Prices driven up by jump in food costs

By Matt Yancov, The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Wholesale prices for the first surge in food costs in five months, jumped 6.4 percent in March, the government said today. Energy costs, after dramatic gains in January and February, began leveling off.

Food prices, led by a nearly 21 percent increase in fresh vegetable costs, jumped 6.5 percent in March, a dramatic reversal from February's 0.5 percent downturn.

Beef prices rose 1.1 percent. Pork prices rose 1.1 percent. Chicken prices rose 0.7 percent. Sliced turkey prices rose 0.5 percent.

Lee Watkins, left, and Greg Barber clear away a tree that has fallen across the Hockanuk River near New State Road as they prepare for the Hockanuk River canoe race. Recent storms have felled trees along the race route, but race sponsors say they'll have them cleared in time for the race, which begins Sunday at about 8:30 a.m. A story and more pictures on the race are on page 13.

Parkade owners fed up

By John F. Kirch, Herald Reporter

The owners of the Manchester Parkade said they want the developer who is trying to buy the shopping center to just go away.

Anthony P. Catala, the president of the Cutter Realty Corp. of Stamford, said Thursday afternoon that his company has no interest in selling the Parkade to Aron Oron, who signed a contract to buy the center last year and is now threatening to sue Cutter unless the company follows through with the sale or returns his $600,000 deposit with interest.

Catala said Thursday. "We'll give him his deposit back. We just want him to go away. We have no interest in selling to him."

Although Oron said Thursday morning that he had a financing agreement worked out with a bank in New Jersey, Catala said he does not believe Oron has the money.

Catala said Oron was told he would get his deposit back, but the New York developer has not responded.

"We're not sure what he wants," Catala said. "He's not sure what he wants either. He's not sure what he wants either. He's not sure what he wants either."

Catala said his company will defend itself against any legal action Oron attempts and may file a counter suit later in the year.

Catala, however, would not elaborate.

Along with the first legal action.

Driver shortage hampers bus service

By John Mitchell, Herald Reporter

A scarcity of school bus drivers in Manchester has resulted in chronic lateness, service cuts, and some parents claim, unqualified people doing the job.

The March increase led the Producer Price Index at 29.23. That means that an array of goods cost $10 in 1987 would have cost $29.23 last month. That is 42 cents more than the index in March 1986. Unlike the other figures in today's report, the index isn't adjusted to remove the impact of routine, predictable seasonal influences.

Wholesale prices dropped 2.5 percent in March, the biggest decrease since 1949, largely because of plummeting oil prices early in the year.

Oil prices, however, have rebounded sharply since last July, when the spot-market price of the benchmark West Texas crude hit decade-low level of $11.49 per barrel. Last month, that crude oil sold at an average spot-market price of $18.41 a barrel. That price is still 30 cents below January's level.

"Only if we see energy price increases in the next few months," Michael Penzer, an economist for the Bank of America in San Francisco, said on the eve of today's report.

Drivers say students can make job tough

By John Mitchell, Herald Reporter

School bus drivers, frequently criticized by parents, tell some good stories, too.

Mothers need to realize, the drivers said, that the natural course of events won't allow them to be on time every morning, and it's hard to discipline children when even the parents fail.

"Parents have a lot of anxiety putting their children in our hands," said Millie Rainey, hearing back in a swivel chair at the Manchester Bus Service office on Glen Road as dawn began to break Thursday. Rainey, who has driven for more than seven years, said that parents' concerns are justified, but at the same time there's unneeded pressure on her and other drivers.

"Your job is to get the kids to school and back as safely as possible and they distract you," she said.

On the way to Verplanck School, one child was standing up in the bus and swearing, said Margaret Brock, who has driven as a spare for two years. "I took him to the principal's office," she said. "I got a letter the next day from the mother saying her child would never do such a thing."

Then parents complain because road conditions in town and traffic make him late.

"One day I'll be early the next day I'll be late," he said. "I (parents) just think you're supposed to pick up all the kids at a certain time."

"They feel you don't have any right or authority," she said. "They learn that at home."

Although the drivers said most of the children present no problems, the job can be trying.

Brock said that when children are misbehaving, she'll "pull the bus over and yell at them." Sometimes it is the only alternative, she said.

"They think the bus is a playground," Brock said. "It's hard to concentrate on the road."

Lieberman rejects bid for Senate

HARTFORD — Democratic Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman says he has no interest in running for the U.S. Senate next year against Republican incumbent Lowell P. Weicker Jr. "People have been talking to me about it and I'm listening, but honestly, that's about all," Lieberman said Thursday. "It's not on my agenda. I love being attorney general."

Lieberman, frequently mentioned as a gubernatorial candidate in 1990, is one of several Democrats who have been named as possible challengers to Weicker, who has said he is leaning toward seeking a fourth term next year.

Other potential candidates include the state's three Democratic congressmen, Sam Gejdenson, Barbara B. Kennelly and Bruce A. Morrison.

Two indicted in tax-shelter scheme

BRIDGEPORT — A former owner of the Hartford Hellions indoor soccer team and a Texas man have been indicted in connection with fraudulent literary tax shelters, according to U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr.

William E. Chipman, 41, formerly of Glastonbury, and Joe Henry Hodges, 60, of Houston, were charged on Wednesday in separate federal grand jury indictments.

Chipman was accused in a 14-count indictment of conspiring to defraud the government and assisting in the presentation of false tax returns to the Internal Revenue Service, Twardy said.

The indictment charged that Chipman had marketed to taxpayers five tax-sheltered investments associated with six different books whose values were greatly inflated.

It said that author Robin Moore and others were marketing the tax-shelter investments to promoters, such as Chipman, in Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Illinois, Florida and Texas.

Kin of fire victims sue landlord

STAMFORD — Relatives of five members of a Haitian family who died in a tenement fire have filed a lawsuit against the landlord, claiming unsafe conditions caused the deaths, an attorney for the family said.

Anita Cason, the attorney for Rigaud Caman, who is the administrator of the Caman family estate, said Thursday the lawsuit alleges that the landlord, John R. Bunch, knew of unsafe conditions in his building before the Feb. 16 fire.

The lawsuit also claims that Bunch did not comply with the state fire safety code or the city housing and health codes.

It charges that Bunch created conditions that were a nuisance to the family, and it says that renting apartments in a substandard building placed him in violation of fair practices of trade and commerce.

Yale collection goes up for sale

NEW HAVEN — A rich collection of papers of a leading literary magazine from the 1920s has left a Yale University library and is up for sale, with some scholars fearing for their research.

The deadline for institutional bidding for The Dial magazine papers collection as a whole is today, with a reported asking price of $1 million. If no acceptable bid is made, the owners intend to break up the collection into lots for auction.

The Dial magazine papers include letters and manuscripts from many major writers of the 1920s, including D.H. Lawrence, James Joyce and Ezra Pound. They were part of the estate of the magazine's co-owner and editor, Scofield Thayer, who died in 1982.

Scholars say the collection provides insights into the development of many of the writers of the modernist period, which is regarded as a brilliant time in American literature.

Bill would assist day-care centers

U.S. Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., has introduced legislation designed to improve the quality of child care by providing training and technical assistance to those running family day care centers.

Dodd, the chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Children, Families, Drugs and Alcoholism, said the measure would complement a Dodd bill enacted last year that provides financial assistance to low-income child care workers seeking to earn Child Development Associate credentials.

The bill introduced Thursday, called the Family Day Care Provider Assistance Act of 1987, would provide family day care workers with training, technical assistance and equipment, especially those who do not have the time to participate in long-term training for credentials, said Jason Isaacson, a Dodd spokesman.

Ex-gaming chief gets new state job

HARTFORD — A.W. Oppenheimer, who stepped down as state gaming chief and was then temporarily appointed executive assistant to his successor, has a new state job: deputy commissioner of the Department of Administrative Services.

The appointment was announced Thursday by DAS Commissioner Stephen J. Negri, but it was the work of Gov. William A. O'Neill. When Oppenheimer was succeeded by Orlando P. Ragazzi as executive director of the Division of Special Revenue, he was named Ragazzi's executive assistant. But O'Neill said Oppenheimer's assignment, at $90,000 a year, would only be temporary.

Oppenheimer never actually worked for Ragazzi after stepping down as state gaming chief on Feb. 27. He began using several weeks of accumulated vacation time and never reported to the gaming agency again.

His new appointment is effective Friday and his annual salary will be $63,457.

Yale did inspire poet's new attire

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Soviet poet Andrei Voznesensky may have been somewhat taken aback when he greeted his longtime friend, American poet Allen Ginsberg, Voznesensky said it was the first time he had ever seen Ginsberg wearing a tie.

"I asked him why," Voznesensky said. "Because it is Yale."

The two were giving a poetry reading of Voznesensky's work at Yale University Thursday. Voznesensky was reciting in Russian and Ginsberg, a darling of the "beat generation" of the 1950s and the peace movement of the '60s, read the English translations.

Later Thursday, Ginsberg was to give a reading of his own work at the school, where he is visiting as a Wallace Stevens fellow.

Voznesensky, a major Soviet writer, jokingly apologized for his own dress, which included an open-neck shirt and a sports jacket. He said he should have considered wearing a tuxedo.

Direct primaries endorsed

HARTFORD (AP) — Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman is breaking with the Democratic Party leadership and endorsing the idea of direct primaries for nominating political candidates.

The idea, which would make it much easier for candidates to get on the ballot, is opposed by Gov. William A. O'Neill and state Democratic Chairman John F. Dronsey Jr.

Under a direct primary system, candidates would have to gather a certain number of petition signatures to get on a primary ballot. Under the current system, a candidate must win the support of at least 20 percent of the delegates at a nominating convention to qualify for a primary.

Because delegates at conventions are traditionally local party regulars, it is often difficult for challengers to win the 20 percent. That's what happened last year when Toby Moffett challenged O'Neill for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Moffett could get only 18 percent of the delegates.

Asked why he wasn't heard from on the subject last year during the Moffett-O'Neill fight, Lieberman smiled and said, "Nobody asked me. I've always been for this. I think it's just time to make a change."

He said a change during last year's campaign would have amounted to changing the rules in the middle of the game.

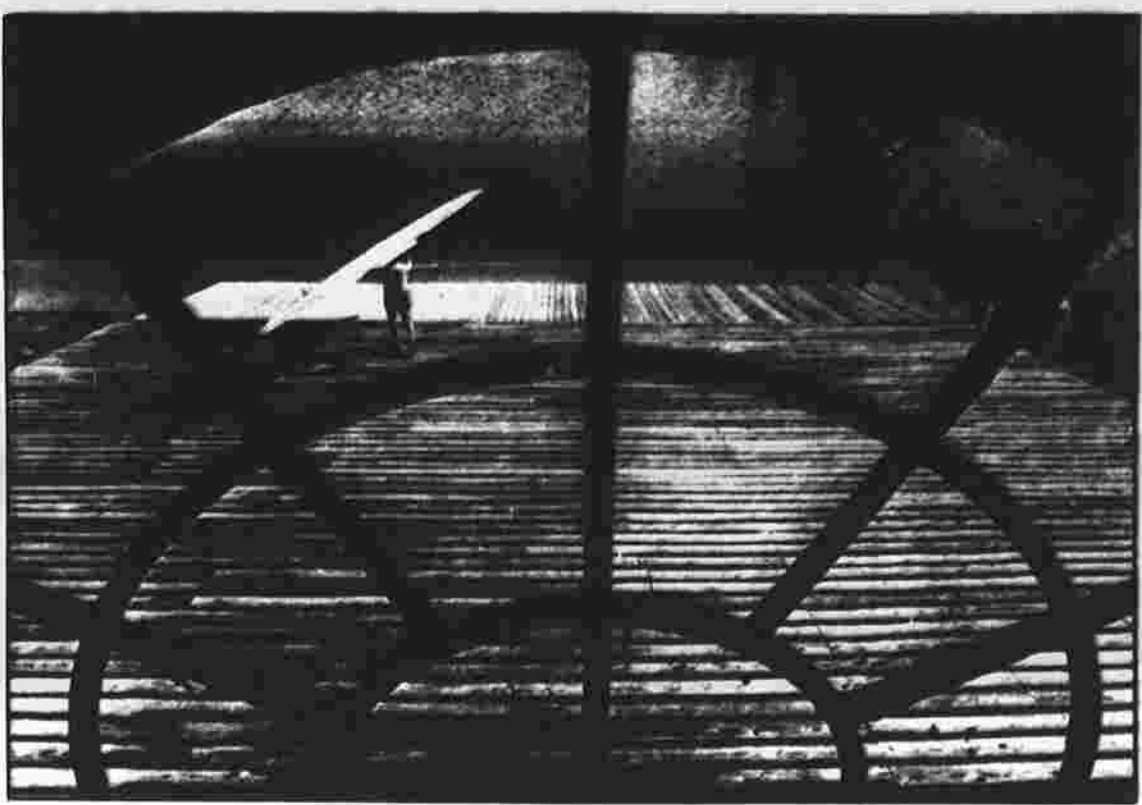

Lieberman said he had not discussed the issue with O'Neill or Dronsey prior to his announcement Thursday.

"I disagree with them... (but) I think the Democratic Party will survive and flourish in the midst of that kind of diversity," Lieberman said.

Support for direct primaries has been growing during this legislative session, although it's not yet clear whether there's enough support to get the law changed.

The attorney general said he could also support another option which would continue the convention system but let those who don't get the 20 percent go make the petition route.

"Anything you do to make it easier... is a step forward," Lieberman said.

Judge's spouse investigated

By Brent Layman
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — State police briefly investigated the husband of a Superior Court judge last month for possible involvement with illegal gambling, state police revealed.

The investigation, which was halted after state police concluded they didn't have enough information for an arrest, focused on Frederick C. "Fritz" Zivic, husband of Judge Anne C. Dranginis of Litchfield. Lt. Edward Dailey said in a three-page statement Thursday.

The investigation was based on written allegations from convicted gambler Thomas W. Speers of Wolcott that Zivic directed him to someone who would take an illegal bet on Zivic's OK, Dailey said.

Speers has been under investigation by the Waterbury

State's Attorney's office for possible involvement in an alleged attempt to pressure Dranginis with a tape recording of a gambling-related telephone call with her husband.

But Dailey revealed it was authorities from state police and the chief state's attorney's office who monitored telephone calls in which Zivic's name figured prominently.

Dranginis, reached at her home Thursday night, said she was aware of Speers' contact with her husband and was the person who reported it to "higher authorities."

"I was aware of what had taken place," she said.

Dranginis refused to say if she knew Speers was working with state police in a sting operation.

State police until Thursday had declined to comment on the matter. Dailey said state police decided to release a statement now because of numerous press inquiries and to correct "misinformation" being circulated about the case.

State police came under criticism two years ago when it was revealed that they had kept a "raw intelligence" linking former Chief Justice John A. Speziale with illegal gambling in northwest Connecticut. Critics said state police should have investigated the allegations promptly and either purged the information from their files or brought charges.

"Even without the benefit of that historical perspective," Dailey said, "it was clear that the allegations in the (Speers) letter were so detailed, so internally consistent and so descriptive of typical gambling activities that law enforcement officers would have been derelict in their duties if they did not attempt to determine whether or not they could be corroborated."

Firm takes on AT&T

STAMFORD (AP) — A Stamford company has filed a lawsuit against AT&T and its advertising agency alleging false advertising and anti-competitive practices in selling AT&T's 800 service.

The Stamford firm, Worldwide 800 Services Inc., which operates an 800, toll-free telephone service, filed the complaint in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois Eastern Division on March 31. The complaint charges Young & Rubicam with "misrepresenting AT&T's involvement in the toll-free international dialing service network through a series of false and misleading advertisements."

Worldwide 800 Services asks that AT&T stop its current campaign which it says implies that international toll-free service can only be obtained through AT&T. In addition it asks AT&T to correct the "false information" contained in the current AT&T advertisements by issuing a corrective statement in the bills sent to its international toll-free customers.

"The ads claim that AT&T is 'in' a number of cities listed, such as London, Paris and Rome and further states that AT&T now 'services hundreds of cities in selected countries around the world,'" a statement from Worldwide 800 Services said. "The ads also claim, 'You won't find this type of service anywhere else. At any price.'"

Panel shows courage on gays' rights

The Legislature's Judiciary Committee is to be commended for having the courage to approve a bill intended to end discrimination against homosexuals in employment, housing and public accommodations.

At a time when fear of the deadly disease AIDS has been fueling homophobia, the committee could have easily taken the path least likely to incur the anger of constituents and rejected the bill.

As it was, the bill was not without its opponents on the committee. During a public hearing on the bill earlier this week, Rep. Francis X. O'Neill, R-Guilford, questioned whether the bill would sanction sexual relations with animals or children.

Aside from demonstrating that intelligence is not a requirement to become a state legislator, such comments only serve to fuel the hatred that has been directed toward gay men and women.

Fortunately, most committee members approached the bill in a far more rational manner, and it passed by a vote of 19 to 7 on Wednesday.

But the battle is far from over. The measure, which has been defeated by the Legislature at least three times in the past 10 years, now goes to the House, where its passage is far from certain.

The Legislature should not hesitate to approve the bill, which would add the words "sexual status" to the existing law barring discrimination in housing, employment or public accommodation on the basis of "race, color, religious creed, age, sex, marital status, national origin, ancestry, present or past history of mental disorder, mental retardation or physical disability."

The bill has been vehemently opposed by the Roman Catholic Church and the 1,700-member Connecticut Citizens for Decency. The opponents have argued that it would sanction sin and promote homosexuality.

The bill would do no such thing. It would simply help ensure that an estimated 300,000 Connecticut residents can live, work and travel without fear of discrimination based on a matter that is no one else's business.

Lawmakers should not be swayed by the distorted arguments of the bill's opponents. If the Legislature defeats the bill, it will send a message that hatred and discrimination are acceptable provided they are directed against people whose lifestyles, values or beliefs might not be shared by the majority.

Like other Americans, homosexuals should be free to live and work where they choose without fear of discrimination.

Yes, by golly! I think we CAN find a spot for someone with game show letter-turning experience.

Heavy shadow for Shultz

By Barry Schweld

WASHINGTON — It took 16 months for Secretary of State George P. Shultz to hold wide-ranging talks with the Soviets after they shot down a South Korean jetliner in 1983 with 61 Americans aboard.

Within days of the disaster, Shultz met with Andrei A. Gromyko, then the Soviet foreign minister. But they talked mostly about the shoot-down, and the atmosphere in Madrid was frigid. They did not get back to a normal agenda until a meeting in Stockholm in January 1985.

Shultz is going to Moscow next week, despite a furor over Soviet infiltration and eavesdropping at the U.S. Embassy and a lopsided Senate resolution urging him to reconsider. While the talks will be held under what he calls a "heavy shadow," the agenda will not be shortened by the spying affair.

Arms control will be the main topic, but Shultz is ready to talk with General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze about the war in Afghanistan, human rights and other issues.

THERE ARE THOSE, Shultz said Wednesday, who hold the view "that if anything goes wrong, just junk the whole thing." But the distinction President Reagan and Shultz made this time, he said, is that "if one way or another we can pursue something that is constructive and that is in our interest, we will do it."

As a matter of fact, Shultz is not expected to dwell on non-nuclear issues. The two sides have just completed sweeping reviews in Washington and Moscow. "We don't expect a whole lot of discussion, and we don't expect any surprises," another senior U.S. official said Thursday.

While the spying dispute will not trim Shultz's agenda, he is less likely to be "venturesome" in the talks, partly because the U.S.

Guards who blew whistle get no help

WASHINGTON — Federal officials who are supposed to protect whistleblowers left two guards at a Veterans Administration hospital "twisting in the wind" after they accused their chief of brutality.

The two men started getting reprimands and were finally fired after their allegations led to an FBI investigation of the Cincinnati VA hospital's police chief, Daniel Wilson. Both men had nearly spotless records for years before they made the allegations.

Despite the peculiar timing of their dismissal, the Office of Special Counsel has refused to order the men reinstated.

A spokeswoman for the office said it did not have "reasonable grounds" to believe the firings were retaliatory.

Congress created the office of Special Counsel in part to thwart punitive and arbitrary personnel actions — including reprisals against whistleblowers.

REP. PATRICIA Schroeder, who chairs a House subcommittee that is looking into the case, told out associate Stewart Harris that, in her opinion, the dismissals should have been overturned.

Schroeder, a Colorado Democrat, and Rep. Frank Horton, R-N.Y., heard testimony from one of the guards at a hearing last month. They have demanded a new investigation by the VA inspector general and the Office of Special Counsel.

The guard, John Berter, gave Schroeder's Civil Service subcommittee chilling details of his allegations. He testified that when a panhandler was brought to Wilson's office, the chief kicked him in the groin, then stood on his calf and gouged a thumb into the man's collarbone. Wilson repeatedly kicked the man in the groin, Berter said.

A few weeks later, another panhandler got similar treatment, according to Berter. Wilson stood on the man's groin, Berter testified, and asked him, "Who is God?" According to written testimony submitted by Berter, the man screamed in pain and blurted out an answer, whereupon the police chief told him "Wrong! I'm God! If you ever come back here again, I'll make a little girl out of you."

CHIEF WILSON told us it would be inappropriate for him to comment while the Office of Special Counsel was still investigating. But he noted that the FBI had closed its investigation of Berter's allegations.

The VA hospital's director, Don Zeigenhorn, confirmed this, quoting from a Justice Department letter that said the FBI closed its inquiry last month because "evidence does not support criminal prosecution."

Nevertheless, Berter's testimony and a stack of signed affidavits from individuals who claim to have witnessed or been victims of Wilson's brutality convinced Schroeder and Horton that the Office of Special Counsel and the VA inspector general should take another look at the guards' dismissals.

Meanwhile, Berter and the other guard are still without their jobs. Berter even testified that the Office of Special Counsel refused to look at some of his most damning evidence. A spokeswoman for the Office of Special Counsel said Berter was told to take his evidence to the FBI because it headed the criminal probe. Berter had already done that before the FBI closed its probe.

WE TALKED with Tom Devine, counsel for the Government Accountability Project, a public advocacy group, about the plight of whistleblowers. He said they are often left "twisting in the wind" by the Office of Special Counsel.

"This has been a trend over the years," Devine observed. "The OSC continually declines evidence of reprisal and then says no reprisal occurs."

Devine added that, during the Reagan years, the counsel has not stayed one dismissal for a whistleblower. The average was 20 a year during Carter's administration.

The Office of Special Counsel said it has halted at least 10 personnel actions against whistleblowers in the last few years.

Gorbachev says nuke ban possible

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev said there is a "real chance" of eventually eliminating nuclear weapons but that certain Western politicians are not yet convinced that is possible.

Gorbachev made the comments at a formal dinner in Prague Thursday, hours after arriving for a four-day visit that his conservative leadership would adopt recent Kremlin reforms.

More than 150,000 people turned out to welcome the Soviet leader at his various stops during the day.

Prague residents said they could not recall such a turnout for a Soviet visitor to Czechoslovakia since the first man in space, Yuri Gagarin, came to the capital in 1961.

Treasury secretary criticizes loans

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III on Thursday criticized bank lending to heavily indebted countries as disappointing and suggested a debt strategy to support changes in those nation's policies.

Baker said the banks' net loans have been "negative" because they received more in payments than they lent in new money.

Earlier this week Paul S. Volcker, head of the U.S. Federal Reserve System, said bank lending to these countries had virtually stopped in 1985 and 1986.

The Third World owes more than $1,035 trillion, and Baker has been largely concerned with 15 countries which owe about $440 billion, most of it to commercial banks. In October 1985, he asked the banks to lend them another $20 billion over three years.

The most recent loan package for Mexico had taken too much time and energy to complete, he said. He added that the sense of urgency that appeared in 1982, when the crisis broke in Mexico, is less evident.

Gland-graft surgery a first in U.S.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A 42-year-old woman was in stable condition today after doctors tried to curb her symptoms of Parkinson's disease by grafting adrenal gland cells onto her brain in the first such surgery in this country.

Dickie Baggett underwent five hours of surgery Thursday at Vanderbilt University Medical Center.

"This development in the treatment of Parkinson's disease may usher in a new era of transplantation of tissue into the brain," said Dr. George S. Allen, the hospital's neurosurgery department chairman who led the medical team.

Parkinsonism is a degenerative neurological disorder often characterized by tremors, rigidity or loss of balance.

The disease, which affects nearly 1.5 million Americans, results from the loss of brain cells that produce a substance known as dopamine, which allows nerve cells to transmit messages to one another.

Webb confirmed as Navy secretary

WASHINGTON — James H. Webb, who has backed down from his once strong opposition to the inclusion of women in U.S. military academies, will be secretary of the Navy.

The Senate on Thursday cast a voice vote to confirm Webb despite criticism of an article he wrote in 1979 saying women in the academies were poisoning the atmosphere there.

Webb, an Annapolis graduate and a successful novelist who has been assistant defense secretary for reserve affairs, will replace John Lehman.

Lehman had been the civilian chief of the Navy since 1981, guiding the service as it built toward the 600-ship goal set by Reagan when he took office.

Reagan insists Soviet trip go on

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan, despite his own belief that Soviet intrusion at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow is "outrageous," is insisting his secretary of state go to Moscow to pursue an arms accord.

Reagan, who planned to examine the state of U.S.-Soviet relations in a speech today, also predicted the sex-and-spying scandal will not hamper attempts to reach an arms pact.

"I don't see that there is very much distance between us," Reagan said Thursday when asked about chances for a U.S.-Soviet agreement on medium-range nuclear weapons in light of the spy scandal.

Despite Senate passage Thursday of a resolution calling on Shultz to cancel his round of talks or find a secure place to hold them, Reagan said.

Reagan's aides said the president wanted Shultz to hold talks in Moscow next week. "While the president is sympathetic with Congress' intent, he feels that there is just too much at stake right now to cancel the trip," said a senior White House official.

The president was queried about the allegations of U.S. and Soviet espionage during a stop in Indiana at Purdue University on his way to a 12-day California visit.

The official said the president believes there are "a wide range of issues that need to be discussed," such as arms control, human rights and regional issues like Afghanistan.

Reagan does not intend to renege on his invitation to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to come to a summit in the United States. "The invitation still stands," the official said.

The official, who demanded anonymity, said the president has been anxious "to reflect our intentions" have been taken inside the embassy to ensure Shultz is protected from Soviet eavesdropping during his talks next week.

The president, speaking with reporters before boarding his plane in West Lafayette, Ind., refused to comment directly about the charges and countercharges of U.S. and Soviet spying.

strongly. We're conducting a full investigation and will take whatever corrective action is necessary because our diplomatic establishments must be secure from Soviet spying."

Reagan, who strove over to reporters to denounce the Democratic budget approved by the House of Representatives, was asked whether Shultz was carrying any new proposals to the Soviets.

The president said Shultz was "going there with pretty much" what has been discussed with the Soviets.

"There are some details around the ends that have never been negotiated at all," Reagan said. He gave no detail, except to note the differences between the two sides over how to address the issue of shorter-range nuclear missiles.

Democratic budget plan prevails

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats pushed their $1 trillion budget plan over the heads of Republicans even as leaders conceded the plan's tax hikes and other priorities won't become law unless a truce is struck with President Reagan.

The president, saying he's not ready to sit down at the bargaining table, dismissed the Democrats' plan as "passing the buck to the American taxpayer to pay for their excesses" while dangerously cutting military spending.

House Speaker Jim Wright, after Thursday's 230-192 approval of the Democrats' fiscal 1988 budget, predicted the House would succeed in imposing more than $18 billion in tax increases.

Overriding a promised veto was another matter.

"If the president is determined to obstruct deficit reduction, he can do that," Wright, D-Texas, told reporters. "I just hope the president meant it when he said he wanted to meet with the Congress."

Wright said the Democratic plan was "a very solid budget which many economists believe can make our deficit situation sustainable, economic growth in the United States and economic stagnation."

Democrats said their plan reduced deficits $38 billion, slightly more than Reagan's spending blueprint. But while both claimed to meet next year's $100 billion deficit goal under the Gramm-Rudman law, lawmakers on both sides said that was only possible because both sides had cut the nation's rosy economic scenario.

Bridge checks may be cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — While federal officials acknowledge four of every five highway bridges are deficient and need repair, the Transportation Department is proposing to scale back bridge inspection requirements to save money.

The proposed change, which would require that many bridges be inspected every four years instead of every two years as now required, was quietly unveiled this week in an entry in the Federal Register.

Widespread deficiencies in the nation's highway bridges have been known for years, but the subject has gained renewed attention since the collapse Sunday of a major four-lane bridge in upper New York.

The collapse of the Interstate 90 bridge across the swollen Schoharie Creek, 25 miles west of Albany, is believed to have killed at least 10 motorists.

According to the latest estimates by the Federal Highway Administration, 245,646, or 42.3 percent, of the nation's 578,867 bridges of at least 20 feet in length are in need of repair.

The government last year authorized $2 billion for bridge repairs, but that amount was rolled back as part of an overall effort to reduce the deficit. The highway bill approved by Congress last week calls for $1.63 billion a year over the next five years for bridge repair, an amount many highway experts say will barely allow work crews to keep up with the current rate of bridge decay.

The Federal Highway Administration suggested that by rolling back bridge inspection requirements for some bridges considered in fairly good shape, additional money might be funneled toward actual bridge repairs.

The agency published its proposed rulemaking in the Federal Register on Tuesday.

Flood patrol

National Guardsman Alan Vasseur, 28, patrols flooded Daley Street in Lawrence, Mass., Thursday as a U.S. Army truck passes by. Looting in the neighborhood prompted the National Guard to send 30 men to help back up local police. Flood waters throughout the Northeast have finally begun to subside.

Gas explosion traced to bullet holes

NEW YORK — Bullet holes in a meter allowed natural gas to leak into a grocery store before it was flattened along with an abandoned tenement by a blast that killed six people, a utility official said.

Fire officials said the blast in the Bronx on Wednesday appeared to have been caused by natural gas, and Con Ed Edison, the utility serving the area, received a report of a gas leak moments before the explosion.

"The holes caused the gas to pass through the meter," said Thursday. Utility officials said gas passes through the meter.

Deputy Police Commissioner Al McGillion said, "This is now going to be the focus of our investigation."

Scored of police and utility officials picking through bricks and dirt found the gas meter in the store's basement Thursday.

Police ballistics experts determined that two of the holes were bullet entry holes and the third was an exit hole, said Officer Peter O'Donnell. He said an aluminum jacket for a .38-caliber bullet was found in the meter.

Police said they did not know whether the bullet was fired directly into the meter or had strayed, nor how long it had been there.

Not the first time for a clergy scandal

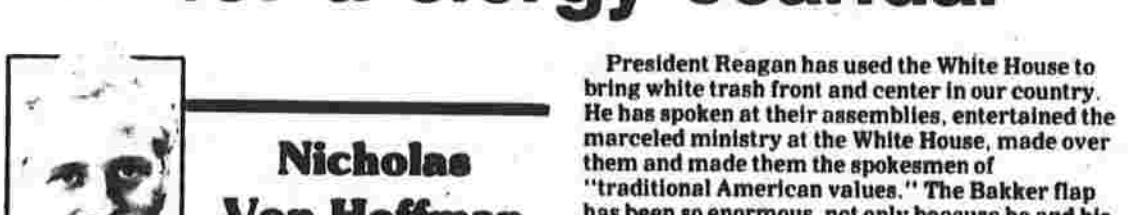

Aln't it glorious. Rev. Bakker and his wife, Ms. Macosara, are on the cover of both weekly news magazines. If they dreamed of making it big, they've done it, but it's not the first time America has been rocked by the discovery of one of its better-known preachers in the missionary position.

The religious certainties of the Victorian Age were shaken by the news of the great Rev. Dr. Henry Ward Beecher's adultery. Though he was one of the most socially prominent clergymen of the era, religion and the social order gave a hiccup and then strode on into the American future.

Likewise, the only effects of the Bakker scandal is the laughter and entertainment it has provided us secular humanists. One of the satisfactions of being a member of this recently cut-discovered religion is the secure knowledge that none of its ministers are delinquent or delinquent with a delicious little soprano from the church choir.

LITTLE JIMMY BAKKER'S hilarious fall from grace has been the occasion of public moralizing on preachers who prey (no pun intended) on the poor, but it's not the poor who enable these jackleg divines to spread the Word from private jets and Rolls Royces. Working people contribute the money, and if they weren't giving it to the Holy Roller clergy, they'd be dropping it on state-supported Lotto, so what difference does it make?

There used to be an expression for the likes of the Rev. Dr. Bakker and it isn't tacky or yucky or down market or any of our modern idioms. Forty years ago, Bakker, with his theme park and his bouvaire riches money, would have been dismissed as white trash. The expression, of course, has its etymological roots in racism, but it came to mean a certain, peculiarly American, unlettered, tastelessly vulgar conduct and demeanor. It's that, not the fact that Bakker takes his trousers off in the motel one leg at a time, which makes him the revulsive, amily faced divine. The guy is white trash in double knit and polyester. The man is the Sammy Davis Jr. of religion.

IF THIS SOUNDS ELITIST, it is. High time, too, for a misplaced gallantianian suppression, criticism of the offensively vulgar, especially if it is being peddled from the pulpit by a man waving a leather-bound book with gilded printing on the cover. It may be too late, but the Rev. Bakker's little lunts can serve as a call to arms to uphold some slightly higher, better and more learned standard in religion, commerce, art and public life.

Granted, as long as there are car coats, bee-hive hairdos, and Donahue there will be Rev. Jimmy Bakker. The question is, with the pink pig Jesus on the Rolls-Royce dash board, he's white trash, white trash, all the way.

THE RENAISSANCE popes went scotting around 15th-century Rome with their chaubles unzipped; they sold church offices and took money to get sinners into heaven, but they used the money from their swindles to commission some of our civilization's greatest art. Jimmy Lee Bakker, or whatever his name is, with the pink pig Jesus on the Rolls-Royce dash board, he's white trash, white trash, all the way.

East Catholic's Kevin Riggs keeps his eyes on the baseball after socking a three-run homer in the third inning of Thursday's opener against Manchester High at Moriarty Field. The Eagles won, 7-1.

East takes opener from MHS

By Len Auster
Sports Editor

For East Catholic, the opener to the 1987 baseball season, a 7-1 victory over crosstown Manchester High Thursday at Moriarty Field, was satisfactory. To the Indians, though, it's back to the drawing board. "Their pitchers stopped our offense and I think we have a good offense," Indian coach Don Race said after seeing his stickmen stopped on the combined one-hit pitching of Eagle sophomores Marc Mangialfico and Kevin Greene. Greene worked four effective innings in all, striking out four and issuing two walks to get credit for the win. "He stopped us cold. And (Kevin) Riggs hit a beauty," Race added. Riggs' hit was a three-homer, 400-foot blast over the center field fence, to stretch East's lead to 7-1 in the third inning. "Riggs' hit was the key one. I think that broke their backs," said East coach Jim Penders.

Manchester's lone safety was a third-inning single — misplayed somewhat — by Mike Charter that fell just under left fielder Andy Klopfer's glove. Otherwise, Manchester's bats were silenced with Mangialfico, a left-hander, and the right-handed Greene combining for 11 strikeouts. "We haven't had that in awhile," Penders spoke of the strikeouts. Mangialfico and Greene are only sophomores, but Penders is aware he's going to have to depend on them. "We won 13 games with them last year," he reminded. The Indians went in front in the top of the first without the aid of a hit. A one-out walk to Jon Roe, stolen base, wild pitch and a bizarre sacrifice fly to first baseman Scott Sims' third, first base — saw an alert Roe come across. A bad-hop single by Riggs and misplayed RBI triple from Kevin Greene tied it for East in the top of the second. The Eagles took the lead for good in the second inning. A hit batsman and RBI double from Kris DeRoche made it 2-1. East's third run came on a fielder's choice/error which designated hitter singling home Riggs with run No. 4. Indian starter and loser Nell Archambault ran into trouble with the bottom of the Eagle batting order in the second and third innings. Mike DeLisio's second hit of the game preceded Riggs' game-breaking homer on which he turned around an Archambault fastball. "The bottom of the order (DeRoche and DeLisio) hit the ball hard," Penders said. "I'm always surprised when the bottom of the order hurts me." Race said Archambault struck out three, walked two and allowed seven hits in working three innings. "He ran hot and cold," Race said. Junior left-hander Scott Aronson gave a good account of himself in three innings in relief for Manchester. He was touched for just one hit, fanned one and walked two. Greene worked the innings 4-5 before Penders went with Pat Merritt in the seventh. The first two batters reached before Penders brought Greene back. "I wanted to save him for Saturday but I didn't want to fool around. Kevin did an excellent job. He had a good pre-season," the veteran East coach said. Both clubs are in action Saturday. The Eagles host ACC rival Fairfield Prep at 11 a.m. at MCC's McCormick Field while Manchester is at Newington High in a 1 p.m. start.

Sports In Brief

MCC softball team a 10-3 loser
The Manchester Community College women's softball team dropped a 10-3 decision Thursday to Massasoit Community College at Nike Field. The loss drops MCC's record to 1-1 while Massasoit moves to 4-1. Massasoit pitcher Wendy Corliss struck out 11 Cougars and allowed only five hits. Geri Grimaldi led MCC with two hits and two RBI while Barbara Shoy, Darryl Shirins, and Sarah Wheeler each added a single. MCC's next game is today against the Springfield College JV's.

Petersen leads Hawks to victory
WEST HARTFORD — Junior Chris Petersen, a former All-State selection at Manchester High, slugged a two-run single in the fourth inning to snap a 1-1 tie as the University of Hartford beat UMass, 5-1, in the opener of a doubleheader Thursday. UMass took the nightcap, 9-2. Hartford is now 4-13 for the season.

Willie McCloud to attend UConn
STORRS — Small forward Willie McCloud ended speculation Thursday by announcing he will sign a national letter of intent to attend the University of Connecticut to play basketball. The 6-4 1/2 McCloud, out of Allegany Community College in Cumberland, Md., will have two years of eligibility. UConn is still waiting for a decision from 6-0 shooting guard John Gwynn, from DeMatha High in Hyattsville, Md., who has narrowed his choices to UConn, Marquette, Virginia Tech and VCU.

Okamoto takes lead at LPGA event
SAN DIEGO — Ayako Okamoto shot a 6-under-par 66 Thursday to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the LPGA Kyocera Inamori Golf Classic. Tammy Fredrickson and tour veteran Kathy Whitworth were tied for second at 67 after one trip around the par-72 course at the Bernardo Heights Country Club. Penny Hammel and Mistie McGrorge were next at 68. Pat Bradley, Janet Anderson, Denise Strohig and Janet Coles were three strokes back at 69. In all, 34 players broke par.

Gooden's probation is modified
TAMPA, Fla. — Dwight Gooden, the New York Mets pitcher undergoing treatment for cocaine use four months after fighting with Tampa police, will be subjected to random drug testing under modified terms of probation. Circuit Judge John P. Griffin on Thursday approved a recommendation by corrections officials and Gooden's attorney that the 1985 Cy Young Award winner be given a chance to successfully complete a rehabilitation program instead of serving time in jail.

Cheney Tech nine surprises Coventry

It was the season opener for the defending Charter Oak Conference baseball champions and Cheney Tech Coach Bill Baccaro didn't know what to expect. "What he received Thursday was a very nice surprise" as his Beavers played errorless ball and ran the bases with abandon to nip pre-season COC favorite Coventry High, 3-2, in nine innings. Cheney stole eight bases with two stolen bases in the middle of the winning run. Glenn Parent drew a walk in the ninth, stole second and third, and scored on an errant throw to third trying to nail him there. "The key to the whole game was we didn't make any errors and stole some bases," Baccaro said. It was a pitcher's duel between Cheney's Pat Maguire, who hadn't pitched a varsity inning before, and Coventry's Rhet Gibbs. "It was a matter of who wasn't going to make the errors. All three pitchers pitched well," he said, including Jim Krone who worked the ninth for Cheney and picked up the win. "It was ashaming somebody had to lose," he added. Gibbs worked nine innings, allowing just three hits while striking out eight and walking three. Maguire worked eight innings, scattering seven hits while striking out nine and walking just one. Krone worked a 1-2-3 ninth, including two strikeouts. Larry Walsh, Jeff Rheault and Gibbs each stroked two hits for Coventry. Cheney was back in action today at Somers High at 3:30 p.m. while Coventry hosts Tolland High Saturday at 11 a.m. Coventry, 000 110 000-2-7-5. Knicks anxious to see Bernard King in action

By Bill Bornd
The Associated Press
EAST ORANGE, N.J. — Sometime in the first quarter of tonight's 7th game of the NBA season, the New York Knicks will begin to get a clearer picture of the future. That's when forward Bernard King, who hasn't played in an NBA game in more than two years, will walk onto the court against the Milwaukee Bucks and test his rehabilitated right knee, which was nearly destroyed by an injury in Kansas City on March 25, 1985. Coach Bob Hill said he plans to insert King into the lineup 4-6 minutes into the game. "Then we'll call his number and see what happens," Hill said. "His conditioning is better than I expected, but I have learned that he's so tough mentally and physically that he can accomplish more than you anticipate. King's 1985 NBA scoring champion at 32.9 points per game is as curious as anyone about how well he can play. "My goal has never been just to return, but to return and do well." King said. "I haven't made any adjustments to compensate for the injury yet, but I may have to. It would be unfair to expect me to play at my previous level, but that's my goal." King returned to practice at Upsala College on March 17. On Thursday, he participated in his third, and most intense, scrimmages with the Knicks. "There are a lot of unknowns and I'm treading uncharted waters," King said. "Bob Hill is a new coach for me and the team has a whole different makeup since the last time I played. But this will be a special day for me, the culmination of all the hard work I put in the last several years. I hope it's a special day for the fans of the New York Knicks." King said he has mixed feelings about asking friends and family to come to the game. "I've always played at a level commensurate with the better players in the league so I don't want them to come and then not play well," he said. "I think I'm in pretty good shape, but you get in a game and those guys get going 50 miles an hour."

King said that his timing, not the ability to score, will be the hardest thing to regain. "My timing is still a little off, but in the scrimmages the last two weeks I think I have improved ten-fold." On the practice court, King displays much of the explosiveness and the quick release that made him one of the league's most feared scorers. Questions have arisen, however, about how much his knee surgery took away from his lateral quickness, especially on defense. "We've had to work on his movement defensively," Hill said.

Meet Burt & Ernie: river champs

A chaplain and a surgeon brave the Hockanum

By Nancy Poppo
Herald Reporter

They're known as Burt and Ernie. They claim not to be professional river racers, but for the past several years, Dr. Burton Meisner and the Rev. Ernest Harris have taken home trophies from the Hockanum River canoe races. This year's Hockanum race will be Sunday morning. The day before, the pair will enter the Willimantic River race. Two river races in a row? No problem, said the champs when interviewed Thursday. "It's not a matter of tremendous concern to us. I guess a racer is someone who's in there to win, to really be serious," said Harris, the chaplain at Manchester Memorial Hospital. "We're in there to have fun. It just so happens that we've taken some prizes."

It is this false modesty of champions? Maybe. But the Burt and Ernie team, which races only one weekend a year, is sometimes the only pair finishing the race in the masters' division, the category for racers over 40. "It's just a matter of being in the right place at the right time in our lives," said Meisner, a general surgeon. Meisner and Harris have won trophies for the combined Willimantic and Hockanum races. But they were unopposed. "There's been nobody else in our division who did both races," Meisner said. "So you've got to put that win into perspective." This year may be different. Lee Watkins, organizer of the Hockanum River Race, says that he's expecting more than 100 canoes on Sunday. "I've got registrations in hand from Maine, New Hampshire, from all over New England," Watkins said. "Serious canoe racers are coming here this year, because we're 'the only game in town.'"

Meisner finds the serious canoe racers inspiring. "There's a rhythm about them, a beauty in the way they paddle. Before you know it, they're halfway out of sight," he said. "There's no conversation. Just 'Ehhh. Ehhhh. Ehhh. Change.'" He and his partner, on the other hand, have developed their own, unique way of communicating during the 10 races they've done together. Meisner sits in the front of the canoe. "When we're getting near a rock, I just yell, 'Aaahhhhhhh!' and Ernie knows something's coming." Meisner and Harris say they climb before the race, but not in the water. "This is one of the most enjoyable things I do all year, but it really takes a tremendous amount of concentration," Harris said. On one occasion, Meisner recalled, the team did a 360-degree "wheelie" in the middle of the river, when their attention wandered. "There are times when just keeping the boat going in the right direction is no easy task," said Meisner. Meisner and Harris teamed up in 1982, four years after Harris first paddled in a Hockanum race. Their first run for the gold brought a mini-disaster. "We were very enthusiastic," said Harris. "We were standing at the race start and laughing as people would topple over in their canoes, right at the starting line."

Under Donna Dube Colletta's direction, the current amateur production takes advantage of every chance to milk the delightful absurdity of Gilbert's burlesque. It's a good thing too, for otherwise the first half of Act I would be mostly labored dialogue. The ridiculous professional bride-and groom, ever ready to hail any couple standing together as bride and groom, has perfect timing. Its reliable harmony was the glue that made several Act I songs with characters work, especially the opening and finale of Act I, and the brief finale of Act II. THE PLAYERS hired a sound engineer this time to compensate for the poor acoustics at Manchester High School. The school's fluctuating power supply caused rough shifts in volume. The sound man could do little but sympathize with questioning patrons, when Wayne Pierce tried valiantly not to drown out singers Friday night, and gave satisfying support to the shifting scenes. Only brass distracted listeners by occasionally going off-key. This production is top notch in all but acoustics, so it's puzzling that so few people attended opening night. Granted, the Broadway musicals this group produces are generally more popular than these satires, but last season's "Hello Dolly" had the same problem as this show. "Ruddigore" at Manchester High School will let you know. "Ruddigore" is one of the funnier shows that dynamic duo W.S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan have written. From 1875 to 1896, they produced 14 comic operettas, and gleefully poking fun at the foibles of fellow Victorians. Gilbert, an erstwhile lawyer and soldier, finally found his vocation in comic prose, first for humor magazines and later for the English stage. This team's collaboration may have been stymied, but Gilbert's lyrics are blissfully witty to the orchestration of Sullivan's distinctive melodies. and Harris. They hope to avoid such spills this year. But the pair laughed too soon. "We both ran into the water to get a good start, and hopped right into our canoe, and dunked right over," said Meisner. "We were completely soaking wet." The pair decided to race home for dry clothes. They returned in time to enter the water with the last boats. "People keep reminding us of our spectacular start in racing," Meisner said. Meisner and Harris now wear wet suits underneath their "Burt" and "Ernie" bibs. Both are great admirers of the Hockanum. "It's not enough to just take a look down from a road or a highway bridge. You wouldn't believe how much like a wilderness river it seems, when you're down on the river itself," said Meisner. The Hockanum River Race is sponsored by The Hockanum River Linear Park Committee, The Savings Bank of Manchester and The Quality Inn of Manchester. It is run by an informal group known as the River Rats. The race begins at the Colony on Route 82 near the Forestville section of Vernon. It ends behind the Powder Mill shopping complex on Burnside Avenue in East Hartford. The best place to watch the race, said race organizer Lee Watkins, is behind Economy Electric Co. on Oakland Street.

Meisner and Harris say they climb before the race, but not in the water. "This is one of the most enjoyable things I do all year, but it really takes a tremendous amount of concentration," Harris said. On one occasion, Meisner recalled, the team did a 360-degree "wheelie" in the middle of the river, when their attention wandered. "There are times when just keeping the boat going in the right direction is no easy task," said Meisner. Meisner and Harris teamed up in 1982, four years after Harris first paddled in a Hockanum race. Their first run for the gold brought a mini-disaster. "We were very enthusiastic," said Harris. "We were standing at the race start and laughing as people would topple over in their canoes, right at the starting line."

Reynolds is out of hiding

By Bob Thomas
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Burt Reynolds' back, "happier and healthier" than he has for 10 years, ready to battle his enemies both on and off the screen. His screen return from a three-year self-imposed absence is marked by "Heat," a New Century-Vista film in which he plays a soldier of fortune in combat with the mob in Las Vegas. He also has completed "Malone" and "Rent-a-Cop" with Lisa Minelli. The physicality of "Heat" belies all those reports that Reynolds was suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome or some other devastating disease. "I was coming out of a period when there were so many rumors that I wasn't well," he said. "I was ready to be a tiger. If they had wanted me to go out of an airplane without a parachute, I would have been ready. Just the fact that I was fighting Joe Klecko tells you something." The New York Jets lineman plays a villain. REYNOLDS DID practically all the stunts himself. "The only time I didn't was when I was working on another unit and a second unit was shooting," he said. "Having just finished my third picture in a row, if I wasn't sick before, I would be now." Reynolds was interviewed by telephone from Jupiter, Fla., where he is directing Judd Nelson in a new play at the Burt Reynolds Theater. He said he was "happier and healthier" than he has been in many years. "I missed working," he said. "Since I gave up smoking and drinking, I must be a workaholic now."

Reynolds said he had voluntarily stayed away from films. He admitted his last few movies didn't turn out well, but he primarily was upset about his experience with "Stitch," the fourth movie in which he both starred and directed. "I put a lot of myself into the film, and then it was taken away from me," he said. "It was one of those usual Universal Studio stories: A director goes and makes a movie and thinks it's wonderful. I went tripping down to Florida to relax, and I get a call from (MCA president) Sid Sheinberg saying he hated the movie. "I SAID, 'So what? I'm sorry you don't feel good about it, but I tried. He said, 'You don't understand. We're going to recut it, recolor it and reshoot it.' And they did." The film was made wasn't the film they released. I didn't say anything at the time. I decided to keep my mouth shut and swallow hard. But it was devastating. I didn't want to direct for another four years. Now I'm going to do it again." "Stitch" was doomed, he said, when author Elmore Leonard blasted the studio's version. "Once he said he hated it, that opened the gates for everybody else to hate it," Reynolds said. Reynolds said he made a mistake by not shouldering his hurt and making a better movie. "Instead, I pouted, and I got myself sick, and I hurt my jaw on another picture and couldn't eat." Burt Reynolds at 51 has amassed a history of survival. As running back at Florida State he managed to escape with only a banged knee. He suffered minor damage as a stunt man in "TV Westerns and survived 2 1/2 seasons as the half-breed blacksmith on "Gunsmoke." He also survived his own canceled series — "Riverboat," "Hawk," "Dan August."

HE ONCE categorized his early movies as "the kind they show on airplanes and in prisons, because the audience can't leave." Reynolds, who was once married to "Laugh-In" star Judy Carne — the "Sock It to Me" girl, changed his luck when he started making appearances with Johnny Carson and other late-night TV hosts. His self-deprecating wisecracks brought him national attention, as did his satiric "nude centerfold in Comptonville." "Deliverance" (1972) prompted Hollywood to take Burt Reynolds seriously. Sit up front for G & S Players' 'Ruddigore'

Center Stage
M. Renee Taylor

If you've ever wondered where the expression "Heavens to Burgatroyd!" comes from, the Manchester Gilbert and Sullivan Players' current production of "Ruddigore" at Manchester High School will let you know. "Ruddigore" is one of the funnier shows that dynamic duo W.S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan have written. From 1875 to 1896, they produced 14 comic operettas, and gleefully poking fun at the foibles of fellow Victorians. Gilbert, an erstwhile lawyer and soldier, finally found his vocation in comic prose, first for humor magazines and later for the English stage. This team's collaboration may have been stymied, but Gilbert's lyrics are blissfully witty to the orchestration of Sullivan's distinctive melodies. A 22-piece orchestra under music director Wayne Pierce tried valiantly not to drown out singers Friday night, and gave satisfying support to the shifting scenes. Only brass distracted listeners by occasionally going off-key. This production is top notch in all but acoustics, so it's puzzling that so few people attended opening night. Granted, the Broadway musicals this group produces are generally more popular than these satires, but last season's "Hello Dolly" had the same problem as this show. Under Donna Dube Colletta's direction, the current amateur production takes advantage of every chance to milk the delightful absurdity of Gilbert's burlesque. It's a good thing too, for otherwise the first half of Act I would be mostly labored dialogue. The ridiculous professional bride-and groom, ever ready to hail any couple standing together as bride and groom, has perfect timing. Its reliable harmony was the glue that made several Act I songs with characters work, especially the opening and finale of Act I, and the brief finale of Act II. THE PLAYERS hired a sound engineer this time to compensate for the poor acoustics at Manchester High School. The school's fluctuating power supply caused rough shifts in volume. The sound man could do little but sympathize with questioning patrons, when Wayne Pierce tried valiantly not to drown out singers Friday night, and gave satisfying support to the shifting scenes. Spring CAR CARE Work of Cooling System Dependent On Good Hoses, Belts, Maintenance

Cooling System Maintenance Valuable Prior to Excessively Warm Weather

For much of the country, last summer will be remembered for its record-breaking heat. Scenes of cars stalled with searing radiators were not uncommon. The Car Care Council says that extended periods of under-hood temperatures that exceed 300 degrees Fahrenheit can cause cooling system parts to deteriorate more quickly than normal.

All the more reason to have complete cooling system service done prior to the summer driving season, emphasizes the Council.

Cooling systems are pressurized for operating efficiency. Therefore, a complete checkup of the system, in addition to visual inspection of drive belts and hoses, should include a pressure test. This is a simple procedure that can be done by any service shop (or home mechanic) with a tester. Eighty-five percent of all repair shops are so equipped.

The pressure test usually will disclose leaks or potential leaks at hose connections, in the radiator core, at the water pump, cylinder heads or elsewhere in the system.

The procedure also will disclose weak hoses or flaws in the radiator pressure cap, which is essential to dependable operation of the cooling system.

Any discrepancies should be corrected before proceeding.

The next step in spring preparation is flushing the system. Buy a top-quality cooling system cleaner and follow the instructions carefully. Flush all chemicals from the system before adding new coolant.

The cooling system is among the most neglected aspects of car care, according to surveys among auto mechanics, and should be serviced regularly.

For more detailed information on this subject, send 50 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Automotive Cooling System Institute, Dept. N, 222 Cedar Lane, Teaneck, N.J. 07666. You'll receive by return mail an illustrated, 16-page booklet titled "Quick Course in Car Care."

A dream vacation trip can become a nightmare when mechanical trouble intrudes. Overheating, one of the most common causes of breakdown on the highway, seldom occurs when basic preventive measures are taken.

In a national survey, automobile mechanics cited drive belts and hoses as being among the most neglected parts of their customers' cars. Because these account for the majority of overheating problems, they should be replaced routinely after three to four years of use.

Another survey found nearly half of all respondents never having replaced the drive belts on their cars. Among those who had, the majority did so only when the belts had broken or were near the point of failure.

Thorough inspection

Embarking on a summer trip without a thorough inspection of these and other components of the cooling system may be courting trouble, the Car Care Council says. Automobile engines generate a tremendous amount of heat, enough to warm a six-room house in zero degree weather; also, enough to cause a "melt-down" of the engine if the cooling system becomes inoperative.

In newer, more fuel-efficient cars, with their emission controls, smaller radiators, air conditioning and crowded engine compartments, under-the-hood temperatures may reach 280 degrees Fahrenheit. This is tough duty for rubber parts.

Car Care Council lists five warning signs of cooling system trouble:

1. Antifreeze/coolant needs "topping off" more frequently. (NOTE: When adding antifreeze/coolant, the proportions should be 50 percent to 70 percent antifreeze/coolant and 50 percent to 30 percent water. Do not use permanent antifreeze as it comes from the container.)
2. There are signs of seepage at hose connections or on the radiator.
3. A belt squeals as the engine is accelerated in neutral, indicating a loose belt.
4. The engine "diesels" — continues to run for a few seconds after the ignition has been turned off.
5. The engine knocks or "pings" under load.

"These symptoms also may signify an improper grade of fuel or the need for a tune-up."

Before starting out

If you've noticed any of these symptoms, have the car checked before starting out on a trip.

To help ensure a trouble-free vacation, suggests the Council, have the cooling system serviced if this has not been done in the past year.

Check Alignment In Front, Rear

Is your car ready for "front-end alignment" service? Don't be surprised to find out it needs rear wheel alignment, too.

The Car Care Council, 222 Cedar Lane, Teaneck, N.J. 07666, says that front-wheel drive cars, adjustments to the front wheels as well as to the rear in order to gain perfect alignment are occasionally required.

Wheel alignment, which means the angular relationships between the front and rear suspensions, steering components, wheel and frame, is essential to proper handling of the vehicle. The Council answers a few of the more commonly asked questions about this critical aspect of vehicle maintenance.

What causes wheels to go out of alignment? The most common reasons are worn steering and suspension parts or impact with curbs, check-holes or other obstructions.

How can you be aware of a misalignment? Your first tip-offs are uneven tire wear and/or poor handling. An experienced technician can tell whether the car is misaligned by pulling to one side or another, fails to return properly to straight ahead after a turn or if it shakes or vibrates.

How long should wheels stay in alignment? Usually a year or more, if the car has good suspension components and if it has not been subjected to heavy impacts or accident damage.

What are the benefits of keeping wheels aligned? The most obvious advantages are longer tire wear and better steering. But safer driving and better fuel economy are important, too. A car with misaligned wheels has a higher rolling resistance, resulting in more work for the engine to keep the car in motion.

Will wheel alignment correct most steering and handling problems? Most, but not all. A car cannot be aligned properly when parts are worn. Also, tires out of balance can cause shaking, which will be exaggerated when shock absorbers are weak.

Even when everything is properly aligned, concludes the Council, a car may steer or handle erratically due to imperfect or unevenly worn tires.

Underhood Wear Points Dependable Operation Requires Checkups

Ignition wiring
Spark plug wires deteriorate from heat. They should be checked and replaced as needed when the engine is tuned.

Spark plugs
Even in cars that operate on unleaded gas, spark plugs are vulnerable to fouling deposits from fuel additives. They're also subject to "firing up" wear or erosion that leads to misfiring. This is especially critical in cars with catalytic converters and/or oxygen sensors, both of which can be damaged by spark plug misfiring.

Distributor
Components like the rotor and cap are subject to corrosion and contamination and should be checked as part of a tune-up. Also, older cars with points and contactors require special attention to these parts.

"Snorkel" tube
One of the first underhood parts to go, this pipe hot air to the carburetor air intake for quicker warm-up.

Air filter
A dirty air filter can choke off air to the carburetor, affecting fuel/air mixture ratio.

Fuel filter
A dirty fuel filter will cause the engine to starve for gas at high speeds or under load. The result: power loss.

Cooling system belts & hoses
These are vulnerable to wear and heat. Usual replacement interval is about three years. Belt failure affects not only cooling but also the electrical system, air conditioning, power steering and emissions control air pump.

Hose failure can cause rapid overheating, and possibly serious damage to the engine.

Battery
Catching a worn-out battery before it fails can save inconvenience and unnecessary expense. Battery connections should be checked periodically, as well.

The Car Care Council emphasizes that seeking out the wear points listed above covers only those under the hood. Beyond these, there are the commonly replaced wipers and tire shock absorbers, all of which require periodic attention.

Perform "Sniff" Test

Keeping a close check on transmission fluid is an essential part of car care. Especially critical is not only the level of transmission fluid but also its condition, which can be a clue to possible mechanical trouble.

Car Care Council says most transmission failures can be attributed to overheating. Each 20-degree drop in temperature doubles the life of transmission fluid.

It is possible to tell if an automatic transmission has been overheating by the appearance and odor of the fluid. When fluid has become excessively hot, it may have a burned odor and be brown rather than red in color.

What causes the transmission to overheat? Abuse, according to the Council — typically, improperly "rocking" the car out of snow or mud. It also can be the result of operating under severe load, such as with trailer towing in hilly areas, without having added a transmission cooler.

When in doubt about the condition of your car's transmission fluid, replace the fluid and the filter. It's good insurance.

WORKING TO BE THE BEST... WHAT ELSE IS THERE!

Home care is alternative to long-term hospitalization

Their newborn baby would live, the doctor told the parents. The surgery to correct a defect in his heart appeared to be successful. But he would need to be hooked up to special equipment, and registered nurses would have to be on hand to monitor his progress for at least 12 weeks. The estimated cost — $195,000.

Sylvia Porter

There was a humane alternative. Blue Cross of California's case management unit, with the doctor's assent, made arrangements for the baby to go home. Going beyond the terms of the parent's health insurance contract, arrangements were made for the installation of special equipment in a bedroom in the family home. Registered nurses were assigned to do the necessary monitoring. Cost — $30,000. The savings — $165,000, not to mention peace of mind for the parents worried about the time they would otherwise have spent in the hospital away from their other children.

Plan's Verticare program, begun in 1971, laid the groundwork, using nurse coordinators to identify hospitalized patients for whom outpatient services might be more appropriate and giving doctors the option of prescribing outpatient services not covered in the person's contract. A majority of 57 of the 78 Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans now operate some type of case management program. Since 1984, a number of commercial insurance companies have adopted or are developing similar programs. The nurse coordinator now, as in the past, is at the heart of the case management program. NELLANN PECK, case management coordinator at Blue Shield of California, says cases are referred to her unit in a variety of ways — from hospital discharge planners and from the Plan's own preadmission reviewers who check medical charts and visit patients to determine that the level of care in the patient is receiving is appropriate. Some diagnoses, such as head injuries, she says are a tip-off that home health care may be desirable after the initial medical crisis is past.

Broker wouldn't help fund price

QUESTION: In order to save on commission when I bought shares of a "load" mutual fund recently, I did not go through a broker. Instead, I sent my check directly to the underwriting organization selling the fund's shares.

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

As it happened, my purchase was made on the day the share price was at an all-time high. The price dropped sharply the next day. Would I have been better advised to buy through my broker, so I could have had better control over the timing of my purchase?

ANSWER: It really wouldn't have made any difference. When you invest in a mutual fund, you buy shares at the price established after your order reaches the fund — whether you send it yourself or through a broker. This "forward pricing" procedure was put into effect by the Securities and Exchange Commission in 1969. All mutual funds are required to use it and to "price" their shares at 4 p.m., Eastern time.

QUESTION: I reinvest the dividends on my mutual fund shares. The dividends are paid quarterly and I notice that the statements I receive list the name of the broker through whom I make my original purchase. My dividends, of course, are used to purchase additional fund shares. Does any of that money go to the broker?

ANSWER: That depends on the particular mutual fund. The vast majority of mutual funds allow shareholders to reinvest dividends at "asset value" — without any commission charge. But an increasing number of load mutual funds charge "offering price" — asset value plus commission — on reinvestments. When that's the case, the broker who made the original sale gets a piece of the commission.

Also, mutual funds with 12b-1 plans and/or redemption fees send money along to brokers who have sold fund shares. That money comes out of the fund assets and

Mannequins come alive at Tri-City
From 1 to 3 p.m. on Saturday, Tri-City Plaza in Vernon will have live mannequins in many store windows displaying this Spring's amazing fashions, gifts and electronic equipment. Tri-City Plaza has employed professional models who are trained in the technique of mannequin modeling, also known as freeze modeling. They will be wearing the latest in women's, men's and children's apparel and shoes, as well as showing what's new in professional uniforms, jewelry, maternity wear, electronic equipment and gift ideas. In addition, celebrity models will be modeling for charity. They are Steven Marcham, mayor of Vernon; David Englebert, principal of Center Road School; Hollywood Joe Firmin, nighttime personality on WKSS radio; and state Senator Mark Herbat. Tri-City Plaza is located at Exit 64 off I-94, Vernon.

Finance ministers forward problems
WASHINGTON — Finance ministers of the world's major industrial powers are sidestepping stopgap solutions and forwarding a full agenda of trade and world debt problems to the heads-of-state summit in Venice. The 151-nation International Monetary Fund wraps up its spring meeting today without producing new initiatives in either area.

And a currency-stabilization accord, reached earlier in the week by officials of the seven major economic democracies — the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy — seemed to be doing little in halting the dollar's relentless slide.

In fact, it appeared to have the reverse effect, pushing the dollar down in exchange markets around the world Thursday. Traders said the dollar's weakness reflected disappointment that the industrial powers had not been more to prop up the dollar.

Wall Street executives indicted
NEW YORK — Three top Wall Street executives whose arrests in the insider-trading scandal last February shocked the financial community have been indicted on charges of conspiracy and securities fraud.

The four-count federal indictment Thursday named Robert M. Freeman, head of Goldman, Sachs & Co.'s risk arbitrage department; Richard B. Wigton, vice president at Kidder, Peabody & Co.; and Timothy L. Tabor, a former Kidder, Peabody arbitrator.

Tabor, 33, of Manhattan, was arrested Feb. 11; Freeman, 44, of Rye, and Wigton, 55, of Summit, N.J., were arrested the next day. All three have been free on bond.

The usual 30-day deadline for indicting a person accused of a federal crime was extended by a U.S. magistrate at the request of both the defense and prosecution, said Associate U.S. Attorney Benito Romano.

Such delays are provided for "complex and unusual cases," he said.

Dollar plunges in response to meeting

TOKYO (AP) — Officials said disappointment over this week's meeting of international monetary officials apparently sent the dollar plunging to a record low against the yen today despite heavy intervention by Japan's central bank.

The U.S. currency closed at 142.50 after slipping 2.90 yen on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market.

Officials of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy met Wednesday in Washington and concluded that current exchange rates were "broadly consistent with economic fundamentals."

However, Hajime Tamura, Japan's minister of international trade and industry, said he had "trouble understanding the outcome of the Washington meeting."

He was quoted as telling a Cabinet meeting that it failed to come up with any "concrete measures" to stop the dollar's decline.

Kyodo News Service quoted him as saying that small- and medium-sized Japanese companies "cannot get along with an exchange rate of 142 yen or 143 yen" to the dollar.

"I cannot say to Japanese Finance Minister Kijichi Miyazawa he did a good job" in the Washington meeting, he said.

Elshiro Saito, chairman of the Power Federation of Economic Organizations, said, "Considering that the dollar fell to the low 140s level immediately following the meeting, we cannot rule out the possibility of continued exchange rate instability."

The dollar, which closed at 145.40 yen Thursday, opened today at 143.75 yen and dropped almost throughout the day despite heavy market intervention by the Bank of Japan.

Traders estimated that the central bank purchased up to $1 billion in efforts to stem the dollar's decline, but the dollar kept falling. At one point it reached 142.30, its lowest level since modern exchange rates were set in the late 1940s.

The dollar's previous record low closing was 144.70 set on March 30. Spot volume today was $9.61 billion, up from $8.37 billion Thursday.

Hardest hit by the yen's 60 percent appreciation against the dollar since September 1985 has been Japan's export-oriented manufacturing industries.
