Reagan vows to strengthen Western ties

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Reagan would deepen the need for an "adequate force" to protect Persian Gulf oil shipments from becoming targets in the Iran-Iraq war.

Taking a different tone from the one Reagan used a day earlier, Shultz said the president may not ask the allies to increase their military participation in the Gulf to assist U.S. warships protecting Kuwait oil tankers.

He noted that Britain has two frigates and a destroyer in the Gulf and the French "have ships in the vicinity." He said it was questionable whether the other allies could do "because the capabilities elsewhere are not so great."

Asked specifically if Reagan would press for an allied buildup in the Gulf, Shultz said that was "not necessarily, particularly" required.

Shultz insisted "there isn't any daylight to be found between me and the president on the issue. Reagan on Monday had said he wanted to discuss common security with the allies and people do the things they can do." He said, "Countries are positioned in different ways in terms of their capabilities, and so we have to recognize that."

East Catholic High School senior Eric Griffith, third from left, was among 30 recipients at the Manchester Scholarship Foundation's award ceremony Tuesday night. Griffith also accepted awards for his brother Bryan, who was unable to attend. The brothers plan to attend Trinity College in the fall.

Local scholars receive awards, ribbing

Tuesday night's awards ceremony at Manchester Community College was intended to seriously honor the efforts of local scholars, but the evening had its light-hearted moments.

When East Catholic High School senior Eric Griffith approached the podium a second time, William R. Johnson, the announcer, mistook the youth for Eric's twin brother, Bryan, another award recipient. But this time the joke was on Johnson, who cracked a good number of Bartholomew's Church delivered the invocation. Manchester High School's Round Table Singers, under the direction of Penny Dalena, performed several songs.

Although the evening began on a somber note, Johnson, a director of the scholarship foundation and president of the Savings Bank of Manchester, quickly livened things up. After foundation president Allan D. Thomas welcomed parents and guests, Johnson came to the podium and began fiddling with the microphone, which hadn't been working.

"You didn't hear anything, Alan said?" Johnson said in jest.

After getting the microphone to work, he asked those in the audience to raise their hands if they could hear him. "Raise your hand if you would like to hear me," he quipped.

Johnson had difficulty pronouncing some of the recipient's names, but he was forthright about the problem. One of the things that I have never mastered -- one of the many things -- is the ability to pronounce anybody's name but my own," he said.

Johnson found in three tries to pronounce Kevin Romanewicz's last name, but the youth, a student at Manchester High School who had never mastered -- one of the many things -- is the ability to pronounce anybody's name but my own," he said.

Copter crashes in area

SOUTH WINDSOR -- A helicopter with two people aboard crashed at 130 Buckland Road late this morning, but emergency officials had no information on whether there were any injuries.

The crash was reported at 11:04 a.m., according to a dispatcher for the South Windsor Fire Department. The Manchester Ambulance Service responded to the call, a spokesman for the service said.

A spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration said an investigator was on route to the scene. There was no information available about where the helicopter came from or where it was going.

Preventing the trip Tuesday.

Fortin suspect in 26 possible assaults

Walter J. Fortin, a former employee of the town's Youth Services Bureau, is being accused of assaulting as many as 26 boys, one of them a 14-year-old, according to court records.

Fortin, 67, of 33 Eldridge St., was charged on April 15 with six counts of fourth-degree sexual assault and seven counts of risk of injury to a minor. On May 12, he was arrested again and charged with second-degree custodial interference and risk of injury to a minor.

The file related to the first arrest was ordered sealed by a Superior Court judge before his arrest.

However, an affidavit for Fortin's second arrest was available in the Superior Court Tuesday.

Fortin pleaded innocent to all charges. According to this affidavit, a police detective has compiled a list of 26 boys in the Manchester area who are "possible victims of the accused."

Fortin, a retired director of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center, had been a part-time attendance investigator for the Youth Services Bureau for four years. His job was to check on children who were skipping school.

The affidavit, prepared by police when an arrest warrant was sought for the second set of charges, makes no mention of when or where the alleged assaults took place. But it does say that one of the possible victims, who was 14 years old at the time, was a runaway.

Jeffrey Ehrenfeld, a social worker for the State Department of Children and Youth Services, told police that in March 1986 he learned that the runaway boy had gone to Fortin's home, the affidavit says.

Ehrenfeld said he understood that Fortin was told by Ehrenfeld that the boy should not be staying at his home, but the affidavit does not say whether any other action was taken.

In May 1986, the boy's mother complained to Ehrenfeld that Fortin had again allowed the boy to stay at his house, and Fortin admitted that he had done so, according to the affidavit.

Fortin's second arrest, on May 12, was made in connection with these two incidents, the affidavit says.

Abrams says U.S. begging 'shameful'

WASHINGTON -- Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams testified today "it is shameful for the United States to go around rattling a tin cup," but he solicited $10 million from the Sultan of Brunei because the Nicaraguan Contra rebels were starving.

Abraham, who runs the State Department's Latin American division, added, "That is the way a great nation should run its foreign policy."

Under the proposed contract, the firefighters would receive a 7 percent wage increase beginning July 1 under a proposed three-year contract arranged between the town and the firefighters' union.

The agreement has already been approved by the union. Local 1879 of the International Order of Firefighters, according to Assistant Town Manager Steven R. Werber. The town administration is recommending that the Manchester Board of Directors approve the settlement when it meets Tuesday.

The union represents about 70 firefighters who make between $23,500 and $29,900, Werber said.

In the second and third years under the proposed contract, the firefighters would receive a 6.5 percent wage hike. Werber said in a memo to the directors.

The current contract expires June 30.

In a plus for the town, Werber said it was able to reach an agreement that if town offices are closed because of bad weather or Martin Luther King Day, members of the firefighters' union would still have to work.

Other changes include extending the number of vacation days for those employees with at least 20 years' experience, and increasing the health and medical benefits.

Hail bombards nation; floods wet the South

Thunderstorms packing damaging winds up to 60 mph, hail as large as golfballs and heavy rain pummelled broad areas of the Northeast, Midwest and Southwest today.

The storms caused local flooding. In the Chicago area, they covered the highway south of the northern two-thirds of Ohio, central Indiana and south central Texas.

Meanwhile, about 300 residents of Winchester, Ind., driven out of their homes by waist-high floodwaters Tuesday waiting to return today.

A severe thunderstorm watch was issued for sections of Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky.

Yes, as in the presence of fog.

High winds caused damages in Harrodsburg, Ind., and near Nashville, Ind., and Columbus, Ind., and gusts of 60 mph were recorded near Waukomis, Okla. The storms also knocked out power in Pettus, Pawnee and Toleta, Texas. Pettus received 2 inches of rain in 20 minutes.

Hail fell near Alva and Tonkawa, Okla., and north of Amarillo, Texas.

Rain and thunderstorms fell in sections of New York state, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri, North Dakota, Minnesota, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico.

FOCUS

Seventeen Year Tick
After 17 years of feeding on the sap of tree roots, the 17-year cicada is now appearing above ground in the eastern U.S. In late May, cicada nymphs emerge from underground chambers, attach themselves to plants, shed their hard shells and fly away. In June, these cicadas will all mate, lay eggs and die. When the eggs hatch, the grubs drop to the ground and immediately burrow in for the next 17 years. The 17-year cicada has the longest life cycle of any known insect.

DO YOU KNOW - Cicadas are often confused with what other insect?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER - Calvin Coolidge was President in 1924.

Highland Park residents oppose portable classes

By Alex Girrell
Associate Editor

He said the only criticisms he heard from teachers was that there is not enough blackboard space and from students that the toilet rooms are a long walk through the corridor.

Kennedy praised the construction and quality control of portable classrooms he saw being built by Arthur Industries in Terryville, but some of the parents questioned whether they would be durable.

Kennedy and Richard DeCorrier, director of special education, urged the parents to see some portable classrooms in use before making up their minds.

Grove argued that while closing Highland Park School in 1985 was a good business decision in light of the declining school population then, reopening it would be a good business decision now.

Grove said he would favor reopening the school even if it were necessary to close it again in a few years, a move he admitted would be unpopular with residents of the area.

Maffe asked Grove if he would support providing six classrooms elsewhere for the special education students now at Highland Park. Grove said he would support providing six classrooms elsewhere for the special education students now at Highland Park School. He said if the school was to be reopened, Highland Park School is a likely target. The school is now being used for a variety of purposes, including a center for special education students, most of whom would otherwise have to be sent to live-in institutions out of town.

The view expressed by Grove and some other parents was shared by at least one member of the committee, Terry A. Bogli, who said there is something about portable classrooms that "says to me it's second best."

While other members of the committee did not endorse buying portable classrooms as a solution, some of them said they were impressed by units they saw in Avon.

Francis A. Maffe Jr. said he has talked with teachers and students in Avon, and both liked the classrooms, which are more modern than the rooms in the school to which they are attached.

In his new post, Agostinelli will serve as a community relations representative for the Army to the state's civilian population.

Plans of Windsor developer placed on hold by the PZC

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

The Planning and Zoning Commission Monday postponed action on a wetlands permit and subdivision plan that would allow a developer to build 18 luxury houses in the Case Mountain area.

The housing project is being proposed by the Dereketh Corp. of Windsor and includes 180 acres off Birch Mountain Road.

The commission, which met in the Lincoln Center hearing room, said it needed more time to discuss the subdivision and wetlands plans before acting and would schedule a special meeting next week to discuss the plans further.

Dereketh needs a wetlands permit because just under 2 acres of wetlands on the site would be affected by development. The subdivision shows 68 single-family houses on large lots. Company officials have said the homes would sell for close to $300,000.

The commission held a public hearing on the wetlands permit. "The developer will take all steps it can take responsibly to protect the wetlands," said Glassborough attorney Peter J. Alter, who represented Dereketh.

Alter said there was 23 acres of wetlands on the site. Of these, about 5 acres would be dedicated to the town, he said, adding that 1.63 acres would be affected by roadways and houses.

Town planning officials are requesting that several houses and one roadway be moved out of the wetlands area. But the developers said this would squeeze houses together - something they are trying to avoid.

Two proposed houses were eliminated from the plans because they were in wetlands, Alter said. However, the commission is against Dereketh's proposal to place that parking lot on town-owned land near Case Mountain, saying it would be detrimental to the environment and hard to maintain during the winter.

Firewood for sale from town

Very few people are thinking about firewood these hot days, but George Murphy, the town's watershed manager, is. He wants to sell wood left from the removal of timber from around town reservoirs.

Permits for removal of the wood are being sold by the town on a first come, first serve basis.

The wood is available at three sites: Camp Meeting Road, Finley Street, and the town's Roaring Brook Reservoir in the Buckingham section of Glastonbury.

Permit prices and procedures are different, depending on the location.

At Camp Meeting Road, the permit fee is $30. People with permits can remove the wood from the grounds or cut trees marked with orange paint. Wood cutters have five weeks to remove the wood. Only eight permits will be issued at first, and a waiting list will be established after that.

At Finley Street, the permit fee is $100. The wood is stacked at the roadside in lengths from 3 to 8 feet. It is about 15 months old. People have two weeks to remove the wood. Only two permits will be issued at first, and a waiting list will be established after that.

At the reservoir in Buckingham, the wood is at the roadside in cordwood lots of 4-foot lengths, mostly oak about two years old and about 8 inches in diameter. The cost is $25 per cord for six cords, and $20 per cord for six or more cords.

People interested in more information should contact the town's General Services Office, 41 Center St., or call 647-3031.

The money the town gets from the sale of the wood helps maintain the land surrounding the reservoirs.

Andover Library gets access ramp

ANDOVER - After nearly a year of planning, work is scheduled to start this week on installing a wheelchair ramp at the Andover Public Library, First Selectwoman Jean S. Gasper said Monday.

The work will begin either Wednesday or Thursday, and involve the pouring of a concrete ramp leading to the front door, and a walk to the rear parking lot. Gasper said the work will cost $15,000. The work should be completed by the end of the month.

The cost is being paid with $22,600 in state surplus money that the town received under the Town Improvement Program.

The town also is reviewing bids to install a wooden ramp to the rear door of the Town Office Building, Gasper said. While a firm has not been selected to do the work, Gasper said the cost will be covered by the TIP funds.

She said the work should be finished by July.

Planning for both ramps began late last summer. They were two of a number of projects the town considered using the money for.

In a related matter, Gasper outlined a number of possible uses for some $45,000 the town is eligible to receive under the state infrastructure repair program. The list ranks at the town garage, installing a bathroom at the old Town Hall, renovating the lower vault at the Town Office Building and making improvements to the town's ballfields.

Gasper said that before the town can receive the money it must match 10 percent of it with local funds.

The state money was made available to the town over the last two years under a state plan to help municipalities repair roads, bridges and make other improvements.

House kills AIDS study for 1987

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Returned to a legislative committee by the House of Representatives, a bill calling for a study of the issue of discrimination against AIDS victims has been effectively killed.

With the midnight deadline for adjourning the session, there is virtually no chance the bill can return to the full General Assembly this year.

Originally, the bill would have outlawed discrimination against victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or those perceived to have the disease. The House had approved that bill and sent it to the Senate last month.

But in the meantime, there were reports that health-care workers had contracted the AIDS virus after working with AIDS patients. Those reports alarmed lawmakers and the bill was turned into a study of the issue by the Senate.

Rep. Paul Glonfrido, D-Middleton, co-chairman of the Public Health Committee, who had supported the original bill, said after the bill was sent back to committee that he was "convinced that current state statutes clearly protect people who have been infected with the AIDS virus."

"I believe our Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities is conducting our laws that will continue to," said Glonfrido. Further, he said, a bill approved earlier in the session sets up a task force to study AIDS issues. Another bill expected to be considered Wednesday sets aside $4.25 million for AIDS research, counseling, testing and insurance for AIDS victims.

Rep. Francis X. O'Neill Jr., R-Guilford, who had opposed the original bill, was outraged that it was sent back to committee. "You (Democrats) on the other side of the aisle are saying exactly what we were saying, that there are adequate protections under the law," O'Neill said. "This bill was a mockery."

Housing bill attacked as thievery before approval

By Brent Loyton
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A bill that would allow the state to tap into renters' security deposits to help build low- and moderate-income housing is being attacked by some legislators as tantamount to legal thievery.

The security deposits would be invested in Connecticut Finance Housing Authority bonds to finance construction and rehabilitation of housing units.

O'Neill said. "This bill was a mockery."

House of Representatives on Tuesday.

"This bill is the most revolutionary bill I have ever seen in this General Assembly," Rep. Jerry Patton, R-Milford, said before the 77-73 vote. "It will allow the state of Connecticut to confiscate private bank accounts."

The bill was sent back to the Senate because of changes made by the House.

Landlords are now required to place security deposits in escrow accounts and pay tenants 5% percent annual interest on the money.

Under the bill approved Tuesday, all security deposits would go into a trust fund that would in turn be invested in the CHFA bonds.

Rep. Walter S. Brooks, D-New Haven, co-chairman of the Housing Committee, estimated the program would generate between $100 million and $200 million for housing.

Senate sends absentee-ballot bill to O'Neill

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A bill that would lighten the absentee voting process in Connecticut is on its way to Gov. William A. O'Neill for his signature.

"This is a substantial reform," said Sen. James H. Maloney, D-Danbury, co-chairman of the Government Administration and Elections Committee, after the bill won easy approval in the state Senate.

The bill was among several proposals that stemmed from abuses in absentee balloting in Waterbury and Bridgeport last year. It's designed to establish a paper trail for those handling absentee ballots so that any abuses could more readily be traced.

Frederic H. Lovgrove Jr., R-Fairfield, called the bill "no reform at all" and tried unsuccessfully to amend it with stricter language.

Among other things, his amendment would have required signature verification by officials when an absentee ballot is returned. He was voted down 23-11. The bill itself was then approved 31-3.

Under existing law, anyone — including campaign workers — can pick up applications and distribute them. The bill leaves that procedure unchanged.

But under the bill approved Tuesday, each application would have to be signed both by the applicant and by the person who distributed it. The bill also retains a requirement that town clerks keep a list of every one who takes out absentee-ballot applications.

The bill also requires supervised voting when 20 or more residents of a nursing home or similar institution are voting by absentee ballot. It's designed to establish a paper trail for those handling absentee ballots so that any abuses could more readily be traced.

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court has upheld the legality of two Puerto Rican nationalists' 19-month detention while awaiting trial for a $7 million Wall Fargo robbery in Connecticut.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, reversed on the issue of pre-trial detention last week by the U.S. Supreme Court, on Tuesday gave a lower court finding that Filiberto Ojeda-Rios and Juan Sgarra-Palmer posed a flight risk and should be denied bail pending trial.

It was the third time defendants charged with the Sept. 12, 1985 robbery of the West Hartford, Conn. Wells Fargo depot sought release on bail.

They are accused of belonging to a terrorist group known as Los Mocheros — Spanish for "the machete wielders" — which seeks Puerto Rican independence.

The group has claimed responsibility for the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery as well as the 1981 bombing at Muni Air Force base that destroyed nine Puerto Rican National Guard planes and the 1979 attack on a U.S. Navy bus in Puerto Rico that left two sailors dead.

Five of the defendants previously held without bail were released last year by U.S. District T. Emmet Clarke of Hartford following previous rulings by the 2nd Circuit. But Clarke continued the detention of Ojeda-Rios, 33, and Sgarra-Palmer, 36, the appeals court ruled, because both had very limited ties to the community.

New history book chronicles a tale of one city: Bridgeport

Linda Stowell
The Associated Press

BRIDGEPORT — In a city where car bombings are routine and drug happenings like ferryboats disappearing aren't so strange, the people here learned to shrug and say "Only in Bridgeport."

Now that common saying about the sometimes tragic, sometimes weird happenings in New England's fifth largest city is also the title of a book written by the assistant to the mayor.

Author Lennie Grimaldi already is planning to write a new edition to his book to add mention of the L'Amblance Plaza collapse that killed 23 men on April 23. He believes the tragedy is going to go down in the city's history books as the incident that turned the city around.

"Bridgeport's history would not be complete without L'Amblance," Grimaldi said Tuesday. "There was so much international attention on the city that it forced people to look at it ... and it showed a city with a heart. People aren't going to laugh at Bridgeport anymore."

Grimaldi, 28, was born in Bridgeport and has worked in the city of 143,000 since he was 16. Only in Bridgeport, his first book, was published last July and is in its second edition. A former reporter and freelance writer, Grimaldi said he selected the title because "it captures the city's unique aspects and oddities."

Only in Bridgeport would an arsonist set fire to a Christmas Village and only in Bridgeport would the city brag about being the correct capital of the world.

Grimaldi said there were a rash of incidents in 1980 and 1981 that caused the city's image "to hit rock bottom."

Bridgeport Brass, one of the city's anchoring industrial companies, announced it would close, a police officer checking on a car in a parking garage was shot to death and women were terrorized by the "bumpers rapist," who for several months hit the back ends of women's cars with his auto and then sexually assaulted them.

"Bridgeport is a reporter's dream and it kept me off the unemployment line because there is so much to write about," Grimaldi said. "Only in Bridgeport would a police superintendent turn the tables on an FBI sting attempt, only in Bridgeport would a mayor wear a bullet-proof vest during a political campaign. Only in Bridgeport would the mayor's car be fire-bombed outside of his house."

It was one thing after another and people started saying, "Only in Bridgeport," Grimaldi said. "It didn't end there. We had a ferry boat junction restaurant that was supposed to be the savior of the community and one night the owner, who owed $18,000 in back taxes, just lifted the moorings and took off."

Grimaldi said it was these incidents that "captured the controversial side of the community, but also 'Only in Bridgeport captured the name of its spirit.'"

He said the city has made many contributions to world progress.

"The city was the sewing machine capital of the country, of course, there's the machine tool industry, and we had the locomobile which was the first luxury car ever built," and sold for more than $11,000 in 1922, he said.

He describes Bridgeport as a "tough old industrial community which is stuck right in the heart of corporate Fairfield County."

"If you go down the Connecticut Turnpike through Greenwich and Stamford you see all these shiny glass structures, you drive through Norwalk and Fairfield, and then you come upon Bridgeport with smokestacks and people create their own images of the community," Grimaldi said.

"I would add that a lot of the politicians in Bridgeport in the past have done a lot to hurt the city's image," he said. "But I think that that image is turning around—the image is more of a perception than a reality."

Grimaldi notes there's $1 billion in redevelopment going on city-wide. He also said Bridgeport has always been a place for people to go to find work and bribes at the suburban attitude that they'll work in the city and live elsewhere.

"The part that angers me is Bridgeport creates jobs and people come here and make a lot of money and then they go off to their palatial estates in Westport, which is OK, but then they thumb their noses at the city," he said.

Lennie Grimaldi poses with a copy of the book he has written about his native city, Bridgeport. His book is a history of New England's fifth largest city. The title is a common saying about the city. Grimaldi is presently an aide to Bridgeport Mayor Thomas Buccia.

Woman says Ross raped her

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — A 23-year-old woman says Michael B. Ross was the man who disarmed and raped her four years ago while holding her own knife to her throat.

"I put the knife up against his heart, but I couldn't stab him because he started choking me harder and I dropped the knife," the Mousop mother of three, identified only as Vivian, testified Tuesday during the fifth week of Ross' multiple murder trial at Superior Court.

"He wasn't violent. He was calm," she said, occasionally crying. "He's not nuts. He could have strangled me. He could have all my throat. He could have done anything he wanted to." Judge G. Sarafield told the jurors to disregard the woman's statement that Ross is "not nuts."

Police have said that Ross confessed to the rape and told them he didn't kill the woman because it was dark and he didn't think she would be able to identify him. However, the woman testified she was able to identify him because he grabbed her under a street light.

Also Tuesday, New London State's Attorney C. Robert Satti Jr. cut short his questioning of Dr. Robert Miller, a state psychiatrist, when Miller said he had not specifically informed Ross of his right to avoid self-incrimination.

Ross' two public defenders are trying to build a defense based on insanity or extreme emotional disturbance.

Before the questioning stopped, Miller said, "People with personality disorders are capable of adequate judgment and controlling their behavior even though they don't elect to control their behavior."

Windsor teen dies after chase

WEST HARTFORD — Authorities are investigating a head-on crash between a police cruiser and a car it was chasing that left one man dead and another critically injured.

Craig Gerbe, 19, of Windsor, was pronounced dead at John Dempsey Hospital in Farmington at about 3 a.m. Tuesday, a hospital spokesman said.

Michael Dunn, 19, of West Hartford, a passenger in the car, was in critical condition at the hospital, the spokesman said.

Officer Richard Nardi, also in the cruiser involved in the crash, was treated at St. Francis Hospital in Hartford for head and face injuries and released, police said.

Most of power restored, NU says

HARTFORD — All but about 140 of the nearly 10,000 customers who experienced power outages as a result of thunderstorms had service restored by early today, a Northeast Utilities spokesman said.

Approximately 7,000 of those affected were connected to one of three large power lines which were damaged by lightning, Jeff Kotkin, the spokesman, said. He explained that one large circuit often carries over 2,000 customers in a neighborhood.

The majority of those affected, in West Hartford and Newington, were blacked out shortly after 5 p.m., Kotkin said. There were also scattered outages in East Hartford, Waterbury, Farmington and Avon, he said.

All but 140 customers had regained their service by 11 p.m., according to Kotkin.

300 protest gay-rights bill rejection

HARTFORD — About 300 people, many of them wearing white masks to symbolize the repression of homosexuals, rallied outside the state Capitol Tuesday night to protest the General Assembly's rejection of a gay rights bill.

"We're willing to come out and say it's wrong," Betty Gallo, a lobbyist for the Connecticut Coalition for Lesbian and Gay Civil Rights, said of discrimination against homosexuals.

Rowland: U.S. is 'asking for trouble'

By Christopher Callohan
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. Rep. John Rowland, usually a strong supporter of President Reagan, is criticizing the administration's policy of putting U.S. flags on Kuwaiti oil tankers to protect them from attack in the Iran-Iraq war.

"It's asking for trouble," the Connecticut Republican said Tuesday. "I think it's absolute insanity."

Speaking to New England business leaders at a breakfast meeting, the House Armed Services Committee member said the United States was sending out the flag "with a mission in mind."

In a letter Tuesday to Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, Rowland called the policy "most troubling."

"Quite frankly, I believe the policy of flagging Kuwaiti tankers could serve simply to provoke a military action by Iran," Rowland wrote. "We are simply placing more servicemen in jeopardy on a needless mission."

Both congressmen suggested that the policy may be an attempt to divert attention from the Iran-Contra scandal.

"Are we going to start bombing Iran? Is that what we want to do? Or do we want to get attention away from the Contra hearings?" Mavroules asked.

The Massachusetts congressman compared the Persian Gulf policy to the Beirut peacekeeping mission that ended in disaster.

"We've got to be very clear in our minds that we are not engaged in a mission that we are not prepared to see through," he said.

Rowland agreed.

"What is our mission in the Persian Gulf?" he wrote in the letter to Weinberger. "Is it just to maintain a presence or are we considering protecting all the sea travel in the region? Most importantly, what action will the United States take if a Kuwaiti tanker under U.S. flag is attacked? Will we retaliate? What will our response be?"

O'Neill warned about possible ethics violation

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill's office was warned in 1984 that involvement by a member of the Connecticut Resources Recovery Authority in a Bloomfield landfill posed a possible conflict of interest, state police documents show.

Nevertheless, Milton Levine of Bloomfield was nominated by the governor for another term. The landfill issue didn't come up again until the CRRRA announced plans in December 1986 to buy the dump from Levine and his partners for $2.5 million.

Levine was no longer a member of the CRRRA board when the landfill sale, later scuttled, was announced.

The state Ethics Commission charged Monday that Levine probably violated the state ethics code when he failed to report his involvement in the 23-acre dump on financial disclosure forms filed with the commission in 1984 and 1985, commission attorney Brenda Farrell said.

The apparent violations were unintentional, the commission found.

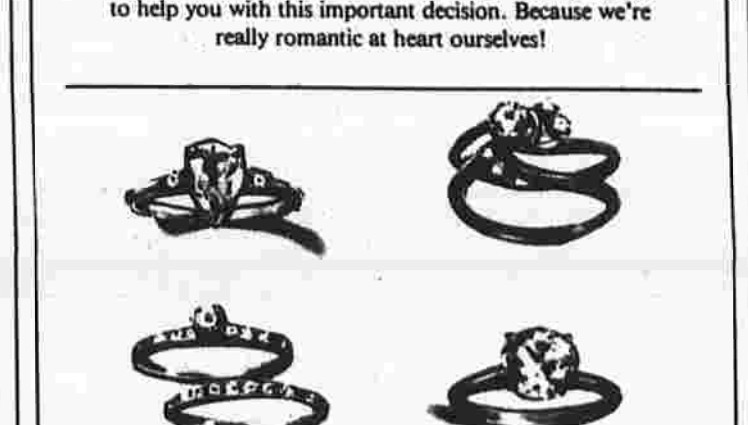

Farrell will now attempt to negotiate a settlement over the apparent violations. If no settlement is reached, the commission will hold a public hearing on the charges. Each violation carries a possible $1,000 fine.

Levine said he won't comment on the case until a final settlement is reached.

Ethics Commission documents released Tuesday show that state police raised questions about Levine's involvement in the landfill during a background check conducted in 1984 before he was nominated for another term on the CRRRA board.

Yale requires more science

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

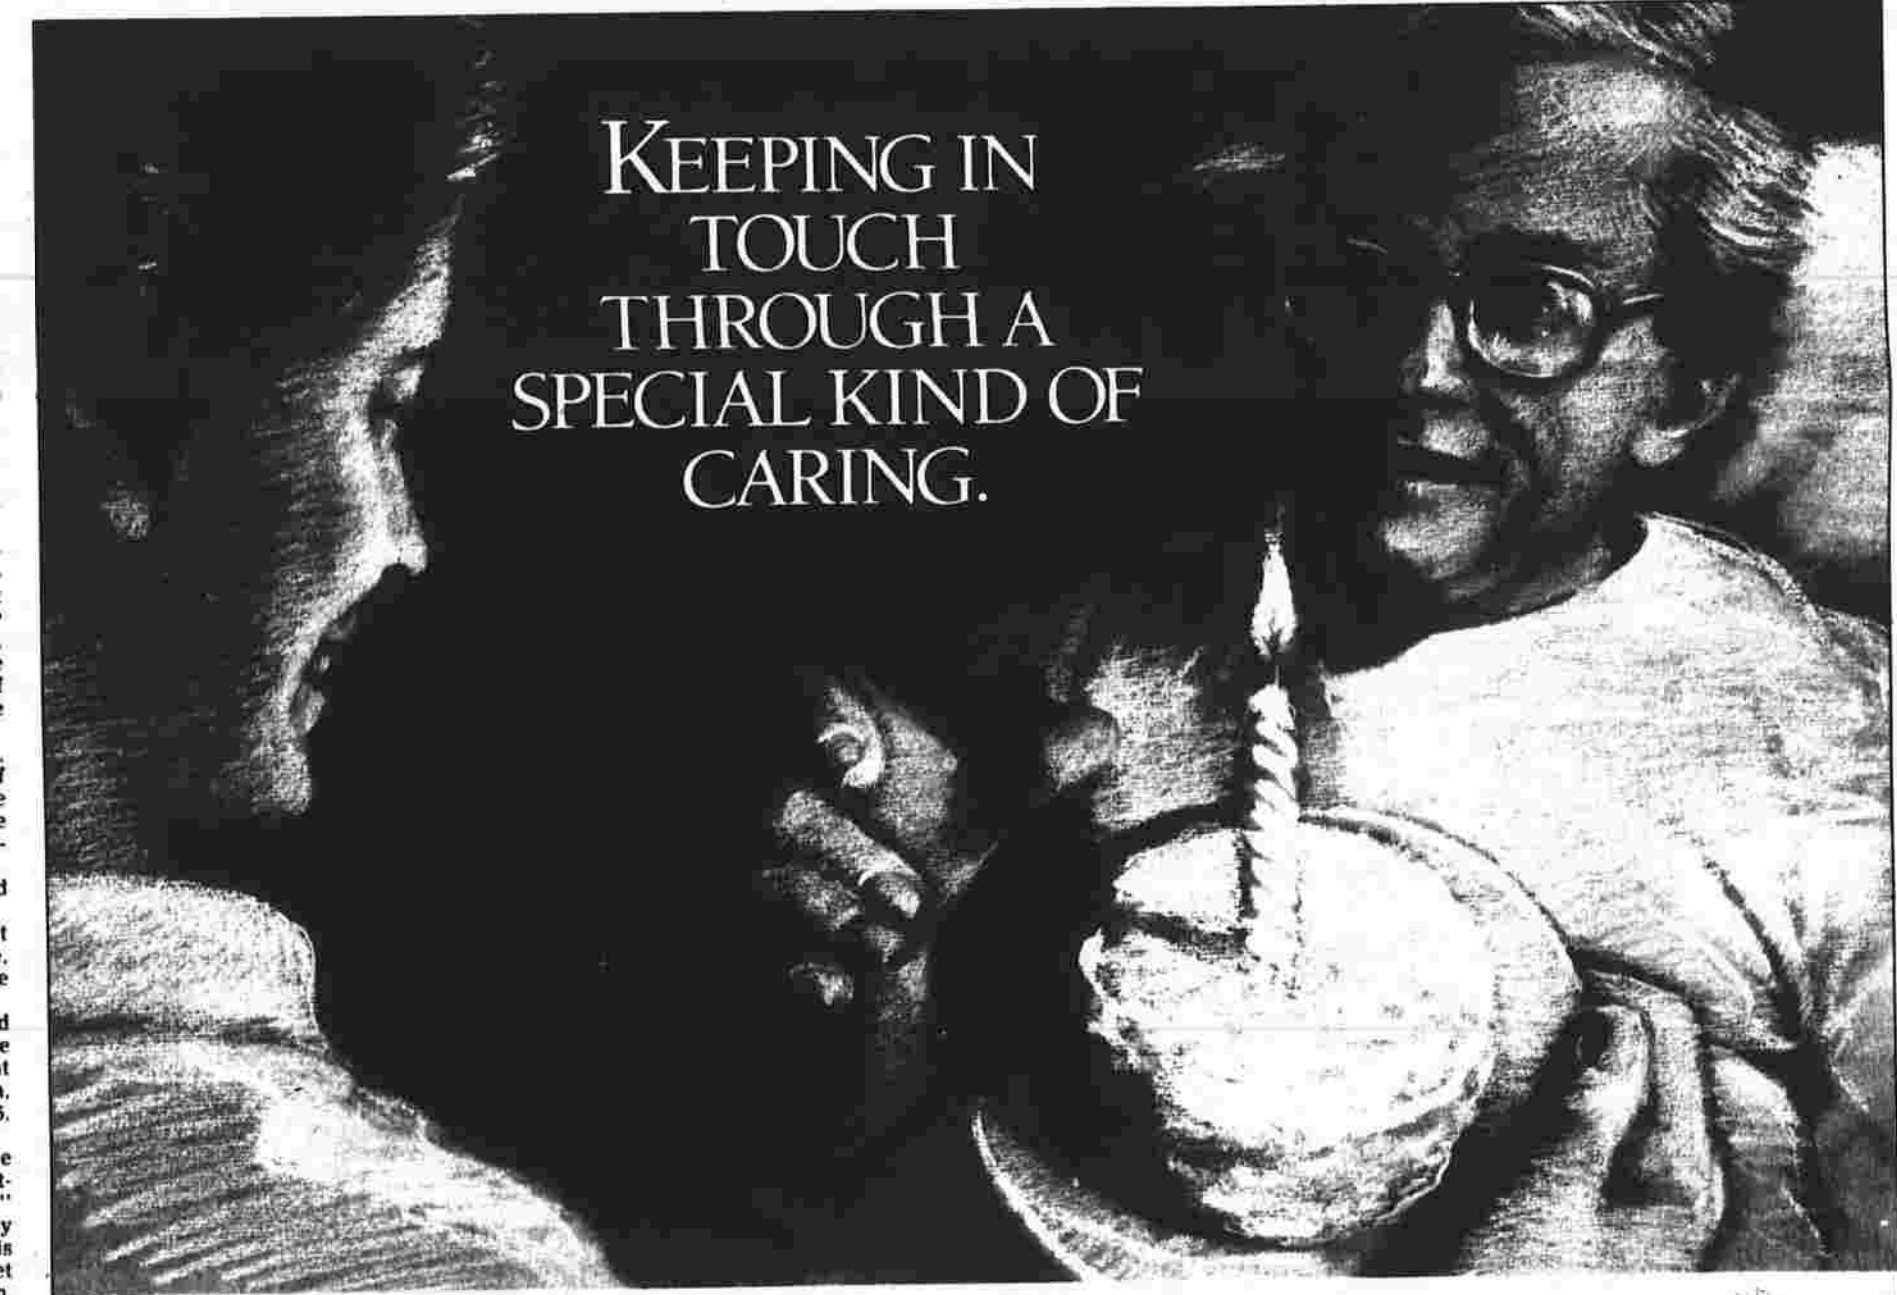

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Yale University has announced undergraduate students will be required to take at least two courses in the natural sciences beginning in 1989.

Under the requirement changes announced Tuesday, students must also complete at least three courses in each of four general academic areas — language and literature; humanities; social sciences; and natural sciences, mathematics, computer science and statistics.

Another change specifies that advanced-placement credits, grounded in work done in secondary schools, may no longer be used to meet distribution requirements.

The new requirements will take effect for freshmen entering Yale College, the university's undergraduate school, in 1989.

"These three changes show that the Yale College faculty takes very seriously its goals for a liberal education and its own efforts to assure that its undergraduates become familiar with fields other than their own," said Sidney Altman, dean of Yale College.

For a hospital to be a true credit to its community it must be able to provide its neighbors with a special kind of caring. To achieve this goal Manchester Memorial Hospital selects its staff for their excellence as healthcare professionals and for their sensitivity as caring human beings.

Rent income valid way to learn values

The effect of rental income on the market value of apartment buildings and commercial centers cannot be debated. Income figures are used routinely by buyers and sellers in real estate transactions.

The power of a municipal assessor to require certain information about income and expenses of rental property as a means of determining property values for a revaluation also cannot be debated. The state law authorizing appraisals based on income has been on the books since 1984.

But the town of Manchester's decision to use that method in the town's current revaluation can be debated. The town's use of unauthorized forms, probably in violation of state law, helps underscore the complaint that the method should have been the subject of thorough public discussion.

There might not have been much of an argument. Similar information was sought and provided voluntarily by owners of income-producing property in Manchester's last revaluation. In other cases, where assessments of such property had to be based on guesswork, there were indications that the assessor simply overvalued property and left the actual market-value decisions to the Board of Tax Review or the courts.

Town administrators erred in not informing the Board of Directors about plans to make use of the state law authorizing use of rental-income information in the revaluation. And the administrators erred in not obtaining state approval of the form used to seek that information.

Those errors, however, do not mean that the new system is flawed. It is much better than hit-or-miss procedures or the exaggerated adversary system of the past.

'87 a breeze for the 'progressive' O'Neill

Gov. Bill O'Neill had a breeze in his relationship with the Legislature this year, but he wishes the liberals would watch their language.

O'Neill, who is on the conservative side of moderate, resents their adopting the label of "progressive" for themselves. He says they do it because they have become touchy about being called liberals and think the other term is more acceptable to the public.

But, says O'Neill, "progressive" is a misnomer as they use it.

"I like to think of the whole Democratic Party as progressive," said O'Neill during a chat about how he sizes up the 1987 General Assembly. It shouldn't apply just to a certain element, he said.

"This has been a very progressive Legislature. I am a very progressive governor," said O'Neill, stressing the "progress" in progressive. It wasn't too shabby for him, politically, either.

O'Neill says it has helped to have a booming economy in Connecticut. The pressures over money haven't been there. And as a former legislator who was around when the economy was going the other way, O'Neill says he'll be this year's experience. It's been great for the Legislature, he adds.

"They've had a cakewalk," says O'Neill. For his part, O'Neill got all he wanted in his $4 billion budget and the Legislature added $1 million more. "I feel good about that," he says. O'Neill was also happy when Democrats on his side beat back proposals to enable candidates for the state ticket to bypass nominating conventions or to lower the threshold to qualify for challenge primary. The liberals were behind those ideas.

O'Neill says it has helped to have a booming economy in Connecticut. The pressures over money haven't been there. And as a former legislator who was around when the economy was going the other way, O'Neill says he'll be this year's experience. It's been great for the Legislature, he adds.

CIA won't buy Pentagon line on drugs

WASHINGTON — The CIA no longer agrees with a line the Reagan administration has been pushing determinedly for the past five years: that the Cuban and Nicaraguan governments are smuggling drugs into the United States.

Accusations of involvement in international drug traffic have been a standard feature of the ideological battles over the administration's Central American policies. Since 1982, top administration officials have loudly and emphatically proclaimed that Cuban President Fidel Castro is a dope smuggler — as were the leaders of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua. Administration critics have responded with charges that the Nicaraguan contras are in the drug business themselves.

In May 1983, Vice President George Bush posed dramatically surrounded by several hundred pounds of cocaine and stacks of greenbacks confiscated from drug smugglers. He declared ringingly that Castro was trying to destabilize the United States by smuggling drugs into Florida and other points of entry. Other Reagan officials staged similar grandstand plays on the same theme.

THE TROUBLE with this propaganda effort has always been that the evidence was painfully thin. Sometimes it boiled down to a single informant, who was paid large sums of money and was perfectly willing to earn it by lying.

Informants aren't stupid. They can usually tell what the Drug Enforcement Administration or other U.S. intelligence paymasters would like to hear, and they dish it up with enthusiasm — but take care that their colorful inventions are impossible to verify or discredit. When an informant's file fits an administration policy line, it is promptly translated into leaks, official statements and headlines.

Our intelligence sources tell us that there are a few grains of truth in almost all the charges, which naturally tends them some credibility. For example, they say there apparently are some Cuban and Nicaraguan officials mixed up in drug deals — individuals, not organized by the government.

These same sources add, however, that there is stronger evidence that pro-American Cubans in Florida and Nicaraguan contras are involved to a greater degree than the anti-U.S. forces.

The subject came up at the Feb. 19 meeting of a CIA-internal board — and the comments of the CIA representative were astounding.

THE PANEL, called the National Drug Enforcement Policy Board, is chaired by Attorney General Edwin Meese. We have obtained the confidential minutes of the February meeting; the first participant to report was Richard Kerr, deputy director of the CIA.

He "delivered a worldwide threat assessment of the narcotics problem (which emphasized the negative)," according to the minutes. DEA Administrator John C. Lawn and assistant secretary of state Ann B. Wroblewski followed with some positive remarks on U.S.-supported anti-drug programs in Latin America.

This reminded assistant Agriculture Secretary George Dunlop of the longstanding administration claims of Cuban and Nicaraguan involvement in drug traffic. He asked: "What's the story now?"

Kerr, the CIA man, responded in a way that suggests he never dreamed his confidential remarks would be made public. He contradicted the administration's line.

"Richard Kerr pointed out it was hard to identify a direct Cuban government link to trafficking activities," the minutes state. "There is no solid evidence to support this."

As for the Managua conspirators: "The Nicaraguan Sandinista role appears to have been episodic," Kerr said, according to the confidential minutes. Our CIA sources translated this as a polite way of saying that much of the hoopla about Sandinista drug smuggling was based on a DEA informant who has since been discredited.

morning milking when there was a good whooshing sound that sounded like the end of the world; four cows kicked out their milking machines. I later learned that the gas company was releasing some pressure at the pipeline valve station at the end of our land and had failed to notify us that they were doing work at the valve that morning.

Today we are out of the dairy business and raise hay here on the farm. We know the pipeline is there, but it's been there pumping gas for over 35 years.

People should outlaw hunting

My classmates and I have been discussing animal rights. Recently we discussed some issues on hunting. We felt that this was a very cruel sport.

I think that the people of Manchester and other towns should do something about outlawing hunting. One reason we shouldn't allow hunting to be done is that if we left the animals alone they wouldn't try to reproduce as much, but if we keep killing them they are going to reproduce more because of the loss of their own kind. Also, some hunters kill an animal and just leave it there because it is in the wrong species and they could get into trouble for having destroyed it. Sometimes a wounded animal runs away and the hunter can't find it or doesn't want to bother following its trail. The animal is left there to die.

Those are some reasons why we should stop hunting.

You don't know pipeline's there

I have been reading with great interest lately about the progress of the proposed Iroquois gas line that will pass through the northeastern hills of Connecticut.

Over here in the northeastern hills of Connecticut, "Connecticut's Quiet Corner," as we've been dubbed, the Algonquin Gas Co. has been pumping gas from Texas to Boston since 1951. A second line was put through in 1965. We hardly know it's there, although the pipeline is less than 500 yards from our 250-year-old farmhouse. Over the years we have raised corn, grazed our dairy cattle and cut hay on our land that the gas line runs through. We have yet to have any major trouble. In some places on our land where there is ledge, the gas pipes are no more than three feet below the surface.

My only problem with the gas line occurred in the early 1970s when we had Holstein dairy cattle. One morning I was finishing the Game will bring several hazards

To the Editor:

To Mayor Barbara Weinberg,

On May 19 I attended the meeting of the Board of Directors and came away with the understanding that because of Mr. O'Marra's interpretation of the zoning laws, he gave Mr. Cummings permission to start renovations of the recently vacated Shop Rite store on East Middle Turnpike where he is installing Laserquest games. I also learned, at the same meeting, that even though nearly 8,000 residents had signed petitions against allowing Laserquest to come to Manchester, the Board of Directors would be unable to halt this project unless the health or safety of the residents was threatened. Therefore, I submit the following information to show that both our health and safety are, indeed, threatened.

If, as Mr. Cummings has stated, 250,000 participants per year are needed to make this venture successful — the amount of litter generated by that vast number of people will be tremendous. If proof is needed, check the debris left at other sites in town where young people "hang around," for that is what will happen after their $4 for 10 minutes or $12 for one-half hour is spent and it's "too early" to go home. The debris alone constitutes a health hazard. Also, experience has shown when large groups of people from varied backgrounds gather for "fun" the number of simple assaults rises. That, too, is a health and safety problem. And last, but far from least, the game itself probably presents the greatest safety problem if, in fact, the laser (a device that amplifies focused light waves and concentrates them in a narrow, very intense beam) is used.

Relief supplies to go to Sri Lanka

RAMESWARAM, India — Fishing boats loaded with relief supplies and flying Red Cross flags prepared to sail today for Sri Lanka's Tamil community, as diplomatic contacts appeared to reduce chances of a confrontation with the Sri Lankan navy.

"We have got the final go-ahead signal from New Delhi and we are getting ready to sail," Madhav Sharma, the relief operation's coordinator in the southern Indian port of Rameswaram, told The Associated Press.

Twenty-five ships were loaded with two tons each of food, medicine and fuel for Sri Lanka's Tamil-dominated Jaffna Peninsula, 18 miles from India across the Palk Strait.

India, home to more than 50 million Tamils, says the supplies represent purely humanitarian aid to civilians caught in the island nation's ethnic strife.

But the Sri Lankan government said Tuesday the supplies were unnecessary and unwelcome and threatened to prevent the "deserts from landing."

India has served unsuccessfully as a mediator in the 6-year-old Sri Lankan civil war that pits Tamil separatists against the Sinhalese-dominated government and army.

Goetz's attorney: I rest my case

NEW YORK — Bernhard Goetz's attorney says he rested his case without calling the subway gunman to testify because jurors already had seen him at his moment of truth — when he confessed on tape about shooting four youths.

In audio and video tapes made after his surrender in Concord, N.H., Goetz told police he felt he was about to be robbed by four young men on a subway train in 1984 and that he turned into a "monster" who wanted to "murder" them.

The tapes were played by the prosecution earlier in the attempted murder trial.

"He's been seen by the jury at his most tender moment of truth. There's no need for him to take the stand now and repeat what he said before," defense attorney Barry Stoltick said after resting his case Tuesday.

Assistant District Attorney Gregory Waples indicated he will call rebuttal witnesses on Friday. Justice Stephen Crane said the case could go to the jury by the middle of next week.

N.Y. Democrat, others to be indicted

NEW YORK — Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., his son and five others are expected to be indicted as early as today on federal racketeering charges in the probe of scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp., two newspapers reported.

The indictments are expected to be announced today, the New York Daily News and The Washington Post said in today's editions, quoting unidentified law enforcement sources.

The federal grand jury indictments are expected to include charges of racketeering, conspiracy, mail fraud, wire fraud, extortion, attempted income tax evasion and obstruction of justice, the sources said.

Spokesmen for Biaggi said early today that there was no indication of imminent grand jury action against the congressman.

Biaggi has "no confirmation that any indictment is coming down," press aide Bob Biancato told The Associated Press in Washington.

In New York, Biaggi spokesman Mortimer Mats said he had "no knowledge" of any impending indictments. "We don't know if they'll be indicted," Mats said. "Nobody's been notified."

Congress wants military plans

WASHINGTON — Congress wants more information about President Reagan's military plans for the Persian Gulf, but members of the two Democratic-controlled chambers disagree on just how to seek those facts.

The House voted 302-105 on Tuesday to seek the new details on how Reagan plans to protect Kuwaiti tankers in the gulf, but the measure says the administration can go ahead with its plan once the information is sent to Capitol Hill.

The vote sent the bill to the Senate where it was promptly stalled by Democrats who want tougher language that would effectively delay the implementation of any plans until Congress reviews them.

That view won 91-5 endorsement from the Senate two weeks ago, but was attached as an amendment to an unrelated bill which will not become effective for several weeks. That would be after administration plans take effect.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said he would send the House bill to a pair of committees for study.

Rally marks student's death

BERLIN — About 300 people, many wearing black masks, smashed shop windows in West Berlin after a rally to mark the 20th anniversary of the police shooting of a student whose death sparked the student revolt of the late 1960s.

The violence Tuesday night followed a peaceful rally by about 1,500 people in West Berlin's Charlottenburg district, where Benno Ohnesorge was killed by police bullets on June 2, 1967, during an anti-government demonstration.

Kerr, the CIA man, responded in a way that suggests he never dreamed his confidential remarks would be made public. He contradicted the administration's line.

Draft of arms treaty completed

GENEVA — U.S. and Soviet officials have finished their first draft of a treaty to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, according to a top Soviet negotiator.

Alexei Obukhov told a press luncheon Tuesday that the draft included "a lot of brackets," or unresolved issues, but that he believed an agreement could be reached sometime this fall.

In a prepared statement, Obukhov said the draft text was finished Monday and that it would help "formulate common language more rapidly, in a more organized way."

Under the agreement, the superpowers would withdraw from Europe their medium-range missiles, which have ranges of 600-3,000 miles, but each could maintain 100 such missiles on their own territory. The United States has indicated it would keep its 100 missiles in Alaska, while Moscow says it would maintain its missiles in Soviet Asia.

Hart gets no support from panel

WASHINGTON — Federal Election Commission lawyers are recommending that former Sen. Gary Hart receive no federal matching funds for his aborted presidential campaign.

Hart's campaign organization, deeply in debt for his unsuccessful 1984 presidential bid, wants taxpayer's money to help pay off that red ink as well as the new debts incurred in his race for the 1988 Democratic nomination.

Hart owes $1.3 million from his 1984 bid and has some bills from his short-lived 1988 effort.

But in an opinion released Tuesday for the commission's use in its deliberations on Thursday, the FEC counsel said Hart cannot be considered eligible because he dropped out of the race on May 6.

Reports that Hart was having an affair with model Donna Rice led to his withdrawal from the race. The former senator from Colorado denied a sexual liaison with Ms. Rice.

Greenspan has tough road ahead

WASHINGTON — Newly nominated Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan is likely to undergo a trial by fire as he attempts to keep the U.S. economy from derailing under multiple pressures caused by sluggish growth, renewed inflation and a plunging dollar, analysts say.

And these pressures also say Greenspan, nominated Tuesday to be the 19th chairman of the Fed, will need the nerves of a seismologist and the hide of an elephant to succeed in the new job.

Greenspan has a tough act to follow in the departing Paul Volcker, who in eight years as head of the central bank had gained worldwide stature as an inflation-fighter and champion of economic stability.

Volcker's standing was brought home within minutes of President Reagan's surprise announcement of a British brokerage firm, "in a move of very small magnitude."

Still, the complaints seemed aimed mainly at Volcker's leaving rather than at Greenspan's arrival. Supporters said Greenspan, a respected economist in his own right, should have little trouble winning Senate confirmation.

"While Paul Volcker's retirement is a real loss, this country is very fortunate to have a man of Alan Greenspan's caliber to take his place," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Greenspan, 61, won widespread praise for his handling of two previous government jobs: chairmanship of the Council of Economic Advisors under President Gerald Ford from 1974 to 1977 and as head of a presidential blue-ribbon commission which recommended ways to overhaul the financially troubled Social Security system in 1983.

AIDS vaccine boosts immune systems

WASHINGTON (AP) — A researcher who courageously injected himself with an AIDS vaccine to boost his own immune system says it now has produced a modest boost in the immune systems of 10 AIDS victims and 12 healthy people who have received it.

Some researchers feared that Daniel Zagury of the University of Paris would damage his own immune system by injecting himself with the experimental vaccine, which contains fragments of the virus that causes AIDS.

But Zagury, reporting on his research Tuesday at the Third International Conference on AIDS, said none of the vaccine recipients has suffered immune system breakdown or other ill effects.

He cautioned, however, that it is still too soon to tell whether the improvement in the recipients' immune systems will be enough to improve the health of those with AIDS or to prevent AIDS infection in healthy volunteers.

Zagury used a smallpox vaccine that was genetically engineered to include fragments of the AIDS virus. The vaccine produced immunity to two very different strains of the virus — an important finding that suggests a single vaccine might be able to protect against all strains of the virus, Dr. Robert Gallo of the National Cancer Institute said.

The volunteers were Zairians who were treated in cooperation with the Zairian AIDS research program and with the sanction of its ethics committee and of the Zairian government, Zagury said.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a contagious disease of the body's immune system, rendering it incapable of resisting other diseases and infections.

By taking the vaccine first,

Zagury has done a very courageous thing," said Dani Bolognesi, an AIDS researcher at Duke University in North Carolina.

Gallo said studies of vaccine in chimpanzees have so far been disappointing. No one has yet been able to protect a chimpanzee against AIDS infection, he noted.

Vaccines have produced high levels of anti-AIDS antibodies in chimpanzees, but those antibodies recognized only the particular strain of virus used in the vaccine, and had no effect on other strains, Gallo said.

Eighth drops bid for service swap in northeast area

By George Lovins
Herald Reporter

One of the areas that has held up a settlement of long-standing problems between the Eighth District and the town of Manchester appears to have been overcome.

The Eighth District proposed Tuesday that there be no exchange of fire-service territory in the Parker Street, Rolling Park area in northeast Manchester. That point is one of the last areas of disagreement, had stalled talks since early May.

Up to last week, both sides had been unable to agree on where to draw the boundary because of political and economic considerations. However, the Eighth District Tuesday dropped its request to assume responsibility for fire territory in that section of Manchester.

The town negotiating team did not respond to the proposal, but said it would at another meeting scheduled for next Wednesday. Mayor Barbara B. Webster, a town negotiator, said the offer deserves "careful consideration."

"We're treating this seriously," added Kevin O'Brien, another town negotiator, during the session at Lincoln Center.

The offer from the Eighth District, which provides fire protection and sewer service in northern Manchester, reiterated a number of basic proposals it and the town had made in the past.

The town would buy the Eighth District's sewer system for $745,000. In return, the Eighth District would buy the town's Buckland firehouse on Tolland Turnpike for the price paid by the town in the early 1970s to purchase the property and build the facility. The swap of the firehouse for the sewers has been the point of any proposed settlement, although the cost of each has not been agreed to.

The town, for instance, had responded to the $745,000 sewer price tag, and it has offered to sell the firehouse at its replacement cost.

New AIDS class gets high marks

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herald Reporter

A one-class presentation on AIDS for seniors and juniors at Manchester High School that has received positive response from parents so far, Principal Jacob Ludes III said this morning.

The 45-minute program will be presented to about 1,400 juniors and seniors over the next two weeks in class groups of about 40. Ludes said the intent is to provide AIDS education for upperclassmen before a more in-depth program on the disease is implemented next year for sophomores.

Ludes said that each class includes a 30-minute presentation on the clinical aspects of the disease and 15 minutes devoted to "discussion. Although information on safe sex is included, it is not a dominant part of the presentation, Ludes said.

"Safe sex" ought not to be in our judgment the major or the key teen-ager's visit. Digan said. The Youth Services Bureau receives some funding through DCYS but is an independent agency under the Manchester Board of Education. Occasionally the two groups work together when a foster child enters the school system, Digan said.

Famed guitarist dies
MADRID, Spain (AP) — Andres Segovia, acclaimed as the world's premier classical guitarist for his flawless precision and beautiful sound, has died at his home in the Spanish capital. He was 94.

Luis Galve, a concert pianist and friend of Segovia's, told The Associated Press today that the guitarist died of heart failure Tuesday. Segovia had been hospitalized in New York last month during a tour with his doctor called cardiac irregularities.

Segovia established the guitar as a concert instrument. He was self-taught and gave his first concert at the age of 14. Loped his body will lie in state in Spain's Royal Academy of Fine Arts on Thursday and he will be buried the same day, Galve said. King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia were expected to visit the academy to express their condolences, the state radio said.

Man seeks $10 million for injuries

A South Windsor man has filed a lawsuit against the town of Manchester and the D'Esopo Wetherfield Chapel, 277 Folly Brook Blvd., Wetherfield, followed by a mass of injuries suffered in 1985 when the car he was driving crashed into a tree on Slater Street and a fire erupted.

According to a notice filed in the town clerk's office, the defendant is 38 Sunset Terrace, South Windsor, suffered third-degree burns to his lower extremities, arms, hands and face. As a result, portions of his right and left lower extremities and his fingers on his right hand were amputated, the notice said.

The town was named as a defendant because the lawsuit claims there were broken patches of pavement, no shoulder, inadequate street lights and an unreasonable stretch of road on Slater Street, the notice said. The incident occurred on May 25, 1985, just before 12:30 a.m.

The vehicle hit some potholes, went out of control, hit a tree on the west side of the road, and then hit a boulder on the north side of the road.

General Motors was named as a defendant because the driver was involved in the accident, a 1976 Buick Skyhawk. According to the notice, the vehicle's fuel pump impurities continued to pump fuel into the engine, sparking a fire. In addition, the notice said the car's firewalls were defective.

GSI should have known of these defects and failed to warn buyers, the notice said.

Town Attorney John W. Coyne could be reached for comment this morning.

Under the town's insurance policy, any claim over $500,000 for sales tax for business services provided to a subsidiary by a parent company.

Abrams: Rebels starving

Moments later, Abrams got into a tense exchange with Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, over the State Department official's previous statements about Mas Gomez, a pseudonym for Felix Rodriguez, a former CIA operative in Costa Rica who was involved in the private militia to support the Contras.

At issue was the extent of Abrams' knowledge and involvement in the Contra aid campaign at a time when Congress had banned all direct or indirect U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Abrams did assert that the U.S. government never officially approved as policy a secret plan for right-wing Contras, but that the plan was disclosed to them by former White House aide Oliver L. North.

Abrams said the plan, which included a U.S. Navy blockade of the leftist Sandinista government in the Caribbean Sea, was rejected during interagency talks.

Under questioning by Cohen, Abrams said he had no recollection of "at times" and by other White House officials.

The town was named as a defendant because the lawsuit claims there were broken patches of pavement, no shoulder, inadequate street lights and an unreasonable stretch of road on Slater Street, the notice said. The incident occurred on May 25, 1985, just before 12:30 a.m.

The vehicle hit some potholes, went out of control, hit a tree on the west side of the road, and then hit a boulder on the north side of the road.

General Motors was named as a defendant because the driver was involved in the accident, a 1976 Buick Skyhawk. According to the notice, the vehicle's fuel pump impurities continued to pump fuel into the engine, sparking a fire. In addition, the notice said the car's firewalls were defective.

GSI should have known of these defects and failed to warn buyers, the notice said.

Town Attorney John W. Coyne could be reached for comment this morning.

Under the town's insurance policy, any claim over $500,000 for sales tax for business services provided to a subsidiary by a parent company.

SPORTS Lakers aware it was only one victory

By Ken Peters
The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Pat Riley is worried that the Lakers have ignited the Celtics, but K.C. Jones sounds as if Boston is in danger of rapidly going down in flames.

"We have to keep in mind all we did last night, a fire under the Celtics," Riley, the Lakers' coach, said after Los Angeles' victory over Boston in Tuesday night's opening game of the NBA final.

"I'm sure they'll come back stronger; they don't like getting beat like this."

But Jones, Riley's Boston counterpart, said, "They are totally in control. A sweep is a possibility."

The Celtics, who fell behind 9-0 in the first 2 1/2 minutes of the game and never mounted a serious threat the rest of the way, will try to regroup for Game 2 of the best-of-seven championship series Thursday night at the Forum.

"Neither one of us scored in the first minute or so and I guess Magic and Worthy, I think, were the only ones to let's run," he said after that it was a romp," Jones said.

Magic Johnson, engineering the Lakers' fast break to perfection, scored 29 points and handed off 13 assists, and James Worthy, dazzling with his gravity-defying dunks, scored 33 points on 16-of-23 shooting to pace the Lakers.

Los Angeles led 26-26 at the end of the first period, built its advantage to 69-54 by halftime as Worthy poured in 23 points, and led 101-85 at the end of the third quarter.

The only scoring of Larry Bird, who had 23 points, kept the defending champion Celtics from being completely embarrassed.

"Larry was the only thing going for us," Jones said.

"I was disappointed in our effort," Bird said. "This isn't Detroit or Atlanta we're playing. It's the Los Angeles Lakers, probably the best team in the league."

"It's going to take a great effort on our part and we just didn't have that."

The Lakers, coming off an eight-day layoff, dominated the Celtics, who had had just two days off, in virtually every phase of the game.

Led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 16 rebounds, Los Angeles outscored Boston 51-49. The Lakers shot 88.6 percent from the floor, including 66.4 percent as they took charge in the first half. The Celtics, who rarely got off a shot without a Laker defender right in their face, made 64.5 percent of their shots.

And the Lakers' diversity showed. Byron Scott had 20 points, Abdul-Jabbar 14 and A.C. Green 10 as all five starters scored in double figures.

"They have so many offensive weapons that it's hard to key on one or two individuals," Bird said.

"What we have to concentrate on is getting back on defense."

Jones managed to maintain his sense of humor after the loss, saying, "We worked against their running game, we worked against their transition, we had the perfect plan. It didn't work. I'm going to tear up that page and get a new take."

Asked if the Lakers' new league game was good, the Boston coach said something along the lines of, "Mount Everest, a large mountain?"

The Celtics had lost a pair of one-sided games during the Eastern Conference series against Detroit, and the Jones said the loss in the first game of the league final was similar.

"It's the same thing, only this was prettier. It was truly a thing of beauty. I was passing the slam-dunks, the high-fives and the pointing, beautiful," Jones added with a wry smile, taking a job at the Lakers' "Shoutline" way of congratulating each other after a good play.

Johnson drew laughs in the post-game interview room when he said with a straight face, "Maybe they came in to lose this one and soften us up."

"I wish it was that way," Jones said.

Johnson said he expects Boston to battle back in the second game, commenting, "There's no question that they'll come out strong. We have to play better because you know they'll play better."

The last two times the two clubs squared off for the NBA title, the blowout in the first game was a bad omen for the winner of that contest. The Lakers' best Boston win in the 1984 championship series, but the Celtics came back to win the title in the second game.

However, the Twins held to two hits by rookie John Lester in four innings, tied the score 4-4 on Tom Brunansky's 19th homer in the fifth and Kent Hrbek's three-run shot, his 11th, in the sixth.

The Twins went ahead on a wild pitch to Bill Buckner, rather than walk him to set up a play at any base and pitch to Rich Gedman.

It was a mistake. Buckner, who threw out a popup as a 27-year-old veteran, lined a 1-1 pitch for a two-run single to center, lifting the Red Sox to a 6-5 victory.

"The manager asked me whether I wanted to pitch to Buckner or walk him and we decided to pitch to Montreal last February, said, "Then I threw a bad changeup and he threw his bat out and hit the ball."

"I was thinking base hit when their manager went out to the mound and pitched to me. Then I started to think they might walk me. But if they walk me they can't pitch to me, can they? Or the game is tied. I don't think Richie has a walk yet this year, but I don't think they know that."

Buckner also has a long memory, and he remembers when Reardon got him out in Minnesota in mid-May.

"He has a good fast ball and that's what I was looking for," the 31-year-old pitcher said. "I was surprised he got me out with his changeup, so I was prepared for it. I had it in the back of my mind, and that's what he threw me, a high changeup."

"Reardon had some friends here and he's pretty disappointed," Kelly said. "I went out and asked him what he wanted to do. If we walked Buckner it would have put us in a tight spot, so we decided to let him go. I told him to go to him and do his best. It just didn't work out."

Buckner's hit broke up a wild 58-minute marathon in which the Red Sox took a 4-0 lead on a Wade Boggs' double and nine other hits as the Red Sox won the game in the first four innings.

"You've gotta love getting up in pressure situations like that," said Greenwell. "I'm getting some good hits by rookie John Lester in four innings, tied the score 4-4 on Tom Brunansky's 19th homer in the fifth and Kent Hrbek's three-run shot, his 11th, in the sixth.

Reardon gets a lesson on pitching at Fenway

By Dave O'Hara
The Associated Press

BOSTON — After seven years in the National League, former University of Massachusetts star Jeff Reardon learned what it's like to pitch against the Boston Red Sox in Fenway Park.

"The Green Monster" in left field could afford to walk anyone else, but Reardon pitched to Boston Manager Tom Kelly rather than Tuesday night backfired.

Two runners on second and third and two out with Minnesota ahead 5-4, Reardon and Kelly elected to pitch to Bill Buckner, rather than walk him to set up a play at any base and pitch to Rich Gedman.

It was a mistake. Buckner, who threw out a popup as a 27-year-old veteran, lined a 1-1 pitch for a two-run single to center, lifting the Red Sox to a 6-5 victory.

Jury gets the case without hearing from Tribble

By David Ginn
The Associated Press

UPPER MERIBOND, Md.—The jury that will decide the fate of the man accused of providing the cocaine that killed basketball star Leslie Young must do so without hearing the defendant's side of the story.

The defense in the drug trial of Brian Tribble closed its case Tuesday after calling three witnesses. After a short recess, Judge James M. Has asked Tribble if he was aware of his right to testify in his own behalf.

Answering for the defendant, defense attorney Thomas Morrow said his client "voluntarily" declined against taking the stand. Closing arguments in the case were to begin today in Prince George's County Circuit Court after the jury of seven men and five women received its final instructions from Has.

Tribble, 34, is charged with cocaine distribution and possession in connection with the death of the University of Maryland all-American last June 19.

Morrow said his defense was partially short-circuited because of events that occurred in a lengthy bench argument Monday. Immediately after Morrow called an investigator for the state's attorney's office to the stand, both sides were called to the bench by Has.

Morrow subsequently changed his mind about the witness and never asked him to testify.

Asked if he was comfortable having only the state's attorney testify on behalf of his client, Morrow said, "I called as many witnesses as I feel are justified by the state's case."

After prosecutors stated they had no further witnesses to call to the stand, Morrow moved for a mistrial. He claimed testimony by 17-year-old Terrence Moore, who said he had sold drugs for Tribble, was irrelevant to the events of June 19.

Morrow also objected to testimony from former Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell, saying it was not consistent with what had already been presented. Morrow also claimed part of the testimony was "intended to confuse the jury."

Driesell testified that two Maryland basketball players in the room with Tribble were told to buy Tribble cocaine, when in fact they were told to buy marijuana. Tribble, he said, did not know where the drug came from.

Has denied Morrow's motion, saying he would let the jury, not the court, decide whether the state's effort to prove Tribble guilty of conspiracy to distribute cocaine was adequate. The judge also said he would tell the jury to ignore Driesell's comments about Tribble.

Defense attorneys wrapped up their case Tuesday after calling a life-long friend of the defendant to the stand. Julie Walker, 24, testified that she never saw Tribble use a safe that was stolen from her apartment, while he was in the area. She said she had seen Tribble around a safe around 6:30 p.m.

Two men broke into the home shared by Walker and her roommate, Gill Diamond, and stole the safe and some jewelry.

Walker also testified that Tribble did not receive any financial attention or appear to be selling drugs when she saw him at the Classics Nightclub in Prince George's County.

That contradicted earlier testimony from an undercover policeman who worked at the club as a security guard.

If convicted, Tribble could receive a 20-year jail sentence and a $50,000 fine.

Weich and Dodgers top Mets

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES—Bob Weich today was as busy as any major league pitcher has been in a long time. An offense which outscored him in 1966 had a lot to do with his recent victory.

Weich left Tuesday night's game for pitcher Tom Seaver. He pitched the bottom of the eighth inning, and Williams drew a bases-loaded walk from Jesse Orosco to force in the go-ahead run as the Los Angeles Dodgers topped the New York Mets 6-3.

Weich, 24, struck out six and walked two before Matt Young came on to strike out Keith Hernandez and Darrell Strawberry around a pop-up by Kevin McNulty in the ninth to earn his fifth win. Weich allowed only one hit outside the fourth inning, an infield single by pinch-hitter Les Mazzilli. But in the fourth, the Mets took a 2-1 lead on four hits, including a run-scoring double by Hernandez and a two-run homer by McKeeny. He pitched better than five innings. Weich was 7-13 last year. The Dodgers scored a total of only 21 runs in his 19 losses.

John Shelby had three hits and drove in three runs for the Dodgers. He had one hit each against Tom Edens, Doug Maki and Orosco, whose record dropped to 1-5.

Shelby, obtained by the Dodgers 2½ weeks ago from the Baltimore Orioles, drove in a second-inning

Mecir, Lendl In semifinals

By Larry Siddons
The Associated Press

MANCHESTER — Ivan Lendl used his steady, precise array of shots to best unseeded Karel Novacek 7-6, 6-1, 6-2 today to reach the semifinals at the French Open tennis tournament.

The No. 5 seed will meet top-seeded Ivan Lendl, the defending champion, in the next round. Lendl advanced Tuesday with a 5-7, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1 victory over Andres Gomez of Ecuador.

The other men's semifinal was being filled later in the day. Second-seeded West German Boris Becker was meeting eighth-seeded American Jimmy Connors, while fourth-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden was going against sixth-seeded Yannick Noah of France.

The women's semifinal field was completed Tuesday with a pair of long-time rivals.

Defending champion Chris Evert defeated Raffaella Reggi, the 14th seed from Italy, 6-2, 6-2, while top-seeded Martina Navratilova downed eighth-seeded Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany 6-1, 6-2.

When they meet on Thursday in the semifinals, it will be the first time the Americans have played each other. Navratilova leads the series 27-24, and this will be the first time since the U.S. Open of 1981 that the meeting takes place before the championship round.

Earlier, Lendl and Novacek played the first set when Novacek held a 4-2 lead in the first set when rain halted play Tuesday. The rain was cloudy and spinning raindrops this morning when play resumed, and Lendl looked ready for a while.

His advantage at the start, however, faded as Lendl's forehand, which he won 7-4. But in the second set he took charge, pinning Novacek to the baseline and running him back and forth with an assortment of sharply angled groundstrokes and volleys.

Novacek came to the net often enough to make the kill quick on the slow clay of Centre Court.

Novacek, who hadn't dropped a set through the first three rounds nor gone longer than four sets in his two other victories, was finished in less than two hours. Mecir broke serve for 3 in the final set on a backhand crosscourt winner, held for 4-2 on a backhand volley winner.

Mecir broke serve for 3 in the final set on a backhand volley winner, held for 4-2 on a backhand volley winner. He can be like a madman at the start, but the chances are he's the one who'll tire out," Lendl said.

Lendl broke for a 4-3 lead in the second set on an overhead backhand volley. He held for 5-3 in a game that went to seven sets in a game that went to seven sets in a game that went to seven sets.

Gomez held just once in the third set and made more and more errors, especially on groundstrokes.

In the fourth set, Lendl broke in the fourth game and held for 4-1.

Top-seeded Ivan Lendl keeps his eyes on the ball as he makes a return in his match with Ecuadorian Andres Gomez Tuesday at the French Open in Paris. Lendl won in four sets, 5-7, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1, to advance to the semifinals.

Manchester bakers sweeten the GHO

When Carol Murdock and Nina Balkum were trying to get financial backing for Classic Cakes & Pastries, they found that lenders were less than enthusiastic about putting up money for such an enterprise. They were told to come back when they had established a track record.

Five months after opening their wholesale bakery at 88 Woodland St., business is far better than they had projected. They hope to have sales of about $100,000 by the end of the year.

Here's a closeup of the Australia icing style.

Your Neighbor's Kitchen

Travel influences Migliore's menus

By Anita M. Caldwell
Herold Reporter

When she traveled to other countries, Yvonne Migliore never looks for a hamburger and Coke. Whether it's Italy, France or Switzerland, "I look for the best in any ethnic cooking, and you get some good ideas," she says.

The delicately spiced dishes she makes at home in Manchester are influenced by her visits to foreign countries.

From her kitchen at 123 West St., Migliore creates exotic menus that make you feel like you're anywhere but in America. Her colorful and lively personality is reflected in the decor of her home, which focuses on ocean memorabilia and scenic photographs.

As a young girl, originally from Hartford, Migliore never cooked. But, 28 years ago, raising two teenage boys changed all that. Part of a big family herself, holidays were an event. "Entertainment for the holidays would mean cooking for weeks in preparation. Somehow it always worked, and it was fun."

Her ventures in travel began when her husband and boys would plan ski weekends. When working Mom came home, they'd go right up north. "You learn to cook quickly and prepare exciting food so as not to rely on eating out all the time."

For 17 years, Migliore was in the personal department at Society for Living in Hartford. Now, she's thinking of doing other things, like owning a three-story home on the ocean and offering a bed & breakfast with a fixed-price menu. Until then, she'll continue to travel and enjoy cooking.

"You can't produce a good meal without good food," warns Migliore, "and the simplest things are the best things." She shops in local supermarkets, but has a special fondness for Franklin Avenue in Hartford, noted for its diverse and authentic Italian foods. She has fun cooking and reading up on new recipes.

"You can't be afraid it might not work," Migliore said of a first-try effort. "But never try a new recipe on someone you're trying to impress."

She suggests using friends first; they're usually more patient. She also suggests reading cookbooks and magazines on food, and taking bits and pieces from each to create a unique dish.

Food should look good, she insists, as preparing a dish is an art. "Artichokes aren't beautiful," she said, pointing to one sitting on a plate dressed in bread crumbs as if it were a fortress laying an attack of a killer fork. "But it's the challenge of trying something new."

Sharing the spotlight in this lunch was a Greek-style shrimp dish buried in tomato sauce and a grand finale of Zabaglione with strawberries: a true testament to Migliore's philosophy. "Dining wasn't meant to be re-fueling, and I don't like self-service gas stations."

Moist, fudgy brownies ready in a few minutes

One of America's all-time favorite treats is the moist, fudgy brownie. They are easy to pack for lunches or in picnic coolers. Brownies are simple to make, and if you're pressed up for time, you can make a batch of brownies from a recipe or mix. The microwave cuts down the baking time, so hot brownies can be ready in just minutes.

Oh, there are so many variations of basic brownies, that lots of choices are available from blonde to rich and chewy chocolate. Eaten alone, frosted, or as the base for a Sundae or pie, brownies are a favorite of anyone who loves chocolate.

Today's column not only includes a variety of brownie recipes, but a hot fudgy brownie pudding and a rich chocolate brownie fudge sauce that can be poured over a scoop of your favorite ice cream which is melting on a generously proportioned square of brownie.

Suppermarket Shopper

Some supermarket coupons save a lot more than others

By Martin Stone
United Feature Syndicate

DEAR MARTIN: On CBS some months ago, "60 Minutes" did a story on coupons. At one point, the show followed a dedicated coupon clipper through a supermarket where she used coupons to purchase several hundred dollars worth of groceries for a ridiculously small sum - less than $10.

Like most men, I like to get in and out of the supermarket quickly, but I also give a high priority to saving money, so I decided to follow the example of the couponer on television.

I have had little success. Even if I shop where coupons are doubled, most of the items end up costing me a dollar. The best I have done so far is to go to the bank and before coupons in a total of $8.76 after they were doubled and deducted. On that shopping trip, I had a coupon for almost every item - a total of 76 of them. Most of the items were also on sale. Based on my experience, I estimated that to reach savings of 50 percent, I would have to make couponing a full-time job. So how do these avid coupon clippers we see on television get their groceries almost for free?

Stuffed artichokes

8 medium or 4 large artichokes
2 tablespoons butter
1 clove garlic, crushed
3 links Italian sausage, casing removed

Heat butter in skillet and saute shrimp until they turn pink. Add Pernod and flambé. Spoon half of sauce equally into four individual baking dishes. Place 4 shrimp in each dish. Add 1/4 of shrimp mixture to each dish. Spoon remaining sauce over the shrimp. Crumble the Peta cheese and scatter it over all. Place in oven and bake 10 to 15 minutes until bubbling hot.

Computers compromise sensitive, strategic information

Sylvia Porter

You wouldn't leave your money in a bank that left its checks complete freedom to alter your account. As a jobholder, you may be equally picky about who goes through your files in the office.

Yet sensitive, strategic information — billions of dollars and many of your personal records — is easily accessed and compromised in electronic vaults. In computers, valuable information remains vulnerable to theft, vandalism and unauthorized use.

Congress and state legislatures have begun passing laws prohibiting the criminal activity of this information age. But a wiser precaution: The information should be better protected in the first place.

According to J.J. Buck Bloom-

Becker, director of the National Center for Computer Crime Data, this kind of crime can affect virtually all of us — as employees, managers or consumers.

WE HAVE MOST of the technology available to stop such crime, but the issue is political and social. For this reason, it is difficult to get management to believe it is necessary to prepare.

"It's like driving in twilight: How dark does it get before you put the car lights on? Many information managers wait to get hit before they put in a protective system."

Becker, director of the National Center for Computer Crime Data, this kind of crime can affect virtually all of us — as employees, managers or consumers.

Actualy, billions of dollars are stolen yearly through manipulation of electronically transferred dollars. The FBI estimates the average take for today's computer bandit at $450,000, with the "personal computer-wielding Billy the Kid" more often a disgruntled employee than the high school hacker.

IN OCTOBER 1986, Congress passed two bills that even a dimwit could understand: more valuable "in establishing computer crime as a serious offense" than in prosecuting criminals.

"It will deter amateur white-collar criminals and encourage business to establish codes of conduct for employees," according to testimony by Don B. Parker, a senior management consultant and advisor to the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Crime.

The Computer Fraud and Abuse Act extends the 1984 federal computer crime law. It makes it a federal felony to break electronically into an information storage system to steal, alter or maliciously damage computer data, when the data affect interstate or foreign commerce. This would cover such items as credit and banking information.

The other bill, the Electronic Communications Privacy Act, essentially updates the 1968 wiretap bill, extending "datatapping" coverage to such technologies as electronic mail, cellular phones and computerized paging devices — technologies already used by more than 10 million Americans.

"Laws exist to protect homeowners and banks against robbers and thieves, but a strong lock also helps," warns Matthew K. Kenny, chief operating officer of Reach-It, a data communications company that produces data encryptions, which prevent unauthorized viewers from gaining access to information.

OTHER PROTECTIVE solutions include: scrambling devices; electronic fingerprint and signature verification.

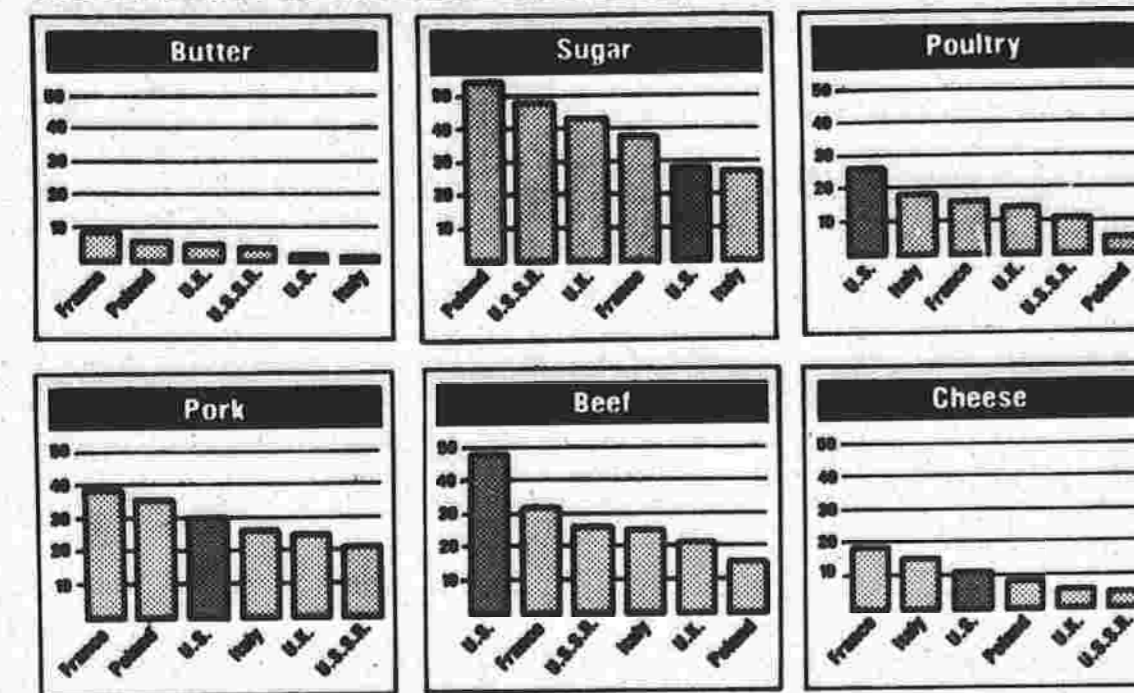

Question: But can the true hacker or desperate data-tapper break the codes?

Answer: There always will be smarter rats and the need for better traps.

Advice

Neighborhood is not in tune with untimely church chimes

DEAR ABBY: In reference to "Hates Ding-a-Lings" — the lady who hates wind chimes — would you like to swap places with her?

I live within 150 feet of a church with a P.A. system that broadcasts hymns twice a day — at noon and again at 6 p.m. These are lovely and enjoyable. However, once in a while something goes wrong with the "timer," and the machine throws the program off schedule. Like last night, chimes were released at 2 a.m. This is not unusual.

Once I asked a neighbor if she had had the chimes in the middle of the night and she said yes, but she was afraid to mention it for fear people would think she was "heeb" in the head if she said she had heard hymns playing at 2 a.m. JOE H. CROOKS, RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR JOE: The wind chimes letter rang a bell for me, as I am both pro and con — mostly con. Read on for a letter from a reader who researched the subject:

DEAR ABBY: After losing too many hours of sleep because of a neighbor's wind chimes, I did some research in the subject of sound. The results of several studies indicate two points that pertain to wind chime problems:

1. If a person knows that he/she can control the sound, that sound is less likely to cause irritation, frustration and the loss of sleep.
2. Annoyance from sounds increase if those sounds are unpredictable and uncontrollable — especially those of high frequency and pitch.

I feel that no one should hang wind chimes outside without first obtaining the approval of all neighbors within hearing distance. ALSO HATES DING-A-LINGS, DES MOINES, WASH.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have an aunt, 77 years old, who "lost" an heirloom quilt her mother made for her. Her mother made one for each of her five daughters. I inherited my mother's. I live next door to this aunt. I've never had a key to her house, yet she has told everyone who will listen to her that I stole her quilt! I thought she would stop her lying once she realized how ridiculous it would be for me to steal her quilt.

In the first place, I'm 67 years old with no children to leave the quilt to. Second, I have plenty of money and if I wanted a quilt, I would buy a new one — I wouldn't steal a 50-year-old quilt that might disappoint any minute.

Shall I see my attorney about suing her for slander and defamation of character? Or should I see her minister and ask him to tell her that a person can go to hell for lying, same as stealing?

Have you any suggestions as to how to stop a liar, short of punching her out?

Joke bars scholar from graduation
HOUSTON (AP) — A high school valedictorian had to sit out Tuesday's graduation, barred from participating or delivering his speech because of what he insults was just a joke — paying a stripper to visit his physics class.

Banners supporting the teen-ager appeared outside his home, and there were rumors of a commencement boycott. But the ceremonies proceeded as scheduled with no distractions.

Mike Woosley, 18, was suspended for six days last week after a stripper posing as a police officer visited his Kingswood High School class, questioned the teacher, and began removing her clothes, school officials said.

3 tablespoons currant or apricot jelly.

Thaw the box of phyllo leaves overnight in the refrigerator, without opening the box.

Peel and slice the apples. Fill a saucepan with water and squeeze in some of the lemon juice. Bring water to the boil, lower to a gentle simmer and add fruit. Poach just until the fruit is a little pliable. Remove from liquid, drain and cool.

Peel and slice pears. Add a little more lemon juice and poach the fruit in the simmering water, just until slices are fork-tender. Remove from liquid, drain and cool. (The pears and apples are done separately because they cook at different rates.)

When you're ready to use the dough, open the box and cut open the clear plastic packet you'll find inside. Gently unfold the dough and remove five of the pieces, without tearing them. Fold the remaining dough, wrap snugly in plastic wrap and return to the refrigerator. Cover the five pieces of dough with plastic wrap and then a slightly damp towel. This will keep it from drying out while you prepare to use it.

Combine the sugar, cinnamon and toasted cake crumbs, and toss thoroughly. Lay out one of the sheets of dough on a piece of dry waxed paper. Brush all four edges generously with melted butter, then brush middle of sheet of dough lightly with butter. Sprinkle with sugar, cinnamon and crumbs.

Lay another piece of dough on the first one. Repeat this process, buttering and sprinkling, until all five pieces of dough have been stacked together.

Toss pears with more cinnamon, sugar and cake crumbs. Place a row of pear pieces about 2 inches from one of the long edges of the phyllo dough. Pile until all pieces are used.

Toss apple pieces with the cinnamon-sugar-cake crumbs mixture and place on top of pears. You will have a "top" of fruit.

Drain raisins and put them dry on paper towels. Put them on top of the apples. Sprinkle on 4 tablespoons of the chopped nuts, then top with more cinnamon-sugar-cake crumbs.

Lifting first with the wax paper, begin rolling the fruit end of the dough, jelly-roll style. After the first turn, be sure to tuck in the edges of dough, and seal with more melted butter. However, do not try to tuck the dough too tightly against the fruit, or the strudel may burst as it is baking.

Continue rolling, then place strudel, seam side down, on a baking sheet lined with parchment or wax paper. Brush entire strudel generously with additional melted butter, but use your brush gently. The moist phyllo dough tears easily.

Place in a preheated 425-degree oven for 10 minutes. Check to be sure that it is browning easily; if not, rotate your baking sheet a half turn in the oven. Continue baking for five minutes more.

Cool 10 minutes in the pan, then transfer to a platter. Heat jelly in a small saucepan, just until it is melted to a liquid. Brush it on the top of the strudel and use the remaining 2 tablespoons chopped nuts to the top.

Cut into six or eight pieces before they are completely cool, even if you're going to leave them on the platter. Serve six to eight. Murdoch says that it's best when served a little warm, with a scoop of vanilla ice cream.

Note: Phyllo leaves are available in 12-inch and 18-inch long boxes, in the freezer case of many grocery stores. For this recipe, buy an 18-inch long box.

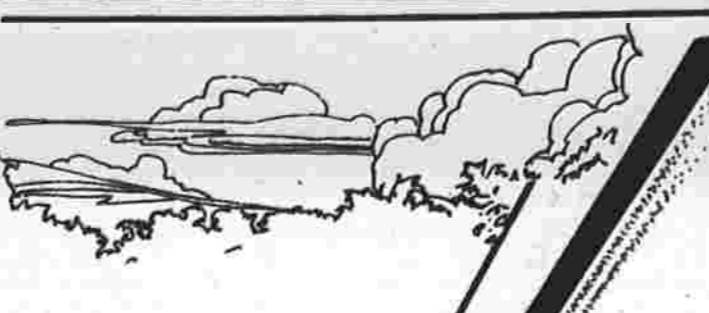

Variations: Use strawberries and bananas with pears. In place of the apples. Do not poach the strawberries or bananas, simply toss with lemon juice.

Vitamins don't provide energy

NEW YORK (AP) — Vitamin supplements won't give you more energy, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

Energy (calories) is produced by proteins, carbohydrates and fats. Vitamins are needed in the energy producing process, but a balanced diet of 15 to 20 percent protein, 20 to 30 percent unsaturated fats, 50 to 65 percent complex carbohydrates, will give you all the vitamins you need, it says.

The complex carbohydrates produce glycogen, a natural energy sugar that is stored in the muscles and liver and supplies the fuel needed for work and exercise.

Rolling over to a retirement plan means money

QUESTION: When I retire this year, I will have savings in three plans through my company's retirement program. These include a fixed-income "cash" plan, a stock purchase plan and a 401(k) plan.

When I leave the retirement program, I plan to roll over the money from the cash plan into an individual retirement account to defer taxes until I make withdrawals from the IRA. Can I do the same with the 401(k) money? And how do I roll over shares of stock into an IRA?

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

ANSWER: You can put lump-sum distributions from any and all tax-qualified retirement plans into rollover IRAs. Keep in mind that only the portions of the lump-sum payments that represent your employer's contributions and the earnings on your voluntary contributions are eligible for this rollover treatment. Also, the payments must amount to at least half of the balance in the retirement accounts and cannot be taken in a series of periodic payments.

The 401(k) is a qualified retirement plan, so you can rollover the money your employer contributed to that plan, plus all the earnings that have accrued, into an IRA.

Assuming the stock purchase arrangement also is a qualified retirement plan, you can do the same thing there. In order to put shares of stock into an IRA, you'll have to find a brokerage firm that operates "self-directed" IRAs and which is willing to accept stock.

A self-directed IRA is one in which you can have virtually any type of investments. Most brokerage firms run self-directed IRAs, but many of those brokerages do not permit clients to put already owned stocks into IRAs. Instead, those brokerages insist that IRA participants put up cash and buy the stocks through their brokers.

More commissions that way? You could check with many brokers until you find one willing to accommodate you. You can narrow your search by concentrating on discount brokerage affiliates of no-load mutual fund organizations. A fair number of them accept shares of stock in rollover IRAs.

QUESTION: My employer and I are both 62. He has a Keogh self-employed retirement plan, in which I am included. The Keogh plan is invested in an insurance company annuity. Can this be rolled over into an IRA without penalty?

ANSWER: The Keogh plan can be terminated and the money can then be rolled over into an IRA. As long as the money is put into the rollover IRA within 60 days after being received from the Keogh plan trustee, there will be no federal tax penalty.

But be cautious about the annuity redemption. Many annuities have penalty clauses for early withdrawal. Check that out with the insurance company.

QUESTION: I have a self-directed IRA at a brokerage. I would like to sell certain stocks I hold in that IRA and transfer the proceeds to another IRA I have with a no-load mutual fund. I have received conflicting opinions on whether or not I can do this. Can I?

ANSWER: Yes. You can move money from one mutual fund to another through a trustee-to-trustee transfer. The shift can involve part or all the money from the first mutual fund to the second.

Contact the mutual fund organization and explain what you want to do. That outfit will set up the paperwork for the transfer. Then call the broker and order him to sell the stocks you want to unload. When the brokerage gets the proper papers from the mutual fund, the money will be moved.

Lighter restraints wanted by banks

Bill Menezes
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Many U.S. bankers praise Paul Volcker's performance as Fed chairman, but they also hope his successor will do more to loosen regulatory restraints that many banks regard as outdated and anti-competitive.

Bankers and industry observers say Tuesday that Alan Greenspan's reputation as a free-market advocate — as opposed to Volcker's relatively conservative stance on deregulation — made him more likely to favor the sweeping changes proposed by the nation's biggest banks.

"I think there you're replacing a person whose primary concern was the safety and soundness of the financial system — with someone who is very much a free-market academic," said Ken Guenther, executive vice president of the Independent Bankers Association of America, whose members are primarily small banks.

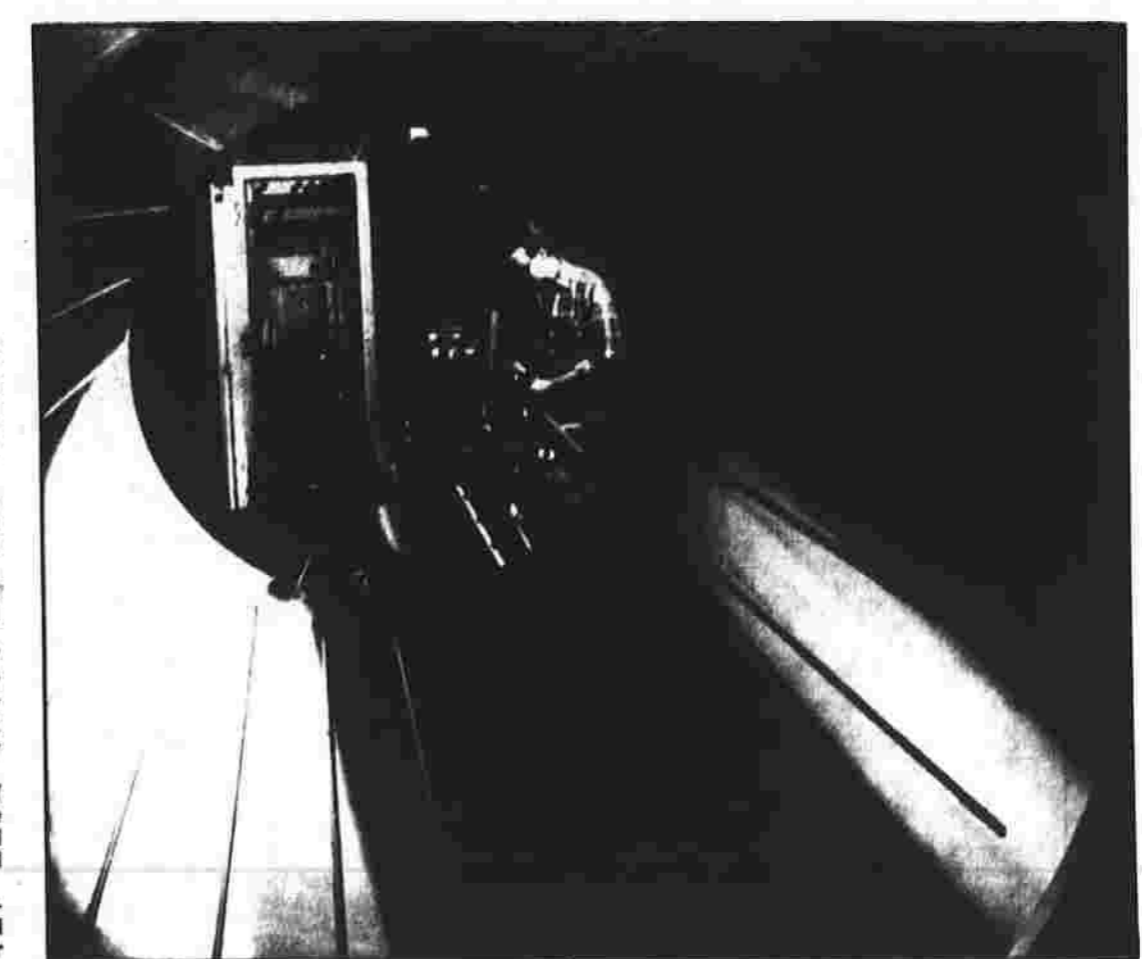

In addition, Mexico nearly defaulted on its foreign debts in 1982, sparking a crisis among banks holding billions of dollars in loans to developing nations.

The Federal Reserve when his term expires Aug. 4.

Volcker's tenure as chairman of the Fed, which regulates bank holding companies and some state-chartered banks, covered one of the most tumultuous eras in U.S. banking history.

The Fed's tight monetary policy of the early 1980s, aimed at halting inflation, pushed interest rates to record heights, battering many thrift institutions that were holding big portfolios of long-term, low-interest home mortgages.

Volcker's term also included the near-collapse of Continental Illinois National Bank in 1984, the continued dismantling by states of barriers to interstate banking, a sharp rise in bank failures due to the depressions in the nation's farm and energy belts, and increased pressure from major banks for removal of Depression-era prohibitions on securities underwriting and other powers.

Husky corn sales last month could signal increased exports

Mike Robinson
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Brisk corn sales to overseas customers are prompting a 5 percent rise in USDA's export forecast for this year to 26.8 million tons.

Purchases of 1.6 million tons by Japan and 1.1 million tons by the Soviet Union were the major factors in the corn export market over the last month, the Agriculture Department reported Tuesday.

Because the increased sales also reflect lower prices resulting from a cut in the price-support loan rate under the 1985 farm law, sales in dollars have not kept pace with the volume of exports.

The report said, however, that the volume outlook for the year starting Oct. 1 is bright, with 40.6 million tons in exports giving the United States a 67 percent share of the 60.9-million-ton world corn market.

The report said that the volume outlook for the year starting Oct. 1 is bright, with 40.6 million tons in exports giving the United States a 67 percent share of the 60.9-million-ton world corn market.

The report said world demand for corn most likely would exceed 5 percent next year largely fueled by Mexico, Japan and other East Asian countries.

In contrast to the last three years, demand is expected to outstrip production and surpluses are expected to drop 5 percent to 146.5 million tons next year, the report from the Foreign Agricultural Service said.

There was no change in USDA's forecast of 27.9 million tons of wheat exports in the year just ended. But the department said an initial projection for the new year envisions a 20 percent increase to 33.3 million tons.

World trade is expected to pick up because of increased Soviet and Chinese wheat demand, the forecast said. It also pinpointed the Export Enhancement Program as the key to holding and regaining the Soviet, Chinese and North African markets.

Dollar low in trading; gold is slightly down

LONDON (AP) — The dollar

steadied but was mostly lower in Europe today after tumbling on news that Paul Volcker was quitting as chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board. Gold retreated slightly after surging about $1 the day before.

The dollar lost 2.9 yen in Japan after a nine-day climb, then rallied in early European trading, which begins as Tokyo's business day ends.

Dealers attributed the gains to a statement by Bank of Japan governor Sotetsu Sumita that Volcker's replacement by economist Alan Greenspan would not affect the dollar.

Sumita voiced confidence at a news conference that Greenspan would continue with international efforts to stabilize exchange rates, and that Tuesday's dollar fall was temporary.

Paul N. Migliorato, a Tokyo analyst for securities firm Jardine Fleming, said: "The dollar went down because Japanese don't know much about him (Greenspan) and started selling dollars."

As soon as they realize Greenspan will follow policies similar to Volcker's, the dollar likely will regain ground, he said.

The dollar fell to a closing 142.40 yen in Tokyo from Tuesday's 145.20. Later, in London, it was quoted at 142.80 yen.

It made sharp gains in early European trading, but then retreated and steadied at rates mostly lower than Tuesday's closing levels.

Some dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

- 1,800 West German marks, up from 1,796.
- 1,495 Swiss francs, down from 1,490.
- 6,930 French francs, unchanged.
- 2,030 Dutch guilders, down from 2,034.
- 1,350 Italian lire, down from 1,311.75.
- 1,346 Canadian dollars, up from 1,341.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.6410, compared with $1.6407 Tuesday.

Gold surged in New York on fears that Volcker's resignation meant more inflation, but in London the next day, trading was thin.
