak."

"If we're going to use the word 'warranty,' I have to question, 'Are we going to get back many of our students?'" he added.

John Kelly, state superintendent of education, said he supported the proposal. "They appreciated the fact that we're going to get back many of our students," he said.

In Boston, the public schools have promised to set education goals to better prepare students for work while businesses, trade unions, colleges and universities have agreed to numerical goals for hiring graduates.

The plan, called the Boston Compact, was started in 1982. Last year, companies in the compact hired 850 of the city's 3,500 high school seniors, said Ferdinand Kolbe, chairman of the Boston Private Industry Council.

A number of colleges, particularly those that train teachers, have also started issuing similar guarantees, promising to re-admit for further training any graduates employers find lacking.

Plan would put warranty on students

CANTON — The schools superintendent wants to strike a blow for public education by hiring business people critical of school systems something they understand: an unconditional warranty for Canton High School graduates.

But some parents who attended a Board of Education meeting Thursday night said they didn't like the proposal because it didn't distinguish between their kids and used cars.

"I know the junior high students — my daughter's in junior high — they don't like being labeled a product," said Patti MacIntyre, mother of a 14-year-old and a 10-year-old son.

School Superintendent C. Frederick Kelley proposed that written guarantees would be issued to all graduates certifying their mastery of reading, writing and mathematics.

In addition, he wants the guarantee to say graduates have passed minimum standards in swimming, swimming and throwing; they can read music and operate a computer keyboard; they understand the requirements of responsible U.S. citizenship and they have performed some community service.

If an employer or college finds an employee or alumnae who does not meet the skill areas, the Canton school district would agree to retrain the individual in high school or adult education class, Kelley said.

A promise that a graduate doesn't smoke could also be included in the guarantee, Kelley said he came up with the warranty proposal, which the school board didn't act on, after reading a book by Tompkins T. Kearns, chief executive officer of Xerox Corp., that the public school system was "falling and close to collapse."

"I came up with the idea because I believe in what we're doing. Why don't we stand behind the product?" Kelley said.

"And if an employer called me up and said, 'Heh, Fred, you find this kid could read and write and I just doesn't help the ones that aren't,'" he said.

"I think the superintendent has struck a blow for all of us who have been in the room," Salvatore said.

Farrington said he is interested in the perception of public education.

"I think the diploma should stand for itself," said David Kubas, parent of students in the kindergarten and fifth grade. "That is the implied warranty."

"We don't have to go to these grandstanding effects to give this thing first-hand from the users and providers of specialized transportation services what problems they have with these services and what suggestions they have for solving any problems," Burns said.

Canton School Superintendent C. Frederick Kelley explains his plan to give graduating seniors the equivalent of a product warranty to the school board.

President Reagan, holding a copy of the Tower Commission report, speaks to reporters briefly in the Old Executive Office Building Thursday. The president's handpicked investigators released their findings on the Iran arms sales.

Commission tells Reagan to pay more attention to his job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clearly, what the Tower commission is asking of Ronald Reagan is that, at age 76, he abandon the hands-off style he honed to a fine point in eight years as a governor and six years as the president.

It tells him to start paying attention to the job and notes bluntly that he might not find himself in the fix his administration is in had he done so before.

The report looks back to the recent years of clandestine involvement with Iran, and not forward to the two years remaining in Reagan's term in which he will try to put the episode behind him.

Reagan was the presidential candidate whose campaign made a virtue out of his toughness, who criticized the incumbent, Jimmy Carter, for his weak dealings with Iran and then — the report says — in absent-mindedly handed into an assessment policy he said he never would adopt.

In his State of the Union address last month Reagan asked that the affair be put behind him, an impossibility because he has revisited in congressional investigations ahead and in the judicial proceedings that loom on the horizon.

That next chapter, the president can't change. What he should change, the report says, is his practice of letting others dominate the running of foreign policy.

It poses this question in Latin: "Quis custodiet ipsos custodes?"

Who will guard the guardians? The NSC (National Security Council) system will not work unless the president makes it work," says the commission's report by his actions by his leadership, the president... determines the quality of its performance.

The commission gives Reagan credit for good intentions. It pictures him as being motivated by intense compassion for the Americans held hostage, but also being blinded by it.

"The president did not seem to be aware of the way in which (arms) operation was implemented and the full consequences of U.S. participation," the report said.

Reagan has made no secret that he sees his role as akin to that of the chairman of the board who chooses from among policy options presented to him and doesn't concern himself with details.

He ticked off his management principles last year in an interview with Fortune magazine.

"Surrender yourself with the best people you can find, delegate authority, and don't interfere as long as the policy you've decided upon is being carried out," he said.

A former Reagan campaign manager, John Sears, said that way of operating harks back to Reagan's Hollywood days. "Actors are surrounded by people with real authority — directors, producers, engineers and so on, yet their authority doesn't detract from the actor's role," he told Fortune. "The star is the star. And if the show's a hit, he gets the credit."

The report shows, however, that Reagan did not ensure that the NSC system did not fail him. The Tower commission said. "At no time did he insist upon accountability and performance review. Had the president chosen to drive the NSC system, the outcome could well have been different."

Reagan has been criticized before for his hands-off management, but he has never apologized for it nor made any attempt to change. William Clark, a previous national security adviser, failed to warn Reagan when word came in the middle of the night that American planes had been in a dogfight with Libyan fighters. There's no record that Reagan complained, however.

The laissez-faire method also came into play when Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III decided to swap jobs — and then told the president about it and got his approval.

The style failed Reagan this time, according to the Tower commission. "The president's failure to insist upon accountability and performance review... hampering home his theme — the National Security Council is only advisory."

Questions unanswered by report

WASHINGTON — The Tower commission is leaving it to future investigators to determine whether any of the profits from secret arms sales to Iran went to the rebels in Nicaragua and who authorized such a diversion.

"Sizable sums of money generated by the arms sale to Iran remain unaccounted for," the report said Thursday in a document which left unresolved several other mysteries in the complex controversy.

"There was considerable evidence before the board of a diversion to support the Contras. But the board had no hard proof," the report said.

"In all, the report said the price charged to Iran was the nearly $20 million excise of what the Pentagon received for the weapons contained in four shipments. And while they concluded that some of that money eventually found its way to the Contra rebels, board members also suggested that some of it went to other groups, including the form of "kickbacks and payoffs."

The Tower Commission was the second — and more comprehensive — attempt to get to the bottom of the foreign policy debacle that has rocked the Reagan administration.

Meese told him, although it said former CIA Director William J. Casey likely received information about the diversion "almost a month before the story broke."

These other questions also await Walsh and the investigators in Congress.

—Did the president give formal approval in writing to the Israeli arms shipments to Iran in the summer of 1985? "On balance, the board believes that it is plausible to conclude that he did approve them in advance," the report said. Reagan at first told the board he had, then — after conferring with chief of staff Donald T. Regan — said he hadn't. Finally, in a letter to the board last week, Reagan wrote, "The simple truth is, I don't remember — period."

—Do official notes exist recounting key meetings at which Pointexter was the official note taker? The commission said it was concerned that various notes appear to be missing and said, "If they were written they may contain very important information. We have no way of knowing if they exist."

—Was there a wider effort to cover up essential elements of the Iran-Contra developments? The board said it is convinced Reagan "does indeed want the full story to be told."

But it said aides who prepared the president's supporting documentation "did not appear, at least initially, to share in the president's ultimate wishes."

"There was considerable evidence before the board of a diversion to support the Contras. But the board had no hard proof," the Tower report said.

And while it uncovered far more information than a quick, three-week probe conducted last December by the Senate Intelligence Committee, it conceded it was unable to resolve several lingering questions.

Untangling these questions now will fall to independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh and special House and Senate committees already at work on their own investigations. Even so, these probes will be forced to confront the same obstacles the Tower Commission faced.

Two key figures in the affair — former National Security Council staff member Oliver L. North and former National Security Adviser John M. Pointexter, have refused to testify. It may take months for investigators to gain access to records from bank accounts in Switzerland and elsewhere, and while Israelis who played a key role have agreed to respond to written questions, they have not agreed to answer questions in person.

The central questions revolve around the apparent diversion of funds to the Contras.

Control of covert operations

Private citizens in foreign policy

"The structure established in the act is sound, problems arose because the structure was not used or was circumvented. No changes in the law itself are needed, but the president must make it work."

"The commission finds problems in subjecting the National Security Adviser to Senate confirmation and recommends against such a change, even though Reagan's adviser, John Pointexter, 'failed grievously.'"

"The NSC should not conduct operations, including covert operations, except under extraordinary circumstances, and only after careful study, full review by knowledgeable officials, and explicit presidential approval."

"The government should not use private individuals to carry out diplomatic initiatives 'except in very limited ways and under close observation and supervision.'"

Israel calls arms deal internal matter

By Sergei Sharogrodsky The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — A spokesman for Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said today the Tower commission report showed that arms deals with Iran were mostly an internal American matter, but promised to provide further information about Israel's role.

Israeli officials expressed relief that the report released in Washington on Thursday did not make Israel a scapegoat. The report said U.S. decision-makers had to bear responsibility for the secret arms sales however much Israel encouraged such dealings.

"Our impression is that indeed it turns out Israel was not the focus, and that it is mostly an internal American matter," Shamir spokesman Yossi Altimir said in a telephone interview.

After the report was issued, Shamir met with Cabinet Secretary Eliakim Rubinstein, who was assigned to coordinate Israel's side of the investigation, but promised to "We plan to answer the questions (U.S. investigators) give us in writing," said Altimir.

Rubinstein, who accompanied Shamir to Washington last week, received questions from the Tower commission Feb. 16, but Israeli officials said there was not enough time to respond before the report was published. Officials did not indicate when Israel's response would be completed.

A Shamir aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Israel planned to hand over a single written account of Israel's role to four separate U.S. investigations of the weapons deals.

"We will reply to the American government. We operate on a government-to-government basis," the aide said.

Israel's decision to give a written version of events, rather than allowing Israeli officials to testify, caused some friction with U.S. investigators. But Shamir has insisted direct questioning would infringe Israeli sovereignty.

Abba Eban, chairman of the Israeli Parliament's Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee, which has launched its own investigation of Israel's role, said on Israeli radio that the United States had no cause to be angry with Israel.

"It is true that the whole operation was a mistake and a miscalculation, but in all stages American and Israel were in it together," Eban said from Washington.

"I must say to the credit of the Tower commission that they are not trying to shift the blame onto Israel," he added.

Israeli officials in recent months expressed fear that Israel would be made a scapegoat for American policymakers.

U.S. gave arms, cake to Iranians

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hidden among the other findings of the Tower commission report was new information on the cake that was taken as a gift to the Iranians by the American delegation to Tehran last May.

The delegation, accompanying a plenipotentiary of weapons for Iran, bought the cake at a bakery in Tel Aviv.

New home found for jailed teenager

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A 17-year-old with severe learning disabilities was headed to a residential treatment center today after the jail where he spent several weeks because of a bureaucratic snarl.

Michael McLeese was ordered jailed on a variety of criminal charges until a suitable facility could be found. McLeese has an IQ of 25 and severe learning and emotional disabilities.

He languished in jail because of problems his case posed for state social service agencies.

The state Department of Mental Health can't help him because he's not ill. The Department of Mental Retardation can't help because he's not retarded. Officials at the state Department of Children and Youth Services have been unable to find a home for him because of his age and history of setting fires.

But Thursday, DCYS found a treatment home in the New Haven area willing to accept McLeese.

The breakthrough came one day after DCYS handling of the case was criticized by a Superior Court judge, and the same day the case was publicized in The Hartford Courant.

David Kaplan, the public defender representing McLeese on criminal matters, said he didn't know the movement in his client's case was the result of the publicity or a coincidence.

"Things are starting to move... it's a positive sign," said Kaplan who disclosed that DCYS had found a treatment center interested in taking the teen-ager. McLeese's from the New Haven jail was delayed until today to give court officials time to complete the necessary paperwork, Kaplan said.

He declined to provide the name of the facility. He said, however, McLeese will undergo a one-month evaluation before it was determined whether the teen could remain long term.

Ray Farrington, head of the DCYS unit that places children, said McLeese would be accepted at the residential facility, provided the teen's mother approved. He said since McLeese is not a ward of the state, the youth's mother had to approve the location.

He said another concern is that McLeese adjusts to living in a treatment facility. The costs of housing the teen will be paid by DCYS.

"The court could have order him (McLeese) to a psychiatric hospital or ordered us to take custody," Farrington said. "We've been trying to come up with a plan that makes sense."

Farrington said the placement process was "hastened" and extra effort was made to place McLeese after the case was publicized.

The youth has even written in finding a treatment center for McLeese after becoming frustrated with the apparent lack of action by state agencies. Kaplan said it is outside his responsibilities to find a home for McLeese, saying that is the job of other state agencies.

"Simply, there are large cracks between the realms and chores of large (state) agencies," he said.

"It's often accepted that we have large cracks and we have to lose a few. I didn't find that acceptable."

Kaplan had enlisted the help of the Yale Legal Clinic, Legal Assistance in New Haven and the Connecticut Civil Liberties Union to represent McLeese in finding shelter. Kaplan said he wanted the legal assistance groups to seek a court order forcing DCYS to act in the Accused slasher gets bail hearing

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A Connecticut state prison guard, held on $100,000 bail on charges of slaying four members of a Springfield family, was ordered to return to court today for a bail-review hearing, according to court officials.

Morris Johnson, 26, of Springfield, who worked at a state prison in Somers, pleaded innocent Wednesday at his arraignment in Hampden Superior Court on charges of attempted murder and assault.

Judge Charles Alberti had set bail at $100,000 pending today's hearing.

Out of beer on holiday? Plan ahead

A state lawmaker's inability to anticipate the thirst of his holiday guests has produced an unusual alliance between liquor store owners and anti-drunk driving activists.

It seems Sen. Steven C. Casey of Bristol ran out of beer at a family picnic last July 4, and came up with the idea for a bill that would allow package stores to sell alcohol on Independence Day, Memorial Day and Labor Day. The bill, co-sponsored by Senate Minority Leader Reginald J. Smith of New Hartford, is now before the Legislature's General Law Committee.

Anti-drunk driving activists have harshly criticized the bill on the grounds that it would promote drinking and driving. They may have a point.

The holidays targeted by the bill typically involve parties at which alcohol plays a big role. The tragic results on the highways are already legion. Although most bars remain open on holidays, opening up package stores would allow motorists who have already been drinking to purchase alcohol for the road. Parties at which too much alcohol has already been consumed would also be prolonged if the stores were allowed to remain open, and intoxicated partygoers in search of more would have reason to go on the road.

Package store owners have also expressed a distaste for the Casey-Smith bill, but for different reasons. Like most of us, the store owners like to get a day off now and then. If the bill passes, they say the threat of competition would force them to stay open on the holidays, although the amount of extra business would not justify it.

Connecticut residents have already learned to live with the early closing hours of package stores, and most simply stop up ahead of time. Holidays should be no different than Sundays.

Legislators weighing the Casey-Smith bill have already been bombarded with moral, practical and economic arguments both for and against the bill. In the end, they must decide whether it is worth risking additional deaths on state roads to accommodate the few who have trouble planning ahead.

Good times spell bad news for networks

The New York Times put it on the front page. CBS denied it, but in the days following it became clear that the budget for the news department at the network of the unblinking eye was being cut a second time within a year. The number of viewers is down, advertising is soft and the network whose news operation once had it all, profits plus prestige, was bleeding huge losses.

Twenty years ago network news didn't make money but the home office was willing to absorb the modest losses because it was classy to make like journalists, and putting news on the air gave the companies working in this highly regulated industry a certain leverage in Washington. Today commercial broadcasting is de facto deregulated and the only thing that looks classy to the business executive of 1987 is a stock selling so high he can sleep at night without dreaming of corporate raiders.

CBS, WHICH USED to be the premiere broadcast news organization, is dropping into second place behind NBC. What's more, its news department personnel, once considered special, are now rated as competent but ordinary. To work at CBS now no longer gives a person the right to strut, but, if you're Dan Rather and you're making an estimated $2 to $3 million a year, you've got other reasons to throw out your chest. Your compensation equals that of a center in the National Basketball League or the president of General Motors, and in a society where you are only as good as your paycheck says you are, that means you're tops.

All network news watching is off, down about 15 percent from 10 years ago, and this is in spite of efforts to make news watching easy viewing with

It's a period of paralysis

By George Geddo

WASHINGTON — Three hours before the Tower commission report was issued, Secretary of State George P. Shultz left for China, telling reporters he has no plans to quit and the Iran-contra affair will not affect foreign policy.

But the evidence suggests the affair already has impaired America's dealings with the outside world, and a number of experts wonder whether the administration's home stretch will be a period of paralysis.

Ever since the arms-for-hostages deal was disclosed almost four months ago, Shultz has been waging an uphill struggle to restore credibility to U.S. anti-terrorism policy.

The Europeans have been particularly mystified by the approach to Iran, given the repeated American appeals for an international arms boycott of Iran and for a policy of no negotiations with terrorists.

In the Middle East, King Hussein of Jordan has made known his displeasure with American policies by passing word that he's not interested for now in accepting President Reagan's invitation for an Oval Office visit.

JORDAN IS a strong supporter of Iraq and believes an Iranian victory would mean disaster for Arab moderates.

In a recent interview, Hussein said, "The last thing that you ever expect was that the U.S. would augment the military machine of Iran. The U.S. has lost its credibility in this area totally."

Asked about that problem Thursday, Shultz said, "Our credibility is not weakened," adding that he will renew his concerns about China's arms sales to Iran when he meets with that country's leaders starting this weekend.

As for the contra, there are strong doubts Reagan can win congressional approval for the $105 million he plans to request for the rebels later this year.

Reagan was able to turn the Congress around on that issue last year but since the Iran-contra connection was exposed, his critics sense that his presidency has been weakened and that the tide has swung against him.

THAT ASSESSMENT was reinforced by the Tower commission, which minced few words in sizing up Reagan's performance.

"With such a complex, high-risk operation, and so much at stake," in the Iran dealings, the commission said, "the president should have ensured that the (National Security Council) system did not fail."

"He did not force his policy to undergo the most critical review of the NSC participants and the process was capable. At no time did he insist on accountability or performance review."

The arms sales created an incentive for taking hostages and "the result taken as a whole was a U.S. policy that worked against itself," the report says.

Despite Reagan's bold prediction last week that, "We're saving the best staff for the last act," a number of reports quoted this week by The Wall Street Journal look at that remark as empty bravado.

Former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger: "American policy over the next two years will likely turn out to be a holding pattern."

DUKE UNIVERSITY political scientist James David Barber: "Not much is going to happen in the rest of Reagan's presidency... The quietude could well be tragic. This is a chaotic world and we are going to be on the sidelines."

Former National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski said Reagan has about four weeks to "install a new team in one quick swoop" or face "very deleterious consequences for American national interest."

The housecleaning Brzezinski recommended will under way with the departures of Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter and Lt. Col. Oliver L. North from the NSC. Also expected in the coming days is the resignation of Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan who, the report said, "bears primary responsibility for the chaos that descended upon the White House" after the affair was disclosed.

Shultz came under criticism in the report for failing to persist in his initial strong criticism of the Iran arms sales. In China, Shultz will be inquiring about the recent leadership changes in Peking, which probably sees the United States these days as being just as inscrutable as China always has seemed to Washington.

Does this portend the end of the Republic? Half the members of the United States never vote anyhow so why the hell should they watch TV news? According to the not-too-terribly reliable audience surveys, something like 60 percent watch the network news, so that it would appear they may recognize a few of the names and the faces in the news. Given the well-publicized ignorance of the man in the White House, why should the voters inform themselves of issues of the day if the man they cast their ballots for doesn't?

IT MAY BE THAT disinclination to watch the news is a sign of contentment. If things are going reasonably well, what's the point? Leave the fall of the dollar and the rise of the debt to the dullish sort of men who take up time in news programs making incomprehensible 15-second remarks on the foreign trade imbalance. Looked at this way, a rise in viewers would be an ominous sign, like an increase in unemployment or bankruptcies.

Another theory has it that news watching, like voting, is for older people. The advertisers think so. Network news would go off the air if it weren't for people selling laxatives, false teeth adhesives and adult diapers. It could be that as the years pass and sex ceases to be a personal all-consuming preoccupation, a less strenuous hobby like watching the news gains in attraction.

Since the white population is aging — the networks have no particular interest in low-income blacks and Hispanics — the number of viewers may rise as an automatic aspect of changing age distribution. In which case, all the networks have to do is hold on to their walkers and wait. If that doesn't work, they could fire their anchor men and give the job to Jamaican rap singers.

General Accounting Office auditors are plowing through State Department records dating back to the 1970s in an effort to determine how in the world the cost of the far-from-complete U.S. Embassy in Moscow has escalated from the original $705 million estimate to the latest: $192 million. Much of the increase was due to delays and inflation, but the auditors are also sniffing for the aroma of something rotten.

WASHINGTON — Some chemical wastes of the body, the leftovers of the millions of daily reactions that power the process of life, may have beneficial uses that belie their image as mere garbage, scientists say.

The yellowing dye responsible for jaundice, long dismissed as a valueless bodily waste, appears to have a beneficial function that can lessen tissue damage in cancer, aging, inflammation and heart disease, they said Thursday.

Test tube studies indicated the bile pigment called bilirubin, which yellows the skin, is a powerful antagonist of oxygen compounds that play a role in numerous diseases and conditions. Scientists from the University of California's Berkeley and San Francisco campuses say the results provide further evidence that scientists should look at other "wastes" from the chemical processes in the body to see if they also have other functions.

WASHINGTON — Police shot and killed a 71-year-old attorney Thursday as they attempted to serve a search warrant stemming from a federal investigation of an alleged $7 million money laundering and cocaine sales scheme.

A police officer suffered a minor wound during a gunfight with the attorney that broke out as SWAT officers attempted to serve the warrant at the home in the San Fernando Valley.

Officers were accompanied by federal revenue and customs agents during the early morning raid, which was one of 14 that occurred across the Los Angeles area. Authorities arrested about a dozen people and seized $342,000 in cash during the raids, U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner said.

More than 60 weapons, mostly handguns, were recovered at the home of the lawyer who was killed, Russell W. Bledsoe of Sylmar, police said.

King's doubts deal big blow to U.S. ego

WASHINGTON — King Hussein of Jordan, the most reasonable Arab national leader in the Middle East, has serious doubts about the United States' ability to have much effect one way or another on a peaceful settlement in the region.

This is a disturbing view to be held by the ruler who has been recognized as crucial to Middle East peace hopes by seven American presidents and 12 secretaries of state. All of them shared the egocentric opinion that U.S. policy would be decisive in achieving a permanent solution to the region's problems.

In a recent interview in Amman, we asked the king bluntly: Will Americans have had anything to do with winning peace in the Middle East, assuming it ever comes?

"If and when they choose to, I suppose they can do it," Hussein responded tactfully. "But that hasn't been the case as yet. They have hurt it, unfortunately, over the last year."

THE KING'S JUDGMENT may have been affected somewhat by his irritation over the lies told to him by Reagan administration officials regarding their public efforts to stop the flow of arms to Iran — while secretly sending weapons to the Ayatollah Khomeini in return for help in freeing American hostages. Hussein is a staunch supporter of Iraq in its 6-year-old war with Iran.

But it is still a devastating putdown. Most Middle East leaders, whatever their politics, tend to agree with Washington in their assessment of U.S. importance. In fact, the conventional wisdom, that the United States can work miracles if it only has the will, underlies the abduction of American hostages in Lebanon. The kidnappers errantly believe that the United States could win the release of Shiite prisoners in Kuwait simply by asking.

Hussein's opinion of the United States bordered on disdain when we suggested that American influence over Israel might be the main U.S. contribution to peace in the Middle East.

"THIS IS ALWAYS the short-term approach," the king replied. "The long-term approach, in the interest of generations to come, is a solution that is based on justice and the recognition of the rights of all. On the other hand, I don't know whether it's your influence over Israel, or Israel's influence over you."

A settlement of the Palestinian question is Hussein's chief concern, and this is understandable, since roughly one-half the population of Jordan is Palestinian. Indeed, Israelis often express the view, which Hussein resists, that Jordan is in fact the Palestinian homeland.

Over the last decade, as U.S. negotiators have tried to be the honest brokers in Israeli-Jordanian peace efforts, Hussein has been generally flexible. But the sticking point has always been the king's insistence on involvement of the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Yet lately, according to our sources, Hussein is moving toward cutting the PLO out of any settlement with Israel. This may be traced to PLO leader Yasser Arafat's break-off of talks with the king a year ago — and Hussein's subsequent discovery that the PLO was planning a hijacking to win concessions from him.

SO THE KING quietly began to develop a secret alliance with Israel that undercuts the PLO in Gaza and the West Bank, where 1.4 million Palestinians live. Hussein has also tried for a rapprochement with Syria, as part of a pan-Arab peace process that would not be dictated by the PLO.

One thing Hussein will never agree to give up, however, is a Jordanian claim to Jerusalem, the city sacred to Moslems as well as Jews and Christians. "Jerusalem must become the essence of peace," he said, "the symbol of peace, the meaning of peace (for all religions). In that context, it cannot be totally Israeli."

He apparently believes he had led a charmed life — avoiding certain death on many occasions, which we have previously reported — because of his desire for peace in the region. "If one can change matters in that direction, then that would be biggest reward of all," he concluded.

General Accounting Office auditors are plowing through State Department records dating back to the 1970s in an effort to determine how in the world the cost of the far-from-complete U.S. Embassy in Moscow has escalated from the original $705 million estimate to the latest: $192 million. U.S. trade deficit soars in January

WASHINGTON — The United States suffered a $14.7 billion trade deficit in January, up sharply from the previous month, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the imbalance between what the country imports and what it exports soared 38.7 percent above the original December figure of $10.66 billion.

However, analysts caution against reading too much into the January figure. The Commerce Department said the January deterioration had been predicted by analysts who said the December figure represented a temporary improvement from a disastrous November performance.

Still, the poor showing was likely to further fuel demands for protectionist legislation in Congress as the country's trade problems showed no signs of improving.

NASA launches weather satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The flawless launch of a weather satellite marks the sixth straight success for an American space program that a year ago was in disarray.

A Delta rocket Thursday night drilled into orbit the $55 million GOES-7 satellite, which will fill a critical surveillance void in the coming hurricane season.

"We've got a satellite proceeding on its own and it appears to be in good health," NASA spokesman George Diller reported after the spacecraft separated from the rocket.

GOES-7, which stands for geostationary operational environmental satellite, will join the orbiting GOES-6 satellite to monitor weather patterns in an area ranging from the mid-Pacific to the east coast of Africa.

Iran says Basra offensive over

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran announced the end of its 7-week offensive against the key Iraqi city of Basra after claiming its forces killed or wounded 2,000 Iraqis in a final battle in marshlands east of the city.

Iran claimed in the surprise announcement carried Thursday by its official Islamic Republic News Agency that it had completed fortifying a bridgehead inside Iraqi territory only 5 1/2 miles east of Basra.

The news agency, monitored in Nicosia, had claimed earlier Thursday that Iranian Revolutionary Guards had beaten back two Iraqi attacks aimed at dislodging them from the bridgehead.

Iran's official news agency, also monitored in Nicosia, quoted Baghdad communiques as saying the Iraqis attacked first but were beaten back with "heavy losses."

Archbishop flees to avoid arrest

MILAN, Italy — Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus, the Vatican head charged in Italy's worst postwar financial scandal, avoided arrest by leaving a villa in Rome's southern hills for the safety of Vatican City, authorities said.

A Milan judge said Thursday that police had been watching Marcinkus for several days and were surprised not to find him at the Villa Strich when they went there Monday with an arrest warrant.

The judge, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Marcinkus stays occasionally at the villa.

The existence of the warrant was disclosed Wednesday by an investigating judge. It charges Marcinkus, a native of Cicero, Ill., with being "an accessory to fraudulent bankruptcy" in the 1982 collapse of Banco Ambrosiano.

Storm moves into Central Plains

A huge storm blamed for at least one death churned into the Central Plains today after dumping more snow on Colorado and much of the Southwest, where accumulations of up to 5 feet closed highways, schools and airports.

High winds combined with several inches of new snow to whip up near-blizzard conditions in the mountains of Colorado and southeastern Wyoming, where the slow-moving storm refused to subside.

The storm dropped heavy snow in Nebraska today, and drenched the area from eastern Texas across the lower Gulf Coast.

A foot or more of snow is likely to fall by Saturday as the storm moved east, and heavy rain from east Texas into Georgia could cause local flooding, Bill Barlow of the National Weather Service's severe storms center in Kansas City, Mo., said early today.

Early endorsement a boost for Bush

By Donald M. Rohrborn The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush, who escaped any direct criticism from the Tower commission, is making a political foray into New England, his presidential prospects boosted by an endorsement from the Republican governor of New Hampshire.

The vice president was delivering a luncheon speech in Bedford, Mass., and then flying to Manchester, N.H., to address a Lincoln Day dinner in the state that holds the nation's first presidential primary.

Gov. John F. Sununu's endorsement of Bush for the 1988 GOP presidential nomination and the issuance of the Tower commission's report on the Iran-Contra affair took place within an hour of each other on Thursday.

Bush, in an interview in today's New York Times, conceded on Thursday that mistakes were made, but he said he does not believe the Tower report shows that any laws were broken and he wasn't going to go around the country "trying to cover my own backside."

At a news conference in Concord, N.H., Sununu said, "It is no secret that I am a strong admirer and supporter of President Reagan."

"I firmly believe that George Bush will continue to implement the Reagan agenda."

"I intend to use all the political support and all the political clout that I have garnered over the years to make sure George Bush wins the New Hampshire primary," the governor told a second news conference at the National Press Club.

Sen. Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire said that despite Sununu's endorsement, the race is "wide open" for the presidential primary.

"The vice president enjoys a substantial lead right now, but it's, in my opinion, very shallow. It's a name recognition lead more than anything else," said Humphrey. "I don't see the conservatives who will play a pivotal role in the New Hampshire primary going for Bush in any significant numbers."

The report issued by the commission composed of former Sen. John Tower of Texas, former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, and Brent Scowcroft, former national security adviser to President Ford, contained few references to Bush and none of the criticism leveled at other officials including Reagan, his staff chief Donald Regan, his former national security aides John Poindexter and Oliver North, and even Secretary of State George Shultz.

Israel, Egypt say conference needed

By Mascho Hamilton The Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres of Israel and Egyptian leaders said today they reached agreement on the need for an international conference this year to expedite Middle East peace efforts.

In a joint statement, the two sides said such a conference would be a direct Arab-Israeli negotiation.

"We agree that it is necessary to take measures to expedite the peace process through the convening in 1987 of an international conference leading to direct negotiations between the parties concerned," said the statement, read by Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Abdel-Meguid.

Peres stood by his side at a military airport east of Cairo. He began his visit Wednesday and was to leave for home later today.

The statement followed a hour-long previously unscheduled second round of talks between Peres and President Hosni Mubarak at Mubarak's secluded Nile-side rest house. Peres and Mubarak also met Thursday, and then it was the turn of the Egyptian side to express differing views on what should represent the Palestinians in an international conference.

The traditionally, Egypt and the other Arab countries consider the Palestine Liberation Organization the only legitimate representative of Palestinians. Israel refuses to deal with the PLO, regarding it as a terror group.

Fugitive killer dies from cold

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — A woman dubbed "Black Widow" after she was convicted of poisoning her husband and who once faked her own death has died of exposure while trying to elude authorities, officials said.

"It seems to be an anticlimactic way for someone who was the great escape artist" to die, said Calhoun County District Attorney Bob Field.

Audrey Marie Hilley, who had received a three-day pass from prison to visit her second husband at a hotel, was muddy and incoherent when she was found Thursday on a porch in a rural area, witnesses said.

Doctors pronounced Hilley dead 3 1/2 hours later, listing exposure and hypothermia as preliminary causes, said Linda Barnes, vice president at North Alabama Regional Medical Center.

"An autopsy was scheduled for today, but we postponed it until Hilley, 33, had failed to return after being furloughed Sunday from a prison near Wetumpka.

She was sentenced to life in prison in 1983 for the 1975 murder of her first husband, Frank Hilley. She also was convicted of attempted murder in the 1975 arsenic poisoning of her 19-year-old daughter, who recovered.

Federal authorities say she was living under a false identity when she met her second husband, John Homan, while a fugitive between November 1979 and January 1983.

She married Homan, but faked her own death while on a trip to Texas. She returned to Homan in New Hampshire after losing weight, dyeing her hair and posing as her sister.

Her spokesman John Hale, quoting investigators on the case, said she told Homan in a farewell note that she hoped "he would understand and forgive her for leaving."

"She did not want to go back to prison," Hale said. "She was given a chance to get her life started over."

A police officer identified Hilley at the hospital, and fingerprint and family members confirmed her identity, authorities said.

Her disappearance prompted a prosecutor to promise an investigation, possibly by a grand jury, into the state prison system's furlough policy.

District Attorney Bob Field said Hilley had a criminal record that should have barred her from any prison pass.

New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu checks a "George Bush for President" button after pinning it on his lapel in front of the statehouse in Concord, N.H., on Thursday. Sununu announced his "enthusiastic endorsement" of Vice President Bush for the Republican nomination.

Israel, Egypt say conference needed

The PLO has excluded itself in our judgment and also, I believe, in the judgment of Jordan," Peres said. "Jordan tried to reach an agreement with the PLO and was unable to."

He referred to King Hussein of Jordan's suspension in February 1986 of year-long efforts with PLO leaders to find a joint approach to Middle East peace negotiations. Hussein said he no longer could work with the PLO's leadership, but stopped short of severing ties with the organization.

After Peres' comment, Abdel-Meguid said, "The Palestinian representation in an international conference is first of all up to the Palestinians, and then it must be agreed upon by the parties concerned. We cannot, in our opinion, start excluding parties."

He appeared to imply that the PLO should have a say in the choice of Palestinian delegates even while conceding that Palestinian delegates must be acceptable to Israel.

The joint statement did not specify how an international conference can be organized, nor did it mention objections to the concept by Israel's prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir.

Shamir, who opposed Peres' trip to Cairo, advocates direct negotiations with Israel's Arab neighbors. Today's statement said an international conference would "offer an opportunity for direct negotiations to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict in all its aspects and the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

With the exception of Egypt, the Arab nations do not recognize Israel.

If you could have a cleaner environment... And more energy for less money... Would you do it?

Without the takeover double by West, South would not have cared for his chances in four hearts. But with West showing opening-bid values, the likelihood of the king of spades being outside greatly increased. At the same time, since the double by West indicated support for any suit that East might bid, there was less chance that West would have a three-card heart holding. (A-K-J, A-J-x or K-J-x in hearts would automatically set the game contract.) On the opening lead, declarer won East's queen of clubs with his ace and immediately led the 10 of spades and let it ride. Next he played to the spade jack and cashed the ace, discarding the jack of diamonds. He now hoped to hold his losses to two hearts and the diamond ace, so he played a trump to his seven-spot. West won the jack of hearts, cashed the diamond ace and led the spade king. East trumped with the king of hearts, leaving the ace of hearts to score the setting trick. Declarer had missed one slight beat in his thinking. After pitching his diamond jack on the spade ace, he needed to continue with dummy's remaining losing spade, on which he should have chased the king of diamonds. There would then be no way for the defenders to make their high trumps separately when hearts were finally played by declarer. DEAR KAREN - I think this is the best suggestion for a coupon file I've seen. It's big enough to hold tons of coupons in all sizes (many file boxes are too small for big coupons), and the handle makes it handy to tote around. I may even buy a new lunchbox just to use for coupons!

Obituaries

James S. LeSure; longtime educator

James Starkweather LeSure, 72, of 30 Marion Drive, died Thursday at his home. He was a longtime educator and consultant in the teacher certification program of the state Department of Education. He was born in New Rochelle, N.Y., in 1914 and moved to Manchester in 1935. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College. He attended graduate school at New York University and Fordham Law School, and earned a master's degree in education at Tufts College.

He was the first full-time director of admissions of Hillier College and later the major component of what is now the University of Hartford. He joined the state Department of Education in 1951, where most of his career was spent as consultant in charge of teacher certification.

He earned his Ph.D. degree at the University of Connecticut. He was a veteran of World War II, having served in the U.S. Navy. He was a member of Talcottville Congregational Church.

Besides his wife, Jean (Mages) LeSure, he is survived by two daughters, Jean Ellen LeSure and Jeanette L. LeSure, both of Vernon; two sons, James S. LeSure Jr. of Manchester and John H. LeSure of Ellington; a brother, Harvey LeSure of Bethesda, Md.; a sister, Ellen Whitcomb of Fairbanks, Alaska; and seven grandchildren.

The funeral will be March 7 at 3 p.m. in Talcottville Congregational Church, Main Street, Talcottville. Burial will be in Lake View Cemetery, Upton, Mass., at the convenience of the family. There are no calling hours. The Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St., is in charge of arrangements.

Donations may be made to the Visiting Nurse and Home Care Inc., Hospice Unit, 397 Porter St., Manchester, or the LeSure Memorial Fund, care of Talcottville Congregational Church, Talcottville.

Edward Winzler; retired policeman

Edward M. Winzler, 68, of 36 Benton St., died Thursday at a Manchester nursing home. He was predeceased by his wife, Dorothy (Wittala) Winzler.

He was born in Manchester May 30, 1918, and was a lifelong resident. He was a lieutenant for the Manchester Police Department before he retired. He became a patrolman in October 1946, and was promoted to sergeant on June 1, 1952. He was appointed a lieutenant May 1, 1958, and held that rank until he retired because of ill health in 1973.

He was a life member of the Manchester Lodge of Elks, a member of Manchester Lodge 73 of Masons, and a member of the Manchester Rod and Gun Club.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Andrew (Linda) Gustafson of Manchester; two sisters, Katherine Hampton and Anna Minnich, both of Manchester; and two grandchildren.

The funeral will be Monday at 1 p.m. at the Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St. Burial will be in East Cemetery. Calling hours are Sunday from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 237 E. Center St.

Florence Hausmann

Florence Hausmann, 91, of 21 Clark Road, Bolton, died Thursday at a Manchester nursing home. She was the widow of William Hausmann.

She was born in Manchester Oct. 6, 1895, and was a resident at a Manchester nursing home for many years. She was a member of South United Methodist Church.

She is survived by one sister, Sarah T. Clay of Groton; and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral will be Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St., with burial in East Cemetery. Calling hours are Saturday from noon until the service begins.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 237 E. Center St.

Charles Tracy Barker

Charles Tracy Barker, 61, of South Windsor, husband of Barbara (Carlson) Barker, died Wednesday at his home. He was the father of Robert T. Barker of Manchester.

He had lived in Manchester before moving to South Windsor 30 years ago. He was a Marine Corps veteran of World War II and a retired asbestos worker for Union Local 33.

Besides his wife and son, he is also survived by another son, Scott T. Barker of South Windsor; two daughters, Carol J. Barker of South Windsor and Susan K. Barker of Vernon; two sisters, Irene Larva of East Hartford and Jean Campbell of Ellington; and two granddaughters.

The funeral will be Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Samuel & Carmon Funeral Home, 419 Buckland Road, South Windsor, with burial in East Cemetery. Calling hours are today from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.

Memorial donations may be made to the Kidney Foundation, 520 Farmington Ave., West Hartford 06107.

Consumer prices surge in January

By Tom Roun The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government, revising its principal cost-of-living gauge to better reflect how Americans spend their money, said today that consumer prices surged 0.7 percent in January.

The boost in the Labor Department's newly revamped Consumer Price Index was up from a 0.2 increase posted from November to December.

The previous month's increase worked out the same under both new and old accounting methods, government analysts said, while the January rise would have been an even higher increase, 0.8 percent under the old system.

Sharply higher costs for energy, particularly gasoline, paced the January increase. It was the largest monthly increase since a 1.1 percent rise in June 1982. The January increase, if continued for 12 consecutive months, would equal annual inflation of 8.3 percent.

Even so, energy costs were accorded less relative importance in the new tabulation, as was spending on food and clothing. Meanwhile, greater weight was given to housing costs and consumer electronic goods than in the past.

The CPI measures the cost to urban consumers of a fixed "market basket" of goods and services, with each given a different weight based on its relative importance to a consumer's budget. The old CPI reflected spending patterns of 1972-73 while the new one reflects those of 1982-84.

In addition, a variety of new items were added to the index, including video cassette recorders and personal computers and financial services.

Overall, analysts said that services now make up 52 percent of the total index, the first time they have surpassed goods in relative budget importance.

Source: U.S. Dept. of Labor

The government revises the index about once every 10 years. The last major overhaul was in 1978.

Economists were divided on how the new tabulations would influence inflation rates, with some estimating that it could add up to 0.3 percentage points to the annual rate.

The CPI is used to calculate cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients and figures in a wide range of government and private benefit and wage formulas.

Inflation for all of 1986, using the old system, increased 1.1 percent, the best performance in 25 years.

Judge says partnership owns mill

A Superior Court judge has decided that Silk Mill Associates retains ownership of the weaving mill in the Cheney Historic District. The decision, handed down by Judge Robert Satter in Hartford Superior Court, held that Kibbe Gerstein, who sold the mill to Silk Mill Associates, could not reclaim ownership by filing quitclaim deeds despite the fact that Silk Mill Associates defaulted on mortgage payments for the property.

Silk Mill Associates, a partnership made up of Munro, Jennings, and Daig Associates and David Woodbury Associates, both of Manchester, plans to sell the mill to Brophy Ahern Development, a West Haven firm which plans to convert the mill to apartments.

However, there were indications today that the decision may be appealed by Century Development of Hartford, which along with Gerstein was a defendant in the case.

Century Development has an agreement to buy the mill from Gerstein.

The legal dispute arose after Gerstein filed two quitclaim deeds, from Silk Mill Associates to him, in the office of the Manchester town clerk.

The deeds were executed at the same time as a mortgage deed.

In his ruling, Satter cited a case which held that the seller of a property cannot deny the purchaser the right to redeem equity in the property if the seller is prepared to meet the terms of mortgage after a default.

Satter held, therefore, that "the quitclaim deeds given by the plaintiff (Silk Mill Associates) contemporaneously with the mortgage to be held in escrow and to be used in the event of the plaintiff's default cannot be lawfully recorded so as to deny the plaintiff its right of redemption."

Silk Mill Associates bought the mill for $1.4 million and plans to sell it, along with a package of development rights, to Brophy Ahern Development for $2.4 million. Silk Mill Associates, according to the Satter decision, incurred large costs for zoning approvals, fire marshal approvals, historic district approvals, and architectural and engineering plans, market surveys, feasibility studies and bid packages.

Two other mills in the historic district have been converted to apartments and conversion of a third is in progress.

Orena M. Young

Orena M. Young, 62, of Middle-town, wife of Harold E. Young, died Wednesday at Middlesex Memorial Hospital, Middletown. She was the mother of Barry E. Moore of Manchester.

Besides her husband and son, she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Jerome (Maureen) Sullivan of South Yarmouth, Mass.; two brothers, Walter A. Frechette of Middle-town and Arthur Frechette of Norwich; four sisters, Lillian Dumas of Danielson, Rita Westwell and Cecelia Christian, both of Sturbridge, Mass., and Mrs. Aura Kitson of Middletown; and five grandchildren.

The funeral will be Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Doolittle Funeral Home, 14 Old Church St., Middletown. Burial will be at the convenience of the family. There are no calling hours.

Memorial donations may be made to the Hospice Unit of the Middlesex Memorial Hospital, care of Development Office, 55 Crescent St., Middletown 06457.

Katherine D. Myers

Katherine D. Myers, 85, of 309 Oakland St., died today at her home. She was born in Yonkers, N.Y., March 7, 1901, and had lived in Manchester for eight years.

She was a member of the First Church of Christ Congregational, Wethersfield, and a member of Rosemary Chapter Order of the Eastern Star in Stamford. She was also a member of Fidelity Court.

The funeral will be Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Samuel & Carmon Funeral Home, 419 Buckland Road, South Windsor, with burial in East Cemetery. Calling hours are today from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.

Memorial donations may be made to the Kidney Foundation, 520 Farmington Ave., West Hartford 06107.

This is a sequence from a video game at Wadsworth Athenaeum in Hartford. Visitors try to keep the circle from appearing over their heads. If the circle "scores," players' images disappear from the screen.

Video magic

Hartford exhibit will have you turning circles

By Nancy Pappas Herald Reporter

HARTFORD — At one moment, your body looks like it's made of green cheese, riddled with holes. As you move, a synthesizer creates music — bleep blip blurr — to match your movements. It changes, both in melody and in tone, depending upon the ways you move.

In another moment, your arm is turned into a paintbrush. Without an actual tool in your hands, you're drawing pictures — elaborate or simple — right in the air.

Momentary darkness descends, and you've become a mystical creator of rainbows. With each wave of your arm or nod of your head, spectacular sprays of red, aqua and gold appear.

Have you entered the World of Imagination at Disney World? Not at all. You're standing in the Matrix Gallery at Hartford's Wadsworth Athenaeum. What you're experiencing is "Videoplaces," an elaborate work of art created by computer scientist Myron Krueger, who lives in Vernon.

IT IS an environment where computers can sense what you do, and give you instantaneous feedback on those actions. This type of environment, called an artificial reality, can be used to train soldiers for combat crises, can simulate the conditions an astronaut will find in space, and can even train emergency room physicians to react appropriately.

Krueger was — and is — one of the pioneers in this field. Earlier this month, Newsweek magazine referred to him as "the most avant-garde artificial reality" at work today, and credited him with coining the term, artificial reality, in the 1970s.

For Krueger, it all began in the early 1970s, when he equipped the floor of an art gallery at the University of Wisconsin with hundreds of sensors. A computer sensed each time a visitor picked up his foot, and each time he put it down again. Musical sounds were created to accompany each step.

THEN CAME his human graffiti. As Krueger described it in a telephone interview earlier this week, he set up a video projection screen in the same gallery, which showed people their own images. About a mile away, Krueger himself was seated at his graphic computer, scribbling graffiti on his screen. This was then transmitted back to the gallery, and superimposed on the visitors' images.

"People saw themselves on this screen, live, and then they saw my writing appear, right on top of them," Krueger recalled. "Some were very uncomfortable about this. They were afraid their image being violated, in a sense."

The next step was an interaction between the computer operator, seven days a week, 10 hours a day, for six weeks, he said. "If I got up to leave, I had to find someone else to sit there."

The trick was to make the computer operator obsolete. "I would just fantasize as to how I might be able to do it," Krueger said. His work in computer software made it possible for the computer to do the reacting, automatically.

In Videoplaces, a computer senses the image of the people who enter the room, analyzes the ways in which they are moving, and responds instantaneously with graphics and video effects, which are then projected on a huge screen.

In some modes, the results are spectacular and artistic. In others, such as the game of Critter, the effects are primarily for fun.

TO PLAY Critter, a person stands before the video projection screen, watching his own silhouette, and that of a tiny cartoon creature. At first the "critter" hovers nearby, as if afraid of the human. But it then lands on your arm — or rather, the projected silhouette of your arm. It begins to ascend to the top of your head.

Even if you shake and jiggle, the critter is tenacious. You may slow its progress, but you will not completely deter it. When it finally reaches the summit, it dances a triumphant jig on your head — and your silhouette disappears from the projection screen. The material handed out at the Athenaeum states that this is "a metaphor for one of the central dramas of our time: the encounter between humans and machines."

FOR KRUEGER, the video projections are far more than games or whimsical animated creations. "The image is really an extension of the self. In a very important way," Krueger maintains. He came to this conclusion quite by accident. He noticed that a co-worker was made highly uncomfortable when the video projection of his hand came into contact with the video projection of Krueger's hand.

"He kept moving away. He clearly did not want to hold hands," Krueger said. "But were we holding hands? Of course not. The projection of my hand was accidentally brushing against the projection of his hand. In truth, we were a mile apart. Yet we had really created a place that we were together. I started thinking about creating a whole graphic world."

Saga traces history of the Kennedy dynasty

By Christopher DeL

Irish-Catholic and Democratic families that have left their mark on 20th-century America.

Between them, the Fitzgeralds and the Kennedys have provided a major of Boston, three House members, two U.S. senators, a U.S. attorney general, an ambassador to Britain and a president, along with the weddings, affairs and untimely deaths that have titillated generations of Americans.

Indeed, "Young Joe" represents some of the same Boston neighborhoods once served by his great-grandfather, John Francis "Honey Fitz" Fitzgerald, in the 1860s and by his uncle, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, in the late '40s and early '50s.

"The Fitzgeralds and the Kennedys" (Simon and Schuster, $22.95), by Doris Kearns Goodwin, traces the deep history of the two crash of 1929 when Kennedy actually made money in a collapsing economy.

The author records, for example, that Joe Kennedy secretly authorized a lobotomy for the couple's oldest daughter, Rosemary, and that Rose did not learn of it for 20 years.

IN GOODWIN'S telling, the late Joe Fitzgerald, 96, became the central figure in the multi-generational drama. From examining Joe's papers and interviews with Rose, Goodwin made several discoveries about their long and difficult marriage.

She records, for example, that Joe Kennedy secretly authorized a lobotomy for the couple's oldest daughter, Rosemary, and that Rose did not learn of it for 20 years.

Goodwin also examines Kennedy's affair with the movie star Gloria Swanson in the Hollywood of the 1920s, where Kennedy was involved in filmmaking.

The greatest accomplishment of Joe and Rose, according to Goodwin, was the creation of a family that endured tremendous stress and inspired nine children to challenge themselves, cross boundaries and reach for greatness.

"They show how to be a family. It's a creative process," Goodwin said.

SHE DESCRIBES how they endured the death of their oldest son, also named Joe, the "golden boy" who was originally expected to be the leader of the younger generation. After Joe's military plane exploded over the English Channel during the invasion of Normandy in World War II, the family's high hopes came to rest on the next son, John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

In addition, Goodwin provides the most detailed explanation to date of the many medical problems suffered by John, from his childhood scarlet fever to the diagnosis of chronic Addison's disease, which left him forever vulnerable to infection.

Although there are revelations about the deep past, the book avoids the scandals and tragedies that haunted the family over the past century by coming to a close with John's inauguration in 1961.

Weekenders

At the forum

The Enfield High School Lamplighters will present "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," Saturday at 8:15 p.m. at Enfield High School. Admission is $3.50 general, $2.50 for students and senior citizens.

Master class offered

Director Mark Lamos of the Hartford Stage Company will conduct an open master class on the interpretation of Shakespeare at noon on Saturday. The master class will involve several actors drawn from the company of "Pericles," the work currently on stage. In two hours, Lamos will guide actors through a literary interpretation and move through rudimentary blocking. He will incorporate audience comments in the shaping of the scene. The class is free to Hartford Stage subscribers, $5 for all others.

Art for lions' sake

Manchester Country Club will be the scene of an art exhibit and auction tonight, to benefit the Manchester Lions Club. There will be a preview at 7 p.m., and the auction will start at 8. Donation is $4 per person, which covers wine and cheese, door prizes, catalog and a complimentary lithograph.

February in Paris

The charming city of Paris is the subject of the film, "Americans in Paris," to be presented as part of The Bushnell Travel Series, tonight and Saturday at 8 p.m., and Sunday at 2 and 5 p.m. Commentary in this film is read from works by F. Scott Fitzgerald, Mark Twain and Gertrude Stein, among others. Tickets cost between $3.25 and $4.75. Call 246-8807 to make reservations.

Guthrie does 'Candida'

The Tony Award-winning Guthrie Theater will be in residence at the Lincoln Theater, University of Hartford, this weekend. The company will present George Bernard Shaw's "Candida," about a woman torn between a stolid husband and a young admirer. Tickets range from $6.50 to $20. Performances are tonight at 8; Saturday at 2 and 8 p.m.; and Sunday at 3 p.m. For more information, call 243-4228.

To a different drummer

The Kodo drummers pound the taiko, an ancient Japanese drum, in a concert meant to bring a spiritual message to Western audiences. It is an athletic performance as well as a musical one, with elements of the martial arts, as well.

Carving a niche

Although the Eskimo have been carving soapstone into seals, birds and bears for thousands of years, it was not until the early 1950s that Americans became interested in this art form. Master carver Joanniss Jack, from Povungnituk, Quebec, will demonstrate the art of soapstone sculpting this weekend at the Mystic Marinellife Aquarium. He will work from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sunday, showing how the artist releases the animal "trapped" within the stone, and then adds texture by chipping and scoring. The artist will work in the museum's gift shop, so that viewers may visit him without paying for admission.

The drummers have played throughout Asia, Europe and North America, will present a concert tonight at 8 in Jorgensen Auditorium at the University of Connecticut. Tickets range from $3 to $10.

Dolls and miniatures

The Enfield Lions Club hosts a Doll House and Miniatures Show on Saturday, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Enfield Street School. Refreshments will be available. Admission for adults is $2, for senior citizens and children it's $1.

Improvisational piano

Marilyn Crispell will present an evening of improvisational piano solos on Saturday at Real Art Ways, 94 Allyn St., Hartford. At $5 each, tickets for this appearance cost Hartford audiences only about half as much as concert goers have paid at Carnegie Recital Hall, the Kool Jazz Festival, and in major cities of Europe, to hear Crispell.

Special music Brand

The Sounding Board Coffeehouse will present folksinger Oscar Brand in a concert of traditional and contemporary songs on Saturday. Known as a musician, storyteller and host of National Public Radio's "Voices in the Wind," Brand has been popular since the early 1960s. The coffeehouse is located in the First Church of Christ Congregational, 12 S. Main St., West Hartford. Doors open at 7 p.m., and concert is at 8. Call 563-3263 for reservations. Admission is $6.

Peter Pan is coming

Wicked Captain Hook is going to do his best to scare Tinker Bell in the Connecticut Concert Ballet's production of "Peter Pan." The story ballet will be presented one time only in Manchester, at 2:30 Saturday afternoon in the auditorium of Manchester High School. Adult tickets are $3, and $1.50 for senior citizens and children.

The arts of Russia

Experience the magic, art and culture of Russia with a slide lecture tonight by Ludmilla Burns. The program will be presented in the fellowship hall of the United Congregational Church, Tolland. Burns left Russia in 1943, but has studied that nation extensively. She is an instructor of Russian at the University of Connecticut, and is pursuing a doctorate in Russian studies. The evening starts at 7 with a potluck. Bring foods of Russian origin. Tickets, $2.50 each, will be sold at the door. For more information, call 872-3107.

Puppet is a thief

The Bennington Puppets will present "The Little Thief of Baghdad," at 1 and 3 p.m. Sunday at Tolland High School. This program was popular with the summer audiences at the Manchester Bicentennial Band Shell. Tickets are $1.50, and will be sold at the door. The high school is at exit 68 off Interstate 84.

Circus is the theme

The theme of this year's Hartford Flower Show is "a floral circus." Plants resembling Siamese twins, a bearded lady and a sword swallower will be featured, along with Japanese gardens, English courtyards and much more. Experts from the plant science department and the extension service of the University of Connecticut will answer your questions. The show is open tonight until 9:30, Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m., and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., at the Hartford Civic Center. Admission is $5 general; $2 for children ages 7 to 12; and free to those 6 and under. Tickets sold at Connecticut Bank and Trust Co. branches are $1 less.

Travel through time

The Girl Scouts of Manchester will host a look back over the 75 years of Scouting, in an open house Saturday at Center Congregational Church. The free event, called Travel Through the Decades, will be open from noon to 4 p.m. It will include exhibits, singing and even a sampling of the original Girl Scout cookies.

Tracking the animals

Spend a Saturday morning learning to track animals in the snow, at Gay City State Park in Hebron. Participants will learn which animals are active in the winter, where they live and what they eat. Meet in the main parking lot for this free program, which begins at 10 a.m.

Musicians featured

Hartford Philharmonic Society Chorus and members of the Manchester Symphony Orchestra will present an all-Mozart concert on Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Church of Saint Paul, 2577 Main St., Glastonbury. Featured will be the "Missa Brevis," and the "Credo Mass." Tickets are $5 general; $3 senior citizens and students.

Over the years, Krueger's work has been endorsed by the White House, praised by NASA, and admired by the FCC. "But nobody has wanted to fund it," Krueger said. "I get respectful, intellectually interested responses. It's nice, let me know when someone else has paid for its development."

He did get a small grant, years ago, from the National Endowment for the Arts. "It was just enough to allow me to keep working, at nights on weekends, on my projects," he said. "I still needed a regular, five-day-a-week job to support myself." And since 1979, there have been no outside sources of funding for Krueger's art. He remained in the academic world, as a professor of computer science — most recently at the University of Connecticut — until last year. "Now I do consulting, to support my 'hobby,'" Krueger said. "Artificial reality — it ought to be the work I'm doing fulltime. But it cuts across funding categories. People make up their minds what the categories are, and then they fund quite narrowly. I'm not clearly artistic, and I'm not exactly scientific."

Videoplacement will be at the Wadsworth Athenaeum through March 22. Museum $3 general, $1.50 students, free to people under 13, and free on Thursdays, and on Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Conklin is in 'Gondollers'

Performances of "Gondollers," at Simsbury High School, are tonight and Saturday, March 7, 13 and 14, all at 8:15 p.m., and March 8 and 14 at 2:15 p.m. Tickets are $6 to $10. Call 521-8838.

BC drops UConn into the Big East cellar

By Jim Tierney
Herald Sports Writer

HARTFORD — It was the struggle of the Big East's two lowest echelon teams.

It was a matchup which elevated pride and character to the fore and one team would ultimately persevere and withstand the cold clutches of the conference basement.

For the University of Connecticut, the entire season has been an endless quandary. A victory over Boston College could have given the Huskies a chance at salvaging seventh place in the nine-team conference and avoiding the dreaded Thursday night encounter of the Big East tournament pitting the two worst teams against each other.

The Eagles staved off a split second-half rally by the Huskies and registered a 66-60 win last night at the Civic Center. Boston College raised its record to 3-12 in the conference and 16-16 overall while UConn dropped to 2-13 in the conference and 8-18 overall. These two teams will meet for the third time this season next Thursday in the Big East Tournament opening game at Madison Square Garden in New York for the eighth and ninth finishers in the league.

"It was a game of pride," said UConn coach Jim Calhoun. "I'm sure Boston College coach Jim O'Brien said, 'This was a game for not coming in last (in the Big East)'." If UConn defeats Seton Hall Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Civic Center in its final regular season game and Boston College loses to Syracuse, the two teams will end up tied for eighth in the conference.

"Obviously, it's a good win for us," O'Brien, the former five-year assistant coach at UConn, said. "I thought we played one of our smarter games of the year. I was happy that our kids were able to really withstand a run that they made at us."

Trailing 4-2, with 16:20 to go in the first half, BC went on a furious run led by 5-10 sophomore Dana Barros and outscored UConn, 25-7, to assume a commanding 21-11 lead with 3:39 left in the half. Barros scored 14 of his game-high 25 points in the first 20 minutes and the Eagles led, 34-21, at the intermission.

"We dug a hole for ourselves," UConn coach Jim Calhoun said. "Fortunately, it was only 13 points (at half). It could've been 180, it seemed anyway. I don't think anybody could say our kids played the way they're capable of playing in the first half." UConn was 6-for-26 from the floor during the first half while BC shot 12-for-22.

UConn forward Jeff King, who scored 10 points, felt the Huskies lost their confidence during the Eagle first-half run. "We just had to be more aggressive," the 6-10 junior said. "Things weren't going our way and we got down on ourselves and we let them build the lead."

UConn, however, countered in the second half with a strong run led by Gerry Besselnik and Greg Economou. The Huskies outscored the Eagles, 23-8, over the first 10 minutes of the second half and took the lead, 44-43, on a left-handed hook by Besselnik with 9:38 to go. A Besselnik free throw gave UConn a 45-43 lead, but two baskets inside by Troy Bowers and a 3-pointer by Barros regained the lead for the Eagles, 45-43.

"Oh yeah, I thought we were going to take at least a 7-8 point lead. King threw the lead to 50-45 with 5:41 to play. Bowers, who scored 11 of his 17 points in the second half and Barros held off UConn's comeback with a 3-pointer with 43 seconds left cut the lead to four, 60-56, again, UConn, however, was burned by Barros on the impending inbound play. A wide open Barros received a length-of-the-court pass for a layup to ice the BC's Dana Barros controls the basketball as he's guarded by UConn's Tate George in their Big East Conference game Thursday night at the Civic Center. Barros had 26 points to lead the Eagles to a 66-60 victory.

UConn's Garry Besselnik (33) latches onto the basketball as BC's Robert Francis throws a road block in his path while Husky teammate Jeff King has a scowl on his face during Thursday night's play.

Bruins outbatter Nordiques in fight for playoff spots

By Ken Ruppert
The Associated Press

The Boston Bruins and Quebec Nordiques are fighting for a playoff spot in the NHL's Adams Division these days — and fighting among themselves, to boot.

"We didn't go out there to fight (but) tempers flared on their side once we were up 4-0," said Boston forward Jay Miller following Thursday night's fight-filled 5-2 victory over the Quebec Nordiques. "When guys are down in our building, they start running around. We have to slow them down. That's what happened."

What resulted was a bench-clearing brawl, nine player ejections and 167 the game total of 231 penalty minutes.

"You could see it get a little out of hand as the (second) period wore on," Bruins defenseman Mike Milbury said. "We started out with pretty good control of the game on the scoreboard, and they started to get chippy. They're in a tough playoff fight and were trying to hold our ground after a bunch of losses."

The victory was a big one for the third-place Bruins, who were 1-6 on their recent road trip and are trying to stay ahead of the Nordiques and Buffalo Sabres in the playoff race. In other NHL action, it was Buffalo 4, St. Louis 3; Detroit 5, Vancouver 4; New York Islanders 5, Pittsburgh 4; Calgary 4, Philadelphia 3.

The Bruins-Nordiques brawl broke out at 8:05 of the second period when Quebec's Dale Hunter started battling with Boston's Ken Linseman, and the fighting spread to the other players on the ice. Referee Terry Gregson whistled 10 game-misconduct penalties, 11 fighting majors, and six minor penalties. The Bruins had 129 penalty minutes.

The victory extended the Islanders' recent streak over Pittsburgh on home ice to 12-9-1 since the 1982-83 season. The last time the Penguins won at Nassau Coliseum was Nov. 12, 1983.

Walt Paley, who had scored only five goals in his last 40 games, snapped a third-period tie with his third goal of the game and lifted Buffalo over visiting St. Louis.

Time out for this message

Manchester coach Frank Kinil has some advice for his club during a timeout. The Indians cap their home schedule tonight at 7:45 at Clark Arena against neighboring East Hartford High with a share of third place in the CCC East Division at stake. MHS is 9-4 in the division, East Hartford 10-3. Manchester's seven seniors — Bruce Rosenberg, Rob Greene, Cinque Barlow, Mike Lata, Jason Stanfield, Sam Henderson and Eric Lewis, will be honored in pre-game ceremonies. Manchester wraps up its regular season Tuesday at Glastonbury High School before heading into state tournament play in the Class LL Division.

Norman, Dowd, and Phillip all average in double figures for Cheney while Ortiz averages nine points per game and is one of its key rebounders. Hawkins, the defensive specialist to go along with his direction of the team's offense. Hawkins is averaging 7.5 points a game. No matter the eventual outcome of the Beavers' participation in the state tournament in the Class M Division, this season could go down in the school's basketball annals as the best ever.

Norman and Dowd are Cheney's two leading scorers, averaging 13 and 12 points, respectively. Ortiz adds the necessary inside strength. In Phillip, a 6-foot-5 sophomore, the Beavers have one of the most promising youngsters in the area.

"They know they have more talent and more size. Going in, they expect to win 20 games." Wistful thinking aside, Cheney certainly put itself in a winning frame of mind, something that was always impossible due to a basic lack of talent in past seasons.

The amazing aspect of this year's edition of Cheney rebound is that they exclusively utilize only six players. Cheney hoop is finally experiencing some success

Success has never come easy for the Cheney Tech basketball program.

In fact, success has rarely come the Beavers way on the hardwood floor.

Before this season, Cheney had recorded only three winning campaigns in the past 30 years of its school history. Futility was always a given annually for the Tech hoopers.

This season, however, is one of the few bright spots amongst a dreary ledger of forgettable seasons. The Beavers have already qualified for the Class M state tournament and currently possess an 11-7 record with two games remaining in their regular season. This will mark only the fifth time a Cheney squad has gone to a post-season tourney. If the Beavers win their final two contests, they would set a school record of 13 wins in a season.

Charter Oak Conference. The 10-team league isn't exactly wrought with unmistakable basketball talent. A new feeling exists this season for Silvia and his players.

"This is the first time (under Silvia) that you know you're going to be competitive night in and night out," Silvia recently explained.

An integral part of this season's success began with the players' attitude, one which hadn't been seen on recent Beaver contestants. At the beginning of the season, Silvia commented on the outlook for his club.

"They know they're better (than last year)," he said. "They know they have more talent and more size. Going in, they expect to win 20 games." Brown's little habit results in Jordan's big night

By The Associated Press

New Jersey guard Tony Brown has the little habit, which made for Michael Jordan's big night.

"With Tony Brown guarding Jordan, we knew Tony, when he shot, liked to follow it to the basket," Chicago Bulls Coach Doug Collins said. "This gave our big men a chance to get the boards and throw long outlet passes to Jordan."

"It worked on seven of his 16 baskets."

Jordan added a club-record 26 free throws to wind up with 26 free throws to add up to 44 points — another Chicago record — as the Bulls defeated the Nets 128-113.

That broke the old Bulls' regular-season mark of 36 points set by Chet Walker on Feb. 6, 1972, and was one more than the previous NBA single-game high this season, 37 by Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins against Chicago on Dec. 10.

Still, the fans weren't satisfied as they chanted "get 60 points."

"I knew the fans wanted me to get 60, and maybe 70," Jordan said. "But the bottom line is that by scoring more points I'll always have to shoot for more and more, and there's a lot more to the game."

"Yes, I wanted to break Chet Walker's record, but for me it was 60."

The 6-foot-4 Jordan, who scored 63 points against Boston last year in the playoffs, shattered his previous regular-season high of 53 points scored on Jan. 8 against Portland.

He set the club regular-season scoring mark when he connected on a dazzling reverse layup, giving the Bulls a 122-104 edge. Then he hit his 26th free throw.

Buck Williams led the Nets with 25 points, while Orlando Woolridge

Rockets 85, Jazz 84

Robert Reid sank a baseline jumper with 11 seconds remaining and added a free throw seconds later to cap a 12-4 Houston streak that boosted the visiting Rockets over Utah.

The Jazz had led 80-73 at 4:41 remaining.

Reid finished with 19 points, including a 3-point goal with 2:45 remaining that knotted the score at 80 after the Jazz had led by as many as 13 in the second half.

Karl Malone led Utah with 22 points — 17 in the first half — and 12 rebounds.

Spurs 96, 76ers 94

Alvin Robertson's 3-point basket at the buzzer lifted San Antonio past visiting Philadelphia.

With Philadelphia leading 94-93 and only seconds remaining, San Antonio guard Johnny Dawkins took a pass from forward David Greenwood, moved across mid-court and fired a pass to Robertson on his right. Robertson's shot from 26 feet away hit nothing but net.

The victory snapped a three-game losing streak for the Spurs.

The Spurs were led by Robertson and Walter Berry with 25 points each.

Bulls 100, Pacers 94

Manute Bol blocked 15 shots, grabbed a career-high 19 rebounds and scored 10 points to lead Washington over Indiana. Terry Collage and Jay Vincent scored 20 points each to lead the Bullets' attack.

Both Bol's points and blocks were season highs for the second-year center, who played all but the final 14 seconds of the game.

"I haven't seen a defensive player, maybe since Bill Russell, who can control a game defensively as well as Manute," Bullets coach Kevin Loughery said. "It's not so much the blocks, it's the intimidation factor. There were probably 30 plays he changed."

The Pacers were led by Chuck Warren's 21 points.

Warriors 129, Clippers 108

Golden State's Rod Higgins scored a career-high 30 points to lead the Warriors over the Clippers.

MHS runners second in CCC championships

GLASTONBURY — The Manchester High boys' indoor track team took second place at the Central Connecticut Conference Championships Thursday with 167.7 points.

East Hartford took the title with 99 points and Weaver was third with 83. Windham High was fourth at the meet staged at the Glastonbury Field House.

"The kids did a great job today. We really went after the meet but came up a little short. I am very proud of every one," said Manchester coach George Sultor.

The Manchester girls also took runner-up honors with 71 points led by freshman Alexis Cruz' first-place finish in the long jump.

Weaver took the girls' championship with 110 points with East Hartford third at 60 points.

On the boys' side of the ledger, George Mason University-bound Brian Brophy won the 65-meter high hurdles at 7.77 and the pole vault at 12-feet, 6-inches. Shaun Brophy was second in the 3200-meter run at 16:21.84 with Sean Toland fourth (10:30.89) and Todd Liscomb sixth (10:33.71). Todd Clemens was fifth in the 300-meter dash with a time of 39.18 and the 500 with a 1:13.19 clocking while the 800-meter relay of Todd Powery, Bob Fiske, Matt Alpert and Rick Eaton was fifth in 4:14.53. The 4 X 100-meter relay of Jeff DeJoannis, Pat Dwyer, Sigi Claus and Tuan Nguyen was sixth in 1:52.02.

Tom Lyon was third in the 800-meter run at 2:07.7 and third in the 1000 with a 2:48.16 clocking. Manchester picked up a bundle of points in the 1600 with Sean Toland second (4:52.21), Dana Dieterle third (4:54.24) and Bob Dickson fourth (4:57.94). The sprint medley of Nguyen, Claus, DeJoannis and Mike Sears was fourth in 4:15.77. The 4 X 800-meter relay of Dieterle, Sears, Eaton and Shaun Brophy won with a time of 9:15.34.

Purdue still in the running for Big Ten basketball title

Purdue is still in the running for the Big Ten basketball championship because of a turnaround, not a jumper, at the foul line.

The sixth-ranked Hoosiers beat No. 3 Indiana 75-64 Thursday night, largely by making 24 of 32 free throws, a far cry from the 18-for-30 performance in an Indiana win earlier in the season.

"We shot 32 free throws, and they shot 18," said Purdue guard Troy Lewis, who led the Hoosiers with 18 points, 12 coming on his 14 free-throw attempts. "That's the difference (from the 88-77 loss on Jan. 31). We didn't hit our free throws at all. I've had my problems shooting free throws the last two games, but tonight, they were going in."

Lewis also made two 3-pointers, his only field goals of the game, as the Hoosiers' 22-5 moved within one-half game of the Hoosiers, 23-3, for the Big Ten lead.

Indiana could have clinched a share of the title with a victory over Michigan State on Thursday night.

Purdue, 13-2 in the conference, still has games with Ohio State, Michigan State and Michigan in the last two on the road, Indiana, 15-1, will play at Illinois and then close the season with a home game against Ohio State.

"We have our destiny in our hands," Lewis said. "There's always a chance of a letdown, but we don't know how big. If we lose to

Purdue still in the running for Big Ten basketball title

Purdue is still in the running for the Big Ten basketball championship because of a turnaround, not a jumper, at the foul line.

The sixth-ranked Hoosiers beat No. 3 Indiana 75-64 Thursday night, largely by making 24 of 32 free throws, a far cry from the 18-for-30 performance in an Indiana win earlier in the season.

"We shot 32 free throws, and they shot 18," said Purdue guard Troy Lewis, who led the Hoosiers with 18 points, 12 coming on his 14 free-throw attempts. "That's the difference (from the 88-77 loss on Jan. 31). We didn't hit our free throws at all. I've had my problems shooting free throws the last two games, but tonight, they were going in."

Lewis also made two 3-pointers, his only field goals of the game, as the Hoosiers' 22-5 moved within one-half game of the Hoosiers, 23-3, for the Big Ten lead.

Indiana could have clinched a share of the title with a victory over Michigan State on Thursday night.

Purdue, 13-2 in the conference, still has games with Ohio State, Michigan State and Michigan in the last two on the road, Indiana, 15-1, will play at Illinois and then close the season with a home game against Ohio State.

"We have our destiny in our hands," Lewis said. "There's always a chance of a letdown, but we don't know how big. If we lose to

Illing basketball teams gain berths in Invitational finals

The second annual Illing Junior High Basketball Invitational saw both teams advance to the semifinals today. The Illing Junior High boys' varsity basketball team downed the South Windsor High freshmen, 72-54, Thursday night.

The Tar Heels, who won their eighth consecutive game, improved to 26-2 and 15-4 and they have a chance to end with a perfect regular-season record in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a victory over Georgia Tech on Sunday.

No-load funds are still the best

QUESTION: After reading a number of columns in which you discussed mutual funds, it is obvious that you much prefer "no-load" funds over the "load" type. (That you do not like "redemption fees" and that you are dead against "12b-1" plans.)

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

More and more fund managements are using 12b-1 plans to boost the commissions they pay out. Because 12b-1 money comes out of a fund's assets, it reduces the value of the fund's shares and the value of each shareholder's investment.

Can you define each of those terms? Most important, how can the people running a mutual fund make any money, or even meet expenses, if the fund has none of aforementioned charges?

The lesson in all this is simple enough. Steer clear of mutual funds with loads, redemption fees and 12b-1 plans. There are plenty of true no-load funds, which have none of those charges but do, of course, have normal operating expenses.

Answer: A reply to your second question should go a long way toward helping out with the definitions you ask for.

QUESTION: If I want to buy shares of a load mutual fund, can I bypass brokers and deal directly with the fund, thereby saving all commission costs?

All mutual funds have ongoing expenses, separate and apart from loads, redemption fees and 12b-1 plan charges. Just like any corporation, a mutual fund has operating expenses.

ANSWER: No. That's prohibited by the Investment Company Act of 1940, and Securities and Exchange Commission regulations connected with that primary federal legislation covering mutual funds.

Fitness center changing lives of Campbell Soup workers

By Mary Helen Gillespie
The Associated Press

CAMDEN, N.J. — Employees not only are healthier people but also better workers at the corporate headquarters of Campbell Soup Co., thanks to its $1 million on-site fitness facility, a study says.

The report also says a majority of workers surveyed believe Campbell's commitment to physical exercise and proper nutrition has improved the company's image among employees.

The findings of the study were very positive. It shows that the effects of the program carry over to the entire Camden work force, regardless of whether an employee participates in it or not.

to use the center could relate to the increase in productivity while blue-collar workers who did not tend to exercise at the center were impressed by the company's concern for their health.

Corporate annual meetings aren't what they appear to be STAMFORD — As annual meeting season draws near, gaddys are busy preparing the often tricky and sometimes embarrassing questions they'll ask corporate executives. But companies are laying out their own plans.

"There's a fair amount of planning if you are dealing with issues like South Africa and animal welfare," said one Connecticut executive.
