WHITE PLOT FOILED

Supremacists face charges

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Fifteen white supremacists were indicted in Arkansas and Colorado for murder of a radio talk show host, sedition, attempted murder and other crimes, the Justice Department said Friday.

A federal grand jury in Fort Smith, Ark., accused 10 men of seditious conspiracy, or trying to topple the federal government, over a 21-month period beginning in July 1983.

Four other men were indicted on other charges by that grand jury, while three of the 14 men indicted in Arkansas plus a woman now imprisoned in California were accused of the murder of Denver talk show host Alan Berg. He was slain in a submarine gun attack outside his home June 18, 1984.

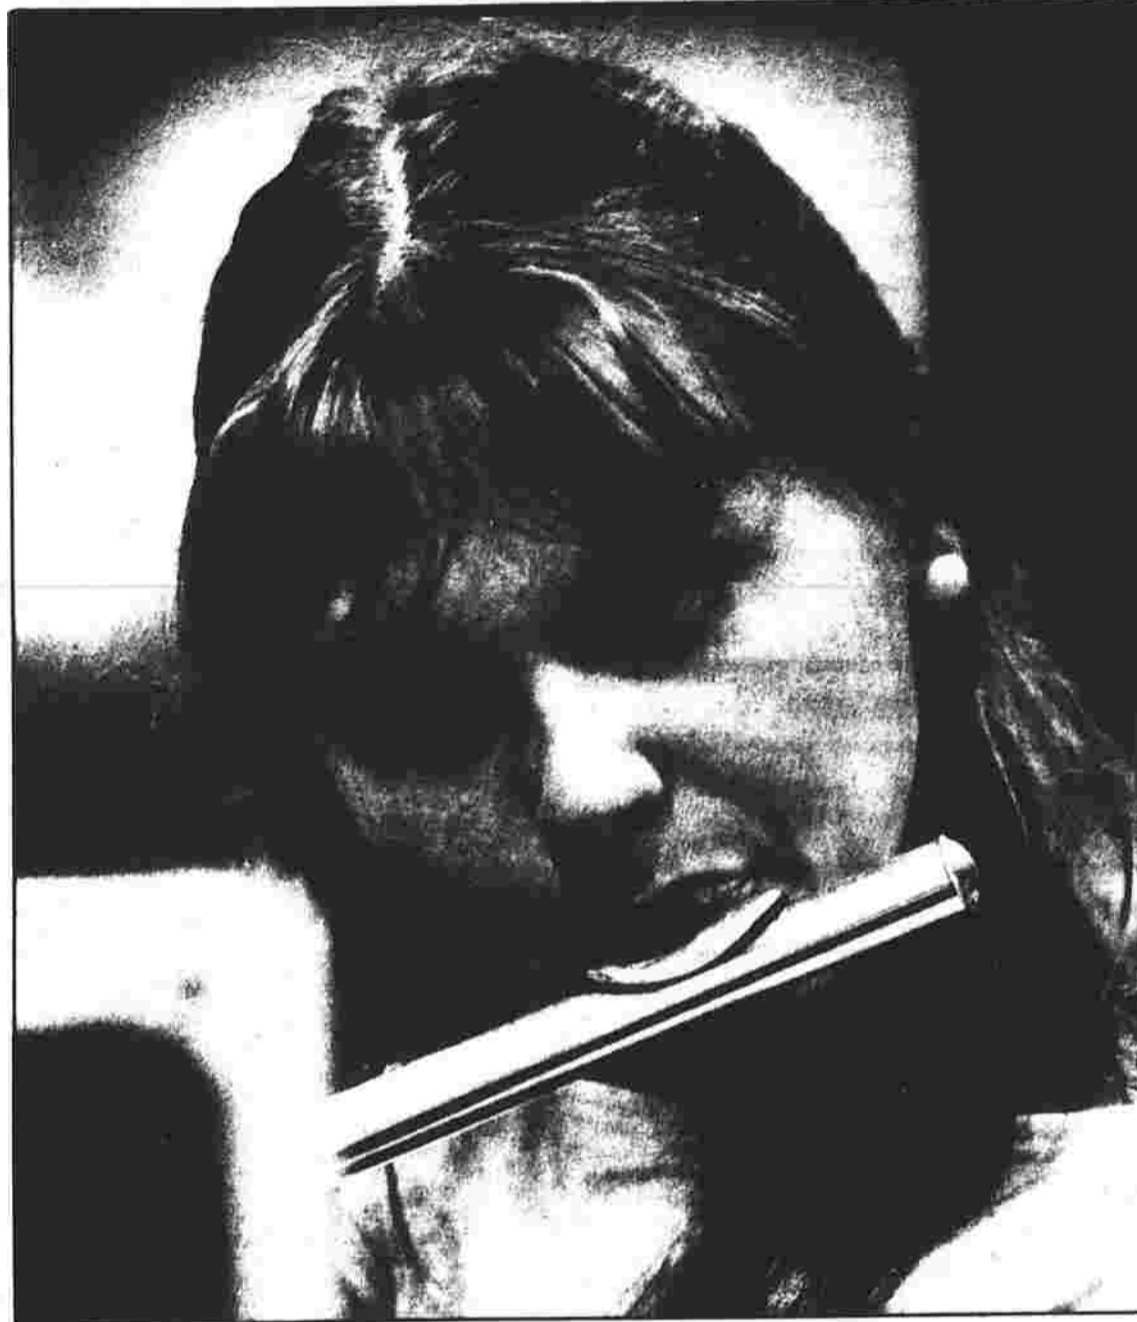

Those named in the indictments had affiliations with such supremacist groups as the Ku Klux Klan; Aryan Nations; and the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord, authorities said.

"Basically, they are anti-Semitic, anti-black," said Don Pettus, special agent in charge of the FBI in Arkansas. He said that he considered the supremacists dangerous and that authorities were on alert for the possibility of retaliatory violence this weekend.

If the 15 are convicted, it would have "a significant impact" on the supremacist movement, Pettus said.

Three of the 15 people were still at large late Friday afternoon, authorities said. Seven were already in prison before the indictments were announced, while five others were arrested or surrendered.

Searchers in Bridgeport find more bodies at collapse site

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Rescuers slowly cut through a 60-foot tangle of shattered concrete and bent steel Friday, searching for spaces that might hold missing survivors but finding only the bodies of the dead.

At least 12 workers were killed and 16 were missing when a downtown high-rise apartment building under construction collapsed Thursday. Forty-one workers were alive and accounted for, including six who remained hospitalized Friday, authorities said.

"We plan to pull out three more dead bodies tonight who are not part of the original nine," Lenny Grimaldi, spokesman for Mayor Thomas Bucci, said Friday night. Earlier, Bucci had said the search was continuing. "We've told families that the chances that their loved ones are alive are slim," Bucci said.

Hope fluctuated throughout the day, with rescue workers thinking they heard moaning and a member of a dog unit saying there were indications of survivors at another location. But as the search dragged on through the raw Friday evening, nothing was found.

Radio stations broadcast a plea for rain slickers for workers at the site, where a cold, windy rain was falling and a fog was creeping in.

At a news conference Friday evening, Bucci discounted reports that tapping had been heard, saying the sounds could have been caused by shifting rubble.

But Caroline Hebart, a member of the U.S. Disaster Team, a dog unit that has been used at earthquake sites, noted that survivors were found for 10 days after the Mexico City earthquake of 1985.

"You wouldn't stay doing this type of work if you didn't have hope," she said.

Officials wielding sensitive listening devices called for quiet and closed Interstate 95 exits in Bridgeport for a time to prevent rush-hour traffic from entering the area.

Builders and government agencies all were investigating while rescue efforts dominated the scene Friday afternoon, with six cranes picking off chunks of broken concrete up to 10 feet long or lowering men in cages who removed smaller pieces of rubble by hand.

Firefighters prepare to use an electronic device to look for survivors in the rubble of the apartment building under construction in Bridgeport that collapsed Thursday. Another story and picture on page 7.

were cutting steel reinforcing bar to release cement blocks and felling bent girders that towered 30 feet over the site of the L'Ambiance Plaza project.

"Right now, we're in a situation where we're trying to get as much concrete off the top and iron from over our heads so it doesn't come down on top of us," said Joe Egan, business agent for the ironworkers local.

Hundreds of workers had volunteered to search the rubble, but Friday morning organizers said all but 30 would be pulled off the site so the work could be more organized.

Grimaldi said there is a waiting list of volunteers to work at the site.

William Lowe, a spokesman for the project developer, Delwood International, said at a news conference, "We've got about 15 theories before us" about what might have caused the tragedy, based on rescue workers' comments.

They include "implosion," a "domino effect" and swaying, "but obviously, at this point, there's a lot of conjecture. It's going to depend on the experts."

Workers didn't fear for safety

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Safety of the structure they were erecting was never a topic of discussion among the workers at the L'Ambiance Plaza apartment, a survivor of the building's collapse said Friday.

"I didn't really think it was really dangerous," said Terrance Williams, a 34-year-old native of Jamaica who now lives in Bridgeport. He had been on the job four days when the accident occurred.

"From my own little experience in building construction, I figured it was safe because you got managers and engineers responsible for that part of it," Williams, a plumber, said during a news conference at Bridgeport Hospital where he's been admitted with cuts and injuries to his legs, hip and right arm.

Williams, sitting in a wheelchair, his right arm in a sling, said he was on the first floor installing support pipes when the building let go.

"I was about to go up on a ladder, when I heard a loud explosion and the building started to shake," he said. "I made an attempt to run and I couldn't. I lost my footing. The floor I was standing on gave way and I went two floors down into the basement. I didn't know what to think. I didn't know what happened."

Williams said the episode last no more than two minutes.

"I fell about 25 feet on my bottom and I was totally in shock. There was a lot of debris around me, but none on me. I was down there for about nine seconds. There was a lot of dust. When I could see, I crawled under some debris and came out of the side of the building."

Williams said there was only one other co-worker with him. He said he didn't see any other workers getting trapped in the falling debris, but predicted the chances of missing workers surviving is slim.

Supremacists planned overthrow, feds claim

The four people indicted in Denver were charged with violating civil rights laws by interfering with Berg's right to work because of his religion, race or national origin. Berg, who was Jewish, frequently used his show to attack and embarrass white supremacists.

According to the 25-page indictment in Arkansas, the accused seditious conspirators "agreed that their various organizations should unite in an effort to overthrow and put down the government of the United States ... armed revolution."

The federal indictment also alleged that five of the 14 men conspired to murder U.S. District Court Judge H. Franklin Waters of Fort Smith and FBI agent Jack D. Knox of Fayetteville, Ark., and that three of the five actually made a murder attempt in December 1983. Waters presided over a trial of members of the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord in 1985.

One of the five, Richard Wayne Snell, is in prison under death sentence for the 1983 murder of a Texarkana, Ark., pawn shop operator and life in prison without parole for the 1984 murder of an Arkansas state police trooper.

The 10 defendants charged with sedition in the Fort Smith indictment include Richard Girnt Butler, 69, leader of the Aryan Nations Church of Jesus Christ Christian, Hayden Lake, Idaho; Robert Edward Miles, 52, leader of the Mountain Church of Jesus Christ the Savior, Cohoctah, Michigan, who has been affiliated with the Ku Klux Klan; Louis Ray Beam Jr., 40, Dallas, affiliated with the Ku Klux Klan and with the Aryan Nations Church of Jesus Christ Christian; and Robert Neil Smalley, 31, Fort Smith, Ark.

Others among the 10 are David Eden Lane, 48, imprisoned in Marion, Ill., affiliated with the Aryan Nations Church of Jesus Christ Christian and The Order; Ardie McBrearty, 59, imprisoned at El Reno, Okla., affiliated with The Order; Bruce Carroll Pierce, 32, incarcerated at Leavenworth, Kan., affiliated with The Order and the Aryan Nations Church of Jesus Christ Christian; Richard Joseph Scutari, 39, imprisoned at Leavenworth, Kan., affiliated with The Order; Andrew Virgil Barnhill, 30, imprisoned at Lewisburg, Pa., affiliated with The Order; and Richard Wayne Snell, 55, imprisoned at Texarkana, Texas.

Snell and four others were also charged in Fort Smith with conspiring to murder the federal judge and the FBI agent. Charged with Snell were William H. Wade, 68, and Ivan Ray Wade, 34, both of Smithville, Ark.; and Lambert Miller, 36, Springfield, Mo.; and David Michael McGuire, 24, St. Louis.

Snell, McGuire and Miller were also charged with willfully attempting to murder the judge and the FBI agent.

The Fort Smith indictment also alleged that Scutari and Barnhill transported more than $5,000 in stolen money from Idaho to Arkansas and that Smalley received more than $5,000 in stolen money.

The Denver indictment charged Lane, Pierce, Scutari and Jess Margaret Craig in Berg's murder with interfering with a federally protected right, resulting in death. Craig is imprisoned in Pleasanton, Calif.

The four indicted in Denver are members of The Order, according to the Justice Department.

Seditious conspiracy carries a maximum penalty on conviction of 20 years in prison and a $20,000 fine.

Police escort a suspect identified as William Cruse around the scene of a shooting spree in Palm Bay, Fla., that left at least six people dead.

Fla. gunman loved guns, not kids, neighbors say

PALM BAY, Fla. (AP) — A rambling, incoherent man who neighbors said loved guns and hated children was charged with six counts of murder Friday after a shooting barrage at two neighborhood shopping centers.

William Bryan Cruse, 60, who was overpowered by police Friday morning after he broke off negotiations, apparently began his shooting spree after two children raced across his lawn, neighbors said.

In addition to those killed, 14 people were injured and several were held hostage in a wild night which eventually involved 200 police officers from Palm Bay and surrounding communities. Police said the suspect fired about 150 rounds.

Cruse was charged Friday with six counts of first-degree murder, 10 of attempted first-degree murder and multiple other counts, including kidnapping, said Palm Bay Police Chief Charles Simmons.

"We're trying to find out what brought it about," said Simmons. "At this time we don't know."

Two civilians were detained during the evening. One who exchanged gunfire with the suspect was released, police said, and the other, who was wearing a badge, police hat and a revolver in a shoulder holster, was sent to a mental facility. Neither man was identified.

Cruse, who had no criminal record in Florida, appeared Friday before Brevard County Judge Harry Stein for a brief hearing.

Thin, ashen-faced and wearing a brown prison uniform, Cruse briefly answered questions about his finances.

"I had a car," Cruse said. "I don't know what happened to it."

Stein found him indigent and appointed a public defender, Valerie Brown, to represent him. She then objected to a statement signed by Cruse which allowed him to be interrogated without counsel present.

Stein did not rule on the objection, and set Cruse's next appearance for May 15 in Titusville, the county seat.

Neighbors Eucal Grant, 68, and Derrick Suarez, 14, said Cruse came out of his house Thursday yelling and firing a gun after children crossed his lawn. Teen-ager John Rich was hit by a shot but not seriously injured, they said.

"All of a sudden I heard Cruse screaming and saw him drive away," said another neighbor, Marguerite Hall. "He really disliked children very, very intensely. He was out there the minute they came home from school, to make sure they didn't bother his property, didn't walk across it," Mrs. Hall said.

Friday morning police took Cruse barefoot to the scene of the shooting and apparently interrogated him, then took him to the jail.

Looking meek and forlorn, Cruse was greeted at jail by signs posted by inmates saying "try his kind" and "not insane."

Witnesses said Cruse fired wildly at anyone in his path as he crossed from one shopping center into another Thursday night, firing down at wounded victims. Gunfire killed the first two police officers on the scene.

Local News in Brief

IOH gets state money

The Instructors of the Handicapped is likely to receive a $60,000 state grant to help pay the cost of a special swimming pool for the handicapped. The grant all but ends the group's 32-year fund-raising drive.

The appropriation was included in a budget passed earlier this week by the state Legislature's Appropriations Committee. While the full General Assembly must also approve the measure, state Rep. John W. Thompson said Friday it has widespread support.

Thompson, who sits on the Appropriations Committee, introduced the measure, and it received the backing of other members of the town's delegation — state Sen. Michael P. Meotti, D-Glastonbury, and state reps. James R. McCavanagh, D-Manchester and Donald Bates, D-East Hartford, he said.

IOH members also spoke in support of the bill at a public hearing in March.

The pool, located at Manchester High School, cost $334,000. Construction was begun in August, and it is scheduled to be officially dedicated May 17, although IOH may have access to it before then, the group said.

Caution: bridge

This Connecticut Transit bus and other small vehicles will be able to continue using the North Main Street bridge over the Hockanum River. But larger trucks with loads over eight tons are restricted from traveling over the eastbound lane because of deteriorating structural steel found in the bridge during a routine state inspection. The same restrictions apply to a bridge on Hartford Road over the Folly Brook. The state said the bridge showed similar deterioration.

Cracking up

Rec director says jai alai play damaged wall

By George Lyng
Herald Reporter

The first signs of damage to the Charter Oak Park handball courts are now noticeable, and Manchester's recreation director maintains jai alai play is responsible.

Recreation Director Scott Sprague said Thursday a crack has appeared in the court closest to the tennis courts. He said chunks of concrete have fallen, or are about to fall from a seam on the forewall. This is the wall that the ball is thrown against.

There are actually two cracks, located on top of each other on the wall's center seam joining two concrete slabs. The bottom crack is about 2 inches wide and nearly a foot long, with the top crack a similar width but about half the length.

There are no visible cracks on the other two walls, nor in the adjoining second court.

Both facilities were reconditioned last year for about $30,000. However, Sprague has warned that jai alai play — because it involves the use of a hard ball — lessens the lifespan of the new surface.

Some jai alai players disagree. They claim the ball they use is not too hard, and that chips and cracks will occur with any ball.

Jai alai is banned from the courts. Earlier this month, the town Board of Directors passed an ordinance setting fines for violators from $25 to $100.

The new ordinance was passed to make it easier for the town to crack down on jai alai play, although officials have admitted it will be impossible to strictly enforce. Since the measure was adopted, Sprague said Thursday, jai alai play has continued.

However, he said the town Highway Department is at work on some signs that will warn players of the ordinance and potential fine. Signs are already on the court, but they either are lying on the ground or do not specifically prohibit jai alai.

Handball, racquetball and tennis practice are all allowed on the court because they involve the use of a soft ball.

James Aldrich, president of the Aldrich Construction Co., the company that did the reconditioning work, has said that cracks are likely to first appear along the seams because the joints used to connect the slabs have a hollow core.

Man gets overdue Bronze Star

More than 200 military people are expected in Manchester Sunday for a ceremony awarding a Bronze Star to an Avon man for bravery during World War II.

Andrew C. Holda was informed he'd gotten the honor after he was discharged from the Army in 1944, but never actually received the medal, said Lt. Ronald Welch of the First Battalion, 169th Infantry Regiment, which is based in Manchester.

Why Holda never received the honor is not clear, though Welch said it was probably because the military was busy during the war. Welch explained that Holda's nephew, Walter Sowinski of Westport, lead the effort to give him the medal by contacting the Defense Department in January.

Holda was cited for "brave and tireless" work to string communication lines from the front during a battle on the Solomon Islands in the Pacific. A staff sergeant, Holda worked under Japanese machine gun, mortar and small-arms fire to repair and lay the wire through thick jungle on the Munda Trail, said Welch.

The incident took place in August 1943, Welch said.

He added that it is rare for a person to be given a medal but never receive it. In addition, Welch noted that Holda was a member of the Army National Guard, which was activated to fight with regular army troops.

Sunday's ceremony is at 2 p.m. at the Manchester Armory on Armory Street.

Thai & Laotian eatery joins a crowded field

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

Manchester will soon have yet another Chinese restaurant, and its owners are confident they can face the competition.

Chanh Taysavang of New York and her family hope to open MeKong restaurant at 520 Center St. by the end of May or the beginning of June. The eatery will feature Chinese, Thai and Laotian food, and will be priced comparably with others in the Manchester market, Taysavang said.

"We offer a different variety of food," Taysavang said. "So when people come in they don't just have Chinese. There's Thai and Laotian. We are aiming at a larger market."

In Manchester, that may be one of the few ways to do business in the Chinese restaurant industry. In the last year, several new Oriental food establishments have opened.

But Taysavang didn't appear worried. She pointed to the large Laotian population in Manchester as one reason that her restaurant can survive. One reason for locating in Manchester, she said, was because of the number of Oriental people in town.

"We know there's a lot of competition," Taysavang said. "But we think we have the right product."

MeKong, which will have a seating capacity of 70, will be a family-run business, with sisters and brothers cooking and serving the food.

Although she graduated with a degree in computer programming, Taysavang said she was urged into the restaurant business by her sister, Nim Lengsavath, a successful restaurateur in Atlanta.

"She wanted us to start," Taysavang said. "There's money to be made in it. But it's going to be hard work."

Sutherland ties into history of the Cheney mills

By Anita M. Caldwell
Herald Reporter

John Sutherland took his young audience back in time on Friday afternoon at the Lutz Children's Museum as part of its cultural history week, which ends today.

Sutherland, a professor of history at Manchester Community College and director of the Institute of Local History, began his talk by first asking the children their names and where they went to school.

He set a jovial mood as he showed several kinds of neckties in wildly colorful designs, eliciting chuckles from the dozen young people and parents in the audience. The display provided him with a segue into the history of the Cheney mills.

Sutherland explained that trains brought shipments of cocoons from China and Japan to the mills. Cocoons were stripped and their silk threads woven into various materials used for drapes, curtains, neckties, and "even the lining of baskets." That last fact brought "ooohs" from the young people.

The workers at the mills, Sutherland said, "came from everywhere." He told the children that families traveled by boat to America in the 1900s to work in the mill, which was built in 1838. Sutherland brought his popular slide show, "Cheney Workers were the World," which has photos from the early days of the mill, and taped interviews of residents recalling their years at the mills.

The children also learned about the mills' closing. One of the slides showed a newspaper clipping from 1923 that reported 600 weavers on strike. Sutherland told the audience that workers wanted more money and better working hours. But, when synthetics became popular, there was reduced demand for silk, and the factories closed.

Sutherland ended his presentation by speaking about future housing planned for the Cheney buildings. He emphasized that a vital piece of Manchester's history will be preserved.

Police Roundup

Garage fire probed

A fire that destroyed a detached garage on Benton Street Wednesday night is being considered suspicious, said Capt. Jack Hughes of the Town Fire Department.

No one was injured in the fire, which was restricted to the garage at 85 Benton St., Hughes said. Town firefighters arrived at the scene at 6:40 p.m. and had the fire under control within 10 to 15 minutes, he said. Firefighters reported heavy smoke coming from the garage when they arrived.

The fire is being investigated by the fire marshal and the police detective bureau, Hughes said. The garage is owned by Hans Lerch.

A Manchester man who paid a local attorney in March with an altered check, making off with $35,410, was charged Tuesday with first-degree larceny.

James Liszewski, 43, of no certain address, allegedly signed over a Connecticut Workman's Compensation check for $36,945.78 to attorney Bruce Beck for payment of legal fees on March 3, police said. According to police, Beck then had a secretary make out a check from his own account for $35,409.98, the amount of the check minus the $1,535.80 owed Beck.

But the check Liszewski gave Beck, issued by the State of Connecticut, had been altered and was only worth $945.78, police said. The next day Liszewski cashed Beck's check at the Savings Bank of Rockville, according to a police report.

Liszewski was released on $5,000 cash bond and is to appear in Manchester Superior Court on Monday.

Canadians play in Coventry

If Coventry High School students told you that the halls were alive with the sound of music, they'd be right. Friday night was the culmination of a band exchange between Coventry and Clarkson Secondary School in Mississauga, Ontario, Canada. Since September, Coventry band director Carl Salina and Clarkson band director Paul McGovern have rehearsed their students in preparation for a combined concert. The months of planning also included setting up travel arrangements and finding host families in both countries for students and staff.

Coventry students performed at Clarkson in Canada in early April. Mark Wollman, Coventry High School's principal, said the program gave students a chance to experience culture and camaraderie. "The blending of musical talents was very quick," he said. "Community support has been marvelous." The bands performed several pieces together and separately. To conclude the visit, the students at Coventry are bringing their Canadian friends to Boston today. Tonight a dance and social is planned.

Connecticut in Brief

Psychiatrist faces drug charges

MILFORD — Following a three-month investigation, officials arrested a Milford psychiatrist Thursday on charges of illegally buying narcotics, stimulants and other controlled substances. Edward Keelan was arrested by Milford police and agents of the state Department of Consumer Protection's Drug Control Division on four counts of intentionally failing to maintain drug control records. Authorities allege that Keelan purchased thousands of bottles of the controlled substances during a seven-month period, according to William P. Ward, chief of the drug control division. Keelan was released on a written promise to appear in Superior Court.

Redevelopment director quits

NEW HAVEN — The executive director of the city Redevelopment Agency resigned following the disclosure that $12,700 was found missing from an agency bank account. William T. Donohue, 52, handed in his letter of resignation on Thursday, saying he believed his action was "in the best interest of all concerned." Donohue had been suspended last week by Mayor Biagio DiLieto. The letter of resignation was delivered by Donohue's attorney to City Corporation Counsel Brian Murphy along with a check for $217.07, the remaining amount missing from the bank account. Donohue delivered a check for $12,500 to the city on April 17. Donohue, who was admitted to a hospital earlier this week, could not be reached for comment. He led the agency for 16 years. The incident is being investigated by the New Haven state's attorney's office.

Women among bishop candidates

The names of two women and three male priests will be entered in an election next month for the next suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Connecticut despite a nominating committee's selection of five men. A group of about 30 people dissatisfied with the five official nominees of the Episcopal Election Committee met earlier this week and proposed five other nominees, said the Rev. Molly O. Loudon, assistant rector at St. Andrew's Church in Meriden. She said the group included among its nominees the Rev. Margaret S. Hutchins of West Hartford and the Rev. Patricia S. Davidson of Killingworth. The election committee reviewed the names of nominees sent to it from around the country, including several women, and submitted five candidates, all men. Others who wanted to be nominated had to submit their names by Friday to the Episcopal Diocesan House in Hartford. A special convention of lay delegates and clergy from around the state will meet May 16 in Hartford to select the assistant to Bishop Arthur E. Walmsey.

Nursing home officials charged

HARTFORD — The State Department of Health Services has filed charges against two officials of the Windsor nursing home that was struck by an outbreak of salmonella food poisoning late last year. The charges are related to patient care at the Mountain View Healthcare Center and were filed against the home's administrator, Kenneth Kohnle, and the nursing supervisor, Beverly Plasse. David J. Pavia, chief of the department's public health hearing office, said Thursday that the charges "have the potential to be quite serious... we had deaths in this case." Five residents of the home died from complications related to the outbreak, which was first reported to the state last Nov. 20. Pavia said the charges involve the failure of the two officials to notify personal physicians of affected residents in a timely manner or to notify family members about changes in the health of their relatives.

Rescuers dig through the rubble of a collapsed apartment building in Bridgeport. The collapse brought rescue personnel from across the state and nation.

Disaster draws wide response

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — William Baal was talking on the telephone when out his window he saw a building across the street begin to move. "I grabbed my hard hat and gloves and ran out," he said. Louis Danielle and Clark Cole dropped their work at a construction site when they heard nearby the chilling sound of twisting steel followed by the crash of tons of concrete. "When you see something like that, you don't ask anybody for permission. You just do it," Danielle said. Across the city, the state and the nation, rescue workers and construction experts rushed to answer the call for help at the L'Ambiance Plaza, where a 13-story apartment complex under construction collapsed into a 60-foot-high pile of rubble. "We all rushed to help out because we all know it can happen to you," Bill Sanderson of Bridgeport, a member of the Plumbers & Fitters Local 173, said Friday. Loudspeakers announced "Code D" at St. Vincent's Hospital. Police escorted cranes to the site to clear rubble. More than 100 laborers from around the state rushed to Bridgeport to join the search for fellow construction workers buried in the debris. Italian- and Portuguese-speaking volunteers translated for families of foreign-born workers. Four state police dogs sniffed around the wreckage, helping rescuers determine where they should concentrate their efforts.

Judge strikes down New York smoking ban

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A judge struck down as unconstitutional Friday a set of sweeping regulations that would have limited smoking in most restaurants, workplaces and other public buildings in New York state beginning May 7.

The regulations, touted as among the most stringent in the country, would have banned smoking in taxis, food markets, banks, auditoriums and courthouses, and limited smoking to designated areas in workplaces, larger restaurants, schools and other public places.

The state Public Health Council issued the regulations in February. But Justice Harold Hughes ruled in trial-level state Supreme Court that the issue was not whether smoking should be banned, but that such widespread restrictions should be imposed by the Legislature, not by the Council.

Discovery of art fakes has curators scrambling

DALLAS (AP) — The discovery that three prized pre-Columbian sculptures at the Dallas Museum of Art actually are cheap copies sent tremors through art circles Friday, as curators combed their collections for similar fakes.

A writer and an architect who determined the sculptures were made by a Mexican artist less than four decades ago say there may be more pieces in museums and art collections in this country and Europe.

"He started doing them in the 1950s and he says there's thousands," said architect E. Logan Wagner.

Several other U.S. museums, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the St. Louis Art Museum, were taken in by the sculptures, Wagner said.

Dallas museum officials announced Thursday that three of their most prominent pre-Columbian artifacts were not 1,000 years old, but instead were thought to have been made in a Jalapa, Mexico, workshop in the 1950s.

The three ceramic sculptures are all lifelike sitting figures made in the manner of figures dating from A. D. 600 to 900 in what experts call the Veracruz style. Laboratory tests confirmed the newness of the figures.

"My first reaction to the charge was very defensive because these are pieces that I have very much admired and I have proudly shown to all kinds of visitors, some of their great pre-Columbian authorities," Harry Parker, director of the Dallas museum, said Friday.

"Now begins a more scholarly part of the process, which is to attempt to define this artist or artisan's works so that we can cleanse the history of pre-Columbian art of these forgeries," Parker said.

Parker said the discovery does not cast doubt on every pre-Columbian piece, but does create substantial questions about Veracruz artifacts.

"The people affected are unable to vote the 15 appointees who wrought this change out of office as they could do with their senators and assemblymen," wrote Hughes, who said he quit smoking seven years ago.

"This is not the way major social and health policy changes should occur in a representative democracy," added the judge.

State officials said they would appeal, and lawyers for both sides said the case would likely go to New York's highest court, the Court of Appeals.

State Health Department spokesman Peter Slocum said that as part of the appeal, the state would ask permission to enforce the regulations while the court battle continues.

"He (Hughes) said the Legislature makes the laws in this state. We're elated. The Constitution works," said B.J. Costello, a lawyer for the Schcharie

County restaurant owner who had sued the state. "It is what the founding fathers had in mind, not just some ambiguous agency who makes rules for the whole state."

"The executive branch is given the duty to execute, not create, the laws," Hughes said. To accept the regulations "would have us come full circle from the old days of rule by benevolent autocrat to a modern rule of the benign bureaucrat."

The Public Health Council adopted the regulations after months of public hearings and over the objections of the tobacco industry and groups representing restaurants and other businesses.

The only places exempt from the regulations were homes, bars, hotel rooms, tobacco stores, restaurants with 50 or fewer seats, conventions and private social functions.

In adopting the regulations, the health council cited recent scientific studies indicating non-smokers could become ill because of other people's cigarette and cigar smoke.

The Public Health Council consists of 14 doctors, lawyers and laymen interested in health-care issues. It also includes state Health Commissioner Dr. David Axelrod, who lobbied heavily for the regulations. Council members are nominated by the governor and confirmed by the state Senate.

Hughes noted that 40 bills introduced in the Legislature from 1975 to 1988 to limit smoking in public places failed to become law and said such "inaction on (the Legislature's) part may reflect that society is not ready for the change."

Hughes's decision is a major setback for the council, which two years ago forced the closing of bathhouses and gay sex clubs in New York City in an attempt to stem the spread of AIDS.

Frost-busting bacteria gets test despite protests

BRENTWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Bacteria that had been genetically altered to protect crops from the ravages of frost was sprayed on a strawberry patch Friday in a historic test that followed years of laboratory tests and legal challenges.

Vandals ripped up 2,000 of the 2,400 test plants Thursday night, but they were replanted in time for the tests. Protesters have charged that the altered types of bacteria were inau-ciently tested for safety and that releasing them into the environment could permit them to spread unchecked.

Shortly after dawn, Julie Lindemann, a plant pathologist with Advanced Genetic Sciences Inc. of Oakland, stepped into a field about 50 miles east of San Francisco and sprayed two strains of the bacteria known as Frostban on a field of 2,400 strawberry plants.

The state required that she wear a white protective suit as a precaution, although AGS officials didn't think it was necessary and don't wear such gear in their own labs.

AGS attorneys have insisted the experiment is safe and that nothing else has been so thoroughly scrutinized before its field application as the two Frostban strains, formally known as Pseudomonas syringae and Pseudomonas fluorescens.

The bacteria are nearly identical to naturally occurring bacteria, except that a small amount of genetic material has been deleted. As a result, Frostban is no longer able to produce a surface protein that promotes the formation of frost crystals on leaves.

Frost causes an estimated $1.6 billion worth of crop damage annually in this country. To succeed, the bacteria would have to displace the natural bacteria.

U.S. rep charged with fraud

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Harold E. Ford, C.H. Butcher Jr. and three other people were indicted Friday by a federal grand jury on charges of bank, mail and tax fraud.

The 19-count indictment alleges that Butcher used loans from his banks to buy political influence from Ford, a Memphis Democrat known for turning out the city's black vote.

The indictment said loans from Butcher's financial institutions were diverted from legitimate business enterprises to the personal uses of Ford.

Also indicted were David Crabtree, a former Butcher accountant and business associate; Douglas R. Beatty, a lawyer retained by Butcher and Crabtree to be president of Tenn-Ford Inc. Tenn-Ford, the indictment said, is a company created by Beatty "to receive funds from Southern Industrial Banking Corp. and to conceal the distribution of those funds for the benefit of Harold E. Ford."

Southern Industrial is a loan and thrift company of Butcher's that went bankrupt in 1983.

Also indicted was Karl A. Schiedwitz, a Memphis attorney and Butcher associate who was charged with helping Ford obtain the loans.

The indictment alleges the men took part in a conspiracy to defraud United American banks in Knoxville and Memphis, City & County banks of Anderson and Knox counties and Southern Industrial for the benefit of Ford.

The United American banks were once controlled by Butcher's brother, Jake, a two-time candidate for governor who is serving 20 years in prison for bank and tax fraud.

The City & County banks and Southern Industrial were controlled by C.H. Butcher Jr., who is awaiting sentencing on bankruptcy fraud, tax fraud and money laundering charges.

The alleged conspiracy was undertaken to permit Ford "to live an extravagant and lavish lifestyle, well above his personal means," the indictment said.

The conspiracy also was aimed at permitting the Butcher brothers to "use the political influence of Harold E. Ford, his family and organization, for their personal, political and business purposes," the indictment said.

Arson suspects reverse pleas

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Three men pleaded guilty at a court hearing Friday to federal charges of setting the New Year's Eve fire that killed 97 people at the Dupont Plaza beachfront hotel and injured 146.

They changed their pleas from innocent as part of a plea bargain with federal prosecutors that was not disclosed. The trial had been scheduled to begin Monday in U.S.

District Court. Hector Escudero Aponte, a 35-year-old hotel maintenance worker, also pleaded guilty to a charge of first degree murder in the death of U.S. Secret Service agent Manuel de Jesus Marrero Otero, who was in the hotel on a counterfeit money case.

The other two defendants are Armando Jimenez Rivera, 29, and Jose Francisco Rivera Lopez, 40.

U.S. Attorney Daniel Lopez Romo, who filed the murder charge against Escudero at Friday's hearing, did not reveal details of the plea bargain and District Judge Jose A. Fuste ordered it sealed.

The three defendants, all hotel employees and members of the Teamsters Union, were charged with arson that interfered with interstate commerce.

Official urges continuation of breast exams

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government's top disease prevention official said Friday he hopes a report that casts doubt on whether breast self-examination alone prevents early death from cancer will not discourage women from performing the procedure.

While the statistical analysis takes no stand on the worth of self-examinations, Dr. Michael McGinnis said he worried that U.S. women will interpret it as a recommendation against them.

"The Public Health Service feels it is still appropriate for physicians to recommend breast self-examination to their patients," McGinnis said in an interview.

In a study published in Friday's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, members of the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force said: "The problem with breast self-examination is not evidence of a lack of effect, but lack of evidence."

While a woman's risk of dying an early death from cancer decreases measurably if a doctor examines her breasts or takes breast X-rays, the same as not been established for breast self-examinations, the report said.

The task force is financed jointly by the federal government and the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

However, the views of the outside experts do not necessarily reflect government health policy and the task force's report on breast cancer screening — the first of several the group will produce on a variety of topics — was not cleared in advance with the Department of Health and Human Services.

Although McGinnis emphasized that he had no quarrel with findings in the technical document, which was aimed at physicians, he said he is "concerned there will be misinterpretations ... about what the report actually says."

"It would be unfortunate if the public perception is that it is a recommendation against breast self-examination, because it is not that," said McGinnis, deputy HHS secretary for disease prevention.

U.S./World in Brief

16 Americans wounded in blast

PIRAEUS, Greece — A roadside bomb exploded Friday, spraying a military bus with shrapnel and debris that wounded 16 people, including 16 Americans, police and the U.S. Embassy reported.

Twelve of the Americans were military personnel, and the other four were civilians. An embassy statement said 14 Americans were treated at a hospital for minor injuries, but the other two remained hospitalized.

The bomb, detonated by remote control, blew a three-foot hole in a stone wall beside the road and smashed the windows of the bus. The vehicle careened off the road into a tree.

No group claimed responsibility. Police said the bomb exploded at 5:10 p.m. near the central market in Piraeus, the seaport for Athens.

Reagan to meet with reporters

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, who does not plan to hold a formal news conference in April, will be questioned briefly by six reporters next week, his spokesman announced Friday.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said a transcript of the 15-minute session with journalists Tuesday afternoon will be made available immediately to the rest of the press corps.

Fitzwater said the president did not plan to hold a formal, broadcast news conference in April.

He said the participants in Tuesday's session will be chosen by the White House. He added that it was scheduled to increase journalists' personal contact and access to Reagan and that more such sessions would be scheduled in the future.

Senate passes road safety bill

WASHINGTON — The Senate passed a highway safety bill today that would require automakers to put lap-and-shoulder safety belts in the rear seats of new cars and to improve safety features of light trucks and minivans.

The measure, which now goes to the House for consideration, also would direct the government to try and create a numerical rating system that would tell consumers of the relative crashworthiness of cars.

"The war against highway death and injury is not going well," Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., one of the authors of the legislation, said before it was approved. "There are highway safety problems that cry out for attention."

Last year, 45,000 people died in highway crashes, a 4 percent increase over 1985, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Auto manufacturers would have to install lap-shoulder belts in the rear seats of half the cars made after Sept. 1, 1989, and all automobiles produced after Sept. 1, 1990. Recent tests have shown that in some instances, the lap belts now in back seats are not sufficient protection and, in some cases, cause abdominal injuries.

Dissident arrives in Switzerland

ZURICH, Switzerland — Anatoly Koryagin, who served six years in Soviet labor camps for accusing authorities of sending sane dissidents to mental hospitals, flew to Switzerland with his family Friday.

The 48-year-old dissident psychiatrist, released two months ago, said in Moscow he felt sad about leaving his homeland but did so because of "what has happened to me and my family."

He was taken to Moscow's Sheremetyevo Airport at mid-afternoon in a Swiss Embassy car with his wife, three sons and mother for the Swissair flight.

In brief remarks to reporters before going through customs, he said: "I have to leave now because of the situation and what has happened to me and my family. In these conditions, I cannot remain."

Philippine church gets tough

Manila, Philippines — The Roman Catholic Church is cracking down on priests, nuns and lay workers who have joined the Communist rebels and is investigating whether church money helps support the insurgents. The moves come after years of warnings by deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos and the military that the church was infiltrated by Communists and that church funds were financing the 18-year rebellion.

As the Japanese yen hits a post-war high against the U.S. dollar on Friday morning, trading on the Tokyo foreign exchange market gets hotter. AP photo

Dollar's skid starts reaction

NEW YORK (AP) — The beleaguered dollar skidded to new lows against the Japanese yen Friday, again triggering a chain reaction in U.S. financial markets that sent stock and bond prices tumbling and interest rates soaring.

Gold and silver prices also climbed, with silver reaching its highest level in nearly three years.

The turmoil was the latest illustration of how investors have become increasingly concerned that the dollar's slump will lead to higher inflation, higher lending rates and, perhaps, an economic recession — all of which are bad news for financial assets such as stocks and bonds.

Some professional money managers and economists said, however, that the markets' concern might be overstated.

They said that despite the dollar's decline, the U.S. economy's continued sluggishness, reasonable growth in the money supply and other factors suggest the upturn in inflation and interest rates will be modest — especially if the dollar soon stabilizes.

The Labor Department reported Friday that consumer prices rose

0.4 percent in March, matching the February increase. The increases, although moderate, represented an annual inflation rate of 5.1 percent, well above the 1.1 percent rise in 1986 when costs were held down by plunging oil prices.

"There's only a whiff of inflation in the market, but there's a tremendous amount of panic, and the two don't mix from the standpoint of an intelligent response to the economic news," said William Gross, managing director of Pacific Investment Management Inc., a money management firm based in Newport Beach, Calif.

Investors are extremely nervous because the tumbling dollar has, at least for now, abruptly altered the environment of stable interest rates and inflation of the past few years.

Investors' fears were exacerbated Friday when the dollar plunged in Tokyo to 139.50 Japanese yen, its lowest level since modern exchange rates were set in the late 1940s.

In response, prices of long-term Treasury bonds skidded nearly 2 points, or $20 for every $1,000 of face value, and interest rates soared in the money markets. The rate on six-month Treasury bills, for instance, jumped to 6 percent from 5.52 percent.

The stock market fared no better. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 45.60 points to 2,235.37 — giving it a loss of 170.17 points, or 7.5 percent, since it hit a record high 2,405.54 on April 6.

With investors worried that higher inflation would erode the value of their financial assets, they have increasingly moved money into "tangible" assets such as precious metals and other commodities whose prices are expected to rise in tandem with inflation.

In London the price of gold jumped $8 an ounce to $482, and silver climbed to $9.10 an ounce from $8.33 — the first time silver has been above $9 since June 1984.

"A lot of people are getting antsy, and the tendency then is to convert some of your money into a safer haven," said James U. Blanchard, who heads a precious metals firm bearing his name in New Orleans.

Many hospitals find themselves on critical list

NEW YORK (AP) — The hospital industry is struggling to find a cure for some serious business problems these days.

Most people, naturally, tend to think of hospitals as social institutions, dedicated to healing the sick and the injured.

But no matter who owns them — religious institution, government or profit-making corporation — hospitals are also businesses that must cover their expenses for employees, equipment, upkeep and so forth.

Like a hotel or an airline, a hospital needs to keep a certain percentage of its capacity occupied by paying customers to maintain its financial health.

In fact, up until the last few years hospital management was generally considered a prosperous business full of promise. The leading companies in the industry were expanding rapidly and posting solid earnings growth.

Early in this decade, those circumstances began to change as the nation began to confront the problem of the mounting cost of health care.

Legislators, employers and insurers began to seek cheaper alternatives, wherever possible, to hospitalization. The system under which Medicare pays for hospital care was changed.

Since 1981, when hospital utilization peaked, the year-by-year total number of days spent by patients in hospitals has dropped 19 percent, notes David Lathson, an analyst who follows the industry for PaineWebber Inc.

"In most industries, such a falloff in unit demand would have translated into a commensurate decline in capacity, measured in this industry in terms of licensed beds," Lathson observes.

"To date, however, licensed beds have dropped only 3 percent below their peak levels, a reflection of the peculiar combination of economic, social and political considerations influencing hospital capacity in the United States."

Occupancy rates at all the nation's hospitals now average about 64 percent, says Edwin Gordon, health care analyst at Tucker, Anthony & R.L. Day Inc. Among the four leading hospital-chain operators — American Medical International, Hospital Corp. of America, Humana Inc. and National Medical Enterprises — the average is barely 50 percent.

"Price discounts are becoming more prevalent as hospitals compete with each other and with new alternative treatment sites," Gordon adds.

"At first, hospitals were successful at reducing their costs. This has become more difficult as utilization has continued to decline and initial cost-cutting steps have already been accomplished."

"We view the next three to four years as a period of struggle to determine survival, not dominance," Lathson predicts further declines in hospital utilization through the rest of the 1980s, and says the industry faces the prospect of "significant downsizing," or reduction of capacity.

12 — MANCHESTER HERALD, Saturday, April 25, 1987

Inflation continues slow but steady climb in '87

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices continued their slow but steady climb last month, moving up at an annual rate of 5.1 percent, the government reported Friday.

Economists said the pace, nearly five times last year's inflation rate, probably is typical of what Americans can expect for the rest of 1987.

The Labor Department said the Consumer Price Index rose 0.4 percent in March, identical to the February increase and double the March rate of 0.2 percent in February.

The inflation rate would translate to 5.1 percent if it continued unchanged for a year. For the first three months of the year, consumer prices have increased at an annual rate of 6.2 percent.

In a related report, the Commerce Department said personal incomes rose 0.2 percent in March, the weakest gain in four months and a sharp drop from a 1.3 percent increase in February.

Wages and salaries increased at an annual rate of $7.4 billion in March, down sharply from February's gain of $16.6 billion. Part of the weakness came from a drop of $1.3 billion in manufacturing payrolls in March after a rise of $2.5 billion in February.

In a third economic report, the Labor Department said that Americans' average weekly earnings, after adjusting for inflation, fell 0.7 percent in March, the biggest monthly decline since December. The setback left inflation-adjusted earnings 1.1 percent below where they were a year ago.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the inflation figure was higher than the administration's prediction, but said it should slow as energy costs work their way through the economy.

"While this is something to watch, it's not something to be alarmed about," Fitzwater said.

Private economists have been predicting inflation of 4 percent to 5 percent for the year, and several said the March inflation report reinforces their forecasts.

Business in Brief

Business workshop set at MCC

A two-session workshop for business managers and supervisors on "Performance Appraisal" will be held at Manchester Community College on May 5 and 12 from 7:15 to 9:15 p.m.

Bruce Harvey, counselor-investigator with the Equal Employment Opportunity Office, U.S. Postal Service, will be the workshop leader. Topics of discussion will include job definition, staff development and training, problem solving, monitoring employee performance, and the formal review process.

The registration fee is $25. For information, call 647-8242.

Spaulding has been in practice for 36 years. He is a member of the American Academy of Orthodontics and its regional components and of the American Dental Association. He is a member of the Connecticut Dental Society and is a member and a past president of the Manchester Dental Society.

He is member of the Manchester Rotary Club and a past chairman of the Conservation Commission. He holds a life membership in the Manchester Land Conservation Trust and in the Manchester Historical Society.

He is past president of the Hartford Council of American Youth Hostels Inc. and now serves on its board of directors.

Spaulding is a graduate of Bowdoin College and of the Tufts University School of Dentistry, where he also took a post-graduate course in orthodontics.

Mobil to move out of New York

NEW YORK — The Mobil Corp. announced Friday that it planned to consolidate its headquarters by moving the entire New York office of 1,900 employees to Fairfax, Va.

The move is expected to take about three years, said Mobil chairman and chief executive officer, Allen E. Murray.

He said the decision to leave New York was difficult because Mobil, through its predecessor companies, had been based here since 1886.

Mobil is the nation's second-largest oil company, reporting $48.4 billion in total revenue last year. Only New York-based Exxon Corp.'s $76.2 billion in sales was greater.

The oil company's headquarters are currently split between Fairfax and New York, a setup Murray said has led to inherent organizational inefficiencies.

The high cost of living and operating a business in New York were other reasons involved in the decision, he said.

GHADA plans spring sell-a-thon

In the tradition of its Washington's Birthday Sale, the Greater Hartford Automobile Dealers Association is having a new three-day spring sell-a-thon in which its members will be offering sale prices while at the same time raising money for the "One Lap For Kids" program to benefit the University of Connecticut's Children's Cancer Fund.

The event takes place Thursday through May 2. Any licensed driver who visits a participating GHADA member showroom can register to win a $10,000 credit toward a car. The drawing will be held May 4.

For any customer who test drives a car between Thursday and May 2, each participating GHADA dealer will donate $5 to the "One Lap For Kids" program. The dealers hope to raise between $20,000 and $30,000.

Financial experts hard pressed to explain volatility of markets

NEW YORK (AP) — Even to people with long experience on Wall Street, the recent volatile behavior of the securities markets has been disturbing and a bit baffling.

When the Dow Jones industrial average posts one of its biggest point advances and one of its biggest losses ever on successive days, as it did this past Tuesday and Wednesday, explanations come hard.

Newton Zinder, E.F. Hutton's respected market-watcher, called it "a manic-depressive performance that could probably be better analyzed by a psychiatrist than a market analyst."

To be sure, the Dow's gyrations these days present an exaggerated picture of volatility in stock prices. At its current lofty levels, a 50-point change in the average represents the equivalent of a 7- or 8-point swing just a few years ago.

Furthermore, the average has become increasingly prone to big changes as the divisor used to compute it keeps shrinking with the stock splits that are so common in a bull market.

And, of course, the big stocks that make up the Dow are the issues most commonly involved in computer-program trading maneuvers.

But there has been nothing illusory in the past few weeks about the volatility that has hit the credit markets, knocking prices of bonds down by some 10 percent in value in a few short weeks.

At the center of all this stormy activity is the U.S. dollar, which has dropped to record lows against the Japanese yen.

The situation has stirred concern that a loss of confidence in the dollar will depress international trade, and perhaps cause the Federal Reserve to tighten credit in order to brake its slide.

"If interest rates have to go up to defend the dollar, what happens to the current economy, which is best described as sluggish?" said William LeFevre at Advest Inc.

At Friday's close, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials stood at 2,235.37, its lowest level since early March and down 40.82 from the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 3.22 to 159.37, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was down 7.14 at $21.90.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 173.65 million shares a day, against 208.82 million the week before.

The way some observers see it, the Fed might not have to tighten credit after all, since bond traders are already at work effectively doing the same thing.

In this sense, bond-market participants are acting as "vigilantes" against inflation, to use the word often applied by Edward Yardeni, economist at Prudential-Bache Securities.

"A spike in bond rates may be required to demonstrate once again that the credit markets won't let inflation return," Yardeni said in a recent commentary.

If rising rates accomplish the mission of stabilizing the dollar, the optimists argue, then there is good reason to hope that rates can come down again afterward.

In any case, maintains Robert S. Salomon Jr. at Salomon Brothers Inc., the recent case of jitters on Wall Street need not be taken as a signal of an end to the long bull market for stocks.

"The market is currently not exhibiting the complacency, the new issue fever or the low cash reserves that typically accompany a market top. Highly volatile markets are more consistent with market bottoms," Salomon said.

"We believe that the combination of slow growth and low inflation will continue to benefit financial assets."

Market woes don't faze buyers

NEW YORK (AP) — The financial markets were still firmly in the grip of dollar-shock this past week, gyrating wildly with anxiety about prices and interest rates. But what of the consumer, once the engine of the economy's expansion?

Analysts say the nation's buyers are still slugging along, resigned to taking a back seat to other economic drivers this year.

"The consumer is going to be a neutral force in the economy," said Robert Dederick, chief economist for Northern Trust Co. of Chicago. "He's not going to be feeling very ebullient, but he's not under a lot of pressure either."

Buyers apparently are not as spooked by the dollar's decline as the markets have been. The worry of some investors that the weak dollar will fuel inflation and force the Federal Reserve to tighten credit is not as prevalent in the nation's malls and car lots as it is on investment trading floors.

Indeed, consumer confidence is up by at least one measure.

A confidence index put out by the Conference Board rose markedly in March to 98.1, up from 93.2 the previous month. The index is based on a value of 100 established in 1985.

"The consumer is still fairly confident about the economy in general," said Jason Bram of the business-supported research group.

"Yet even the most optimistic outlooks for spending are being hedged these days. Bram said the increase in the Conference Board's index was due largely to improved expectations for employment, not spending."

"1986 was a very good year for spending, partly due to falling prices and low financing rates on cars and other things. In 1987, a lot of those things are gone," he said.

A battery of economic reports this past week showed just how far gone.

The first-quarter estimate for the gross national product — the broadest measure of the economy's health — was up a strong 4.3 percent, but a component statistic on personal consumption was relatively weak, analysts pointed out.

Most of the growth in the GNP was attributed to a giant increase in inventories. And while warehouses were being jammed, sales were falling, for the first time since the 1982 recession. Consumer spending was off 0.4 percent.

The government's Consumer Price Index report showed a 0.4 percent rise in prices in March, indicating inflation is alive and well, while personal income and spending rose only slightly during the month.

"The fears of higher interest rates and inflation are well-founded," said Doug Handler,

Court rules racial bias is acceptable

This week's Supreme Court ruling upholding Georgia's death-penalty law is a bitter disappointment, particularly since the court has indicated in recent affirmative action rulings an unwillingness to tolerate racial bias.

But in upholding the Georgia law by a 5-4 vote, the court ruled that state death-penalty laws can't be challenged as unconstitutional even if statistics show they may be applied in a racially biased manner.

"Apparent disparities in sentencing are an inevitable part of our criminal justice system," Justice Lewis F. Powell wrote for the majority.

The court's willingness to overlook the disparities of the magnitude presented in the Georgia case marks a sad day in American history.

The case arose on an appeal brought by Warren McCleskey, a black man sentenced to death for the 1978 murder of a white Atlanta police officer. McCleskey's bid to avoid the electric chair centered around a study of Georgia murder convictions between 1973 and 1978 by David Baldus, a law professor at the University of Iowa.

Baldus found that those convicted of killing whites were 11 times more likely to be sentenced to death than those convicted of killing blacks.

The pattern does not appear to be confined to Georgia. Nationwide, about 95 percent of the inmates on death row killed whites, even though blacks are murdered more often.

Yet a majority of the justices somehow concluded that "The Baldus study does not demonstrate a constitutionally significant risk of racial bias affecting the Georgia capital-sentencing process."

The justices said it was up to state legislatures to evaluate available statistics and determine "the appropriate punishment for particular crimes."

In ducking the question of racial bias, the Supreme Court may have encouraged states to base the "appropriate punishment" on the color of the victim.

GOP leads way in Bolton

To the Editor:

Thank you for your coverage of our Bolton Republican platform that isn't a platform. Some of Bolton's accomplishments over the past two years have been bipartisan. Some of the accomplishments over the next two years will be bipartisan. Republicans do not claim to be the only travelers on the journey, just to be leading the way. Let's look again at the problems which you say that the Democrats better address.

A day-care center was not first proposed by the Democrats. It was proposed by an independent group of parents and organized under the auspices of the YWCA. Negotiations to permit operation in a town building have already been initiated by the selectmen.

The Democratic platform calls for a ban on smoking at the high school, yet not all Democratic candidates for the Board of Education support such a ban.

The Democratic platform calls for substance-abuse education, but this is nothing new. It is already in place in kindergarten through grade 12 in the schools, and through the support of BRACE by the selectmen.

The Democratic platform calls for computerization of town records, but the subcommittee handling this matter, which is headed by a Democrat, has yet to produce a report. The selectmen have already approved funding for computerization through Revenue Sharing and the Town Improvement Fund.

The Democratic platform calls for additional constables, but this is a solution without a problem. The resident state trooper has just recommended maintaining the current number, which makes sense given the decline in the crime rate in Bolton over the past two years. Both the Board of Selectmen and Board of Finance have supported the trooper's recommendation in the budget.

The Democratic platform calls for a prompt study for the possible need for a town/school social worker. Bolton already has a full-time psychological and family counselor in the schools, and a study of the need for a town social worker is already under way.

Bolton and its voters do have a number of concerns. Republicans believe in addressing these concerns before they become problems. This belief is shown in our platform which isn't a platform, which calls for continuity in addressing continuing concerns. Everything undertaken in the past two years, from the library-media center to the new town plan to Community Hall renovations to revised zoning regulations has started with the awareness of the concerns which will arise from growth during the next 20 years, and continues by addressing them before they become problems.

Proud of Manchester PZC

To the Editor:

All residents of Manchester can be extremely proud of a Planning and Zoning Commission with vision. A commission that realizes that every item that comes before it does not deserve a rubber stamp.

I'm sure there have been mistakes made in the past, and I commend the commission for taking a stand for progress. The commission decided to "listen to the people," to judge the information on hand, and after a lengthy discussion, reached a very sound and correct decision.

Of course, I am speaking of the decision reached on City View. The town is gaining a new, safe, tranquil and very desirable area of homes to stand shoulder to shoulder with the same type of neighborhood. We, the residents of Redwood Farms, welcome our new neighbors, and I know those same neighbors will welcome the safe, quiet and traffic-free streets provided by the sound judgment of our Planning and Zoning Commission.

Three cheers for progressive Manchester and add one more for the body that makes it that way, the PZC.

I, personally, have enjoyed living at this address for about 10 years. During this time, I know of no emergency or any other problems that could have or would have been lessened by more entrances or exits from Redwood. We have survived floods, tornadoes, hurricanes, blizzards, power outages, lack of water, and other misfortunes as well. Redwood Road served us beautifully through it all, and I feel will continue to do so in the future.

I'm proud of my town, proud to be a resident of Redwood Farms, proud to have such wonderful neighbors, as I surely do, and proud of "the molders of Manchester," the PZC.

Federal monkeys race continued woes

WASHINGTON — The fate of 14 monkeys that survived government-funded experiments remains unresolved nearly six years after the pathetic creatures were rescued from their laboratory cages. The reason, according to a disgraced member of Congress, is "continued stubbornness and bureaucratic bullheadedness" by federal officials.

Jack Anderson

Rep. Robert Smith, R-N.H., one of several members of Congress who have championed the monkeys' cause, told our reporter Lisa Sylvester the animals were taken to another federally funded government research center "under the cover of darkness and with no advance notification" by their legal guardian, the National Institutes of Health. He said this was done despite personal assurances given to him that the monkeys would not be moved without notification to Congress.

Dr. William Raub of the NIH insists that members of Congress were informed verbally of plans to move the monkeys last summer from a suburban Maryland facility. They are now at the Delta Primate Center at Tulane University in New Orleans, and Raub said no decision will be made on their ultimate disposition without congressional input.

What disturbs the monkeys' congressional friends — and animal-rights organizations — is the possibility that the monkeys will be used for further experimentation if the NIH relinquishes custody to Tulane. The Supreme Court has ruled that animal-rights advocates have no legal standing in the matter, but they have continued to press their case with Congress.

The animal-rights groups want the monkeys, which are macaques, placed in a privately owned sanctuary in Texas. Instead, the government sent them to Tulane with an assurance that they would not be used for "intrusive" experimentation again.

Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., is afraid that Congress may have been misled by that assurance. As evidence, he cites a memorandum sent to the NIH by the American Psychological Association, which proposed that the monkeys be given to Tulane and that half of them be destroyed and the other half used for breeding. That way, the memo suggested, NIH would be relieved of "any responsibility as to the future of these animals."

The psychological association has no particular legal standing in the case, either. Dr. Martin Frank, the association's executive secretary, said it got involved in the controversy partly because Dr. Edward Taub, who supervised the experiments on the monkeys at the private Institute for Behavioral Research, is a member of the association. Taub was tried and acquitted on charges of violating Maryland's cruelty-to-animals law.

Alex Pacheco of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals touched off the controversy in 1981 when, as an assistant in Taub's laboratory, he claimed he witnessed atrocities that led to the release of the macaques, several of which later died or had to be put out of their misery.

NIH officials denied any involvement in the APA proposal. But Frank said the association has been "talking" with the NIH about the monkeys' future. He said the association's memo was an effort to resolve the controversy in the monkeys' best interests, as well as to "find a way to relieve the public of the burden." At one point it was costing the NIH about $30,000 a year to care for the 14 surviving monkeys. An NIH official said it is less expensive to house them at the Tulane Center.

Pacheco said animal-rights groups are particularly upset at the plan to kill half the monkeys. He contends that the surviving monkeys could live another 10 years if left in peace.

Bankrolling the Bolsheviks

Congressional scrutiny has been turned on the alarming growth in loans to the Soviet Union by U.S. banks. Members on both sides of the aisle are concerned that the Soviets are going on a borrowing binge to obtain desperately needed hard currency — and are using compliant

American bankers to get it. Many of the loans are at bargain rates, and with no strings attached, so no one can be sure what the Kremlin is using the money for.

At the end of 1986, according to Federal Reserve Board estimates, American banks held $2 billion in Soviet paper; by the end of this year, the Soviets are expected to have borrowed an additional $10 billion. Officials are afraid that this will give the Soviets the power to make or break the U.S. banking system if the trend continues.

Easygoing enforcers

Agents of the Drug Enforcement Administration are grinding their teeth in frustration over the antics of their counterparts in Pakistan. The relaxed attitude of Pakistani drug fighters is one reason the refining and trafficking in heroin has reached epic proportions worldwide.

The lackadaisical lawmen seem content with an occasional seizure of illicit drugs, instead of going after the major dope dealers and putting them out of business. American agents complain that they recently provided the Pakistanis with the locations of more than 100 heroin refineries; only one was actually shut down by the authorities.

How does the Pakistan Narcotics Control Board go about closing down a refining laboratory? With the greatest circumspection, apparently. The operator is notified that he has 30 days to turn in his equipment, or else. Or else nothing. Those who don't comply are rarely if ever punished.

Skirting the issue of the day

By Chuck Stone

Show me a man who doesn't like pretty legs, and I'll show you his widow.

But bring forth the connoisseur of tapered calf and elegant ankle, and I'll show you a fountain of youth.

His admirations keep him refreshed. The season of spring renews the promise of life.

But this spring holds a special reason for his celebration.

The miniskirt has been born again. It is tied to many things — fashion, economics, race and politics.

"Hemlines will fluctuate from mid-knee to high-thigh," one expert declared with the kind of prophetic authority that can roll back the seas and make mountains tremble.

Assured of an increased exposure of shapely leg, those who exalt its divinity turn to Robert Louis Stevenson for inspiration: "The world is so full of a number of things, I'm sure we should be as happy as kings."

Happy? I'm ecstatic. But I've always melded aesthetics with intellect.

The synthesis has its origin with my mother. A God-loving woman of incomparable beauty and Phi Beta Kappa smarts, she delighted many a passerby with her gorgeous gams. Now she could have worn a miniskirt.

Many women can't. And shouldn't. Miniskirts are hostile to skinny legs, knobby knees, and steatopygia (a deposit of fat in the buttocks common among African peoples, also called "big hips").

Years ago, on the other hand, the highest compliment a ghetto dude could pay a woman was to praise her "big legs."

As I wrote in a column 29 years ago, "Why Negro Men Like Big Legs," the term was descriptive sociology, not analytical anatomy. A well-shaped leg meant a healthy body. But an incorrigibly racist society had stunted black health.

Today, the proliferation of "big legs" among black women is one index of racial progress. Miniskirts will help highlight the change.

On the economic front, some investors are suggesting a high correlation between hemlines and stocks — the higher the hemlines, the higher the stock, and vice versa.

"Stocks' highs and women's thighs always appear together," wrote a tongue-in-cheek Harriet C. Johnson in USA Today.

But some pretentious prognosticators go back to 1922 for correlations between the rise and fall of skirts and stocks.

I've got a better correlation. Hemlines and White House occupancy.

Low hemlines anticipate a Republican administration, high hemlines augur a Democratic administration.

The last time miniskirts were in style Johnson was president.

What, then, explains their revival during a Republican administration?

Easy. Miniskirts are youthful fore-runners of change.

For the last seven years, we've suffered through Ronald Reagan's high-priestly budgetary scrimping.

Our stiff-upper-lip gentility has endured his husky-voiced senility. But Rip Van Winkle is starting to bore us.

It's time to get sassy. Raise the hemlines!

Statistical studies confirm that if two women are walking down the street, one in an ankle-touching gown and the other in a thigh-hugging miniskirt, 98 percent of the men will take judicial notice of the revealed thigh.

The other 2 percent are blind.

Mormons have open house

After months of renovations, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (the Mormons) is inviting people of all faiths to an open house Sunday from 3 to 6 p.m. at 30 Woodside St.

Richard E. Bohne, a member to the congregation who served as general supervisor of renovations, said more than $600,000 was spent to upgrade the church building and surrounding grounds. Local members donated more than 1,200 hours of work to help reduce the costs, he said.

"Some people who have only pushed buttons and pencils got down on their hands and knees to scarp floors and use trowels. People were doing things that made their backs ache and their allergies run, but they did it anyway because there was a need," Bohne explained.

The members of the Manchester congregation built a tool shed, painted the interior of the church, prepared the floor for rugs, landscaped the grounds and completed the final cleanup after renovation.

There will be displays, a tour and refreshments during the open house.

In addition to the business meeting, there will be workshops on subjects such as religious art and helping the disabled.

God bless the volunteers

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
Executive Director

I have a little memo on my desk that really made me stop and think. It begins "So long, volunteers..." I had a dream the other night that I had a few volunteers (in Manchester) every volunteer (in Manchester) had set sail for another country. I stood smiling on the pier, throwing confetti, shouting "goodbye" to three-hour meetings. No more attendance records or minutes or postcards. Goodbye to bake sales and tag sales, no more phone duty or solicitations. Sounds great, doesn't it?

Unfortunately, we would also be saying, "Goodbye soup kitchen, shelter and emergency pantry." Without volunteers we would be forced to close the doors to the hungry and the homeless. The clothing bank would be empty, the pantry shelves bare.

WITHOUT VOLUNTEERS this column would not be typed, your check to aid those in need would not be given, and even if given it would not reach the bank. Isolated elderly would not be remembered at Christmas, the good-as-new used toys which bring joy to both parents and children of low-income families would grace the garbage can instead of the Christmas tree, children would wander the streets during the two weeks of Interfaith

Bishops appeal for morality

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — About 100 bishops representing four Methodist denominations have appealed to American people and their leaders to reclaim firm standards of integrity.

"No society can endure when basic codes of morality are violated," the bishops representing more than 14 million Methodists said in a "statement to the churches and the nation."

Urging people to "reclaim the simple and ordinary principles of right living" and asking government leaders to fulfill their responsibilities "with the integrity of the public trust," the bishops cited signs of moral decline, saying:

Thoughts

Jesus did many other miraculous signs in the presence of His disciples, which are not written in this book. But these are written that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that by believing you may have life in His name. John 20:30-31.

John the writer is no follower of blind faith nor does he invite a leap in the dark. As an eyewitness of Jesus' life, death, and resurrection, he set forth to write this book so others might believe in Jesus too.

Tomorrow is opportunity as every day to believe in Jesus by the eyewitnesses that testify in the Scriptures. This Jesus is the one who said, "because I live, you shall

MACC News

Day Camp. Goodbye Furniture Bank and Feed a Friend surplus food distribution. No more Farmer's Market or Honor Court. Requests for transportation to the doctor or treatment at the clinic would be refused. No more fabulous community dinners for the isolated and homeless. Urgent calls for help would find the fuel tank empty, the human needs fund depleted — no room at the Inn.

April 27 through May 2 is National Volunteer Recognition Week. Volunteer Recognition Day and every week Volunteer Recognition Week.

Volunteers, we salute and honor you and all your good works. God bless you all.

REMINDER — The Cops and Robbers benefit basketball game is Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at East Catholic High School. The Interfaith All-Star game starts at 6:30 p.m. There will be an open foul-shooting contest at half-time with prizes for the winners.

Don't miss this annual basketball rivalry between Manchester clergy and police. Tickets will be available at the door: adults $1.50, youngsters and seniors $1.

After a heroic struggle last year, the cops overpowered the robbers, 63-85.

Remember, all players are volunteers raising money for the services provided by MACC.

YOU ARE INVITED to the Mayor's Prayer Breakfast on May 7 from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. at Concordia Lutheran Church. Complimentary invitations are available at the town hall and the Savings Bank of Manchester. All those preparing and serving the breakfast and participating in the program are volunteers.

Now you can watch "Shoah" without leaving the comfort of your living room. Beginning Monday at 8:30 p.m., the Holocaust documentary will be aired on national public television on four consecutive evenings, Monday through Thursday. Then will be repeated Sunday, May 2, in a marathon broadcast starting at 9:30 a.m. and ending at 10 p.m. All broadcasts will be closed-captioned for the hearing-impaired. The premiere is scheduled in observation of national Holocaust Remembrance Week. A 24-page companion guide is available for $3 from Shoah Companion Guide, WNET, 356 West 56th St., New York, N.Y. 10019.

"Maturity consists of no longer being taken in by oneself." Youth feels the need to never be wrong. But, "A child becomes an adult when he realizes he has a right not only to be right but also to be wrong."

It is no disgrace to be wrong. Rather, like body lice, the shame is in continuing in that state. We need to help our children to accept themselves with their imperfections, to realize that mistakes are seldom fatal and never unique to them.

But before adults can so teach children, they must grasp it themselves. One of our greatest needs is a healthy self-esteem, and that must be developed early. The assurance that God loves you (Romans 5:8-9) is fundamental to this end. Serious disillusionment with oneself is the stuff of which self-destruction is made.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Manchester High School and the University of Miami. He is employed by Sirrine Environmental Consultants Inc., Greenville.

Coalition protests U.S. policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventy-nine religious and labor leaders have summoned a round of marches, rallies and other activities this weekend to protest U.S. policies in Central America and southern Africa.

A sponsoring coalition, the National Mobilization for Justice and Peace says "tens of thousands" will participate in a rally at the Capitol Saturday, with interfaith services Sunday, followed by visits to Congress members Monday. Administration policies in Central America and southern Africa "are morally wrong and violate our nation's democratic ideals," says an appeal issued in connection with the event.

"They violate fundamental rights to self-determination, liberty and justice... They contributed to heightening the atmosphere of racism at home... They risk deeper U.S. involvement in bloody and costly foreign wars..."

Signers included several Methodist, Episcopal, Lutheran, Eastern Orthodox and Roman Catholic bishops.

Special events slated to mark special week

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Joe Diminico

Seniors interested in participating in a stress management class are urged to call the Manchester Health Department at 647-3179. The class will consist of four one-hour sessions and is scheduled to begin on April 30 from 10 to 11 a.m. The sessions are free.

Don't forget: Next Thursday, the ever-popular Jennifer Joy will be at the senior center for your listening pleasure.

This year, the week of April 26 through May 2 has been set aside as National Volunteers Week. This is a time to focus on the contributions of time, energy and talents made by many volunteers across this country. On Monday, April 27, at 1:30 p.m., a recognition ceremony will be held at the senior center to honor people who have given their time to help others prepare their taxes. The AARP tax aide program, under the leadership of Bob Henrikson, has assisted more than 700 people with their income tax questions and forms, making Manchester one of the largest income tax assistance sites in the state of Connecticut. We applaud this group for their valiant efforts and look forward to having them back at the senior center next year.

Schedule for the week
Monday — bingo, 10 a.m.; pinochle, 12:30 p.m.
Tuesday — bowling, 1 p.m.; Parkade Lane; exercise with Cleo, 1:30 p.m.; square dancing, 10 a.m.; grocery shopping, call 24 hours in advance for ride; non-grocery shopping (K-Mart), call before noon Monday for ride.

'Fun' is no laughing matter

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

ABBY: My boyfriend loves to tickle me. He pins me to the floor and tickles my ribs until I scream at him to stop. The other night he tied me to a kitchen chair, removed my shoes and socks and tickled the soles of my bare feet until I was hysterical. I kept begging him to stop, but he kept on tickling me and laughing at me until I broke down in tears. When he finally untied me, I told him to get out of my house — that I never wanted to see him again.

This happened over a week ago, and he has called me every day since to say he's sorry and if I resume our relationship, it will never happen again. I need an answer right away, Abby. I am having trouble forgetting how he tortured me, but I do care for him.

TICKLED TO DEATH

DEAR TICKLED: Your boyfriend is sadistic. You were battered just as surely as if he had beaten you. Don't resume your relationship until he sees a psychiatrist.

DEAR ABBY: A person I know, J. John Smith III (not his real name), is the only person in his family whose name is J. John Smith. His father's name is C. Harry Smith.

How can this be? I was under the impression that "the third" was the son of a junior, who was the son of the original — or senior.

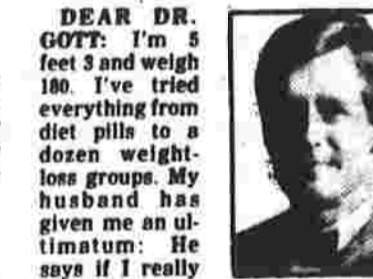

Now, where does "the second" come in?

BIRMINGHAM

DEAR BIRMINGHAM: How can it be, you ask, that J. John Smith III has a father named C. Harry Smith? Simple. Whoever named J. John Smith III was in error. You are correct when you say that the son of a junior is named "the third." "The second" is named for an uncle, grandfather, or cousin who has the identical name and middle initial.

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle a mild disagreement. Two couples, who have been friends for years, enjoy getting together on an occasional Sunday evening for cocktails

Husband's ultimatum adds to her problem

Dr. Gott Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 5 feet 3 and weigh 180. I've tried everything from diet pills to a dozen weight-loss groups. My husband has given me an ultimatum: He says if I really loved him I could lose weight, and if I don't get it off in the next 12 months, he'll leave me. What can I do?

DEAR READER: Ultimatums are often hard to deal with; they give "either/or" options, neither of which may be appropriate.

For example, your husband probably is incorrect in assuming that if you loved him, you would trim down. You undoubtedly do love him — and can't lose weight. Therefore, the lose-weight-or-else doctrine is both scary and unreasonable.

Your best approach would be to put yourself under the care of a doctor. There may be a metabolic abnormality underlying your weight problem, or you may need evaluation by obesity specialists at a teaching hospital to which the doctor can refer you.

You also may need some counseling to help you to manage stress, self-image problems — and your husband's demands.

In addition, you may want to look into some marriage counseling. If your husband agrees to go with you, he may learn more effective ways to handle his anger and the grandiose concept that he is in control of your life. Someone should point out to him the corollary of his statement: If he loved you, he would stick with you regardless of your weight.

For most obese people, help is available. I believe that you will feel relieved at getting that help from a reputable medical source. At the same time, the dynamics of your marriage need attention, too.

To give you additional help, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report, Winning The Battle of The Bulge. Others who want more information on the subject should send your name and address with $1 to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to ask for Winning The Battle of The Bulge. Discuss this Health Report with your doctor; he or she can tell you which pointers will be most effective in your case.

Couple No. 1 calls Couple No. 2 to arrange the time, place, etc. When it's time to pay the tab, Couple No. 1 wishes to pay the tab. Couple No. 2 will not allow it, and insists on separate checks, saying, "Times have changed — now people handle it their own way."
This takes away from the pleasure of initiating the time spent together. Have times changed?
OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: For some couples, yes. It's possible that Couple No. 2 cannot afford to pay for dinner for four — and going "dutch" is a way to keep dining out within their budget. Do it their way, and don't make an issue of it.

DEAR ABBY: Our 50th wedding anniversary is coming up soon and our two children want to give us a lovely party celebration. We are sincere when we say we want absolutely no gifts. First, we have no place for anything in our house. I am the last of eight children and have accumulated a lot of furniture, family silver, dishes, etc., and simply do not want another thing. The gifts would have to be divided between our children soon as we are in our 60s now. Is it proper to state "no gifts" on an invitation? If so, how should we word it?
ENOUGH THINGS IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ENOUGH: It is proper. Say, "No gifts, please. Your presence will be our cherished gift and we respectfully request no other."

Weekly Health Tip

by Roy D. Katz, R.Ph.

ABDOMINAL HERNIA
The causes of abdominal hernia vary, but most relate to a sudden pressure on the abdominal wall. One common cause is heavy lifting, using the stomach muscles instead of the stronger muscles of arms, shoulder and legs. When lifting heavy objects feet should be spread about 18" apart to give solid footing, and bending should be done by the knees, not the waist. This loosens back strain. Don't over-stress your strength — a helping hand is usually close by.

Betty Ford came back to write her own story

By Linda Deutsch
The Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — It's been nine years since former first lady Betty Ford, one of the nation's best known political helpmates, checked into Long Beach Naval Hospital and emerged with a new image as America's most famous recovering alcoholic and drug addict.

Those nine years, she says, have been some of the best years of her life.

The tone of her remarks in a wide ranging, upbeat interview in her suite at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel is that of a woman who has died and been reborn, one who plummeted to the depths of her own hell and came back to tell the story.

And tell it she does in a book which takes its title from "Renaissance," a poem by Edna St. Vincent Millay about death and rebirth: "A Glad Awakening" (Doubleday, $16.95).

"When you come back from something that was as disagreeable and unsettling as my alcoholism, when you come back to health from that, everything is so much more valuable," she said. "It's like the person who recovers from cancer."

"Today I know I could have died, whether it was my cancer and mastectomy, which was the first thing that confronted me, or the alcoholism. ... Either one of them is a miraculous recovery, and you have to have a lot of gratitude."

HER PAINFULLY candid book, which she admits she could not write until now, is part of her newfound philosophy tied to the Alcoholics Anonymous maxim that "you can't keep it if you don't give it away."

Her greatest accomplishment, the Betty Ford Center in Palm Springs, has become a symbol of hope for the famous and not-so-famous who flock there for treatment. And her personal appearances have been known to inspire the hopeless to seek help. Yet she shrugs off with genuine modesty efforts to cast her in the role of miracle worker.

"People who get well often say, 'You saved my life,' and 'You've turned my life around,'" she says. "They don't realize we merely provided the means for them to do it themselves and that's all. That's a God-given gift as far as I'm concerned. I don't take any credit for providing anything that wasn't provided to me."

In April 1978, Mrs. Ford was an alcoholic who was also addicted to prescription drugs. Most of her days were lived in a stupor. Her children recall her shuffling around in her bathrobe, slurring her words, popping pills and refusing meals in favor of a drink. Once an ornament of Washington society, she now refused invitations, and many invitations stopped coming.

"For months I had been withdrawing," she recalls in her book. "As I got sicker, I gradually stopped going to lunch; I wouldn't see friends. I was putting everyone out of my life."

FINALLY, TERRIFIED that they were losing her, Betty Ford's family intervened.

Her book opens with "the intervention," the painful day when former President Gerald R. Ford and their children, Susan, Jack, Steve and Mike, confronted her with her addiction and insisted she seek help.

She resisted, and when she consented to see doctors from the Long Beach Naval Hospital she met them "sedated to the teeth."

The grim details are recounted — the detoxification in which she vomited and "shook so much I didn't need an electric toothbrush." But most of Betty Ford's story is of recovery — the road back that led her into the work of helping others.

BETTY FORD
... "A Glad Awakening"

She went public almost immediately and now seems surprised at her own courage. When her friends, industrialist Leonard Firestone and Dr. Joseph Cruise, the doctor who treated her, suggested naming the new treatment facility in Palm Springs "The Betty Ford Center" she had some reluctance. It had been only a few years since she admitted her own problem.

"They were very brave and I was very brave too," she said. "They had more confidence in me than maybe I had in myself."

The confidence paid off. The Betty Ford Center has become world famous for rescuing such stars as Elizabeth Taylor from the ravages of prescription drugs and alcohol. A recent arrival was Tammy Bakker, wife of deposed TV evangelist Jim Bakker.

MRS. FORD ACKNOWLEDGES that celebrities, including herself, put the place in headlines. But she also points out that celebrities comprise only 1 percent of some 5,000 persons who have been treated since the center opened in 1982 in a 14-acre campus-like setting adjoining the Eisenhower Medical Center.

The center is only a few minutes' drive from the Fords' home in Rancho Mirage, and Mrs. Ford spends at least three days a week there when she's in town.

"I'm on a book tour now," she said. "I have learned in my recovery that I can't do everything and be everywhere. ... My own wellness comes first."

Mrs. Ford said she has never felt she was slipping back into her old habits. "I have not been plagued with a desire to drink or use pills," she says. "I know that for my body they can be very detrimental. In any rational thinking, there's no reason I would choose to pick up that glass or those pills."

"My sobriety brings a lot of balance in my life which gives me a lot of serenity. For me to use either alcohol or drugs would only mess up my life."

Her book is dedicated to her family, and Mrs. Ford credits her husband and children for making her recovery possible. Much of the book is told through their voices.

From sap to syrup

GILMAN, Vt. (AP) — About 40 gallons of sap are required to produce one gallon of pure maple syrup.

A single sugar maple tree can yield as much as 12 gallons of maple sap each year, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp., a forest products firm.

Sugar maples are also prized for their wood, which often is used to make fine furniture.

Between the Lines

The story behind the story

By Josie

Q. I'm a big fan of Lea Thompson's. Could you give me some info on her? Ken Nelletti, Naugatuck, Conn.

A. She's 25, from Rochester, Minn., the youngest of five children, all of whom were encouraged to become active in some form of creative expression. She chose dancing and started ballet training at the age of 9. At 17, she won a scholarship to the Pennsylvania Ballet Company in Philadelphia, followed by invitations to dance with the Ballet Repertory Company in New York and the San Francisco Ballet. At 20, though, she realized that she didn't have what it takes to become a great dancer and moved to New York to try acting instead.

She worked as a waitress to support herself and did a few commercials. Movie roles came quickly thereafter: her debut in "Jaws 3-D," then "All the Right Moves," "The Wild Life," "Red Dawn," "Back to the Future," "SpaceCamp" and the current "Some Kind of Wonderful." She also has a European film, "The Yellow Pages," set for release over here, and very tentative plans to recreate her role in the planned sequel to "Back to the Future."

She was, until recently, linked to actor Dennis Quaid, whom she met in "Jaws 3-D."

Rosalind Russell

Q. I am a Rosalind Russell fan and would like to know all about her. Darla Sanders, Ontario, Ore.

A. She was born in Waterbury, Conn., one of seven children of a successful trial lawyer and his wife. She was a tomboy and a champion diver while in her teens, but during her sophomore year at Marymount College she became interested in acting. She switched to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York, did some summer stock in Saranac Lake, and in 1929 made her Broadway debut, appropriately enough, in a play called "Talent."

Four years later, she moved to Hollywood, where she was screen-tested and signed by MGM. In 1934 she made her movie debut in "Evelyn Prentice," and had her first hit two years later with "Craig's Wife." Over the next 10 years, Russell established a sharp-tongued, savvy screen persona in a number of hits such as "The Women" and "His Girl Friday."

Her movie career waned in the late '40s, though, and she returned to the stage. In 1953, she had a hit with "Wonderful Town," followed by "Auntie Mame" in 1956; and these hits brought her back to the movies, in the film version of "Auntie Mame," "A Majority of One," "Five Finger Exercise" and "Gypsy," among others.

She became ill with a severe form of arthritis and then cancer during the '60s, but she kept working. Her last professional appearance was in the 1972 movie "The Crooked Hearts." She died of cancer in 1976 and was survived by her husband, producer Frederick Brisson, and their son Lance.

Jameson Parker

Q. Please tell me if Jameson Parker is married, how old he is and where he grew up. I think he's gorgeous. Leanne Miller, Pomona, Calif.

A. He's 38, was born in Baltimore but grew up around Europe — his father was in the foreign service — and Washington, D.C. He also spent time in Wisconsin while attending Beloit College — a stint that was interrupted when he fell while climbing into the women's dorm, hurt his knee and had to return home to D.C. to recuperate. He has settled down significantly in recent years, however. He's married to actress-photographer Bonnie Dottley and they have two sons, 8 and 4, and a 6-month-old daughter.

David Letterman

Q. Please settle a question for me. David Letterman always refers to his wife and four children, but my friends say this isn't true. Are they right? If so, does he live with his mother? Mrs. Alton Williams, Lancaster, Ohio

A. As we go to press, he isn't married and doesn't have four children. He also doesn't live with his mother. He lives with long-time girlfriend and "Late Night" writer/segment producer Merrill Markoe.

Q. Please tell me about John Lone. I thought he was great in "Year of the Dragon." D.M., Waterbury, Conn.

A. His real name is Wu Kuo Liang, he was born in 1952, which, coincidentally, was the year of the dragon, and he's from Hong Kong, where he was apprenticed to a strict theater company at the age of 9. After 10 years of living with the company in isolation from the rest of the world, he escaped, caught up with Western ways by watching three American movies a day, and worked as a stunt double to earn plane fare to L.A. Once there, he studied English, worked with a theater company, did a little TV, and the movie "Promises to Keep."

Soon afterward, he moved on to New York, where he worked with Joe Papp's Public Theater as an actor and director. His movie breakthrough was the starring role in (a box-office failure) "Ice Man," followed by "Year of the Dragon." Next up are Bernardo Bertolucci's epic "The Last Emperor" and an Australian film, "Shadows of the Peacock," both due for release later this year.

Ann Corio

Q. Can you tell me whatever happened to Ann Corio, the burlesque queen? Hugh L. Bender, Thornville, Ohio

A. She's been touring the last few years in a show called "This Was Burlesque" and acting as consultant to other burlesque shows. According to her manager, she decided to take the last year off and just rest at her home in New Jersey. "We're talking about her going back to work later this year, though," as he explains it. "She's not the kind of person to retire."

Michelle Phillips is still rockin'

By Linda-Marie Singer

"Pretend it's yours until she leaves," Michelle Phillips pleads with a slight giggle, placing the cigarette far away from her reach.

Chynna, the actress's 18-year-old daughter by her first husband, "Papa" John Phillips, rushes into the dining room, takes one look at her mother, and then at the cigarette.

"Mom, what time do the carpets and drapes arrive?" Relieved at not being accused of smoking, "Mom" checks her watch and smiles demurely: "Sometime this afternoon, Honey."

Chynna snuggles up and kisses her on the cheek. "Isn't it amazing what new carpeting and drapery can do?" Phillips says quickly, keeping a straight face.

"My mother is the finest person in the whole world!" the teen-ager yells at the top of her lungs. With that declaration, Phillips' miniature blond version speeds out the door, causing Max, the cat, to awaken from his deep slumber and spring off the pages of the L.A. Times.

Heading into the kitchen, he frightens Bubba, the Phillips' live-wire bird, who begins squawking. Corazon, another cat, flies across the kitchen floor, and gets a warm greeting from his mistress in Spanish. "I lived in Mexico for a time," Phillips says, as Dilyn Cassel, goddaughter and permanent resident of her household, enters.

"Chynna?" she calls out. "She went thataway." Phillips explains, pointing her finger. "Isn't it nice to have a houseful of kids?" she asks, popping open a bottle of beer while inhaling the last drags of the cigarette.

Ashes spill on the oak table, but she pays no attention. Her answer phone beeps every so often, while Chynna and Dilyn spurt intermittently into the room. The actress remains calm, content, enjoying all this silliness, yet her turquoise eyes remain intent.

An easy drive from the Los Angeles airport, the Phillips' household is not what you expect in the way of "Knots Landing" opulence. That's because Phillips, who long ago was showered with the star treatment, wants her children (besides Chynna, there's 5-year-old Austin by actor Grainger Hines) to grow up "like other kids in a normal environment. "And isn't it great being so fulfilled and happy?" states the former "Mama," who, along with her then husband, John Phillips, plus Mama Cass and Denny Doherty, formed The Mamas and the Papas, one of the most pleasing musical groups of the 1960s.

Although 20 years ago she was labeled "the slim blond queen of rock and roll," now, at age 42, Michelle Phillips could pass as a soda fountain starlet of the '80s.

"She's pliable." "Hotel's" James Brolin remarked of his co-workers acting ability. That quality led to a guest-starring role in CBS's top-rated "Knots Landing." "I'm not exactly a newcomer to the industry," she says, pointing to her debut in "Valentino," starring Rudolf Nureyev. More recently in "American Anthem," film critics singled out her expressive dramatic ability.

"Just think. I practically had to be dragged on stage when The Mamas and the Papas performed. Now look. Well, I guess I never had the showman quality of John, Denny or Cass."

She pauses. "I'll tell you something about Cass. She had style. It's no secret she wanted to look more like me. But any inadequacies she thought she had were combated by being the smartest and wittiest girl with the best voice and fabulous style."

"Still, I'm stunned even today when men come up to me and say, 'Oh, Michelle, in the '60s I was so in love with you,' because I never sold myself as a sexpot. People were ready for something hip — an image that was new and had women in it. Let's face it, we didn't look dangerous. We were real cool, man. Guess I personified the flower child, the woman of that time, but I wasn't aware of it then."

John Phillips was. The moment he spotted teen-age Holly Michelle Gilliam in San Francisco, he was mesmerized. One of the "Journeyman" at the time, Phillips was 27, and married with two children. "Michelle stepped out of a dream," remarked the infatuated musician, describing their meeting. "With her long blond hair, blue eyes and high chiseled cheekbones, she looked innocent, pouty, aloof and fiery. And she was only 17."

She had a description of her own: "I never pretended to be good, but everyone thought I was because I looked so innocent," she writes in her best-selling "California Dreamin': The True Story of The Mamas and the Papas."

"If people insist on thinking of me as the innocent one, I'd say the jig's up, wouldn't you?" With her schoolgirl figure and All-American looks, the entertainer still drives men to distraction, and seems to enjoy every moment. Yet while her publicized romances with Warren Beatty, Jack Nicholson and Mick Jagger are a thing of the past, she savors the memories and dwells on the positive.

"I bet you've never interviewed a person who feels better about herself," she states, sipping a beer. "It's all so simple and dates way back to people always giving me enormous amounts of love and affection. Especially when my mother died. (Her older sister Russell lives nearby and is a lawyer.) I was very young and was looked upon as a 'half-orphan.' Everyone perceived I was needy emotionally and made me the recipient of love. That's exactly how I'm raising my family."

"That love also accounts for my fiery relationship with men."

Warren (Beatty) liked the fact that I was family-oriented. He knew I could be a real glamour puss, but he never expected me to have a house filled with children. It's fair to say that when I knew him, he was craving a little... family... something more intimate than a bunch of girls running around his apartment. Yes, I wanted to have a child with him, but it never worked out."

It did when she caught sight of actor Grainger Hines driving in Beverly Hills one day. "I was in my car talking to my agent Warren Seabury when we stopped on Olympic Boulevard. Suddenly I saw this handsome man and I remember saying, 'Hey! Look at that guy!' Warren knew him and just like that yelled out 'Grainger, this is Michelle Phillips. Why don't you come on over to her house and have a drink?'"

"Almost immediately I realized that here was a man different from the rest. (After John Phillips she wed and divorced actor Dennis Hopper within eight days. "My dad (Gil Gilliam) predicted I would be embarrassed for a few weeks and then it would blow over. He was right." Next came a two-year marriage to radio executive Bob Burch.)

"Let me tell you something about Grainger Hines. He's sweet, funny and such a doll." She laughs. She knows what's next. "So I took him to a bar, plied him with three martinis before I even bought up the subject of having a baby. (Austin is a product of their love relationship.)"

Yes, you can learn to use chopsticks

By Frances Sheridan Goulart

"Light, smooth and dainty, chopsticks are marvelous implements for stir-frying, shallow-frying and deep-frying," says Irene Kuo, author of "The Key to Chinese Cooking." "They may be used to slip around and under cuts of ingredients in fast tossing and turning motions. They are wonderful for preparing food — they whip, beat, stir and mix like a dream." But they can be a nightmare if you don't know how to use the insidious alternatives to the occidental knife/fork/spoon.

Primary eating tools for more than a quarter of the world's population in China, Korea, Vietnam and Japan, chopsticks are the subjects of legends, rituals and rules of etiquette. No one knows their exact origin, but they were in use in China as early as 400 B.C. "I imagine someone pulled two twigs off a tree and used them to pluck food out of the fire," says Elizabeth Andoh, who teaches Japanese cooking at the Culinary Center in New York City.

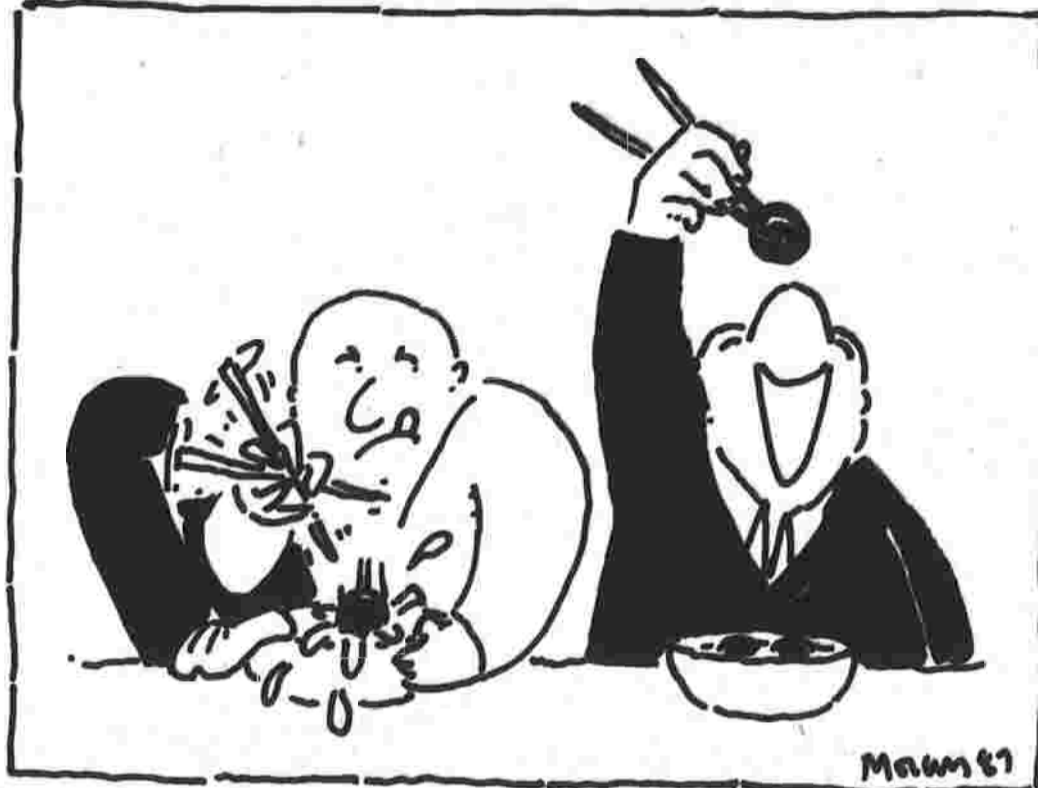

By 500 A.D., chopsticks were in use in all Asian countries. The simplicity of these 10-inch kuazi ("tongs") appealed to the esthetic Japanese, who called them hashi, meaning bridge — chopsticks being the bridge between bowl and mouth. The Japanese also shortened them a few inches and tapered their square tops and round bottoms to stiletto-like points.

Traditionally chiseled from bamboo, cedar, sandalwood, teak, pine or bone, chopsticks are often elegantly finished or lacquered. In Korea, stainless-steel chopsticks are de rigueur, and wealthy Asians often use chopsticks of gold, jade, bronze, brass, agate or ivory. In Nara, Japan, they use deer antlers; according to medical folklore, antlers contribute to good health.

Today, chopsticks are most often found in plastic, lacquered or plain bamboo. Bamboo, for example, isn't elegant, but it's very practical — less slippery, easy to maintain, inexpensive and widely available; good for cooking as well as eating. Most are 10 1/2 inches long, square on the top half for holding and round on the bottom half for eating or cooking.

What's the knack of using chopsticks? The right grip. Once you've got that, you're on your way to polishing off rice and beans and slippery noodles like a Chinatown pro. Here's the technique you can teach yourself in 10 minutes flat:

1. The principle: Hold both sticks in one hand but keep one stick firm and stationary at the bottom and the other movable on top, so that the space between the ends may be widened and tightened to let them slip over, pick up and grip food like a pair of tongs. For eating, they should be held three-quarters of the way up from the lower tips, leaving about four inches free and clear; for cooking, they should be held halfway down from the top, leaving about six inches.

Get the right grip and you're on your way

2. The correct basic grip: First stiffen your hand with your fingers pointed straight forward. Curl back your fingers, except your thumb, and part them slightly into two units, with your curved index fingertip resting over the first joint of your curved middle finger as one unit, and your curved fourth fingertip resting over your curved little finger as another unit, leaving a small gap between the two.

Place the upper part of one chopstick within the crook of your thumb; rest the lower part over your fourth finger, keeping the stick firm by pressing down with the base of your thumb and pressing up with your fourth finger, reinforcing the pressure with your little finger acting as a supporter. Place the other chopstick over the first joint of your middle finger, bring your index finger over the stick and close your thumb tip over it to form a triangle hold, as if you were holding a pencil for writing.

To widen the space between the tips for grasping food, lift the top unit by tilting up and stretching middle finger forward.

To narrow the gap for holding the food, bring the top unit down by dropping middle finger over the bottom stick. In each case your middle finger is the controlling factor. Your index finger and thumb tip are stabilizers. With the middle finger, they keep the movable stick in place.

3. Picking up food. Chopsticks can also be used to pick up any kind of cut-up tidbit. For chunks, cubes, slices and shreds, use the basic hold, widen to appropriate width, slip over the piece or pieces, then tighten the ends to hold the food securely. For minced ingredients and rice, use the basic hold, widen the space to about two inches, slip the chopsticks around the food, then tighten the gap slowly in a scraping motion to scoop up the food over the chopsticks.

For larger pieces of meat or poultry, use the basic hold; push the tips of the sticks through the meat and widen them to separate one piece partially from the main body; then slip chopsticks over the separated pieces, tighten the ends and pull the piece off completely.

There is more than one way to master and maneuver chopsticks — some subtle variation may work better for you — but the bottom line is keep your bottom chopstick firm and the top one loose enough to move. Practice makes perfect. Now that you've got a grip on the grip, here's how to put it to good use:

PERFECT BROWN RICE
1 1/2 cups raw brown rice
1 egg
3 1/2 cups hot water or broth
1 tablespoon oil or butter

Combine egg and rice and saute over moderate heat in a deep 1 1/2-quart saucepan until rice grains are dry and separate. Add broth and oil or butter. Bring to a boil. Remove from heat. Cover pot and place in a 350F oven. Rice is ready in 45 minutes. Fluff with chopsticks and add soy sauce and dig in.

Makes about 3 cups. Leftovers may be frozen. Steam 10 minutes to reheat. Yield: 4 cups.

Variation: Substitute long-grained white rice and reduce cooking time to 20 minutes.

We have created one of the most respected, dependable and most complete optical laboratories and visual care centers in Connecticut. For many years our motto was "If It's Made of Glass We'll Grind It." With the advent of plastic lenses it became necessary to amend our motto to include plastic. We fully intend to incorporate our laboratory to accommodate additional lens materials as they are developed.

We stay on top of research and development in the field of visual care. We have patterns for over 3,000 different shapes of frames, plus over 1,000 eyeglass frames on display, hard and soft contact lenses, sunglasses, plus hearing aids. Optical Style Bar has two convenient locations to serve you: 783 Main St. and 191 Main St., both in Manchester. Between the two stores, one store is always at your service six days a week.

The aspects indicate that you may profit in a large way in the year ahead through a confidential arrangement. Don't spoil your luck by talking about it to too many outsiders.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A promising joint venture may be put together today through unique circumstances. What you have been lacking, a co-contributor is about to supply. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Two people, both from distant places, are about to enter your life. You could meet one or both today. Their influence on your affairs will be favorable.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Things are starting to change, and you're going to fare much better than you thought from an arrangement that has had you guessing. Hold happy thoughts.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your judgment is exceptionally keen today. Don't doubt the wisdom of your decisions, even if you have to make them under pressure.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Although funds aren't apt to be poured into your lap today, there will be several lucrative opportunities around you that could make for a heavier wallet.

Sexuality

Completely closed hymen is rare

Sexually inexperienced women should go for a pelvic exam

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I read that it is impossible for some girl virgins to have sex and that girls should be checked for this before having sex. Is this true?

DEAR READER: It is a good idea for a woman to have a pelvic examination before beginning sexual intercourse, just to make sure that everything is healthy and in good working order. This is also a good time for a woman to learn about her personal fertility cycles and the contraceptive options available. If she is not yet clear about these matters...

Only a very few young women have a vagina that is completely closed by a hymen (a thin membrane at the vaginal opening). One early sign of this condition is if a girl does not begin menstruating around the same age as her mother, sisters or friends did, even though she has all the other signs of pubertal development. This condition is easily diagnosed by a gynecological exam and treated by minor surgery.

Pain scares her

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 21, have been married for a year and am still a virgin. I've known my husband for six years and he is very understanding about this, but he has waited so long. Isn't there some operation I can have so I won't feel the pain the first time? That's what frightens me. Everyone thinks I'm on birth control, but we don't have a baby because we have not made love. We do other things, but when he is ready to enter, I scream and never let him. Isn't there some way I will not feel pain the first time so we can live a normal life and have a child?

DEAR READER: Researchers aren't sure how many unconsummated marriages there are, but this clearly is not a rare problem. For example, Masters and Johnson have reported on many such cases, one of which was a marriage of 17 years' duration. Couples delay seeking help out of embarrassment, but the problem doesn't correct itself. Moreover, it is not unusual for the male partner to develop erection problems because of his hesitancy to cause pain to the woman he loves.

The Kinsey Report

The truth is that sex doesn't always hurt the first time; however, any woman who expects pain unconsciously tightens her vaginal muscles so that penetration becomes painful and is either extremely difficult or impossible.

Surgery to remove the hymen (a thin membrane partially covering the vaginal opening in young girls) is usually not effective for two reasons: Most young women have little or no hymenal tissue by the time they reach adulthood; and the fear of penetration remains, even after the surgery.

Vaginismus is the name given to the condition in which a woman involuntarily tightens the vaginal opening. It is treated by teaching the woman how to gradually stretch these muscles, so that she learns that intercourse need not be painful. Homework exercises also are assigned, so that the couple very slowly progresses to intercourse. This therapy has a high rate of success, primarily because the couple receives accurate information about anatomy and sexual functioning to replace the myths that often caused the original fear.

Call the nearest medical school or large hospital and ask to make an appointment with the staff member who treats vaginismus. The evaluation will include a pelvic examination, so that if you need minor surgery for the hymen, it can be done.

However, the real value of such a specialty clinic is that it provides counseling and support, not just any needed surgery. The psychological help is most likely to improve your married life and help you to begin having children.

Can't please wife

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I have been happily married for 20 years, but lately my wife expresses dissatisfaction with our sexual activity. I, too, feel that we could use some innovation. Is there a book that would help revitalize our marriage? (We both still work OK, so I don't think we need therapy.)

DEAR READER: Many couples report that the frequency of sexual activity declines over the years of a long-term relationship. It is not yet clear how much of this change is due to external factors (such as demands of career and family), physical factors (such as a need for increased physical stimulation as we age) or psychological factors (feeling bored with a family sexual routine).

There are many books about sexual enrichment for long-term couples. One -- "Love, Sex and Aging" by Edward M. Brecher (Little, Brown and Co.) -- is based on a survey of Americans over 50. It includes clear explanations of physical factors and suggestions for enhancement behaviors that were successful for the individuals surveyed.

"The Joy of Sex," by Alex Comfort (Simon & Schuster), while not specific to a particular age group, contains many examples of techniques and good basic information about sexual functioning.

Most bookstores and public libraries have these books (or could get them for you), as well as several others. If reading such material doesn't help, consider a visit or two to a sex therapist or marital counselor. Many clinicians report high success rates in a few visits for programs that focus on sexual enrichment.

"This is also a good time for a woman to learn about her personal fertility cycles and the contraceptive options available, if she is not yet clear about these matters."

Disagree on sex

DEAR DR. REINISCH: My lady friend and I disagree about sexual matters. Even though she was married before, she insists that having sex when it is daylight or when the lights are on is "kinky." I say it's not.

This has become annoying to me and I'm seeking suggestions as to how I can convince her that I'm right. I suspect that we have had different upbringings, since we are of different races.

DEAR READER: Partners frequently disagree about what is normal sexual behavior. Some data suggest that racial groups differ on these matters, but much more of the difference is caused by individuals' educational background and gender.

For example, research has reported that 45 percent of men prefer to have at least some light available during sex, while only 17 percent of women prefer this. Researchers have speculated that this may be because males have a higher need for visual stimulation for arousal, whereas women may have a greater need for physical stimulation from touching.

Regardless of the reason, such disagreements need to be resolved if they intrude on a couple's sexual satisfaction. This is not usually resolved by having one partner produce data that "proves" a point; the other partner ends up feeling inadequate or coerced into doing something that he or she is uncomfortable about.

It's better for the relationship if a compromise can be negotiated so that both partners' personal values are fully, carefully and fairly included. This usually requires the help of a third person who is not a part of the relationship. Friends and relatives are not successful in this role, since they are often seen as siding with one person against the other, thus extending, not ending, the argument.

Marriage counselors, sex therapists and counselors, some clergymen and some mental-health workers have been trained to facilitate negotiations about sexual practices. A visit or two usually will resolve disagreements and help both partners to learn a great deal about sexual behavior and the incidence of various sexual techniques and needs. Such counseling also teaches communication techniques that will make it easier to resolve future disagreements.

Variety in sex

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 21 and homosexual. Several of my friends claim to be bisexual, and sometimes I think I have bisexual feelings. Do all homosexuals have these feelings, or are homosexuals and bisexuals completely different?

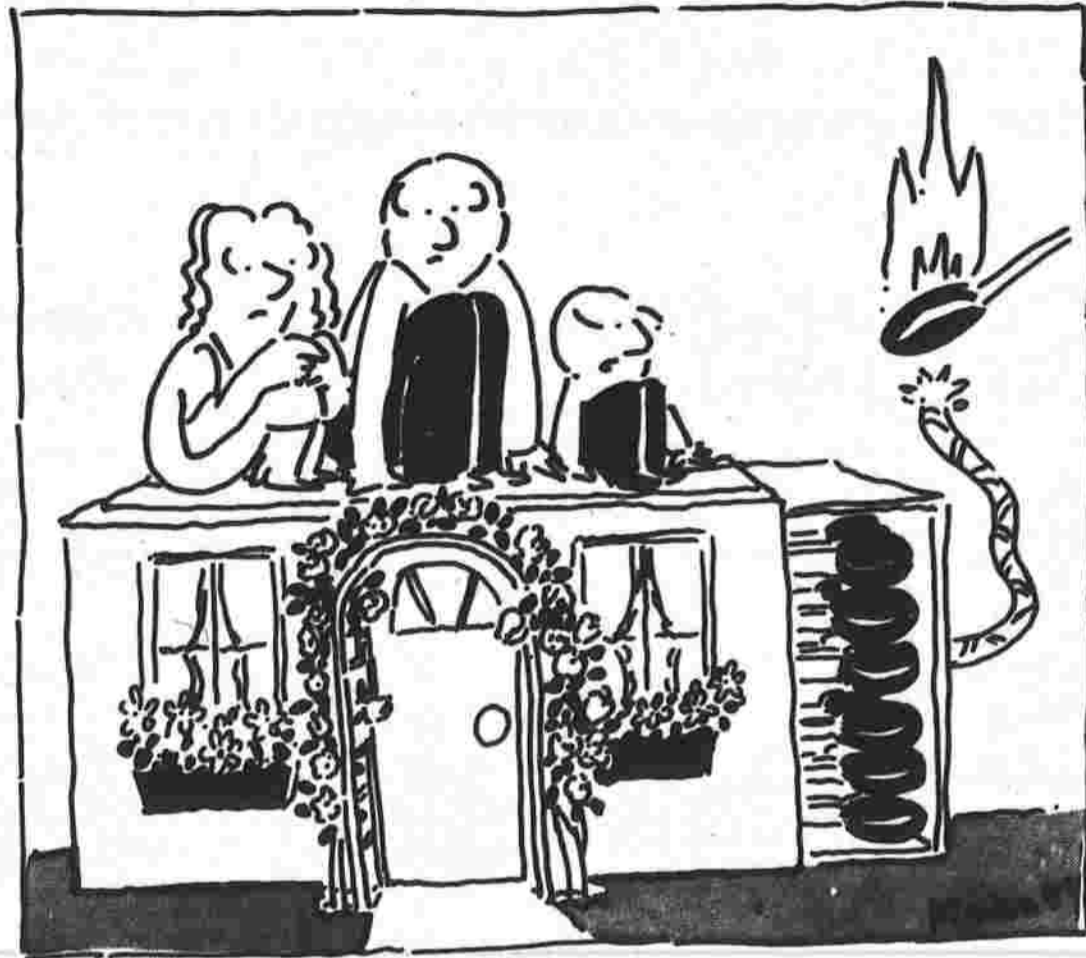

DEAR READER: There is enormous variety in the areas of sex behavior, attractions to specific partners, content of fantasies and dreams, and feelings of love. For example, it is not unusual for an individual to have only homosexual activity, but simultaneously have heterosexual fantasies and feel affection for and be attracted to members of the opposite sex.

These combinations also can change over time. Using the above example: Ten years later, the individual might engage in sexual behavior only with partners of the opposite sex, while having fantasies and feelings of love that included members of both sexes.

Researchers no longer think that people can be clearly divided into groups of homosexuals, heterosexuals and bisexuals by asking about sex of past or present sexual partners.

Just how safe is your home from a fire?

If you haven't made a safety check of your home recently, maybe it's time.

By Karen Judson

In the fall of 1986 eight people died in a fire in a Minneapolis duplex. Those who escaped the blaze said smoke alarms had been installed in the building, but did not function. A husband and father died in Oklahoma City last summer when fumes from gasoline he was using to loosen carpeting in his home were ignited by a spark from a refrigerator motor. Carbon monoxide from a faulty heating system claimed the lives of a mother and her two children in Duluth, Minn., during the 1986 Christmas holidays.

Every year newspapers are full of stories about people who die or are injured in home fires. The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) reports that 6,185 non-firefighters died in the United States as a result of fire in 1985, and 28,425 suffered fire-related injuries. In that same year, more than 600,000 fires occurred in one- and two-family dwellings and apartments, causing $3.693 billion in property loss. You may have lived happily in your home for years, content in the belief that it's fireproof. But if you haven't made a safety check recently, one or more of the following fire hazards may be threatening your family's health and safety:

Malfunctioning smoke alarms. Industry experts estimate that 75 percent of U.S. households have smoke detectors, but as many as 30 percent of those may not work because batteries are dead or have been removed. Smoke detectors operate either on batteries or on household current. Battery-operated detectors should be checked periodically to be sure the batteries are not dead (follow the manufacturer's instructions for testing — some units must be tested with a puff of smoke, while others have a button for testing). Batteries must usually be changed at least once a year. To meet laboratory approval, all battery-operated smoke detectors must produce a sound to alert you to weakening batteries — usually an intermittent beep can be heard if batteries are getting low.

Smoke detectors should be installed on the ceiling or high on a wall, near sleeping areas. Manufacturers recommend placing the detectors at least four inches from any wall when installing on the ceiling, and from four to 12 inches from the ceiling when on a wall. A smoke detector should be installed to protect each sleeping area, plus one on each additional story of the home. The NFPA cautions that smoke detectors, once installed, must be maintained to work properly. Spider webs and dust can impair the sensitivity of detectors unless you clean them periodically by vacuuming the Improperly installed or maintained heaters, wood burners and chimneys. Woodstoves and space heaters are widely used, due to energy conservation concerns; but as use has increased, so has risk of fire. The following checklist can help minimize the risks:

1. Never use gasoline to clean metal parts, to remove adhesives or to start fires in refuse barrels, fireplaces, wood stoves or barbecue grills. Use it only as a fuel, and only in equipment designed to run on gasoline.
2. Don't use a flammable liquid near a flame or source of sparks, including hidden sources such as water heater pilot lights, electric motors or heater.
3. Always refuel gasoline-powered equipment or kerosene space heaters outdoors. Never refuel power mowers, chain saws, motorbikes or space heaters while they are running.

Dining In

These mighty main dishes use meat

By Janet Lorimer

Although I frequently cook meatless dishes, I'm not averse to trying a new meat dish now and then. Here is a selection of recipes for beef, chicken and seafood. Each recipe is just a tad unusual, I think, which also makes this collection quite interesting. The first recipe is a beef-broccoli extravaganza. It looks gorgeous when you serve it. I have several variations of the same recipe and each one is delicious. It may appear to be a complicated dish, but it's not. Do allow ample time for preparation, especially all the slicing. As you put the dish together, you'll have to work fast, but on the other hand, I've never had a failure with it. Also, this is the only broccoli recipe that my resident broccoli hater will eat. Furthermore, she usually asks for seconds. What cook could ask for more?

ORIENTAL BEEF BROCCOLI WITH MUSHROOMS
 1 large head fresh broccoli
 1 pound fresh mushrooms
 1 pound round or cross rib steak
 dash cooking oil
 1/2 cup soy sauce
 2 tablespoons oyster sauce (optional)
 dash pepper
 3 cups beef broth
 1/4 cup cornstarch (more if needed)
 2 packages Chukka Soba noodles (or substitute brown rice*)

Japanese noodle that resembles thick spaghetti noodles — sort of. I can find them in the Oriental section of my supermarket. To cook them, boil water in a large pot. Also, have ready a hot skillet with a dash of oil (1-2 teaspoons). When water is boiling, add the noodles and cook for only 45 seconds. Drain the noodles immediately into a colander. Put them right into the skillet with the hot oil. Cook for two minutes, stirring and turning the noodles constantly until they are crisp and browned on each side. Arrange the cooked noodles on a large platter and pour the beef broccoli over them. Serve at once. Serves 6-8. Here's a nice, easy chicken recipe. Can a cook ever have too many of these?

CHICKEN BAKE
 1/2 cup whole-wheat flour
 dash salt and pepper
 dash paprika
 2 1/2-3-pound frying chicken, cut up dash oil
 1 cup chopped onion
 1/2 cup chopped carrots
 1/2 cup sliced mushrooms
 1/2 tablespoon honey
 1/4 teaspoon ginger
 1/2 cup orange juice concentrate
 1/4 cup water

Mix together flour, salt, pepper and paprika. Remove 2 tablespoons seasoned flour mix and set aside. Pour the rest of the seasoned flour into a bag, add the chicken pieces and shake bag to coat chicken. In skillet, heat oil and brown the floured chicken pieces. Remove chicken from pan and place it in a 2-quart casserole. To drippings, add onion, carrots and mushrooms. Saute vegetables until tender. Add reserved flour mix, honey and ginger. Add orange juice and water. Cook, stirring until sauce bubbles. Pour vegetable sauce over chicken and bake in a covered pan for about 1 hour or until chicken is done. Serves 4. Who says real men don't eat quiche? This recipe will woo everyone.

CRABMEAT QUICHE
 1 teaspoon butter
 2 tablespoons onion, finely chopped
 3 eggs, beaten
 1 cup sour cream

Janet Lorimer uses few meat dishes. These are her favorites.

1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 dash salt (optional)
 1 cup cooked crabmeat
 1 cup Swiss cheese, grated
 1 9" pie shell, unbaked

Melt butter and saute onion. In bowl, beat eggs and add sour cream, Worcestershire sauce, salt and crabmeat. Pour into unbaked pie shell. Top with cheese. Bake at 300F 55-60 minutes or until set. Serves 6-8. If you like seafood, you'll love this casserole.

TREASURED SEAFOOD CASSEROLE
 1 cup uncooked brown rice
 3 tablespoons butter
 1 onion, chopped
 1/2 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
 2 tablespoons lemon juice
 1 cup chicken broth
 2 tablespoons flour
 1/4 cup water
 1/2 cup dry white wine
 1/2 clove garlic, finely minced
 1/4 teaspoon marjoram
 3 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
 2 cups shrimp or crab.

Cook rice according to package directions. Heat butter in large skillet and saute onion and mushrooms. Add lemon juice, chicken broth, flour, water and wine. Stir well. Add garlic and marjoram and continue cooking until sauce is thickened. Add 2 tablespoons of the Parmesan cheese, the parsley and the seafood. Fold in the cooked rice and spoon mixture into a buttered casserole dish. Bake, covered, at 350F for 30 minutes. Uncover dish and sprinkle over the top a mixture of the bread crumbs and the remaining 1 tablespoon Parmesan cheese. Return dish to oven and cook, uncovered, for a few more minutes until topping is golden. Serves 6. I have a weakness for scampi because it contains so many of my favorite ingredients. Here's a different kind of scampi that uses scallops instead of shrimp.

SCALLOP SCAMPI
 1 pound scallops
 1-2 cloves garlic, finely minced
 2 tablespoons olive oil
 3 tablespoons white wine
 1/4 teaspoon oregano
 dash paprika

Arrange the scallops in a single layer in the bottom of a shallow baking dish. In a separate bowl mix together garlic, olive oil, wine and oregano. Pour this mixture over the scallops. Sprinkle with paprika. Place under broiler element and broil about 10-12 minutes without turning. Garnish with lemon wedges. Serves about 4. ■

The Secret of My Success (PG-13) As the slickly manipulative, money-obsessed Alex on "Family Ties," Michael J. Fox captures the quintessential yuppie in all his questionable charm. Fox's newest movie role continues the actor's incarnation of yuppiedom, as an ambitious Kansas farmboy who becomes a top New York executive virtually overnight.

A '60s-style comedy about climbing the proverbial corporate ladder, "The Secret of My Success" was written by Jim Cash and Jack Eps ("Top Gun," "Legs! Eagles") who, depending on your point of view, have either been surprisingly resourceful at recycling old Hollywood cliches for a late-'80s audience, or surpassingly shameless.

"The Secret of My Success" is nothing if not blatant. Right at the start the movie tries to show us how tough the Big Apple is: While Fox is in a phone booth talking to his mother back in Kansas, a robbery and shootout take place around him. It would have been more than enough to show a few cops chasing a robber, but instead we are shown a virtual war zone to make the satiric point.

The film's blithe view of cutthroat corporate politics and white-collar backbiting might be considered intriguingly cynical if Fox's character weren't so thoroughly sentimentalized. Pretending to be a new executive (he has merely been hired for the mailroom), he uses his masquerade to woo a dressed-for-success go-getter of a junior executive (Helen Slater).

The Fox character is a worm we're asked to find adorable. If you think the movie through, it can leave a bad taste in your mouth—lying, cheating and sleeping with the boss's wife are all shown to be mere pretenses to a happy all-American future in business.

An overnight party sequence on a country estate fleetingly suggests the sparkle of Americanized French farce, and a few of the performances give the movie a lift. As Fox's boss, the estimable Richard Jordan is suavely snaky, and, as his oversexed wife (who's like a Mrs. Robinson to Fox), Margaret Whitton make a trite role seem almost fresh. Helen Slater (who should play Lady Di sometime) is not so fortunate. An '80s cliché, she's the all-business career woman who has become an Ice princess—waiting, of course, for Michael J. Fox to warm her up. Grade: **

Wild Thing (PG-13) This self-described fairy tale for adults was written by John Sayles, the director of serious, low-budget independent films like "Return of the Secaucus Seven," and scriptwriter of witty B-movies like "The Howling."

"Wild Thing" is in the B-movie tradition, using the format of a tawdry, stylized urban melodrama to tell a futuristic Tarzan/Robin Hood story. The main character is a boy orphan who grows up in a surreal inner-city ghetto known as "The Zone" to become a faceless hero of the community.

Sayles and director Max Reid toss in some clever bits. There's a progressive-liberal cast to the whole film, and an occasional line of dialogue sounds as though it's been lifted from R.D. Laing. It's the kind of movie you're content to pass the time with late at night on TV. If you watch the movie with any attentiveness, though, you're likely to notice that its smart, apocalyptic surface masks a stale and sappy core. Grade: **

New home video

She's Got to Have It (R) Key, $79.98. Spike Lee's low-budget 1986 release is both a piquant valentine to a sexy and free-spirited black woman (Tracy Camilla Johns) and a very funny razzing of the three black men who want to possess her. Offhand and funky, yet lyrical, the movie offers a new-style black heroine—a modern, independent, middle-class woman without a trace of Hollywood's black stereotypes. Grade: ****½

Film grading: **** excellent, *** good, ** fair, * poor.

Drama, violence in 'Scene'

By Bob Thomas
The Associated Press

A 13-year-old schoolboy rides his bicycle through an idyllic French countryside, pausing to rest at an abandoned building. He suddenly is seized by a desperate young criminal, hiding out after a prison escape. Bring me money, the young man orders, and the terrified boy swears that he will.

Thus is set in motion the dramatic, ultimately violent events of "Scene of the Crime," a new film from France by Andre Techine. The stars are glamorous figures from two eras of French films: Catharine Deneuve and Danielle Darrieux.

The violence is played against the domestic drama of an unhappy family. The divorced Deneuve operates a rural nightclub while trying to raise her unhappy son. Her parents are Darrieux, who struggles vainly to solve her daughter's and grandson's problems, and Jean Bousquet, a misanthropic farmer who thinks they're all idiots. Living nearby is Deneuve's unhelpful ex-husband (Victor Lanoux), who is intent on seducing her.

Much of the film is seen through the frightened eyes of young Thomas, played with unaffected intensity by Nicolas Giraudi. When he returns with the money, the escapee (Wadeck Stancazi) appears with a partner, who panics and tries to strangle the boy. The partner is killed instead.

The lives of the mother and the convict inevitably converge, and their love-making is witnessed by the son. In the end, one of the lovers is dead, and the other is sent to a living death.

The script by Techine, Pascal Bonitzer and Oliver Assayas adroitly probes the complexities of the relationships, with emphasis on mother and son. That is the best element of "Scene of the Crime," which regrettably slides into melodrama and excessive coincidence. But Techine knows how to exact the best from his accomplished cast, and the acting is superb.

Deneuve is triumphant as the woman who insists on deciding her own destiny, despite the advice of her mother, former husband and the police. Darrieux, star of such classics as "Mayerling" (1936) and "La Ronde" (1950), provides depth and dignity as the grandmother. Nicolas Giraudi is miraculous as Thomas, his face reflecting all the perplexities of a troubled youth.

The Kino International release lacks an American rating, but it is meant for mature audiences. In French with subtitles. Running time: 99 minutes.

Ask yourself the right question
By James Jacoby

Here's another thing to consider. Although the East hand is a little spotty for an overall (that A-Q-10-7-6 won't take many tricks if South holds K-J-9-5 behind it). East certainly would like to have his partner lead a club if South becomes declarer. Furthermore, East does have the plus of favorable vulnerability. Being not vulnerable against vulnerable opponents really does give one a license to take chances. Therefore, East should risk a two-club overcall. A club lead would stop any chance of South's making four spades, and the only realistic game contract now would be for North to play three no-trump, which would have nine tricks if East selected a club for his opening lead.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Wiping Winter Away

Spring Cleaning Jobs Should Include Car

Winter is undoubtedly the worst time of year for cars. Not only do road salt and slush attack a car's finish, they also build up in hard-to-clean areas. According to Automotive Information Council (AIC), this is one reason wheel wells are prone to rust.

The solution? AIC recommends a thorough cleaning each spring. For starters, clean those wheel wells. To do this, use a hose with a nozzle set for a full-force stream and hose down the well. Next, use a whisk broom to brush away any stubborn deposits of dirt. Once more spray to get rid of the dirt loosened by the brushing. After finishing the wheel wells, carefully spray around the moldings and trim as dirt and salt accumulate in these areas also.

Another often forgotten area is the engine. Cleaning the engine is not nearly as difficult as it sounds, and the engine will look better and run cooler. Several brands of solvents are available for this purpose. Simply spray the solvent on the engine block, wait a few minutes and hose off. Stubborn areas may take repeated applications.

When washing the car, AIC recommends using clean, soft cloths since sponges are virtually impossible to get clean. Small particles of dirt can be trapped in a sponge and damage the car's finish. Always use a large amount of water, especially when using a sponge.

Georgia Law Example of Visibility Needs

The importance of driving visibility is demonstrated by a law in Georgia requiring headlights to be turned on during any inclement weather — day or night.

For example, if precipitation is enough for windshield wipers to be used, it is enough for headlights to be on.

A public information spokesman for the state indicated that in fog or rain it is vitally important to "see" other vehicles, and when headlights are shining, it aids in "being seen."

Several other states have similar laws.

Wash Wax Off Wipers

If your automatic car wash uses liquid wax, be sure to clean the wax from your windshield and windshield wipers right after you go through the car wash, experts at Auto Glass Specialists of Madison, Wisconsin, advise.

When it rains, water mixes with the wax and smears the windshield, making it difficult to see.

because the water will lessen any scratching that may occur. Do not wash the car in direct sunlight.

Always start on the roof of the car, and clean each surface using a circular motion. Dry each area with a chamois or a soft, lint-free cloth immediately after washing. This will prevent spotting. A chamois or lint-free cloth can be purchased in any auto supply store. Windows should be cleaned with any commercially available cleaner.

After cleaning the car, AIC recommends waxing once every three to four weeks. Waxing keeps the car looking nice and makes it easier to remove the dirt accumulated between washings. Waxes should be applied with clean cloths and using a circular motion. For polishing agents, follow the instructions on the container.

Motorcyclists' Adrenalin Flows in Spring Weather

As rising temperatures bring the promise of springtime weather, adrenalin begins flowing in motorcycle enthusiasts. Motorcycles this year will probably travel more than 23 billion miles in the United States, most of it simply for enjoyment, according to market research by Champion Spark Plug Company.

Two-thirds of the two-wheel transportation is for fun, according to the survey, including 44 percent for pleasure riding on streets and highways, 18 percent for trail riding and 5 percent for hill climbing. The 67 percent devoted to pleasure is an increase from 60 percent just three years earlier.

On the flip side, 29 percent of motorcycle miles this year will probably go for basic transportation, down from 33 percent over the three-year period.

The survey also looked at the maintenance habits of motorcycle owners.

"Sometimes in their haste to get onto the roadways in spring, avid bikers overlook some preventive maintenance practices that might ensure better motoring," David Walker, Champion's director of automotive technical services, said. "For example, 50 percent of motorcycle owners have not installed new spark plugs in the past 12 months. This is one of the easiest maintenance tasks to help improve starting, acceleration and peak performance."

Driving Visibility Decreases for Older Motorists

Thanks to advancements in both engineering and medical technology, automobiles and the people who drive them are better than ever. Our cars are lasting longer and there are more older drivers on the road.

While older motorists have a relatively good driving record, they are more vulnerable to nighttime accidents than younger people because of decreased visual acuity. The National Safety Council reported 25,960 people died in nighttime accidents in 1984, compared to 20,300 during the day.

This statistical imbalance is due, in part, to reduced night vision. One study showed that 87 percent of all drivers who hit a pedestrian at night say they did not see the person in time, while only 11 percent of daytime drivers made the same claim, according to the University of California, Berkeley's School of Public Health.

In its Wellness Letter, the university states that the speed with which the eye accommodates itself to darkness starts decreasing in young childhood. In the daytime the retina resolves visual data primarily by means of cells called "cones," but at night it relies on another, more sensitive set called "rods." The older the person, the longer it may take for his eyes to make the switch. This can make driving more difficult along a road where light conditions change rapidly.

The publication says night vision deteriorates with age more rapidly than does daytime vision, a factor that older drivers must acknowledge and compensate for. Awareness of this situation is the best protection of all.

This means extra caution must be taken by older drivers who will be traveling after dark. While they cannot do anything about the normal aging process, they can take steps to improve vision. Conscientious care of the eyes is an obvious first step.

Traveling after dark in the rain is one of the most hazardous driving situations. Good windshield wipers can make the difference between a safe trip and vision-caused problems. Chattering, smearing windshield wipers not only impair vision, they also add to the stress of a dangerous journey.

Another critical factor in nighttime eyestrain is speed. At higher motoring speeds, there is a more intensely concentrated pattern to eye movements. Details of foreground vision as well as peripheral vision tend to fall away.

Slowing down can ease eyestrain as well as nervous tension on a long trip at night.

Hints to Make Windows Last

Car windows will last longer and operate more effectively if a few procedures are followed.

Make sure your car windows are rolled up before shutting your car doors. Auto Glass Specialists of Madison, Wisconsin, recommends. If you slam your car door with the window half down, the glass can break and the mechanism that controls the window can wear out.

Always shut the car door using the handle or frame, not the window glass. On hot days, open the side windows just a crack to avoid windows shattering from heat buildup.

Oil, Filter Change Are Most Popular

Far and away the most popular automotive service job is the oil and filter change, according to the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association. More than 148 million oil changes, with 99 percent of car owners requesting the oil filter be replaced at the same time, are performed annually.

Oil changes and filter replacements are among the most critical areas of car maintenance, according to the Car Care Council, which expects this trend to continue because of the popularity of four-cylinder cars. Fluids and filters are critical aspects of car care, particularly with harder working small engines.

These statistics are especially significant because automobile owners' manuals usually suggest changing the oil filter with every other oil change, but in practice, people opt for a new filter each time.

Prepare for Travel with Children

Familiar Question: 'Are We There Yet?'

"Are we there yet?" is a familiar question to any parent who has traveled by automobile with impatient children. But a few special preparations can make a more enjoyable vacation for everyone, says the Automotive Information Council (AIC).

Plan ahead by bringing along things to keep the children occupied. Coloring books, pads of paper, pencils and crayons are always good choices. Kids can record their vacation experiences by drawing pictures of what they have seen or by keeping a diary. Simple games like sporting license plates take nothing more than a piece of paper and pencil to keep score. Use the time in the car to teach children how to read maps, measure miles between towns and have them read about points of interest from guide books.

You can save money by bringing your own beverages and snack foods instead of purchasing them along the way. Foods rich in potassium and magnesium, like raisins, bananas and almonds, are said to be summer heat beaters. Also, these foods don't melt, crumble or drip on the car's interior.

Be prepared for car sickness if you are taking very young children on their first vacation by car. Pack plastic bags, mints, gum and lozenges. For other emergencies, include tissues, adhesive bandages, aspirin or aspirin substitute, antiseptic and a flashlight.

Dwight Gooden (left), shown here with Attorney Ron Caciolatore, is said to be anxious to rejoin the Mets. He'll be released from the drug rehab center on Thursday.

Gooden said to be anxious to be back with the Mets

By Rick Warner
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden will be released from a drug rehabilitation center next week, his attorney said Friday.

"I believe it's Thursday, but I don't believe the date is definite," Charles Ehrlich said in an interview from St. Petersburg, Fla. "It could be a day earlier or a day later, but it's in that time frame."

Gooden, who won the National League's Cy Young Award in 1985, was admitted to the Smithers Center for Alcohol and Drug Treatment on April 2 after he tested positive for cocaine.

Ehrlich said doctors at the center determined that Gooden was an occasional cocaine user, not an addict. "We always felt that was the case," he said. "We knew that Dwight was not a big drug user."

Ehrlich said he expects Gooden to return to the Mets within a few weeks after he is released from the center.

"He's still in good shape, but he'll need some time to get his pitching eye back," he said. Ehrlich said he is confident Gooden will be able to handle the pressure he will face when he returns to the Mets.

"Pressure is part of his business," he said. "All he's thinking about right now is getting back on the field and playing baseball again. He's feeling good. He's anxious and ready to go."

Mets spokesman Jay Horwitz would not comment on reports that Gooden would be released Thursday. Dr. Allan Lans, associate director of the center, also declined comment.

Horwitz said the Mets will know more about the 22-year-old pitcher's status after General Manager Frank Cashen talks with doctors at the Smithers Center this weekend. He also said Mets' officials will discuss Gooden's situation with baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth before making any decision about the pitcher's future.

Richard Levin, a spokesman for Ueberroth, said the commissioner will be involved in the final decision on Gooden's playing status. Gooden was not penalized by Ueberroth because he agreed to undergo treatment.

In 1985, Gooden was 24-4 with a 1.53 ERA and became the youngest player to win a Cy Young Award. Last season, he slipped to 17-6 with a 2.94 ERA and was hit hard in two World Series starts.

During the past year, Gooden has been involved in a series of off-the-field incidents, including a scuffle with police in his hometown of Tampa, Fla., last December. He was arrested and later placed on probation.

NFL draft pool is similar to last four years

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The 1987 NFL draft presents a lesson in one of professional football's most pervasive truths — it doesn't pay to be mediocre.

When representatives of the 28 teams gather at a Times Square hotel Tuesday to divide up college talent, they will find the pool similar to those in the four years since the remarkable class of 1983 that already has produced seven starting quarterbacks and 13 players who have made Pro Bowls.

That means 10 or 12 outstanding players to provide immediate help for the weakest teams; another half-dozen at a second level; 50 or so in a third group and perhaps 125 more who, with nurturing, can turn into productive NFL players.

And what that means is the middle-of-the-pack teams may have no better chance at good players than playoff teams who have shown over the past few years a sharp eye for talent, even in the lower rounds.

This year's class is led by quarterback Vinny Testaverde of Miami, the Heisman Trophy winner, who already has been signed by Tampa Bay and will be officially designated the first choice by the 2-14 Bucs when Commissioner Pete Rozelle unveils the room to order at 8 a.m. EDT.

Then the Indianapolis Colts are expected to take linebacker Cornelius Bennett of Alabama, considered by some scouts the near-equal of NFL MVP Lawrence Taylor. Or the Colts might trade the choice to someone who will take Bennett.

Beyond them, the immediate impact players seem few.

"There aren't a lot of players at the top and there really aren't a lot of players beyond them good enough so that you're sure you're getting a high quality player," says Dick Steinberg, director of player development for the New England Patriots. "I'd say it's about the same as last year — six rounds, maybe seven of players who have got a shot."

After Testaverde and Bennett come perhaps 10 players who should be instant starters.

They include two of Testaverde's Miami teammates, running back Alonzo Highsmith and defensive lineman Jerome Brown; defensive back Rod Woodson of Purdue, probably the best pure athlete in the draft; defensive lineman Reggie Rogers of Washington; running backs Brent Fullwood of Auburn and D.J.

These are some of the leading candidates for the NFL draft which will be held Tuesday in New York City.

Dozier of Penn State; and linebackers Shane Conlan of Penn State and Mike Junkin of Duke.

From then on, it becomes a guessing game, a draft full of players that combine talent with questionable attitudes, or who are a step too slow, an inch too short, 10 pounds too light or 30 pounds too heavy. It could also become a trading game — the last few years have seen plenty of first- and second-round trades.

The Super Bowl champion New York Giants, for example, had a record four second-round picks last year. They won't this year, but they have enough surplus talent to deal either up or down.

San Francisco, which kept dropping down last year, has two late first-round picks and might use them to move up for one of the top 10 players. Houston might parlay its two first-rounders into a trade to grab Bennett and Washington always is a sure bet to make some sort of deal.

This is part of the trend that favors the better teams — there are reasons for the success of the Giants, Bears, 49ers, Patriots, Broncos and Raiders and the soon-to-be success of the New Orleans Saints of General Manager Jim Finks and Coach Jim Mora.

People like Steinberg, George Young and Bill Parcells of the Giants, Bobby Beathard of the Redskins, Bill Walsh of the 49ers and, of course, Al Davis of the Raiders, almost always know where to find bodies.

"There's too much attention paid to the first round," says Young, whose Giants had just three first-round picks among their starters in the Super Bowl. But they had 12 players who were either free agents or were chosen after the fifth round.

"Maybe it's the draftniks, maybe it's the media, maybe it's the fact that it's televised. But you have to look at things as a total draft, not just the first round."

This year's draft seems deepest in linebackers and defensive linemen and thinnest in offensive linemen.

In addition to Rogers, Bennett, Conlan and Junkin, first-round talent on defense includes linemen Danny Noonan of Nebraska, Jason Buck and Sean Knight of Brigham Young and John Bosa of Boston College; and defensive end-linebacker Tony Woods of Pitt. But beyond Harris Barton of North Carolina, there are few offensive linemen that excite anyone — John Clay of Missouri is considered a monumental talent but monumental eating habits that increased his weight up to 330 pounds make him a question mark.

Beyond Testaverde, there's no sure thing at quarterback, although Kelly Stouffer of Colorado State and Chris Miller of Oregon may well be taken in the first round by teams willing to gamble. Jim Harbaugh of Michigan, John Payne of Stanford and Cody Carlson of Baylor should also go in the first few rounds.

MHS, East at New Britain Invite

NEW BRITAIN — The Manchester High and East Catholic boys' and girls' track teams will compete in the New Britain Invitational today. The meet begins at 9 a.m. This will be the second day of the two-day event, which began Friday. For the East and Manchester girls, this will mark their debut in the outdoor season.

O'Reilly signs new Bruin pact

BOSTON — Former right wing Terry O'Reilly, who was lured from the television booth to take over as coach of the Boston Bruins in November, agreed Friday to a new contract to remain bench boss of the National Hockey League club. During a brief meeting with General Manager Harry Sinden, the 35-year-old O'Reilly accepted a one-year contract with an option to coach in the 1988-89 season. "I wanted Terry back all along," Sinden said. "The decision was totally his and, needless to say, we're all thrilled." Under O'Reilly, the Bruins posted a 34-27-6 record. They finished third in the Adams Division but were eliminated in four straight games by the Montreal Canadiens in the first round of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

McCaskill on 21-day disabled list

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The California Angels announced Friday that they have placed starting pitcher Kirk McCaskill on the 21-day disabled list and recalled left-handed reliever Miguel Garcia from their Class AA affiliate in Midland, Texas. McCaskill has a bone chip on his right elbow and will undergo surgery at a future date, the Angels said. The 26-year-old right-hander was 2-4 with a 2.97 earned run average in three starts this season. Last year, he was 17-10 with a 3.36 ERA and 10 complete games.

Jets tell Johnny Lynn to retire

NEW YORK — The New York Jets have told defensive back Johnny Lynn that he should retire because of his damaged left knee. The Jets said Lynn failed a recent physical examination given by Dr. James Nicholas, the team's orthopedist. "We're not going to put a player on the field if the doctor says he can't play," Jets President Jim Kensil told Newday Thursday. Lynn, 30, underwent an arthroscopic procedure on his knee at the end of last season.

U.S. wins team diving competition

AMERSFOORT, Netherlands — The United States, led by Greg Louganis, won the team competition Friday at the FINA World Cup diving event with 374 points, with all eight American divers advancing into the first round of Saturday's individual competition. China finished in second with 372 points, and the Soviet Union third at 361 points.

Cards' Herr on 15-day disabled list

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Cardinals placed second baseman Tom Herr on the 15-day disabled list today because of a pulled groin muscle he suffered in a 5-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Thursday. To fill Herr's spot on the roster, left-hander Joe Magrane was called up from the club's Triple A affiliate in Louisville. Magrane is scheduled to start Saturday against the Mets in New York in his first major-league appearance. Herr, who injured the groin muscle while chasing a pop-up in the third inning Thursday, had appeared in each of the first 14 Cardinals games this year. He was batting .289 with seven doubles, one home run, 15 RBI and four game-winning RBIs.

Palmer undergoes knee surgery

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Arnold Palmer underwent arthroscopic surgery Friday to repair torn cartilage in his right knee. "It went beautifully. He'll be playing golf in a week," said Dr. Robert W. Murphy, who performed the surgery at the Eisenhower Medical Center. Palmer, 67, who played in Japan last week, was to be released from the hospital late Friday.

Bulls' strategy almost paid off

By Howard Ulman
The Associated Press

BOSTON — The Chicago Bulls use a strategy that works against Boston. Some day it may work so well that they actually might beat the Celtics.

The Bulls pay extra defensive attention to Boston's exceptional frontcourt of Robert Parish, Larry Bird and Kevin McHale and hope the guards lose their outside shooting touch for an evening.

It nearly worked Thursday night. The Bulls wiped out a 99-81 deficit with 7:37 left to tie the game at 100 with 2:10 to go. Boston held on for a 108-104 victory. Its 14th in a row against the Bulls, but Chicago gets another chance to make its plan work in Sunday's second game of the best-of-five, first-round NBA playoff series.

"The game plan is to make Larry put it to the floor, make him come off three or four picks and have a guy in his face to make him put it to the floor," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "Or, they'll double team Parish or McHale."

"We were tentative in the game plan in the first half," Chicago Coach Doug Collins said, "but I told the guys we had to stick to it."

The perseverance paid off as the Celtics' starting frontcourt managed just one fourth-quarter field goal. It was a big one.

Parish hit a 12-foot jumper from the right side of the lane that made the score 108-104 with 37 seconds left. It was the winning basket.

"If we were playing a lesser team, they wouldn't have made the big shots," Collins said, "but we were playing the Celtics and they've been playing that way for six or seven years."

Chicago hasn't beaten Boston since Dec. 17, 1985. Boston hasn't lost at home since last Dec. 12, winning 30 games since then.

But Chicago has Michael Jordan and, after coming so close Thursday night, it has confidence it can end that streak.

"If that doesn't give us a feeling we can beat this team..." Collins said. "We can win."

"We have to come out Sunday and get off to a good start," Jordan said.

MHS nine notches a win

ENFIELD — Finally, the Manchester High baseball team (2-5) received some solid pitching combined with good defense and registered its second win of the season Friday afternoon over Fermi High, 4-2, in CCC East Division action. The Indians will resume play Monday at 3:45 p.m. against Enfield High. Fermi drops to 1-5.

Senior right-hander Neil Archambault pitched a fine game for the Indians. Archambault allowed six hits, walked four, and struck out 10 en route to his complete-game victory. Archambault aided his own cause with two hits.

Manchester scored all the runs it needed in the second inning with the help of three Fermi errors. Sophomore Keith DiYeso reached on an error, followed by an Archambault single. Don Laurinitis reached on an error and an errant throw by the Fermi shortstop allowed DiYeso to score. A sacrifice fly by John Zak scored Archambault and Gerry Hollis' groundout scored Laurinitis.

"It was his (Archambault) best outing of the year," Indian Coach Don Race said. "Our defense was excellent. It was our first good showing." Only one of Fermi's runs was earned. Catcher Mike Charter threw out a Fermi runner trying to steal second with men on first and third and that "kind of broke their backs," according to Race.

Softball Bolton beaten

COVENTRY — The Bolton High girls' softball team (1-9) has had a rough time of it since its opening game win. The Bulldogs were trounced by Coventry High, 21-3, in five-innings Friday. Coventry is 3-1 while Bolton drops to 1-5. Bolton's next game is Tuesday at home against East Hampton.

Bolton committed 14 errors and mustered only five hits.

Lisa Talaga led the Patriots with three hits, including a triple. Kim Mizesko was the winning pitcher.

while Robin Mitchell pitched well in defeat for Bolton.

Golf

Cheney loses two

The Cheney Tech golf team dropped two matches Thursday, bowing to Coventry, 3½-1½, and to Rocky Hill, 2-2. The medalist was Kirk Demeo of Rocky Hill with a 49. Cheney's record is 2-3. Cheney's next match is Monday at Manchester Country Club against Cromwell High. The top scorers for Cheney were Scott McDermott and Steve Demko, who each shot a 47.

Games postponed

Friday's rain caused several washouts on the schoolboy schedule. The Cheney Tech-Rocky Hill baseball game scheduled Friday was postponed and has been rescheduled for Wednesday at 3 p.m. at Cheney Tech. Also, the Bolton varsity-Coventry High Junior varsity game was called after three innings and will not be made up.

The Manchester at Fermi High girls' softball game was postponed to Tuesday in Enfield at 3:30 p.m. East Catholic's girls' softball game with St. Joseph was postponed. No new date has been set.

Howe leads Flyers past Isles

By The Associated Press

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Defenseman Mark Howe scored a goal and assisted on two more and rookie goalie Ron Hextall turned in a strong performance as the Philadelphia Flyers beat the New York Islanders 4-1 Friday night to take a 2-1 lead in their second-round NHL playoff series.

The best-of-seven Patrick Division final resumes with Game 4 at Nassau Coliseum Sunday night.

Howe assisted on a first-period goal by Al Hill, then scored in the second period to give the Flyers a 2-0 lead.

Hextall, who led the NHL in victories (37), games played (69) and save percentage (.902) during the regular season, made 23 saves, giving up only a goal by Pat LaFontaine late in the second period.

The Flyers scored at 11:41 of the first period when Howe took a 60-foot shot and Hill deflected it past Islanders goalie Kelly Hrudey from the slot.

Brian Propp gave the Flyers a 2-0 lead with a goal at 10:21 of the second period when he knocked in a backhand shot from the left faceoff circle on the rebound of a shot by Tim Tooney.

Howe then gave Philadelphia a three-goal lead with a 20-foot wrist shot from the left faceoff circle at 16:13, his second goal of the playoffs.

Canadiens 7, Nordiques 2

At Quebec, Sergio Momesso, inserted into the Montreal lineup to provide some added muscle, scored 14 seconds into the game, and defenseman Mike Lalor scored twice as the Canadiens defeated the Quebec Nordiques 7-2 Friday night in Game 3 of their Adams Division final series.

The win reduced the Nordiques' lead to 2-1 in the best-of-seven NHL series with Game 4 scheduled at the Coliseum Sunday night.

Momesso, who scored only 14 goals in the regular season and had not played at all in this series, put a sharp-angled backhand over the shoulder of Quebec goaltender Mario Gosselin before many of the Quebec fans were in their seats.

Veteran Bob Gainey scored his first goal of the series to make it 2-0 at 8:18.

Hawks beat Pacers in opener

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins, shaking off a poor-shooting first half, scored 27 of his 35 points in the second half and carried the Atlanta Hawks to a 110-94 victory over the Indiana Pacers Friday night in the opener of their first-round NBA playoff series.

Game 2 of the best-of-5 series will be played Sunday night in Atlanta.

Neither team led by more than five points until 5:17 remained in the third period.

Pistons 108, Bulls 92

At Pontiac, Mich., Isiah Thomas

scored 15 of his 34 points in the second quarter Friday night as the Detroit Pistons beat the Washington Bullets 106-92 in the opening game of their Eastern Conference playoff series.

The best-of-five series resumes Sunday night in the Pontiac Silverdome.

Thomas scored 11 of his second-quarter points during a 21-9 run that saw the Pistons go from a one-point deficit with 4:56 remaining in the period to a 57-48 lead at halftime. Detroit led the rest of the way.

Adrian Dantley, who missed all of last year's playoffs with the Utah Jazz because of severe back spasms, finished with 19 points.

Terry Catledge led Washington with 25 points.

Orlando Mercado and scored on Juan Beniquez's single. The run broke a 20-inning scoreless streak by Kansas City, which had been shut out its last two games and in four of its previous five.

Kansas City took a 4-0 lead in the second inning against Dan Pety, 0-3. Pety threw two wild pitches and hit a batter in the second to help Kansas City extend a 1-0 lead.

Brewers 6, Orioles 4

At Milwaukee, Rob Deer hit his major league-leading eighth homer and Glenn Braggs' run-scoring single broke a 4-4 tie in the seventh inning as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-4 Friday night.

The game was the first since the Brewers' season-opening winning streak was stopped at a record-breaking 13 games with a loss to Chicago Tuesday night.

Teddy Higuera, 4-0, allowed seven hits, struck out five and walked two in completing his second game of the year. He retired 15 straight batters after allowing four runs in the second inning.

Paul Molitor started the Brewers rally in the seventh with a bloop single to right, advanced to second on Robin Yount's sacrifice bunt and went to third when Baltimore starter Scott McGregor, 0-3, balked. Braggs' ground single to right scored Molitor and chased McGregor for Mark Williamson.

Milwaukee took a 2-0 lead in the first when Deer homered after Braggs singled.

Angels 8, Twins 1

At Minneapolis, Wally Joyner had four hits, including a three-run double in the fourth inning, and Don Sutton earned his 31th career pitching win as California beat Minnesota 8-1.

Sutton, 1-3, moved into a 13th place tie with Tom Seaver for career victories. He struck out two, walked one and allowed one run while working 6 2-3 innings.

Joyner hit a three-run double off the right-center field wall off Twins reliever Juan Berenguer in the fourth inning to give California a 7-0 lead. Earlier in the inning, Brian Downing drew a bases-loaded walk.

California scored two unearned runs off Twins starter Mark Portugal, 1-1, in the first inning.

Jays 4, White Sox 2

At Chicago, George Bell broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run, upper-deck home run in the 10th inning Friday night, carrying the Toronto Blue Jays to a chilly 4-2 win over the Chicago White Sox.

Bell's second homer of the season made a winner of Mark Eichhorn, the Blue Jays' fourth pitcher. Eichhorn, 3-0, came on in the seventh after Chicago's Ozzie Guillen doubled with two outs to extend his hitting streak to 11 straight games.

Eichhorn worked the eighth and ninth and Tom Henke pitched the 10th to gain his third save of the year.

Boyd gets some encouraging news

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, the Boston Red Sox' right-hander plagued by a shoulder ailment since early in spring training, received an encouraging report Friday after an examination at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester.

"I don't think this is a major setback," Dr. Arthur Pappas, the Red Sox's team physician and an orthopedic specialist, said after examining Boyd's shoulder just 24 hours after the pitcher had to quit throwing because of pain.

"It's a little bit of the same thing he had before, but not nearly so bad," Pappas said. "He has residual tendinitis in the back of the right shoulder and felt the pain mostly when he tried to throw a slider."

"I don't think we're dealing with another Roger Clemens or Wes Gardner here," Pappas said. "When he tried to throw in the simulated game, it was like the last step in his return to competition and he just wasn't ready."

"We'll continue the therapy ... We'll get him back to throwing as soon as he's ready, probably on the sidelines at first here at the hospital."

Pappas said he doesn't think any foreign matter was in the shoulder and he does not believe an arthrogram, with dye injected into the shoulder, or an arthroscopy is necessary.

Fernandez spins Mets past Cards

NL Roundup

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sid Fernandez pitched a six-hitter, striking out 11, and Keith Hernandez's RBI singled keyed a two-run rally in the sixth inning, giving the New York Mets a 2-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in a steady rainstorm Friday night.

The game began in a light drizzle and ended in swirling showers with temperatures in the upper 40s. The Mets, swept in a three-game series at St. Louis last weekend, and the Cardinals began the game tied for first place in the National League East.

Fernandez, 3-1, seemed unfazed by the bad weather and had even better control than usual. He walked only one batter, Vince Coleman, with one out in the sixth, and it led to the game's first run.

Coleman stole second — he is 20-for-20 in career stolen base attempts against New York — and scored one out later on Terry Pendleton's opposite-field single to right. Coleman singled with two outs in the eighth and stole second again, giving him a major league-leading total of 14. But Fernandez got himself out of trouble by spearing Ozzie Smith's liner up the middle in self-defense.

Greg Mathews, 1-2, escaped a bases-loaded jam in the second by striking out Fernandez, and shut out the Mets until the sixth. But Mathews, whose only walk to that point was intentional, suddenly struggled, and it cost him as New York scored two runs on only one hit.

Mookie Wilson led off with a walk and Tim Lincecum sacrificed. Fernandez followed with his RBI single to left that tied the score, and Mathews then walked Gary Carter and Darryl Strawberry, loading the bases and bringing Ray Soff on the bullpen.

Kevin McReynolds lined a 1-0 pitch up the middle, and the ball deflected off Soff's glove toward first base. Soff recovered to throw out McReynolds, but Hernandez scored without a throw for a 2-1 lead.

Giants 7, Braves 6

At Atlanta, Candy Maldonado drove in three runs with a two-run homer in the first inning and a tie-breaking single in the eighth as the San Francisco Giants downed the Atlanta Braves 7-6 Friday night.

The victory snapped a two-game losing string for the Giants and extended Atlanta's losing streak to six games.

San Francisco broke a 4-4 tie off Jim Acker, 0-1. Chili Davis started the rally with a single and stole second before scoring on Maldonado's two-out single to left. Maldonado later scored on Bob Brenly's single.

Cubs 6, Expos 4

At Montreal, former Montreal star Andre Dawson had three doubles and two RBI while Leon Durham homered and drove in three runs to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 6-4 victory over the Expos Friday.

Dawson, returning to Montreal for the first time since he signed with the Cubs as a free agent, was bowed by the 7,782 fans every time he came to the plate or made a putout in the field.

Starting pitcher Jamie Moyer, 2-1, picked up the win for the Cubs. He went 8 2-3 innings, giving up eight hits and two runs. Lee Smith pitched the last two innings for Chicago to earn his fourth save of the season.

Bob Sebra, 1-2, took the loss for Montreal.

The Cubs took a 3-0 lead in the first inning. Chico Walker led off with a base hit to left, Manny Trillo drew a walk and Dawson followed with a double that scored Walker and moved Trillo to third. Keith Moreland's single scored Trillo and advanced Dawson, who then scored on Durham's sacrifice fly.

Montreal scored in the fifth on Andres Galarraga's RBI single to make it 3-1.

Dawson knocked in the Cubs' final run in the ninth with his third double of the game.

AL Roundup

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Cory Snyder lined a run-scoring single to center to cap a two-run rally in the bottom of the ninth inning Friday night, giving the Cleveland Indians a 6-5 victory over the Yankees, ending New York's 10-game winning streak.

The Yankees had rallied from a 4-1 deficit to a 5-4 lead behind home runs by Rickey Henderson in both the eighth and ninth innings.

Pat Tabler, however, led off the bottom of the ninth with a single to center off reliever Cecilio Guante.

Dave Righetti, 2-1, New York's ace reliever, came on and walked Julio Franco and yielded a single to Joe Carter that loaded the bases.

Steve Carlton, 2-2, got the victory despite allowing three runs on three hits in two innings in relief of Phil Niekro, who was seeking his 313th lifetime win. Instead, Carlton got his 325th.

The Yankees trailed 4-3 after scoring twice in the eighth against Cleveland's ageless pitching duo.

With two outs in the ninth, Wayne Tolleason's fly fell between center fielder Dave Gallagher and shortstop Franco for a single. Henderson followed with his fifth home run of the season, a shot to left.

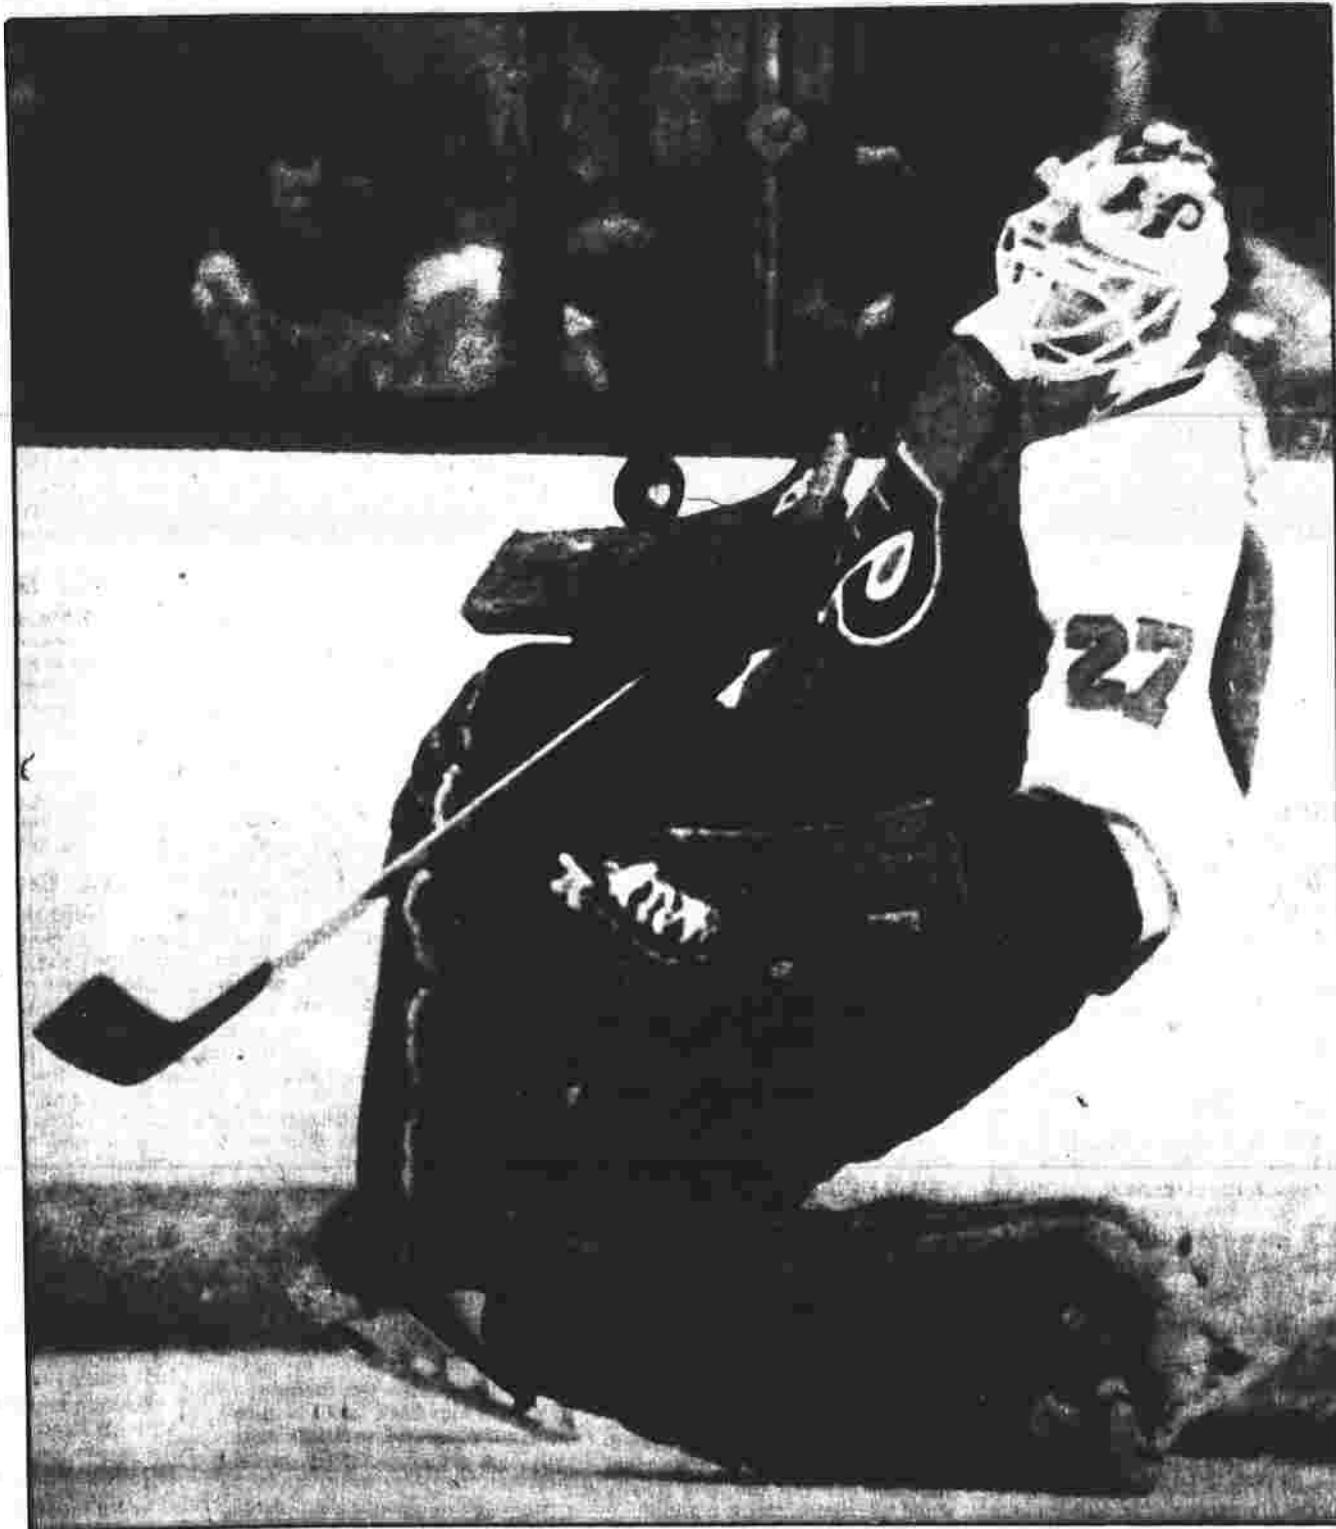

The Indians led 4-1 after seven innings behind the two-hit pitching of the 48-year-old knuckleballer, Niekro.

But Henderson led off the eighth with the Yankees' third hit off Niekro, a line drive homer to left. That finished Niekro and brought on 42-year-old Carlton.

Royals 7, Tigers 3

At Detroit, Bo Jackson and Jamie Quirk scored consecutive runs on wild pitches Friday night as the Kansas City Royals, despite committing five errors, beat the Tigers 7-3, handing Detroit its fifth straight loss.
