

Rain dampens East; cold grips New York

Rain dampened broad sections of the nation today as thunderstorms ranged across sections of the East and Texas. A cold front stretched from western New York and central Ohio into southern Missouri and southern Oklahoma, spinning thunderstorms across western New York and Pennsylvania into eastern Ohio.

Charity Work
The German physicist Wilhelm Konrad Roentgen discovered X-rays in 1895. In a spirit of altruism, he refused to apply for any patent or to try to gain financially from his discovery. Other scientists have occasionally done the same thing. Marie Curie refused to patent radium, saying that it belonged to the world and no one had the right to profit from it. Likewise, John Walker, who gave the world the match, never took out a patent on his invention.

Town's CPR program needs resuscitation

By George Lyons
Herald Reporter

Over the last two years, the Manchester CPR Project has taught about 800 people how to save someone's life if their heart stops beating or their lungs stop functioning.

Now, the program itself needs resuscitation, said Gloria Langer, its coordinator. A shortage of new equipment and instructors has made it difficult to plan lessons. Langer told the Emergency Medical Services Council Thursday.

"I think the program's got to get centered," she said, during a meeting at Lincoln Center. The biggest problem is finding teachers, she said.

Currently, there are about 20 instructors. Ideally, Langer said, she needs 40 to 50. The shortage has not forced her to cancel a class, but Langer said she and her husband, Joseph, have been forced to do most of the teaching to fill the gap.

"If Gloria would stop teaching for any reason, the program would be gone," said Dr. Joel Reich, the chairman of the town's Emergency Medical Services.

"It's ailing to teach continually," said Langer. She said after the meeting that if more instructors are not found, the program may end.

Reich said Manchester's CPR program is unique because it is the only one in the area organized by a municipality and held on a regular basis. The classes are also sponsored by Manchester Memorial Hospital and the American Heart Association.

ing instructors is not so much a question of money, but of time. Langer explained that many potential teachers find it difficult to devote the hours necessary.

"The day of the volunteer is sort of gone," she said after the meeting.

A number of EMS Council members, though, said that if more money were offered, the number of available instructors would increase.

Harold Topfiff, chief of the Eighth Utilities District Fire Department, proposed increasing the hourly pay of lead instructors from $8 to $12, and from $6 to $8 for assistants.

Reich said if that were done, the fee paid by students may have to be increased. Currently, they pay $7 for the one-night session and $10 for the two-night session.

Town Fire Chief John Rivosa said he supported the higher pay, but not charging higher fees. He said that might discourage people from signing up for the course.

Reich suggested a three-month trial period of higher teacher pay, while keeping the current fees to see if this attracts more instructors.

Langer said that additional money is needed to replace some of the manikins used in the instruction.

She said a new adult manikin should be purchased each year.

Up until now, Langer said she has been repairing the inside parts of the manikins, but the outside are showing wear. She said it would cost around $800 for a new adult manikin.

If one is purchased, though, it may strip the program's budget. For the fiscal year that ends June 30, the budget totaled $4,000. Of that, teacher pay has so far accounted for about $5,000.

While the town has decided to raise its contribution from $3,000 to $4,000 for the fiscal year that starts July 1, Reich explained that the new federal law has discouraged private firms from making contributions. This is expected to cut into the program's revenue.

New study says 5% use drugs

By George Lyons
Herald Reporter

About 5 percent of Manchester's young people under 18 have a problem with either drugs or alcohol, says a report released Thursday. The same report says that more young people use hallucinogens such as LSD than use cocaine.

The 10-page report, prepared for the town by Dr. Clairmont S. Reyes, was done as part of her work toward a master's degree in public health from the University of Connecticut.

The report noted that alcohol — particularly beer — is a larger problem than drug abuse. Marijuana is the most frequently used drug, followed by stimulants, hallucinogens, barbiturates and "very little cocaine," the report said.

Exact figures on the use of drugs by Manchester young people are not available. The report's figures are based on estimates from groups in town providing treatment and counseling to young people who have drug and alcohol problems, said town Health Director Ronald Kraatz.

The national estimate of teen drug and alcohol problems is also 5 percent, the report said. "The prevalence of drug and alcohol abuse problems in Manchester has leveled off from the teens," but awareness of the problem has just been recognized," Reyes said.

The study recommended that the new Manchester Council on Substance Abuse do a systematic evaluation of the efforts by local groups to combat drug use.

Other needs that were listed:

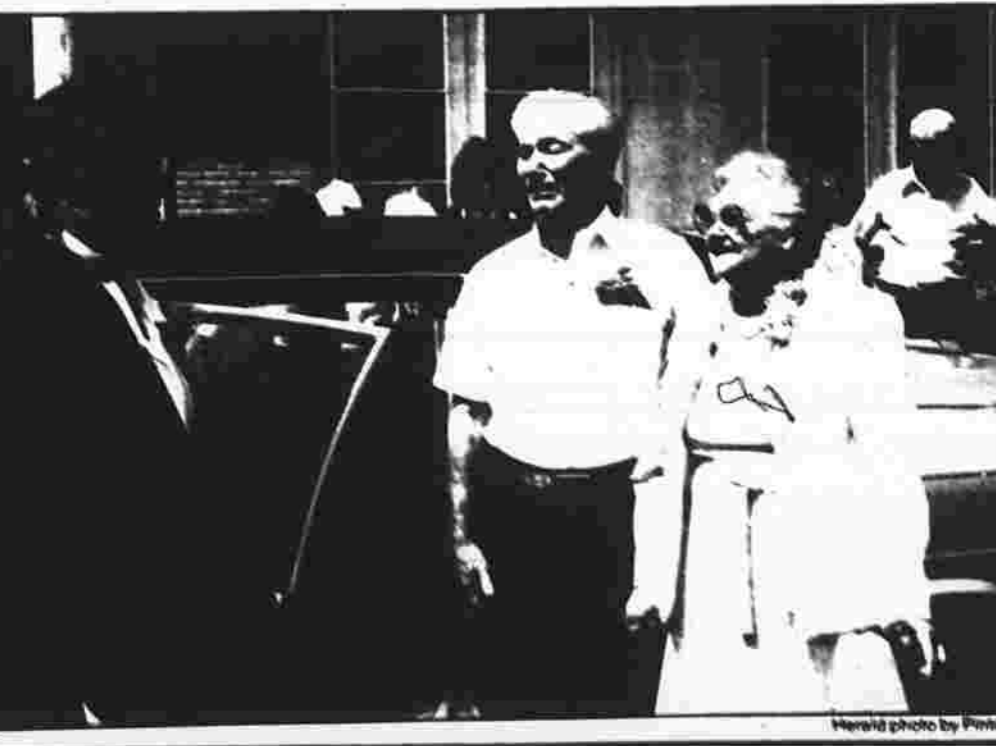

- intervention programs, such as a 24-hour hotline, crisis intervention and a referral network;
- a full-time director to coordinate schools, youths and the community on drug and alcohol issues;
- more counselors in the schools, Manchester Memorial Hospital and the Crossroads program;
- a committee to review school curriculum in kindergarten to 12th grade with a focus on the harmful effects of drug and alcohol use;
- alternative activities for youths, such as recreational centers, drama workshops, photography and club books.

Of particular interest to him, Kraatz said, was the conclusion that treatment programs for patients rebuild skills that help establish bonds to their families, friends, school and community. If these bonds are strong, there is less chance of a young person developing drug and alcohol problems, the report said.

Principal questioned

BOLTON - Two school board members Thursday night questioned the high school principal's authority to suspend the high school baseball team earlier this week, a decision they said should have been made in conjunction with the Board of Education.

The decision by Bolton High School Principal Joseph Fleming to suspend the team came Tuesday, after the team had dwindled from 14 players to eight. The team has not won a game since 1983.

School board member John T. Muro and Chairman James H. Marshall told Fleming during the board's meeting in Bolton Center School that they were surprised when they learned through newspaper stories that the team had been disbanded.

Marshall repeatedly asked Fleming whether he didn't think the school board should have been consulted before the team was disbanded Fleming said that in this case, a decision had to be made. He promised however, to consult the Board of Education in the future.

Board member Pamela Z. Sawyer said the team's demise should have come as no surprise to the school board because the team's problems had been apparent for a long time.

Following discussion, the Board of Education voted to have Fleming come back to the board in the fall and in the spring with a report on the status of athletics.

Hundreds remember McKinney

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

FAIRFIELD — More than 1,000 congressional colleagues, family members, friends and constituents remembered U.S. Rep. Stewart B. McKinney as a congressman who cared deeply about the homeless and the poor.

The crowd, including Vice President George Bush and Connecticut Gov. William A. O'Neill, filled the 363-year-old Trinity Episcopal Church at Thursday's memorial service for McKinney.

Hundreds of others — state legislators, state officials and even some who have been mentioned as potential candidates for McKinney's seat — watched the 45-minute services on closed circuit television on buttons and loudspeakers set up on the sunny lawn.

McKinney, a nine-term congressman from Connecticut's 4th District, was 56 when he died last week of a bacterial infection brought on by AIDS contracted from a blood transfusion.

Those leading the service tried to make it a celebration of McKinney's life, not a somber ceremony mourning his death.

But as "America's Beautiful" was sung, many had trouble keeping their composure.

Each of the congressman's five children read poems during the service, and his brother and sister read selections from the Bible.

The homily and two "reflections" by U.S. Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., R-N.Y., and U.S. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., contained as many light as serious comments about McKinney and his career.

"I remember his first campaign slogan: 'McKinney Cares,'" the Rev. William Sangiovanni said during the homily. "He never forgot it. He did us proud."

"From the 'Gold Coast' towns of his district, to the poorest pockets in the cities in his district, Stew McKinney was at home with his people and they were at home with him."

Sangiovanni also noted how McKinney had insisted that his fight against AIDS complications be made public by his death.

"Through Stewart McKinney, others may survive this lethal disease," he said.

Fish recalled McKinney's consistent advice to his staff, many of whom attended the services: "Be a workhorse, not a showhorse."

Weicker, who once represented the same congressional district, spoke directly to McKinney's widow, Lucie, and their children, who sat in a front pew, in moving, six-minute tributes.

"Stewart McKinney defined patriotism and Christianity in ways scarcely understood, even despised, in these times. I could tell you so much that

O'Neill steps in, aims to rescue UConn complex

By Brent Laymon
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill moved today to rescue the University of Connecticut's much-delayed sports complex, saying he would ask the legislature to come up with an additional $3 million for the project.

O'Neill stepped into the middle of a legislative dispute brewing since Wednesday, when all three bids received exceeded the project's estimated $21.1 million cost.

"I am very disappointed that it came in over bid," O'Neill said. "However, I feel that we have no alternative but to go forward with what I consider a valuable building and a valuable piece of the educational system of the state of Connecticut."

The lowest apparent bid was a joint venture from Bartlett Brainerd Escott of Bloomfield and Dujan and Meyers of Bloomfield. They presented a base price of $24.6 million — $3.5 million more than now allocated for construction.

Anthony V. Milano, the governor's budget chief, said O'Neill is only asking for $3 million because the $24.6 million estimate as a "rock bottom" price, Smoko said.

The complex is to include an 8,000-seat basketball arena, swimming pool, athletic offices and classrooms for the Department of Sports and Leisure Studies. It is originally scheduled to open in 1988 at a cost of $14 million.

Doc: Ross healthy

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Psychological tests done on accused serial-killer Michael E. Ross indicated no brain damage, a psychologist said.

Dr. John A. Cegals, who was hired by Ross' lawyers, testified under cross-examination Thursday in the sixth day of Ross' trial. He said that results from X-rays and brain wave tests done on Ross were normal.

Cegals had previously cited tests indicating that brain damage could be responsible for Ross' poor memory.

Ross, 28, is a former insurance salesman from Jewett City section of Griswold. He is charged in the deaths of April Brunais and Leslie Shelley, both 14 and of Griswold; Wendy Baribeault, 17, of Lisbon; and Robin Stravinsky, 19, of Columbia.

Thursday's testimony was interrupted after a juror became ill and had to be admitted to the hospital for tests.

The nature of the juror's illness was not revealed. State's Attorney C. Robert Stott and Judge G. Sarrafel Ford moved to substitute an alternate for the missing juror and continue the trial.

But defense lawyers Peter Scilieri and M. Fred DeCaprio insisted that the court wait until Friday morning to see if the juror would be able to return.

Coup mastermind controls Fiji

SUVA, Fiji — The army colonel who led the South Pacific's first coup shut down Fiji's newspapers today and declared himself in complete control.

At a news conference, Lt. Col. Sitiveni Rabuka also tried to allay business fears about his military takeover, saying that this island nation was about to enter a period of "strong growth."

The 38-year-old career soldier said he expected his government would soon win recognition from other countries, despite regional leaders' widespread condemnation of his bloodless coup. Australia and New Zealand, the two major powers in the South Pacific, have refused to recognize the new regime.

Rabuka and about 10 soldiers burst into Parliament Thursday morning, arrested Prime Minister Timoci Bavadra and his 11 Cabinet ministers and suspended the constitution. Rabuka, the army's third in command, said he was seizing power because of racial violence that broke out following Bavadra's election last month.

Drug offers schizophrenics hope

CHICAGO — A new drug that has been shown to help one-third of previously untreatable schizophrenics with irreversible brain damage may offer insight into the causes of the disease, researchers say.

Although the drug has a potentially fatal side effect, it is the first drug to show improvements in patients whose brain damage suggested they were beyond hope, said Dr. Herbert Meltzer of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, one of the directors of a new study of the drug's effectiveness.

"I would predict within three to five years we'll have a safer version of this drug and we'll know more about schizophrenia," Meltzer said Thursday at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

He and his colleague, Dr. John Kane of Long Island Jewish Hospital in New York, reported Thursday that about 30 percent of the estimated 300,000 Americans with untreatable schizophrenia improve with the drug, called clozapine.

Officials say U.S. knew of crimes

LYON, France — A former U.S. Army intelligence officer says he told his superiors he suspected Klaus Barbie was a war criminal, but was told the ex-Gestapo chief was too valuable an agent to lose.

Barbie, 78, is on trial for crimes against humanity stemming from his Gestapo activities in German-occupied France. He refuses to attend the proceedings.

Some of the responses Barbie gave to French investigators who interrogated him about the charges were to be disclosed at today's session.

Normally, Barbie would be asked in court to give detailed replies to the allegations he tortured and deported Jews and French Resistance members. In his absence, court officials said, Presiding Judge Andre Cerdini would pose the questions and read Barbie's answers from the interrogation transcripts.

After the war, Barbie was recruited by the U.S. Army Counterintelligence Corps to gather intelligence about German Communists, among other tasks.

GOP likely to win filibuster vote

WASHINGTON — Both sides say the Republicans are likely to win a close vote when a sharply partisan Senate decides whether to end a GOP filibuster over "Star Wars" policy that has blocked debate on a Pentagon budget bill.

"I think we've got the horses to say, 'Let's just sit and talk a bit,'" Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., assistant Republican leader, said Thursday.

Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., said, "I can't produce 60 votes" to force an end to the unlimited debate.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, agreed with Byrd. "My expectation is that we'll be short of 60 votes."

The Senate was scheduled to vote today. Senate rules require a three-fifths vote, or 60 votes, to win what is known as a cloture motion and shut off debate. With Democrats holding a 54-46 margin, Byrd's forces would have to maintain the support of all Democrats and pick up six Republican votes in what has become a highly partisan issue.

Ex-SBA head cites pressure to quit

FRESNO, Calif. — Former U.S. Small Business Administration Director Michael Cardenas was forced to resign in 1982 because he resisted White House pressure to award a controversial defense contract to scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp.

Cardenas said his refusal "played a very significant role in my departure" on Feb. 4, 1982, according to The Fresno Bee, which published an interview with Cardenas on Thursday.

Cardenas said he told a federal grand jury investigating Wedtech on April 30 in Washington that the Army was "never satisfied with that contract, but there was constant interest from the White House."

Cardenas, who was confirmed by the Senate as SBA director in March 1981, said an investigator for independent counsel James McKay, heading one of the inquiries involving Wedtech, questioned him about alleged White House lobbying on Wedtech's behalf.

Testimony prompts resignation

By Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A key operative in the Iran-Contra affair, in testimony that prompted the resignation of Johnathan S. Miller, director of the White House office of administration, who Owen said was involved in the money transfer.

Thursday's testimony by Robert Owen was followed in short order by the resignation of Johnathan S. Miller, director of the White House office of administration, who Owen said was involved in the money transfer.

Owen appeared at the end of two weeks of hearings by House and Senate committees that so far have shown deeper and broader Reagan administration involvement in the Central American conflict than previously admitted.

Owen was the first witness to testify under a grant of limited immunity from prosecution. He told how he went to work for Contra leader Adolfo Calero for $2,500 a month and became a go-between with North at a time when Congress had prohibited aid to the Contras, "directly or indirectly."

At one point, Owen testified that he and Miller were handed stacks of traveler's checks by North at his office in the White House complex and asked to go cash them. Owen said he later turned over the cash, about $6,000 — at his apartment to a Contra leader he did not name.

Miller resigned a few hours after Owen made the revelation on Capitol Hill.

In other developments: The White House denied former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane's testimony that Reagan had approved the use of Drug Enforcement Administration agents to seek the release of hostages in Beirut by paying $2 million ransom. Presidential spokesman Marvin Fitzwater told The Washington Post that the president "did not know there was ever a plan for ransoming hostages," and had never discussed the matter.

McFarlane said both Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese III approved the plan, but that he did not know whether they were aware that some of the funds for that enterprise came from money raised for the Contras.

Senate committee member Paul S. Trible Jr., R-Va., said the CIA contributed $50,000 to keep the DEA operation going.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee and a member of the investigating committee, said the evidence collected so far "shows that some of the funds for that enterprise came from money raised for the Contras."

Senate committee member Richard V. Smith, who testified under oath last week that he was in "precarious" financial condition, is attempting with his business partner Albert Hakim to buy a large tract of land in the state of Washington.

CBS News reported Thursday night that Smith and Hakim had formed a company, SRI Corp., based in Seattle, that expressed interest as recently as a week ago in buying a 10,000-acre tract in the Quinault Indian Reservation.

Owen told the committees of a trip he made in June 1985 to meet with retired Army Maj. Gen. John Singlaub, who was trying to put together a $5 million ransom deal for the Contras. Owen took the weapons list to Calero, in San Francisco for a speech, to confirm its details, and Calero discussed the list with North by telephone, he said.

Committee sources said the panels are investigating whether retired Air Force Maj. General Richard V. Smith, who testified under oath last week that he was in "precarious" financial condition, is attempting with his business partner Albert Hakim to buy a large tract of land in the state of Washington.

CBS News reported Thursday night that Smith and Hakim had formed a company, SRI Corp., based in Seattle, that expressed interest as recently as a week ago in buying a 10,000-acre tract in the Quinault Indian Reservation.

Videotape buoys families of hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Relatives of the American hostages in Lebanon, worried that the Iran-Contra hearings have overshadowed concern for the captives, say they are buoyed by the release of a videotape in Beirut showing hostage Alan Steen.

The tape of Steen, 48, of Boston, was delivered Thursday to a newspaper office, and was the first communication from the Moslem kidnappers since April 2.

"I'm glad for his family," said Marilyn Langston of Malden, Mass., the daughter of Frank Reed, a hostage seized last September.

Steen, whose wife, Virginia, lives in Lebanon, has been reported to be seriously ill, but he seemed healthy in the videotape.

The relatives of the eight Americans being held in Lebanon have stayed in the background in recent weeks as Congress began hearings into how the Reagan administration sold weapons to Iran and pursued other initiatives in an effort to free hostages held by pro-Iranian elements in Lebanon.

"A lot of noise didn't seem to do it," Mrs. Langston said of previous efforts to effect the hostages' release. "We really have no alternative but to keep a low profile," said Thomas Cicippio of Norristown, Pa., the brother of Joseph Cicippio.

The families, however, are planning a meeting at the end of the month in France where they hope to gather with relatives of non-American hostages.

Meanwhile, people in the hostage community — relatives and ex-hostages — are concerned that the American public may lose sight of the hostage issue during the Iran-Contra hearings.

"My main concern about the hearings is that the hostages have been forgotten," Mrs. Langston said.

Cicippio said he thinks Congress is wasting too much time focusing on the past instead of trying to do something about the hostages still in captivity.

The Rev. Benjamin Weir, a former hostage freed in September 1985, said he thinks the U.S. government has tried to dissociate itself from the issue in the wake of revelations about the arms-for-hostages program.

"The government is embarrassed," Weir said, adding that he believes the families "need to continue to bring enough public attention" to get their relatives free.

But Weir said he opposed trading weapons for hostages.

Sam, one of the most outspoken relatives, said she has sensed a "kind of paranoia" on the part of the government.

NATO ministers seek global missile ban

STAVANGER, Norway (AP) — NATO defense ministers today called on the Soviet Union to drop Warsaw Pact's edge in conventional nuclear missiles and urged worldwide elimination of those weapons from superpower arsenals.

They also failed to decide whether short-range missiles should be abolished in Europe.

In a communique ending a two-day nuclear strategy session, the 14 defense chiefs welcomed the improved prospects for a U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms reduction accord, but voiced concern over the Warsaw Pact's edge in conventional forces and chemical weapons.

They also failed to decide whether short-range missiles should be abolished in Europe.

First woman to share ministry can't get away from vocation

By Susan Okulo
The Associated Press

NORTH BRANFORD — When Elaine Blondin Kriedel took up flying as a hobby, a chapter of the Civil Air Patrol asked her to be its chaplain.

"It seems that whatever else I ever thought about doing, or tried to, I would always end up doing something related somehow to this vocation," Kriedel says.

That vocation is the ministry and it has now taken her to a Roman Catholic parish in North Branford, a middle-class suburb of New Haven. At 37, she is believed to be the first Catholic lay woman to share the ministry of an established parish with a priest.

Kriedel and the Rev. Daniel McSheffery, 58, began working at the 1,100-family St. Augustine's church in August 1986. McSheffery says his technical title is pastor and Kriedel's is parish assistant, but he regards their working relationship as one of equals.

"There are things I do that the cant' do," McSheffery says, referring to the Catholic sacraments, such as confession, that only a priest can perform. Only unmarried men can be ordained as Roman Catholic priests.

"She's also better at some things than I am," McSheffery says.

Kriedel, who believes that the eventual ordination of women in the church "is a matter of justice," is separated from her husband and lives in West Hartford with her two boys. She holds a graduate degree from Yale Divinity School and her undergraduate work was in theology and psychology.

In her $30,000-a-year job as parish minister, Kriedel says her duties include counseling, baptismal preparation, visits to the sick, religious education and scripture readings and distribution of the Eucharist at Masses. McSheffery, who has a reputation as a compelling preacher, delivers most of the sermons.

The Most Rev. John F. Whealon, archbishop of Hartford, authorized Kriedel's appointment, as well as another shared ministry involving a priest, a male deacon and a nun in a Rocky Hill mission, an offshoot of a local parish.

"I am watching over this experiment carefully," he says. "It is so new. It is new for the country and probably for the Catholic world."

The reason is there is a shortage of Roman Catholic priests. McSheffery and Kriedel have instituted several changes, such as bringing liturgy practices up to date and putting more music into worship services.

Whealon says the idea of a shared ministry, called a "designated ministry team," carries a message for whom attended the services: "Be a workhorse, not a showhorse."

Weicker, who once represented the same congressional district, spoke directly to McKinney's widow, Lucie, and their children, who sat in a front pew, in moving, six-minute tributes.

"Stewart McKinney defined patriotism and Christianity in ways scarcely understood, even despised, in these times. I could tell you so much that your husband and father did to elevate man's condition on earth, from alleviating wretchedness in housing in Father Pank Village to loving the unwanted children of Americans in Vietnam.

"This was a working patriot and Christian," Weicker said.

Before Bush arrived, bomb-sniffing dogs combed the church and grounds. Bush had no comment as he entered and left the church.

Each member of Connecticut's congressional delegation attended, along with former Congressmen Toby Moffett and William X. Ratchford, and former Gov. Thomas J. Meskill.

A special election will have to be held to fill the remainder of McKinney's term, which expires in January 1989.

Crooks said. "By delaying by a month or two, we would have more time to work toward a change in the Connecticut law," Crooks said.

Fleet also is considering seeking an administrative opinion from Connecticut's banking commission on the meaning of its divestiture law. Currently, the law says banks have to divest immediately "so we might be seeking a clarification and interpretation of what 'immediately' means," Crooks said.

It would at least let us decide more clearly where we stand," he said.

For the first quarter of this year, First Connecticut Bancorp earned $4.6 million, accounting for 11.9 percent of Fleet's overall first-quarter net income of $38.3 million.

Crooks said Fleet officials hope to lobby the Connecticut Legislature to approve the banking measure early in 1988, preventing the need to divest.

The combined banks had earnings of more than $20 billion in 1986 and should have combined assets of more than $25 billion by 1988, according to Fleet chairman J. Terrence Murray.

The merger would put Fleet-Norstar 21st in assets among the nation's top 25 banks, second in earnings, 15th in net income and ninth in market value based on Dec. 31, 1986, figures.

Fleet and Norstar have scheduled separate stockholders meetings for June 11 to seek approval of the merger, Crooks said.

office said it may take several weeks to determine the cause of Andrew's death. The boy's mother is being held on a charge of risk of injury to a minor.

The 1985 incident occurred when Wilhelmina Holby and Andrew visited a neighbor, the police report said. Holby began to argue with a friend and ran out of the apartment screaming, the document shows.

"Minutes later she returned to the apartment and began pounding on the front door and windows with a large rock, breaking a window in the process," the report reads. "She then began yelling, 'Give me my baby. I want my baby

I want to kill my baby.'"

"She kept yelling this over and over and was yelling this when (police) arrived at the scene. She was also running up and down the street."

Holby was put on probation for one year on the condition that she cooperate with the DCYS and receive psychological and alcohol counseling, according to records in New Haven Superior Court.

She previously had been put on probation for 18 months and given a six-month suspended jail term after a December 1983 conviction of cruelty to persons, police said.

State law may snag giant bank merger

By Stella Dowson
The Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The Rhode Island Legislature has passed into law a bill that will permit the giant merger of Fleet National Bank with Norstar Bancorp six months earlier than originally planned.

Without fanfare, Gov. Edward D. DiPrete this week signed the bill that will permit Rhode Island banks to merge with banks outside of New England beginning next Jan. 1 instead of next July 1.

Current law permits Rhode Island banks to merge with other New England banks but not with any outside the region.

Find money for UConn's new complex

The lowest bid to build the proposed University of Connecticut sports complex was $3.5 million over the estimated cost, but that should not halt the project.

UConn desperately needs to replace the decrepit Field House in Storrs, which neither meets the needs of university students nor complies with the rules of the intercollegiate basketball program.

A new facility was needed 12 years ago. The estimated cost has continually escalated and if the Legislature unwisely delays construction again, the price tag obviously will soar above the present bids. The complex was originally scheduled to open in 1985 at a cost of $14 million. This year's estimate, too low to be realistic to contractors, was $21.1 million.

Connecticut should be ashamed for allowing one of the showcases of its state university to fall into disrepair. The Field House is so out of date that the high-powered Big East Conference has ruled it unacceptable for men's league games.

The state must allow the difference. Legislators didn't blink when the cost of improvements to the state Capitol more than doubled. Bonding for those increases was approved without hesitation. Funding for the University of Connecticut Sports Complex should come just as quickly. After all, the state's current budget surplus is about $300 million.

There's no need for a further delay.

No longer welcome

Bikers, joggers and dog walkers are no longer welcome at the Manchester Country Club.

At least that's what the signs are going to say, according to John Pickens, the club's president.

It's the familiar story: Once again, a few have ruined it for the many. Vandilam, Pickens said this week, has become such a problem on the course that the measure is being taken to prevent further damage to the greens.

Police have been alerted and motorcycle patrols will make regular stops at the course during non-business hours.

Here's a suggestion: Let the joggers and the walkers remain, and instead of forbidding them from the course, post a sign asking them to call the police department if they see any unusual activity.

$25 million gift wasn't much of a gift

Columbia University announced the other day that a man was going to give it $25 million. The real cost to the donor will be less than the publicized sum since the money will be given over a period of time and the benefactor will be drawing interest on it.

The money is to go for aiding minority students, and thus a salaried or two in the donor's direction is in order, but don't make the bending too deep. The man putting up the dough is John W. Kluge and the amount he is giving represents less than 1 percent of his wealth. Estimates put Kluge's fortune, if you can call that much money a mere fortune, at around the three-and-a-half-billion-dollar level.

Hence we shouldn't gasp at how much Kluge's given away but at how little. One of the striking characteristics of our latter-day big rich is how little money they give away.

HE GOT THE MONEY by giving him TV broadcasting licenses, and giving is the word, since all you have to do to get one is prove you aren't a convicted felon and make sure you have plenty of friends in the high places where licenses are passed out. If Kluge has committed any felonies, he evidently hasn't been convicted of them, and, as for friends in high places, Kluge's Metromedia company's ownership of a number of TV stations speaks for itself.

The interesting thing about philanthropist Kluge is the mediocrity of his career, the fact that little stands out about the man save what you might call an animal cunning for making money. We're not talking about a William Paley here. Whether you like the man who started CBS or not, he can at least be said to have made a major contribution in founding and shaping an industry whose

Budget's authors can't explain it

To the Editor: On Monday, May 18, 4,806 legal voters and an unknown number of property owners are entitled to vote on Coventry's annual town budget of $11.2 million for the fiscal year 1987-88. Voting is from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.

This year, attendance was sparse at the annual town meeting (40 present). In my opinion this will continue to be the case until those individuals who consistently attempt to defend their point of view discontinue the often personal and denigrating attacks on any and all who dare question the budget proposals. Questions and persons are immediately perceived as being against and having no merit. Yet those individuals berating the rights of citizens to take the budget to the polls (over 300 signed) fail to grasp that more people would come to the town meeting to discuss it if they were not put down and their questions were answered.

In my opinion, the budget is an unnecessary complex document as it is presently compiled that neither the citizens nor the authors understand. Witness the replies to questions: The cost per mile for roads is a trivial pursuit question; the Board of Education's prolonged search for the number of students to be educated resulting in the wrong number being given who had to be corrected; the comment that Coventry should consider disbanding the Police Department because of cost, a quote the next day in the press by an appointed official "That remark wasn't worth commenting on."

If the authors of the budget are not concerned about basic costs, how can they hope to convince over 8,000 taxpayers that their solutions are not just throwing money at problems? In my opinion, there is an obligation on the part of elected officials to present a budget that both they and the public can readily grasp and there is an obligation on the part of over 8,000 taxpayers to examine this budget and vote on it without fear of embarrassment or retribution as it represents their tax dollars and the services they wish to support. Thank you for your consideration.

Council supports Coventry budget

To the Editor: On May 18, from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the town meeting, Coventry voters will have the opportunity to vote on the Town Council's proposed budget for 1987-88. The budget is unanimously supported by the Town Council and represents our best effort to balance the needs presented to us by the various departments, boards, commissions and public service groups with our desire to keep the increase to the tax rate to a minimum (1.47 mills).

I urge Coventry voters to take the time to vote on Monday, and I also urge them to join with the Town Council in supporting the recommended budget.

USDA didn't get the word about Japan

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department is only a few blocks from the White House, but apparently its purchasing people didn't get word that President Reagan was declaring a trade war against Japan.

On April 17, the very day the president announced sanctions against some Japanese imports, an American computer manufacturer was informed by an Agriculture Department contract officer that it had lost out on a multi-million-dollar contract — to Hitachi, the Japanese electronics giant.

The $48 million computer contract, awarded to Hitachi's American distributor, VION Corp., has been put on hold because of appeals by the American firm, StorageTek, and another U.S. bidder, IBM. According to corporate documents obtained by our reporter Karen Talley, StorageTek's bid was at least $10 million less for the Agriculture contract, while IBM's bid was "several" million dollars lower than the winning Hitachi price.

The General Services Administration is reviewing the bidding, and a decision on the appeals by StorageTek and IBM is expected in June.

The particular Hitachi equipment that Agriculture wants to buy from VION is not subject to the president's trade sanctions. But Hitachi is one of the Japanese companies whose practice of dumping computer chips on the U.S. market at below-cost prices led to the sanctions imposed last month, according to Gary Holmes of the U.S. Trade Representative's office.

The idea behind the sanctions was that a get-tough approach would persuade the Japanese government to eliminate some of the trade barriers that have made it difficult or impossible for U.S. exporters to sell their goods in Japan.

The Agriculture Department's get-soft approach to Japan manifestly hasn't worked. At about the same time that his procurement division was awarding the computer contract, Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng was in Tokyo trying without success to get import restrictions lifted on American beef, rice and citrus fruit.

Documents filed by StorageTek pointedly state that its computer "is manufactured in the United States" while VION's "is manufactured by Hitachi in Japan." While StorageTek and IBM say their bids were substantially lower than VION's, neither firm would reveal its exact bid. In case the contact is reopened in response to their appeal.

Agriculture officials said the Hitachi system is better suited to the department's needs than either IBM's or StorageTek's. The equipment is needed for a variety of administrative functions, like finance and payroll, for offices in Washington and across the country.

The department's bid proposal stated that "technical superiority will be considered more important than cost," and added: "Award, however, will go to the offerer whose offer represents the combination of technical merit and cost most favorable to the government."

Both IBM and StorageTek maintain that the Agriculture Department judged their equipment improperly. Each said it would have won the contract if the evaluation had been done correctly.

"Racism" reviled Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., the handsome, hot-tempered, black chairman of the House Ways and Means Public Assistance Subcommittee, is the fastest mouth on Capitol Hill with charges of racism. When he was indicted last month on fraud and conspiracy charges involving a $500,000 fund diversion, he charged the federal prosecutors with racism.

The prosecutors may be relieved to know they're not the first targets of Ford's hip-shooting. In 1976, we caught the congressman using a federal manpower training program to provide himself with office workers — a violation of federal law that he first admitted to us, then recanted. A Library of Congress ruling backed up our charge.

Ford heatedly insisted that we were going after him because he was black. We were stunned, until we learned that he had also cried "Wolff!" at other reporters who had done unfavorable stories about him, and at businesspeople who had tried to collect on his unpaid bills.

Two years later, Ford hauled out the racism routine again, when we reported that a federal agency had vetoed a Ford constituent's minority contract. Ford said the federal contracting officer had "a WASP mentality."

In the 1976 case, though we had cited chapter and verse, the Justice Department brought no charges against Ford. Now, 11 years later, the congressman has been indicted. He'll finally have a chance to prove in court whether he is a victim of racism — or of his own actions.

March about Martin's murder, police have said.
Kerrill, 46-year-old Toland man with an extensive criminal record, is being held on $50,000 bond in Superior State Prison in connection with the South Windsor assault. No charges have been brought against him in connection with the Martin case.

THE WHEREABOUTS of Vasquez, the suspect in Laura Anderson's murder, is unknown. He and another Hispanic male were seen leaving Anderson's apartment in New York City on the afternoon of her death, police said. The car, a 1986 red Toyota Celica, was recovered in New York City on Feb. 5, but police have no idea where Vasquez is now, Brooks said.

Although police had originally said they were seeking Vasquez, the other man, an arrest warrant was signed for Vasquez alone. When Vasquez's identity was made public, police spokesman Gary Wood said that the other man was no longer a suspect.

Brooks said Thursday, however, that it's too early to rule out the other man, whom police refuse to identify. "We're not at the point to say that (Vasquez) is the only one we're looking at," Brooks said.

Hartford, which is seeking final site approval from the Manchester Planning and Zoning Commission May 18, plans to break ground before the end of June.
Under the financial agreement with Hartland, the town would issue up to $13 million in tax-increment bonds to pay for road improvements and the municipal office building. Most of those improvements are required by the state. However, the money will also be used to pay for other road projects the town feels are necessary to support high-density industrial and commercial development expected in the North End.

The town would then use the increase in real estate taxes from the small property to pay off the interest on the bonds over a 15-year period. The interest is expected to bring the total cost of the bonds to $21 million, but town officials expect to collect more than $9 million in real estate taxes from the mall.

New board to set teacher standards, certification

By Christopher Connel
The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — A Carnegie Corp. panel today announced the creation of the first national board to set standards for teachers and to offer them professional certification similar to that given medical specialists.
The board, to be composed primarily of classroom teachers, will certify teachers who pass its muster after defining what those in various fields "should know and be able to do."
Leaders of the Carnegie Forum on Education and the Economy were scheduled to announce details of the creation of the new National Board for Professional Teaching Standards today in San Diego.

The board, consisting of as many as 64 members, will have to decide how it will judge teachers and in what subject areas and grade levels it will offer certification.
The idea is to give America's 2 million elementary and secondary school teachers a pathway for professional development and recognition similar to the board certification that physicians can gain in their medical specialties.
It will be three years to five years before the board awards its first certificates, and it may cost as much as $60 million to develop the methods of assessment and get the board started, a spokesman, Scott Widmeyer, said.

Widmeyer said in a telephone interview that teachers would have to pay as-yet undetermined fees for the certification process, which likely would include oral examinations, written testing and possibly internships.
"The door is not closed to any teacher in America," he said, describing the certification as a kind of "special badge" that states and school districts would recognize as enhancing a teacher's value to the education system.

Certified teachers, Widmeyer said, would be screened for skills in both their subject matter and in education, including the writing of curriculum, working with other teachers and relating to students.
The national certification board was the centerpiece of a series of recommendations a Carnegie task force made last May in a report aimed at triggering radical changes in U.S. schools and bringing bigger paychecks, better working conditions and greater responsibility for outstanding teachers.
"The nucleus of the new board will be 33 educators, politicians and others.

Former North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt, chairman of the planning group, said the key to educational excellence is "attracting and keeping high quality teachers in our schools."
By giving teachers a path "to professional achievement and public esteem," Hunt said, the board will make teaching "more attractive to our best and brightest."
The board includes both teacher union presidents, Mary Hatwood Futrell of the National Education Association and Albert Shanker of the American Federation of Teachers.

Union calls off Heartland picket

The United Food and Commercial Workers Union, Local 371, has dropped plans to picket outside the Heartland grocery store on Tolland Turnpike at its opening Saturday, a union official said this morning.

The informational picket line would have asked customers to boycott all Heartland stores and shop instead at grocery markets where workers are unionized. Local 371 has been trying unsuccessfully to unionize Heartland employees for years.

To put pressure on the company, Local 371 had set up a picket line outside the Heartland warehouse in Vernon, and had planned a similar one in Manchester when that store opens for business Saturday. Union officials had said they were expecting hundreds of marchers to carry signs outside the Tolland Turnpike store.

That all changed this morning, when a union official called the Manchester Herald and said the roadway and went onto the sidewalk where Valters was walking. Valters was treated at Manchester Memorial Hospital for a back injury and released. Police are looking for a dark automobile whose driver fled the scene.

Hextall the difference as Flyers oust Habs

By Ken Rospond
The Associated Press

MONTREAL — Philadelphia Flyers goaltender Ron Hextall stayed out of a pre-game fight with the Montreal Canadiens, then helped knock the defending champions out of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

"Ronnie was the difference," captain Dave Poulin said after Thursday night's 4-3 victory over the Canadiens. "Hextall kept us in the game. I don't think we could have any more confidence knowing he was back there, even after we were losing 3-1."

Hextall bounced back from an off-night, 2-2 loss Tuesday night in Game 5, to make 20 saves in Game 6, the most victories of this best-of-seven playoff series.
The Flyers literally had to battle before and during the contest while watching down the Wales Conference championship and a berth in the Stanley Cup finals starting Sunday night in Edmonton.

Bad blood spilled over from Game 5 with a pre-game brawl that erupted less than a half-hour before game time.
It started with a seemingly harmless shot that Montreal's Claude Lemieux took on the Philadelphia net at the end of pre-game warmups, a superstitious ritual the right wing has been performing since the final 30 games of the season.

Flyers backup goaltender Chico Resch and defenseman Ed Hoopodor were just leaving the ice to join their teammates in the dressing room when both spotted Lemieux and rushed to intervene and cross him up.
Resch threw his stick at the puck and missed. Hoopodor threw him a headlock and chanted "Go, Habs, go."

"I wanted to go out there, too," Hextall said. "But they wouldn't let me."
"They" was the coaching staff, who told Hextall to stay put in the locker room. It inspired the Flyers.

"I think it possibly gave us a boost," he said. "We wanted to put them away right here, and not have to go back to Philadelphia for a seventh game."
According to Flyers defenseman Mark Howe, the coaching staff came into the locker room after the brawl and said, "Forget about the fight... just focus your attention on what you're supposed to be doing. You've got to be ready to play hockey. The brawl gave us one more reason to beat them."

Celtics have big hole in middle with Parish out

By Rick Gano
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — With Boston center Robert Parish out with a sprained ankle, the Milwaukee Bucks are expecting Celtics star Larry Bird to come out firing tonight in Game 6 of the NBA Eastern Conference semifinals.
"That's been the characteristic of Larry when they lose or don't play as well," Milwaukee guard Sidney Moncrief said. "He usually comes out and takes the initiative to get the ball club going."

"That means he's usually more aggressive and takes a lot more shots early."
The Bucks narrowed Boston's series lead to 2-2 Wednesday night with a 129-124 victory to snap the Celtics' 33-game home winning streak. It was Milwaukee's first victory in the Boston Garden in two years.

"To extend the season in that kind of a way, we're glad we won in Boston, which is something we have he's off."
Injuries are nothing new for the Celtics. Forward Kevin McHale missed Game 1, a 111-98 Celtics victory, with a stress fracture and sprained ankle. Bird took up the slack with 40 points. Backup center Bill Walton has also missed the entire series with a foot injury.

"The Celtics don't win tonight in Milwaukee unless they have Parish out," Boston team physician Thomas Silva said after the club arrived in Milwaukee Thursday without Parish.
Bird is aware of what he and his teammates need to do.
"Injuries play a big part in this game. You just have to overcome them. When you lose, you've always got to come back and play a little bit better, a little bit harder," he said.

Bird said the Celtics would have to play better defense, especially late in the game. Bucks forward Terry Cummings had 14 points in the fourth quarter Wednesday.
"They were getting every loose ball. It was frustrating," Bird said.

One swing doesn't excite Mattingly

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Don Mattingly refused to get excited over one swing. After the game in which he hit his first grand slam homer, Mattingly spoke joyfully, more technically about the art of hitting a baseball.
"One at-bat doesn't change the previous 35 terrible ones," he said. "It doesn't pull you out of a slump. It's just a start, a step in the right direction."

Mattingly, seven for his last 37 and still batting just .248, hit his homer in the fourth inning Thursday afternoon, powering the New York Yankees to their 14th victory in 16 home games this season with a 3-1 decision over the Texas Rangers.
It was New York's first victory in four tries against the Rangers this year and snapped Texas' four-game winning streak.
"It's nice to be part of it again," Mattingly said after his first home run since May 1 and fourth overall. "But I still haven't hit a real groove yet."

"I need to get comfortable at the plate. I need to get my confidence back. It takes away your confidence when you're not getting any hits. I've had a lot of negative reinforcement."
"I'm still not sure when I come to the plate that I'm going to make solid contact and not swing at balls out of the strike zone. It has nothing to do with momentum. It's all confidence."
With the Yankees already ahead by three runs, Ranger starter Edwin Correa, 1-4, loaded the bases by allowing a one-out single to Joel Skinner and consecutive walks to Rickey Henderson and Willie Randolph before being replaced by left-handed reliever Mike Mason.

Mattingly entered the game with only two extra base hits in 70 previous bases loaded at-bats, but all a part of the initiation.
Meads had just pitched 2 2/3 scoreless innings to help the Astros beat the New York Mets 5-4, further solidifying his position with the team.
A stuffed vulture doll was perched on Meads' chair, part of a welcoming set up by fellow reliever Larry Anderson.
After several moments of teasing Meads, Anderson finally said "Oh, by the way, nice game."
Meads, 34, came on in the seventh inning with the score tied at 4-4, a runner on second base and one out.

He struck out Keith Hernandez, intentionally walked Kevin McReynolds and then struck out Darryl Strawberry to end the threat.
A grounder by Glenn Davis in the eighth inning scored Billy Dawson from third base, giving the Mets their fifth 1-run loss on their current road trip.

"It's the worst road trip I've ever been on," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said. "That's what happens when you play poorly."
"When we play like we're capable of playing, we can play with anyone."
The road trip got even worse when both Mookie Wilson and relief pitcher Terry Leach suffered injuries.

Wilson suffered a bruise on his right triceps muscle when he was hit by a pitch from Aurelio Lopez in the eighth inning.
Please turn to page 11

Yankees starter Dennis Rasmussen, 5-2, allowed five singles in 7-3 innings, walking four, striking out a season high nine batters, and lowering his ERA to 3.67.
He gave up three of those hits and the Rangers lone run in the fourth. Scott Fletcher and Ruben Sierra opened the inning with consecutive singles and one out later Pete O'Brien drove home Fletcher with a single.

Henderson led off the game with his fourth leadoff home run of the year, his 32nd leadoff homer from the majors. He was the major league record held by Bobby Bonds.

rookie led the NHL in victories this season with 37 and has been a standout in the playoffs.
Montreal took a 2-1 lead after one period, thanks to goals by Mike McPhee and Larry Robinson. Poulin, returning after a five-game absence with a rib injury, scored Philadelphia's only goal in the first 20 minutes.

Then Bobby Smith boosted the Canadiens' lead to 3-1 with a goal at the seven-minute mark of the second period and the Montreal crowd of 17,018 was in a frenzy.
But the Flyers were still cool.

"When we were down 3-1, we were pretty patient," right wing Rick Tocchet said. "We felt they were pressing to make it 4-1 and that's when we got our chance."

The Flyers came back to tie the game on goals by Ilkka Sinisalo and Scott McLeamy later in the second period. Then Tocchet scored the game-winner for them 7:11 into the third.

"We gave them bad goals tonight, easy goals," Montreal Coach Jean Perron said. "The goaltender (Brian Hayward) can't be blamed. The team didn't react well in those goal-scoring situations. The Flyers did not have to work for their goals."

Montreal defenseman Larry Robinson, the Canadiens' elder statesman playing in his 15th and perhaps last playoffs, felt his team played well even in losing.

Kohl said, "My hope is we can sit down when the season is over and realize whatever differences we have. I don't think they are in any way significant to the operations of the team."
Neither man has publicly identified reasons for the rift. Kohl said he is spending less time around the rink, and he is planning to remove whatever tension exists.

The victory in Boston "was just a wonderful win," Nelson said, "but it's only going to count if we do something about the series."
"We don't want to get too high just like we didn't get too low when we lost," he said. "We've played four sensational games in a row."

The Celtics won the first two games of the series, but lost Game 4 in a double overtime, both in Milwaukee.
"We're playing at a high level that is good enough to win anywhere," Nelson said.

Polish troops storm bus to nab hijacker

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Soldiers stormed a bus and freed seven hostages after a young man with a grenade seized the vehicle and demanded a plane to fly him to West Berlin, witnesses reported.
Police freed the hijacker, and several people were seen being taken away in ambulances, but it was not clear whether there were any injuries in the four-hour standoff.

A woman who was on the bus and managed to jump off described the hijacker as a Polish man about 18 or 19 years old.
"He sat at the back of the bus holding something. He was acting as if he was mentally ill. He was behaving strangely," the woman, who did not want her name used, told a Western reporter at the scene.

"At one point the bus slowed down and about 20 people who seemed to know that something was going on jumped off the bus. I was among them."
Krzysztof Jankot, assistant general manager of LOT Polish Airlines, was contacted by telephone at Warsaw's Okęcie airport and reported, "A man terrorized a bus seven passengers inside."
"The man is threatening people with a grenade and demanded that he be given a plane to fly to West Berlin."

The woman said she thought there were about 20 other people left on the bus when she fled. Jankot mentioned only seven hostages, however.

"The woman said the bus left from Silesow, 100 miles south of Warsaw, and was on its way to the capital's main bus terminal.
Western reporters at the airport said the bus was parked on the tarmac, about halfway between international and domestic terminals.

Akeem fine but Rockets out

By Jim Cour
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — In defeat, the sweat-glistening former soccer goalkeeper from Nigeria was truly magnificent.

But even Akeem "The Dream" Oluajun, at his brilliant best on the basketball court, wasn't enough to prevent the improbable Seattle SuperSonics from eliminating the Houston Rockets from the NBA playoffs 120-125 in double overtime Thursday night.

"I went up to Akeem after the game and told him he was one of the greatest players I've ever played against," Seattle's Maurice Lucas said. "He was phenomenal."

"We play with a lot of heart. But I can't imagine anyone wanting to win as much as Akeem did."

"We played very well as a team but so did they," Oluajun said modestly. "That's the name of the game. It was a very tough loss."

Despite a 48-point, 25-rebound performance that also featured six blocked shots in 33 emotion-charged minutes by the 7-foot Oluajun, the Sonics ousted the Rockets four games to two in the teams' second-round playoff series and earned the dubious honor of being the powerful Los Angeles Lakers in the Western Conference finals.

The Magic Johnson-led Lakers, favored to win it all in the NBA this season, will host the underdog Sonics, a 39-43 regular-season club, at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif. Saturday at 12:30 p.m. PDT and Tuesday and 7:30 p.m.

Games 3 and 4 will be played in the Seattle Coliseum, but the NBA won't set those dates until Friday, Sonics spokesman Jim Rupp said. The Lakers, who dispatched Denver 3-0 and Golden State 4-1 in their first two playoff series, were 3-3 against Seattle during the regular season. Los Angeles finished 20 games ahead of Seattle in the Pacific Division during the regular season.

But even the prospect of having to play the Lakers could not diminish the ecstasy of knocking off the favored Rockets and their Twin Towers of Oluajun and 7-4 Ralph Sampson.

"This is the happiest moment of my life," said Dale Ellis, who scored 38 points and put Seattle ahead with 52 seconds remaining in the second overtime period. "I think we're going to go all the way."

On his field goal that turned out to be the game-winner, Ellis got the ball after Oluajun blocked his shot and scored from under the basket to break a 120-120 tie. Ellis had tied the game for Seattle with a baseline jumper with 1:47 remaining.

Ellis also made a big play on defense at the end, partially blocking a long 3-point attempt by Richard Anderson, necessitated because Clemen Johnson scored the final Seattle point — his only of the night — on a free throw with five seconds remaining. Anderson's shot fell short and the buzzer sounded.

Houston led 107-102 with 55 seconds remaining in regulation play and it appeared likely the Sonics were going back to The Summit in Houston for a seventh game Saturday instead of going to Los Angeles.

"There was a lot of doubt at that point," said Tom Chambers, who led the Sonics with 27 points. But Ellis insisted he was not concerned about his team's five-point deficit.

"Our team has shown character all year in coming back from adversity," he said. "We did it again tonight. No one expects us to be here but we're still here."

Coach Bernie Bickerstaff of the Sonics thought his team's ability to come back from five points behind inside the last minute of regulation play was the key to the victory.

"With 55 seconds to go and us down by five, I called a timeout and told the guys in the huddle, 'It's a gut check time,'" he said. "The guys came through."

Ralph Sampson, who scored 19 points and missed a key jump shot in the final minute, had sent the game into a second overtime when he hit a free throw with five seconds left after being fouled by Chambers. Sampson missed the second free throw but Oluajun got the rebound. He then missed an eight-foot baseline jumper at the buzzer.

"There's some guys who made some crucial errors who are going to have a tough time sleeping," Houston Coach Bill Pritch said. "It was a heart-breaking way for us to end the season."

"Both teams played hard but it comes down to who makes the last shot," he said. "It was a hard game to play in and play hard and lose."

"But I can take it. I'm big enough to take the blame. I took the shot and I didn't make it. I had an opportunity to win the game. It's something I'll have to live with for a long, long time."

Chambers had scored on a three-point play with 18 seconds left in the first overtime to put the Sonics ahead 118-114. He drove in for stuff off a long pass from Nate McMillan and was fouled by Robert Reid. He converted the free throw. Seattle had sent the game into overtime by scoring the last five points in regulation on a basket by Xavier McDaniell, who finished with 24 points, from the key with 46 seconds to go and a three-point play by Ellis with 25 seconds to go.

Ellis scored on a breakaway layup after McMillan stripped Dirk Minniefield of the ball and fired a full-court pass to Ellis. Robert Reid fouled Ellis on the play and Ellis hit the free throw to tie the score 107-107.

Oluajun missed a 20-foot baseline jumper with one second left in regulation play.

With the score tied 107-102, Oluajun hit a 10-foot turnaround jump shot with 1:22 to go and then hit a free throw after being fouled by Seattle center Alton Lister on the play. Lister fouled out on the play.

Oluajun hit a pair of free throws with 55 seconds remaining for a 107-102 Houston lead. He scored 14 of his points in the last quarter.

The Sonics led 98-98 after the first quarter but the Rockets rallied in the second for a 98-94 halftime advantage, holding Seattle to just 18 points in the quarter. Houston built its lead to 11 points at 74-63 with 3:42 left in the third quarter and was in front 96-78 going into the final quarter. The score was 107-107 at the end of regulation play and 118-115 at the end of the first overtime.

The face of the Sonics' Kevin Williams tells the story after Seattle eliminated the Houston Rockets, 120-125, in double overtime Thursday night in NBA playoff action in Seattle.

Manchester helps the Show House to shine

HARTFORD — Imagine having a butler who hands you your toilet paper, and another who delivers folded guest towels. A third butler silently watches over your toothbrushes, and a fourth lowers the window shades when you desire privacy.

That's what guests will find when they visit the third-floor bathroom of the Tudor-style mansion at 24 Woodside Circle.

Bove has put a half-dozen life-size butlers in the room, on walls and wooden cut-outs. Each is placed so as to perform a "service" for the room's occupants.

It's only one of the whimsical touches that this year's decorators have employed in doing over the home of Sanford and Diane Cloud. In all, 75 interior designers, landscapers and artisans have transformed the 22-room mansion into a veritable museum of highly idiosyncratic design. And Manchester volunteers — about 35 in all — have played a part.

accessories and fabrics reminiscent of 18th century France.

A little further on is the master bathroom, done in yards of white lace, tied back with mosaics of real flowers. "You feel as though a bride should be stepping out of those curtains," said one woman who visited the home last Saturday afternoon.

As Leslie Belcher, a Junior League member from Manchester, remarked last week, "The place is great, but you've got to really enjoy a variety of styles."

Beverly Boyle, one of the Show House co-chairmen, said that it has taken 600 to 700 volunteers a year to put together this event, which is one of the Junior League's major fund-raisers.

The $8 admission price will go primarily to Friends of the Family, a referral center for teen-age parents and their families.

THE SHOW HOUSES are held once every three years because they involve so much work. Marilyn Neumayer and Joanne Roto-Scheinberg, for example, both from Manchester, have found themselves working practically full time at the show house.

Neumayer is co-chairman of the A La Carte Cafe, where muffins are served in the morning, and a luncheon is offered from 11 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. The part-time caterer found herself wedding a paint brush as well as a whisk for this project.

McEnroe impressive; Lendl is upset

By Godfrey Denny
The Associated Press

ROME — John McEnroe continued his impressive debut in the Italian Open, advancing to the quarterfinals on the clay courts at Foro Italico. Defending champion Ivan Lendl wasn't as successful.

In an exciting but uneven display Thursday, the seventh-seeded McEnroe mixed some superb winners with elementary errors before overcoming Aaron Krickstein 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

The 24th 100 tournament was thrown wide open earlier in the day when the top-seeded Lendl of Czechoslovakia fell 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 to No. 15 Joakim Nyström of Sweden in the opening center-court match.

Later in the evening, before a capacity crowd of 8,000, McEnroe seemed poised to take the first set when he led 4-2 and 40-15. But a double fault and three unforced errors let Krickstein break back and then take the first set.

McEnroe revived the second set, however, and he used his merciless serve, tactical sense and deft volleying to lead 3-1. "My game is probably technically not as good as it was in 1984. I'm not as good at moving other players around and maybe my volley is not as penetrating," McEnroe admitted this week.

His volley often let him down against Krickstein, lacking depth and allowing the 18-year-old from Grosse Pointe, Mich., to catch him flatfooted with a lob or pass.

McEnroe should have an easier time in his quarterfinal match against Claudio Mezzadri, an unseeded Swiss who is ranked 182nd in the world.

McEnroe will probably again have the support of the crowd, which waved an American flag and greeted him with a large banner reading, "Welcome John."

when the top-seeded Lendl of Czechoslovakia fell 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 to No. 15 Joakim Nyström of Sweden in the opening center-court match.

Later in the evening, before a capacity crowd of 8,000, McEnroe seemed poised to take the first set when he led 4-2 and 40-15. But a double fault and three unforced errors let Krickstein break back and then take the first set.

McEnroe revived the second set, however, and he used his merciless serve, tactical sense and deft volleying to lead 3-1.

Alysheba will go from the No. 8 post, while Bel Twice drew the No. 1 post.

"It doesn't make any difference behind son of Fappiano the outside post where it should be easier to avoid traffic problems.

"Yeah, I'm happy with it," trainer Scotty Schulhofer said.

Cryptoclearance gets improved post position

By Dick Joyce
The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Cryptoclearance, jostled and bloodied in the Kentucky Derby, would appear to have a clear way home in Saturday's Preakness Stakes.

Most trainers agree that the post position means little with a field of nine for the 13.16-mile second leg of the Triple Crown for 3-year-olds.

But Scotty Schulhofer, Cryptoclearance's trainer, didn't want to be No. 1 again.

The luck of the post position draw Thursday gave the come-from-behind son of Fappiano the outside post where it should be easier to avoid traffic problems.

"Yeah, I'm happy with it," trainer Scotty Schulhofer said.

Rec Department hosts Hershey meet

The Manchester Rec Department will host the annual Hershey Track & Field Meet on Saturday, May 30, at 9:30 a.m. at Manchester High's Pete Wigren Track. The meet is open to all boys and girls ages 8-14 as of Dec. 31, 1987. Registration forms are available at all elementary and junior high schools. They are also available at the Rec Department offices at 397 Porter Street and 110 Cedar Street. Registration forms must be returned by May 28.

Easter Seal softball touney set

Team registrations are now being accepted for the second annual Easter Seal Softball Tournament Saturday and Sunday, June 13-14, at Charter Oak Park. The event is held annually to raise funds to support programs and services for children and adults with disabilities. For further information or to register, call Kelley Olsen at 1-800-874-7887 or 228-9438 at the Easter Seal Society of Connecticut.

Cocaine byproduct found in Jackson

EL PASO, Texas — A cocaine byproduct was found during an autopsy on Texas-El Paso basketball player Hernell "Jeep" Jackson, who also had an abnormal artery and scarred heart tissue, according to the medical examiner.

The presence of benzoecgonine in the urine but not in blood samples indicated Jackson used the drug "many hours" before he collapsed and died at a benefit basketball game, Dr. Juan Contin said Thursday.

"The role played by the cocaine use or the abnormal coronary artery in the changes of the heart muscle is difficult to assess," Contin said in a written statement.

Jackson, 33, was declared dead at Beaumont Army Medical Center May 2, about an hour after he collapsed during an exhibition game at Fort Bliss.

Person NBA Rookie of the Year

NEW YORK — Chuck Person of Indiana, who averaged 18.8 points per game and led the Pacers to their first playoff berth in six seasons, was named the NBA's Rookie of the Year.

Person got 68 votes from a panel of 78 members of the media, three from each of the league's 23 cities and nine national writers. The other 10 votes went to guard Ron Harper of the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Bill Rogers leads Colonial golf

FORT WORTH, Texas — Bill Rogers says the player leading after the first round of the Colonial National Invitation "looks like somebody we knew from the past."

It's someone, he said, who "remembers that guy who used to shoot some low scores."

Sure enough, the lanky blond who carved up Colonial Country Club's proud acreage Thursday was the same Bill Rogers who in 1981 captured seven international titles, including the British Open, and then slipped into a long and torturous slump.

"I don't even like to talk about it," Rogers said after shooting a 5-under-par 65 that gave him a one-shot lead in the $800,000 tournament over Chip Beck, Bill Sander and Clarence Rose.

Former Colonial champion Ben Crenshaw led a group of seven golfers at 67. Also at three under were local favorite Mark Brooks, Tom Byrum, Keith Clearwater, Dan Forsman, Bobby Watkins and Scott Simpson.

Motta staying?

DALLAS (AP) — After interviews with the New York Knicks, Dick Motta is hoping that he will be back for an eighth season as coach of the Dallas Mavericks.

Motta returned to his Mabo cabin Wednesday after meeting with Knicks president Richard Evans to discuss the NBA team's vacant coaching position.

"It was a very informal, exploratory session," Motta said. "After a while, we just broke up, and I left it at that. I told them I needed time to think about it."

"Nothing has changed. It wasn't earth-shattering."

Evans said the Knicks are in no hurry to sign a coach.

This Tudor-style mansion at 24 Woodside Circle in Hartford has been transformed into the Junior League of Hartford's Show House.

Don't miss out on safari room

Every possible nook and cranny of the Junior League of Hartford Show House has been decorated, even the shallow closets upstairs and the tiny telephone booth downstairs.

Although many would say it's overdone, the house exudes a sense of fun — as if it weren't talking itself too seriously.

One wonders what Benjamin Charles Perkins, the original owner of the 1928 home, would think of his home if he saw it today.

In some rooms, decorators have invented a character description for the occupant. Take Room Number 28, for example, a bedroom done by Kathleen Coville Marr Interiors of West Hartford.

In the show house program that's given to all visitors, the page about this room starts out with "Mrs. Happyacre's English step-sister, Charlotte Farrington, who is simultaneously recovering from a sorrowful divorce and a nasty head cold, flies to Hartford for a month's visit."

The mini-story tells us that she's been having bits and pieces of her "Yorkshire estate shipped to the mansion in Hartford, until she's got quite the eclectic environment. "Aunt Charlotte is quite so comfortable, one wonders if she could ever bear to leave," the passage concludes.

While guests who visit the show house won't be quite so comfortable, it is rather difficult to leave. Each glance seems to bring another detail, another strange vista into focus.

Did you miss the safari bedroom? It's the one on the third floor, with the jungle sounds piped in. Formerly a small, undistinguished space beneath the eaves with steeply slanting walls, it's been draped with tent fabric and filled with foliage plants and a variety of fur fabrics. But don't enter if you're prone to claustrophobia — even the designer, Frances Violante of Interiors Unlimited, calls it a kaleidoscopic sensation.

The Junior League of Hartford Show House will be open through May 24. It is open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Tuesday through Friday, and noon to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Wednesday and Friday evenings, it reopens from 6 to 8 p.m.

CBS fall schedule relies on police dramas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS will add nine shows to its fall schedule, including a "Platoon"-like Vietnam war drama, five new police shows and a fantasy about a half-man, half-beast who lives under New York City.

The new schedule for the second-place network, released Thursday, includes seven dramas, two half-hour comedies and the permanent addition of "West 57th Street" news magazine.

"This is an aggressive and exciting schedule," said B. Donald Grant, president of CBS Entertainment. "We had more good shows than we had time periods for them."

CBS canceled 17 series, some of which haven't been seen on the network in months, plus the Tuesday Night Movie. Only three new shows survived the cut: "Designing Women," "My Sister Sam" and "Houston Knights." Among the casualties were three veteran series, "Scarecrow and Mrs. King" and "The New Mike Hammer" and "Simon and Simon."

"Tour of Duty," with a large cast headed by Terence Knox, follows a platoon of young soldiers during the one-year tour in Vietnam in the late 1960s. The show, similar to the Academy Award-winning "Platoon," will be television's first Vietnam war series.

The most unusual show on the schedule is "Beauty and the Beast," a fantasy drama about a man-beast who lives beneath New York City and shares an ideal love with a beautiful woman attorney who lives in the city above. Ron Perlman, the caveman in "Quest for Fire," stars as Vincent the Beast. Linda Hamilton is the lawyer and Roy Dotrice is a recluse who raised Vincent.

Five of the new series are police dramas, which will give the network nine police shows. CBS, which used comedies to dominate the ratings for more than 20 years, has only six comedy series, all on Monday and Saturday nights. NBC, first in the Nielsen ratings, has 12 comedies and only five police shows. Traditionally, the network has been first in the ratings. NBC announced a fall schedule Wednesday that will return 21 shows and add only five new series. Three other series will appear once a week. CBS is expected to release its fall schedule on Monday.

Infant Death seminar set

Manchester Memorial Hospital is sponsoring a seminar called "Before Their Time" on June 10 from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The Rev. Ernest Harris, director of the hospital's department of pastoral care, will moderate a panel of family members who will discuss their experiences with infant death.

Chris Patrone, childbirth education liaison, will discuss stillbirth and miscarriage.

Dr. Dennis O'Neill, the chairman of the hospital's pathology department, will discuss autopsies, funerals and legal inquiries.

Registration is limited for the seminar, which includes lunch. For more information, call 647-8600.

Single parents sponsor dance

Parents Without Partners, Manchester Chapter 469, is having an open dance on May 23 at St. Bernard's church hall, Main Street, Rockville, from 8:30 to 12:30 p.m. Music will be provided by Fred's Trio. The cost is $5 for members and $8 for non-members. Set-ups are provided. For more information, call 646-8843, 872-2475, or 429-2819.

Medical writers set dinner

EAST HARTFORD — The American Medical Writers Association will have a dinner meeting Tuesday at the Holiday Inn on Roberts Street. Patricia Dye, director of community relations at Winthrop Community Memorial Hospital, will speak on public relations. Reservations are required. For more information, call 667-5281.

Joan Rivers to lose role as only host

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Rivers is being removed as the permanent host of her late-night talk show, but will continue to appear several weeks a year in rotation with other hosts, according to a report published today.

The change in the show, which has suffered a sharp ratings decline since its debut in October, could come as early as next week, the New York Post said, citing unidentified advertising sources.

Officials of Fox Broadcasting, the fledgling fourth network on which Rivers' "The Late Show" appears, would not confirm the change, but issued a statement from Fox president Jamie Kellner saying, "Joan will be associated with the show for many years to come."

Fox informed the show's publicity staff Thursday that an announcement would be made about the program late today. Joe Bleedon, Rivers' publicist for the show, told The Associated Press, "It can go 100 different ways."

Bleedon said, adding that Rivers may stay after all. "It's also very possible that tomorrow is going to be her last show."

Bleedon said the comedian would have no comment. "I know she'll have nothing to say," he said.

As a part-time host, Rivers would return to the role that made her famous when she filled in for Johnny Carson on NBC's "The Tonight Show." Carson and Rivers had a public falling-out when she announced she was starting her own show.

Cameras eye typical day in Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — A hundred of the world's best photographers fanned out across the 11 time zones of the Soviet Union today to capture what they hoped would be a typical day in the life of this nation.

About 300 pictures will be selected from among the thousands taken today for inclusion in a book called "A Day in the Life of the Soviet Union" to be issued in the United States this fall by Collins Publishers.

Photographers from 21 countries were dispatched to dozens of Soviet cities to shoot pictures of the daily lives of ordinary people. Among other subjects, workers at a nuclear plant in Yuzovsk, early morning swimmers at Moscow's outdoor pool and military men at ease in a Leningrad officers' club.

"The emphasis is on the human face of the Soviet Union," said David Cohen, president of Collins Publishers, which has produced similar books about the United States, Japan and Canada. "We don't want pictures of missiles, or even the Politburo."

However, the assignment for one Soviet photographer, Yuri Abramochkin, was to spend the day with Communist Party chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The Soviet project and the unprecedented access given to foreign photographers were an apparent outgrowth of Gorbachev's campaign for "glasnost," or more openness on selected subjects.

The project pooled the talents of some of the world's most distinguished photographers, including seven Pulitzer Prize winners.

American photographer Eddie Adams traveled to Vladimir prison, about 125 miles east of Moscow, for what Photography Director Arnold Drapkin described as "the most spectacular opportunity" of the book project.

Western photographers have never been allowed inside Soviet penal institutions, said Drapkin, who is also picture editor of Time magazine.

Grazee Outerbridge of Bermuda was given permission to visit and photograph Birobidjan, a closed colony of Soviet Jews in the far eastern part of the country.

The project's publicity director, Paul Richards, said other assignments included spending the day with a Moscow militiaman, visiting the command training center in Star City, touring of Soviet military bases and flying over the Volgograd industrial area.

In pursuit of more mundane slices of Soviet life, the photographers also planned to visit a dog owners club, dance classes, schools, factories, train stations and the favorite strolling places in the Soviet Union's major cities.

The Novosti press agency arranged access to sites normally off-limits to foreigners, and the project directors eventually won approval of all their proposals, Mr. Richards said.

All negatives will be shared by Collins and Novosti, which plans to put together its own version of the book, to be issued prior to the 70th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution on Nov. 7.

Novosti has not disclosed how many copies of the book will be issued for sale in this nation of 282 million people.

American author James T. Farrell, best known for the "Studs Lonigan" books, died Aug. 22, 1979.

Advice

Friend's freeloading ends friendship

DEAR ABBY: After 10 years, I am ending a friendship. Why? Because when I go out with my "friend," she is always short of cash, and I end up paying part or all the tab.

Dear Abby: Abigail Van Buren

Last night was the last straw. I just made up my mind that I could not afford to treat her every time we were together. She earns as much as I, but she's always "short." I have lost all respect for her. And from now on when she calls and asks if we can "get together" for a movie, lunch, dinner or a night out, I am going to be "busy." Am I wrong?

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to a Chinese woman for over 13 years. I am not Chinese, and I neither speak the language nor understand it. She, on the other hand, is fluent in Chinese and has many lady friends who come here to visit her. Invariably she and her Chinese friends will carry on conversations in Chinese in front of me, which I find irritating. (They are able to speak English, but Chinese is their first language.) I have told her it bothers me, but she still does it, so I just leave the room with no prompting, and allow them to do so?

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in the process of having a very expensive house built in a very elite neighborhood. I usually go by our house at least once a day, coming home from work. In an average week, I will encounter five or six people - inside the house - just looking around out of curiosity. My question: Do I, as a future homeowner, have any rights as to keeping these intruders out of our home? The doors have been installed, but not the locks. I can be there all day, and neither can my wife.

Heed the warning that angina brings

DEAR DR. GOTT: An internist examined me and said that I have angina. Should I be under the care of a heart specialist for this problem?

Dr. Gott Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: Angina pectoris consists of periodic chest pain that is due to partial or complete muscle cramping because of inadequate oxygen supply.

Singer allows protection for directors

By Linda Stowell The Associated Press

STAMFORD - Singer Co. shareholders are following a national trend by allowing the corporation to pay legal fees if a director is sued under certain circumstances. The issue was discussed and a resolution was approved Thursday at the Stamford-based corporation's 11th annual meeting. John M. Nash, president of the National Association of Corporate Directors in Washington, D.C., said corporations are approving resolutions similar to Singer's more and more.

Defense gets time to map out strategy

By Linda Stowell The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) - Defense attorneys have won a weekend reprieve to plan their strategy in response to a surprise government move to drop insider-trading charges against three top Wall Street brokers. U.S. District Judge Louis L. Stanton, who had planned to rule on the motion Thursday, gave defense attorneys until noon Monday to submit briefs on the implications of a dismissal. He rescheduled the hearing for Tuesday afternoon.

Thoughts

When darkness came upon the city of Jerusalem, it nearly disappeared from sight. It was so dark, a quiet stillness pervaded the city, for nighttime was traditionally a time of study for a rabbi and Pharisee. How strange then, for Nicodemus to come at night to talk with the Rabbi, for both should have been at home. In study.

Nicodemus pretends not to understand what Jesus was talking about, and that is because Nicodemus wanted to talk hypothetically, about "someone else." And he disappears into the darkness when he realizes Jesus wanted to talk about Nicodemus, not "someone else."

Nicodemus is that person today who comes to you at work and asks you about your church, or what you got out of it, or why you go. That is Nicodemus. Maybe they ask you about your life, about your family, about you get along with a particular person, just what makes you tick.

That is Nicodemus. The person whose yearning for something new in themselves is coming to the surface. Maybe they come to you in a kind of secret time, when others aren't around.

The answers you give may seem unimportant to you, but they encouraged that Nicodemus to ask another, and another. And if Nicodemus disappears from you unexpectedly, all you said are important seeds you planted, for another disciple to build on later, when Nicodemus feels that yearning once more.
