HART QUITS — "I believe I would have been a successful candidate. And I know I could have been a very good president, particularly for these times. But apparently now, we'll never know."

WITH HART OUT, RACE WIDE OPEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the front-runner dropping out of the Democratic presidential race, politicians and polisters predicted Friday a rush to the undecided column while voters look over the rest of the field.

The race for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination "couldn't be more open," said party chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr., in a statement issued moments after Gary Hart abandoned his quest for

"I suspect most Hart supporters are like me," he added. "I have been so sure Hart was going to be the nominee, I just sort of looked around at all these other people figuring they were running for vice president."

The coming weeks will see the first tangible impact of Hart's decision as his campaign workers shift to other candidates.

"If other presidential campaigns were smart, they'd be calling," said Teress Vilmain, who ran Hart's campaign in Iowa, where the first Democratic caucuses will be held next year.

At a news conference in Denver, Hart cited "further rumors and gossip" and said, "Clearly under present circumstances, this campaign cannot go on."

The former Colorado senator was running far ahead of the Democratic field in polls until a story last Sunday alleged that he spent the weekend with a 29-year-old model from Miami.

In the wake of Hart's departure from the race, the nearly unanimous assessment was that none of his rivals could take over the frontrunner's spot until after the first caucuses and primaries in 1988.

The best known of the Democratic contenders was the Rev. Jesse Jackson, whose support from black voters surprised the party establishment in 1984 when he finished behind Walter F. Mondale and Hart in the race for the presidential nomination.

But few people expect the party to nominate a black for president in 1988, particularly a candidate whose views are well to the left of where Democratic leaders believe the party ought to be.

Also battling to break from the pack are former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee and Sen. Paul Simon of Elinois. Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas is considering a run for the nomination.

WASHINGTON — Gary Hart, the cool intellectual who saw new ideas as the key to the White House, promised his 1988 compaign would be different.

And different it was.

Short and brutel, the 28-day episode that was the 1989 Hart compaign for the presidency had little to do with the issues.

All the positions the Democratic front-runner had carefully crafted — to answer the 1964 question of "Where's the beef?" — were left unread as attention focused on Hart's character, private life and runners of his sexual indiscretions.

Ultimately, it was Hart's relationship with a Mismi woman — exposed in a newspaper stery — that gave substance to all the questions that had been asked about Hart, questions for which he did not have convincing answers.

Faced with relentiess public questioning about intimate matters, Hart withdrew from the race on Friday.

"Now clearly under present circumstances, this campaign cannot go on," he noid. "I refuse to submit my family and my friends and innocent people and myself to further rumors and gossip. It's simply an intolerable situation."

He referred to the modia behavior outside his final campaign event as "the height of the circus" and decried media scrutiny that brought "my very strong wife close to tears because she can't even get in her own house at night without height and the rown when he began the campaign with a short speech in front of the red cliffs of the Rocky Mountains on April 19.

"I intend — as I always have — to run a campaign of ideas," Hart said, "Since we are running for the highest and most important office in the land, all of us must try to hold ourselves to the very highest possible standards of integrity and ethics."

Later, he would add: "We genuinely hope this campaign will be different. We want it to be a campaign based on what is best for this country and to test our ideas and policies against the standard of the national interest."

test our ideas and policies against the standard of the national interest."

Hart isid out his foreign policy views in a series of speeches calling for what he described as "enlightened engagement." And he had a trie of lectures on economic policy scheduled for later in May.

Hart planned carefully for his second bid for the White House, building on his remarkable 1984 campaign that almost snatched the Democratic presidential somination from Walter Mondale.

Three years ago, he burst onto the national scene in a matter of days, using a second-place finish in the Iowa caucuses as the booster rocket that shot him out of the pack and past Mondale for a couple of stunning victories.

But the 1984 campaign was also marked by a series of stumbles and errors. There were questions about why he changed his name to Hart from Hartpence, why he he changed his name to Hart from Hartpence, why he had misstated his age in various documents and why he obtained a U.S. Naval Reserve commission while he was a senator. These came to be known as the character issue, while the undercurrent of rumors suggested his involvement with women on the campaign trail.

"I would hope that four years later with a lot more seasoning that I am prepared," Hart said in his first 1988 campaign news conference.

And even in his announcement speech, he said he

Top Democrats praise decision

HARTFORD — Two top Connecticut Democrata, Gov. William A. O'Neill and state Chairman John F. Droney Jr., said Friday that Gary Hart made the right deciaton in dropping his presidential bid. But both cautioned the media on the so-called "character issue."

"When you run for public office, your life is open to scrutiny," the governor said. "But I also think we have to be careful that we're not going into the George Orwell theory, but instead of government being the Big Brother, the press becomes the Big Brother. There has

"I think their personal lives should be an open book to the American people," Droney said.

Hart, the frontrunner in a crowded race for the Democratic nomination, dropped out of the race Friday, five days after it was reported he had spent some time with a Florida model at his Washington townhouse last weekend.

"Under the circumstances, he certainly did the right thing," O'Neill said. "I'm not going to comment on the circumstances themselves, but as they're perceived to be, he had no other alternative but to withdraw." U.S. Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., who nominated Hart at the 1984 Democratic convention, said "Gary Hart contributed ideas and vigor to the presidential race in 1984, and his friends and supporters ... expected as much in the current campaign. But it has been obvious all week that issues unrelated to the national agenda made it impossible for Gary to get his message across. Today's decision wasn't a surprise, but it was no less disappointing."

Hart's state campaign chairman, State Rep.
Jonathan Pelto, D-Mansfield, said he was deeply saddened by Hart's withdrawal.

"The Democratic Party today loses an outstanding spokesperson and the country loses a great leader," said Pelto, who was a Hart delegate at the 1984 national

Coventry plans for parade hit crumbling wall

By Jacqueline Bennett Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY - The town's annual Memorial Day parade has run smack into a stone wall - literally. The Town Council proposed last week to move the Memorial Day ceremonies from the Nathan Hale Cemetery, their traditional site, to either the town green or Patriot's Park.

Councilmen offered the change because of a broken-down wall at the cemetery that many say poses a danger if spectators stand on it.

The council also said that having the ceremony at the town green would acknowledge it as a potential site for a memorial to Vietnam and Korean war veterans. Council members also want to use the day to highlight the opening of Coventry's band shell currently un

However, the proposal has drawn the ire of the American Legion, which has taken out a parade permit for the event for the past 27 years.

"The purpose of the parade is to recognize those who have fought for our country," said Mary Smith, service officer of Coventry's American Legion Post 52 and the wife of post commander Lawrence Smith. "To take the parade and turn it into a celebration of the band shell takes it completely away from the veterans.

"To have them do this is really something," she said.
"They could very easily have their thing as a different celebration. It just seems to me they should be able to barricade that little section of the wall."

Lawrence Smith said Friday that the American Legion will not hold the parade if the town does not do something to the wall or if town officials feel the band shell "is the overriding concern."

Smith, who sent a letter to Town Council Chairwoman Joan Lewis outlining the Legion's concerns, said that if the problem is resolved, the Legion will follow the traditional parade route. That route usually goes from Robertson School on Lake Street to the cemetery and then down to the town garage on Bradbury Lane.

On Friday town officials said they will look into ways to resolve the problem.
"Commander Smith has some very strong feelings about this," Lewis said. She said he has asked Town Manager Harold Hodge to look into barricading the "That can be done," Hodge said Friday. He said a town work crew will clean some of the loose stones within the next few days and caution signs will be erected near the barricaded area. However, Hodge acknowledged some problems.

"Some of the large granite stones weigh as much as a ton," he said. "That's part of the problem in trying to get the area cleaned up."

He said the wall came down in December because of pressure from water that did not drain properly.

Another problem in the area is the condition of a Nathan Hale monument, which has needed repair for about two years, Hodge said.

Baby's death was murder

WATERBURY (AP) — A charge of murder was filed Friday against a man who told police he beat his girlfriend's 21-month-old daughter

he beat his girifriend's 21-month-old draghter with a belt and a large metal spoon days before the toddler's death, a prosecutor said. Assistant State's Attorney John Connelly said the charge was lodged against Alexander D. Nelson, 31, of Naugatuck, in-the-death Tuesday of Sarah Cibulka of Naugatuck. Nelson and the baby's mother, Donna L. Cibulka, 25, of Naugatuck, were arrested Wednesday and charged with risk of interested.

scheduled for may 19.

The pair were arrested after Cibulka called the Naugatuck fire department early Wednesday to request an ambulance because her daughter stopped breathing, police spokesman Capt. William Long said.

The child was found lying on the living room couch and was pronounced dead at the scene by an assistant medical examiner, Long said.

hiedical examination of the body showed the baby had actually died Tuesday evening. Long said examiners also found that the child had been continuously abused for three to five days before her death.

An official at the state medical examiner's office in Formington said Thursday that Sarah died of brain injuries. Her body bore cuts, braises and human bite marks, and there was evidence of sexual abuse, officials said.

Children and Youth Services said Donna Chulka's two other young daughters have been placed in foster homes.

Rosemary Savino said the two children would undergo full medical and psychological examinations to determine whether they had been abused. The children show no outward stem of abuse. Savino said.

Police records showed that Nelson had been arrested in South Carolina on charges of possessing and selling narcotics. No details of the arrest ere available, Long said.

Long said Cibulka also had a criminal record. She had been charged in Texas with larceny of a motor vehicle, he said.

Black family issues go beyond parenting

NEW HAVEN — Issues for black families agen't limited to single-parent concerns and money, but encompass broader issues such as farm troubles and air poliution, says a historian who studies

"We need to expand our notion of what constitutes a black family issue." says James O. Horton, an associate professor of history and American civilization at George hington University.

Horton was speaking Friday at a conference called "Black Families and Public Policy: Historical and Contemporary Perspectives" held at Yale University. About 100 educators, government workers and foundation employees from the costern United States attended.

Problems besetting small farmers are also threats

Air pollution, which is heavy in inner cities, could be connected to the higher rates of lung disease suffered by blacks, he said. Bigotry, women's rights, unem-

The keynote speaker of the conference, Dr. James P. Comer, suggested that progress toward lessening poverty in black households could be made by a massive effort in educating the young and

Widow plans collapse probe

BRIDGEPORT — The wife of a 30-year-old Hamden resident killed in the L'Ambiance Plaza collapse on April 23 has hired a Stamford lawyer to preserve documents needed for a private investigation of the disaster that killed 28 men.

Andrea Page, widow of construction worker John Page, hired Richard A. Silver to take legal action, according to a copy of a Superior Court lawsuit filed Thursday in City Hall.

Silver said he is asking Superior Court to preserve records and evidence from the construction site. "This is somewhat of an unusual lawsuit ... It's an application to discover the acts underlying this tragedy and make a determination as to who is responsible. And then we'd institute a lawsuit against the responsible party or parties." Silver said.

McKinney's physician, Dr. Cesar Caceres, said the congressman contracted AIDS from blood transfusions he received during heart bypons surgery in 1979. Wright, appearing Friday on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," said McKinney's death illustrates the need to find a way to fight the spread of AIDS.

$66,000 is no joke

NEW YORK (AP) - Heard the one about the $66,000 prize for the funniest joke?

It's no joke. Disc jockey Don Imus, host of WNBC radio's "Imus in the Morning" show, challenged listeners to send in entries for a contest carrying a grand prize of $88,000.

The winner, to be an-nounced June 19, will be chosen by a panel of judges that includes Imus, his sidekick Charies McCord and comedy experts yet to be chosen, said Janice Penino, a station promotion man-ager. One condition is that the joke must be suitable for reading on the air.

Also, beginning May 18, a daily prize of $1,000 sender of any joke that Imus picks at random and reads on the air.

Apartheid foes map strategy

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - Anti-apartheid organizations mapped out defense strategy Friday after President P.W. Botha served post-election notice that he planned to crack down on opposition groups operating outside Parliament.

The groups received some support from a ruling Friday in Natal province Supreme Court. Justice John Didcott overturned Botha's Oct 9 declaration barring the United Democratic Front, the nation's biggest anti-apartheid coalition, from receiving foreign funds.

His ruling came on a technicality, and the government has said it will appeal. But United secratic Front treasurer Azar Cachalia said, "Certainly this must be seen as a setback to ... NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) -Workers and city officials who depend on the tourists who flock to Niagara Falls were angry and worried Friday about a Canadian report that the falls' mist carries langerous chemicals. A report that the 500-foot high veil mist thrown off by water thundering over the falls may be dangerous because of pollution will donday in Ann Arbor, Mich. The paper is the masters' thesis of a University of Toronto chemical engineering graduate student.

The report says tourists visiting Niagara Falls probably won't be harmed by cancer-causing chemicals in the mist, but long-time residents may be at risk. The area upstream from the falls has numerous chemical plants and chemical waste dumps.

A U.S. Environmental Protection Agency spokesman confirmed that, given the Niagara River's polluted condition, it is likely chemicals are given off. But he said the amounts are minor in air pollution terms.

"The majority of that is theory. based on a computer model," said Thomas Darrow, a spokesman for the Niagara Falls Visitors and Convention Bureau. "We're having a very, very difficult time accepting as substantial anything in, or giving any of the tiniest credence to, that report."

But others were not so certain.

"I would think that, obviously, if it is a negative report, it will affect business," said Dave Parker, manager of four gift shops, and a restaurant on Goat Island, which sits between the American and Horseshoe Falls.

Everyone knows it's polluted. If the river is polluted, of course the mist is polluted," said a veteran worker near the falls who declined to give his name. "It ruins everything. It corrodes aluminum. corrodes stainless steel.

During Friday's testimony a new wrin-life in the complex case was revealed when Sen. William S. Cohen, R. Maine, vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, indicated that a Nicaraguan rebel leader was asked to contribute money to help ransom U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

"I think the evidence will indicate that ... (Contra leader Adolfo) Calero was requested to produce cash and travelers checks to be used for this particular purpose," Cohen said.

"So we had, in effect, a reverse Contra program being carried out to pay ransom," Cohen said.

Secord has testified that money from his Iran-Contra operation was being used to pay the expenses of U.S. drug agents trying to locate American hostages in Lebanon, because the U.S. government would not. But Secord said "I've never heard it before" when asked about the appeal to Calero.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, III. (AP) — The city treasurer hasn't been seen since he rode off on a moped, two hours after the FBI questioned him about an unauthorized, one-day investment of $20 million in village funds that netted more than $48,600.

"If he jumped a plane he could be anywhere. He's being treated as a fugitive now," FBI spokesman Bob Long said Friday in Chicago.

Lee L. Poder disappeared Monday, two days before federal agents accused him of pocketing nearly $10,000 from the transaction.

The investment firm of Kidder Peakody & Co. concluded in a market study that the resource recovery industry was "very dynamic ... in 1996 and the outlook for 1997 and beyond looks very positive."
At the end of 1996, it said, there were 196,094 tons per day of capacity, under construction, or in permit or negotiations stages — a 26 percent increase over 1995.

Potential future prospects include 78 plants with 66,377 tons of capacity in the planning stage, with another 40 units being planned, of which the capacity was unknown, it said.

If the Morge's plight is say indication, the new capacity will be extical to moving the nation's garbage out of sight and out of niled.

On March 25, the Morge left the Long Island, N.Y., town Islip with 3,160 tone of garbage, expecting to dump it in North Carolina. But North Carolina turned the barge away, as did five other states, Mexico, Belize and the Bahamas.

Islip had been forced to stip commercial garbage cisewhere because New York state closed the Long Island town's dump to protect drinking water.

The town's problem is not isolated, According to the National Solid Wastes Management Association, an industry trade group, 50 percent of the 250 tops of garbage this country generates each year is buried in

And about one out of every four cities is going to lose that space within five years, according to Combustion Engineering, a Connecticut-based supplier of garbage-burning electric generating plants.

For decades, business and community leaders have seen this coming, But staiwart action was rare, given the political reality of NIMBY — the public attitude that garbage must be disposed of, but Not in My Back Yard

And so, in the 1600s, most communities incinerated their waste, filling the sir with smoke and other pollutants. The birth of environmental consciousness in the 1900s put an end to much of that, however, and by the early 1970s, several major companies were building plants designed to operate on the principle of "refuse-derived fuel," or RDP, which would generate steam to create electricity.

These evolved into three main types: plants the fired boilers with garbage shredded into "fluff"; those using fuel pellets made of shredded garbage mixed with resins and others that attempted to reduce the garbage into combustible powder.

However ingenious in theory, most of the new plants developed problems.

Shredders that jammed. Burners that clogged.
Boilers that exploded — sometimes killing workers.
All this meant delays, more money, less productivity.
— and plenty of embarrasament for the municipal officials that had sponsored the plants in the first place.

For the last decade or so, traders and investors have operated most of the time on the principle that "bad news is good news."

Under this line of reasoning, signs of a sluggish economy are builish because they increase the prospect of lower interest rates and continued relief from inflation.

Recession worries occasionally flare up. But the greatest concern is the possibility of economic growth so strong that it is in danger of overheating.

legislators from the region said Friday.

"Right now we have the best of both worlds," said Steven Casey, a Democratic state senator from Bristol, Conn. "The out-of-state banks are investing in Connecticut (and) we have been able to keep our deposits in the state."

Connecticut is one of three New England states allowing "reciprocal regional" banking. Under the system, a bank from one of the five other New England states may buy a Connecticut bank or set up a Connecticut office providing the bank's home state extends identical privileges to Connecticut banks.

Under a separate law, Connecticut also allows banks from outside New England to set up two loan offices in the state but not to accept deposits, which could take money out of the state.

Massachusetts and Rhode Island

Massachusetts and Rhode Island also allow reciprocal regional banking, while a bill providing the system in New Hampshire awaits the signature of Gov. John Sununu. Vermont lawmakers are consider-

John Reed, a Democrat in the Rhode Island Senste, praised the regional banking laws for bolstering weaker Rhode Island banks through mergers. Massachusetts lawmakers have yet to consider interstate banking, said Rep. Thomas Finneran; D-Boston. The Republican Party has hit on a good political issue in its proposal to eliminate the Special Taxing District and to maintain downtown parking with funds supplied by general taxation.

Some Main Street merchants, and other town businessmen as well, have made no secret of the fact that they are a bit miffed by town plans to issue tax increment bonds for public improvements in the Buckland area.

The improvements are intended to encourage Homart Development Corp. to develop its large retail mail there, a project that will unquestionably stimulate economic growth and ultimately return more to the town than it advances in the bond issue.

However, those who object have a point when they say Homart is a financial giant which should not need any incentives to develop a retail center that will inevitably compete with other Manchester retailers, including those on Main Street whose resources are limited, and who pay a tax to create and maintain parking.

But apart from its narrow political appeal the Republican proposal has intrinsic merit and it should be considered by the Board of Directors on the basis of that merit.

Everyone in Manchester benefits from the availability of parking space in what is still the financial and commercial center of town — even though it is no longer the sole retail center.

When the Special Taxing District was formed in 1963, the impetus for it came from the Main Street community itself, which was then facing a parking crisis. Most of what could be done to resolve that crisis has already been done.

The Main Street community still needs an organization to focus on revitalization of the downtown area, but it does not have to be one that puts a tax obligation on Main Street business property owners.

The chief value of the taxing district has been that the funds collected from it were clearly dedicated to the provision of parking. As one downtown merchant observed, there is the danger that if the parking provisions were to be supported by general funds, the funds might be withdrawn in tight budget years. But that is the same kind of problem the directors face regularly, and the need for parking should be able to hold its own among other spending priorities.

The majority Democrats on the Board of Directors should not dismiss the idea summarily.

If we're so proud of our 200 years of democracy, why don't we believe in exporting it to South Africa? It reminds me of the old joke in which the Lone Ranger points out to Tonto that they are surrounded by Indians. Says Tonto, "What do you mean we, white man?

Gay rights bill very disturbing

I am deeply distressed about the effect that the gay rights bill, presently in our State legislature, will have on our state and community. This bill will allow the homosexual to have extra freedoms that we do not even have, based on their sexual preference! The homosexual has lust as many rights as anyone else unless they want to make their sexual preference an issue. What they do in the privacy of their own homes is their own business, but when they want to flaunt it, that affects all of us. Therefore this bill would take away some of our freedoms. They should not be treated as a minority. Blacks and handicaps are born that way. Homosexuality is a choice.

This bill would give homosexuals the opportunity to teach in public schools, and it would give them the freedom to teach sex-education classes if they are qualified. This would give them a chance to promote their lifestyle openly. I am deeply disturbed with some religious groups that have been vocal about supporting the gay rights bill. The Bible very plainly states that homosexuality s an "abomination to the Lord." God did not create Adam and Adam. He created Adam and Eve. For those who claim that God created them this way. I question what god they are talking about. The God that I serve would not create someone as a homosexual and then condemnthem for it. God destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah because of their homosexuality and sexual perversions. That is how we got the word sodomy. For those in the religious community that question what I am quoting would recommend that they read it for themselves: 2 Timothy 3: 16, 2 Peter 2, Genesis 19:5 & 24. Romans 1:24. Jude 7, would recommend that clergy read Ezakiel 33: 1-20, and Genesis 18: 20-21. I pray that God will open your eyes to the truth. With the terrible threat of AIDS to our society, why would we allow a law that would condone homosexuality, thereby encouraging news media to be more vocal and informative about this issue. The only people that seem to be aware of what's going on are those that are promoting this bill. There are apparently busloads of homosexuals and their supporters from as far away as California and New York converging daily on our state Capitol while our local citizens are sitting quietly by and allowing this bill to become a law. Meotti refuses to reduce taxes

Did you know the state has taken $100 from you and every member of your family, for no legitimate reason, and all it's doing is collecting interest? That's what the current state budget surplus of $324 million means, and that's why Republicans in the General Assembly have been trying to return some of that hard-earned taxpayers.

money to you and other But Republican lawmakers alone don't have the ability to grant more tax relief, because their votes are outnumbered by those of state legislators like Sen. Michael Meotti and other members of the Democratic majority in the state Senate. Meotti knows you've been overtaxed, too, but refuses to do anything about it. That's clear by his recent votes against four responsible tax cuts considered by the Senate.

With Meotti's support, the state sales tax could have been lowered by a half-percent, saving us $130 million a year. And Sen. Meotti could have made essential paper products and household cleaning supplies tax-free, as well as cut an exodus of homosexuals and the tax on residential gas and lesbians to Connecticut to live. electric bills by 50 percent.

I would like to admonish the Yes, the state could easily afford these tax cuts, but Meotti decided tax relief is no big deal. LOOM organizes to oppose lasers

To the Editor:

As Manchester citizens and members of the steering committee of LOOM (Lasergames Out Of Manchester), we oppose the projected installation of a lasergame center at the former Mott's Shop Rite on East Middle Turnpike.

Circulating petitions indicate that strong opposition to this installation has already arisen on varied grounds: religious or moral objections to the nature of the games, concern for the quality of life and property values in the surrounding residential neighborhoods, worries about the impact on Manchester of large numbers of out-of-town players and vehicles drawn to the first ce iter of its kind in New England, and other urgent civic concerns. We are organizing and focusing this opposition, and have retained legal counsel. The name LOOM recalls the proud history of Manchester as a silk-weaving center. The loom is an instrument of peace, weaving together separate strands — here, strands of protest - into an effective and harmonious whole The word alludes also to the fabric of town and neighborhood, which would be ripped asunder by the proposed project. And it indicates the size of the protest. If the town rises to its full stature on this issue, it can surely LOOM over the proposal and defeat it. Citizens are being requested to attend the next meeting of the town Board of Directors, Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Lincoln Center, to make their wishes known: to phone or write town officials; and to circulate petitions in their neighborhoods. Petitions are available from the office of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches, or from us.

Open house will be Friday

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of

y Nancy Carr Executive Director

Dear friends: We're holding open house for you this Friday between 10 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. You are warmly invited to come and see what it is we are accomplishing together. Just a caution - our quarters may not seem very impressive but they are functional. Since we operate as a channel between your open-hearted giving and those in need, we don't really need a lot of space and what we do need is donated by churches and the ing Authority.

So please come and visit. The Department of Human Needs main office, the Emergency Pantry and Shepherd's Place soup kitchen are all housed at Center Congrega-tional Church, 11 Center St. Samaritan Shelter operates at 468 Main St., courtesy of the town of Manchester and state of Connecticut. The Clothing Bank is housed in the basement of Cronin Hall, Mayfair Gardens, 22 N. School St., thanks to the Housing Authority. Project Re-entry offices are in the Emanuel Lutheran Church's outreach building, 64 Church St., while St. Bartholomew Church has hosted the conference administrative of-fice at 738 E. Middle Turnpike for more than 12 years. Staff and/or volunteers will be happy to answer your questions or make note of your suggestions as to how we might improve our work together. They'll even have a cup of coffee or juice waiting for you.

MAY IS MACC Awareness Month. Did you know, that to-

• we feed more than 1,000 men, women and children (almost 9,000 meals each year), through the Emergency Pantry, and up to 50 dinner and a bag supper every weekday at The Shepherd's Place:

we supply free clothing to more than 10 families a month, and more furniture each year to other • we welcome and counsel and households each year who come to the MACC Department of Human lds each year who come to

Needs seeking support and assistance with a variety of proble o we keep more than 100 of our neighbors warm with fuelassistance grants amounting to more than $16,800;

• we offer crisis intervention to some 150 families with grants and small loans enabling them to pay security deposits, pay rents and buy needed medications?

DID YOU KNOW that together:

• we offer a helping hand
through Project Re-entry to about 70 men and women returning to each year,

9 we encourage and support the men and women attending Honor Court at Manchester Circuit Court 12 (28 church organizations provide sandwiches and desserts);

we enable 50 Manchester children, referred by local social workers, to enjoy the free two-week Interfaith Day Camp each summer, thanks to a dedicated crew of adults and more than 50 teen-agers from local churches; • we bring fresh fruits and regetables within reach of low-ncome and elderly living in downtown Manchester through the Farmer's Market;

• we distribute surplus foods

(cheese, butter, dry milk, rice, honey) to almost 600 Manchester low-income households through the MACC Feed a Friend program coordinated by 50 volunteers?

DID YOU KNOW that together,

working hand in hand:

we transport elderly and low-income mothers who are unable or ineligible to use Phone-a-Ride to doctors, dentists, labs, well-child clinics, thanks to the volunteers of FISH of Manchester

· we shelter and feed Manchester homeless men and women every night at the Samaritan Shelter with cated volunteers from local

6 we share joy with 400 families and elderly at Thankagiving and more than 450 at Christmas through the MACC Seasonal Sharing Appeal, providing hot meals for shut-ins, a week's supply of food for families, new clothing, blankets. love and a variety of other need suffering among us;

• we provided more than $49,000 in cash assistance in 1986 to needy families in Manchester and in-kind assistance (food, clothing, furniture) valued at more than $200,000?

DID YOU KNOW that together: we sponsor monthly prayer vigils, an annual Sholom Fair, and work for racial and economic justice through the MACC Peace and Justice Committee: we provide a weekly Roman Catholic chaplaincy at the Mea-dows Convalescent Home with the cooperation of the four Roman Catholic churches;

o we offer a recently completed survey of religious services and programming in Manchester con-valescent homes and explore ways in which the churches and community might offer support to AIDS victims and their families through the MACC Department of Pastoral we further human and com munity relations through an Interfaith Thanksgiving Service, Jewish-Christian Dialogue, the Manchester Interracial Council and the Mayor's Prayer Breakfast; we strengthen the unity of Christians by sponsoring clergy panels. WINFEST, the Lenten Friday Service, the Ecumenical Pentecost Service and daily "Thoughts" in the Manchester

DID YOU KNOW that 18 Christian churches. Church of the Assumption, Center Congregational, Concordia Lutheran, Com-munity Baptist, Emanuel Luthe-ran, First Baptist, North United Methodist, St. Bartholomew, St.

Episcopal, Salvation Army, Second Congregational, South United Methodist and Trinity Covenant have chosen to work together as the Manchester Area Conference of Churches witnessing to their unity in Jesus Christ. It's amazing what good things happen when good folks work

NOTICES: The fourth annua NOTICES: The fourth annual Hartford Hunger Walk will be held Sunday, May 17. The Hartford Hunger Walk is a fund-raising event for the Food Share Commission of Greater Hartford, Manchester is a direct beneficiary of this money. We receive food through this central clearing house for the Emergency Pantry, Shepherd's Place and Samaritan Shelter. You can either gather spansors and can either gather sponsors and walk yourself or sponsor Jane Sherman, our pantry coordinator, who will be walking as the MACC representative. Church Women United of Manchester, which disbanded in June 1963, will hold an annual reunion luncheon on Friday from noon to 2 p.m. in the reception hall of South United Methodist Church. All former delegates and members are invited to bring a salad for the table and to share in this Christian fellowship. Anyone not contacted can call Elaine Holcomb at 649-2374 or Janet Richmond at 649-9138.

The original Metropolitan Opera House in New York City held its grand opening in 1883. The first, opera performed at the Met was Gounod's "Faust."

America early on became multi-cultural society. In any such community tensions will develop between majority and minority groups. Inevitably an overwhelmingly majority seg-ment tends to pursue its com-numerous groups. Our founding fathers considered this tendency and so wrote into our Constitution provisions to protect minorities. Yet they never anticipated all the applications, being themselve in violation of the spirit of some

mon agenda with little thought as to how it may affect less

Now we have become co scious, perhaps to a fault, of mi-nority preferences virtually to the point of ignoring the rights of the majority. Values cher-ished by the majority have pro-duced much that made America what it is. We surrender these out of deference to this or that minority to the hurt of all groups! "Righteousness exaits a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people," Proverbe 14:34.

R.M., Vineland, N.J. A. Grace Barnett Wing Slick is

47, the daughter of an investment banker and an actress-singer. She was born in Chicago but raised in the San Francisco area, where her father was transferred when she was 4 Also at the age of 4, she started singing for anyone who would listen, and by the age of 8 was frequenting museums studying fine art. Regular school bored her and she began to develop a reputation as a smart aleck which worried her mother so much that she transferred her to a finishing school so that she could acquire social graces. Her next stop was a college version of finishing school — New York's Finch College, Tricia Nixon's alma mater (she and radical Abbie Hoffman ried, in fact, to attend Tricia Nixon's Finch College reunion party held in the White House but were turned away - they to spike the tea with LSD). She lasted a year, studied art briefly at the University of Miami and then returned to San Francisco where she worked as a model.

Her marriage to neighbor Jerry Slick in 1961 pointed her in various new directions. including a return to her interest in music - she began to write music to accompany his student films. Soon, the couple was caught up in the escalating music/art/drug scene in San Francisco, capped by a performance by a new group called Jefferson Airplane. Grace thought they were just OK but they looked like they were having a good time, so the Slicks formed their own band, the Great Society.

A year later, she was asked to join the Airplane and they spent the remainder of the '60s at the top of the pop/rock scene.

In 1970, though, the Airplane began shuffling personnel — which it would do through that decade, in the process changing its name to Jefferson Starship By the end of the '70s, Grace was becoming disillusioned with the group's music and quit the band to record her own albums By 1981 she was back and has been there ever since.

After her divorce from Slick. she lived with Airplane guitarist 16-year-old daughter, China_ (originally named god), and then married Starship lighting designer Skip Johnson. Currently, the Starship are recording their next album and Grace on her own will be on view in HBO's "Legendary Ladies of Rock" airing in July She'd heard music on radio or on TV and was singing sentences before she ever spoke them. At 5, she was doing the entire score of "West Side Story." She'd take all the parts and sell tickets.

When her dad, Howard, a professional singer, was appearing in the Catskills one year, she, her Mom and her sister, Terri, would tag along, "Wherever he was playing, would watch and wait, and the minute he'd start his last song, I'd rush backstage, run out as the applause started, pull at his pant leg, and, of course, sing a song. I'd sing 'Hello Dolly' The Surrey With the Fringe on Top,' and the audience would go crazy, the way they do for a

"Once on a Jewish holiday they kept applauding and applauding. I didn't have any more songs left. My mom said, 'Honey, you can't go out there. You don't know any more songs.' But I said, 'Mother, I have to, they want me. I'll sing "Jesus Loves Me." '1 adored being out there. What a little ham! I knew what I wanted. I wanted to be a star."

Back in Texas, or wherever, because of her dad, the family moved virtually every year, and Hartman feels that was an important part of her growing up - she had to adjust to new schools, new people, new ways wherever, she'd round up her girl friends, dress them up like the Supremes, "and, of course. I'd be Diana. We'd make up our own musicals, rock musicals. We must have been funny, bu we thought we were gorgeous What do you have in your closet?' I'd ask when I phoned Any gold lame? professionally, my dad bought me a sewing machine. I think he hoped to distract me. Maybe he hoped I'd want to design clothes instead. 'Great,' I said. 'I'll make my costumes.' I'd see the most outrageous thing in some magazine and think, ah, there is my look. I made all the clothes I wore singing with my own band.

"The interesting thing, looking back, is that I was so serious about it all. I wouldn' let the boys smoke on stage. had rules. Rehearsals were on time. I was on time. It was important. I never did think of show business as being just fun and games. I went methodically about my homework, kept up my grades like a good kid, just instead of being a cheerleader or a pom-pom girl. I took my voice lessons, planned my numbers. wrote music. I wanted eventually to record. I was a

She has been filming for three months.

Shooting started in Alabama. "I was so glad," she says. "because starting this way, down South, it was so easy to slip back into the accent, and we she's worn mostly jeans (there's worked in sequence so the girl, a hole in one knee) and big Autumn, matures naturally. Also we were right there in the coal mines and used the real miners. We got to be friends. A man wonders whether doc answers questions from males

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I hope males. I've always been curious: Does orgasm produce ejacula-tion, or does ejaculation make the organn'

DEAR READER: Neither. These responses are two separate processes of male functioning and can occur alone. In other words, a man can produce an ejaculation without having an orgasm, or can have an orgasm without ejaculating. although these two events

Orgasm consists of the sudden rhythmic muscular contractions that release the tension accumulated during arousal and stimulation, Orgasm also includes a mental release or feeling of satisfaction

Ejaculation refers solely to the release of semen, which is often accompanied by feeling the semen travel through the

Teen has problem

DEAR DR. RENISCH: I am a male, nearly 14, and have a problem. Whenever I have a wet dream, the substance that comes out is clear, jelly-like and accompanied by urine. I heard that it should be milky white. I'm not sexually active, but this has happened on and off for a year.

Also, when this wakes me up. I must go to the bathroom immediately and urinate. I heard that you cannot urinate while having an erection.

Is there something wrong with me? Should I tell my parents or see a doctor? I'm worried and

DEAR READER: Nocturnal emissions (usually called wet dreams) begin between ages 1 and 16 for most young men. They are completely normal and cannot be consciously controlled; they are the body's way of releasing semen (which the prostate begins to produce at puberty) that is not discharged by other sexual activity, such as musturbation or intercourse Nocturnal emissions may occur either with or without explicitly sexual dreams - jus as the body produces erections during dream states, regardless

The appearance of the elaculate can vary. It may be rellowish and look like urine, but it is not urine. Some of it can be clear, and this may be from the Cowper's glands, which are cated near the tip of the penis

of the dream content

Despite what you've heard, it is possible to urinate with an erection. Only when an erection is at its fullest does the interns sphincter (like a valve) preven urination. Once a man has awakened and walked to the bathroom, his arousal (and hence his erection) has often diminished enough for urination

However, by all means, talk to your parents about this. They may have already guessed that you have reached this stage of development and may feel awkward about raising the topic

Parents of teenage girls may ind it easier to begin conversation about sexual functioning and values, since a girl's first menstruation is a clear sign that she is entering adulthood. Ideally, of course parents should explain events efore they occur, but this is difficult for some people to do

Although the first ejaculations may contain few or no sperm in the semen, you should be aware that you probably are already fertile table to produce a pregnancy). Most parents certainly want to discuss and offer guidance regarding this aspect of their children's lives. It's also quite appropriate to mention this to your physician he next time you have an appointment. It's not likely that anything is wrong, but having your pubertal stages checked is an important health measure. Some physicians will ask about ejaculation even if a young man doesn't bring up the topic, but many wait for him to say something first.

Orgasm consists of the sudden, rhythmic muscular contractions that release the tension accumulated during arousal and stimulation. Orgasm also includes a mental release or feeling of satisfaction. 77

Daughter wants pill

DEAR DR. REINISCH: My aughter is 15 and has asked to be put on the Pill. She mostly does group things with girls and does not have a steady boyfriend I've talked extensively with her about this, but end up feeling "damned if I do and damned if I don't." Maybe you can answer some of my questions.

Am I right to assume that if she does not have a steady boyfriend but takes the Pill, then she will give herself to anyone anytime and get a bad reputation?

If she starts on the Pill at 15. will she have problems later in life when she wants children?

DEAR READER: Has your daughter told you why she wants to take the Pill? Some young women believe that taking oral contraceptives will reduce menstrual pain and the symptoms of premenstrual syndrome (PMS). This does work in some cases, but not in

If your daughter's reasons are medical, consult your family physician or gynecologist Taking the Pill while a teenager is not thought to reduce future fertility. However, experts do suggest that before beginning this hormone-based medication, young women should be menstruating regularly for six months or a year. Any woman who has had irregular cycles before taking the Pill may return to an rregular pattern when she stops and thus experience delayed fertility. A physician can evaluate if the Pill is appropriate for your daughter's current and future health.

You've also asked about the behavioral aspects of taking the Pill However, I found no research that investigated whether the Pill caused the initiation of sexual behavior.

In some ways, your concern that the Pill might change your daughter's behavior resembles many people's fear that sex education (especially information about contraception) will cause adolescents to have sex. Current research does not

Tips can help - you to savor that vacation

lanning a trip? Here are could help make it Once your plans are made, put a small box incidentals in a convenient location. Begin your collection with passports and travel documents. As you think of other items, add them. When you get ready to do your packing, everything will be handy in one place. Postcard labels. Save time and energy on your trip by iddressing self-stick labels before you go. Use them on postcards for the folks back

Postcards for your pets. Include one label for your dog and cat to let them know you'r thinking of them while you're When you return, you'll have a souvenir, complete with foreign stamps and postmark for yourself. No pets? Ask friends and relatives to save their cards for you. Self-stick address labels. Also take some labels already printed with your name and address to save writing that information on many forms or to add purchase. If you give these labels instead of business cards to the people you meet, they can be stuck right in an address

filled with water in your purse or camera bag so you're never caught short when you need an aspirin or a thirst-quenching

Self-stick mending tape. A roll of 2-inch tape won't take much space and can be used to patch tears in soft-side luggage, fix broken handles and make other

Index cards. If you carry a few in purse, pocket or camera bag, you can jot notes for photos as ou take them and avoid get back home. Cards are more able than paper, and the 3x5 size fits easily into a shirt

Blank self-stick labels. As you finish each roll of film, write down the dates and places covered on a label, and stick it on the film container. Before you take the film in to be developed, peel the labels off and stick them on another sheet of paper for help later in organizing your developed prints or slides. While you're traveling, you can easily see which film has already been habit of pickig up a small rock or shell from every place you visit. A piece of Jerusalem stone, for example, is a unique reminder of the honey-colored city. Don't forget to label what you get. There are many ways t splay your collection at home. Travel journal. Get a notebook small enough to carry conveniently in a handbag or camera case so that you'll have it with you all the time. Use spare moments during the day to write instead of trying to recapture the whole day late at night when all you want to do is go to bed. If you buy a blank otebook instead of the travel diaries sold in gift shops, you'll not only save money, but you can also set up the journal to accommodate your own needs pages in the front of your journal to make a calendar with enough two-inch squares to cover your whole trip. Write in flight imes and as much of the itinerary as you know before you go. While you're on the trip, activities. The calendar not only vides a ready overview of yoru whole trip, but also serves as an index for the detailed entries in your journal.

Expense record. If you want to keen a record of your costs, establish one section in your journal for expenses. Set up several pages in columns: date, what the expense was for, amount in foreign currency. amount converted to American your journal dollars and running total. (You may also want to set up another page to keep track of the money you exchange.)

Only the first three columns need to be filled in while you're on the trip. You can figure the rest out when you get home. (You may find those index cards handy for recording transactions during the day; you can transfer them to your journal at night.) A sturdy envelope in your purse or camera bag is a convenient place to collect any receipts you need to keep.

Purchase list. Since your record will include food and other expenses as well as gifts you may want to consider keeping a separate list of items purchased. You can easily see what gifts you've purchased or still need to find and whether you're close to exceeding the duty-free limit.

Foreign price conversion implified. Make up a reference ard for converting prices into U.S. money. Using a calculator and current exchange rates, list some basic amounts ($1, $2, $5, $10. $15) and beside each the currency of the country or countries you're going to visit. Cover the card with invisible Contact paper and carry it with you as you travel - a glance at the card will make it easy for you to guesstimate the price in

U.S. money of any item. Important info page. Look up important information you may need, such as passport number and expiration dates, addresses and phone numbers of U.S. embassies, your eyeglass prescription, etc. and record it in

What to see and do. List the places you don't want to miss as well as suggestion from friends about restaurants, etc. Note these in the front of your journal by cities. Then don't forget to review the list as you travel.

Small map, Find a small map (or photocopy one) to tuck in your travel journal for easy reference. Every now and then you may want to see where you are in relation to where you've been or where you're going. The map is also useful for a quick check of the correct spelling of unfamiliar place names.

Extra protection for much-handled paper. If you'll be using an itinerary sheet or map a great deal, cover it with invisible Contact paper before you go. (This covering is also a good idea for a paperback travel guidebook and your travel

Travel washcloth, Many foreign hotels don't furnish washcloths. If you can't get along without one, bring a package of disposable cloths. They'll do the job, dry quickly and can be thrown away at your last stop.

Books to read. If you need books to read for the long flights, bring paperbacks that you don't want to keep. After you read them, use them as gifts or guides or give them to other travelers you meet.

Clothes, to discard. Instead of your very best clothing, bring inderwear, socks, etc. that have seen better days. Instead of doing laundry every night, discard them along the way.

Fast-dry laundry. Before you can hang up laundered items, roll them in a towel to eliminate excess water for faster drying.

Bags, not jars. Bring instant coffee and laundry detergent in plastic bags. They'll weigh less and take less packing space.

Coffee on the go. You can usually find hot water, even when there is no coffee. If you crave a cup after every meal, pu some instant in an empty 35mm film container, carry it with you, and ask for a cup of hot water when coffee isn't served (or doesn't taste like the stuff you get back home).

Emergency snecks. Carry a couple of plastic food storage bags in your camera bag or purse. Leftover rolls can be buttered and jellied at meals and carried for snacks later when food is unavailable. The bags can also be used for unplanne beachcombing stops or as rainhats in a sudden shower.

Food from home. A few packages of instant soup, powdered juice or hot chocolate may be just the thing you'll need late at night or early in the morning. Pack some just in case; they won't take up too much

As things begin, so they end.

When you return from your trip with happy memories and a hundred souvenir postcards. booklets and other paper treasures, find the same small box you used as you collected items for your trip. Gather all the memorabilia from the trip. pack it in the box and label it with the year and place you traveled. You can plan your next trip or take this one again some stormy winter day just by looking through the mementos in this box.

Dining In

Foods can influence your moods

'You are what you eat' may apply to your personality as well

By Karen Judson

o you feel groggy after a breakfast of to go when you star juice and toast? Are you spoiling for a fight after dining on souffle? Do pasta casseroles leave you feeling fuzzy and unable to concentrate Do you crave chocolate, then feel out of sorts after eating two or three candy bars?

If any of these scenarios sounds familiar, you may be more sensitive to certain foods than you realize.

When we think of food allergies we usually associate them with sneezing, wheezing, hives or eczema. But according to John Crayton, M.D., a osychiatrist at the University of Chicago Medical Center, less commonly recognized symptoms, such as mood swings and behavioral changes, may also be indicative of food

"We're not talking about what might be called traditional food allergies, such as breaking out in hives or a rash after eating a certain food," explains Dr. Crayton, "rather, marked changes in mood or behavior Such a link has been theorized but it has seldom been studied and almost never shown.

between food and moods is still relatively hazy, early studies did establish a tentative connection. The book "Food Allergy," written by Albert Rowe, M.D. in 1930, documents a number of patients who complained of drowsiness, irritability, fatigue weakness, slowness and behavior problems after eating

In 1947, Theron Randolph M.D., described a condition he termed "allergic fatigue," wherein patients (children and adults) experienced behavior changes apparently related to Frederic Speer, M.D., coined syndrome," in 1954 to describe nervous-system symptoms including inattention, irritability, anxiety, moodiness, fatigue, depression and nervousness suffered by some patients after eating certain foods.

In a recent study of the food-mood link, Dr. Crayton and his team of University of Chicago researchers tested 35 patients, divided into two groups. The 23 patients in group one claimed to have prior mood and behavioral problems in which food played a role. The 12 patients in group two did not believe they had food-related

In a double-blind study neither patients nor researchers knew which foods were given to which subjects), when given capsules containing commonly implicated foods (for example corn, wheat, milk, eggs, soy products or chocolate), 16 of the individuals tested showed marked mood and behavioral changes, such as depression, mood swings, difficulty concentrating, anxiety or

Test subjects given a placebo had no reactions. Not all of the subjects with a history of food omplaints showed significant mood changes, and one 'normal" subject did, indicating that some who think they are food sensitive might not be, while others may have the problem but be unaware of it.

The same subjects who reported increases in irritability anxiety, depression, short attention span and mood swings showed marked changes in two immune-system components when compared with controls. Their blood showed significantly lower levels of serum complement (a group of protein involved in mediating immune-system reactions) and higher levels of immune complexes (blood proteins formed in the course of an ntigen-antibody reaction). The exact mechanisms responsible for food-mood elationships are still unknown, but one theory is that immune complexes formed during antigen-antibody reactions might produce local inflammation in the brain. The result could be changes in normal brain function, leading to behavioral or mood changes.

Psychiatrist David King, an

Iniversity of California in San Francisco who is also studying the relationship between foods and moods, em results are not yet conclusive

"Points we must continue to investigate," says Dr. King. "include whether mood or behavioral effects do occur solely in response to certain foods, the mechanism that causes the reaction, and effective treatments for food-related psychological or behavior

Doris Rapp, M.Q., a pediatric allergist and author of Allergies and the Hyperactive Child," states that some allergists recognize only a restricted immunologic definition of food allergy and believe that only a small percentage (5 to 10 percent) of the population is affected. Other physicians, with less restricted working definition of food allergy. believe that as much as 70 percent of the population may have this problem.

Dr. Rapp presents evidence to suggest that many common social-psychological problems such as alcoholism, criminal behavior, battering, anorexia nervosa, severe depression and related to food sensitivities.

In answer to whether childre with behavior problems due to food sensitivities grow into adults who cannot cope with the rules of our society, Dr. Rapp writes, "We simply don't know... In a book entitled 'Born Ziporyn states that Richard Speck, who was convicted of killing eight student nurses, was a compulsive sugar and candy-bar eater. Dr. Ziporyn wondered if hypoglycemia was a factor related to his emotional and uncontrollable behavior. Could corn, sugar or chocolate be unsuspected factors? According to Dr. King, 'Some physicians don't believe in the food-mood theory at all. while others believe food is responsible for most behavior The truth is undoubtedly omewhere in between

That's the way many birthday parties for young children start, Like most birthday parents, she realized she would be largely responsible

Children do behave differently in groups, even when the numbers are small and even when the children know each other well. It's not an easy thing for children in groups to control their impulses. What helps them feel comfortable is knowing there are adults in charge who will take charge by providing the control they need.

Providing a framework doesn't take away children's generally helps them to be more free because it provides boundaries. It's like a fence that offers security for what can harmen inside the enclosure charge had taken charge. Young children aren't the only ones who can manage better when the person in authority offers structure. Two fourth-graders playing together for a Saturday afternoon begged for suggestions of "What can we do?" After hearing a few ideas from a parent, they chose one and spent the whole afternoon engrossed in that project. It wasn't a lack of magination that prompted their question as much as it was a request for help in focusing their energies. When it seemed they could do anything, they couldn't think of anything to do.

We've also heard of a Sunday School class of unruly 12-year-olds who ran through a succession of teachers who had tried to make that Sunday time both friendly and free-form. Finally a new teacher came... and stayed. Far from treating the Sunday School as a casual get-trigether, he set up a firm, but comfortable, structure to which the children reacted with both pleasure and eratitude in

We see the story through the eyes of Lahr (Wallace Shawn), as he interviews Orton's agent, Peggy Ramsey (a terrific, urbane Vanessa Radgrave), and Orton's sister. Still, viewers may not feel sakisfied with Lahr's — or the movie's — efforts to explain Halliwell's appeal for Orton. The film asems to take the inexplicability of their union as a given.

Jamie Lee Curtis likes to talk about marriage, movies & more

LOS ANGELES — She talks to the press, he doesn't. He's nutty about baseball, she isn't.

Despite differing philosophies and interests and crasy work schedules, Jamie Lee Curtis says her two-year-old marriage to comedy actor Christopher Guest is working fine, thank you.

So much so that last December they adopted a baby daughter, Annie.

Annie.
White Annie was taking a nap the other afternoon, Curtis talked about her marriage, her new movie and other mattera. She lives in a West Hollywood apartment building so venerable that it has been declared a historic monument. Tenants of the building include Bette Davis, Stephen Collins and other actors, as well as an assortment of writers, directors, dement of writers, directors, de-signers and others in the industry.

"I have this fantasy about doing our own movie in-house," Cartin mused. "Bette Davis could play the grande dame, and we could cant it, write it, direct it and produce it all

She was asked why she continue to do interviews when many of her acting generation, including her own husband, do not.

superstar (Alex English of the Denver Nuggets) who quits the game to join a nuclear protest started by a Montana Little Lesguer. It becomes a worldwide crusade that finally brings action by the U.S. president (Gregory Peck) and the Soviet premier.

Curtis became part of "Amazing Grace and Chuck" when producer-writer David Field outlined the script over dinner two years ago. "I thought it was wonderful, and I offered my services at that time," she said. The project was not an easy sell, but finally found a home

Jamie Lee Curtis was born 28 years ago when her parents were the king and queen of the fan magazines. They were divorced 314 years later, and Curtis and her older sister, Kelly, were raised by Leigh and her second huzband, real estate agent Bob Brandt.

Curtis went to a New England boarding school and attended six months at her mother's school, University of the Pacific. But she chucked higher education for acting, making her debut with two lines in a "Quincy" episode on television.

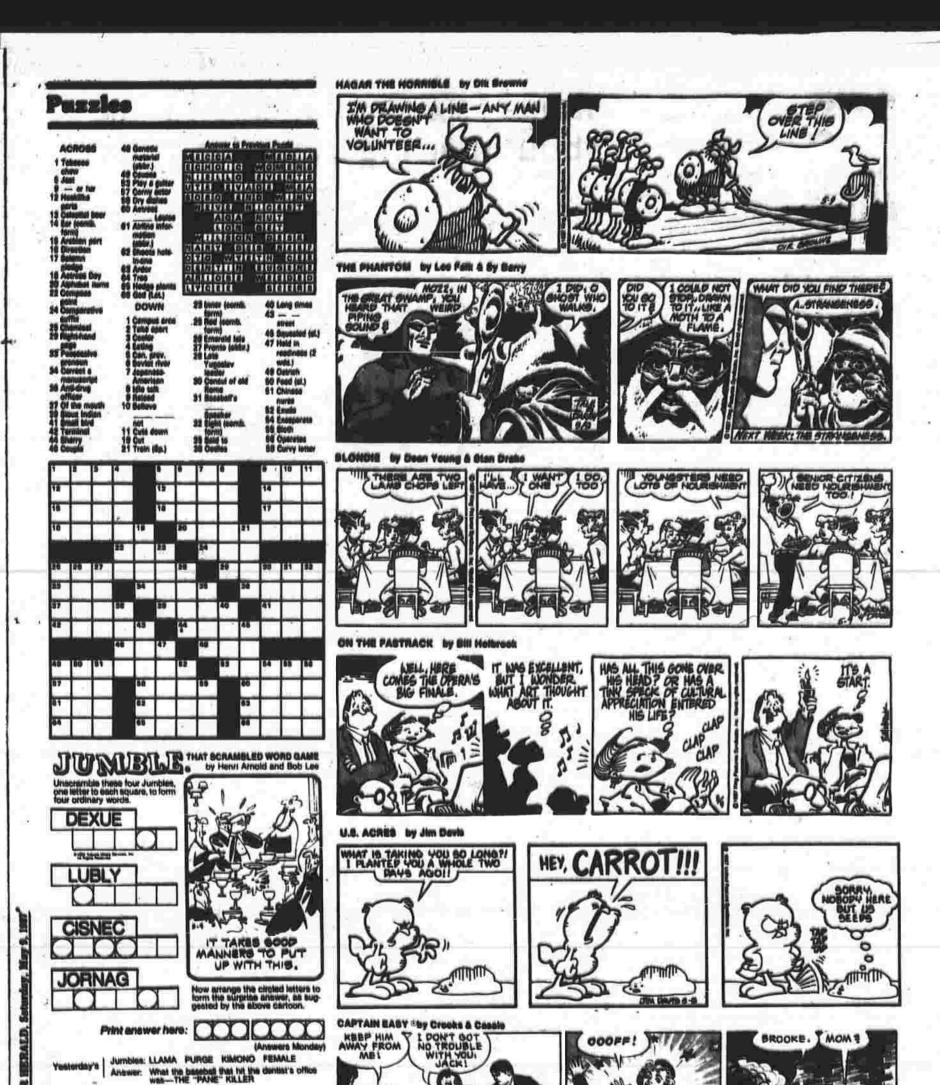

stuck in the horror mode with suci screamers as "Halloween," Prom Night" and "Terror Train." But she broke out with the TV movie "Death of a Centerfold: The Dorothy Stratten Story." She followed with the features "Perfect," "Trading Places" and "Grand-view, USA."

Curtis married "Saturday Night Live" comic Christopher Guest at a time when his own film career was taking off.

"There's a theory that if you are married actors, you have to separate," she said. "We have tried not to do that. A couple of weeks, but no months at a time.

A good example is a part found in front-wheel drives that links the transmission to the front wheels. It's called a CV (constant velocity) joint. It must rotate and move as the wheel turns and bounces along the road. Inside the joint is a delicate assortment of bearings bathed in grease. These bearings are protected by a plastic or rabber cover that looks like the pleats in an accordian. The gover is called a CV boot.

To locate CV joint and boot, look under the front end of your car, in the center of each wheel is a shaft with a bellows-like boot on each end. Inside is the CV joint.

The bottom fine on preventing prema-ture wear and damage to expensive CV joints is to make sure the boot and cracked or doesn't leak. If you notice a crack or leak, take care of it immediately, Replacing a CV boot should only cost between 518 and 520, which is far cheaper than replacing CV joints. The boot should be inspected at least every 12,000 miles for cracke and leasts.

Catching a worn-out battery before it falls can save inconvenience and annecessary expense. Battery connections should be checked periodically, as well.

The Car Care Council emphasizes that seeking out the wear points listed above covers only those under the hood. Beyond these, there are the commonly replaced items around the car from windshield wipers and tires to shock absorbers, all of which require periodic attention.

Injury claims

Know your rights in traffic accidents

After driving for 25 years without a single accident, John Santib was tell from the rear as he stopped his ear for a red light. He suffered neck and back injuries and test two months of work. Instead of paying Sentile for his basics, the other driver's managed company west to court, convinced the jury that Santib had made a panic stop and was the east. Atthough he lost $5,000 in doctor little and wages — and he was, in fact, an insocent victim — Santib never recovered a cent for his injuries in this accident.

"Some Santib" could be any one of many Americans. Hearty one out of the drivers have accidents each year. Of 197 attition drivers in the United States, 35 relition are severed a sectional victim.

Atthough most of these drivers town insurance, many accident victims who outler injuries, the Smith, recover secting at all.

There are two common enisconceptions about automotive imperance companies. The first is that they settle most chains fairly; the second to that they pay large amounts of money in these actionness.

The real story is quite different.

There are so reliable statistics on the control of lightenate claims of the decided or ender pad each year, or not how many unificant of claims control to accident victims are not collected. The datter amount, though, is state.

court have accomplished very little. And the courts don't guerantee tair settlements to claimints.

The accident victim really stands where he straye did in relation to the actomorate immerance companies—at a targe disadvantage. Most accident victims have no idea when they accompanies with an adjuster that they are bargaining with a ingley trained expert whose goal is to give the victim the lowest settlement possible.

There is no entick, easy way to get full value for an insurance claim. It requires permitmen and hard work on the part of an accident victim, which is the access that of effort insurance companies make to avoid paying late settlements. The only determe you have against this attitude is to me your own place of actions.

Keep in traind the following points in lighting the tacties and methods used by insurance claims adjuster:

Don't sign a release too soon.

Don't settle during the first visit from the claims adjuster.

Don't agree to a phone-call active.

Are accident victima belighes when tacing imparance company broading control for Victima of craffic seedents can counter—without the help of all attentors or the passing of any new laws—every tacts an invariance company was. And the viptima can negotiate a fair settlement for their personal injury claims.

Blased on any experience as an adjuster for one of America's largest this surance companies, I believe that most victima of traffic seedlents can and should settle their own accident craffins.

In one year, for example, an inpurance company a storpey tried to case, in 40 of them, the jury award was loss than the laghest ofter already made, in three, the award matched it; and in two, the jury awarded more.

This is the side of settlements that the public never sees. It is also the way most settlement trains end.

Insurance companies will more cases than they lose and when they lose, they often pursue the appeals as far as they can in logs of a reversal. They have millions of dollars in claims money at stake each year. They protect this money by hiring the linest attorneys to detend their esses. These attorneys are specialists who handle only insurance obtains and try dozens of such cases each year. Noah reaches TofC semis

By Bob Greene The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Yannick Noah of France, showing the form that carried him to victory last year, easily moved into the semifinals of the $619.000 Tournament of Champions at the West Side Tennis Club Friday.

Fourth-seeded Andres Gomes of Ecuador and hard-serving Slobodan Zivojinovich of Yugoslavia, the

No. 12 seed, also won their quarterfinal matches.

Top-seeded Boris Becker of West Germany played
No. 7 Guillermo Vitas of Argentina, last year's losing finalist, in the last quarterfinal Friday night.

Noah will face Zivojinovich and Gomes will take on the Becker-Vitas winner in Saturday's semifinals of the Becker-Vilas winner in Saturday's semifinate of this 64-player tournament on the clay courts at Forest Hills, site of the U.S. Open until 1977.

The final two Americans were ousted from the tournament when Noah crushed 10th-seeded Aaron Krickstein 6-2, 6-2 in just over an hour and Zivojinovich outlasted Paul Annacone 5-7, 7-5, 6-4. Gomez advanced with a 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 victory over No. 6 Martin Jaite of Armenting.

Argentina.

"That was by far the bst match I've played this week." Noah said. "I've been working hard, playing both singles and doubles. And I'm physically OK."

Winner of the French Open in 1983, Noah has been hampered by injuries every year. And that, he says, has hampered his play.

"I'm tail and physically strong," said the Frenchman, who now lives in New York. "That's my style of playing.

playing.

"You have to use your head and play with your abilities. I use my strength — a good serve, my volley, physical powers — regardless of the surface."

Noah had no problems handling Krickstein, a 19-year-old right-hander who rarely ventured to the net. The Frenchman never lost more than two points on his serve in any one game and dropped just eight points.

on his serve in the match.
Nosh broke Krickstein's serve in the third and seventh games of the first set and the first and fifth games of the second.

After Zivojinovich and Annacone traded the first two sets, the Yugoslav took a 2-0 lead in the decisive third set by breaking the American in the very first game. But Annacone pulled even at 2-2 when he broke

The two held their next serve easily, moving to 3-3, before Annacone had to overome a break point before holding in the seventh game.

Staknis, Konopka take net crowns

Judy Staknis and Ron Konopka emerged as women's and men's singles champions at recent action at the Manchester Racquet Club. Staknis successfully defended her title by beating Cindy Rapelye for the title in straight sets 6-1, 6-2. Konopka turned back former East Catholic High standout Mark Briggs 6-1, 6-3 for he men's crown.

Browns signs new Kansas pact

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Larry Brown, who has led Ransas to NCAA tournament appearances in each of his four years as Jayhawk baskethall coach, signed a four-year contract extending through the 1996-91 season on Friday.

Brown, often rumored to be leaving the Jayhawks to return to the National Baskethall Association, will continually have a four-year contract in effect, said Athletic Director Monte Johnson.

Terms of the contract were not amounced. Brown's current salary is $76,660 a year.

"I am appreciative of the people who have been so "I am appreciative of the people who have been so kind to me," Brown said. "Hopefully, I'll be able to pay them back."

Since becoming head coach in 1985 when Ted Owens was fired, Brown has guided the Jayhawks to a 108-33 record. The Jayhawks went to the Final Four in 1986, when Brown was named Big Eight Coach of the Year.

Warrior fans to test the Lakers

By The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Los Angeles Lakers have yet to lose a playoff game or be seriously tested in the NBA's postsesson tournament, outscoring opponents by an average of 21 points in five games.

But they have yet to play in front of the Golden State Warriors' fans. They will have that experience Saturday and Sunday in Games 3 and 4 of the teams' best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series.

"I think it's going to be mind-boggling," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said after his team went up 2-0 with Thursday night's 116-101 victory in Los Angeles. "They're (the fans) going to be excited, and they have Krone was the winning pitcher in Cheney's 22-0 romp.

Winning pitcher Diene Pepin spun a three-hitter at MHS and she helped her own cause with two hits.

"Believe it or not, I wasn't impressed with them (Windham) as much as the first time," Indian Coach Mary Faignant said. "I was pleased with the way my team played except the first and sixth innings when we got a little sloppy. I think we're coming."

Sophomore Lisa Moriconi pitched well in defeat for Manchester and center fielder Chantal Larose played well defensively.

Bucks close gap on Celts in series with overtime win MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Bucks outscored the Boston Celtics, 12-7, in overtime to narrow the gap in their NBA Eastern Conference playoff battle with a 126-121 victory Friday night at the Mecca.

Boston still leads the series, 2-1, with Game Four scheduled Sunday afternoon in Milwaukee. The Celtics tied the game at 114-all at the end of regulation on a basket by Robert Parish with seven threw the ball away with nine seconds remaining giving the Celtics possession under their basket. Larry Bird's alley-oop pass to Parish tied it. Milwaukee, led by Sidney Moncrief, took the lead from the Celtics midway through the overtime period and Boston couldn't come close.

Boston's Kevin McHale, who finished with 25 points.

COMFED JOINS RELAYS

By Jim Tierney Herold Sports Writer

In quest of the breaking the 4-minute mile barrier. That will be the prevailing theme for the Christie McCormick Mile, the highlighted event at this year's 12th edition of the Manchester Community College New England Relays to be staged at Manchester High School on June 20. Saturday will be the track and field events at the high school and Sunday will be the four-mile road race.

The McCormick Mile has received sponsorship from ComFed Savings Bank while Pratt and Whitney is sponsoring the road race Sunday. It is the intention of the meet director to draw an elite field of runners for the mile and a sub four-minute mile would be the first ever in Connecticut and only the third ever in New

Due to concerted efforts on the part of Jim Balcome, first-year Relays director and director of the Manchester Road Race, Manchester High track Coach George Sultor, and Ray Crothers, former winner of the Thanksgiving Day Road Race (1985), the Relays have received a welcome organizational shot in the arm which should extend the history of the two-day annual event.

One man who is committed to the McCormick Mile and who has broken four minutes in the mile is Ross Donoghue, a 1982 Villanova University graduate. Donoghue, 27, has a personal best of 3:53 in the mile (run at a meet at UCLA in 1984).

No one has ever broken four minutes in the mile in Connecticut and only two people have ever broken it on an outdoor track in New England. During a short-lived runners' pro circuit in the mid-70's, two Olympians broke the enviable barrier at a meet at Boston University. American Dave Wottle, the 1972 gold medalist in the 800 meters at Munich and Kenya's Ben Jipcho, a silver medalist in the steeplechase at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City, ran 3:57.9 and 3:58.2, respectively.

Ireland's Frank O'Mara ran a 3:53 indoors this past January in Rhode Island at the Brown Invitational.

Donoghue's most recent performance was a victory in a two-mile road race in Central Park in New York as part of the Trevira Twosome. Donoghue edged out Ireland's Eamonn Coghlan, the world-record holder in the indoor mile and three-time winner of the Manchester Road Race. Donoghue's time was 8:51.

the indoor mile and three-time winner of the Manchester Road Race. Donoghue's time was 8:51.

"It was a good race," Donoghue said of his win over Coghlan. "It was really equivalent to about an 8:35 on a track. It's right where I want to be."

"I'll be ready," the high school accounting teacher in Queens, N.Y. said. Ireland's Charite Breagy, a 4:07 miler and two-time winner of the race, will join Donoghue at the starting line. "He (Donoghue) is world class," Breagy said. "I think he's the perfect man.

DJ linked to drug use

By John Solomon The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Dennia, Johnson of the Boston Celtics and Milwaukee Bucks' centers Jack Sikms and Paul Mokeski were linked to an Arizona grand jury's investigation into alleged drug use and illegal gambling, a newspaper reported Friday.

All three players, who were in Milwaukee for Friday night's NBA playoff game between the Celtics and the Bucks; denied the allegations contained in a copyright story in Arizona's Mesa Tribune.

The newspaper reported that transcripts it had obtained said that former Phoenix Suns guard Johnny High told the county grand jury he used cocaine with Johnson on three occasions during the 1962-63 season.

"I do not use cocaine." said
Johnson, who was with the Suns that season. "I did not. I hope my point is getting across. I have not, I will not. I don't intend to."

The Tribune reported the transcripts also showed that testimony on April 9 alleged that Sikma and Mokeski, his backup, gave a Phoenix nightclub manager winning betting advice the night before the Bucks beat the Suns 115-107 on Feb. 21.

"There's absolutely no truth to it," Sikma said Friday. "I have no knowledge of any investigation going on at this point concerning me anywhere."

The Maricopa County investigation reportedly is looking into allegations that a non-player won more than $100,000 by placing an "under-over" bet on that Feb. 21

Sikma said he was at the Phoenix nightclub, Malarkey's, two nights before the game to "have a couple of beers" with Mokeski, a Bucks' trainer and a reporter from the Milwayban Tayonal

"Most of the time, I was talking to the people I came with, just shooting the breeze," said Sikma. "People come up and ask how you're doing and so forth, I left there with there with no knowledge of anything unusual."

of anything unusual."

Sikma said be did not know James Jordan, the nightclub manager whom the newspaper said allegedly received the information.

Jordan may have rewarded Mokeski with gifts of cocaine for the tip, according to the newspaper. "Whatever the bartender thinks

Jordan said to him, I can't control that," said Mokeski. "He (Jordan) did not offer me
