ROSS VERDICT: DEATH

BRIDGEPORT — Michael B. Ross, convicted June 5 of murdering four teen-age girls, on Friday became the first person condemned to die in Connecticut's electric chair since the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the death penalty in 1976.

Lawyers for the 27-year-old serial killer said they would appeal the sentence.

The Cornell University graduate and former insurance salesman from Griswold heard the verdict from a 12-member jury that deliberated four hours before concluding the killings were "especially cruel, heinous and depraved."

Those are the aggravating factors necessary for the death sentence to be imposed under Connecticut law.

Just as crucial, the eight men and four women jurors found that no mitigating factors existed in any of the slayings. The presence of just one mitigating factor — such as mental illness — would have ruled out the death penalty.

Ross stood motionless facing the bench. One of his public defenders said he did not react.

Spectators in the packed Bridgeport Superior Court room gasped as the sentence was returned. Relatives of Ross' four teen-age victims, whom Ross either raped or kidnapped before strangling, cried in relief.

Under state law, trial Judge G. Sarsfield Ford has no choice but to sentence Ross to die in the electric chair. Pronouncement of sentence was scheduled for 10 a.m. July 6.

Town firemen disappointed over possible loss of station

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

A light drizzle fell on the Buckland firehouse Friday night, casting the red brick structure in a gloomy light.

Inside the 11-year-old station, known as Company 5 of the town of Manchester Fire Department, it was dry. But the mood of its two occupants seemed to match the weather outside.

The firefighters, John C. Bycholski of Manchester and Douglas Welch of Andover, performed their duties Friday as if nothing was wrong.

But it was obvious both knew it was just a matter of time before the station they call home is turned over to the volunteer Eighth District Fire Department, something the town has fought for years.

"You get attached to a place," said Bycholski, who has been on the town's professional force for 17 years and at the Buckland firehouse on Tolland Turnpike the last four.

"It's like home," Welch said, taking a sip of coffee. "You spend Christmas here and everything."

FOR THE EIGHT firefighters who man the station, though, Christmas will likely be spent somewhere else this year.

On Thursday, negotiators for the town and the district, a political subdivision that provides sewer service and fire protection to much of northern Manchester, reached a tentative agreement under which the controversial Buckland firehouse would be turned over to the district.

Under that agreement, which must still be approved by the town Board of Directors and district voters before it goes into effect, the town would swap the firehouse for the 26 miles of district sewer lines.

It marks a major step forward in town-district relations, a rivalry that dates back several decades. But it also means the end of the town's presence in the district.

"I'm not disappointed for myself," Bycholski said. "I'm disappointed on how the different sides of town handled the whole thing. Instead of using common sense they let their egos get in the way."

BYCHOLSKI AND WELCH both said it would make more sense if the town kept the firehouse and had jurisdiction over the area surrounding it. As it stands today, however, the town operates the Buckland firehouse and the district has jurisdiction over the area.

"People come in here and say, 'There's a car fire down the street,'" Welch said. "We say, 'Sorry, I can call the (district) fire department, but I can't go.' People get mad. But there's nothing we can do with a court injunction against us. It used to be frustrating. But you get used to it."

In 1978, a court judge ruled that the district would provide fire service to northwest Manchester, taking away the area immediately around the Buckland firehouse from town jurisdiction. That ruling set up a chain of controversial events that led the town and the district into battle against each other.

After several years of controversy, town voters were asked in a 1985 referendum whether the firehouse should be sold. The voters said no.

Welch and Bycholski wondered why that vote is now being ignored.

Since 1978, two town efforts to consolidate the district have failed, the last time in November. After that, negotiators on both sides got together to try and resolve the longstanding disputes. It was from those meetings that Thursday's tentative agreement was reached.

THE AGREEMENT does not

All is quiet on 8th's front

A dispatcher and two volunteers watched television upstairs in the Eighth District fire station Friday night.

Newspapers with headlines about the town selling its controversial Buckland firehouse to the district sat on a table.

None of the three were willing to talk about the subject, which has divided the town and the district for years. The dispatcher, who was from Vernon, said he wasn't too familiar with the issues. The other two said they didn't feel comfortable talking about the heated issue.

In fact, the only one who seemed to have anything to say at all was the district's dog, Ax. Usually friendly, Ax tried to attack a reporter seeking answers to a few questions.

The district volunteers quickly came to the rescue, bringing the dog into another room and telling him to sit.

"Sorry about that," one volunteer said. "He doesn't usually do that."

Jury condemns Ross to electric chair

Before an execution may be carried out, however, the state Supreme Court must review the case.

Public defender M. Fred DeCaprio said he was not surprised at the outcome and said he would file an appeal of the sentence within 20 days of July 6.

Pending the Supreme Court review and any appeals, Ross would die in the electric chair at the state's maximum security prison at Somers.

The jury which condemned Ross on Friday was the same that convicted him June 5 on six counts of capital felony in the four killings. He had been serving a 120-year prison sentence for a previous conviction in the slayings of two young Windham County women.

"I think Mr. Ross believes he is deserving of a retrial," said public defender Peter Scillieri.

State's Attorney C. Robert Satti Sr., who prosecuted Ross, said he was "very satisfied with the verdict. All the citizens of the state owe a debt of gratitude to these 12 jurors."

DeCaprio, who acknowledged that Ross had done "terrible things," had asked the jury for a life sentence.

Friday's verdict was for the kidnap-murders of Robin Stavinsky, 19, of Norwich; April Brunats, 14, of Griswold; Leslie Shelley, 14, of Griswold; and Wendy Baribeault, 17 of Lisbon. The Stavinsky and Baribeault girls had also been raped.

It was for the Baribeault girl's killing that he was arrested by state police on June 28, 1984.

Lera Shelley of Griswold, mother of one of the victims, said after the verdict that "I think it's really great."

But she added: "How can I say he deserved it? I can't say, I'm not God. Maybe God ruled it. I really have no feelings towards him."

Members of the victims' families have driven the 170 miles roundtrip from the New London area to Bridgeport every day since the trial began May 4 and have attended all court proceedings since 1984.

State Rep. Richard D. Tulisano, D-Rocky Hill, co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee, is one of the legislature most outspoken opponents of the death penalty.

"I think the death penalty is not an appropriate penalty in our society because I don't think it in the end answers society's interests or the interest of families and survivors," he said.

Tulisano sponsored an unsuccessful bill this year that would have abolished the state's death penalty law, in favor of life in prison without the possibility of parole.

State Rep. Eugene A. Migliaro Jr., R-Wolcott, an equally outspoken advocate of the death penalty, said simply, "It's about time. God bless those jurors."

Joseph "Mad Dog" Taboraky, who admitted killing seven people in a robbery, was the last person to be executed in Connecticut. He died in the electric chair on May 17, 1960.

Suspects held without bail in drug-cash case

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A federal judge on Friday ordered two main defendants accused in a narcotics money-laundering scheme involving millions of dollars to be held without bail until their trial.

U.S. District Judge Jose Cabranes said that he was not convinced that Carlos Gaviria or Rodolfo Ariano Jr., both Colombian nationals, would stay in the United States if they were released on bail.

Cabranes also ordered that a third main defendant in the case, Juan Guillermo Restrepo, continue being held without bail until his attorney asks for a hearing on his detention.

Attorneys for Gaviria and Ariano presented arguments for bail being set for their clients during the hearing in New Haven federal court. Restrepo's attorney, federal public defender Gary Weinberger, did not argue for bail, saying he expected Restrepo to retain another lawyer soon.

The three defendants also entered innocent pleas to various counts of narcotics conspiracy, racketeering and unlawful interstate travel.

Restrepo, Gaviria and Ariano are accused of participating in a money-laundering operation in which 27 people sent more than $100 million in illegal U.S. drug proceeds overseas for major Colombian drug traffickers. They were arrested following a three-year undercover FBI investigation, in which agents helped in the laundering of the money in Connecticut, Florida and elsewhere.

Gaviria, 30, is charged with one count of narcotics conspiracy, which carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $200,000 fine. Court documents say he is in the top management level of the money-laundering operation.

Federal prosecutor Richard N. Palmer said Gaviria has no ties to the United States and so would probably flee if released on bail. Cabranes rejected defense attorney David Rosen's proposal that Gaviria be placed under house arrest in a residence in New Haven and be monitored electronically.

Rosen also argued that the crime that Gaviria was charged with could not be "heinous," considering that "the government itself performed this conduct." He was referring to the FBI laundering money as part of its cover.

Church bus plunges down mountain

BLAIRSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A church bus filled with teen-agers ran off a road and plunged 80 feet down a mountainside Friday, killing a 14-year-old girl and injuring 29 other people, authorities said.

The brakes on the bus gave out as it was coming down a steep incline about 3 p.m. on the Richard Russell Scenic Highway, a winding, two-lane road, said Union County Sheriff Tom Duncan.

The bus was one of two carrying youngsters from the First Baptist Church of Winter Haven, Fla., from a weeklong stay at a youth camp in the northeastern Georgia mountains.

Some victims were trapped for as long as two hours, and worried parents gathered at the church in the hope of getting more information about the injured.

"It happened so fast I didn't really see what happened," said 16-year-old Shellee Bruce of Winter Haven, who suffered cuts and bruises. "I looked out the window and I saw all these trees passing."

The Rev. Frank Brooks, who was driving the bus, was thrown clear of the wreckage. Brooks, 36, a youth pastor at the church, was in critical condition at Kennestone Hospital in suburban Atlanta, said hospital spokeswoman Dana Jackson.

Town ponds eyed for fishing

By George Lavyn
Herald Reporter

Manchester residents might soon be able to fish in two town-owned ponds under a plan being considered by town officials. The ponds are located off of Lydall Street behind Foulds Reservoir, and had previously been stocked with trout when they were owned by the former North Manchester Water Co., said Robert Young, town water and sewer administrator.

The two ponds are the only ones owned by the town that are not treated with copper sulfate to keep down algae that can foul the taste and smell of the water, Young said. Game fish such as trout and bass cannot live in water mixed with copper sulfate, he said. Young said his department would have no problems holding one-day fishing derbies in the ponds next year. Before that can occur, though, he said, the town must have approval from the state Department of Health Services, which oversees municipal drinking-water supplies. Before the state office gives approval, it probably will require the town to provide supervision and sanitary facilities, Young said. Participants might also have to obtain special fishing permits, he added.

In addition, access to the ponds may have to be improved first, he said. Some tall grass and brush might have to be cut.

The town's Advisory Park and Recreation Commission has long been in favor of fishing in town-owned waters. Joel Janenda, chairman of the town park commission, said this week the group will discuss the proposal when it meets in September.

He said for as long as he could remember, people in town have been inquiring about the possibility of fishing in town waters. The ponds in question were purposely made to hold fish by the North Manchester Water Co., Young said. The water from the ponds flows into Foulds Reservoir, which is connected to Morse Reservoir.

The two reservoirs are used only as a backup water supply. If they were used as a first source, fishing would not be allowed, Young said. That is why the town's other major reservoirs — such as Globe Hollow and Buckingham — cannot be used.

He added that before the town's water treatment plant was built and other improvements to the water system were made, the two reservoirs were used as a first source. Now, the improvements allows town officials to keep the reservoirs as backups.

Forms save disabled in a fire

Handicapped people in Manchester will have a better chance of being rescued quickly from their homes in case of a fire or other disaster if they fill out a form telling emergency personnel about themselves.

Data from the forms will be fed into police computers to be called up quickly in an emergency. Forms will be mailed out Wednesday to about 10,000 Manchester taxpayers. The forms will also be available at the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center and at the offices of Visiting Nurse and Home Care. The forms should be mailed to the Emergency Service Survey, care of the Manchester Municipal Building, 41 Center St., Manchester, 06040. Some of the information is already in the police computer files, but Sgt. Gerald Calve, police training officer, said there is information on only about 280 or 300 people.

The effort to get more information on more people is being undertaken by the Commission on the Handicapped in cooperation with the town's Human Services Department.

Similar forms were mailed out with taxes two years ago, but the new ones seek more information. The new form asks where in a house a bedridden person or one confined to a chair is located.

The first information for the computer came from service organizations such as the visiting nurses. The new forms will reach more people, Calve said.

MHS students learn writing skills via Africa

Young Zimbabwe and Manchester penpals talk tigers and television

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

When teachers Charlie Vouden and Sherrill Jamo walked into their English classes last fall and told their students they would be writing letters to teen-agers in Zimbabwe, they got a lot of blank stares.

Zimbabwe. It seemed, wasn't a country many Manchester High School students were familiar with.

"I hadn't heard of it before," said Tiffany Zolvik, who just finished her junior year. "I thought it would be interesting because I had never thought of Africa much."

Well, Zolvik and the rest of the students in Vouden's and Jamo's classes think about it now. For nine months, the students have been corresponding with their counterparts in Zimbabwe, a country in south central Africa, just northeast of South Africa.

The program started two years ago to teach students how to communicate with people in a country whose culture is much different from theirs. And, according to the two teachers, the program has worked.

"If the students are writing to a specific audience, they care much more about their writing, because they're not writing for a grade, they're writing to communicate," Jamo said.

Students say they've learned much from their foreign friends. Although the last batch of letters were sent out this week, some students in Vouden and Jamo's classes said they included their home addresses so correspondence can continue in the summer.

"I thought it was exciting because I had thought about going to Africa," said Audra Reeves, one of Vouden's students.

Students started by describing America and Manchester to the Zimbabwe students. Then both sides described their dreams.

"She (the girl I wrote to) dreamed a tiger was chasing after her," said Angela Newsome, who just graduated from MHS. "That's something kids here wouldn't dream about."

The students have also exchanged tape-recorded messages, yearbooks, photographs, music and ideas. The African students, who go to Makwatsine Secondary School in Guruvu, Zimbabwe, thought of Americans as very rich, and, in some cases, asked American students to send them plane tickets, computers and other material goods not available in their country.

The American students also noticed a strong interest in education among the African students.

Vouden explained that students in Zimbabwe must take a national exam when they complete high school. It's a one-shot deal and the results determine whether a student goes to college or spends the rest of his or her life on a farm.

"We have a better chance of going to college here than they do there," Reeves said. "A lot of people take for granted what we have here."

Vouden and Jamo began this program by working with teacher Renee Shatteman, who taught English at Makwatsine School for about two years before returning to the United States.

Shatteman, who will teach in South Windsor High School next year, coordinated events from Zimbabwe, and then returned to America to introduce the program to Manchester's students.

Makwatsine School is surrounded by dirt roads and huts, according to Vouden and Jamo. The school building, which is still under construction by the students, is near a river where crocodiles play.

School board waives bidding

BOLTON — The Bolton Board of Education decided Thursday to waive the bidding process for renovations on an industrial arts room in the high school. Originally, $9,500 was budgeted for the renovations, which will include lowering the ceiling of a former storage room for wood and making it into a drafting room. Since DMC Construction's quote of $7,500 to do the renovations was well below the amount originally budgeted for the job, it was decided that bidding was not necessary.

Eleven graduate from ROTC

Eleven students graduated June 18 from the Regional Occupational Training Center. The speaker at the ceremony was state Rep. Naomi Cohen of the 15th District, whose son, Josh, was among the graduates.

Graduates were John Adams, Kyle Juttner, Michelle Ann Shensie, and Frank Yeonias, of Manchester; Sharon Hierrezuelo, Eddie Kirksey, and Christine Quinn, of Hartford; Josh Cohen of Bloomfield; Eric Hoyt of Vernon; Tracey Spencer of Glastonbury; and Troy Wilkins of South Windsor.

Contest nets local winners

COVENTRY — Fifth-graders at the Capt. Nathan Hale School recently participated in a poster contest sponsored by the Tolland County Soil and Water Conservation District.

Eric Wilkinson won the contest, which centered on the theme "Soil: We Can't Grow Without It." Tiffany Kimble placed second. The district will present Eric with a T-shirt and will give a pizza party for his class.

Commissions cancel meetings

The Manchester Economic Development Commission and the Cheney National Historic District Commission have both canceled their Thursday meetings.

Coventry GOP has EDC nominee

COVENTRY — Republican Alfred Bray has been nominated to fill a GOP vacancy on the town's Economic Development Commission, newly elected Republican Town Chairman Michael Cleary said Friday night.

The nomination will go to the Town Council Monday night for confirmation, Cleary said. If it is approved, Bray will fill a position left open three months ago, when Blanche Strater resigned from the EDC to take a spot on the Town Council. By law, councilmen cannot sit on any other town board.

"I just want to state a fact," said Cleary, who was elected Republican town chairman Wednesday night. "Within 30 minutes of my election victory, Al Bray was nominated to fill the vacancy."

Cleary, 49, aimed his comments at Sondra Stave, a Democrat and chairman of the EDC, who criticized the Republicans for taking their time in making a nomination.

"If the Republicans are eager to promote responsible economic development, as the rest of us are, the best thing to do is fill that vacancy," Stave had said.

She made her comments in reference to Cleary's suggestion that the GOP create its own, separate economic development commission.

The new panel would not take the place of the town EDC, Cleary said. He said it would be a supplement to the town, giving suggestions and recommendations to the Town Council.

"The Town Council needs input," Cleary said.

Hundreds attend Gleason funeral

By A. J. Dickerson
The Associated Press

NORTH MIAMI, Fla. — Jackie Gleason's widow pinned a final red carnation on his lapel Friday as family and fans gathered beside the beloved entertainer's casket to mourn the loss of "a working man's comedian."

Hundreds of mourners waited in 90-degree heat outside the chapel to pay their last respects.

Gleason, known as "The Great One" and beloved for his portrayal of the loud-mouthed bus driver Ralph Kramden on "The Honeymooners," died Wednesday at his home in nearby Lauderhill at the age of 71.

Imperial Point Hospital staff physician Leonard Erdman said the Brooklyn, N.Y.-born comedian died of adenocarcinoma, colon cancer which also involved the liver.

His widow, Marilyn, and his two daughters spent an hour at a private viewing Friday morning. With them was his sister-in-law, June Taylor, whose June Taylor Dancers appeared on Gleason's television variety show.

Mrs. Gleason pinned her husband's trademark red carnation on him during the private viewing, said Ron Laramore, manager of the Lithgow Funeral Chapel.

Playing quietly in the background in the chapel was Gleason's brassy theme song "Melancholy Serenade," which he wrote himself and was a million best-seller in 1953.

After the family left, the bronze, carnation-covered casket was closed and the chapel doors were opened at noon to 120 people who had been waiting.

Lithgow officials said they expected 1,000 people would visit before the chapel closed at 9 p.m., but by 2:30 p.m. 600 had already signed the guest book.

Many of the fans said they remembered Gleason most of all because he seemed to be one of them.

"Jackie Gleason was a working man's comedian," said Evelyn Castorina, who said her firefighter father identified with Kramden's constant financial troubles. Gleason's variety show was the first television program she was allowed to stay up to watch, and she dreamed of joining the June Taylor dancers.

First in the line was Mary Lobell, who arrived three hours early.

"He really was the greatest, one of a kind, down to earth," she said. "He was able to make anybody laugh. It was just everything about him that portrayed the American people."

An invitation-only funeral Mass is scheduled Saturday at St. Mary's Cathedral in Miami. Gleason's family declined to release the guest list.

Although Gleason was divorced twice and married three times, violating Roman Catholic teachings, he is entitled to a burial within the faith because he was reconciled with the church, said the Rev. Gerard LaCerra, chancellor of the Miami archdiocese.

Arthur Burns dies; was Fed chairman

BALTIMORE (AP) — Arthur F. Burns, who wielded unmatched influence over the nation's economy as Federal Reserve Board chairman under three presidents, died Friday, a hospital spokesman said. He was 83.

Burns died about noon of coronary disease complicated by a stroke he suffered soon after triple bypass surgery in April, said Phil Kibak, spokesman at The Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Burns was appointed chairman of the nation's central bank in 1970 by Richard M. Nixon, remained under Gerald R. Ford and Jimmy Carter. Carter replaced Burns in 1978, with G. William Miller.

Burns was chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers from 1953 to 1956 under President Eisenhower. Ronald Reagan appointed him U.S. ambassador to West Germany in 1961, a job Burns held for four years.

Burns was a political pragmatist who could switch from being an advocate of tight money policies to doubling the money supply when there seemed scant need for it. Always, he was an implacable foe of inflation, but when he left office the country was on the verge of the worst inflation of its history.

Connecticut in Brief

O'Neill says Groppo made mistake

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill said Friday some action was possible in the wake of a report critical of tax Commissioner John G. Groppo's conduct, but he refused to say whether Groppo's job was in jeopardy.

"No one is above the law," O'Neill said. Groppo is not accused of breaking any law, but of violating his department's code of ethics and its regulations when he confronted a state senator with a confidential tax file.

"I was certainly not happy with the report," O'Neill said. "It pointed out some obvious mistakes that were made. As a result of this report, it's possible that some action will be taken."

Asked if the report on Groppo's confrontation with a state senator required some action, O'Neill said: "It very well may."

Asked, then, if Groppo's job was in jeopardy, the governor said: "Everybody's job is in jeopardy, including mine every time I run for re-election."

State files suit against auto dealer

HARTFORD — Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said Friday that the state had filed suit accusing a Torrington auto dealer of selling used cars as new.

The suit was filed against Torrington Toyota Inc. following an investigation by Lieberman's office and the Department of Motor Vehicles.

"We allege that employees of Torrington Toyota have driven new cars for periods of up to several months and then, after tampering with the odometer, sold those cars to consumers who believed there was little or no mileage on them," Lieberman said.

He said his office had been alerted by a Torrington Toyota customer who noticed signs of wear on a car sold as new.

Two face loansharking charges

NEW HAVEN — Two men were arrested on federal loansharking and conspiracy charges stemming from an investigation of loansharking by state police and the FBI, authorities said Friday.

Federal agents and state police detectives arrested Victor Angelo Galati, 33, of Newington late Thursday while state police arrested Frank Zimmitti, 45, of New Britain on Friday, according to Stanley Klein, special agent in charge of the FBI in Connecticut.

Both were ordered to appear before a federal magistrate in Hartford on charges of collection of extensions of credit by extortionate means and conspiracy, Klein said in a statement.

Conviction of the charges could bring maximum sentences of 20 years in prison and/or a fine of $10,000 or both, Klein said.

Glass sworn in as justice

HARTFORD — Robert D. Glass, the first black nominated to the Connecticut Supreme Court, was sworn in Friday, drawing a warm response to an emotional speech on the opportunities in America.

Gov. William A. O'Neill, who administered the oath to Glass and to a second nominee, Alfred V. Covello of West Hartford, called the moment "historic."

Glass, 64, of Waterbury, was named a Juvenile Court judge in 1967 and a Superior Court judge in 1978, while Covello, 54, was named in 1974 to the old Circuit Court bench, the forerunner of the Superior Court.

"Where else but in America could a black woman, herself almost illiterate and only a few generations from slavery, ever dare to dream that her child could some day occupy the high status in the community of being a judge?" said Glass.

Device may help patients breathe

HARTFORD — An experimental ventilating machine may provide an alternative for patients with severe respiratory ailments who have failed to respond to traditional treatment, according to the doctor and engineers who developed it.

Initial tests of the new ventilating machine generally have been successful, and the federal government has authorized wider trials of the system.

"I'm not going to say this is the answer to everybody's respiratory failure problems and it's going to cure every person. I don't have enough data to make that statement," said Dr. Eric Gluck of Hartford, a pulmonary specialist at Hartford Hospital who helped invent the machine.

Tension ruled Bridgeport court

Second knock by jurors brought the verdict

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Everyone thought the knock on the jury room door at 5:05 p.m. Friday just meant the jurors wanted to go home and resume deliberations next week.

But it didn't mean that — it meant the jury had decided that Michael B. Ross should be sentenced to death in the electric chair.

Members of all of the victim's families, lawyers, judges, politicians, reporters and others had spent the afternoon milling about the stuffy hallway in the old Superior Court building on Golden Hills.

That hallway had been a meeting place for the New London area families who drove about 170 miles roundtrip to the trial since it began on May 4.

But on Friday, the atmosphere was more tense. Family members smoked nervously, paced and talked quietly about today being "The Day."

Everyone wondered how long it would take to get a verdict. The press corps started a pool, with everyone picking a time they thought the verdict would come in and throwing in $1.

The families had become accustomed to this old Superior Court building — often referred to as "Kangaroo Court" — and knew enough to send someone out for coffee and refreshments. Construction in the building knocked out the air conditioning shortly after the trial began May 4, and the drinking fountains don't work. There is no cafeteria.

The jury began deliberations at 12:03 p.m. and broke for lunch for one hour at 1. Ross was given a lunch of a spam and cheese sandwich and a carton of warm milk in his holding cell.

The first knock on the jury door came at 3:25. Everyone wondered then if there was a verdict, because it only took them 87 minutes on June 5 to find Ross guilty of six counts of capital felony.

But, the jury had questions concerning the definition of mitigating factors and asked how they pertain to this case. They went back into the jury room about 5:50.

The families met again back in the hallway.

The second knock came at 5:05. Again the families, reporters and lawyers trooped in.

But this time it was different — dozens of other spectators, including politicians and judges crowded into the court room.

It took several minutes to read the verdict because the clerk asked and answered 10 questions pertaining to aggravating and mitigating factors in each of the three cases.

The jury stood, as did Ross and his attorneys, as the verdict was being read. A few jurors watched Ross closely. He stood quietly.

The only noise in the courtroom was a few muffled sobs from family members.

Someone whispered, "You can cut the tension with a knife." When the first case was read and the answer indicated Ross would be sentenced to death, Edwin Shelley, father of Leslie Shelley of Griswold, smiled and nodded.

Joan Slavinsky, one of the victim's mothers, closed her eyes and leaned on her husband.

After the verdict in all cases was read and the death sentence was called for, reporters ran for telephones and family members met for the last time in that hall.

This time they hugged each other and sobbed. Few of them spoke except in whispers.

One young woman looked at Mrs. Slavinsky tentatively, as if afraid to be happy about someone being sentenced to death.

Michael Ross described as 'living riddle'

By The Associated Press

Co-workers and friends of Michael B. Ross were stunned when the mild-mannered young man was charged with the murders of six young Connecticut women, but the portrait of a sadistic killer that emerged during his trial bore out the defense lawyer's description of Ross as a "living riddle."

Ross, 27, was condemned Friday to die for the slayings of four New London-area girls. The first man sentenced to death in Connecticut since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976. Ross is already serving a 120-year sentence for the killings of two Windham County women.

A tall, thin man with neat dark hair and glasses, Ross was the eldest of four children of Dan and Patricia Ross. He grew up on his family's egg farm in Brooklyn, joined Future Farmers of America at Killingly High School, and studied agriculture at Cornell University, where he joined a fraternity.

Ross' high school guidance counselor described him as a B student who was controlled in his actions and got along well with his peers.

A man who described himself as Ross' best friend in high school said in testimony that the defendant was a "nice guy" and well liked by others. "He was outspoken. He got along. He was bright," said Richard Lavigne of Willimantic.

Ross' supervisor at the Prudential Insurance Co., where Ross worked as a salesman before his arrest, said Ross was an above-average worker and above average in intelligence.

"I always said he would be a future vice president if he continued on with his record the way he had," said Max L. Kopko of Uncasville.

But the portrait of another kind of man emerged during the trial.

Testimony by friends, family and psychiatric experts in Bridgeport Superior Court portrayed Ross as a sick man whose drive to rape and kill was rooted in a tormented childhood.

Helen McClintock, a former worker at the Ross family egg farm, Eggs Inc., said Ross' mother was cruel to him and his father cold toward all his children. Mrs. Clintock said she was fond of Ross — who called her his "arrogant mom" — but suspected he had deep mental and emotional problems.

Dr. Walter Borden, a forensic psychiatrist, said Ross was beaten regularly by his father and traumatized by his mother, Patricia, who resented that her pregnancy with Michael compelled her to marry.

One of Ross' jobs on the family farm was to find weak or deformed chicks and strangle them, Borden said. The director of Johns Hopkins University's sexual disorders clinic said Ross has frequent fantasies about rape and murder.

The psychiatrist, Fred Berlin, said Ross suffers from a mental illness called sexual sadism in which "the individual is sexually turned on by thoughts or ideas of degrading, ... causing suffering."

The Connecticut murders were not Ross' only crimes.

After his arrest in Connecticut, he was charged with kidnapping and sexually assaulting a woman in Rolesville, N.C., in 1981, when Ross was working for an agricultural company in that state.

He pleaded guilty in 1981 to unlawful restraint after dragging a 16-year-old girl into the woods in LaSalle, Ohio, where he was on a business trip. Ross was accused of wrapping a belt around her neck and asking for money.

In 1982, while working for a poultry operation in Croton, Ohio, Ross was charged with assaulting an off-duty policeman in her home in Johnstown, Ohio. He pleaded guilty to an assault charge and served less than five months in jail.

Kopko, Ross' supervisor at Prudential, said he was shocked by news of Ross' arrest in 1984.

"Let me tell you this: I was so flabbergasted I could not believe it... I could never conceive of a man doing something like that, especially him because he was such a jolly person. Even to this day I can't believe it, almost," Kopko said.

Advocates of penalty praise death verdict

By The Associated Press

A jury's verdict Friday that Michael B. Ross should go to the electric chair for the murders of four young women evoked praise for the jurors' courage, criticism of Connecticut's death penalty statute and predictions Ross will never be executed.

"It's about time — God bless those jurors," said state Rep. Eugene A. Migliaro Jr., R-Wolcott, an outspoken advocate of the death penalty.

"He should get the hot seat," Migliaro said. "We've got to protect society."

State police Detective Michael Malchik, who arrested Ross on June 28, 1984, also praised the jury.

"I find it absolutely unacceptable to me as a policeman and a father that these girls can walk on Route 12 in Lisbon and end up raped and murdered or dumped in a swamp," Malchik said.

Edwin Shelley of Griswold, father of 14-year-old victim Leslie Shelley, said he had been convinced the jury would return a death sentence and predicted Ross will be executed, even if it takes 10 years to exhaust all his appeals.

Shelley took a leave of absence from his job as a U.S. Postal Service letter carrier and has attended nearly all the court proceedings in the case during the last three years.

Former Chief State's Attorney

Austin J. McGuigan, however, doubted the state Supreme Court, which will automatically review the case, will let the death sentence stand.

"Given the structure of the Connecticut statute, it will be very difficult to sustain the jury's finding," McGuigan said. "Clearly it is one of the most heinous set of crimes that one can conjure up, but the Connecticut statute is difficult to impose."

Connecticut law requires a death sentence in a capital felony case if a jury finds at least one aggravating factor and no mitigating factor. If even one mitigating factor is found, however, the defendant's life is spared.

Critics of the law say juries should be able to balance aggravating and mitigating factors and sentence a defendant to death if aggravating factors outweigh any mitigating factors.

"I never wanted the possibility (of a death penalty) to be easy," said State's Attorney C. Robert Satti Sr., who refused to plea bargain with Ross' attorneys and instead tirelessly pursued a death sentence for Ross.

"But I also said it shouldn't be almost impossible," Satti said. "It's unfortunate we have a situation where so many people are victims before the death penalty is imposed."

Of the verdict itself, Satti would say only: "I'm gratified for the families because I know what they've been through."

State unprepared for execution

Connecticut has anguished over death penalty

HARTFORD (AP) — The death sentence imposed on Michael B. Ross Friday exposes a state that has long been ill-at-ease and ill prepared to execute anyone.

The state's electric chair, known as "Old Sparky," has not been used since 1960. It has never been hooked up and tested since it was moved from the former state prison in Wethersfield to the state prison in Somers in 1962. And officials say the electrical system at Somers can't handle the power needed to make the chair function.

Even if the chair was functional, the state has no executioner.

The chair's condition is a result of the debate in Connecticut over the death penalty. While other states, notably Florida, Texas and Louisiana, have carried out numerous executions since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976, Connecticut as late as this spring flirted with abolishing capital punishment.

The Judiciary Committee in April approved a bill to abolish the death penalty, but the measure was killed in the House.

"I firmly believe that to act out in the same manner as an offender, has debases us and brutalizes us and we become no better than them," Rep. Richard D. Tulisano, D-Rocky Hill, co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee and sponsor of the bill, said when his committee adopted the measure.

Tulisano and others also argued that the judicial system is too imperfect to have the power to end a person's life.

"When you're dealing with the ultimate punishment, there is no coming back," Tulisano said.

Rep. William L. Wollenberg, R-Farmington, ranking Republican member of the Judiciary Committee, argued during the committee debate that the death penalty is the only punishment that fits especially heinous crimes. He warned that abolishing the death penalty would provoke the outrage of crime victims, especially relatives of murder victims.

"If you take away the death penalty, I think you're taking away some deterrent," Wollenberg said. "You're certainly taking away the retribution some of your constituents are looking for."

Connecticut is one of 37 states with a death penalty.

Gov. William A. O'Neill, who has supported the death penalty, had no comment on the Ross case Friday.

Wollenberg said he was certain it had been "a wrenching experience" for the jury.

"This is the system in action... the way we do it in America," he said. "Now we'll have to see what happens on appeal."

Connecticut first used an electric chair in 1937. Murderers were hanged prior to that, the last hanging in 1936. The state has executed 73, all men, since 1894. No one has been put to death in the state since Joseph "Mad Dog" Taborsky was executed in 1960 for the murders of seven people.

Three men were on death row at Somers awaiting execution when the U.S. Supreme Court found the death penalty unconstitutional in June 1972. The court, in a 5-4 decision, said the death penalty constitutes "cruel and unusual punishment" in violation of the 8th Amendment. But the high court left open the option for state legislatures to pass capital punishment laws that would meet certain conditions.

Death row was eliminated at Somers and the three men there were integrated into the prison's general population.

U.S./World in Brief

GOP aims for super win

NEW ORLEANS — Republican National Committee Chairman Frank J. Fahrenkopf Jr. on Friday invited conservative Southern Democrats to join the Grand Old Party, saying, "We want your voice in selecting our leaders" in 1988.

The GOP chief kicked off the official effort to turn Super Tuesday 1988 into a historic Republican Party-building victory in the South and dash the hopes of Southern Democratic leaders to rebuild their clout within their own party.

"With the week of Super Tuesday primaries next year, we Republicans invite disillusioned Democrats to vote in our primary, to help us choose the Republican nominee and the next president of the United States of America," Fahrenkopf said. "We say to them: We want you to volunteer in our primaries. We want your voice in selecting our leaders... Unlike the Democrats, our party is an open house."

Regulations eased in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — President P.W. Botha on Friday relaxed some of the stringent regulations under which emergency detainees are held, and a government official expressed willingness to negotiate with jailed black leaders who have not renounced violence.

The new regulations mandate that emergency detainees may not be held in a police lockup for more than 14 days, after which they must be released or sent to a regular prison.

In addition, the new measures allow emergency detainees to correspond and study, and provide for compulsory medical examinations after a detainee's arrest and before the person is released.

Detainees can be held indefinitely without charge under the government's state of emergency, which was declared June 12, 1986 in an attempt to end apartheid-related unrest.

Crash kills 50 in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines — A Philippine Airlines plane crashed into a fog-shrouded mountain and burst into flames Friday about nine miles from its destination in northern Luzon, killing all 50 people aboard.

U.S. Embassy spokeswoman Mary Carlin said at least one American and possibly as many as 10 were among the 46 passengers on the twin-engine HS-748 turboprop. Airline officials said most of the others were Filipinos.

Government television said nine passengers were Americans of Filipino descent.

Jewish leaders mad at comments

DALLAS — Jewish leaders expressed dismay at a renewed assertion by a former president of the Southern Baptist Convention that Jews cannot find salvation without Jesus.

The Rev. Bailey Smith's comments to 2,000 cheering Southern Baptist evangelists last week in St. Louis has renewed a controversy begun in 1980, when Smith stated that "God doesn't hear the prayers of a Jew."

The latest comments were reported in Friday editions of the Dallas Times Herald. The newspaper, which obtained a taped transcript of the speech, said the evangelist's comments were made during the conference was not in session.

"I'm not against the Jewish people," Smith said June 17 at a Southern Baptist conference. "But unless they repent and get born again, they don't have a prayer."

Smith was president of the Southern Baptist Convention in 1980.

"I'm very upset, I'm furious," the Rabbi James Rudin, national interreligious director of the American Jewish Committee, told the Times Herald.

Jackson goes to fund-raising event

DES MOINES, Iowa — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, determined to move toward the Democratic Party mainstream, was welcomed by Iowa Democrats on Friday to the kind of expensive fund-raising event he would have shunned four years ago.

"We felt it was time to offer Jesse Jackson an event," said Phil Roeder, a spokesman for the Iowa Democratic Party. "There is a better relationship this time."

Neighbor says Kemp can't manage trees, much less presidency

HAMBURG, N.Y. (AP) — An elderberry tree in Jack Kemp's back yard is sprouting a little trouble with a neighbor, but the congressman's staff says they'll go out on a limb to take care of it.

Theresa Schroer says Kemp has paid no heed to complaints that the huge tree is rotten and could collapse.

"You really have to think of the neighborhood kids. What kind of an impression does that leave about who runs for president?" said Schroer, whose rented home is next door to a house Kemp owns in this Buffalo suburb.

Schroer said that since she moved here from Missouri in January, she has tried through the Republican congressman's office to have the giant elderberry tree removed.

"He probably doesn't even know that the tree is a problem. Every problem you have (with the property) you have to go through his office," said Schroer.

"I wouldn't vote for him," Schroer said laughing. "How can he run the country? He can't even get that tree out of the back yard."

Kemp has announced that he is actively seeking the Republican presidential nomination.

Told of Schroer's complaints, made earlier to a reporter for the Tampa Tribune, a Kemp spokeswoman said a contractor had been contacted two weeks ago and the tree would come down Friday, but there was soaking rain in the area during the morning and the tree still stood at early afternoon.

"We wanted to get to the root of this problem, so we went out on a limb to take care of it right away," said Marci Robinson, Kemp's deputy press secretary.

The tree, which is at least 50 feet high, spreads 75 feet wide, from one side of Kemp's property to the other.

A tree in the backyard of presidential candidate Jack Kemp's house in Hamburg, N.Y., isn't popular with his neighbor.

Reagan's docs remove polyps

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's doctors discovered and removed two "benign-appearing polyps" Friday during a routine exam to check for a recurrence of colon cancer, the White House announced.

"The president continues to be in excellent health," said a statement released by Reagan's physician, Col. John Hutton, after the test, which was conducted in the White House medical office.

Since his July 1985 cancer surgery, Reagan has had three colonoscopy checkups and in each, doctors discovered and removed small polyps.

Hutton said the polyps, which are small fleshy growths that often are found in the intestines of older persons, would be analyzed and the results made available on Monday.

Shortly after the exam, the 76-year-old president and his wife, Nancy, left the White House to spend the weekend at Camp David.

Reagan, dressed in a plaid cowboy shirt and green slacks, walked slowly and deliberately across the lawn to the waiting helicopter. When reporters asked how he felt, Mrs. Reagan gave reporters a thumbs-up, the presidential hand signal. He then took a tiny skip for the benefit of the cameras.

Baker said Reagan confided to him after the test, "This is a hell of a way to start the weekend."

In addition to being checked for cancer, Reagan also received a routine prostate examination "and was found to be entirely normal," Hutton's statement said. The president had undergone surgery for prostate discomfort last January.

White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker Jr., told reporters he had spoken with Reagan's doctors and they had not been surprised to find the intestinal growths.

"It had been anticipated, based on the president's previous medical history and the fact of the matter is, he grows polyps," Baker said.

The chief of staff said the doctors "had fully expected to find these polyps and fully expect to find them benign."

Baker said the president was in "as good as spirits as he could be" after the procedure, which can be painful.

Baker said Reagan confided to him after the test, "This is a hell of a way to start the weekend."

In addition to being checked for cancer, Reagan also received a routine prostate examination "and was found to be entirely normal," Hutton's statement said. The president had undergone surgery for prostate discomfort last January.

White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker Jr., told reporters he had spoken with Reagan's doctors and they had not been surprised to find the intestinal growths.

Delta jet has a close encounter

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The National Weather Service doubts it was theirs and the Defense Department insists it wasn't theirs. About the only thing the Federal Aviation Administration can say about the object that encountered a Delta Air Lines jet at 29,500 feet is that no one is likely to find it.

The pilot of Delta Flight 1088, en route from Pittsburgh to Atlanta, told investigators an object that appeared to be a missile seemed headed straight for his Boeing 737 on Thursday morning before passing to the side and slightly below.

"The pilot described it as a rocket or a missile about 4 feet long, with findings that we each about a foot or a foot and a half in height," said Delta spokesman Bill Berry. "It went so fast that I all he saw. He didn't see it long enough to recognize any markings."

"He saw it. It was there. It was gone."

FAA said Friday it will probably never know what had the close encounter with the jet, carrying 60 people, at 29,500 feet 31 miles northeast of Charleston.

"It may have been a blimp-shaped helium balloon," said Kathleen Bergen, a spokesman for the FAA's regional headquarters in New York. "It's unlikely we'll ever find it, for a lot of reasons."

For one reason, the prospect of finding a 4-foot-long object somewhere in the hills and woods of West Virginia isn't good.

"We'll never know," Bergen said.

Inspector Richard Madden of the Charleston FAA office said he had no one searching for the object because no one knows what to look for.

The pilot, whose name was not released, told investigators the object was moving north at high speed. Bergen said the pilot reported seeing no exhaust.

U.S./World in Brief

Battleship heads to Mideast

WASHINGTON — The Navy has been ordered to send the battleship Missouri to the Middle East to ensure the United States can retaliate against Iran if it attacks U.S. flag vessels in the Persian Gulf, Pentagon officials said Friday.

Disclosing new details of the Pentagon's planning for escort operations for Kuwaiti oil tankers, the officials said the battleship and three smaller warships would sail from California ports on July 25 or 26.

The ships will arrive in the region by mid to late August, but the Missouri will not be used to escort the Kuwaiti oil tankers, said the officials, who agreed to discuss the matter only if not identified.

Sending envoy is 'one-time step'

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's decision to send a special envoy to Syria reverses his ban on high-level visits to Damascus, but the State Department said Friday "it's a one-time step."

The decision overrode reservations voiced by some U.S. anti-terrorism experts, administration sources said.

The envoy, still to be named although speculation centered on U.N. Ambassador Vernon Walters, will meet with Syrian President Hafez Assad on prospects for Arab-Israeli peace talks and other issues, said Charles E. Redman, the State Department spokesman.

Three join Soviet Politburo

MOSCOW — The Communist Party leadership named three advisers in Mikhail S. Gorbachev's economic reform campaign to the ruling Politburo Friday and approved a draft law that loosens the grip of central planners on industry.

It gave a qualified endorsement to measures needed to implement the new law.

The appointments announced at the end of a two-day meeting of the party's Central Committee bring the Politburo membership to 14, including eight chosen since Gorbachev assumed power in March 1985.

Those elevated at the committee's semiannual plenum were Propaganda Secretary Alexander N. Yakovlev, Economics Secretary Nikolai N. Slyunov and Agriculture Secretary Viktor P. Nikonov.

Property owners win again

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, in a second major victory for land developers and owners this month, ruled Friday that government regulators have limited power to grant public access to private property.

The 5-4 decision came as the court concluded its 1986-87 term with a flurry of activity overshadowed by the announcement of the retirement of Justice Lewis F. Powell.

As he has in many key rulings throughout his 15 years on the court, Powell provided a pivotal vote in the property rights case.

He joined the majority in overturning a decision by California officials that had allowed the public to walk along beachfront property between the Pacific Ocean and a couple's home without compensating the home owners.

Libyan gunmen kill man in Rome

ROME — Two Libyans cornered a man they reportedly called "an enemy of the people" and shot him to death Friday in a busy square about 300 feet from the home of Italy's president, police said. The two were arrested a short time later.

The two men told police they belonged to Libyan leader Col. Muammar Gadhafi's Revolutionary Committees and that their victim, who was carrying an Algerian passport, was a Libyan dissident, said Rome police spokesman Riccardo Infelisi.

The men described their victim as "an enemy of the people," and said they didn't know him personally, according to the news agency AGI.

The news agency ANSA quoted unidentified police sources as saying they believed the victim was a member of the Libyan opposition who had been living in Italy.

Powell retirement gives Reagan chance to change court balance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, who played a pivotal role in shaping American law for 15 years as a swing vote in some of the court's most controversial cases, retired Friday.

Powell, who will be 80 on Sept. 19 and has suffered from prostate cancer, said he was leaving the bench "with a great deal of sadness."

His departure will give President Reagan an opportunity to change significantly the court's ideological balance, but Powell said that did not play a part in his decision.

Powell's retirement, announced from the bench by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist just before the court concluded its 1986-87 term, surprised White House officials.

Howard Baker, the White House chief of staff, learned of Powell's decision in a morning telephone call from Rehnquist. He immediately told Reagan.

"The president acknowledged it, expressed... mild surprise, not great surprise. He had no forewarning," Baker told a reporter.

Reagan said in a statement that he considered naming Powell's successor "one of the most significant duties of my office."

"I believe that the court should enter the next term at full strength, and so I will soon be submitting to the Senate my nomination for Justice Powell's successor," Reagan said.

The nomination must be confirmed by the Democratic-controlled Senate. The court's summer recess will end on the first Monday in October, when its 1987-88 term is to begin.

Speculation about potential nominees most often has centered on Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and two federal appeals court judges — Robert H. Bork in Washington and Richard Posner in Chicago.

Baker himself has been mentioned by some as a potential nominee.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. Paul Simon,

Justice Lewis F. Powell conducts a news conference at the Supreme Court Friday after announcing his retirement from the bench.

D-III., a member of the Judiciary Committee, said, "The Senate will look especially closely at the next nomination because of who Lewis Powell is and the role he has played in building coalitions."

Powell's departure could carry dramatic effects on one of the most politically and morally divisive issues confronting the court: abortion.

In its latest major ruling on abortion, which was legalized by the court's landmark 1973 ruling, the court split 5-4 last June as it struck down Pennsylvania regulations that would have made abortions more difficult to obtain.

Powell voted with the majority in that case, as he had in most "pro-choice" rulings since 1973.

Dissenting from the 1986 decision were Rehnquist, former Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Burger since has been replaced by Justice Antonin Scalia, who before joining the court was critical of the 1973 ruling.

The court is expected to decide next year whether states may require some girls under 18 who seek abortions to wait 24 hours to have the operation after telling their parents or a judge about their decision.

The case may have some procedural flaws, but conceivably could serve as a test case for a newly constructed court's views on abortion.

"Justice Powell was the pivotal vote," said Kate Micheiman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

"The next appointee will determine the future health and well-being of American women and their families."

Evangelist claims to raise dead

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Evangelist Oral Roberts, whose plea for $8 million to save his life focused attention on his ministry earlier this year, said this week he has raised the dead and will return after his own death to rule alongside Jesus Christ.

Roberts' comments, made to about 5,000 people at the closing session of the three-day Charismatic Bible Ministries Conference on Thursday, were broadcast nationally Friday on his son's "Richard Roberts Live" program.

Richard Roberts acknowledged his father's statements were sure to arouse controversy. He held up a newspaper with a headline about Oral Roberts' claims.

"The good news is, they're printing the truth," Richard Roberts said. "I'm so glad the newspapers are beginning to get the story right... It has stirred up some things in America."

The elder Roberts, whose 46-year ministry originated with tent revivals in which the sick came to be healed, told his fellow ministers Thursday he also has brought the dead back to life.

"All of us in the ministry could talk about that — of certain dead ones raised, died right while I was preaching," Roberts said. "I had to stop and go back in the crowd and raise the dead person so I could go ahead with the service."

"That did increase my altar call (audience response) that night," Roberts said, drawing laughter from the crowd at Oral Roberts University's Mabee Center.

On his program Friday, Richard Roberts said he recalled one instance in his boyhood when he said a dead child was brought back to life by his father.

"Right in the middle of my dad's sermon, a woman came running up to the platform with her baby in her arms screaming 'My baby has just died. My baby has just died,'" Richard Roberts said.

"The child had died during the service. My dad had to stop in the middle of his sermon and lay hands on that child. And that child came back to life again."

"There are probably dozens and dozens of documented instances of people who have been raised from the dead," Richard Roberts said after he and guests on the program recounted stories about the dead being revived.

Richard Roberts also said his father's promise to return to earth after his own death should be no surprise. He said "all born-again Christians" should expect to return to earth with the anticipated second coming of Jesus Christ spoken of in the Bible.

Market analysts hope for profit-report boost

By Chet Currier
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Many Wall Street analysts are counting on corporate earnings reports for the second quarter to set a positive tone for the stock market over the next several weeks.

The first three months of 1987 produced some pleasant surprises in profit gains, which were welcomed enthusiastically by investors after a generally sluggish showing over the past couple of years.

Market-watchers are looking for more upbeat news in the figures that will be reported starting in early July.

"The United States and world economies continue to expand, albeit in a hesitating manner and with growing risks to sustained expansion," said Allen Sinai, economist at Shearson Lehman Brothers in a recent commentary on the financial outlook. "One of the bright spots so far is the performance of corporate profits."

"The Street expects a good second quarter for industrial companies," said Melissa Brown, analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities.

There are several reasons cited for this kind of optimism. For one thing, many observers say, the widespread restructuring and cost-cutting measures undertaken by many companies in recent years has begun to pay off.

For another, despite declines in the unemployment rate, payroll costs have shown few signs of accelerating.

The decline of the dollar in foreign exchange, along with whatever problems it has posed, also works to benefit the bottom lines of companies that do a significant amount of business overseas.

The second-quarter picture is by no means uniform. Results of most money-center banks, for example, will be riddled by the effects of recent increases in reserves against bad loans.

Some prominent securities-industry firms also have served notice that they will have depressed earnings or even losses as a result of trading mistakes in the treacherous bond market of April and early May.

Nevertheless, analysts are looking for good things from several areas of the economy that had a bad time of it in the mid-1980s. In particular, Prudential-Bache mentions basic industries such as steel, chemicals and paper containers, and natural-resources business such as aluminum and other metals.

In the past week, the stock market chalked up its fifth consecutive weekly gain, with the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rising 16.01 to 2,436.00.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index added 14 to 173.67, while the market value index at the American Stock Exchange was down 3.21 to 327.00.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 170.66 million shares a day, against 177.70 million the week before.

If the bulls on corporate profits are correct, the recent improvement will mark the start of a trend.

In their battle to make money, stock market investors try to peer as far as possible into the future to determine earnings prospects.

Dayton Hudson is latest in takeover soap opera

By Joyce M. Rosenboro
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — If you consider all the wrangling over corporate takeover bids in this country to be part of a giant soap opera, then the events of the past week surrounding Dayton Hudson Corp. had to be one of the most bizarre plot twists so far.

No one knew it at first, but the $70-per-share offer that appeared on the Dow Jones News Service wire Tuesday was a phony.

Dow Jones, a wire service closely watched by the financial community, was notified of the offer by P. David Herrlinger, a stock broker with Capital Management Corp. in Cincinnati. Herrlinger said the offer was being made by Stone Inc., which he described as a private investment firm.

Stock in Dayton Hudson, one of the nation's largest general retailers, shot up on several exchanges in response to the news, but after several hours it was learned that the offer was false and millions of dollars were lost as the price of the shares dropped back.

Herrlinger did not say why he made the false offer, although he told a Cincinnati television station he did not regret doing it.

BY THE END of the week, Herrlinger's lawyer said the broker had been involuntarily committed to a psychiatric facility. Herrlinger also was under investigation by law enforcement authorities and being sued by investors.

Dayton Hudson was an easy target for reports — real or false — about a takeover bid. Dart Group Corp., a Landover, Md.-based retail group, recently acquired a substantial stake in the company.

The Herrlinger story coincidentally was being played out as the Minnesota Legislature met in a special session — requested by Dayton Hudson — to consider a bill designed to thwart takeovers.

The bill, passed late Thursday, would prohibit an investor taking control of a firm in a hostile takeover from selling any of the target company's assets for five years. That was expected to make lenders reluctant to finance such takeovers, which would be paid off by the sale of assets.

The bill also would allow a company's board of directors in considering a takeover bid to take into account the interests of employees, customers, suppliers, the community and society, as well as the interests of stockholders.

The bill is similar to other anti-takeover measures in other states. In April, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld an Indiana anti-takeover law, paving the way for other states to enact their own statutes.

AND CONGRESS ALSO continues to work on anti-takeover legislation. This past week, the Senate Banking Committee heard testimony about a bill that would require corporate raiders to publicly disclose their holdings and intentions within a day of acquiring 3 percent of a company.

Under current law, they have 10 days after acquiring 5 percent, and critics say that tips the scales in favor of the raider.

The bill was opposed by witnesses from the investment banking and securities industries.

Also pending before the Senate is a bill that would give antitrust enforcers more information and more time to analyze large mergers and hostile takeover bids.

While the Dayton Hudson scare was a brief one, a longer takeover saga came to an end as a group led by Morgan Stanley Group Inc. acquired control of Burlington Industries, ending the hostile takeover attempt by New York financier Asber Edelman and Montreal-based Dominion Textile, Inc.

The Morgan Stanley group announced it had acquired 75 percent of Burlington's outstanding shares for which it offered $78 a share.

The Edelman-Dominion group's offer had gone as high as $77 a share.

THESE WERE OTHER merger and takeover developments this past week.

Advertising giant JWT Group Inc. agreed to merge with the British marketing firm WPP Group PLC for $566 million.

Under the agreement, WPP would offer $65.50 a share in cash for all of JWT's outstanding common stock. The offer was $5 more a share than the amount WPP Group had previously proposed to pay for JWT.

New York-based JWT owns the nation's fourth-biggest advertising concern, J. Walter Thompson Co.

Also, A.H. Robins Co. said it was considering a merger proposal from Rorer Group Inc., the second merger offer the pharmaceutical company has made for Robins this year. Robins declined to disclose the terms of the offer.

IN OTHER BUSINESS developments this past week:

- Allegis Corp. said it is moving promptly to sell all of its non-airline businesses. The travel conglomerate said it had rejected employee efforts to buy its United Airlines.
- Chrysler Motors and two senior executives were indicted on charges they sold the public as new more than 60,000 vehicles that had been driven by company managers with the odometers disconnected.
- Continental Illinois Corp. became the latest bank to add it to its reserve for losses that might arise from loans to troubled Third World countries. Continental Illinois is adding $500 million to its reserve and expects a second-quarter loss of about $470 million as a result.
- Congress gave final approval to the $1 trillion fiscal 1988 budget. President Reagan, who began a series of trips to marshal public support for his stand in the budget battle, has vowed to veto any new laws that result from the budget, which is a guideline for Congress and does not require his signature.
- The Labor Department reported a 0.3 percent rise in its Consumer Price Index for May. Lower energy prices offset a jump in food costs as inflation grew at a 4 percent annual rate. The government also reported that a slump in demand for military hardware helped fuel a 0.1 percent decline in new orders for durable goods last month.
- Sales of existing homes climbed 5.1 percent in May to an annual rate of 3.74 million units. The National Association of Realtors attributed the increase to a jump in mortgage rates that triggered a rush by home buyers trying to beat further rate hikes.
- The government said the United States owed the rest of the world $253.6 billion at the end of 1986, more than double the previous year's total.
- House and Senate negotiators voted to limit the time banks can hold deposited checks without crediting them to the depositor's account.
- Car sales by domestic automakers fell 11.3 percent in mid-June from a year ago, but Ford Motor Co. and Japanese companies that build cars in the United States reported their sales were up.

Currency change 'is coming'

QUESTION: Is it true that the U.S. government will change the physical characteristics of its currency? I have heard this will be done to prevent counterfeiting and to remove money from the underground economy.

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

ANSWER: It's true for one of the reasons you mention — to deter counterfeiting. It will not, however, remove money from either the underground or legitimate economies.

The Treasury Department announced more than a year ago that changes will be made in Federal Reserve notes — the folding money we all use. More recently, the treasury said introduction of the new currency has been delayed until 1990 at the earliest.

A polyester "security" thread will be imbedded in the currency paper. It will run from top to bottom through a clear narrow field and will be visible to the human eye when held up to a light source. Each denomination will have an identifiable printed pattern on the thread.

Also, the words "United States of America" will appear repeatedly in microprinting — very small type — around the portrait on the face of each note.

These changes aim to foil counterfeiting through the use of advanced copying machines that permit high resolution color reproduction. The ready availability of those copiers has increased counterfeiting.

High-tech color copiers cannot reproduce the pattern on the new currency's thread and very few can accurately reproduce the microprinting.

It's expected the changes will greatly curb counterfeiting of U.S. currency. However, it would be naive to say that all counterfeiting will end.

The new currency will circulate, side by side, with existing currency. Old currency gradually will be removed from circulation in the normal course of processing by Federal Reserve Banks. That could take an additional 20 years or longer.

The only way to remove money from the underground economy would be by calling in all old currency, as has been proposed by some people. The Treasury Department asserts it has no such plans.

For reasons far too numerous and complicated to be spelled out in this space, a currency recall would have a disastrously upsetting effect on the nation's entire economy.

QUESTION: You have assured your readers there is no danger of losing any money in deposit covered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. at a bank or by the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. at S&L. But you say that coverage is limited to $100,000 per depositor.

My husband has close to $100,000 in a rollover individual retirement account and $50,000 in other certificates of deposit, all at the same bank.

I asked the bank teller if we should change the CDs to my name or to my name and my husband's name. She said it's OK the way things are. Is the teller correct?

ANSWER: Yes. Don't fret. Your husband's IRA and CDs have full federal deposit insurance coverage.

IRAs are covered separately from other accounts. The bank is trustee for your husband's IRA. That puts the IRA in what technically is known as a "different right or capacity."

P&W order could top $430 million

EAST HARTFORD (AP) — Korean Air has ordered 36 of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's new PW4000 jet engines to power three types of wide-body aircraft in a deal that could be worth more than $430 million, the enginemaker said Friday.

As part of the agreement, the airline also took options on 42 more of the high-thrust powerplants for its new Boeing 747-400s, McDonnell-Douglas MD-11s and Airbus Industrie A300-600s. Pratt & Whitney said in a statement.

"If Korean Air exercises all of the options, the order will be worth more than $430 million," said more than $430 million," said Lawrence Clarkson, president of Pratt & Whitney's commercial products division.

He said the order is one of the largest this year in the industry.

Korean Air has ordered three of the Boeing aircraft and taken options on three more, four of the MD-11s with options on four others, and three of the Airbus planes with five options. It could begin taking delivery of the aircraft as early as 1988.

Pratt & Whitney, a subsidiary of United Technologies Corp. of Hartford, beat out GE for the order by Korean, the seventh airline to order the PW4000.

The engine is due to enter commercial operation this summer on Airbus Industrie's A310-300 with Pan American World Airways and Singapore Airlines.

Firm to market protein derivative

CINCINNATI (AP) — Richardson-Vicks Inc. says it has entered an agreement to use and sell a substance derived from a human protein that is employed to prevent and treat respiratory viral infections, including colds.

Richardson-Vicks said the substance, which bears the trade name Betaseron, is a genetically engineered derivative of human interferon beta, a protein produced by the body's immune system to fight diseases and infections. Research has indicated the substance is a potent agent for combating viruses.

Richardson-Vicks, based in Wilton, Conn., is a worldwide producer and seller of consumer care products. It is a subsidiary of Procter & Gamble Co., the Cincinnati-based consumer products company.

Richardson-Vicks said it entered into the Betaseron licensing agreement with Tritus, a general partnership of Triton Biosciences Inc. and Cetus Corp. The agreement grants Richardson-Vicks a worldwide, semi-exclusive license to patent rights and technology related to the use of Betaseron against the common cold, officials said Friday.

Triton Biosciences Inc. is a wholly owned subsidiary of Shell

Oil Co. based in Alameda, Calif. Triton develops, makes and sells diagnostic and pharmaceutical substances for treating cancer and other diseases.

Town GOP should listen to Coventry

Members of Manchester's Republican Town Committee who are considering stricter rules on attendance would do well to heed what happened in Coventry Wednesday night.

Gregg Batterson, Coventry's outgoing GOP leader, didn't exactly end his last night as town chairman on a harmonious note.

That's because several angry town committee members showed up to protest the expulsion of several prominent members of the town committee, including Town Manager Harold Hodge, longtime Coventry Institution Leonard Giglio, and Board of Education member Richard Frye.

It seems that the Coventry GOP grappled with the poor attendance issue last year, and amended its bylaws to require that members attend at least four out of six meetings a year. Hodge, Giglio and Frye were kicked off the committee for failing to show up at enough meetings.

Tempers got short, a shouting match erupted, and, at one point, one of the members angrily left the room.

Not, however, before Batterson said something that Manchester's GOP rules committee might well consider:

"These bylaws were discussed and agreed on at two separate meetings last year. Many of the people here endorsed them... but when the emotional impact of those changes take effect, you want to rescind."

It's all very well to tighten up on attendance requirements, as the Manchester GOP is considering. But, unless the town committee is willing to live by its rules, some very-stepped-on toes are almost certain to result.

The Coventry GOP, by the way, wasn't willing to live by its rules.

One of the first acts of Coventry's newly elected GOP chairman, Michael Cleary, was to lead a vote to reinstate the expelled members.

Let's help property owners

By Vincent Carroll

Thank the Supreme Court for small favors. They're very likely to be the only ones you'll get.

That's because the court seems to content itself with pecking at the edge of issues. Its recent decision protecting property owners from unjust regulation is simply one more proof of the pattern — although it was greeted, depending on the source, with lavish praise or regret.

Actually, the case involved such an extreme instance of governmental "taking" of property that it is a wonder even three justices would dissent.

Judge for yourself: A church in Glendale, Calif., tried to reopen a recreational complex after a flood, but was prevented by a new drainage ordinance. So, the church sued for compensation, pointing out it had lost all use of its property.

If the county had simply seized the entire 21 acres, the effect on the church could hardly have been worse.

Not exactly a subtle case, right? In fact, the shower of publicity it received only underlines the more typical impotence of citizens these days before official edicts reducing the value of their property.

Still, perhaps we should be grateful whenever the court does manage to notice the Fifth Amendment's requirement of "just compensation" for government seizures. This decision may not have been bold, but at least it reminds us that constitutional protections extend beyond personal liberties such as freedom of religion and of speech.

Most people forget the extent to which the Constitution emphasizes economic rights, too. Yet this amnesia is probably natural, since courts have often shared it during the past few decades.

Consider the fate of the Fourteenth Amendment, which says "No state shall... deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law." As Harvard professor Stephen Macedo has written, this amendment clearly means to limit "the ways in which the state can interfere with private relations."

Yet, Macedo notes: "The court has simply shifted its inquiries away from the economic sphere. When it comes to state economic regulation, the court requires nothing more than the merest 'rationality' to justify restrictions on individual liberty."

The fault doesn't lie with "liberal" jurisprudence, either. Conservative judges defer regularly to laws eroding property rights, too. That's one reason Richard Epstein's book, "Takings: Private Property and the Power of Eminent Domain," created a stir when it was published a couple of years ago. With forbidding logic, this University of Chicago law professor flattened the legal consensus.

Epstein favors a principled activism for courts, one that entrenches individual rights against government in all spheres — including the economic.

The sad alternative submits personal treasure to lawmaker whim, a lesson bitterly learned by the people of a Detroit neighborhood a few years ago. They resisted a plan to condemn and raze their homes so that General Motors could build a new plant, yet the Michigan Supreme Court refused to intervene on their behalf.

Never mind that both state and federal constitutions restrict seizure by eminent domain to a "public use," and that GM is hardly a unit of government. The court said a "public benefit" was reason enough to proceed.

By that standard, of course, the local city council could declare your downstairs bathroom a public latrine and invite in the Fourth of July parade.

All right, let's be fair: Even the Supreme Court would probably balk at that one.

Unlimited credit keeps Uncle Sam in debt

WASHINGTON — Many Americans are dangerously in debt, lured toward the rocks of bankruptcy by the siren song of easy credit. But they're pliers compared to the federal government, which has the easiest credit of all: an endless supply of blank checks backed by the taxpayers.

The national debt stood at $2.27 trillion on May 1, and this year's budget deficit is headed toward $200 billion. If something isn't done, the national debt by 1990 will be only a couple of billion dollars shy of $3 trillion — a literally unimaginable sum.

Yet like individuals who are compulsive spendthrifts, the federal government can't seem to curb its extravagant habits. Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., has denounced congressional budgets, including the Senate's first budget resolution for fiscal 1988 as "bookkeeping gimmicks and legislative gimcrackery." Here are just a few of the items that raised Armstrong's hackles:

- The Interior Department has failed to collect $3 billion in oil and gas royalties owed for leases of government land since 1979.
- The State Department is building 10 new residences for American diplomats in Australia. Cost: $650,000 each.
- A new $33 million embassy is under construction in Belize, a tiny Caribbean country whose gross national product is only $143 million.

- The State Department spends $11,000 a month rent for its U.N. ambassador's apartment in New York City.

- Federal agencies spent more than $336 million on public relations in 1985. An additional $99 million was spent on "congressional relations" — even though government agencies are forbidden by law to lobby members of Congress.

- One-third of all the trips made in chauffeur-driven government cars in 1984 were made by Environmental Protection Agency poobahs going to and from lunch. The average ride cost the taxpayers $45; EPA officials rejected a suggestion that they take taxis (which would have averaged $5 a trip).

- The National Institutes of Health awarded grants to study such trivia as food-foraging habits of a Paraguayan Indian tribe, late marriage in a Spanish village, children's reaction to tonsillectomies and the political attitudes of a small private college's women graduates.

Most Americans have only a foggy notion of the way Congress and the Reagan administration have reordered the government's spending priorities in the last few years. A House Appropriations Committee document shows the direction of public spending since 1980. For example:

- Military spending will have increased by two-thirds in the 12 years ending in 1992.

- Payments to individuals, like Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid, will have increased one-third in the same period.

- All other domestic spending by the federal government will have decreased by 39.3 percent.

- Interest on the national debt will have grown 41.9 percent between 1980 and 1992.

Sincere flattery

The Japanese are famous — or infamous — for imitating American industrial techniques and producing cheaper goods of equal or better quality. Now the White House is seriously considering imitating Japan's unique industrial development technique in hopes of overcoming the Japanese lead in superconductors. The technique in question is the close cooperation of industry, government and the academic community to develop new products.

Rep. Don Ritter, R-Pa., has urged the Reagan administration to set up a task force of government, business and academic researchers to coordinate superconductor development. Superconductors, which transmit a hundred times more electric current than ordinary conductors, will transform the manufacture of computers, medical instruments and electronic generators.

Interestingly enough, the greatest resistance to the unified approach has come from U.S. companies that are confident they can do it on their own. Westinghouse, IBM and AT&T are all scurrying to develop their own superconductors, and they don't want any interference from the government.

Whispering campaign

North Korea's clandestine propaganda machine is cranking up again. During the Korean War, it accused the United States of conducting germ warfare. Now, 37 years later, the North Koreans have developed a variation on this theme. They're quickly spreading word to Western and Soviet Bloc diplomats that American servicemen in South Korea have spread AIDS to the country's 400,000 prostitutes. (Quite a feat, considering there are only 40,000 GIs in the country.)

The point of this whispering campaign is to conjure up fears about 1988 Olympics scheduled to be held in Seoul. Participating athletes will be in danger of contracting AIDS from South Korean hookers, Pyongyang's propagandists explain. The solution, of course, would be to switch to the games to the presumably AIDS-free North Korean capital.

Goetz is no hero, no villain

By Chuck Stone

Only one man made any sense out of the turmoil following the acquittal of Bernhard Goetz on murder charges.

"People are looking for a hero or they're looking for a villain, and neither... is the truth," Goetz had said two years ago with a wisdom that seemed to anticipate the anguished polemics that ensued after his exoneration.

I think my own family typified the division of opinion over whether this bespectacled beanstalk of a New York City engineer was justified in shooting four potential subway muggers.

"My man got off!" chortled my wife, Louise, as she swept triumphantly into the house with all the panache of Caesar crossing Rubicon.

Both my son, Charles, a college senior, and his visiting girlfriend, Elizabeth, from New Jersey, demurred.

I share their quandary. As a member of the jury, I would have found Goetz not guilty of attempted murder.

He clearly acted in traumatized self-defense.

But to absolve him of any criminal intent whatsoever, as if illegally carrying a gun is tantamount to toting a Bible, is to mock all laws against assault and battery. Street-corner justice may be therapeutic, but it's also contagious.

One the right of self-defense is successfully asserted, its advocates are also exposed to a possible transformation — they may one day become victims. A wrong act feeds on itself until only the cancer is left to fester.

But I come full circle in this moral dilemma by understanding Goetz's pain and his feeling that the law had abandoned him.

Millions of Americans share a similar frustration and believe, with some justification, that the police cannot adequately protect them.

That is the first result of the age of Goetz.

Its second result is a tragic division by race.

Most blacks will continue to angrily denounce Goetz's acquittal as legitimizing "open season on young blacks."

Most whites will work to expand support for the Goetzian act as "an idea whose time has come."

Both sides are guilty of emotional hyperbole, even while agreeing sub rosa that young blacks do commit a disproportionate number of urban crimes.

This racial fact of life makes a jury less likely to acquit a black man of gunning down four white youths under the Goetz conditions that won him the immunity of self-defense.

Still, it's important for each group to understand the other's insecurities. That's not easy when black opportunists — whom the black mainstream long ago dismissed as kooks — get into the act.

Roy Innis, the chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality, which has all the seriousness of a group of orangutans in a zoo, is a classic example. An incorrigible publicity hound, Innis managed to get quoted extensively with off-the-wall observations like,

"This is a great victory for decent people vs. the criminals and their apologists," which enabled whites to boast, "See? Blacks support Goetz, too."

I don't condemn Goetz.

But I don't support him, and I support Innis even less.

That's why, out of last week's turmoil, only one statement managed to survive in honesty and accuracy: "People are looking for a hero or they're looking for a villain and neither... is the truth."

Human Needs Fund is short

This column is prepared by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

MACC News

assistance grants, 13 more than the previous year. The amount per grant has remained relatively stable, an average of $280 per family this year against an average of $270 per household last year.

In a period of high employment, why the increase in the number of households sliding over into financial crisis? Beth's research shows that though there is high employment and many more of the working families, they are under employed and often do not have benefits so that a cut back in hours or period of illness for any member of the family topples the family off the thin line of self sufficiency.

Any dollars left over after all the Thanksgiving and Christmas bills are paid are transferred into the Human Needs Fund or MACC Fuel Bank (whichever shows the most critical shortage).

This year, in spite of the transfusion, we are already looking at a projected deficit of more than $10,000 by the end of the year. A problem that not only has us sending this alert to you but leaves us scratching our heads doing some serious in-house research to determine why we have the shortage of funds.

Beth Harlow, the able director of our Department of Human Needs, has come up with some surprising figures. In spite of high employment in the Manchester area, we have already processed a record number of requests for financial assistance this year.

And, after all possible referrals and advocacy, the MACC Human Needs Fund is a last resource. We don't use your dollars until we have explored all other possibilities — we have provided small cash grants and no interest loans to 361 households an allocation of $12,194 of your dollars to families in need.

Most of the grants and most of the dollars have gone to keep families from being evicted from their apartments.

In the first five months of 1987, 39 families have received housing assistance grants, 13 more than the previous year. The amount per grant has remained relatively stable, an average of $280 per family this year against an average of $270 per household last year.

In a period of high employment, why the increase in the number of households sliding over into financial crisis? Beth's research shows that though there is high employment and many more of the working families, they are under employed and often do not have benefits so that a cut back in hours or period of illness for any member of the family topples the family off the thin line of self sufficiency.

Any dollars left over after all the Thanksgiving and Christmas bills are paid are transferred into the Human Needs Fund or MACC Fuel Bank (whichever shows the most critical shortage).

This year, in spite of the transfusion, we are already looking at a projected deficit of more than $10,000 by the end of the year. A problem that not only has us sending this alert to you but leaves us scratching our heads doing some serious in-house research to determine why we have the shortage of funds.

Beth Harlow, the able director of our Department of Human Needs, has come up with some surprising figures. In spite of high employment in the Manchester area, we have already processed a record number of requests for financial assistance this year.

And, after all possible referrals and advocacy, the MACC Human Needs Fund is a last resource. We don't use your dollars until we have explored all other possibilities — we have provided small cash grants and no interest loans to 361 households an allocation of $12,194 of your dollars to families in need.

Most of the grants and most of the dollars have gone to keep families from being evicted from their apartments.

In the first five months of 1987, 39 families have received housing assistance grants, 13 more than the previous year. The amount per grant has remained relatively stable, an average of $280 per family this year against an average of $270 per household last year.

In a period of high employment, why the increase in the number of households sliding over into financial crisis? Beth's research shows that though there is high employment and many more of the working families, they are under employed

Christian philosophy of education — Part II
The curriculum supports the home

Christian schools have a Christian philosophy of education. It is founded upon God-centered principles and the Christian teacher as a role model for students. This also affects the curriculum.

In addition to a sound academic program, the curriculum is integrated with the Bible. Bible is taught as a separate subject and biblical principles are used throughout the entire curriculum. This gives an added dimension to every subject. The God-centered curriculum need not be excluded from any subject.

The Bible teaches that parents are to train their children about God. (see Proverbs 22:6) Parents are ultimately responsible for the education of their children. In Christian schools, the curriculum seeks to support the home. Using Matthew, chapter 18, as a guide, lines of communication are kept open between home and school. Each seeks to support the other.

In a world where everything seems to be tearing the home apart, it's good to know that Christian schools are working toward keeping homes together. Parents tell us that they value Christian education for their children. They appreciate having the school support Christian principles and lifestyle which are taught at home.

No pensions for Benji, Morris

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The state Assembly rejected a bill to guarantee Benji the dog, Morris the cat and their professional colleagues comfortable retirement when their movie and television days are over.

The bill would have required owners of mammals used in movies, television or advertising to pay 1 percent of their animals' revenue into a state Animal Trust Fund. Grants would have been given to people or government

Judge orders split in painting profits

DENVER (AP) — A judge has ordered two men battling over an oil painting purchased for $500 and resold for $410,000 to split the profits.

U.S. District Judge Jim Carrigan said at Thursday's hearing that he'd rather take the money and "give it to the Little Sisters of the Poor."

"But the law doesn't allow me to do that," he said. "And unfortunately, I can't play Solomon and split the painting down the middle."

The painting, "Prospect Park" was done at the turn of the century by American impressionist William Merritt Chase.

Art dealer Jacques Michel maintained in the trial that he alone bought the painting for $500 at an estate auction in October 1983. Antique trader Charles Angelucci contended he was a partner.

need a ride to the center. The town of Manchester is attempting to identify persons who in times of emergency may need special assistance. Persons in this category include those in a wheelchair, who are bedridden, who are on a life-support system, or who may be deaf, blind or otherwise handicapped. These short forms are available at the senior center.

The center has acquired a display that identifies Manchester doctors according to their specialty. This poster also depicts the geographical location of each doctor. This display was donated by Diana Brassell of Columbia, an honors student at Northeastern University.

We are looking for volunteers to help pick dried flowers in preparation for our dried-flower classes in the fall. Call the center if interested.

Wedding unworthy of gifts?

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: There's a question I'd bet you've never been asked: Why do friends and relatives think gifts need not be given to newlyweds unless they have a wedding? Due to my husband's serious illness, surgery and subsequent early retirement, our thoughtful and considerate daughter and her fiancé were married by a judge at the courthouse in order to eliminate the expense of a church wedding. Like all brides, our daughter had dreamed of a beautiful white gown, attendants, etc. but she knew we couldn't afford to give her one without going into debt. This was not a "have to" wedding—both have good jobs and are mature individuals. She's 22 and he's 28. They've been married for a year and a half, and not one wedding gift was received from either our side or his! This hurts them and angers me, especially since my daughter and we have spent a small fortune on wedding gifts for others. Any comments?

GREATLY DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: There are those who give a wedding gift to express their love and friendship for the newlyweds. This is pure, unselfish giving when nothing is expected in return.

Then there are those who regard a wedding gift as fair exchange for an invitation to a wedding that includes food, drink, music, dancing and all the hoopla that costly weddings offer.

Unfortunately, your friends and relatives—and those of your new son-in-law—belong to the latter group.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing "In Memory of Bear"—that comforting piece about putting an old and feeble dog to sleep.

Scar tissue can often cause some discomfort

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had my gallbladder and appendix removed three years ago. Since then, I've had discomfort from my lower rib cage to my stomach, parallel with the stitches. All tests are negative. What might be wrong?

DEAR READER: Scar tissue, at the site of previous surgery, can remain sensitive and painful for many months, particularly when the scar shrinks with time, which is normal. Your symptoms may be the result of surgery, but you'd best check with your surgeons to make sure that there isn't another cause for your discomfort.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Some time ago a reader asked you for information on breast-reduction surgery. Her inquiry prompts me to share my experience. At 59 after 40 years of carrying pendulous breasts (and at least 15 years of resulting back trouble, neck pain, frozen shoulder and fungus under the breasts), I sought a plastic surgeon. My decision to have the surgery was a last resort. The operation was difficult, but I was thrilled to go from 36E to 30B, and all my symptoms disappeared. Despite the pain, inconvenience and cost, I now wish I had had the operation years ago.

DEAR READER: Plastic surgery can be of enormous benefit to women whose breasts are too large. Thank for writing.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What can you tell me about neuritis? My doctor says it will last six to nine months and he is treating me with Xanax.

DEAR READER: Neuritis is nerve swelling. It causes pain and can result from a variety of conditions, including infection and pressure on the nerve. Xanax, a mild tranquilizer, helps patients cope with discomfort until the swelling can be treated or disappears itself.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I began working in a factory and almost immediately began to have ringing and buzzing noises in my ears. An ear, nose and throat doctor attributes the noises to partial nerve loss because of noise exposure. I quit my job, but the ear problems continue. What's my next step?

DEAR READER: Excessive environmental noise can cause permanent deafness that is associated with tinnitus (ringing in the ears). The noise actually causes the death of hearing-sensitive cells within the ears. Once the damage has been done, it is permanent. Make every effort to protect your ears from future noise, such as from electronic amplifiers and power tools. If the hearing loss is really severe, a hearing aid may help.

I know that Lady, my Siamese cat of 18 years, could not last much longer, so I cut that article out of your column. Lady had been my friend and my "baby" for 18 years—an inside cat who took every step I took and slept next to me with her head tucked into my hand. My husband had given Lady to me on our 22nd anniversary. It was the best gift he ever gave me. Last night was the first night she couldn't make it to bed with me. She had eaten no food or water for days and could hardly move.

I sat for several hours today rereading the last paragraph of your article: "Please see that my trusting life is taken gently. I shall leave this earth knowing with the last breath I draw that my fate was always safest in your hands." Then I picked up the phone and called the vet to come.

I told the vet that because she trusted me, I wanted to hold Lady as she was put to sleep, so that she would have no knowledge of what was going to happen. So I held her in my arms as he gave her one quick injection. And within seconds, without pain or fear, my Lady died with my tears and kisses on her sweet face.

The vet lovingly helped me wrap her in a blanket and put her in a box. Then my husband and I buried her in our rose garden where she will be near me always.

Dear God in heaven, if it hurts this much to lose a beloved pet, what devastation it must be to lose a beloved child. Thank you, Abby.

Between the Lines

The story behind the story

By Josie

Eddie Fisher

Q. Please tell me what Eddie Fisher is doing these days. I used to enjoy his singing so much. R.M. Nichols, Olyphant, Pa.

A. He's still singing — in hotels and concerts around the U.S. — and also plans to record a new album. According to his agent, he's also had calls from TV producers about doing some guest shots on various series and he'll consider them as long as the role isn't that of a singer. "Eddie really wants to play a villain," he explains.

Debra Winger

Q. In the interview with Barbara Walters the night of the Academy Awards, Debra Winger revealed that she'd suffered a serious injury from a fall from a truck. Most listeners no doubt would have liked to know the circumstances and details. Can you oblige? Joanne Martin, Modesto, Calif.

A. In 1973, she was working at Magic Mountain amusement park when she was thrown from a moving truck. She was temporarily blinded and paralyzed as a result; both conditions cleared up within a couple of months.

Q. I had heard that the studio that produced "Splash" was planning a sequel. Is that true and will Tom Hanks and Daryl Hannah be in it? Jeffrey Henry, Mays Landing, N.J.
A. "Splash II" has gone through numerous changes since that announcement — Hanks and Hannah were both going to be in it or the producers weren't going to attempt it, then neither would be in it and the studio was set to audition new actors. Now, according to a spokesman for Disney, it's no longer on their active development schedule — but anything could happen.

Denholm Elliot

Q. Please tell me about Denholm Elliot from "A Room With a View." I think he's wonderful. Melanie Neisser, Baton Rouge, La.

A. He's 65 (born May 31, 1922), from London, the son and grandson of lawyers known for their dramatic flair in the courtroom, a trait he obviously inherited. He hated school, and the feeling was mutual: The Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts asked him to leave after one semester. Since this occurred in 1940 in the midst of World War II, he didn't spend much time thinking about what to do next; he joined the RAF and saw quite a bit of action.

In 1942 his plane was shot down, the crew members ditched in the North Atlantic and all were captured by the Germans. He spent the next three years in a POW camp in Breslau and to keep himself sane, he built a stage and put on plays — "Macbeth" and "The Philadelphia Story" among them. (The Red Cross sent in the scripts.)

After his release in 1945, he joined a theater troupe, the Amersham Repertory Company, and within six months had moved on to London, making his West End debut in a play "The Guinea Pig." In 1949, he made his film debut in "Dear Mr. Prohack" and the next year was selected by Laurence Olivier to appear in his West End production of "Venus Observed."

Later that year, he made his Broadway debut, playing twins in Jean Anouilh's "Ring Round the Moon," and in the mid-'60s toured the U.S. performing in the classics "The Seagull" and "The Crucible." Despite his theater appearances, however, he prefers to work in TV and film and has piled up a prodigious list of credits.

Among them: "The Cruel Sea," "King Rat," "Alfie," "The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz," "The Night They Raided Minsky's," "The Boys From Brazil," "Raiders of the Lost Ark," "The Razor's Edge," "The Missionary," "A Private Function," "Trading Places," and on TV: "Marco Polo" and "Bleak House." (His role in "A Room With a View," incidentally, is his favorite; he feels it expresses the more eccentric side of his own personality.)

Next up: the Merchant-Ivory film "Maurice," the new, untitled as we go to press, Woody Allen film, the NBC miniseries "Noble House" and "A Child's Christmas in Wales" due to air on PBS.

Kim Basinger

Q. I just saw "Blind Date" and would like to know more about Kim Basinger. Jack T., Dothan, Ala.

A. She's 33, from Athens, Ga., one of seven children of a big-band musician and his wife. She was shy as a child and beautiful as a teen-ager. She won a local beauty pageant which led to a national "Miss Breck" competition and that brought her to the attention of model agent Eileen Ford who signed her. She didn't particularly want to be a model, but the $1,000-a-day fees she eventually commanded were some consolation; they also allowed her to apprentice at the Neighborhood Playhouse and study ballet.

After 10 years of modeling, though, she decided to chuck that career and become an actress. She left New York for Los Angeles and immediately began auditioning; not too long afterward she was cast in the miniseries "From Here to Eternity" and a TV movie, "Katie: Portrait of a Centerfold." She then became a real-life centerfold with a spread in Playboy and a film actress in "Hard Country" and "Mother Lode."

The turning point in her career was being cast to play Domino, the good girl, in "Never Say Never Again," Sean Connery's high-profile return to James Bond.

The roles that followed have been similarly high-profile and increasingly erotic, in "The Man Who Loved Women," "The Natural," "Fool for Love," "9½ Weeks" and "No Mercy." ("Blind Date" was a departure, a comedy.) Her role in the film "Nadine" should be somewhat steamy too: She plays a Texas manicurist who becomes a suspect in the murder of a photographer who took "art pictures" of her. It co-stars Jeff Bridges and is due for release in July.

Perry King says longevity is his target

By Linda-Marie Singer

"Backwards. My personal life's all been backwards," Perry King intones in that soothing voice that has come to be his trademark.

Look, I jumped into a tight domestic life at 19 while my buddies remained bachelors and pursued their interests. Now at 38 it's King who has been enjoying the singles life and a mounting career, while his friends are starting families.

"Funny, isn't it," he asks, as his mustache moves in a ticklish way. "Still, know what? No matter how many years ago all this happened, it's still painful to look back."

King was just six months out of St. Paul's Preparatory School, and six months into noticing there were women in the world, when his wife-to-be, a junior in college, came along.

Soon after they wed, they tore a page from the Russian history books and came up with their own five-year plan. "That meant I had to finish school the graduated from Yale with a major in drama, while she would earn money. Afterwards, it was off to New York where I would study at Juilliard (with noted director John Houseman). Meanwhile, she'd be pregnant (of course!), and stay with our child for five years until I got going professionally."

While none of this sounded didactic at the time, now King manages a half-smile filling in the rest: "Just when our daughter Louise turned 5, my wife entered law school." He pauses. "We broke up right after she passed the bar. There's undoubtedly a lesson here. If we hadn't stopped planning, maybe we'd still be together."

More than a decade has passed since that final rift, and yet the likable King cringes at what happened to their child. "Ouisie," now 16. "You still have two parents each of whom adore you and that will never change," he told her. Nevertheless, she remained disconsolate.

"Remarriage? I admire strong, independent women, but then my former wife was that way. The Rock and the Hard Place. That was my nickname for us. All these years I've been hypercareful but remain utterly baffled. I grind to a halt whenever I think about what kind of woman I really want."

Perry Firestone King II sips slowly on a cup of cappuccino. He's unaware of stares and whispers as he sits in the Beverly Hills Hotel clad in blue jeans, plaid shirt and handsome tan. It would be wrong at this point to bring up his being voted among the Top 10 Sexiest Men, an accolade he didn't campaign for and doesn't particularly cherish.

"Who wants to be another Paul Newman? You think I do? Well, I don't. My goal in this business is longevity. Making a reasonable living at something I love for the rest of my life. That's why I admire people like Robert Duvall or Donald Sutherland. They're working actors playing vastly different roles."

"OK, I'm not trying to get away from the sex thing. It's just that it's really a liability. You have to cover yourself every step of the way. Suddenly you're a great success and then what happens? You buy your own press and swallow this hype. This leads to expecting everyone to treat you accordingly. Well, what can I tell you? This might sound like I'm working on being humble, but I still take out the garbage."

Go back and read about a much younger Perry King and you'll find him explaining his family history, something he now admits his mother is tired of hearing. For the record, if you shook the King family tree, Maxwell Perkins (editor of Hemingway and Fitzgerald) would come tumbling down. Some of the other branches includes famed General William

Actor Perry King is the star of TV's "Riptide."

T. Sherman of Civil War times, plus two signers of the Declaration of Independence.

"But all I wanted was to act," King states, remembering what it was like breaking the news to his parents. "They said it was my business, but you know how you can tell people aren't pleased. They went along with me thinking that eventually I'd get shot down."

What nearly ruined him was teen-age acne that lasted into his 20s. "Back then I was a nerd. Really. If you saw a picture of me, I had glasses, a stack of pencils in my pocket, and I was covered with pimples. So much so that I was written up in medical textbooks, and appeared as though I had three cases of smallpox. The one plus was that I was extremely athletic and in great shape. I weighed 110 pounds less than I do now."

Given his conservative upbringing and prep-school style, plus killing good looks, King will stare straight at you and insist he's really "a little slow-witted" and a self-professed "oddball."

"It hurts when you never fit into any group comfortably. There I was a little intellectual kid with an athlete's body. And

I always remember that whenever I returned home from school, everyone labeled me an East Coast prep. Of course, at St. Paul's my classmates called me an Ohio farm boy. I never belonged, and consequently grew up a kind of loner.

"In fact, in 'Riptide,' that guy Murray (an intellectual dork) was really me. Physically, oh yes, I resembled my character, Cody, but in real life Perry was very much lost."

Maybe not so much at the beginning when he crashed into Broadway in 1970 starring in "Child's Play." Soon after he landed in his first movie, "The Possession of Joel Delaney," opposite Shirley MacLaine. "Slaughterhouse Five" followed.

"Suddenly everyone patted me on the back telling me how brilliant these two films were. Foolishly, I was caught up in all this. Yeah, I swallowed the whole thing. Still, it was the luckiest thing that could have happened, because I would have been thrown by standom."

From Shakespeare's "Othello" to Tennessee Williams' "The Eccentricities of a Nightingale," the young talent from Alliance, Ohio, was beginning to make a name, while TV miniseries like "Captains and Kings" and "The Last Convertible" beckoned.

So did "A Different Story" (1978), a movie about a maladjusted homosexual who falls in love with a gay woman. Call this "my best work ever," the subject was considered taboo, and his career in movies dried up for the next two years.

Television didn't let him down, and although "Riptide" was canceled after its third season ("Isn't it better than tan ask, 'Why did that program go off the air?' instead of, 'Glad to see the end of it.'"), King maintains it was one of the best things that ever happened.

So was "Stranded" with Lori Anderson that turned out to be the most highly rated movie of the week in 1986-87, and the successful "I'll Take Manhattan," that saw King breaking his stereotype of nice-guy roles.

"What made me a little queasy was how well women responded to Cutter Amberville, my part. Truthfully, he was the biggest s--- I ever played, yet women loved him. It really bothered me because I was brought up as a nice guy. My education taught me to treat women as though they were made of Martian porcelain. You know, something from another planet."

That's exactly the treatment given his present friend, Jaime Ulvich, editor of Rider magazine, and someone who had no potential interest in dating an actor until King changed her mind. "I actually wrote her a fan letter, but she didn't respond. It was an egotistical thing, I suppose. Here was this attractive available woman. Why couldn't I at least have a date? So I called to ask her, 'Why didn't you write me back?'"

"It was so refreshing to discover that she had no idea I was even an actor. I suggested we meet in some natural place, but she never showed. In the end I tracked her down. ■

The Curious Shopper

Make java at home

By Sonja Heinze

How do you get a rich coffee aroma to fill the kitchen at breakfast time? I've tried every known brand on the market with no success. Ann Kenney, New Port Richey, Fla.

We have tried all brands of coffee, several different coffee makers, and still can't get good coffee at home. Most restaurants around here make wonderful coffee, but the employees can't tell us anything they're doing that we aren't. What is the secret — a restaurant blend, professional coffee maker, water, or what? David and Beverly Crothers, Mishawaka, Ind.

Having recently tasted one of the best cups of coffee I've had in my life at the Blue Boar Restaurant on the Sonoma Coast in California, I asked one of the co-owners what his secret is. He said he buys dark French roast coffee beans, uses a regular automatic coffee maker and grinds the beans just moments before making the coffee.

Let's face it. You might get a pleasant cup of coffee made from ground coffee in a can, but if you want that special taste and aroma, you're going to have to invest in some time, money and effort regardless of what television commercials say to the contrary.

Books have been written on the art of making coffee. Here is some advice I gleaned from them to get you started:

Go to a coffee specialty shop, preferably one where the owners roast their own beans. Tell the owner you don't know anything about coffee but want to learn. Since tastes vary, have the owner recommend what beans to try first. Buy beans in small amounts, and use them within three weeks of roasting. Experiment until you find the beans or blend you like best.

Store whole roasted beans in glass jars sealed with rubber gaskets. Invest in a grinder, and grind beans only as needed. Use a scrupulously clean pot and pure water. If tap water is hard, highly chlorinated or treated by a water softener, use bottled water.

Use two level tablespoons of coffee for each six-ounce cup of water. The coffee-making cycle should not take more than eight minutes. Remove grounds as soon as brewing is complete.

NUTRIENTS IN POWDERED MILK
Is powdered milk so processed that it's depleted of certain nutrients, such as calcium and/or protein? Monica Mundhenk, Woodstock, N.Y.; Paula Stender, Sarasota, Fla.

Non-fat dry milk is indeed highly processed. First the milk is pasteurized; then the fat, which also happens to contain the vitamin A, is removed; then the defatted milk is either sprayed into hot air to evaporate the water, or hot air is sprayed into the defatted milk.

Eventually what's left is a dry white powder. Vitamin A is then added back to the milk, along with vitamin D. Miraculously, it's just as nutritious as regular whole milk without the fat and is significantly lower in calories. In fact, non-fat dry milk contains a little more calcium and protein than whole milk.

Back in the 13th century Marco Polo wrote that the Tartars skimmed the creamy part of the milk off for butter and dried the remaining fluid in the sun, so it's not a new process.

Non-fat milk is also very economical and keeps for months if properly stored.

VEGETABLE THAT TASTES LIKE OYSTERS
I wonder if you could help me find the name of a vegetable my mother used to cook when I was a child. It was the shape and color of a parsnip. She cut them up and cooked them like carrots, drained most of the water off and added milk, butter, salt and pepper. They tasted just like oyster stew. Really good! All I remember is we called them vegetable oysters. Mildred Coffey, Bakersfield, Calif.

The name of the vegetable you're looking for is salsify, also known as oyster plant and viper grass. Patrick Doyle, in the "World Encyclopedia of Food," states that this vegetable is native to southern Europe, and though it was popular 100 to 200 years ago, now is considered rare and exotic. It looks like a skinny parsnip and is similar to the carrot in chemical composition. When boiled, the taste reminds some people of oysters; hence the name.

This is interesting because parsnips remind some people of lobsters. A salad made of cooked parsnips is called a "poor man's lobster salad." Salsify is one of the most nutritious root vegetables, and apparently gourmets love it. Maybe some produce markets carry it, but I personally have never noticed it. At least now you know what to look for.

READER'S COMMENT: IRRADIATION
Varvar Yorganjian, Fresno, Calif. "In reference to the subject of the irradiation of food, there is no way to test a hazardous technology such as this safely. Irradiation is unnecessary. Organic farming, the trend toward vegetarianism, and giving land back to the farmers (local controls) are the answers for our food problems. Large-scale farming destroys our soil and contributes to world hunger. I think you would love reading Wendell Berry's book, if you haven't already, 'The Unsettling of America.' It's an eye-opener!"

I haven't read the book, but by the time you read this I probably will have. Thank you for suggesting it. Thank you also for sending me the Food Irradiation Fact Sheet, which I am familiar-with. Readers who would like a copy should write to the National Coalition to Stop Food Irradiation, P.O. Box 59-0488, San Francisco, Calif. 94159. ■

Astrograph

Sunday, June 28, 1987

Events and circumstances will be strong factors in arousing fresh ambitions in you in the year ahead. You'll aim for loftier goals and you'll achieve them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to establish the ground rules in advance today if you are planning an outing with friends where there are expenses involved. Paying up could create dissent. Major changes are ahead for Cancer in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 9 1428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be very selective regarding your associations today. If you aren't, you may end up solving problems for others instead of having fun.

VRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may be hypersensitive to the remarks of others today. Try not to take things out of context or you might misinterpret innocent comments as intentional putdowns.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Pelex and enjoy yourself with your friends today, but don't try to mix business with pleasure. This could cause your pals to think they are being used.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) Your competitive instincts are easily aroused today. This is well and good, provided you don't carry things to extremes where winning becomes everything.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Let sleeping dogs lie today. If you unwittingly dredge up an old, unpleasant issue, it could evoke a nasty reaction from your listeners.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's not a good policy to impose business advice on another today. If the situation doesn't pan out, you'll be blamed for its failure.

Therapy is making her nauseated

Hormone-replacement drug can trigger a sick stomach

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Is it possible to be allergic to the drugs used for hormone-replacement therapy? I get sick to my stomach each month when I start taking the Provera.

DEAR READER: According to Dr. Gloria Bachmann, who does research on hormone-replacement therapy at Rutgers University, it is possible that you are reacting to the Provera (a brand name for medroxyprogesterone acetate).

Provera is the most widely prescribed progestin used for hormone-replacement therapy. However, you should ask your physician if you can try another synthetic progestin, such as norethindrone, which is sold under the brand name Norlutin. There also is an acetate form of norethindrone, sold under the brand names Norlutate and Aygestin.

You and your physician may have to experiment with several cycles to determine which progestin, at what dosage, is best for you.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Several years after my divorce, I made love one time. Shortly afterward I experienced extreme pain and burning during urination. My gynecologist said I tested positive for herpes. I talked to the man and he swore he didn't have herpes.

For three years, I've been petrified of giving this to someone else or of being rejected by someone because of it. I miss having a relationship very much.

Is there any possibility that I was misdiagnosed? I've never had another problem or an outbreak. Is there any test that could verify whether I still have herpes virus in my body?

DEAR READER: What kind of test did your doctor do? Some tests (such as a Tzank study of the scraping from a lesion or from growing the virus in a culture) are more accurate than others. Even with the most accurate tests, there can still be some error in laboratory analysis or interpretation of the results. Blood tests are usually not reliably accurate in diagnosing herpes. Where were your herpes lesions? Did you see sores on the external genitals or did your physician see lesions inside the vagina or on the cervix? The appearance of the sores can often help a physician diagnose between herpes and other infections.

It is not unusual to have only one herpes episode; many people do not have recurrences although the herpes virus technically remains in the body. Herpes can be dormant (and not infectious) for many years or for the rest of your life.

Your main concern should be whether you are shedding the herpes virus and are, therefore, infectious. If the disease is dormant, it may be impossible to definitely determine whether or not you have herpes.

Find a specialist in sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) or go to an STD clinic. Explain your situation and ask to be tested for herpes-virus shedding. The physician you see can explain how you can best manage your life in light of what is found by the tests.

Your reaction to being diagnosed as having herpes is common; many people withdraw from life. However, there is no reason why those with herpes cannot lead a full life, including sexual activity when not infectious. If you do have herpes, it's important that you clearly understand exactly what your risks of being infected are (the STD physician will tell you this) and that you tell a partner that you have herpes before having sex. Most people with herpes can manage their sex lives responsibly by using condoms and spermicidal foam with nonoxonyl-9 during even infectious periods. These combined contraceptive methods are also thought to reduce the risk of transmitting other diseases, such as gonorrhea and AIDS. If the herpes diagnosis is confirmed, you should schedule regular pelvic examinations and Pap tests, especially if the virus is found on or near the cervix (the opening between the vagina and the uterus). Some researchers believe that women who have herpes may be at great risk for cervical cancer. If changes occur, they can be detected early by Pap tests and treated promptly.

Enjoys sex

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am a 64-year-old woman and enjoy having sex with my mate. Sometimes I get so nervous before we make love that I get very wet. When he gets in the mood and notices the wetness, he asks if I've been with someone else. This makes me feel really hurt, because I would never have sex with anyone else. He says he doesn't believe me.

Also, sometimes I perspire a lot and feel as though I'm next to too much heat. What is wrong with me?

DEAR READER: What you call being "nervous" before starting to make love may be what sex researchers and therapists call "sexual excitement." This can be triggered by being physically touched or by psychological stimulation, such as thinking that you will be making love soon and looking forward to it.

In women, one sign of being sexually excited or aroused is the appearance of lubrication. This moisture seeps out of the vaginal walls and may flow out of the vagina. This response is an automatic (beyond conscious control) physical response to sexual arousal.

A parallel arousal event occurs in males when the tissues of the penis fill with blood and cause an erection. This can also be caused by either physical or psychological stimulation and also cannot be consciously directed.

Some women who have stopped menstruating (gone through menopause, at an average age of 50) have a low level of estrogen. Your symptoms sound like those experienced by many women whose estrogen level falls following menopause. One symptom of a lack of estrogen is hot flashes. The body gets a message that the skin is hot (although it isn't) and produces sweat to cool the body.

The frequency and severity of hot flashes varies considerably from one woman to the next. They can be serious enough to disrupt sleep and affect functioning during the day. Hot flashes can be controlled by taking estrogen and progestin hormones that a woman continues to produce naturally.

Another symptom of low estrogen is the amount of lubrication they produce when sexually aroused. Although your partner has some questions about the amount you produce, he probably would not be pleased if the amount decreased to the point where making love was dry and painful. For some women, a lack of estrogen causes their vaginal lining to thin and can cause urinary tract problems. If the wetness has appeared only recently, it might be a sign of a vaginal infection. Ask your gynecologist to check this, and also ask whether you could try using replacement-hormone therapy to treat your hot flashes and maintain your current good level of sexual responsiveness.

In addition, the pattern of taking these hormones varies according to each individual woman's response. Estrogen is usually used for the first 21 to 25 days each month. Progestin is also taken for the last seven to 13 days of the estrogen cycle. No hormones at all are taken during the final week or so of the month.

Call doc

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm 61 and take estrogen and medroxyprogesterone for hot flashes and sweats, but I'm not sure how these drugs should be taken. How many days should I take estrogen? How many days should I take medroxyprogesterone, and should this be at the beginning or the end of the month?

DEAR READER: Prescriptions for replacement hormones differ, so call your physician to ask to have the instructions clarified. One general rule for dosages of estrogen and progestin (hormones naturally produced in higher amounts by women during their reproductive years) is that each woman should take the smallest amount that reverses menopausal symptoms for her. This means that a woman could start at an average dosage (for example, 0.625 milligrams of conjugated estrogens for days 1 through 25) for two months, and

When the wife earns more

This new phenomenon is marriage trouble-maker

By Phyllis Zauner

“I can bring home the bacon, fry it up in a pan...” When Peggy Lee sang those blues in the 1960s, the idea of the all-purpose woman, capable of doing it all, was novel. Now more than 53 percent of American wives hold down jobs. You're no longer news, Peggy.

What is news is a recently released Census Bureau report (first to compare husband-wife earnings) revealing that nearly one-fifth of those working wives bring home a fatter paycheck than their husbands.

So, when she rakes in the big bucks, brings home the hog's share, who's boss? Who fries up that bacon?

And is this topsy-turvy reversal of roles going to shake up marriage as we know it?

“It's a new phenomenon,” admits Emily Marlin, president of the New York Association for Marriage and Family Therapy. “Couples are entering into marriage still playing tapes from their own families. It's going to take them a while to adjust.”

According to University of Chicago economist Gary Becker, when traditional roles are reversed, marital problems can stack up faster than dirty dishes. His studies indicate that families are more likely to break up when women earn more than their spouses. Money conflicts, always at the top of problem lists, inevitably increase when husbands feel resentful of not fulfilling the breadwinner role.

But there are plenty of couples who will dispute those findings, at least on a personal level.

June Gallagher, a 23-year-old computer sales rep, earns $40,000 a year (in salary and commissions). Her husband, Matthew, 26, earns about $20,000 as manager of a parcel delivery service. Does she come home on payday swinging a briefcase bulging with the size of her check, to find a husband who is threatened, demoralized and insecure? Not at all.

“Sure, we've talked about it,” says Matthew, “and I wish I made more. Sometimes she brings home paychecks I can't believe. But I'm not resentful. I feel like we're both contributing.”

They have a joint checking account for household expenses, but because June Gallagher's work frequently takes her out of town, she has her own additional account.

The Gallaghers have no children yet, but “if I do have a child,” says the primary breadwinner, “Matt will be the one who quits and takes care of the baby.”

He's comfortable with that, he says. Unfortunately, conflict frequently sneaks in from outside the family circle. When the wife is the top-earning breadwinner, the husband may not have any thought other than glee at the money that's rolling in. But he may become the brunt of bad jokes anyway.

“Among the people my wife and I know,” says freelance writer Andrew Meisler, whose wife is a successful attorney, “I'm sort of a walking social experiment. ‘What's it like?’ they ask, as if I had an artificial kneecap or lived in an all-Velero mobile home. I tell them it's like most things in life, filled with pros and cons. No, I don't get an allowance or hide mad money in the cookie jar. And yes, all things considered, an embarrassment of riches is more fun than an embarrassment of poorness.”

When the Meislers first met, she was a struggling law student, he was a magazine staff writer. “I was hot stuff, had my name in every issue, a snazzy apartment.” But gradually, as Katie worked her way out of law library research into courtroom contests, she began earning twice what he did. That ratio still holds, he says.

How does he handle it? Well, fine... and not so fine. “Even though we lose twice as much money when she takes an hour off to get the cars washed, that doesn't mean I'm thrilled to do it.” On the other hand, the idea of a nice combined income is enough to wash away any feelings of inadequacy, he says.

Contrary to what many believe, women who earn more than their husbands are not superstars who make $100,000 a year posing for perfume ads or throwing their weight around film studios. Many have worked their way up to $30,000- or $40,000-a-year positions, which they have no intention of giving up.

Ten years ago Dave Barker was a successful plumbing contractor, so his wife Connie relinquished her legal-secretary job to run the household and raise the kids. But as the construction boom faltered, so did Dave's business. To make ends meet, Connie went back to work. “But I made up my mind if I went back, this time I'd make a career of it.”

Now she's a paralegal, an expert at probate, making $35,000 a year plus perks. And because Dave's work is sporadic, he's usually the one to manage the household and bus the kids.

While her income has underwritten a higher standard of living, Connie knows Dave worries he is not fulfilling his role, and that his feeling of being a kept husband depresses him. “It's impossible for a man in our society not to feel that way,” she says. “On an intellectual level he can handle it, on an emotional level, he'd rather be making more money than me.”

In the case of one couple, the issue of unequal incomes became serious enough to warrant counseling. During the 10 years they've been married, Jane and Andrew Rodgers (not their real names) have both worked, he in corporate middle management, she in a bank. Things started falling apart when she began getting promotions.

“I couldn't believe the change in her,” said her husband. “She was reading magazines about power dress, power management, she was having power lunches.” Now she's president of the bank, making $75,000 a year, and Andrew feels intimidated.

“It's not just the intrinsic value of money that creates the problem,” says their counselor, Jay Tinsman of Sacramento, Calif. “In these times money is the standard by which people judge success. In family dynamics it is a very heavily weighted item of personal power. Men are inclined to feel that loss of power when they become the second-class wage earner.”

For some men, any anxiety about wage disparity is dispelled by the years they've spent supporting a growing family. “I'm not threatened at all,” says Del Cornwall, a 52-year-old comic-strip artist who recently turned to freelancing and brings in considerably less than his wife, Ruth, who gave up housework for the real-estate business a few years ago. “She likes the work she's doing, and I'm glad to lie back a bit after 25 years of supporting the family.”

One-dish dinners help busy days

If the family is tired of the tried and true, why not try these?

By Shirley E. Sump

I have never known a man who bragged that his wife could mop floors better than anyone on the block or remembered with fondness his mother's ability to wash windows. No, that special spot in his heart (stomach?) is for the woman who cooks.

Cooking is fun... when you have lots of time. Which is fine if you are home all day. If you are a working wife and mother or one involved in a lot of things, cooking is the last thing you feel like doing when you get home. It becomes a hassle.

Is your family grumbling because the same old tired hamburgers and hot dogs appear too often on your table? Then you need some speedy skillet dishes. The following recipes are tasty, nourishing and perfect for hurried days.

SPRINGTIME MAGIC

3 tablespoons margarine
1 pound ground raw turkey
1/2 cup finely chopped celery
1/2 cup water
1 (10 1/2-ounce) can condensed cream of asparagus soup
1 cup water
1 1/2 cups packaged precooked rice
salt and pepper to taste

Melt margarine in 10" skillet. Add turkey and celery; cook over medium-high heat until turkey is browned.

Add 1/2 cup water. Lower heat. Cover; cook for 5 minutes. Uncover; stir in soup and 1 cup water. Cover; cook for 5 more minutes.

Stir in rice, salt and pepper; cook, stirring constantly for 2 minutes. Cover and remove from heat. Let stand for 5 minutes. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

This skillet dish smells heavenly and tastes delicious. Serve with crusty bread, tossed green salad and lemon dessert.

GREEK SKILLET

1 pound ground beef
1 (16-ounce) can whole tomatoes, cut up
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
2 tablespoons instant minced onions
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 (15-ounce) can navy beans, undrained
1/4 cup water
salt to taste

Cook beef in 10" skillet until browned. Drain off excess fat. Add tomatoes, garlic, onion, cinnamon, beans, water and salt. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat. Cover; simmer for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Uncover and cook 5 minutes or until mixture thickens. Makes 4 servings.

Serve this creamy super-quick main dish with buttered broccoli and jellied fruit dessert.

CREAMY HAM AND NOODLES

1 tablespoon margarine
2 cups diced cooked ham
1 (4-ounce) can mushrooms, stems and pieces
3 cups water
1 tablespoon instant minced onions
1 tablespoon dried green pepper flakes
1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 (8-ounce) package narrow-width noodles
1 (10 1/2-ounce) can condensed creamy chicken mushroom soup

Melt margarine in 10" skillet. Saute ham for 2 minutes. Add undrained mushrooms, water, onion, green pepper, parsley and salt. Bring to a boil. Stir in noodles. Lower heat. Cover; simmer for 10 minutes or until noodles are tender. Stir occasionally. Stir in soup. Heat thoroughly. Makes 6 servings.

The peppery seasoning makes this variation of an old favorite hard to resist. Serve with beans, hot fluffy rice and butter pecan ice cream.

CREOLE PORCUPINES

1 egg
1 cup packaged precooked rice
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons margarine
1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
1/4 cup water
1 tablespoon instant minced onions
1 teaspoon dried green pepper flakes
1/2 teaspoon celery seed
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 teaspoon chili powder
salt to taste

Combine turkey, egg, rice and salt in bowl. Mix gently but thoroughly. Wet hands and shape into 20 small meatballs. (Mixture will be sticky.)

Melt margarine in 10" skillet. Add meatballs; cook until browned on all sides.

Combine tomato sauce, water, onions, pepper flakes, celery seed, sugar, garlic powder, dry mustard, chili powder and salt in small bowl. Add to skillet. Cover; simmer for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add more water if necessary. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Dill-flavored meatballs combine with soup and vegetables for a lovely main dish. Serve with mashed potatoes, salad and butterscotch pudding.

DILLY MEATBALL SUPPER

1 pound ground beef
1 egg
1/2 cup finely crushed cracker crumbs
1 teaspoon instant minced onions
1 teaspoon dried dillweed
2 tablespoons margarine
1 (4-ounce) can undrained mushrooms, pieces and stems
1 (10 1/2-ounce) can condensed beefy mushroom soup
1 (16-ounce) can mixed vegetables, drained
salt and pepper to taste

barbecue sauce and sausage in a skillet. Cover; simmer for 10 minutes. Add sauerkraut; cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

This super-speedy variation of the popular German dish Rinderrouladen has an intriguing pickle and onion flavor. Serve with hot noodles, green beans, crusty rolls and plums.

SPEEDY GERMAN STEAK

3 teaspoons prepared mustard
2 large dill pickles, cut lengthwise into sixths
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 1/2 cups water
1 teaspoon instant beef bouillon
1 teaspoon instant minced onions
1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
1 tablespoon ketchup
1 tablespoon pickle juice
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 cup cold water

Spread 1/2 teaspoon mustard on each steak. Place 2 pieces of pickles on one end; roll up. Fasten with a toothpick.

Heat oil in 10" skillet. Brown rolls on all sides. Add 1 1/2 cups water, bouillon, onions, parsley, ketchup and pickle juice to skillet. Bring to a boil. Lower heat. Cover; simmer for 20 minutes until meat is tender. Remove meat rolls to platter; remove toothpicks and keep warm. Combine flour and 1/4 cup water in measuring cup. Stir into pan juices. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens. Makes 6 servings.

This unusual barbecue-flavored sauerkraut and sausage mixture is great over mashed potatoes. To finish the menu, serve rye bread, canned pears and cookies.

WESTERN SAUERKRAUT

1/2 cup water
1/4 cup ketchup
2 tablespoons hickory smoked barbecue sauce
1/2 pound Polish sausage, cut in 1/2-inch slices
1 (16-ounce) can sauerkraut, drained and rinsed

KEEPING IN TOUCH THROUGH A SPECIAL KIND OF CARING.

For a hospital to be a true credit to its community it must be able to provide its neighbors with a special kind of caring. To achieve this goal Manchester Memorial Hospital selects its staff for their excellence as healthcare professionals and for their sensitivity as caring human beings.

"THE SERVICE PROVIDED FROM THE MINUTE I ENTERED THE HOSPITAL THROUGH THE PROMPT CARE PROCESS WAS SUPERIOR IN EVERY RESPECT. THE STAFF WAS COURTEOUS AND EFFICIENT AND THE DIAGNOSIS PROMPT AND EFFECTIVE. WHAT IMPRESSED ME MOST, HOWEVER, WAS THE FOLLOW-UP PHONE CALL THAT I RECEIVED TWO DAYS LATER TO SEE HOW I WAS DOING."

G.L., Manchester

"THE NURSING STAFF WAS, WITHOUT EXCEPTION, HIGHLY SKILLED, SENSITIVE AND CARING. I ATTRIBUTE MY PROMPT AND COMPLETE RECOVERY FROM MAJOR SURGERY IN LARGE MEASURE TO THE QUALITY OF THE NURSING CARE THAT I RECEIVED."

L.S., Manchester

These qualities manifest themselves in distinctive ways that go beyond our staff's dedication to quality medical care. You'll also find caring in a friendly greeting or in their willingness to lend a helping hand. Because ours is a community-based hospital and many of our staff live right here, they have a special commitment to our patients. You can sense their closeness to the East-of-the-River community in the teamwork they display and in their concern for their neighbors. It's an attitude you won't find just anywhere.

Manchester Memorial Hospital's nurses, technicians, therapists, dietitians, aides, clerks, secretaries, managers and support staff are a special breed of professional. The compassion of each of these individuals reaps many rewards for them and their community.

"YOUR MATERNITY STAFF'S KNOWLEDGE AND PROFESSIONALISM WERE OF GREAT COMFORT TO US. THEY SHOULD BE COMMENDED FOR THEIR EXTRAORDINARY CHEERFUL ATTITUDES AND HELPFULNESS TO PATIENTS."

D.T., Coventry

"EVERY INDIVIDUAL WITH WHOM I DEALT SEEMED TO GO OUT OF THEIR WAY TO BE COURTEOUS AND INFORMATIVE. STARTING WITH THE PERSONNEL IN ADMITTING AND INCLUDING THE LAB STAFF, THE OR PEOPLE AND THE INDIVIDUALS WHO TRANSPORTED ME DOWN TO THE OR AND BACK, EVERYONE MADE AN EFFORT TO MAKE ME FEEL COMFORTABLE."

S.H., Manchester

The warm responses we have received in letters are some of our most gratifying rewards. They reflect the caring of a good neighbor pursuing the best interests of the East-of-the-River community. And best of all, our staff is here, keeping in touch through a special kind of caring anytime you need them.

Predator (R) In his hit movies, Arnold Schwarzenegger has been a Viking warrior, a barbarian, a commando and a federal agent — all without ever seeming fully human. That's Arnie's fatal charm: He's a cartoon hulk, muscle-bound for action in any era. In "Predator," Arnie's physique looks a bit scaled-down, more subtly huge — perhaps befitting his new off-screen status as a member of the Kennedy family. He plays the head of a military unit sent into a Latin American jungle to rescue some operatives from an enemy camp. Once there, he and his team (including fellow hunk Carl Weathers) find that the missing man has been murdered and skinned alive. Eventually, the commandos discover that the murderer is non-human, a chameleon monster capable of changing form, size and dimension. By the time Arnie and the lizardlike creature stalk each other, "Predator" has turned into "Rambo Meets Alien."

Serious Schwarzenegger fans may prefer their star in beefier form in more blatantly absurd fare (like "Conan the Barbarian"). But as junk movies go, "Predator" is a crisply directed high-tech action thriller. There are some nightmarishly suggestive jungle images by cinematographer Donald McAlpine, and even a few decent supporting performances (amid the stiff acting of Arnie and Weathers). Grade: **

The Believers (R) In the trashiest mode of his wide-ranging career, director John Schlesinger ("Midnight Cowboy," "Sunday Bloody Sunday") brings us this Manhattan-set occult thriller about a Caribbean-based religion that depends on child sacrifice.

The credits haven't even rolled before a woman has electrocuted herself in her own kitchen. It gets a lot more grisly from there — with the ultimate gross-out reserved for a scene in which a pimple explodes on heroine Helen Shaver's face and bugs crawl out of it. Schlesinger's direction is skillful enough to keep us from thinking too much about the convoluted and ridiculous plot, clearly, he must have done something right, because his movie is pretty darn scary.

Escaping for the moment from a host of earnest TV-movies, Martin Sheen stars as a psychologist whose son is targeted as the religious cult's latest sacrificial victim. You've got to wade through a lot of hocus-pocus to get to this fact, but the movie keeps us occupied with one tawdry red herring after another. It's the kind of thriller where every shot includes the suggestion of something ominous. In fact, the whole of New York City seems to be affected by the movie's mystical cult.

If you've seen the better thriller "Rosemary's Baby," you'll already be suspicious of some of the nice-seeming supporting characters, especially an older couple (Elizabeth Wilson and Lee Richardson) who may remind you of the characters played by Ruth Gordon and Sidney Blackmer in the Potanski film. Grade: **½

New home video

'Round Midnight (R) Warner Home Video, $78.95. French filmmaker Bertrand Tavernier directed this 1986 mood piece intended as an homage to the careers of bebop greats Bud Powell and Lester Young. In the fictionalized lead role, jazzman Dexter Gordon received a Best Actor Oscar nomination, drawing upon his own background to play an alcoholic saxophonist expatriate who moved from New York to Paris in 1959. François Cluzet co-stars as the young Frenchman who idolizes, and eventually cares for, the ailing jazzman.

The smoky jazz club milieu, the superb musical performances (done live for the film by jazz greats, under the direction of Herbie Hancock), and Gordon's mesmerizingly raspy-voiced, shambling manner are this somewhat too-reverent film's achievements. Grade: ***

If it rains, the concert will move to the East Catholic High School gymnasium.

Court orders FCC review of kids' TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission was ordered by a federal appeals court Friday to review its 1984 decision deregulating the content of children's television because it had "failed sufficiently to justify its action."

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here said the FCC should explain why it had overturned a longstanding policy of regulating programs for young viewers and the accompanying commercials.

"For almost 15 years, the FCC's regulation of children's television was founded on the premise that the television market does not function adequately when children make up the audience," Judge Kenneth Starr said in the unanimous opinion for the three-judge panel.

But Starr, an appointee of President Reagan, said the FCC's conservative majority "without explanation... has suddenly embraced what had theretofore been an unthinkable bureaucratic conclusion that the market had, in fact, operated to restrain the commercial content of children's television."

The court made the ruling on a petition challenging the 1984 deregulation rule by Action for Children's Television, a Cambridge, Mass.-based group that has criticized the networks' programming for children.

The group argued that deregulation allowed networks to air shows that are virtually commercials for action figures and other toys that are portrayed in the programs.

Peggy Charren, the group's president hailed the decision as a boon for better programming.

"We won so big on this that I think the FCC is going to have to reimpose commercial guidelines on children's television programs that will stop this flood of toy-based shows that are in the editorial control of the toy companies," she said in a telephone interview.

KEEPING YOUR CAR ALIVE

Peter Bohr

Beauties get second glance

By Peter Bohr
Contributing Editor, Road & Track

Nothing about a car is more likely to arouse passion than its styling. Certainly good fuel economy, snappy performance and precise handling are important. But even those of us who try to evaluate cars dispassionately are suckers for a beautiful shape. So in celebration of outstanding automotive styling, Road & Track's editors selected some two dozen of the most beautiful cars built during the past 40 years. The magazine commissioned several artists to illustrate the cars, and their paintings are reproduced in Road & Track's June issue. The cars were chosen solely for their beauty. Some were fast, luxurious, costly and technically advanced for their time, though others were not. Consider the cars selected for the decade between 1947 and 1957. They include such humble examples as the Volkswagen Karmann-Ohia, a VW Beetle in butterfly's garb, and the Studebaker Starliner, a car several European makers tried in vain to imitate.

Exotic examples include Ferrari's 160MM and Mercedes-Benz's 300SL. The 160MM helped establish the Ferrari legend (a young company, Ferrari is barely 40 years old), while the 300SL, with its gullwing doors is a brilliant example of showmanship. No Mercedes built since approaches it for sensual appeal.

Other cars chosen from that period include Jaguar's XK-120, Porsche's 356 and MG's ubiquitous TC, a British roadster that became America's entry to the joys of sports cars.

By no means, however, are all the selections sports cars. From the following decade, 1957-1967, the editors chose the Lincoln Continental. This boldly chiseled four-door hardtop is a very large car made visually manageable by its perfect proportions.

Other beauties of that era include Ferrari's 250 GT Berlinetta Lusso, Jaguar's E-type and Porsche's durable 911, one of the oldest designs still in production.

From the 1967-1977 decade, the editors selected BMW's 3.0CS coupe, the BMW with the most harmonious shape of all time. The second-generation Chevrolet Camaro made its debut during the period as well; the Camaro proves that General Motors is capable of subtle yet innovative styling.

Ferrari and Jaguar seem to manage a styling coup nearly every decade. For the 1967-1977 period, the editors once again chose examples of the those makes: the Ferrari 365GTB/Daytona, the Ferrari Berlinetta Boxer and the Jaguar XJ6 sedan. The original XJ6 is such an effective mixture of understated elegance and animal potential that it stands as perhaps the most beautiful of any four-door sedan from the post-World War II period, more distinctive than the newest Jaguar XJ6 introduced this year.

Finally we come to the most recent decade, 1977-1987. Is it becoming harder to achieve aesthetic triumphs in face of a multitude of government regulations, or are we still too close to the subject for proper perspective? In any case, among contemporary cars that strike Road & Track's editors as beautiful are Chevrolet's Corvette and the inevitable Ferrari, this time the Testarossa.

The editors picked some less pricey cars as well. Honda's Civic Hatchback is one of the few truly innovative designs from Japan. By altering the usual econobox proportions (the Civic is wider and has a relatively longer wheelbase than most), Honda has redefined the front-wheel-drive, hatchback package produced unimaginatively by almost everyone else. And Ford's Taurus, with its daring emphasis on aerodynamics, has given Ford Motor Co. a significant marketing advantage over its American competitors.

Substituting Leaded Fuel Termed 'Expensive Myth'

Putting leaded gasoline into a motor vehicle designed to operate on unleaded fuel can be an expensive way to support a myth, the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association (MVMA) advises.

The myth — that an automobile performs better with the lead additive — can result in premature spark plug aging, a worn-out exhaust system, catalytic converter deterioration, probability of failing an emissions test, shorter oil change intervals and a poor resale value, says MVMA, which represents 98 percent of U.S. motor vehicle manufacturers.

So, the word is Don't. Don't use leaded gasoline if your car requires unleaded. For the past decade, most passenger cars have been built with fuel filler neck restrictors that make the gas tank opening too small to accommodate a nozzle dispensing leaded gas. However, according to Dr. Fred Bowditch, MVMA's vice president of technical affairs, the mistaken notion that unleaded fuel hampers a vehicle's performance has led to some tampering of the fuel filler neck restrictor.

Another poor excuse, Bowditch says, is the price difference between unleaded and leaded fuel. Unleaded usually is slightly more expensive.

A recent MVMA survey of nearly 1,800 1975-85 model vehicles showed a 7.3 percent tampering rate but a considerably higher rate on models from the 1975-79 model years.

By Randolph Picht
The Associated Press

GENEVA, N.Y. — Tom Spencer, one of five black managers in all of professional baseball, gets upset when he thinks about last year and what could have been.

"Let's face it, I was the highest ranking black manager in baseball. I was there, and now I'm here," Spencer said.

Last year, the 36-year-old Spencer managed the Pittsfield, Mass., Cubs of the Class AA Eastern League. He took them into the playoffs. This year, he's the new manager of the Geneva Cubs in the New York-Penn League, a Class A summer league for rookies.

"It strikes a nerve with me, but I suppose it's water under the bridge," he said.

Despite taking Pittsfield to a third-place finish and into the playoffs in 1986, the season was difficult for Spencer. He frequently found himself at odds with the club's general manager, Lawrence Revo, and by season's end, they had stopped talking to each other.

"I never had a problem getting along with anyone in my life until him," Spencer said. "It wasn't racial, he said, simply a personality conflict."

So, he asked Chicago Cubs officials to assign him somewhere else.

"It's a sore spot for me," said Spencer, an outfielder who had an 11-year professional career, almost entirely in the minor leagues. "I was in an advantageous position, and now that the black issue is such a hot topic, who knows what could have happened."

"But now, well... they don't pull managers up from rookie league to the big leagues," Spencer said.

With the spotlight already on minorities in baseball because of the 40th anniversary of Jackie Robinson breaking the color barrier as a player, the issue became heated in April after remarks made by Al Campanis.

Campanis, then vice president of the Los Angeles Dodgers, said on a national television show that blacks "may not have some of the necessities" to achieve leadership in baseball. There are no black managers in the major leagues.

Campanis was forced to resign after making the remarks. Since then, Rev. Jesse Jackson, a black civil rights leader and candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, has met with baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and Ueberroth has named black sports sociologist Harry Edwards as a special assistant.

Spencer, in his fifth year as a manager, said he really hasn't given the issue much thought.

"If it's been a problem, I haven't felt it. It's never really come up," he said. Spencer doesn't believe his current situation is in any way racially influenced.

"Am I being naive? I don't know. I hope not," he said.

"The first impression people get is that I was demoted and the Cub organization is trying to phase me out. Maybe they're right, but that's not how I see it."

Bill Harford, director of minor league operations for the Cubs, said he considered the move a promotion for Spencer and a big benefit for the organization.

"Tom has a dual role. He's also our outfielder and baserunning coach. We think he's very capable," Harford said from his Chicago office.

The other black baseball managers are: fellow N.Y.P. Manager Tony Taylor at Utica; Tommy Reynolds at Oakland's Class A Modesto team in the California League; Dan Norman at the independent Miami Marlins in the Class A Florida State League, and Tom Spencer is manager of the Geneva Cubs in the New York-Penn League. He is only one of a handful of black baseball managers in the country.

Derral Thomas at Boise, an independent in the Pioneer League. There are a total of 202 professional baseball managers.

Spencer chose to come to Geneva because it gave him the opportunity to spend the first part of the season traveling to various Chicago Cubs minor league teams.

He enjoyed traveling, and now he feels he's in a better position because he knows more about the organization.

"I've branched out into so many areas. I don't have to manage. I could get into scouting, teaching or take a front office position. I'm capable of many things," Spencer said.

For now, he'll turn his attention to the young players, some fresh from high school or college exams, who are on the roster of at Geneva, where Pete Rose got his start.

Spencer said he feels somewhat in the spotlight, which doesn't necessarily bother him.

"All I can say is, I hope my efforts are not going unnoticed," Spencer said.

Spencer, from Gallipolis, Ohio, was drafted out of high school by the Cincinnati Reds in 1973. He led the Class AAA American Association in fielding percentage for outfielders in 1974-76 and was selected for the league's All-Star game in 1976.

He went on to play for minor league teams in the Chicago White Sox and Houston Astros organizations.

His only major league experience came with the White Sox, when he was called up for 29 games to replace injured center fielder Chet Lemon in 1978.

He began his managing career in 1982 at Asheville, N.C., a Class A team in the Houston organization. He spent two years at Asheville and won a South Atlantic League championship before moving to Pittsfield.

"As a player I always felt that cream will rise to the top," Spencer said, "and I feel the same as a manager."

Braves, Orioles Interested in Hoyt

SAN DIEGO (AP) — LaMarr Hoyt, a trouble-plagued Cy Young award winner, cleared waivers Friday and was free to sign with another major league club after his unconditional release by the San Diego Padres.

At least two clubs, the Atlanta Braves and Baltimore Orioles, said they were interested in talking with Hoyt's agent.

Hoyt, 33, who has suffered substance abuse problems, was put on waivers by the Padres last week, hours after an arbitrator said the club was wrong in dropping the right-hander last January and ordered him restored to the roster.

The Padres' attempt to nullify their contract with Hoyt also was rescinded by the arbitrator, who held the Padres liable for $2.8 million in salary running through 1989.

Hoyt, who must follow a rehabilitation plan filed with the commissioner's office to stay in baseball, can be signed for the prorated portion of the minimum annual salary of $62,500. The Padres are obligated to pay the rest, with an amount already deducted for a 60-day suspension by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

The commissioner originally had ordered Hoyt suspended for a year, but arbitrator George Nicolau termed the punishment excessive and reduced it.

The Manchester American Legion baseball team, meanwhile, will be heading to New Hampshire to take part in the Keene Invitational Tournament today and Sunday with the championship game slated Monday.

Torrellas sets race walk mark

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Maryanne Torrellas, a 28-year-old mother of three from Clinton, Conn., smashed her American record in the women's 10,000-meter walk Friday during the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

Torrellas clipped nearly two minutes off the previous record she had set two years ago, clocking 47 minutes, 23.8 seconds around the San Jose City College track.

The next three finishers also were timed under Torrellas' old record of 49:16.4, set May 4, 1985, at Cambridge, Mass.

"It's nice to get the record," Torrellas said. "Now, I have the record on the track and on the roads."

She set the road best of 48:28.0 at New York in May in finishing 10th during the World Race Walking Championships.

Gladman, Austin ineligible at Pitt

PITTSBURGH — The University of Pittsburgh on Friday declared senior football players Charles Gladman and Teryl Austin ineligible for the 1987 season because of their links to two professional sports agents under grand jury investigation.

Austin, a defensive back from Sharon, Pa., has admitted violating NCAA rules by accepting money from agent Norby Walters last season. Pitt Athletic Director Ed Bozick said. Gladman, a running back from Akron, continues to deny wrongdoing but has refused to cooperate with Pitt or NCAA investigations, he said.

"They have been suspended from the team and are ineligible," Bozick said.

Former Pitt defensive end Tony Woods, the No. 1 draft choice of the Seattle Seahawks, also has admitted breaking NCAA rules by accepting money from Walters last season.

Sports in Brief

Pirates to retire two numbers

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates announced Friday they will retire the numbers of two of their finest modern-era players, outfielder Ralph Kiner and second baseman Bill Mazeroski.

Mazeroski's No. 8 will be retired before the Pirates-Montreal Expos game on Friday, Aug. 7, which will be designated as "Bill Mazeroski Night."

Kiner's No. 4 will be retired during "Ralph Kiner Night" ceremonies before the Pirates-New York Mets game on Saturday, Sept. 19. Kiner is now a Mets broadcaster.

"Playing baseball was good enough for me. Now, to be included with players such as Roberto Clemente and Pie Traynor, it's the proudest moment of my life," Mazeroski, 48, said Friday at a news conference.

Kiner, 64, ranks second on the Pirates' career home run list with 301 and either won or shared the National League home run title in each of his seven full Pittsburgh seasons. He holds the Pirates' single-season home run record of 94 in 1949.

Kookaburra II sails to victory

PORTO CERVO, Sardinia — Kookaburra II of Australia sailed to a second consecutive victory in the 12-meter World Championships Friday on a day when three of the yachts were damaged by heavy winds.

Kookaburra II, which entered port flying her protest flag, finished 47 seconds ahead of runner-up New Zealand. The victory boosted Kookaburra II's lead in the standings to better than four points over Bengal, another Australian boat.

America's Cup winner Stars & Stripes, skippered by Dennis Conner, finished third Friday and was fourth among the eight yachts in the standings.

Senior leads Monte Carlo Open

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — Australian Peter Senior, finishing with four successive birdies, shot a 4-under-par 65 in the third round Friday of the $320,000 Monte Carlo Open golf tournament, giving him a four-shot lead with a 194 total.

After a delayed start and three suspensions of play because of thick fog, Senior finished his third round nine hours after schedule on the 6,687-yard Mont Aget course.

Astros complete deal with L.A.

HOUSTON — The Houston Astros acquired left-handed pitcher Jeff Edwards Friday from Los Angeles, completing last week's trade that sent Phil Garner to the Dodgers, the Astros announced.

Edwards, who was 2-1 in six games at Albuquerque, N.M., of the Pacific Coast League with a 6.08 earned run average, will be assigned to the Astros' Class AAA farm club in Tucson.

He worked 26 2/3 innings in four starts, allowed 26 hits, 18 earned runs, 14 walks and struck out 16.

Kerr requires further surgery

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia Flyers forward Tim Kerr underwent surgery on his left shoulder Friday for the second time in two weeks, the NHL club announced.

The operation, a reconstruction procedure to tighten the shoulder joint, was performed by Flyers orthopedic surgeon Dr. John Gregg at Graduate Hospital.

SMU may want its money back

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas — Attorney General Jim Mattox warned Friday that money paid as part of a termination agreement to three former athletic department officials may have to be repaid to Southern Methodist University.

Mattox said that $663,013 in severance pay to former Athletic Director Bob Hitch, former football coach Bobby Collins and Hitch assistant Henry Lee Parker may have to be returned.

Lewis notches another win in the long jump

By Bert Rosenfield
The Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Carl Lewis scored his 50th consecutive long jump victory Friday in the best competition in the event's history, then captured the 200-meter dash title in the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships at San Jose City College.

Lewis, the 1984 Olympic long jump champion, took only three of his allowed six jumps, winning with a leap of 28 feet, 4 1/4 inches. He beat Larry Myricks and Mike Conley, who also cleared 28 feet. It was the first time that three jumpers surpassed 28 feet in the same meet.

Myricks, the last jumper to beat Lewis when he won the 1981 national indoor championships, had a best of 28-5/8, the best of his career, and Conley had a wind-aided effort of 28-0/4.

Lewis later took the second step toward a possible triple gold-medal performance by winning the 200 in a stadium-record 20.12 seconds.

Lewis, trying to conserve his energy for the 200-meter final, opened the long jump competition with a jump of 27-9/4, then passed during the next rounds as it stood up.

Myricks went 28-0/4 in the fifth round, a distance matched by Conley in the sixth round. Myricks pulled into second place on his final jump.

In the 200 final, Lewis, unperturbed by a false start caused by an electronic malfunction, burst out of the blocks in the restart and held the lead throughout. He slowed near the finish line yet won easily over Wallace Spearmon, who was timed in 20.33. Calvin Smith, the 1983 world champion, was third in 20.34.

Lewis recorded his first triple in the 1983 national championships by winning the 100- and 200-meter dashes and the long jump. Later that year, he won gold in the 100, long jump and 400-meter relay in the inaugural World Championships at Helsinki, Finland.

A year later, he swept Olympic golds in the 100, 200, long jump and relay. He'll try to duplicate that four-gold feat when the second World Championships are staged at Rome from Aug. 29 through Sept. 6.

"I didn't want to see him take one jump and sit the rest of the day out," Myricks said of Lewis. "I think the days of him taking one jump and winning are over."

In the 1984 Los Angeles Games, Lewis was booed for taking only two jumps — one his winning 28-0/4 effort, the other a foul — and then passing his final four tries. There was no booing Friday when he passed three times.

Myricks said that Lewis might have jumped even better if he hadn't been bothered by an ailing left knee injured slightly during Thursday's qualifying.

"Carl is probably the greatest long jumper now, but America loves the underdog," Conley said about the crowd's support for him and Myricks.

"It's like (5-foot-7) Spud Webb winning the (NBA's slam) dunk contest. Michael Jordan might be there, but the crowd still roots for the underdog."

Myricks said, "The fans like to see someone challenge him. If he had won it with one jump, it would have been a dead event."

In his winning streak, Lewis has won 53 meets outdoors and 17 indoors.

This was his 35th consecutive meet over 27 feet and 47th overall, and the 30th time over 24 meets that he has jumped 28 feet.

Lewis has twice achieved a career-best 28-10/4 — in the 1983 outdoor championships at Indianapolis and in the 1984 Millrose Games at New York's Madison Square Garden.

In his only other long jump competition this year, Lewis became the first jumper to record six 28-foot jumps in one meet. The best was a wind-aided 28-9/4 and he also had two legal 28-5/8 in the Mount San Antonio College Relays at Walnut, Calif., on April 26.

Friday's competition also marked the second time in history there were four 27-foot jumpers in the same meet. Gordon Laine reached that distance on his final try, leaping 27-0/4.

For the first time ever in the same meet, three American women went over 200 feet in the discus. Connie Price won at 212-5, followed by Carol Cady at 206-11 and Ramona Page at 203-2.

Duncan Atwood, who returned to competition last month after being suspended for 18 months for using steroids, won the javelin with a heave of 271-5, his best since the new javelin was introduced last year.

"I modified my training while I was out of competition," Atwood, the winner of the U.S. Olympic Trials in 1984, said. "I had planned to take '68 off anyway, but not quite in the fashion I did. I needed a break from competition."

"It did make a difference that I had the year off. I think drug testing is great, but I don't know how well it works. A lot of people are learning their washout times. That's what I've been hearing, but I'm no scientist."

Tom Petranoff, the American record-holder with the old and new javelin, finished second at 261-0, followed by Mark Babich at 259-7.

Maryanne Torrellas, a 28-year-old mother of three from Clinton, Conn., broke her American record in winning the women's 10,000-meter walk in 47 minutes, 23.8 seconds.

The next three finishers — Lynn Weik, 47:36.5; Debbie Lawrence, 48:30.3; and Teresa Valli, 48:57.3 — also went under Torrellas' old mark of 49:16.4.

South Koreans Intent on staging '88 Olympics

By Barry Renfrew
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — The government vows to stage a successful 1988 Seoul Olympics, while its foes call the event a second Nazi Games. The shadows of political turmoil in South Korea grow longer as the Games approach.

Many Koreans worry the clash between government and opposition groups could endanger the Games, that it could rob the nation of what is seen as a huge triumph capping what is seen as a "economic miracle."

The Olympics have become a political game, with the government and opposition each using them to justify their own positions. Both sides say they support the Games, but many Koreans are worried they could lose them.

"If the nation should forsake its hard-won rights to host the world sports event due to civil unrest, the Republic and its people would suffer a critical blow to its prestige," the Korea Times said in a June 23 editorial.

"In that event, Koreans would be doomed to lose face as a creditable nation in the world community," the paper said.

Koreans regard the selection of their country to host the next Olympics with enormous pride. People often talk about the responsibility of hosting the Games, and many say political problems must be solved to ensure the event is a complete success.

"The Olympics are very important. They are a very great responsibility. Korea must not fail in this, it would be very bad," said one businessman in a typical comment.

Korean officials have said the Games will be held and will be a major success. International Olympic officials also have expressed confidence the Games will be held in Seoul, saying nothing short of war would halt them.

But a growing number of cities have been offering to host the Games, causing worry among Koreans. "We will never give the Games to another country," said Kim Il-wan, a farmer.

The opposition has said the Games cannot be held if South Korea is not a democracy. Opposition leader Kim Young-sam caused national furor when he charged the government wanted to use the Games in the same way Adolf Hitler tried to use the 1936 Berlin Olympics as a Nazi showcase.

"If the Olympics are to be a self-advertisement for the government, and if the people are to be forced, by the use of government force, to participate, then our Olympics will be no more than a re-enactment of the Berlin Olympics of 1936 under the Nazis," Kim said in a May speech.

Kim has continued to demand complete democracy before the Olympics, although the opposition has not threatened to disrupt the Games.

The opposition is demanding direct presidential elections and full political freedom in a country where displays of dissent are rarely tolerated and riot police stand guard on the streets.

President Chun Doo-hwan repeatedly has used the Olympics to justify the government's authoritarian policies, saying stability is vital to ensure the Games are a success.

"Flawlessly carry out the 1988 Seoul Olympics," he has exhorted his countrymen many times.

Chun said he was acting to safeguard the Olympics and national stability when he suspended negotiations April 13 with the opposition on constitutional reform until after the Games. The decision helped trigger the opposition drive against the government.

Roh Tae-woo, head of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), who is the government candidate to succeed the president when his seven-year term expires in February, has also repeatedly said that the Olympics must be safeguarded. Getting the Games for South Korea, he said, was proof of the government's wisdom and effectiveness.

"This is transforming the international image of Korea, which used to be synonymous with war and poverty, thereby greatly enhancing our national prestige in the eyes of the world," he said June 10 when his selection was confirmed by the party.

The United States, which has considerable influence in South Korea, also has expressed concern about the Games, saying they must go ahead.

"If any incidents occur which might interfere with the successful completion of the Olympic Games here, it would be extremely unfortunate," Edwin Derwinaki, U.S. undersecretary of state for security assistance, said at the end of a visit to Seoul.

South Korean and American officials also are very concerned about the possibility of communist North Korea attempting to disrupt the Games with terrorist attacks. The United States, which has some 40,000 troops in South Korea under a mutual defense pact, has pledged to help protect the Games against any threat from the North.

Unification Minister Moon Tae-kap, who oversees Seoul's policy on relations with North Korea, warned the North recently against any "rash and thoughtless actions."

"We strongly urge them to immediately end their threats to destroy the Games, and we are sure our defense capabilities are well prepared for any militaristic provocation," he said.

Richard keeps her LPGA lead

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Deb Richard had four consecutive birdies on her final holes Friday, maintaining her lead in the $300,000 Rochester International tournament whose second round was interrupted four times by rain.

With sunset looming because of the delays, officials stopped play as Richard was about to begin her final hole of the day.

With that final hole still to play, Richard, who shot a 5-under-par 66 on Thursday, was at 5-under 132. Lori Garbacz, who fired a second-round 5-under 67 on the 6,162-yard Locust Hill Country Club course, was at 6-under 138, while Marcel Bozarth finished the round 5-under-par at 139.

The delays, which totalled five hours, forced second-round play to spill over into Saturday for 41 of the 123 golfers who were competing for the $45,000 first prize.

Richard was angry that she will be one of those players who will have to get up early to complete the round.

"I'm upset that I've got to come out at 7:30 (a.m. EDT) to play one hole when there was plenty of light left," she said. "I generally hate playing late in the afternoon, but I'm coming to like it."

The weather was of little concern to Garbacz, who started the day at 1-under 71 and then shot an eagle and four birdies in six holes during the middle of her round to finish with a 5-under 67.

Aaron six under to lead Seniors

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Tommy Aaron shot a six-under-par 68 Friday to take the first-round lead in the Seniors Tour $250,000 Greater Grand Rapids Open. The 50-year-old Aaron, in his first year on the tour, shot his lowest round of the year to take a three-shot lead over Bill Casper, Orville Moody and Bob Charles, who all shot three-under 69.

Gary Player, a tournament favorite, Dave Hill and Walt Zembriski each shot 69. Nine players tied for eighth with one-under-par 70 including Roberto DeVicenzo, Gene Littler, Miller Barber, Ken Still, J.C. Goosie, Pete Brown, Joe Jimenez, Jim King and Warren Dalley.

Golfers said wind gusts of up to 30 mph and tough pin placements made the 6,453-yard Elks Country Club course play a bit tougher than usual.

Aaron started his round with an eagle and a birdie. He also had birdies on the ninth, 10th, 14th and 15th holes. A 70-foot chip shot earned his birdie on the 15th.

"I was just trying to get it close," Aaron said of his chip at 15. "It looked like I might be faced with getting a bogey there."

Charles finished with birdies on 16 and 18 to pull into the second-place tie with Moody and Casper.

"Today, with the flags and with the wind blowing, it was very difficult out there," Charles said. "I was hitting defensive shots to the middle of the green. With no wind, you can go for the pin."

Casper considered the pin placements equally difficult.

"I tell you what, I've never seen nine tougher pin placements than I saw on the front nine," Casper said. Casper played a steady round with four birdies and only one bogey. Moody, on the other hand, was hot and cold with three bogeys and three birdies on the back nine.

DeVicenzo had a chance at 68 but received a two-stroke penalty on the 14th hole for mistakenly hitting the ball of Jerry Barber, who was playing ahead of DeVicenzo.

"What a stupid man I am," DeVicenzo said. "This happens."

DeVicenzo and Jimenez had the top 60-and-over Super Seniors scores.

Defending champion Jim Ferree eagled the first hole but finished at even-par 71.

Watson back in the groove

By George Lovng
Herald Reporter

CROMWELL — You wouldn't know that Tom Watson has not won a golf tournament in three years by the size of the crowds that have been following his march around the Tournament Players Club of Connecticut.

And if you saw Tom Watson miss birdie putts of three and four feet, as he did during Friday's second round in the Canon-Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, you wouldn't know this was the same golfer that has won the world's most prestigious tournaments and has won millions of dollars.

But the 37-year-old Watson knows — knows that his game is back in a championship groove.

"I'm doing a lot of things well," he said after carding a 3-under-par 66 to push his two-day total to 7-under-par 138, good for fourth place after 36 holes of golf in the 36th annual GHO, which is offering a total purse of $700,000. Bernard Langer of West Germany, making his first appearance at the GHO, holds the lead at 12-under-par 130.

Watson said Langer's scores is impressive but that's not going to trouble him.

"My confidence is very high right now," he said. "Maybe the bad times are behind me."

You couldn't tell that if you watched him putt on the 17th and 18th greens. On the 17th, he missed a 4-foot birdie putt and followed that with a 3-foot missed birdie opportunity on the closing 18th hole.

"It's maddening," he admitted, about his misses on the final two holes of the day under wet conditions over the TPC that has been generous to the professional golfers as far as surrendering birdies.

Still, he said he feels his putting stroke is back. As evidence, he can point to the par-3 15th hole where he rolled in a 60-foot birdie try.

"It was in all the way," he quipped. It was his best putt all day and was the second of four consecutive birdies on the front nine for Watson, the five-time British Open champion who has 31 PGA Tour victories to his credit, the last coming in 1984 when he won the Western Open. "That makes up a little bit for 17 and 18," Watson added.

Last year at this time in the GHO, Watson was 10-under after two rounds but the Watson of 1987 maintains that he's playing better than a year ago. He said his driving, iron play and putting were all in the groove.

Watson's new-found groove was demonstrated last weekend when he almost won the U.S. Open in San Francisco when he came in second place, one stroke behind Scott Simpson.

His goal right now is to win a place on the U.S. Ryder Cup team which he can do by winning the GHO. He currently ranks 16th for the Ryder Cup team, needing to move up to 12th. "To me, the Ryder Cup is the same thing as the America's Cup," Watson said following his round Thursday. "I want it back and I'd like the opportunity to help get it back."

Another sign of his improved situation was his humor. As Watson was followed by a huge gallery, he said he felt he was playing before his hometown, Mission Hills, Kansas. "I need to develop an accent and they'd really love me," he said of the Hartford fans.

Drayton defends IBF title

MONTREAL (AP) — Buster Drayton, the International Boxing Federation junior middleweight champion, puts his crown on the line for the fifth time Saturday in a scheduled, 15-rounder against against Matthew Hilton of Montreal at the Forum.

Drayton, 33, of Philadelphia, has the experience, while Hilton, 21, hasn't lost in 26 professional bouts and is the division's top-ranked contender.

"We know that all of Canada will be pulling for us," said Dave Hilton Sr., the trainer for his son, who could be the first Canadian-born world-title holder since Jimmy McLarnin of Vancouver captured the welterweight championship in 1933. "We know it would make them so happy if we can win the title. Hilton's training in the week leading to the bout was far more intense than Drayton's. The No.

Wimbledon to carry on without Becker

By Bob Greene
The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Australian Peter Doohan halted Boris Becker's bid for history Friday by ousting the two-time defending champion 7-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 in a second-round shocker that ranked among the most significant upsets Wimbledon has seen.

"It was like magic, the way he guessed right," the stunned Becker said. "He just couldn't miss."

It was the first time the top-seeded West German had faced match point at Wimbledon, his only defeat coming when he was forced to retire with an injury in 1984.

Since then, the 19-year-old redhead had ridden his booming serve and acrobatic tumbles at the net to two consecutive Wimbledon titles. He was trying to become only the third man in the modern era to win three consecutive crowns in the Grand Slam event and the first to do it before he turned 20.

Instead, it was Doohan, winless in four previous Wimbledon appearances until this year, who controlled the match and, eventually, the crowd.

It was the first time since Charlie Pasarelli defeated Manuel Santana in the first round that the defending Wimbledon men's champion had left the All England Club a loser so early.

"Every time he would guess where I was going to put the ball he would be right," Becker said of his 70th ranked opponent who lives in Little Rock, Ark. and played for four years at the University of Arkansas. "Then he was guessing lob and I hit a lob. The guy just could not miss."

Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, the world's top-ranked player and seeded second, barely escaped an upset by Paolo Cane, edging the Italian 3-6, 7-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Becker was not alone among the seeds to bow out. Others losing were No. 6 Yannick Noah of France and two Americans, No. 19 David Pate and No. 16 Kevin Curren, in the men's singles, and No. 16 Lori McNeil of the United States, No. 12 Wendy Turnbull of Australia and the Maleeva sisters from Bulgaria, No. 7 Manouela and No. 14 Katerina, in the women's singles.

Seeded men to advance Friday's included No. 3 Mats Wilander of Sweden, No. 4 Stefan Edberg of Sweden, No. 5 Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia, No. 7 Jimmy Connors of the United States, No. 8 Andres Gomez of Ecuador, No. 9 Henri Leconte of France, No. 12 Brad Gilbert of the U.S., No. 13 Joakim Nystrom of Sweden and No. 14 Emilio Sanchez of Spain.

The women's winners included No. 3 Steffi Graf of West Germany, No. 3 Chris Evert of the U.S., No. 4 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, No. 5 Pam Shriver of the U.S., No. 6 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, No. 8 Claudia Kohde-Kisch of West Germany, No. 9 Bettina Bunge of West Germany, No. 11 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden, No. 15 Barbara Potter of the U.S., No. 15 Raffaella Reggi of Italy and No. 16 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany.

A day after rain washed out all but one match, more than 75 were played. The sun made several appearances Friday in the rain-plagued tournament, but it was Doohan who shone brightest on this day.

"When I drew Becker in the second round at Wimbledon, I thought, 'Here's another bad draw' and started thinking about plane reservations out of here," Doohan said. Instead, it is Becker that is flying home on Saturday.

"To get his serves back, you have to guess the right side," said Doohan. "After a while you get a feeling for where his serve is going to go. Maybe it's a sixth sense, maybe it's a pattern."

"You have this instinct as to where they're going to serve."

Wherever Becker served, Doohan was there. Wherever Becker hit his volleys, Doohan was there. Wherever Becker would hit a passing shot, Doohan was there.

"I put many (service) returns in play and made him volley a lot," Becker said, "but he was not missing. His strings are so soft that when he hits a volley in and deep, the ball just goes. The first game of the first set was the story of the whole match."

Becker won the toss and elected to receive. He immediately jumped to a love-40 lead, triple break point.

But Doohan's forehand volley hit the baseline, then put away a smash, when Becker's backhand down the line was wide, Doohan had pulled to deuce. Two points later, he had held serve to begin the match.

Neither player could come close to a break point in the first set after that, sending it to a tiebreaker. Doohan took a 4-0 lead and closed out the tiebreak 7-4 to win the first set.

The Australian grass-court specialist exploited one of Becker's weaknesses — his poor footwork, the reason for the West German's spectacular lunging volleys since he is frequently out of position. Doohan did it with passing shots, mostly volleys.

as Doohan again seemed to guess correctly almost every time.

"I did not think that Doohan could play as he did today," said Becker. "I kept thinking he would crack and I could win easy. I kept saying he is not a Lendl or Leconte, and thought he could not play the four sets as he did."

Doohan didn't criticize Becker's reasoning. "It's only natural for Boris to say that I played above myself," Doohan said. "He hasn't seen me play a lot on grass. He should see it from my point of view."

"I've played Davis Cup for Australia on grass. I've had some good wins on grass in Australia. I beat Mayotte, (John) Fitzgerald, (Anders) Jarryd and Kevin Curren. I've had all these good wins and he probably doesn't realize it."

"It was probably to my advantage today that he didn't think I was such a good player."

The two also held serve throughout the second set until the 10th game, when Becker finally broke his opponent, pulling even at one set apiece.

Then, in the opening game of the third set, Doohan, the 1982 National Collegiate Athletic Association doubles champion in the United States, solved Becker's booming serve for the first time.

He kept his returns low, right at Becker's feet, and the West German repeatedly netted the volley or half-volley, or else lofted a high floater that Doohan could crush away. And when the two did find themselves in a scrambling battle, racing from sideline to sideline, it was Doohan who seemed to always come out the winner.

Doohan broke Becker's service again in the seventh game, this time at love, as he took a 2-1 lead in sets.

to play like I did for the first 3 1/2 sets, I think I will be on the next plane home."

Lendl's chances were boosted further about an hour later when defending champion Boris Becker was eliminated in the second round by Peter Doohan of Australia.

"He tries to cheat," Lendl said of Cane. "When I played in Italy against him, I knew that whenever he had a ball close to the line, he would question it. Some players do it once in a match, he does it every time."

Lendl said that at one changeover, he told Cane: "Stop crying, play some tennis." The Italian did not reply, he said.

For some three hours of a match that began Thursday and was held up 24 hours by rain, Cane stayed on top with a blend of power serving and subtle play at the net.

He broke Lendl's serve in the fourth game of the opening set to take it 6-3 and Thursday's rain arrived after he had survived two break points to tie the second at 6-6.

When play resumed Friday, the second set went into a tiebreaker that Lendl took 7-5 after the Italian had saved two set points.

Lendl, who continued to struggle against Cane's well-placed serves, saved a set point at 4-5 in the third and complained about a spectator's yellow coat, which was hanging over a balcony and distracting him.

Although he saved that set point, he was swept aside in the tiebreak, which Cane clinched 7-2 with an ace.

The Italian's solid serve finally was broken for 4-4 in the fourth set, and from that point the confidence drained out of Cane.

"I said to myself, 'Maybe he'll choke,' and he did," Lendl said. "He seemed to disappear. He was there physically but not mentally."

Lendl, who lost in last year's final to Becker, admitted he was still having problems with grass. "It's easier than it was five years ago, but it's still hard," he said. "Every match here is dangerous for me. I am known for making people famous."

Tolleson's hit gives Yankees win over Bosox

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees, trailing 6-0 after two innings, scored 13 runs in the third against Boston ace Roger Clemens and two relievers and beat the Red Sox 12-11 Friday night on Wayne Tolleson's RBI single in the 10th inning.

Mike Pagliarulo drew a leadoff walk from Calvin Scerifano, 4-4, and was sacrificed to second by Rick Cerone. Tolleson, who singled home two runs in the third, then grounded a pitch up the middle for the game-winning hit, ending Boston's longest winning streak of the year at five games.

Tim Stoddard, 1-1, the fifth Yankee pitcher, was the winner, facing just one batter and striking out Jim Rice with runners at first and second to end the top of the 10th.

Cesilio Guante pitched 3 1-3 scoreless innings and Pat Clements went 2 2-3 before Stoddard came on. Scerifano was the sixth Boston pitcher and gave up the winning run after Tom Bolton, Bob Stanley and Joe Santino combined to pitch 5 1-3 shutout innings.

Although the Red Sox had 10 hits, Wade Boggs' hitting streak ended at 25 games when he went 0-for-3, and walked three times, twice intentionally. Tolleson's decisive hit was New York's 10th.

Dwight Evans hit a three-run homer in the first inning and Jim Rice hit a grand slam in the second as the Red Sox took a 6-0 lead. Tommy John was knocked out after 1 1-3 innings, charged with eight runs.

However, Clemens, the 1986 American League MVP and Cy Young Award winner, couldn't hold the huge lead.

The Yankees' 11-run rally included nine hits, four walks, a solid pitch and a passed ball. Dave Winfield drove in four runs with a homer and single, Gary Ward and Tolleson hit two-run singles and Don Mattingly had a run-scoring double and single.

Marlins 5, Royals 1

At Kansas City, Mo., Dave Valle went 4-for-4 with two triples and drove home three runs Friday night in leading the Seattle Mariners to a 5-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Valle had his first four-hit game of his major-league career. He had an RBI single in the fourth inning and a two-run triple in the sixth that gave the Mariners a 5-0 lead.

Mike Morgan, 6-6, stopped his personal three-game losing streak as Seattle won for the ninth time in 11 games. Morgan gave up one run on five hits before Bill Wilkinson relieved with runners at first and third and none out in the seventh.

Tigers 6, Orioles 0

At Detroit, Walt Terrell pitched a four-hitter and Kirk Gibson and Darrell Evans each homered and drove in three runs Friday night, leading the Detroit Tigers over the Baltimore Orioles 6-0.

The Orioles have lost 23 of their last 27 games, including eight straight on the road.

Terrell, 6-7, struck out six and walked three. It was his first shutout of the season and the Tigers' second of the year.

Evans had a two-run homer in the first inning for his 1,999th major-league hit. Evans' 13th home run came off Mike Griffin, 6-1.

Athletics 5, Indians 0

At Cleveland, Jose Canseco hit a solo homer and fluke three-run triple and made an outstanding catch Friday night as the Oakland Athletics defeated Cleveland 5-0 for the Indians' fifth straight loss.

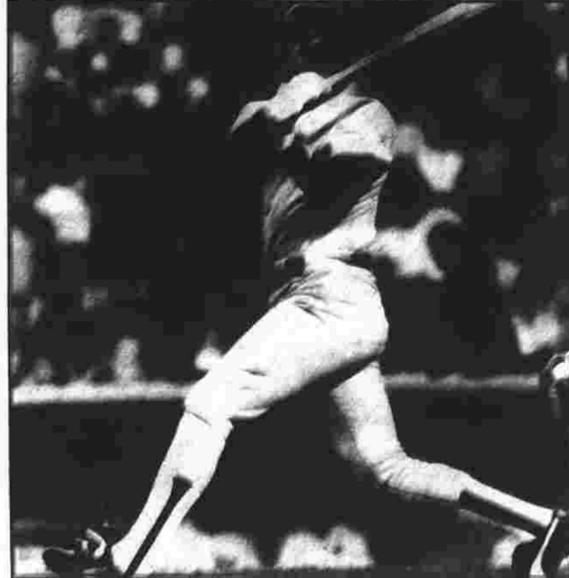

Dave Stewart, 9-7, allowed five hits in 6 2-3 innings. Gene Nelson, who got his first save, relieved with the bases loaded and retired Tony Barrard on a line drive to Canseco in left field that ended the seventh inning.

Earlier in the inning, Canseco robbed Cory Snyder of a three-run homer with a leaping catch at the fence.

Steve Carlton, 5-5, took the loss. He gave up eight hits and struck out six in his second straight complete game and third of the season.

Angels 3, White Sox 1

At Chicago, Jerry Reuss, a 36-year-old National League castoff, scattered six hits over 8 1-3 innings Friday night and the California Angels beat the Chicago White Sox 3-1 for their fifth straight victory.

It was Reuss' second American League start and came after a 5-0 shutout against Kansas City on Sunday.

Reuss gave up one run, struck out three and walked two. He did not allow a hit until Greg Walker had an RBI single in the fourth after Gary Redus walked and took second on an infield out.

Greg Minton got the final two outs for his third save.

Rangers 1, Twins 0

At Arlington, Texas, Bobby Witt and Dale Monforte combined on a one-hitter — a solid single by Roy Smalley in the second inning — and the Texas Rangers beat the Minnesota Twins 1-0 Friday night.

Witt, 3-3, struck out seven and walked six. He has not completed any of his 20 major-league starts.

Bedrosian ties save mark as Phillies top the Mets

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Steve Bedrosian tied a major-league record with his 11th consecutive save and starter Kevin Gross allowed two runs over 6 2-3 innings and drove in two runs as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the New York Mets 5-2 Friday night.

Bedrosian pitched the final two innings to tie Sparky Lyle's major-league consecutive saves record set in 1973 with the New York Yankees. It was Bedrosian's 18th save of the season overall.

Buckner activated

BOSTON (AP) — Boston first baseman Bill Buckner, who suffered a bruised right hip in a collision with Orioles outfielder Jim Dwyer in Baltimore on June 8, was activated by the Red Sox on Friday, the team announced.

The Red Sox also demoted shortstop Glenn Hoffman to the team's AAA farm club in Pawtucket, R.I. Hoffman played in 21 games with the Red Sox this season, hitting .208 (11-for-53).

Hoffman began the season in Pawtucket but was called up by the Red Sox on April 14. He will join the Pawsox on Sunday or Monday in Columbus, Ohio, where the club will begin a series with the New York Yankees farm club.

NL Roundup

Gross, 5-7, allowed eight hits in snapping a personal three-game losing streak and gave Philadelphia its first victory against New York in seven games this season.

Mike Schmidt led off the second with a single and Lance Parrish followed with a single. One out later, Chris James doubled off New York left-hander Sid Fernandez, 3-4, scoring Schmidt. After Luis Aguayo struck out, Gross singled to score two runs.

The Phillies took a 5-0 lead in the third when Rick Schu led off with a single, and one out later, Parrish hit his seventh homer of the season, a long drive over the right-field fence.

Fernandez was unable to throw his curveball for strikes and the Phillies jumped on his fastball. In four innings, Fernandez allowed five runs and seven hits, striking out two.

Gross had retired 10 straight, when Howard Johnson led off the seventh inning with his 15th homer of the season. It was the Mets' 10th homer against the Phillies this year and Johnson's third.

After Johnson's homer, the Mets added a run when they loaded the bases on three singles and pinch-hitter Kevin McReynolds hit a run-scoring grounder to short. Jeff Calhoun came on to get Keith Hernandez to fly out and end the inning.

Expos 5, Cardinals 1

At Montreal, Bob Sebra pitched a six-hitter, striking out a career-high 10 batters, and Hubie Brooks drove in three runs as the Montreal defeated St. Louis 5-1 Friday night.

The victory was the Expos' fifth in six games with the East Division-leading Cardinals this season. Sebra, 4-3, walked none en route to his second complete game of the season. Sebra's last victory was on May 26 against Los Angeles.

Pirates 6, Cubs 2

At Pittsburgh, Andy Van Slyke drove in three runs with a solo homer and two-run single and threw out a runner at the plate as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Chicago Cubs 5-2 Friday night.

Bobby Bonilla's one-out, pinch-hit RBI double triggered a three-run Pittsburgh seventh inning as the Pirates beat the Cubs for the fifth time in seven meetings this season.

Barry Jones, 1-1, the third Pirates' pitcher, retired the only batter he faced to earn the victory. Don Robinson pitched the final two innings for his 16th save.

Paul Nove of the Cubs became the third player in major league history, and the second in 11 days, to be caught stealing twice in the same inning.

Nove apparently was thrown out by catcher LaValliere in the third, but was ruled safe when shortstop Pedrique dropped the throw. A batted later, LaValliere threw out Nove as he tried to steal third.

HOT LANGER LEADS GHO

CROWWELL — Bernhard Langer rode a hot putter to a second 65 and a two-stroke lead over Wayne Levi after Friday's second round of the $700,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open golf tournament.

The West German birdied four of his last five holes to pull ahead at 12-under-par 130 after two rounds over the par-71, 6,700-yard Tournament Players Club of Connecticut course.

Langer, who has six top-10 finishes in the United States this year although he hasn't won since 1985, made a 66-foot putt for a birdie on the par-3 fifth hole, his 14th hole of the day. Then, after scrambling for par on the sixth hole, Langer finished his round with three more birdies.

"I probably played slightly better Thursday," said Langer, who has two victories this season in Europe. "I hit a few weak shots here and there today. I scrambled around and finished strong by making some good putts coming in."

Levi, who shot a 7-under 64 to lead the opening round, started in the afternoon when a steady rain hampered playing conditions. He managed a 66, including birdies on three of his final four holes, to stay within two strokes of the lead at 132.

"I got off to an awful start," he said. "I thought this round might turn out as bad as the first one was good. But then I settled down and played some good solid golf."

"It was difficult at times, playing in the rain. It wasn't really raining hard enough to be bothersome. It was distracting more than anything."

Paul Azinger, Gene Sauers and Dan Forsman were at 8-under 134, four strokes behind Langer.

Azinger, the No. 2 money winner on the PGA Tour, shot a 65 to pull into contention after an opening-round 69.

Playing in a group with Langer, Azinger played a bogey-free round with six birdies to keep from losing any ground to his playing partner.

Sauers, who finished third in the Heritage Classic in April, followed an opening-round 66 with a 68.

Tom Watson, Jim Thorpe, Vance Heafner and Harry Taylor were five strokes behind at 7-under 135.

Bernhard Langer salutes the crowd after making a birdie two on the fifth hole during second-round play Friday at the Greater Hartford Open. Langer leads the tournament at 12-under-par 130.
