Defense challenges tape in sex case

By Brent Loyman
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Prosecutors say it would have been too traumatic for a young girl to testify in open court against the man who was convicted two years ago of sexually assaulting her.
But the defense attorney for Charles A. Jarzbek of Middletown argued before the Supreme Court Wednesday that Jarzbek was denied his constitutional right to confront his accuser when the girl's testimony was videotaped outside Jarzbek's presence.
Jarzbek was convicted of fourth-degree sexual assault and risk of injury to a minor in September 1985. He was the first person in Connecticut convicted in a case that included videotaped testimony.

"The right we are dealing with is a very, very fundamental right," Jarzbek's attorney, M. Hatcher Norris, said in urging the high court to throw out the conviction and order a new trial.
He cited the Sixth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, which guarantees that "in all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right... to be confronted with the witness against him."
Assistant State's Attorney John M. Massameno argued that the state had to allege the defendant's rights with the welfare of the young child.
The girl, who was 4 years old at the time of the crime, might not have been as complete and truthful had she been forced to testify in open court in the presence of the man who sexually abused her.

Massameno said.
"This child probably would never have made it through the courtroom testimony," Massameno said. "And if (she) had, the state of Connecticut would have paid too great a price."
"This child would have been traumatized by having to testify in front of the defendant," he said.
Jarzbek received a five-year suspended sentence and five years' probation.
Videotaped testimony by a child in a sexual-assault case was first allowed in Connecticut in the earlier trial of a Southbury daycare-center owner who was acquitted in July 1985 of fourth-degree sexual assault and risk of injury to a minor.

Republican leaders say time for tax cuts is now

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Republican legislative leaders aren't giving up their efforts to make some serious cuts in state taxes.
Although they failed during the regular 1987 session, which ended last week, they want Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill to convene a special legislative session this summer to enact some tax cuts, rather than waiting until next year, a legislative election year.
"Clearly, with a $336 million surplus that's growing, we have the opportunity to lighten the load of Connecticut taxpayers," Senate Minority Leader Reginald J. Smith, R-New Hartford, said Wednesday.
He noted that the Democrats, who control both houses of the General Assembly, had consistently turned back GOP proposals to cut state taxes. Instead, they went for O'Neill's plan to send more money to cities and towns to help mayors and first selectmen — all of whom face re-election this year — hold the line on local property taxes.
A survey done by Republican legislators this year showed that 60 percent of those responding favored a reduction in the 7 1/2 percent sales tax, the highest in the country. Other tax cuts preferred included reductions in the dividends, interest, capital gains and the tax on utility bills.

O'Neill had said Monday he saw forced to suffer for the sake of election-year potities at the hands of the Democrats.

Smith recalled how O'Neill had readily signed into law millions of dollars in tax cuts in 1985 and 1986 when the General Assembly was controlled by Republicans.
"Unfortunately at this time, Republicans alone are unable to get things done," Smith said. "We need the governor as an ally and a leader."
House Minority Leader Robert G. Justice, R-Storford, said tax cuts could easily be added to the agenda if there's a special session on the business services tax.
"Many of us would not be surprised to see a surplus in the fiscal year," he said. "So we could reduce some taxes. The only way to do it is through a special session this year, because the 1988 session doesn't convene until February."
The British introduced in 1812 the concept of voting by secret ballot.

Earthquake rumbles 16 states

By Pete Brown
The Associated Press

Illinois' strongest earthquake in 19 years shook residents of 16 states from Kansas to South Carolina and parts of Canada, breaking windows, tumbling chimneys and forcing hundreds to flee swaying buildings up to 700 miles away.
Wednesday's tremor, registering 5.5 on the Richter scale, triggered an alarm at a Minnesota nuclear plant and cut telephone service in three Illinois counties, but only minor damage and one minor injury were reported.
"It felt like somebody with big shoes was walking overhead, but nobody lives overhead — we're on the fourth floor," said Richard Horwitz of Chicago. "Our parakeet was chattering away, and it just stopped."
The quake, at 8:49 p.m. CDT, was centered near Lawrenceville, Ill., 55 miles north of Evansville, Ind., the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said. Shaking was felt from 10 seconds to nearly a minute.
Hundreds of students ran screaming from a building at a vocational college in Indianapolis, and about 70 people were evacuated from a swaying, 12-story apartment house in Columbia, S.C., 700 miles from the quake center.
John Larson, a Lawrence County, Ill., sheriff's dispatcher, said there were several reports of broken windows and other minor damage. An 18-month-old girl received a bump on the head after the quake forced a bunk bed to fall on her head.
Police dispatcher David Hoffee in Olney, Ill., said there were reports of broken windows, fallen chimneys and a roof collapse at a funeral home.

Republicans bitter over billion-dollar welfare bill

By Jill Lawrence
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A $5.5 billion welfare overhaul requiring many more hours of public assistance to work cleared its first major legislative hurdle without any GOP support.
The Family Welfare Reform Act, drafted earlier this year amid bipartisan denunciations of the current system, was approved 23-13 Wednesday on a party-line vote in the House Ways and Means Committee.
"We started off believing we could do a bipartisan bill," said Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., acting chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. "But there are fundamental differences between our view of solving the problems of the working poor and their view. We're not going to begin the process of compromising before we have to. We think we have done a good solid job."
Republicans bitterly object to segments of the bill they contend would keep welfare recipients from working.
"The bill inspires people on welfare, and it is a disgrace to this Congress," said Rep. Hank Brown of Colorado, ranking Republican on the House subcommittee.
The Reagan administration has proposed a modest work program and an extensive demonstration program that would allow states to "cash in" on a wide range of assistance programs to finance local welfare experiments. According to Downey, the administration has a long list of objections to the House bill.
Republicans on the committee offered several unsuccessful amendments to remove what they saw as barriers to work. The provisions they failed to remove include a six-month limit on assignments to public jobs, a requirement that welfare clients receive the current wage for a particular job and a section saying people cannot be required to accept jobs that pay less than their welfare benefits.

Government suspends rights as demonstrations continue

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The government proclaimed a national state of emergency today after protesters clashed with police in a second day of demonstrations against the country's military leadership.

Presidental Press Secretary Jose Hernandez read the decree on national radio and television. It suspended eight articles of the constitution, among them the articles guaranteeing freedom of expression and assembly and freedom from undue search and seizure.
It said the Cabinet took the action because of demonstrations by "persons and political groups interested in taking power."
On Wednesday, thousands of demonstrators in Panama City beat pots and pans, honked automobile horns and yelled "get them out." Police fired tear gas, tore down barricades and beat protesters with rubber truncheons.
There were no official reports of arrests or injuries, but an Associated Press reporter saw dozens of people injured and detained. Officials at the Santo Tomas Hospital said they had treated wounded.
Witnesses said about 70 people were injured near the University of Panama.
Five opposition political parties and an association of the nation's largest industries late Wednesday issued communique calling for continued civil disobedience.
Today's decree also suspended freedom of movement and the inviolability of correspondence and telephone calls, the right of habeas corpus and the right to be informed of the reason for arrest and to consult a lawyer.
The protests began Tuesday in response to allegations that the armed forces commander, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, was involved in the death of former Panamanian leader Gen. Omar Torrijos, helped rig the 1984 presidential elections, and ordered the 1985 killing of opposition leader Hugo Spadafora.
Retired military chief of staff Col. Robert Diaz Herrera, 49, who made the allegations, claimed that Noriega conspired with Gen. Walace Natting, then head of the U.S. Southern Command in Panama, the CIA and others to plant a bomb on the aircraft used by Torrijos.

Connecticut In Brief

O'Neill signs bigotry bill into law

HARTFORD — A bill requiring the state police to monitor all crimes motivated by race and bias has been signed into law by Gov. William A. O'Neill.
The state police must also develop a plan for using and releasing data on such crimes under the law, which takes effect July 1.
O'Neill also signed into law a bill requiring those responsible for polling places to designate at least two parking spaces outside the polls for the handicapped, elderly or infirm.
The governor has signed 23 bills from the 1987 legislative session and vetoed none. The session adjourned last Wednesday.
Two agencies hit with hiring freezes
HARTFORD — Citing deficiencies in affirmative action plans, the state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities has barred the state police and the state Veterans Home and Hospital from hiring new employees.
The hiring freeze, imposed Wednesday, was directed against the Department of Public Safety which encompasses the state police which is in the process of filling about 50 vacancies for cutback support staff, according to Samuel B. Granes III, the department's personnel administrator.
"I'm definitely surprised. I'm definitely distressed," said Robert G. Kosaczka, executive assistant to Col. Lester J. Forst, the state police commander.
"We feel we have been making a good-faith effort," Kosaczka added.

Hartford man faces drug charges

HARTFORD — A Hartford resident was arrested on suspicion of selling five pounds of cocaine and an estimated street value of $700,000 at Bradley International Airport, state police said.
Police and federal agents involved in a month-long investigation received information that the persons arrested would arrive Wednesday from Miami, Fla., with a large shipment of cocaine, State Police Sgt. Daniel Lewis said.
The four arrested Wednesday, all residents of Miami, Fla., were each charged with possession of cocaine, possession of cocaine with intent to sell, and possession of cocaine over one ounce, Lewis said.
They were identified as Carlos J. Ortiz, 30, Silvio Manerero, 22, Rafael Garofalo, 16, and Kimberly P. Barrios, 20.
Each was being held on a $1 million cash bond pending arraignment Thursday in Enfield Superior Court, Lewis said.

Bus driver will be charged in crash

HARTFORD — The driver of a school bus that overturned on Route 11 in Salem, injuring dozens, was driving too fast and will be charged today, police said.
Two children injured Tuesday in an accident were released from the hospital on Wednesday and a third was likely to be discharged today, officials said.
The driver of the bus, Vivia E. Moffat, 44, of Hartford, could be cited for driving above the speed limit or for being in violation of a statute requiring school bus drivers to maintain safe speed.
Neither violation would result in suspension of Moffat's driver's license because she has a clean driving record, State Trooper Glenn Pizuka said.
The bus, holding children and adult chaperones from the Kennedy School in Hartford, overturned as Moffat turned onto Route 11 north from westbound Route 82.

Businessman enters race in 4th

GREENWICH — John T. Becker, a businessman who ran for state treasurer in 1982, has announced he will seek the Republican nomination for the state's 4th District congressional seat.
Becker is the seventh contestant for the GOP nomination. There are four Democrats vying for their party's nomination. The seat is vacant as the result of the death of Republican Stewart B. McKinney, who represented the district for more than 16 years.
Becker is 51 years old and lives in Greenwich. He is a graduate of the University of Connecticut and has worked for various companies, including the insurance industry.
He is currently a partner in a business development firm. Becker has been active in community service and has served on several boards and committees.
He has a wife and three children. He has been married for 18 years and they live in Greenwich.

Rape expert testifies in murder case

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Prosecutors, attempting to show that Michael Ross' crimes were especially cruel, had a rape crisis expert testify about what Ross' victims likely suffered.

Last week Ross was convicted on six counts of capital felony charges in the slayings of four young Eastern Connecticut women. The trial is now in the penalty phase in which the jury must decide whether to impose the death penalty.
In order to impose the death penalty, the jury would have to decide that there was an "aggravating" factor such as the crime being committed in an especially heinous way. If there is an "aggravating" factor such as mental condition or emotional state, the death penalty cannot be imposed.

Barbara Moynihan, director of the New Haven Rape Crisis Service Center, testified Wednesday that rape victims generally experience rape trauma syndrome.
"The characteristics of rape trauma syndrome include feelings of helplessness, powerlessness, fear, panic, horror," Moynihan said.
Public Defender M. Fred DeCaprio tried to block Moynihan's testimony, saying there is nothing in her testimony "that would set these crimes apart from the norm of murders committed during a sexual assault."
DeCaprio argued the prosecution can't just show that the murders were cruel, heinous or depraved, but that prosecutors must show the crimes were "especially" cruel, heinous or depraved.

Transsexual legionnaire convinces foe

NEW LONDON (AP) — Bridgette Poi Brusseau, who lost two bids for American Legion post commander after disclosing her sex-change operation, has been re-elected senior vice commander — this time with the blessing of her former nemesis.

Joseph Otaviano Jr., who defeated Brusseau in her first attempt to become commander of the John Coleman Post 2147, cited a change of heart in nominating his transsexual rival for the office Monday night.
"I've used to think of her as just a transsexual," Otaviano said. "Now I think of Bridgette only as a legionnaire, one who has suffered the stones and arrows of persecution."
"She's crossed a bridge of fire. Yet she's persevered, and really, I've become a believer in her," he said. "I truly believe Bridgette Brusseau will become a valuable asset to the post."
Having served for eight years in the Air Force as a man, Brusseau later underwent a sex-change operation, changing her name from Bobbi to Bridgette. She had previously served as vice commander of the American Legion post before running for commander for the first time in 1985.
"I'm as shocked as anybody," Brusseau said of getting nominated.

By her former adversary. "Otto got up there and started saying, 'I want to nominate a fine woman who's put a lot into this post, and on and on, and I said, 'Who's he talking about?' I couldn't believe it."
Her candidacy in 1985 caused a furor and brought national media attention to the American Legion post election.
Otaviano, declaring the post was "just not ready for a transsexual commander," ran against her and won. The two of them were interviewed by television talk show host Phil Donahue and others from the national media.
But Otaviano acknowledged that last year's commander, whom he supported over Brusseau, was not successful at running the post. After that, he said, he began to think he'd treated Brusseau unfairly.
"I never knew she was a transsexual until I read it in the paper. I thought she was just this buxom blonde," Otaviano said. "She used to help me in the kitchen and I'd lean over and give her a kiss on the cheek and say, 'Thanks, honey.'"
"Then when I read it, I thought, 'Oh, my God, I kissed an Air Force sergeant.' I think maybe that had something to do with why I opposed her."

Meriden, state welcome new OTB parlor

MERIDEN (AP) — Connecticut got a new dimension in off-track betting with the opening of the state's 11th wagering parlor featuring benches, non-smoking areas, and bedrooms.

The betting facility, which opened Wednesday on the Berlin Turnpike in Meriden, "will improve the image of OTB parlors," said Orlando Ragazzo, executive director of the state Division of Special Revenue.
The parlor is located next door to a restaurant and has equipment to broadcast races on which bets were taken, state officials said. Most of the other facilities don't have as many amenities.
The opening marked a return of OTB to Meriden after a nearly three-year absence.
OTB was kicked out of its former home in a downtown Meriden shopping mall in November 1984 when its lease ran out. The landlords would not renew the parlor's lease because of problems with security, littering and loitering.
The city council voted in 1986 to prohibit OTB, but the ban was lifted the following year.
Meriden, like other municipalities, is a major source of revenue from its facilities.
"We expect that OTB in Meriden will bring the city about $25,000 to $30,000 a year in revenue," said William Seymour, a spokesman for the special revenue division.

Officials estimate the parlor will bring about 25 new jobs to Meriden.
Off-track betting started in Connecticut in April 1977. In addition to the 11 OTB parlors, there is a tele-track in New Haven where patrons can bet and watch races on television screens. Another tele-track is planned for Windsor Locks.
State law will permit up to two more off-track betting facilities to be opened within the next two years, Seymour said.
Connecticut has a contract with the New York Racing Association to conduct wagering on races at tracks in that state, and has arrangements with tracks in other states to accept bets on special races such as the Kentucky Derby.
As of April 30, 1987, OTB had generated about $100 million in revenue in its 10-year history. The amount turned over to the state's General Fund from July 1, 1985 to April 30 this year was $18.6 million, Seymour said. The current fiscal year ends on June 30.
A total of $18.8 million was wagered by bettors at OTB in the 1986-87 fiscal year, Seymour said. He said that for every dollar that was bet at OTB in the 1986-87 fiscal year, 30 cents went to the state, 3.4 cents were paid to the racetrack association, 4.1 cents went to OTB parlor owners and 1.4 cents went to towns where the facilities are located.

Little link between rent panels, units

Study committee still gathering information about commission

By George Lavoy
Herald Reporter

More than half of the towns in Connecticut that have fair-rent commissions have fewer apartments than Manchester. A study committee learned Wednesday.

That information could indicate that the need for a fair-rent commission may not be dependent upon a large number of apartment units.

However, committee member John Howroyd, who presented the information, noted that in some of those communities, rental units make up a large portion of all available housing units. In Rocky Hill, rental units make up about half of the housing stock. Howroyd said.

In Manchester, rental apartments account for 40 percent of the housing stock, Howroyd said. But that data, and the statistics from other towns, is based on the 1980 census and could be outdated. Committee member Thomas S. Fiorentino said he discovered that there is little link between the study committee and the availability of rental units, and their availability are key questions that must be answered before the panel decides if a fair-rent commission is needed.

Wednesday's meeting, held in Lincoln Center, was the second session of the special panel appointed by the town Board of Directors to examine the need for a fair-rent commission. The study committee was created after some tenants complained that they had little protection against landlords imposing unreasonable rent increases.

The committee members are still gathering information, but on Wednesday they decided to hold a public hearing Aug. 3 to hear testimony from landlords and tenants. The committee members have said their recommendation probably will not come until the fall at the earliest.

Committee Chairman Richard S. Conti said that because there is not a fair-rent commission in Manchester, there is little tenants can do to challenge a rent increase.

Florentino said he discovered that the state Housing Court does not deal directly with rent issues. However, he said the matter could be addressed through the "back door" if a tenant refuses to pay his rent to protest another problem, and the landlord takes the matter to court.

Conti said that committee member Thomas Marvin, who was absent from Wednesday's meeting, discovered that the Legal Aid Society provides no direct help for renters with rent problems. When Marvin told the Hartford office of the Legal Aid office he needed assistance, he was referred to the Manchester fair-rent commission.

"Which there is none," Conti said.

Committee member Betty Kramer also learned that the Rocky Hill fair-rent panel has handled 25 complaints so far this year, which is more than usual. In order to file a complaint, Kramer said a person must also pay $25.

The fee is required to discourage frivolous complaints, she said. One of the chief benefits of the panel's existence, she said, is that it encourages tenants and landlords to resolve their disputes in a more diplomatic fashion than if legal means were used.

Many of the complaints are resolved before a hearing is held by the fair-rent commission, Kramer said. If a hearing is held, testimony is taken and landlords and tenants can question each other.

Kramer said before a fair-rent panel can stop a landlord from imposing a higher rent, the proposed increase must be shown to be excessive and unfair. A number of factors are considered, such as the condition of the apartment and a comparison to other rents.

Manchester In Brief

Weight limit upped on bridge

The weight limit on the east lane of the North Main Street bridge over the Hookanum River has been increased from 8 tons to 14 tons on the recommendation of the Connecticut Department of Transportation.

The new limit is 14 tons for single vehicles and 22 tons for tractors with semi-trailers.

There has been no weight limit for the westbound lane. The bridge is scheduled for replacement when North Main Street is rebuilt, but that project is five or six years away, so the town has been ordered by the DOT to hire a structural engineer to make recommendations.

The DOT's most recent recommendation says the southern part of a bridge on Hartford Road over Folly Brook near Bidwell Street should remain closed until repairs are made. Bids for that project will be opened June 23. The contract will call for completion of the work within four weeks of its start. It must be finished, under the contract, by Sept. 15.

Luxury condos being planned

CMC Development Inc. of Wallingford has purchased a 16-acre parcel in Manchester for $2.41 million and plans to build 154 luxury condominiums.

The land, located at 850-866 Parker St. near the industrial park, was formerly owned by Schuyler-Parker Co. The sale was completed in April.

The condos, senior vice president of CMC Development, said Wednesday that the company will begin construction on the housing project this month. The condominiums should be finished by December 1988, he said.

The condominiums will be 13 buildings and will range from 950 to 1,400 square feet. They will cost from $150,000 to $225,000, Thomas said.

CMC is also developing a 96-unit condominium project off Oak Street. The company has 15 housing projects either completed or under way in the state.

I-84 lane shift takes effect today

Beginning today a change will be made in the traffic pattern on Interstate 84 westbound between West Middle Turnpike in Manchester and Forbes Street in East Hartford.

Between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., westbound motorists in the area of the West Middle Turnpike entrance ramp will be shifted to the left, to the newly constructed portion of I-84. These three westbound lanes will continue for approximately three-quarters of a mile to the west side of Sunset Ridge and then cross over to the right onto the existing I-84 roadway.

Overdose killed Cooper Street man

The untimely death of a Cooper Street man in January was caused by a drug overdose, the state medical examiner's office has determined.

The body of Kent Curran, 36, of 115 Cooper St., was found in his apartment the morning of Jan. 16.

Cooper's death was the result of "multiple drug toxicity" caused by cocaine, methadone and oxycodone, a spokesman for the medical examiner's office said. Whether the overdose was intentional was not determined.

Doctor's death is ruled suicide

Lorraine Hahn, the East Hartford psychiatrist found dead in a Manchester parking lot last March, committed suicide, the state medical examiner's office has determined.

The cause of death was "acute imipramine poisoning," a spokeswoman said. Hahn, a psychiatrist at the Institute of Living in Hartford, was reported missing from her car on the afternoon of March 8. Her body was found in the back seat of her car, which was parked in the lot of the Regional Occupational Training Center at Manchester Community College.

Town, 8th negotiators OK outline for accord

The town helped the Eighth District agree to a settlement that would be the best of both worlds, town negotiators said today. The settlement would allow the town to retain jurisdiction in the Bryan Farms subdivision in northeast Manchester. That area is now served from the Buckland firehouse.

The town proposed that if an agreement is reached, it should include a provision that any future border changes require the consent of both governments. Town negotiators said they thought this point had been agreed to months ago, but LaBelle would not commit to it.

"We're not saying yes, we're not saying no," LaBelle said. "You guys give stuff and take it away at the next meeting," he added.

Celtics facing the end

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics must do what's never been done if they are to keep their NBA title. And they must do it against the league's best team.

No club has overcome a 3-1 deficit in the championship series. The Los Angeles Lakers hold that advantage over the Celtics and would claim the crown by winning tonight's fifth game of the best-of-seven series.

"There's no question it's hard as the devil," Boston guard Dennis Johnson said. "Seeing as how we're playing L.A., it's probably three or four times as hard."

The Celtics must beat Los Angeles three straight times, twice on the Lakers' home floor at the Inglewood Forum, to become the first repeat champion since Boston in 1968-69.

The Lakers never lost three straight games in compiling a 65-17 record this season or two in a row at home. They are 48-4 here, including a 9-0 playoff mark, and romped over the Celtics in the first two playoff games at the Forum. Boston is 4-18 in its last 20 road games.

"Sure, it could be done," Los Angeles forward James Worthy said after Boston winning three consecutive games. "But I think we'll have a lot to do with that."

"I think it's possible," Lakers forward Michael Thompson said. "If we get above ourselves and think we're better than we are and think we have it all wrapped up."

"How can they avoid that trap?"

"We just have to think how sweet it's going to be to win their second championship in three years," Thompson said.

Boston knows the feeling, having won a league-high 18 titles. But things turned sour for the Celtics Tuesday night when they blew an eight-point lead in the final 3:30 and lost to Magic Johnson's book about with two seconds left.

"If we could have won Game 4, it would have been very special because the Lakers have been the best team in the league all year and we would have been tied with Game 5 at home," Boston forward Larry Bird said.

"From past experience, when we've been up 3-1, I've always thought we had it won," he added.

The Lakers may not be voicing that opinion, but they are confident, knowing they have three chances to win one game. The Celtics have no room for error.

"It's just a little bit more relaxing," Magic Johnson said. "Worthy said Tuesday night's victory 'was the most emotional game I've played in.'"

"I take a lot out of a losing team and adds adrenaline to the winning team. Last night we were able to rest peacefully and I'm sure it was a tough night for the Celtics," he said. "We still have pressure to win, but the basket's not going to get any lighter for us. We don't have pressure to do anything. We just have to play our game."

The Lakers resumed doing that Tuesday night. They had an effective fast break, outbounded the Celtics for the first time since Game 1 and used an aggressive trapping defense to cut a 16-point Boston lead to seven in the final five minutes of the third quarter.

But Los Angeles did shoot poorly in the first half and trailed for most of the game.

"We can't be pleased with our overall performance," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "We're pleased with the win. But we'll do some fine tuning, make some adjustments."

One thing Boston seems to have on its side tonight is the homecourt advantage. It is 103-61 at Boston Garden since the 1985 playoffs began. But during that span, the Lakers have done better than the Celtics there, winning four of the seven meetings.

"There are other pieces I'd prefer to play, but it happens to be the only game in town," Riley said. "We've just enough in here, but I think after we beat them here in 1983 to win the title, the mystique is out of the window."

In 1981, Boston did come back from a 3-1 deficit to beat Philadelphia in the Eastern Conference finals and go on to the NBA title.

"It hasn't been done very often in history," Celtics guard Danny Ainge said. "It has been done and this team has done it before."

But Bird, forward Kevin McHale and center Robert Parish are the current Celtics who were on that team.

"We're not in 1981 right now," Dennis Johnson said. "We're in 1987."

With a comfortable 3-1 cushion, Riley is hoping complacency doesn't set in, since the Lakers can afford to lose tonight and still be favored heavily to win the championship.

"We have to fight that feeling of security and fight it hard," he said.

Kevin Riggs (partially hidden by the umpire) slides safely into home plate with an inside-the-park home run as his excited East Catholic teammates react during the fourth-inning action Wednesday night at Muzzy Field. Maloney catcher Kurt Niemiec keeps his eyes on the baseball, which was too late to stop Riggs. Riggs was 2-for-3 and scored all three runs as East prevailed in 11 innings, 9-2.

East gains berth in L title game

11th-inning run decides issue in 3-2 win over Maloney

By Jim Tierney
Herald Sports Writer

BRISTOL — It was a masterful pitcher's due to the bitter end of Wednesday night's Class L semifinal between East Catholic and Maloney High at Muzzy Field. Two sophomores, East's Kevin Greene and Maloney's Matt Sosnowski, both displayed unparalleled heart and willed iron fists inside their velvet gloves. Neither Greene nor Sosnowski came out until this one was over, which wasn't until the 11th inning.

Senior Rob Stanford laced a single up the middle in the bottom of the 11th which scored senior Kevin Riggs from third base with the winning run and gave the Eagles a hard-fought 3-2 victory over the Spartans to catapult East into the Class L championship game Saturday at 1 p.m. at Muzzy Field against East Haven High, a 12-8 winner over Bunnell High Wednesday night.

The second-ranked Eagles (19-5), who have won state championships in 1973 (Class M) and 1983 (Class L), would achieve only its second 20-win season in its history with a win Saturday. Meanwhile, 14th-ranked Maloney ends its season at 13-9.

"How to you reap a game like this?" East Coach Jim Penders, in his 19th year at the Eagle helm, said after his 24th career victory. "I can't believe he (Greene) is a sophomore. He's a gutsy kid. He wants the ball."

In his fine 11-inning performance, Greene allowed seven hits, walked four, and struck out 10. Sosnowski and struck out six.

"I was a helluva ballgame. I can't say enough about it," Maloney Coach Ed Zajac said. "For a sophomore he (Sosnowski) hung in there. That pitcher (Greene) did the same."

East had a chance to win in the bottom of the seventh with pinch runner Mike Dellano on second, Marc Mangiafico on first, and two outs. Pinch hitter Mike Begley hit it center field and stole second base. After an out, Stanford bounced a single to left field with Riggs holding at third. After a strikeout by Kris DeRoehn, Doug Bizuto drew a walk to load the bases. Pat Merritt also received a base on balls to force Riggs home for a 1-0 East lead. John Gaglioti popped to Sosnowski to end any further scoring.

The Meriden-based school came right back in the second inning to tie it at 1-1. Bob Avery led off the frame with a 400-foot triple to center. Pat Victor then grounded to Stanford at shortstop to score Avery.

The Eagles, who stranded 13 men on base, left the bases loaded in the first, second, and sixth innings. "What a great pitching performance on both sides," Penders said. "They (Greene and Sosnowski) were like seniors."

Riggs, who had two hits and scored all three Eagle runs, gave East a 2-1 lead in the fourth inning. Riggs slammed a 1-2 offering to left center field, where he collided with the 400-foot mark. Riggs never hesitated and was waved around by Penders and beat the relay throw.

Maloney knotted the contest at 2-1 in the sixth when Luis Diaz led off with a single. Joe Butler grounded into a fielder's choice and moved to second on a passed ball. Cleanup hitter Tony Glacco was intentionally walked, which Penders said was a mistake on his part.

Avery then hit the first pitch down the left field line to score Victor and moved to second on a passed ball. Clean up hitter Tony Glacco was intentionally walked, which Penders said was a mistake on his part.

Victor led off the Maloney 11th with a double down the left field line. Instead of bunting him over, Zajac allowed good to swing away. Good flew to center and Niemiec popped to first. Jake Gallazco grounded to Stanford to end the threat.

East wasn't about to make any mistakes in the bottom of the 11th. Riggs was hit by Sosnowski to lead off. Price, who was gunned down at home by Victor to end the fourth inning, bunted and Niemiec, who collided with Sosnowski, threw off the mark to first allowing Riggs to scamper to first. Stanford then lined a solid single to center and East had it finally won.

Stanford, DeRoehn, and Mangiafico each collected three hits for East. "It's nice to be in the final," Penders said. "I'm proud of the kids."

East's victory was a double celebration. The Eagles, who were eliminated last year, are now back in the playoffs. Penders said he was proud of his team's performance.

Maloney's season ended in disappointment. Coach Zajac said his team played well but couldn't overcome East's pitching. He said he was proud of his team's effort.

The game was a classic, with both teams showing great pitching and hitting. The 11th inning was particularly dramatic, with several key plays that determined the outcome.

The final score was 9-2 in favor of East Catholic. The game was a testament to the skill and determination of both teams.

The championship game will be held on Saturday at Muzzy Field. It is expected to be a highly competitive and exciting event.

East Catholic will be looking to defend their title from last year. Maloney will be looking to make a comeback and win their first championship.

The game is scheduled for 1 p.m. and is expected to draw a large crowd of fans. It will be a memorable event for all who attend.

The game is a chance for both teams to showcase their talent and compete for the state championship. It is a moment that fans will remember for years to come.

Mary Cadorette, a 1975 graduate of East Catholic High School who is now an actress in Los Angeles, considers her parents' home in East Hartford a relaxing refuge. But even there, she is pursued by fans and reporters.

Actress returns to 'refuge'

commercial, because she looks like the sweet, wholesome mother-type. "I'm married, I'm 30, and I don't mind your prying that," she said.

SHE MAY LOOK appropriately motherly on screen. But the slender figure zipping around her parents' home in a bright red T-shirt and loose black slacks looked more like the 18-year-old dancer who was named Miss Manchester and then took the title of Miss Connecticut back in 1975.

Although Cadorette was not crowned Miss America, the contacts she made in Atlantic City landed her a contract with the U.S.O. and she spent the summer after her freshman year of college touring Europe.

Other jobs followed. In summer stock and elsewhere, but Cadorette's sights were fixed on Manhattan. The minute I graduated from UConn in May '81, I think it was — I was in Manhattan."

"Thanks to what Cadorette calls good luck — others call it dancing talent — she landed a movie contract within a month. Then came a part in the original Broadway cast of "42nd Street." She danced in the chorus and understudied the lead character, Peggy Sawyer.

"I got to do that role more than 70 times," she said. She considers it the most exciting part of her show business career, thus far.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCOUTS found her on the Broadway stage and asked her to join the cast of "Three's a Crowd." Although the show was canceled after one season, Cadorette doesn't regret her move to the West Coast.

"It's absolutely beautiful out there. The food is wonderful, and it's really the best place for me to be, in terms of my career," she said. "I just hate that it's so far from my family."

Where is that career headed? Ideally, to "really fine, really funny situation comedy," said Cadorette. "Everyone wants to work on a 'Cheers,' but that's not really."

If the right film offer came along, she would take it, said Cadorette. However, she's not interested in pornography, or scripts with what she calls "a super exploitive, B-movie type plot."

The idea behind opening the restaurant — after operating a successful catering firm for more than a year — was that it would allow her to be more selective about her acting projects. "It's not that I needed the financial independence so much as the emotional support of being involved in something between gigs," said Cadorette. Meanwhile, she and her husband have collaborated on writing a television movie and some pilots for new programs.

She was also invited to Western Carolina University to do student actors' seminars this spring. After completely rejecting the idea of teaching, I guess I've come full circle," she said. "I found that it's rewarding. I was amazed that I actually had something worthwhile to say to students."

That's what the East Catholic High School administration was counting on, when they invited Cadorette to speak at the graduation during the 25th anniversary of the school. "I hope I can share some knowledge and experience with the kids. I guess in a way, in terms of success, I represent a certain role model. It's kind of strange to think about."

Jays complete sweep of the Yankees

AL, NL roundups — see page 11

NEW YORK (AP) — If it ends up being a two-team race in the American League East, the Toronto Blue Jays wanted the memory of this series to linger into mid-September, when they play their closest rivals, the New York Yankees, for the last time. They wanted to be the first to plant the seeds of superiority.

"But we don't want to overemphasize this series," Blue Jays starter Jimmy Key said of the three-game set in New York. "It's only June, and you don't win a pennant in three games. We're just trying win games right now and get into position to take this thing at the end."

Key, 33, held the Yankees to only five hits in 7 2/3 innings Wednesday night and George Bell backed him with a three-run homer in the third as the Blue Jays won their eighth straight with a 4-1 victory to

Driesell 'misunderstood', doesn't regret statement

By Fred Goodell
The Associated Press

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Larry Driesell says he feels misunderstood but he has no regrets about calling cocaine "performance enhancing" during a seminar on drugs in sports.

"Anyone who knows me knows I am not a cocaine addict," Driesell said. "I am not a cocaine addict and I am not a cocaine addict." Driesell said he was surprised by the reaction of coaches and others who felt his comment was an endorsement of cocaine.

Driesell, who resigned in the aftermath of the cocaine death of Maryland All-American Len Bias last year, said the statement was extracted from a transcript of a television interview. "I was not there endorsing drug use," said Driesell, who is at the Associated Press Sports Editors Convention to participate today in a panel discussion.

"I am very upset that my efforts to fight drug problems among young people and athletes could be misunderstood in any way," Driesell said. "I am very upset that my efforts to fight drug problems among young people and athletes could be misunderstood in any way."

"When I was asked if I supported testing for athletes, I said yes," Driesell said. "Obviously some athletes at least think cocaine or other drugs may enhance their performance and that's what we've got to fight. We've got to face it head-on."

"My intent is to save athletes the agony they are facing with cocaine and other drugs. We've got to face it head-on. We've got to face it head-on."

Likely No. 1 pick Turgeon being compared to Lemieux

By Ken Ruppert
The Associated Press

DETROIT — When Mario Lemieux was drafted by the Pittsburgh Penguins in 1984, it was thought it would be many years before a player of that caliber would be available again in the NHL draft.

Cote said. "If nothing else, the younger Turgeon is a Lemieux look-alike. He's a 6-foot-2, 216-pound center who is the most gifted offensive player available."

Turgeon, however, does not have an absolute lock on the No. 1 position. He has been criticized for laziness, a characteristic attributed on occasion to Lemieux.

"I don't know if he is No. 1," Bruins head scout Bob Tindall said. "I don't know. He played ... all right. He does not do things well. He's a pretty complete player. But ... there are a lot of good players available."

"Among those is 6-3, 200-pound Brendan Shanahan, a big and steady right wing with the London Knights of the Ontario Hockey League."

"We haven't really talked about him playing in Boston, but I'd be great to have him playing so close," said Turgeon's brother, Sylvain Turgeon.

TORONTO (AP) — It seems apparent there is only one man who can break Wayne Gretzky's string of most valuable player awards in the National Hockey League. And that man is Wayne Gretzky.

After capturing his eighth consecutive Hart Trophy on Wednesday — one for every year he's been in the NHL — Gretzky hinted that he would not stop winning the award.

Speaking to reporters after the annual NHL awards ceremony in Toronto, Gretzky said he would like to win the award again.

"I don't know what my future holds for me right now," he said. "I was probably more drained at the end of this season than I have ever been."

HARRISON, N.Y. — According to Jack Nicklaus, there are two reasons he is making a non-rare appearance at the $600,000 Westchester Classic.

"I still get interested and excited about the majors. I think I'm still capable of winning in the majors," Nicklaus said.

"I'd be pleasantly surprised if I won here. But if I did, it would make it easier for next week," said Nicklaus, who has won this title twice.

He faces a 156-man field that is led by defending champion Bob Tway and Seve Ballesteros of Spain. Europe's leading player.

Other top contenders include Curtis Strange, Andy Bean, Roger Maltbie, Fred Couples, Scott Simpson and Don Proulx, winner of the Memorial in his last start.

Work won't stop benefits

QUESTION: Four years ago I suffered a disabling injury and started getting Social Security disability benefits. I haven't worked since then because my condition hasn't improved. But now I need more income, so I'm thinking of getting some kind of job. If I go to work, will my Social Security disability benefits stop?

ANSWER: Not immediately. People who return to work before there has been a significant medical improvement in their condition can be eligible for what is known as a trial work period. The trial work period, which lasts up to nine months and longer under certain circumstances gives them a chance to test their ability to work.

QUESTION: My mother just sold some furniture she'd had for years. She gets SSI checks and was wondering if the money she got for it will count as income. Will it?

ANSWER: Probably not. A resource that's converted into cash isn't income. It remains a resource in a different form. But cash is a resource that can count in determining eligibility while the furniture probably will not.

QUESTION: I'm 72 and because I have group health insurance coverage with my employer, I have not enrolled in the medical insurance part of Medicare. I'll be retiring in a few months and my group health insurance coverage will end the month I retire. I already have Medicare hospital insurance, but now I'll need to apply for medical insurance coverage under Medicare. When should I apply?

QUESTION: I run a small corporation, and I'm interested in giving my employees pre-retirement counseling. Does the Social Security Administration offer such a service to the public?

Postpone move until fall to avoid the peak prices

Sylvia Porter

My research associates have just moved from her suburban home into Manhattan. She is gripped with the options — Could she afford a full-service moving company? Should she rent a truck? Would borrowing a van be adequate? — I realized that thousands of you from coast to coast are facing similar questions during these, the most popular months of the year in which to move. Now, from the beginning of June until the end of September, is the peak moving season. Plan on paying peak prices to relocate if you are making your move at this time. If you can postpone your move until the fall, many moving companies will offer you cut rates, as business slows during this period.

ONCE YOU DECIDE when you want to move, the big question is how. Moving all of your belongings from one home to another is a mentally and physically exhausting process plagued with hassles. You are one of every five families who moves each year, reports the American Movers Conference, with half the moves during the next few months.

Most Americans — 65 percent — move themselves. These individuals do not rent equipment, but instead typically borrow a friend's pickup truck or use a neighbor's van. What's more, these "self-sufficient" moves pose the greatest competition to rental companies (21 percent of the market) and insurance coverage van line movers (also, 21 percent).

RENTAL COMPANIES ARE targeting a particular audience to use their services. And there's no doubt that moving yourself can save a substantial amount of money. Furthermore, many people like the fact that they are in control when they move themselves. If you are contemplating moving yourself, analyze the true cost. Are you capable of the physical work involved? Will you have to take off from work? If you are making an interstate move, consider the cost of food, hotels and gas for the trip. These are all expenses you must factor into your decision. Consider insurance. About one-half of automobile policies cover you when you drive a rented vehicle. If you are in an accident or your car has been robbed, your automobile insurance does not cover the goods in your vehicle. Does your homeowners policy include these items? If not, you may want to get an inexpensive rider on your homeowners policy.

Tip: Say you sold your house in New York and plan to take two weeks to drive to your new home in Los Angeles. If you've terminated your old homeowners insurance policy, and coverage on your new home does not begin until you move, you may be in a bind if your goods are damaged on the way. Check with your insurance agent.

It is essential to have the right equipment. If you need a hand truck, lift gate or ramp, don't skimp here. Spend the extra money on good boxes, strong tape and furniture pads, which are inexpensive. These steps are necessary. Find out if the company has a 24-hour hotline. What are the provisions if you need to be rescued on the highway? Make sure the truck you rent is the proper size. Although a medium-size truck may cost $90 vs. a large one for $150, you don't want to make two trips. A free estimate can help you better judge your needs.

Read a moving guide. Many of the larger companies publish free booklets, which often contain helpful tips. Also, talk to the manager of the rental facility for additional hints.

Spotty ready for adoption; Ellie just had five kittens

Spotty, the cute little dog left tied to a door on Sheldon Road last week, is this week's featured pet. Spotty is a Lhasa-poodle cross and is about 8 years old. He's ready for adoption.

He has a very sweet disposition and is well-behaved. He was left at a Sheldon Road grooming parlor with a note saying the owner would be back but asked the grooming parlor owner to put the dog in the nearby kennel for three days. The owner hasn't shown up and that's been since May 21.

Spotty is a very loveable little dog. He's been abandoned by his owner and needs a good home. Dog Warden Richard Rand says Spotty is a nice little dog.

Recurring diarrhea in dog requires doctor's attention

QUESTION: Over the last six months our 8-year-old collie has had three episodes of diarrhea which have responded to a bland diet and Pepto-Bismol. Her most recent bout, however, has us concerned as the stool appeared bloody and covered with mucus. Should we be concerned and what can we do to prevent this recurring problem?

ANSWER: There can be many causes of diarrhea in dogs. A recurrent case, especially when blood and mucus are noted, certainly requires veterinary attention.

A stool sample should be checked for the possibility of parasites. Older dogs frequently can become challenge to manage and parallels the disease in people. The course of the disease may vary from dog to dog but certain rules of thumb should be followed. In all cases when there is a flare-up, a bland diet should be given to rest the bowel. Over-the-counter intestinal protectants may be sufficient to obtain relief, or specific medication may be prescribed by your veterinarian. In many cases the diarrhea will begin to respond in a day or two but the medication should be continued as prescribed.

Chronic colitis in the dog should be considered a disease that needs to be managed. Flare-ups are common and can be associated with stress, diet change, other medical problems or a change in environment. If your dog is diagnosed as having chronic colitis, your veterinarian will spend much time discussing ways to prevent flare-ups and also discuss the proper use of medications and diet to ensure that each incident is as short as possible.

What goes up still comes down, even though Newton made error

CHICAGO (AP) — Now that Sir Isaac Newton isn't around to defend himself, along comes a fresh-faced college kid to find fault with the 300-year-old work in which the master laid out the laws of motion and his theory of gravity. Which is Galileo's nice way of saying what goes up will still come down. Galileo uncovered the mistake as part of a routine class assignment by Professor Noel Swerdlow, who handed the problem out because he himself had never been able to get the numbers in Proposition Eight of Book Three of the "Philosophiæ Naturalis Principia Mathematica" to agree with each other.

"Principia," published in 1687 and considered one of the greatest single contributions to the history of science, established Newton's brilliance as an astronomer and mathematician. It offered an explanation about the mass, surface gravity and density of the known planets. Galileo found the inconsistency in Newton's calculation of the Earth's mass. To determine that, Newton needed to know the angle between a line from the Earth's center to the sun and a line from a point on the Earth's surface to the sun.

Galileo said he reworked the calculations with the 15 percent change and "bingo, I got what should have been the right number." "Quite frankly, I just went ahead and finished the paper and turned it in, assuming that the discrepancy is the reason we were assigned to run the numbers in the first place." That was mid-February. The significance of the find at first eluded even Swerdlow, who gave Galileo an A-plus for his paper. In April, Swerdlow and Galileo attended a lecture on the "Principia" by University of Chicago Nobel laureate S. Chandrasekhar. Both realized what Galileo had uncovered.

I immediately went to the library and went crazy," said Galileo.

Second is one 3,000th of a degree. Newton's notes indicated he followed the figure to be 16.8 seconds, but he mysteriously used 11 seconds in calculating the Earth's mass. That's the mistake Galileo discovered. Galileo said he reworked the calculations with the 15 percent change and "bingo, I got what should have been the right number." "Quite frankly, I just went ahead and finished the paper and turned it in, assuming that the discrepancy is the reason we were assigned to run the numbers in the first place." That was mid-February. # Top doc sees no quick fix to rising infant death rate

By Brent Lyman
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Connecticut will spend an additional $1 million next year to combat the rising infant death rate in some cities, but the state's health commissioner warns there are no quick solutions to the problem.

Deaths among non-white babies in Hartford jumped from 23.2 per 1,000 births in 1984 to 26.8 per 1,000 births in 1985, according to the latest figures compiled by the state Department of Health Services.

The rate was the highest in Connecticut and among the highest in the nation. "There is no quick fix in solving this problem," Dr. Frederick G. Adams, state health commissioner, said during a news conference Wednesday. "It's going to take a concerted effort over time... One should approach this as a decade cycle if you're going to resolve the problem."

The extra $1 million will bring the spending level to about $2.5 million, with most of the money going to various local health programs for infants and pregnant women, according to Wanda Rickerby, spokeswoman for the state health department. The department will ask the General Assembly for significantly more money next year, she said.

Connecticut, which has the nation's highest per capita income at $19,208, is one of 16 states that showed an increase in the mortality rate for non-white babies between 1984 and 1985, according to state health officials. Connecticut ranked ninth in that group.

In other Connecticut cities, deaths among non-white babies, aged 1 year or younger, were 20.0 per 1,000 births in Bridgeport; 18.5 per 1,000 in New Haven and 19.1 per 1,000 in Meriden.

Nationally, the mortality rate for non-white babies stood at 16.1 per 1,000 births and the overall death rate was 10.8 per 1,000 in 1984, the latest year for which figures are available. The U.S. surgeon general's 1986 report for non-white infant mortality is 12 per 1,000 births nationally and an overall death rate of 9 per 1,000 births. Dr. Steven Uranga McKane, Hartford director of health, said the infant mortality rate in Hartford also cause for concern because it indicates problems with the health care system in general.

"When we see numbers like we've seen in Hartford over the last several years," he said, "it's very distressing not only because it means that infants are dying that do not necessarily have to die, but it also means that there are other glitches in the health care system."

Adams last month called a meeting of health and social-welfare officials to discuss ways to attack the problem. He said Wednesday the group will continue meeting to study the issue.

Community and corporate leaders formed the Hartford Action Plan in 1985 to reduce the infant mortality rate in the city. Adams said the latest figures don't mean the program isn't working, but that its impact hasn't been realized yet. "We're tracking in the wrong direction," Adams said. "That's just too many people dying."

They're scholar-leaders

Four Manchester junior high school students were honored as Connecticut Scholar-Leaders for 1987 on Monday. From left are Meg Berte, Kathryn Zeidler, Corey Craft and Emil Isavir.

Meid and Corey attend Bennet Junior High School; Kathryn and Emil attend Iling Junior High School. Each year the Connecticut Association of Secondary Schools honors a boy and girl from each junior high school for outstanding scholarship and leadership.

Woman educator wins vote to lead U.S. Presbyterians

By John A. Bell
The Associated Press

BLOXI, Miss — Isabel Rogers, a Christian educator who is the newly elected leader of America's largest Presbyterian denomination, defeated another woman for the post of moderator by just two votes.

Rogers beat the Rev. Joan SalmonCampbell, 325-323 on the fifth ballot Wednesday at the church's 1987 General Assembly.

Rogers, who succeeds the Rev. Benjamin Weir as moderator of the Presbyterian Church (USA), is a professor of ethics at the Presbyterian School of Christian Education in Richmond, Va.

Weir, a former hostage in Lebanon, was not eligible for a second one-year term as the denomination's chief spokesman.

The other candidates — the Rev. Jaime O. Quinones, a denomination executive from Santa Fe, N.M., and the Rev. John D. MacLeod Jr., a denomination executive from Raleigh, N.C. — were dropped from consideration after four ballots.

The prominence of women in the election indicates the church is "beginning to be freed up," Rogers said. "People will be considered for their abilities."

Rogers, who is white, said her defeat of Ms. SalmonCampbell, who is black, did not reflect the denomination's attitude about race. But she added, "We need to be aware there are racial-ethnic concerns."

About 2.5 percent of the denomination is black, and several of the questions asked the candidates before the election dealt with the future of minorities in the church.

Rogers is the sixth woman to lead either the United Presbyterian Church (USA) or the Presbyterian Church (US), which were reunited in 1983 after a century-old split.

She said Presbyterians should not back away from their theological positions to stem a four-year drop in membership.

The Assembly was told earlier that the denomination had 3,016,488 members last year, a drop of 40,738 from the previous year and almost 200,000 less than in 1983. That decline, combined with the recent unification of two Lutheran groups, drops the PCUSA to the 10th largest religious group in the nation.

Some of the decrease has been blamed on disagreements over positions taken by past General Assemblies.

The denomination, for example, has taken a position favoring a woman's right to have an abortion, although it has said abortion is not to be used for birth control and that other alternatives to unwanted pregnancies must be considered.

The church has declined to ordain acknowledged, practicing homosexuals as elders or ministers, but has said they deserve care and loving, and has allowed the ordination of women as elders and ministers.

"We cannot retreat if the General Assembly continues to move in these directions," Rogers said. "We need a better understanding of the guidance of God."

Instead, she said, the church must "try to educate people to understand the implications of the theology and God will do the rest."

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, left, conducts a board meeting of the PTL in Lynchburg, Va., Wednesday.

Agencies begin probe of PTL's TV ministry

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department, the Internal Revenue Service and the Postal Service have launched criminal investigations of the PTL television ministry, the Rev. Jerry Falwell says.

Investigators are looking at actions taken before the Rev. Jim Bakker resigned as leader of PTL and turned control over to Falwell in March, Falwell said Wednesday after a church service and a closed-door meeting of the PTL board.

"They have all advised us it was prior to our arrival, thank God," Falwell told reporters.

Meanwhile, Bakker, and his wife, Tammy Faye, returned to the Carolinas Wednesday night to claim belongings from the Tega Cay, S.C., mansion they left in January, saying they hope to return to television ministry soon.

"Our goal is to be on the air in 30 days," Bakker told The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer at Dallas-Fort Worth airport while awaiting a connecting flight to Charlotte with his wife and their son, Jamie. Bakker, who has been living in Palm Springs, Calif., since resigning amid revelations he had a sexual encounter with a secretary, refused to be specific.

It was not clear whether his intentions were related to or independent of PTL, which Bakker said the Bakkers will never be permitted to return to PTL, which Bakker founded.

"I assume he is talking about somewhere else, not on PTL," Falwell spokesman Mark DeMoss said, when told of Bakker's comments.

The PTL board gathered at Falwell's Old-Time Gospel Hour headquarters in Lynchburg to discuss the ministry's $70 million debt. During a break in the six-hour meeting, Falwell said that things keep looking worse for PTL.

He has said he wants to rebuild PTL and leave it by next March. Three new directors were added to the board, raising the number of directors to eight.

They are Harry Hargrave, a PTL executive and pastor of Highland Park Presbyterian Church in Dallas; Richard Lee, pastor of Rehobeth Baptist Church in Atlanta; and Jerry Lipps of Lipps Trucking in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

"They find ways of getting along, just like families," in his Lutheran Troy of suburban Highland Park, a hearing member who teaches a Sunday School class of five, including two deaf children.

It wasn't always so pleasant. For years, Goldhamer said, rabbis have interpreted the Talmud, the book of Jewish law, as banning the deaf from worship. And deaf people did not have the money to start their own congregations.

"You can't just put an interpreter for the deaf in a traditional service," Goldhamer said. "The deaf feel very uncomfortable. They feel they're dressed poorly, and they feel people will judge them by their dress and their lack of voice."

Advice

Bus driver's views clash with riders

DEAR ABBY: I was riding the local transit bus today when the bus driver (woman) struck up a conversation with me. I was sitting near her and there was nobody else on the bus.

I don't know why, but she asked me what church I went to. I told her that I was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which is also known as the Mormon Church.

She then said that she was a Christian. I replied, "Well, so am I." Then she told me that I was not a Christian because my religion teaches that Jesus was not the son of God. I tried to keep my cool and tried to explain that I was a Christian as she was, but she insisted that I was not.

Abby, I have learned to accept this kind of ridicule from people who go to high school with me, but I didn't expect this kind of talk from an adult. When I got off the bus, I was sorry I didn't just tell her I was a Catholic or something.

If that bus driver was right, I must have missed something in my own religious training. Please let me know.

L.D.S. IN ASHLAND, CALIF.

DEAR L.D.S.: You are correct. When that issue was raised years ago, the prophet Joseph Smith, founder of the Mormon Church, responded: "We believe in God the eternal father, and in his son, Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost." That should settle it.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, my husband removed his wedding ring from his finger, saying it could be a hazard on his job. (He works in the construction field.) Finally he stopped wearing it altogether.

Last Christmas, he came home from the company Christmas party wearing a very expensive gold initial ring, which he said was a gift from "Lyn," a young woman who works for the company. That ring had not been off his finger since the day he got it.

Yes, I asked him how come this ring isn't hazardous on his job. He said in case he ran into Lyn, he didn't want to offend her by not wearing her gift. How does this strike you, Abby?

FUMING IN FLUSHING

DEAR FUMING: The same way it strikes you. Your husband's wedding ring may have been hazardous on his job, but this new "replacement" is definitely hazardous to his marriage. It's a time for you and your construction man to assess your marriage. Methinks the foundation is crumbling.

DEAR ABBY: I think you were in error when you stated that when introducing a stepmother, one should say, "This is my stepmother." To me, that seems cold and distant.

For 10 years my stepson introduced me as "my dad's wife." I felt like an outsider and not a part of the family. About a year ago he apologized, and started referring to me as his stepmother. I was elated and felt he had finally accepted me. Then out comes your column with that statement, and now he's back to calling me his dad's wife. Sign day...

OUTSIDE LOOKING IN

DEAR OUTSIDE: Thanks to the Cinderella fairy tale, "stepmother" has taken on a less-than-lovely connotation. You are entitled to your opinion, but I personally think "my dad's wife" would be preferred by most over "stepmother."

DEAR ABBY: Please settle an argument: What is the fairest way for our inheritance to be divided? We have two sons. Son No. 1 has two children, and Son No. 2 has three children.

J. HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR J.: Leave the same amount to each of your children. And the same amount to each of your grandchildren.

To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long, stamped (30 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My son actually enjoys the odor of a wood stove. His wife constantly suffers from lung congestion, and all three of his sons have colds and sore throats all winter. I feel that the wood stove in their home is a hazard, but my son won't listen to me. Can you help?

DEAR DR. GOTT: The smell of burning wood in a fireplace or stove is pleasurable to many people. I remember the smell of burning autumn leaves. It's a nostalgic and comforting flashback. However, smoke from any source is an air pollutant, and wood stoves are no exception. The combination of dry winter air and wood smoke will cause some people to have repeated sore throats and respiratory infections.

Short of abandoning wood heat altogether, your son may be able to solve the problem by venting the thing, so I could really use your suggestions. I have gone to several physicians, who give me medication to clear up my infections but don't tell me why I keep getting them.

DEAR READER: Bedwetting (enuresis) in children often is due to stress and emotional tension. However, in adults, the condition is more likely to be related to an abnormality in the urinary system, such as chronic infection or blockage in the tract. You need a thorough examination by a urologist, who probably will check you for infection, obtain an intravenous pyelogram (kidney and bladder X-ray) and perform a cystoscopic exam, during which the lower urinary tract is examined through a lighted tube.

Congenital abnormalities may lead to enuresis, and it is possible that you and your daughter have inherited a defect that may need repair.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a typist, so I use my hands quite a bit. I get transparent cysts on my fingers. They get very sore, drain and then

Should the town purchase a portable classroom or re-open an existing school?

Victoria Brown: "If you do the mobile classroom, I'd put the older kids there. The younger kids need the normal setting — four walls, a blackboard — and not a little trailer away from everything."

Susan Sanders: "My daughter isn't in school. I haven't given it much thought."

Sandi Tilley: "As a parent, I want to put my kids in the most normalized setting. As a taxpayer, I might consider the most economical."

Jean Corcoran: "My kids are not in school yet. I have no opinion."

Sylvia Dobbin: "Makes a lot more sense to re-open the school."

Teri Robbins: "I suppose it would be all right while they're making something permanent to go with the growth of the town."

SOUTH WINDSOR — Gerber Scientific Inc. has reported higher fourth-quarter and annual operating results. Sales for the fourth quarter increased 22 percent to $649,784,000 from $468,696,000 for the same period last year. Consolidated net earnings for the fourth quarter ended April 30, were $5,353,000, or 36 cents per share, an increase of 27 percent from net earnings of $4,996,000, or 29 cents per share, for the fourth quarter of last year.
For the year ended April 30, consolidated sales increased 17 percent to $233,854,000 from $191,786,000 for the previous year. Consolidated net earnings were $21,007,000, an increase of 16 percent from net earnings of $18,190,000 last year. Earnings per share were $1.21 for the year ended April 30, compared to $1.05 for the previous year.

Commission approves expansion

DAYTON, Ohio — The City Commission has approved a contract to expand the Emery Air Freight Corp. hub terminal at Dayton International Airport.
The $18.8 million contract with Danis Industries was approved Wednesday. Emery directors had approved the expansion Tuesday. Emery is based in Wilton, Conn.
The city will pay for the expansion with industrial revenue bonds.
The expansion, which will add nine bays to the 42-bay package sorting and distribution building, is needed to absorb the recent $300 million acquisition of Puritator Courier Corp. and the move of Puritator's operations from Indianapolis.
Emery has said the relocation will mean an additional 150 to 200 jobs in Dayton and a 70 percent increase in the number of packages handled. The hub now sorts 2.3 million pounds of domestic and international cargo each weeknight.

Commission upsets one investor

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

QUESTION: After two transactions with a certain brokerage firm, I wouldn't do business with them again if Hades turned into the Arctic dreary.
First, they solicited me to buy a newly issued Canadian stock they were underwriting. I bought 12,000 shares at 17 cents (in U.S. money) per share, a total cost of $2,040 (U.S.). I paid no commission on that purchase.
Four months later, when I sold the 12,000 shares at 28 cents (U.S.) per share, a total of $3,360, they charged me a $132 commission. Why was I charged no commission when I bought, but charged a large one when I sold?
ANSWER: When brokerage firms underwrite a new stock issue, they act as investment bankers. They buy the stock from the issuing company at one price, mark it up to a slightly higher price and attempt to sell it to the public at the marked-up price.
Assuming all shares are sold, the brokerages make their profit on the markup. Although no commission is charged directly to the people who buy the shares, the markup is included in the price they pay. Very often, the markup is higher than most commissions.
When you sold the 12,000 shares, it's obvious that the brokerage firm acted as an "agent." A brokerage can act either as an agent and charge a commission, or as a "principal" and collect a markup or markdown. If the brokerage had acted as principal on your sale, you would have paid no commission, but you would have received less than 28 cents a share.
The $132 commission you complain about figures out to just under 4 percent on the price they paid for that sale transaction in low-priced stock.
After paying that commission, you walked away with $1,188 profit on the $2,040 you put into that stock. That's a 58 percent profit in only four months.

I fail to understand what you are griping about. Count yourself fortunate. Most people who take fliers in "penny stocks" (those trading below $5 — lose their shirts).

QUESTION: After selling 12,000 shares of Canadian stock at 28 cents (U.S.) on April 8, I checked with another broker and learned that the stock closed at 40 cents (Canadian) that day.
Is there any way 40 cents (Canadian) could equal 28 cents (U.S.)?
ANSWER: Sure. The records show that, on April 8, the Canadian dollar was worth about 70 cents (U.S.) in foreign exchange trading. Expressed another way, Canadian money had a value equal to 76 percent of U.S. money. Simple arithmetic shows that 40 cents (Canadian) was worth 30 cents (U.S.) that day in foreign exchange transactions.
But foreign exchange quotations are for transactions of $1 million or more. Smaller transactions, such as yours, result in fewer currency units — U.S. money, in this case.

Newspaper employees walk off jobs

BALTIMORE — The union representing 600 newspaper employees who went on strike today against The Sun and The Evening Sun, and the workers' chief negotiator said both sides were far apart.
The strike by reporters, editors, advertising and circulation employees is the first against the newspaper in nine years.
The newspapers were purchased last year by Los Angeles-based Times Mirror Co.
"We hope there is room for them to move. We hope that they'll get back to the bargaining table and we can settle this quickly," said Stanislaw Polanski, negotiator for The Newpaper Guild, said Wednesday night after members rejected a recommendation to extend their contract a second time.
Following the strike vote, Ms. Polanski called Richard M. Basoco, senior vice president and general manager of The Sun, and offered to resume negotiations. The newspaper said today. It did not say what Basoco's response was.

About five minutes after the show-of-hands vote, picket lines went up outside the newspapers' downtown offices.
The newspapers, Baltimore's only major general-circulation dailies, will continue to publish as usual. The contract expires at midnight Tuesday, but union members decided to extend the deadline by a day to allow further negotiations on wages and benefits in the proposed three-year contract. There were no talks Wednesday.
Smolinski regret that he has been unable to reach an agreement with one of the unions which represents other employees, "Smolinski said in a statement.
The contract expired at midnight Tuesday, but union members decided to extend the deadline by a day to allow further negotiations on wages and benefits in the proposed three-year contract. There were no talks Wednesday.
