Embarrassing start

Jimmy Stewart says one of his earliest experiences before an audience also was one of the most embarrassing: he told his grade-school classmates he heard a song called "Columbia, The Gem of the Ocean."

"I've never lived it down," said the 78-year-old actor. The title of the patriotic ballad is "Columbia, The Gem of the Ocean."

Stewart said Thursday that as a boy he built a radio and that he and his friends were thrilled when they picked up a broadcast of President Warren G. Harding's inauguration in 1921.

"The next day in class I was asked to get up and tell what it was like to hear this. Now, I had never done this. ... I had not progressed anywhere as an actor," Stewart said.

"And I said I heard speeches and I heard a band and they played 'Columbia, The Gem of the Ocean,'" he said.

Hopping mad

A West German TV satire of Chancellor Helmut Kohl giving a speech flanked by huge chocolate Easter bunnies has his non-sensate conservative party hopping mad.

"This was an evil concoction of the 'Monitor' (TV program) management intended to make the chancellor look like a laughingstock," Karl Miltner, deputy chief of the Christian Democratic faction in Parliament, said in Frankfurt, West Germany.

The show ran a film Tuesday night of an old Kohl speech with huge chocolate bunnies superimposed around him. A voice-over by a noted cabaret performer simulated Kohl's delivery and made it seem as if he were giving an Easter address.

"The chancellor" said, among other things: "We have made further progress in the Easter bunny sector. We are confident about our Easter bunnies and the (national) ability to eat them up."

Gunter Strave, program director for the Cologne-based WDR, the affiliate of the state-funded ARD network that airs "Monitor," defended the parody Thursday, calling satire "a very important art form."

The 57-year-old Kohl is on vacation in Austria.

Residents appeal to the mayor

A group of Ralph Road residents are asking Mayor Barbara B. Weisberg and Zoning Commission Chairman Theodore Cummings for help in their fight against a proposed road in their neighborhood.

"We feel there's no reason to have the road," said Ed Felber of Ralph Road. "We feel it's going to increase traffic in our area."

The townspeople, who met at the home of Ralph Road resident Ruth LaPine Thursday night, are conducting a letter-writing campaign to town officials.

The group has also hired an attorney and may file legal action if the Planning and Zoning Commission approves the proposed street, known as City View Road. The commission could take action as early as Monday.

Mayor Weisberg said this morning that there's little she can do, other than to listen to residents' concerns.

"It's difficult for us to get involved as members of the Board of Directors because it (the street proposal) is a planning and zoning matter," she said. "I don't mind citizens calling me. But I would doubt I would appear before the commission."

The controversial road is part of a 25-lot, single-family housing subdivision being planned north of Ralph Road. The new street would connect Ralph Road with the proposed neighborhood.

During a public hearing on the application earlier this month, Ralph Road residents said they do not oppose the housing development but want the PZC to drop the street from the site plans.

The road was not included as part of the original subdivision proposal. But town planning officials required that the road be put in because, they said, it would help route traffic through the area.

Ed Connolly, in left photo, shows cow horns American Revolutionary War soldiers used to load guns with powder. He also shows off a pewter plate soldiers carried.

A Revolutionary War soldier comes to school

By John Mitchell Herald Reporter

The American Revolution was a confusing battle of hardship that pitted friends against one another, one of the war's soldiers said at Washington School Thursday.

Well, not really a rifleman from the original war. But as close as you can come in 1987.

Ed Connolly, an industrial arts teacher at Windsor High School and member of the Fourth Connecticut Regiment Continental Line, a group of six men who recreate the war at various battlefields across New England, spoke about the continental soldiers and civilian life during the 1770s to about 35 fifth-graders.

Along with his historical knowledge, Connolly brought a wooden box filled with clothing, weapons, and other memorabilia.

Teacher Jean Kellogg said history is more meaningful when students can see it up close. Books, she said, aren't enough. "They don't think about the people, the practical problems," she said.

Connolly described the problems of those who left the farm to go to war with the British. As he talked, Connolly slowly began to add accessories that made him look more like a Revolutionary War soldier.

These included a stiff leather neck band that soldiers were required to wear so they couldn't turn their heads from the battle in front of them. He also put on a fluffy white hunting shirt and a linen-lined wool coat fashioned with 42 pewter buttons.

"It's a heavy coat," he said, noting that it was worn in the summer and winter, and got dirty because soldiers didn't bathe often. "Think of what it would be like if I started to sweat in it," he said. By the students' reactions, the thoughts weren't pleasant.

Students asked about the rifles, muskets, tomahawks and pistols Connolly brought with him. A soldier could lug up to 45 pounds of material and equipment daily, he said.

Added to that weight, he said, was a sense that troops didn't know where they were going, and it often took months before battles began.

"You could shoot for a long period of time and no one would get hurt," Connolly said.

Connolly said those who stayed longest on the field ended up winning.

Soldiers, Connolly said, were more terrified of the 16-inch bayonets than the guns themselves. "That's why people left the field very quickly," he said, explaining that the British would scream before they charged with the "cold steel" held out in front of them.

Student Philip Downes said he was surprised by how long the guns were back then.

Nadette Ortiz said she "just liked to see what they were at the time."

For Connolly, the battles and the lore are a dream realized.

"This is just a romantic period for me," he said.

Directors get good news on insurance

By George Lovino Herald Reporter

Insurance costs for the town of Manchester are likely to be between $100,000 and $125,000 lower than originally estimated because premiums for private coverage have not increased as much as first thought, Finance Director Bruce Spinnell told members of the town Board of Directors Thursday.

In the proposed 1987-88 budget released last month by Town Manager Robert Weiss, it was expected that the town would have to pay $1,082,500 for policies that cover claims beyond what the town would pay. However, Spinnell said that the latest estimates now put the cost between $920,000 and $950,000.

He said that by the time a final quote is agreed to by July 1, the start of the fiscal year, that figure might be lower. The reason behind the decline is that premiums, which have been skyrocketing in recent years, have begun to level off.

Spinnell said he expects that more firms will be competing this year for certain policies, helping to push down premiums.

Despite the lower-than-expected increase, however, the additional private coverage will still cost more than the $858,835 expected to be spent this year.

Spinnell said that if premium costs are lower, then whatever is saved could be put into the town's self-insurance fund. That fund is used to pay liability claims below $500,000.

Because of the high cost of premiums, the proposed budget called for not increasing the fund from the $965,120 it is expected to be by June 30. The town has contributed less each year to the fund since it was started in 1982, while the amount it pays for premiums has soared.

Weiss explained, during a review session of the proposed budget held at Lincoln Center, that recent court decisions have set precedents for increasing a municipality's liability. Although Manchester has a good record in keeping down claims against it, insurance companies base their rates on the record of towns throughout the country.

That brought an angry comment from Director Peter DiRosa, who said the town should not be penalized because of what other towns do.

Director Geoffrey Naab, an attorney who specializes in insurance, said it is unlikely that the state Legislature will impose caps on the size of claims that can be filed against town. Spinnell said that about 20 other states do have such limits.

Assistant Town Manager Steven Werber said that since the town's self-insurance program was started, the amount spent by town employees on reviewing claims has increased. While he had no figures, he said this expense was "more than" covered by the savings closer involvement has produced.

He said the town has been able to close out some cases that were active for years.

In a related item, Weiss said that the town may have to pay a significant amount to resolve the cases of two police officers who are off active service because of heart attacks. Under the heart and hypertension program required by the state, the town expects to pay $56,812 in biweekly benefits if the cases are not resolved.

The cost of settling the cases would be higher, although Weiss said he did not know how much.

Panel takes up town's space crunch

A plan to install an elevator and expand the town clerk's office and the Municipal Building will be reviewed by a subcommittee of the town Board of Directors and may be put on the panel's May agenda, officials said Thursday.

Space and handicapped access problems have long been known in the Center Street building. He also said the expansion of the town clerk's office, along with other renovations, would cost about $380,000.

He said that these expenses could be covered from $248,000 received from the federal government for the building, he said. While no specific plan has been filed, an expansion of the building will be reviewed by a subcommittee of the town Board of Directors and may be put on the panel's May agenda, officials said Thursday.

Space and handicapped access problems have long been known in the Center Street building. He also said the expansion of the town clerk's office, along with other renovations, would cost about $380,000.

He said that these expenses could be covered from $248,000 received from the federal government for expenses incurred during Hurricane Gloria in September 1985. Increased land record activity at the town clerk's office is expected to bring in about $190,000 that could be used.

In addition, $252,000 could be taken from the state infrastructure grant money the town received to cover the remaining costs, he said.

Weiss said he will probably include the item on the directors' May agenda. However, Director Peter F. DiRosa, chairman of the real estate subcommittee, asked that his panel be allowed to first review the plan.

needed under a new town hall is going to be built — something that does not seem likely to happen. Most town offices are currently located in the Municipal Building and nearby Lincoln Center, both of which have space problems.

The U.S. Postal Service is considering moving from its main office across the street from Lincoln Center, and Weiss said that would make a good town office building. But he said that prospect is still several years away, and would only help relieve the crowding at Lincoln Center.

Inspector steps down

By Brent Layton
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Inspector General Henri F. Erkelens says his resignation means legislators won't be able to use criticism of him as an excuse when they vote on a bill to dismantle his fledgling watchdog agency.

Legislative leaders voted along party lines Thursday to accept Erkelens' resignation, effective Sept. 1, 1987 — a little over a year after he was hired as the state's first inspector general.

"I think by accepting my resignation, it removes any question of personality," Erkelens said. "When the legislature does vote, it can vote now purely on the issue of an independent oversight agency that's there to help the powers and provide redress for those in the system that are abused."

... can't be criticized

Erkelens, 53, offered to resign earlier this month in hopes of heading off efforts within the General Assembly to dismantle the office.

D-East Hartford, said the effective date of the bill should coincide with Erkelens' departure. The Sept. 1 date was set to give him time to complete investigations now underway.

The six top Democratic and Republican leaders from both chambers, who compose the personnel subcommittee of the Joint Committee on Legislative Management, voted 6-5 to accept the resignation. No other legislative action is needed.

Larson, D-East Hartford, said the effective date of the bill should coincide with Erkelens' departure. The Sept. 1 date was set to give him time to complete investigations now underway.

The six top Democratic and Republican leaders from both chambers, who compose the personnel subcommittee of the Joint Committee on Legislative Management, voted 6-5 to accept the resignation. No other legislative action is needed.

Erkelens said he received a complaint soon after taking office that state inspectors were inspecting a food processing plant in New Haven allegedly owned by an organized-crime family.

Erkelens said he was considering including money for guns, wiretapping devices and remote-control car starters in his budget request for next year.

Arrests net 27 pounds of marijuana

STAMFORD — Three people were arrested and police seized about three pounds of cocaine and 27 pounds of marijuana Thursday in arrests at the Stamford Transportation Center and a private home, authorities said.

More than $5,000 in cash, several guns, gambling records, illegal fireworks and a 1983 Corvair were also seized, Stamford Sgt. Charles Walkey said.

Richard Terico, 24, and his sister, Debra Terico, 25, both of Stamford, were arrested at their home, where most of the cocaine and marijuana was found, and Jack Obadiah, 33, of New York, was arrested at the transportation center with about 10 pounds of marijuana, Walkey said.

All three defendants were being held on bond pending appearances in Superior Court on April 27, Walkey said.

House rejects GOP meal-tax plan

HARTFORD — The Democratic-controlled state House of Representatives on Thursday rejected a Republican proposal that would have exempted meals costing up to $3 from the state sales tax.

Currently, meals under $2 are exempt.

The House voted 47-38 to defeat the GOP proposal, which was an amendment to a bill exempting from the sales tax non-alcoholic beverages that are part of a meal costing less than $2. The bill itself was approved 102-37.

The House also rejected a Republican proposal that would have exempted the state's largest tax book from the sales tax. The exemption would have cost the state $1.5 million a year in lost sales tax revenues, sponsors estimated.

House approves finance-charge cap

HARTFORD — The state House of Representatives on Thursday unanimously approved a bill keeping retail credit finance charges at 15 percent a year.

The House rejected an amendment lowering the maximum interest rates Connecticut banks could charge on credit cards to 13 percent. The maximum rate now is 15 percent.

Originally, the bill would have allowed retailers to charge up to 17 percent if their credit plans did not include annual membership fees.

But an amendment proposed by Rep. Patricia A. Dillon, D-New Haven, capping the retail rate at 15 percent was adopted.

Another successful Dillon amendment caps finance charges for credit-card cash advances at 15 percent.

The bill also requires retailers to disclose information about their credit and interest terms on application forms and written solicitations mailed to Connecticut consumers.

The House rejected an amendment that would have barred late charges on top of annual finance charges.

Pullitzer plays had Yale roots

NEW HAVEN — The managing director of the Yale Repertory Theater says he's "very proud" that the winner and one of two runners-up for the 1987 Pulitzer Prize for drama premiered on the regional stage.

"Obviously, we're very proud," Benjamin Mordecai, the theater's managing director, said Thursday.

"(Artistic Director) Lloyd Richards believes that the work of the Yale Repertory Theater starts with the playwright. He has 30 years actively developing playwrights for the American theater. I'm thrilled that what he's done is getting this kind of recognition."

Winning the 1987 drama prize was "Fences," by August Wilson, which premiered in New Haven in 1985. Lee Blessing's "A Walk In The Woods," about nuclear disarmament, finished its premier run at Yale last month.

"I just have always admired August for his integrity and his conviction about what he has been writing," Mordecai said Thursday in a telephone interview from New York.

Parents of spina bifida child sue

NEW HAVEN — The parents of a child afflicted with spina bifida are suing their obstetricians, claiming the condition should have been diagnosed before the child's birth two years ago.

Steven and Rochelle Berman of Milford filed suit against Milford OB-GYN Associates in Superior Court on Wednesday. The suit alleged that the doctors failed to perform a test which would have warned them that their son, Eric, had spina bifida, a congenital birth defect.

The Bermans are suing for damages of more than $100,000.

"The test would have made the parents aware of the need to make special preparations for the birth of an affected child, or (for) terminating the pregnancy, which is the choice the plaintiffs would have made," the suit said.

Cocaine bust one of city's largest

HARTFORD — Police seized cocaine worth almost $500,000 and arrested two men in the city's largest drug bust in more than two years.

Police said Thursday they found 24 pounds of cocaine and bundles of small bills totaling about $38,000 in a raid on an unoccupied apartment in the Bellevue Square housing project.

"This is sure to have a temporary impact on the street sales of narcotics in this city," said Lt. Brian Kelley, head of the vice and narcotics unit. "This was the biggest seizure in a long time."

Anti-apartheid group upset at Carbide

By Linda Stowell
The Associated Press

DANBURY — Union Carbide Corp.'s plan to use dividends from its South African operations to aid black education and health care in a minority ruled country doesn't satisfy anti-apartheid groups.

The plan, which would use those dividends to finance education, legal aid and social justice for blacks, was announced Thursday by Chairman Robert D. Kennedy.

The decision to use the dividends to fund talks with black leaders in the United States and South Africa, Richard Knight, a spokesman for the American Committee on Africa. "At a time when there's a state of emergency (in South Africa), finding money for education is far from sufficient to deal with the issue of apartheid. We feel companies should end all business ties in South Africa."

Responsibility in New York. "The real issue is to call for them to disengage from that white supremacist country."

Smith's group is a coalition of 230 Roman Catholic orders and dioceses and 17 Protestant denominations with investments of $15 billion in various pension funds.

Smith said that Union Carbide is "making a gesture here, but will still face considerable pressure because of its South African connection ... They're not off the hot seat yet."

"I think it's a cop-out," said Richard Knight, a spokesman for the American Committee on Africa. "At a time when there's a state of emergency (in South Africa), finding money for education is far from sufficient to deal with the issue of apartheid. We feel companies should end all business ties in South Africa."

Anti-apartheid activists called it a cosmetic solution, perhaps aimed at staving off calls for a pullout of South Africa at Carbide's annual meeting next week.

Union Carbide said it hopes to receive about $1.3 million in dividends this year from its interest in South Africa. The company holds 30 percent of the 100 percent owned Van Swid Afrika, which produces graphite electrodes.

The real issue with Union Carbide is not the philanthropic efforts they are contributing," said Timothy Smith, executive director of the Interfaith Center For Corporate claimed that Union Carbide's announcement was timed purposely to come out a week before the company's annual meeting, when a large group of shareholders are expected to ask the company to pull out of South Africa.

"This could be coincidental, or it could be designed to stave off criticism and possibly water down any support for our resolution," said Marvin Naylor, a spokesman for the New York Controller's Office, which is the trustee for the New York State Common Retirement Fund.

Naylor said the New York State Common Retirement Fund is a major Union Carbide shareholder. He said earlier this year the group mobilized the largest shareholder resolution program ever undertaken by an institutional investor. That program asks 121 American companies to pull out of South Africa unless the process to dismantle apartheid has started by next month.

Ronald S. Wishart, a vice president of public affairs at Union Carbide in Danbury, said the company does have a resolution to divert before it, but said the announcement was not timed to mollify criticism.

"That (resolution) certainly helped to bring into focus what we're to do," Wishart said. "The easy answer is to divest. It's not

New drug policy draws Teamsters' ire

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The International Brotherhood of Teamsters is challenging the legality of Sikorsky Aircraft's week-old drug and alcohol testing policy.

Teamsters Local 119, headed by James Castrol, are slated to appear in federal court in New Haven Monday in an effort to suspend the Sikorsky-based company from implementing a testing policy the union calls "harsh."

The union filed papers for a temporary restraining order on Wednesday.

Under the Sikorsky policy, a supervisor who believes any employees are under the influence of drugs or alcohol may require a medical test to determine if they are unfit to perform the job.

The policy requires new employees and those coming back from a layoff to take a drug test.

In his complaint, Cheverie asked the court to block the company from using the new policy on its 8,000 union employees until the local can pursue the issue through binding arbitration.

The new policy went into effect this past Monday, according to Sikorsky spokesman James Bowman. He said prospective employees have been effectively barred from the company since the policy was reached for comment Thursday.

"I can remember the first boy I had," said Agnes, who has been in the program for five years. "He cried on my shoulder. Boy, that was tough. Some of them are like babes lost in the jungle."

However, some of the inmates are streetwise and their experiences come as a shock to the three women.

One young man was sure his adopted grandmother would have nothing to do with him when he learned the nature of his crime.

Grannies' prison cakes come without hacksaws

MONTVILLE (AP) — They may not come bearing cakes stuffed with hacksaw blades, but three grandmothers who visit the Montville Correctional Center offer an escape of sorts for the prisoners they call their "boys."

One of the grandmothers said that "it felt a little funny when the gate shut" the first time she came to chat with inmates who have no one else to visit them.

"But we know the boys wouldn't let anyone harm us," said the woman, Rosalie, 68.

She and her partners, Agnes, 67, and Marie, 66, allow only their first names to be used in connection with the volunteer foster grandparent plan sponsored by the Therman Valley Council for Community Action.

"It's for their safety," said Lee Baker, a program supervisor who set up the jail visitations. "After all, these men are convicts."

Twice a week, Agnes, Rosalie and Marie, all of Norwich, spend two hours with inmates. Conversations range from sports and television to the reasons the men are behind bars.

Sometimes, the grandmothers offer advice, but they always listen and they develop close relationships with their young charges.

Cancer Institute defends statistics

WASHINGTON — The National Cancer Institute, reacting to criticism that it has overstated advances against the disease, says a number of trends indicate there has been real progress in the war on cancer.

Increasing survival rates, a decreasing percentage of smokers and declining death rates for a number of cancers are some of the hopeful indicators, the institute said Thursday in response to a General Accounting Office report.

GAO, the non-partisan investigative arm of Congress, said institute survival rate statistics had given a misleading impression of progress in the treatment and prevention of cancer.

"For the majority of cancers we examined, the actual improvements have been small or have been overestimated by the published rates," GAO said.

Soviet Union conducts nuclear test

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union said it conducted an underground nuclear explosion today at its test range in Soviet Central Asia — the fourth since the Soviets ended their 18-month unilateral test ban Feb. 24.

The official Tass news agency said the 20- to 150-kiloton nuclear device exploded at 4:55 a.m. Moscow time, or 9:05 p.m. EDT Thursday.

Twenty kilotons was the yield of the atomic bomb the United States dropped on Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945. One kiloton is the explosive force of 1,000 tons of TNT.

Tass said the test was designed to perfect military technology, but it provided no other information.

Tamil militants attack buses, kill 107

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Tamil militants attacked three buses and two trucks with machine guns and grenades today, dragging out passengers and killing 107 people, the government announced.

Thiru Ratanakara, chairman of the government Media Center, said it was believed most of the victims were Sinhalese.

Other officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Sinhalese were segregated from the Tamils and Moslems and shot.

Ratanakara said many Tamil guerrillas stopped the three buses and two trucks on a jungle road near Aluth-Oya Village, 115 miles northeast of Colombo, the capital. Women and children were among the dead, he said.

The army was called out to protect villagers and retrieve bodies in the area, Ratanakara said.

Europe's tallest volcano erupts

CATANIA, Sicily — Gas and rocks spewed today from Mount Etna, Europe's tallest and most active volcano, killing 3 10-year-old Italian boy when it showered a group of Italian and French tourists, officials reported.

A police official in Catania, who declined to give his name, said the boy was killed by falling rocks and his mother also may have been killed. The official said three other people were injured.

The Civil Defense Ministry in Rome said two people were believed killed.

The explosion occurred 9,000 feet above the ground — nearly at the summit of Mount Etna, the officials said.

In recent weeks, experts have noted an increase in volcanic activity on the southeastern slope of the volcano, where the explosion occurred.

Hearings for Marine guards delayed

WASHINGTON — Separate hearings to determine whether two U.S. Marine guards will be court-martialed on espionage charges are being delayed for several weeks.

Attorneys for Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree requested and received a 3½-week delay in pre-trial hearings Thursday in order to review more prosecution evidence that he let Soviet agents into the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

William M. Kunatler, an attorney for Lonetree, criticized the military Thursday for imposing a "gag rule" on him that prevents him from discussing the nature of the evidence or what transpired in a closed hearing room during the day.

AIDS hits black, Hispanic women

CHICAGO — Seventy percent of women with AIDS in the United States are black or Hispanic, a fact that may have been obscured by efforts to avoid stigmatizing minorities, said an editorial today in a leading medical journal.

"These women, and women in general, should be targets of educational campaigns about the deadly viral disease," said the commentary in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Twenty-six percent of the women who got AIDS last year got it from male sexual partners, compared to 12 percent in 1982, said a study accompanied by the editorial.

Computer from doomed rocket found

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The flight computer of a doomed satellite rocket has been recovered intact and its memory could disclose whether lightning destroyed the booster, as investigators suspect.

The 60-pound metal box containing the computer was pulled from the Atlantic Ocean just offshore Thursday by a fishing vessel. Shortly before the recovery, NASA reported the unmanned Atlas-Centaur rocket may have been hit by as many as nine lightning bolts as it lifted off in a heavy rainstorm on March 24.

N.Y. garbage turned away

VENICE, La. (AP) — State officials intercepted and turning away 3,000 tons of garbage from New York's Long Island at the mouth of the Mississippi River on Thursday and refused to allow its load to be dumped in the state.

Gov. Edwin Edwards said he and Department of Environmental Quality Secretary Martha Madden would take every legal avenue to keep the garbage from being put ashore in the state.

"We certainly have notified the company we do not feel it is the proper use of our facilities, and we suggest it go back from whence they came."

The garbage came from Ielp, N.Y., where it was turned over to a private disposal contractor. It was put aboard a barge owned by Lowell Harvelson, who tried to dispose of it in North Carolina but was denied permission by state authorities there.

Charles Weider, chief engineer of Ielp Resource Recovery Agency, said he was certain that the load was commercial solid waste.

Official may get immunity

By Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House and Senate committees investigating the Iran-contra affair are expected to vote next week to grant limited immunity to former National Security Advisor John M. Poindexter, committee sources say.

Immunity from prosecution, expected Wednesday, would be granted under an agreement with special prosecutor Lawrence E. Walsh that would keep Poindexter's congressional testimony secret until June 15.

Poindexter, a Navy rear admiral who resigned his White House post Nov. 25 after Attorney General Edwin Meese III said profits from secret arms sales to Iran had been diverted clandestinely to aid Nicaragua's contra rebels, is regarded as the key witness on the question of President Reagan's role in the funds diversion.

Wall Street workers are led away in chains after being arrested Thursday in New York. They were just a few of 19 people charged with using cocaine "as a regular method of exchange" in business.

Cocaine used for stock tips

NEW YORK (AP) — Some Wall Street brokers arrested in an undercover investigation used cocaine "as a regular method of exchange," dispensing it to employees and customers and trading it for stock tips, authorities said.

"Cocaine became an integral part of the personal and professional lives of these people," Robert Stutman, special agent in charge of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in New York City, said after the arrests Thursday of 19 people, including at least 18 financial workers and two alleged drug suppliers.

"We don't believe this case is an aberration," he said.

Federal authorities described a cocaine subculture in which the drug was snorted in bathrooms, stairways and boardrooms on Wall Street and purchases were made in neighborhood bars.

Those arrested included Wayne D. Robbins, a senior partner in the firm of Brooks, Weinger, Robbins & Leeds Inc.

Authorities also filed suit to seize assets of the firm, which has offices in nine cities. U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani told a news conference he believed it was the first time the government tried to seize part of a brokerage's assets because of a narcotics violation.

Some bids can be used against you
 By James Jacoby

The theory of bridge bidding has developed greatly in the last 30 years. That may be a boring subject to our readers who play socially, many of whom may never have taken part in an organized tournament. I hope today's deal will amuse you, because it shows how a fancy bidding gadget can work against the player using it. The two-spade cue-bid by West was specialized, showing a weak hand with five or more hearts and five or more of either minor. Does that give you a headache?

After North had doubled and then raised to four clubs, South relied on him to have a good hand. Since South did not have a hand that lent itself to scientific treatment, he simply bid a small slam. Now I can't say how any of us would get to play six clubs in the absence of bidding by West. For all I know, we might have stumbled into playing six hearts. But the actual South was well equipped to play the club slam, armed with the knowledge that West surely held five cards in the heart suit. When he started clubs at trick two, he therefore led low to dummy. East won the king and played a diamond. Declarer ruffed low in dummy, trumped a low heart with his club ace and played a second club to dummy. He trumped another low heart with his club jack and was now able to get back to dummy with a club, drawing the last trump from East. All dummy's hearts were good and South had made his slam.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY - I found a great, inexpensive African violet food. My son stuck a dried bean in the pot with my violet and as the bean grows, the violet has been blooming almost non-stop. Now I have an attractive vine and a beautiful violet as well. - MAY

DEAR MAY - This is a really clever idea, so long as your pot is large enough to support both plants adequately. The bean plant contributes a source of nitrogen to the soil. However, for good blooms, the other major nutrients, phosphorus and potassium, are also essential, so some folks may wish to also use a balanced plant food occasionally for optimum results. Thanks for your contribution. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - When making gathering on dresses, using a wide zig-zag stitch instead of two rows of straight stitching works well. - STEPHANIE

DEAR STEPHANIE - I tried using a single line of wide zigzag stitching for gathering and found it did a very good job. This saves time and effort required in running two rows of straight stitching, as is usually done. Your helpful Pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book "Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book may order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, P.O. Box 9383, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - Afraid of losing stitches when you are interrupted while crocheting? Just replace your thread with a rubber band, pulling the thread tight around it. Your work will be intact when you return to your crocheting! - RUTH

DEAR POLLY - When baking a cake that calls for room temperature eggs, I get the eggs out of the refrigerator and place them in a bowl of warm water for a few minutes. Works great. - E.S.

Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Piece or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Davy Crockett

According to The World Almanac of the American West, Davy Crockett, after becoming famous as a frontiersman, acted on a joking suggestion that he run for Congress. In 1827, he was elected to the first of his three terms. Although practically illiterate and with scant understanding of government, he enlivened the Washington scene with his homespun "bar hunting" style.

You do have rights if you have a lousy credit report

What if you are turned down for a loan based on a negative credit report about you? You have specific rights under the law (the Fair Credit Reporting Act, FCRA, effective back in 1971). Use them. Take action if you think a lender has turned down your application for a loan or charge account on any other type of credit, based on your credit history.

Sylvia Porter

Credit bureaus, also known as reporting agencies, do not actually "rate" how good or bad a credit risk you are. Instead, merchants, banks, finance companies and other creditors send credit bureaus reports containing specific information about your credit accounts and your bill-paying habits.

Creditors, in turn, evaluate whether or not you are a credit risk based on the information provided by credit bureaus.

If your credit application is rejected because of a bureau's report:

The creditor must provide you with the name and address of that reporting agency so that you know which bureau to contact.

The credit bureau must disclose the contents of credit files to you free of charge if you request it.

When you receive a credit report, you have 30 days to dispute it. In writing within 30 days of being denied. In addition to your credit history, your credit bureau file contains your name, address and Social Security number. Also included may be your occupation, your employer, salary and marital status.

Once you do complain, the reporting agency is required to investigate your grievance. If incorrect information cannot be checked, the credit bureau must remove it from your file.

If you do not agree with the outcome of the inquiry, you should include your side of the story in your file for future lenders to evaluate.

But if the negative information is accurate, there's not much you can do but wait in general. If you fail to pay a bill, it will remain on your credit report for seven years. Bankruptcies can be reported for 10 years.

By discovering what information is included in your credit file, you will get a clearer picture of

Peter Gott, M.D.

Diabetes has several different forms

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was told I have a Type II diabetic, but I don't know what that means. Can you?

DEAR READER: Diabetes is now classified as either type I (insulin-dependent) or type II (non-insulin-dependent). In the first type, diabetes develops relatively early in life, complications (such as acidoses, eye problems and arteriosclerosis) are more common and patients require insulin injections to control blood sugar.

In type II, the pancreas (which produces the body's own insulin) seems to wear out. Patients with this form of diabetes are older, have fewer complications and can be treated with diet alone or with anti-diabetic pills. Insulin injections are not needed. Many people, as they age, tend to exhibit high blood sugars that result from being overweight or eating too many sweets. If they restrict their sugar intake (and lose weight), these people usually will not require medicine.

The glycosylated hemoglobin test measures the specific fraction of glucose that is attached to hemoglobin, the blood cells' red pigment. It gives a general indication of an average blood-glucose level for the preceding several weeks. This is unlike the traditional blood-sugar determination, which indicates the specific glucose value at a given moment.

Evidently, your type II diabetes is under satisfactory control; your glyco-hemoglobin is normal, your afternoon blood glucose is normal and your fasting sugar is only minimally elevated. Continue your present program and check with your doctor periodically.

For the sake of completeness, I should add that there are two other forms of diabetes, types III and IV. Type III occurs in some women during pregnancy. Type IV refers to more unusual diabetes that is linked to pancreatic disease, hormonal changes or the side effects of drugs.

I'm surprised that your physician "can't explain" your diabetes to you. He or she should be able to describe what is going on and answer your questions in understandable terms. Perhaps you should change to a doctor who is more in tune with your needs.

I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report, "Choosing a Physician: Make a Decision For Good Health," which will help you decide to change doctors. Others who would like a copy should send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

What, another ticket?

basketball game is sponsored by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches. Tickets are $1.50 for adults and $1 for senior citizens and children under 12. Tickets may be purchased at the door, the Manchester Police Department, MACC office or Center Congregational Church.

Advice

Neighbors bring office home to a cop

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him Denny) is a police officer, and our neighbors know it. Last week a neighbor called Denny while he was home — off duty — and asked him to meet him about a mile from our house. We thought this neighbor was having car trouble. When Denny got there, he found some guy holding a woman hostage with a gun! Not only was valuable time lost until the police arrived, but Denny was totally unprepared for the situation and could have been killed. Another time, a neighbor lady called Denny and asked him to come over and arrest some guy because he had cashed her paycheck without her permission!

DEAR ABBY: I identified with that long-suffering woman who stayed married to a physically filthy man for 47 years. I was married for 16 years to a man who never showered. He wore his underwear for 24 hours a day for over a month at a time. I finally left him when I had to put a tissue over my nose when we made love. (Yes, he expected lovemaking regularly!)

DEAR ABBY: I think 10 years with an abusive reason, and his family still thinks I'm crazy for giving up this prize. What do you think?

DEAR HAD: I think 10 years with such a man is about 9 years, 11 months and 3 weeks too long.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a gorgeous beard that neither one of us wants him to shave, but it's so stiff it irritates my face, which becomes raw and abraded from the roughness. We've tried hair conditioners, but they don't help.

Can you give us any advice on how to save our love life — short of shaving his beard?

DEAR ABBY: Can you fashion some kind of protective covering on the order of a ski mask? Or perhaps a "snood" to cover the beard? (You may break up laughing in the middle of a love scene, so keep your eyes closed.)

This is no gag, it's a readers problem, so if any of my readers has a solution, I'm open for suggestions. With moustaches and beards in vogue again, how do other lovebirds manage?

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (30 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, c/o The Hearst Corp., P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.
