NORTH SAYS CASEY USED SECRET FUND

By Harry F. Rosenthal
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lt. Col. Oliver North testified Friday that the late CIA director, William J. Casey, welcomed the fund created by secret arms sales to Iran because he could use it for operations other than supplying the Nicaraguan contras with weapons.

However, in his fourth day of testimony before the congressional Iran-contra committees, North denied that using the fund meant "a CIA outside of the CIA" was being created, as a committee lawyer suggested.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, a member of the panel, said the testimony about the fund was "perhaps one of the most serious revelations" of the hearings because it showed a plan to circumvent Congress for secret operations.

Senate committee chairman Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, saw the plan as "the creation and maintenance of a secret government within our government."

North said that once, by using the funds, he was able to obtain a ship overnight after Casey had said, "We can't find one anywhere else: Get a ship."

After that success, he said, he received a note from John Poindexter, his boss at the National Security Council, objecting that North's operational role was becoming too public and ordering him not to talk to anyone else, including Casey, about it.

At one point, North said, Poindexter said to him in regard to the diversion of Iranian arms sales profits to the contra rebels, "This had better never come out."

"I took steps to ensure that it didn't and they failed," North said.

For the first time since the hearings began, members of the House and Senate committees squabbled publicly with each other, arguing over the questioning of North by Senate committee counsel Arthur Liman.

There were complaints of unfairness from House Republicans, including Florida Rep. Bill McCollum, who said Liman was "acting like a prosecutor ... instead of a fact-finder."

Senators of both parties disagreed, and Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., retorted that he thought Liman's questioning was "clearly within proper bounds," citing McCollum's previous words as supporting the need for close interrogation.

McCollum, he said, had declared in regard to earlier testimony about secret activities by North and others, "I think that that in itself may well be a crime. If it is not a crime it is certainly one of the highest acts of insubordination."

North, during his testimony, repeated his earlier statement that he lied to Congress about his activities with the contras to save lives, but Liman asked him if the real reason was because Congress did not want the contras supported.

"If Congress decided nobody in the United States should render support whatsoever to the Nicaraguan Democratic Resistance then it should have passed a law saying that," replied

Policemen never had a chance when they went to make arrest

INKSTER, Mich. (AP) — Policemen sent to a motel to serve arrest warrants on bad check charges encountered a woman and her three sons armed with several guns and apparently had no chance to shoot or negotiate before three officers were killed, authorities said Friday.

The four suspects, who had claimed to be holding the officers hostage, kept police at bay for 10 hours at the Bungalow Motel in this Detroit suburb before surrendering at 3:15 a.m. Friday.

Police Chief James Buckley said an automatic weapon, a high-powered rifle, a shotgun, handguns and a flare gun were found in the motel room. Mayor Betty Miller said police also found flak jackets and gas masks.

As many as 1,000 shots had been fired during the first three hours, Buckley said.

One of the suspects was identified as Alberta Easter, 69, the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office said. The other three suspects were her sons, said Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano.

The names of the sons were withheld pending issuance of warrants and arraignment, tentatively scheduled for noon Saturday in Westland, said a secretary who refused to identify herself.

One of the sons was thought to be a kidney patient who requires dialysis treatment, and he was taken to Westland Medical Center after his arrest. The Detroit News reported.

The slain policemen were identified as Sgt. Ira Parker, 41, a 15-year veteran, and officers Clay Hoover, 24, and Dan Dubiel, 36. Dubiel had been with the department 13 years, and Hoover joined the department in March, officials said.

Each was shot five to nine times, said police dispatcher Philip Rogers.

Buckley said Friday morning that no motive had been determined.

The woman had told reporter Bill Proctor of WXYZ-TV during the standoff that she was upset about a real estate deal that had soured and led to the bad check charge.

Hoover and Dubiel apparently encountered a problem when they tried to serve the warrants, and they called for Parker's assistance, Buckley said.

"As soon as he (Parker) entered the room, a barrage of shots erupted," the chief said. "Right now it does not appear extremely likely they (Hoover and Dubiel) encountered any weapons initially."

An unidentified policeman reacts during the long ordeal at a motel in Inkster, Mich., in which three of his fellow officers were slain.

The officers apparently had no chance to return fire. "There was just no negotiating there," said former Police Chief Anderson Young. "Parker ... has negotiated himself and others out of these situations before. He got results."

"If Officer Parker couldn't get himself and anyone else out of that situation, no one else in the department could."

House of Foxes' landlord sues town for character defamation

By George Layne
Herald Reporter

A Manchester man has filed a lawsuit against the town seeking up to $3 million for what he claims was damage done to his reputation when he was arrested in 1985.

Paul J. O'Bright was arrested twice that year on charges that he was promoting prostitution at the former Little House of Foxes massage parlor on Main Street. The charges were later thrown out in court.

O'Bright, a Grissom Road resident, is claiming in the lawsuit that he suffered "great mental anguish and public humiliation, disgrace, (and) suffered damage to his reputation and his good name as an accountant and tax consultant."

The charges had been dismissed by a Superior Court judge, although the state is currently appealing the second dismissal, said O'Bright's attorney, Michael A. Peck.

Peck claims that police were "over-reaching" when they arrested O'Bright, who owned the building at 288 Main St. that housed the Little House of Foxes. Peck said O'Bright was merely the owner of the building, and not involved in the operation of the massage parlor.

Police Chief Robert D. Lannan and Detective Russell Wood, both of whom are named in the suit, could not be reached for comment Friday.

The suit seeks $1 million, but also seeks double or triple damages under provisions in state law that allow the higher awards if there was malicious intent or if there was no probable cause for the complaint.

Peck said he does not expect his client will win $1 million. He said O'Bright has spent more than $10,000 in legal fees defending himself, but is more interested in defending his reputation than winning damages.

O'Bright said Friday he no longer owns the building, but said it was one of several properties he owned.

When he was arrested for the second time in November 1985, police charged that O'Bright and Gerold Stratton headed J.P. Associates, which operated the massage parlor.

"That's incorrect," O'Bright said Friday. He declined to comment

O'Bright was first charged in July 1985 for promoting prostitution in the second degree after police claimed he knowingly profited from prostitution, according to the lawsuit. That charge was dismissed in October 1985.

He was arrested again on the same charge because there was a dispute over whether the judge dismissed the first charge with prejudice. Peck said, which would have prevented police from charging him a second time.

The second charge was dismissed with prejudice. The lawsuit claims the second arrest was done with malice to harass O'Bright.

Manchester police raided the massage parlor in June 1985, and 14 people were arrested. They included Stratton, who was convicted on three counts of permitting prostitution. He was fined $1,500 and given six years' probation.

Six women were also arrested, five of them for engaging in prostitution. Two were convicted, but the other four were found guilty of lesser charges.

North says Casey used Iran-contra fund

North. The law passed by Congress forbade military support and covert aid by intelligence agencies.

Despite the seriousness of some of the topics, the tone during much of Friday's proceeding seemed less tense than on previous days.

Once, North asked Liman with a smile if the attorney was criticizing him for not shredding well enough.

"My eyesight has suffered from reading what you left behind," Liman answered, provoking laughter in the Senate Caucus Room.

North, who contends he has been flooded with public support, placed two big stacks of telegrams on the witness table in view of the committees and the television cameras.

On a somber note, security at the hearings was increased after a death threat against North was received, said a committee aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity. No details about the threat were revealed.

As the hearings continued on Capitol Hill:

■ In a legal setback for North at the nearby U.S. Courthouse, Chief U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. upheld the Justice Department's March 5 backup appointment of independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh, whose authority to investigate the Iran-contra affair has been challenged by North on several fronts.

■ At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said North's testimony has provided President Reagan with a wealth of new information about events that occurred in his White House. "We don't know the facts of what happened. We don't know about meetings. We don't know about conversations," he said.

Fitzwater also corrected initial White House statements this week which said Reagan had not taken any time out during his workday to watch North's testimony. He said Friday that Reagan watched the live broadcast of the hearings on Wednesday for a half hour before a speech-making trip to New Britain, Conn., and also watched for a half hour Thursday afternoon, in addition to keeping up with news reports.

At the hearing, Liman questioned North about the Poindexter memo on not sharing information with Casey.

"Would you agree this here is the ultimate covert operation — even one you should not talk to the director of central intelligence about?" Liman asked.

"The problem that generated this note was that Director Casey had told someone on his staff that they could go to me for the ship," North responded. "I was out of town or out of the office."

The call was placed to the office of Ken deGraffenreid, then senior director of intelligence programs for the National Security Council, a man whom North identified as the normal contact with the CIA.

"That's what generated this note,"

North said. "It was not my indiscretion in that case, it was Director Casey's, unfortunately."

To that Liman responded: "So this business of covert operations reached a point where not only Congress was regarded as too indiscreet to be told, but that even the director of central intelligence made that list." He referred back to North's earlier testimony that he lied to Congress and withheld information because he wanted to protect secret sources.

North said Casey, who died of brain cancer May 6, "was interested in the ability to have an off-the-shelf, self-sustaining entity to do certain activities on behalf of the United States."

Asked whether he was not shocked by the proposal, North said there was not necessarily a violation of laws if Casey used the organization for covert activities. "Maybe I'm overly naive," he said, "but what would be wrong with that?"

Asked whether the ship, which was used for making broadcasts off the shore of an unnamed hostile country, was not in fact bought with funds generated by the Iranian arms sales, North said, heatedly: "It didn't cost the taxpayers of the United States a single cent."

Setback for North: Walsh authority upheld

By James Rowley
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal judge on Friday upheld independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh's authority to investigate the Iran-Contra affair and to enforce a grand jury subpoena against Lt. Col. Oliver North as part of the investigation.

In a legal setback for North, Chief U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. upheld Walsh's March 5 backup appointment by the Justice Department — an appointment aimed at blunting an earlier constitutional challenge by North to Walsh's designation by a special court under the Ethics in Government Act.

Robinson's decision did not deal with the constitutionality of the law.

The case that was ruled upon Friday arose from North's appeal of a contempt of court citation for refusing to comply with a grand jury subpoena for a sample of his handwriting, according to court records and to sources who have commented only on condition they not be named.

Most of the case is still under seal because it involves a grand jury subpoena.

Robinson said Friday he was also issuing a sealed order, which presumably directs the former National Security Council aide to comply with the subpoena.

"We very much appreciate the prompt ruling and the reassurance of continuity for our investigation," Walsh said in a statement.

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said the department was pleased with the ruling, which he said "enables the independent counsel to proceed with this important investigation."

There was no immediate comment from North's attorneys.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here, ruling on North's May 8 appeal of the contempt order, had ordered Robinson to consider the validity of the backup appointment.

The appeals court had also directed Robinson to determine whether any relationship between the independent counsel's office and the special court that appointed Walsh under the Ethics in Government Act required a review of the statute's constitutionality.

"Because the attorney general in this case chose to appoint the same individual under the regulation, the court need not address the constitutionality of the appointment provision of the act," Robinson said.

In his opinion, Robinson said the Justice Department appointment "was factually and legally valid and that appropriate authority has been vested in him and his associates."

Robinson noted that a 1974 Supreme Court ruling upheld the department's authority to appoint the Watergate special prosecutor. And he wrote, "The authority and independence of the Watergate special prosecutor was almost identical to that enjoyed by Mr. Walsh."

The judge also dismissed arguments by North's attorneys that Walsh had not properly accepted the Justice Department appointment.

Walsh's signature on the department's appointment form "indicates that he, although independent counsel under the Ethics in Government Act, consented to the attorney general's appointment of him as independent counsel under the regulation."

In a side issue, the judge dismissed as irrelevant Walsh's disagreement with the Justice Department over whether his office is inside or outside the agency. Robinson agreed with the department that the independent counsel is part of Justice.

Plea entered in assault on cop

A South Windsor man charged last month in connection with the assault of a Manchester police officer pleaded not guilty to that and other charges Wednesday in Manchester Superior Court.

Joseph P. Angeloni, 21, assaulted Manchester officer James Neiswanger on June 12 near Nathan Hale School while trying to escape from custody, police have said. At the time, Angeloni was being questioned by officers in connection with a burglary in East Hartford.

In that incident, Angeloni was charged with assaulting a police officer, escape from custody, first-degree burglary and breach of peace. The burglary charge was brought against him because he tried to enter a house on Cottage Street to escape the officer pursuing him, police said.

Angeloni also pleaded not guilty Wednesday to the following charges: third-degree burglary, two counts of sixth-degree larceny, third-degree assault, risk of injury to a minor, tampering with a witness and two counts of first-degree failure to appear.

Angeloni's attorney, David Wenc of Windsor Locks, would not comment on the case on Thursday.

Angeloni is being held at the Morgan Street lockup in Hartford. His next court appearance is scheduled July 23.

Detour in effect on Vernon St.

A detour will be imposed Monday on the section of Vernon Street between Richmond Drive and Knowlwood Drive, and will be in force for the rest of this month and August, acting town engineer William Camosci announced Friday.

Vernon Street is being reconstructed. Another section of Vernon Street between the eastern and western branches of Lydall Street will be opened within the next week or two, Camosci said.

To get around the new detour, motorists should use Richmond Street, Kennedy Road and Kent Drive, Camosci said.

He said the detour is needed so that the contractor can blast rock to make a 7-foot deep cut to relocate water and gas lines that must remain active during the work.

Emergency vehicles will be able to get into the area and access will be permitted to the four houses located on the stretch of road. Camosci said the contractor, Bristol Construction Co. of Bristol, is working "full blast" on the Vernon Street reconstruction. The Board of Directors Tuesday agreed to send a written complaint to the state Department of Transportation, over what they feel are unjustified delays in the work.

Public Works Director George A. Kandra told the directors at their Tuesday meeting that the contractor had recently completed another job and would be free to work full time on Vernon Street.

Laser Games takes its application to town

Now it's Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas O'Marra's turn to tackle controversy

By George Lavna
Herald Reporter

The firm hoping to establish the controversial Laserquest game business on East Middle Turnpike made a formal application Friday to convert the building into an amusement center, Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas R. O'Marra said Friday.

The application sets into motion the town's review of the plans to see if the business would be allowable under zoning regulations. A decision must be made within 30 days, but O'Marra said he did not know when he would conclude his review.

The application was submitted by Laser Games of Hartford, Inc. nine minutes before town offices closed at 4:30 p.m. O'Marra said that because the blueprints were filed so late in the day, he had not had a chance to examine them and could not comment on them.

The Manchester Herald learned of the application after town offices closed, and also could not review them.

The building would be converted into hallways to resemble the inside of an outer space vehicle. Players would be equipped with a laser beam device that would be used to disable the equipment of simulated beings.

In a preliminary finding, O'Marra has already indicated the game would probably be allowable for the business zone that the building is in.

If O'Marra makes the same finding, opponents of Laserquest have said they are likely to appeal the decision to the town's Zoning Board of Appeals. Laser Games of Hartford, Inc. also can appeal to the ZBA if O'Marra rules that the building isn't allowable.

Friday's application follows an application made last week to convert about one-third of the building into the lobby for the amusement center. The plans submitted Friday detail the section of the building to be used for the game itself.

Earlier this week, a company official indicated the plans probably would be submitted before July 20. That is when a public hearing is scheduled by the town Board of Directors on a proposed ordinance that would effectively prohibit the business.

If O'Marra decides in favor of the business before an ordinance is passed, there is uncertainty whether the law would apply retroactively to Laserquest. O'Marra, and Town Attorney John W. Cooney, have said it might be possible to apply the ordinance retroactively.

Officials from the Laser Games have said the town directors are overstepping their authority in proposing such an ordinance. They have argued that only the town zoning officials have any say in the matter.

Mill owners get a judge's OK to do minor work

By George Lavna
Herald Reporter

A West Haven firm can continue with some minor repair work to the Weaving Mill building in Manchester's Cheney National Historic District, a Hartford Housing Court judge ruled Friday.

However, Judge Samuel S. Goldstein kept in place a part of a restraining order issued earlier this week that prevents major reconstruction to convert the building into 249 apartments.

Goldstein decided to allow Brophy Ahern to repair the roof, repair windows and sandblast walls on the third floor in the north wing, discontinue all exposed power lines, remove trees that might damage the building and conduct other emergency repairs necessary for health and safety.

Goldstein also ordered that no other tenants be allowed to move into the building.

The partial restraining order will remain in effect until a trial is held on a complaint brought by Kibbe I. Gerstein, whose business, Kage Co. Inc., is located in the building. No date for that proceeding has been scheduled, a court clerk said Friday.

Gerstein is the former owner of the mill at 61 Elm St. He wants to regain ownership in order to sell it to Century Development Corp. of Hartford. The complaint was filed in order to challenge Brophy Ahern's possession of the building. Gerstein's attorney has said.

Brophy Ahern bought the building last month for $2.4 million from Silk Mill Associates, the firm Gerstein had sold it to. However, Gerstein tried to reclaim the property after Silk Mill defaulted on a mortgage deed Gerstein owned.

That deed and others were sold by Gerstein to Century. Century filed two quitclaim deeds against Silk Mill to help Gerstein reclaim the building, but in February a Superior Court judge ruled in favor of Silk Mill, allowing it to sell the building to Brophy Ahern.

The first legal battle has been over title to the building. But Gerstein and his attorney have said they are now fighting over possession of the property now that Brophy Ahern has moved in and begun work.

Gerstein and his attorney, Julie L. Aurigemma, could not be reached for comment Friday. However, Lawrence Brophy, president of Brophy Ahern, said he was pleased by the decision.

He said it should allow his firm to continue with all the minor work scheduled to be done. As for the major reconstruction work, he said he is hoping the trial on Gerstein's complaint can be heard within a month. He said he is confident the legal challenge will be overcome, and the partial restraining order lifted.

The mill building is one of a number in the historic district that either have been or are slated to be converted into apartments.

Backers say they can't back down

If and when Laserquest becomes operational, the high-tech amusement game will have cost its developers $1 million to $1.2 million in equipment alone, a company official said Friday.

In addition, developers will spend another $150,000 or so to renovate the former Mott's Shop Rite building on East Middle Turnpike, where it will be located, said Harold R. Cummings, a principle in Laser Games of Hartford, Inc.

The property will eventually be worth $2 million to $3 million, he said, and will generate significant tax dollars for the town. In addition, Cummings argued, the business will bring about 30 new jobs to town, and most of these will be filled with local residents.

With that much invested in the controversial project, he said his firm would have to challenge any legal obstacle that develops to the business's opening.

"We really don't have any choice at this point," he said, comparing it to having a house that's half constructed.

So far, no major reconstruction has occurred. On Friday, though, Laser Games applied for permission to remodel the building so that the company can open the game on Nov. 20, Cummings said.

Town zoning officials will now review the application to see if the proposed use is allowable. If rejected, Cummings said the firm would appeal to the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Cummings added that his firm has tentative plans to have two other laser centers in operation in three years. He said the tentative plans would be to have them located somewhere in northern Connecticut, although exact locations haven't been selected.

He said that the need for large, open space makes Laserquest-type operations ideal for abandoned supermarket buildings. "We've come up with a delightful way to recycle old supermarkets," Cummings said.

Restraint devices a must everywhere

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Child restraint devices now are mandatory in motor vehicles for all 50 states in the United States and the District of Columbia, according to the Rand McNally RV Park & Campground Directory.

It points out, however, that the type of restraint and the age-weight requirements for children can vary from state to state. It suggests that parents planning any interstate motor travel, first check with local motor vehicle authorities to find out if the restraint they currently have is acceptable — or even required — for their child's age-weight category.

Devil made us, teens tell cops

DANBURY (AP) — Two Brookfield teen-agers charged with assaulting a Bethel homeowner have told police they were under the influence of the devil. The youths, both 15 at the time, were charged by Bethel police with attempted murder and taken to the Bridgeport Correctional Facility. One of the youths is free pending further hearings in juvenile court, officials said Thursday.

Their names have not been released because of their ages. The youths, one of whom was just four days from his 16th birthday, are considered juveniles by the criminal justice system. That means all hearings concerning their cases must be behind closed doors, and there also will be no record of their arrests.

Police say the two Brookfield High School students entered the Bethel home and armed themselves with knives from the kitchen. They were proceeding to the bedrooms when the awakened homeowner encountered them in a hallway early Saturday morning, police said.

One of the youths attacked the 45-year-old man, who was struck in the head with a fireplace bellows and suffered a cut that needed 15 stitches to close.

A police officer who was sent to the scene was kicked so hard it was thought he might have suffered internal injuries, police said.

A police source told The News-Times of Danbury that the youths were "ranting and raving" about the devil after being taken into police custody, apparently blaming the incident on demonic powers.

In addition to the attempted murder charges, the youths were charged with first-degree burglary for slipping a screen to get into the house. They also were charged with second-degree larceny for stealing a car prior to the break-in.

Obituaries

Pauline Lacs

Pauline Lacs of Vernon, formerly of Manchester, died Friday at an area convalescent home.

She was born in Latvia and had lived in Bolton and Manchester before moving to Vernon 12 years ago.

She was a member of the Latvian Lutheran Church of Manchester.

The funeral will be Tuesday at 1 p.m. at the Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St. Manchester.

Burial will be in the East Cemetery. There are no calling hours.

William W. Duffield

William W. Duffield, 74, the son of James J. Duffield of Manchester, died Thursday at his home in Rocky Hill.

He was the husband of Olive Judson Duffield.

He was born in Lynn, Mass., and had lived in Rocky Hill for 28 years. He retired in June 1966 from Proto-Mold Plastics in Cromwell. He was a member of the First Church of Christ in Wethersfield.

Besides his wife and his son, James, he leaves a son, Michael J. Duffield of Rocky Hill; two daughters, Dail D. Connolly of Hartford and Patricia A. Duffield of Newington; five grandchildren; and two great grandchildren.

The funeral is Monday at 10 a.m. at the Rose Hill Funeral Home, 580 Elm St., Rocky Hill. Burial will be in Rose Hill Memorial Park, Rocky Hill. Calling hours are Sunday from 7 to 9 p.m.

Jerry Livingston

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry Livingston, composer of the non-sensical tune "Mairzy Doats," more serious love songs such as "The Twelfth of Never," and television themes including "77 Sunset Strip" and "Hawaiian Eye," died July 2. He was 78.

For movies, Livingston scored Walt Disney's "Cinderella," which featured the songs "Bibbidi Bobbidi Boo" and "A Wish Your Heart Makes." He also wrote the title songs for such television shows as "Casper the Friendly Ghost," "Bourbon Street Beat," "The Bugs Bunny Show" and "Lawman."

E. George Thiem

CHICAGO (AP) — E. George Thiem, 90, two-time Pulitzer Prize winner, whose investigative reporting in the Chicago Daily News was said to have saved taxpayers thousands of dollars, died Wednesday.

The Daily News, which folded in 1978, won a public-service Pulitzer in 1949 based on reporting by Thiem, who along with Roy J. Harris of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, uncovered 51 newspapermen secretly on the payroll of Gov. Dwight Green. In 1956, Thiem won a second Pulitzer after uncovering the embezzlement of $2.5 million by state Auditor Orville Hodge. After he retired from reporting in 1962, he was elected as an at-large representative in the Illinois House in 1964 and was a Sanitary District trustee from 1966-74.

John Hammond, record executive

NEW YORK (AP) — John Hammond, the record company executive and talent scout who discovered such musical stars as Billie Holiday, Bruce Springsteen and Bob Dylan, died Friday in his Manhattan apartment. He was 76.

Hammond, who had been ill for some time, was listening to a Billie Holiday recording when he died about noon, said Robert Altshuler, a CBS spokesman and longtime friend of Hammond.

Hammond, whose music-business career began in the early 1930s, spent most of his working life at Columbia Records, a division of CBS. Hammond retired in the late '70s, but continued to work for CBS as a consultant until recently.

During the years he discovered and brought Columbia such diverse recording talents as Pete Seeger, Aretha Franklin and George Benson.

Gov. O'Neill sets a special session on taxes

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill on Friday issued the formal call to state legislators for a special session July 22 to take up a couple of tax matters they couldn't resolve in the regular session that ended last month.

The House and Senate are expected to act on a bill exempting parent companies from the business services tax on services they provide to their subsidiaries. Also on the agenda will be a bill giving tax relief to property owners in cities and towns undergoing revaluation.

Also Friday, the governor's office announced that O'Neill had completed action on the 701 bills passed during the 1987 session, signing 699 into law and vetoing just two.

The tax bills got bogged down in the final days of the regular session because some Democratic leaders insisted on linking the business services tax issue with a measure allowing municipalities to tax commercial property at higher rates than residential property.

There was no disagreement on the business services tax matter — all agreed that parent companies should have such an exemption — but O'Neill and most rank-and-file Democratic legislators were strongly opposed to the so-called tax classification idea that would allow different tax rates for different kinds of property.

Under a compromise agreement worked out late in June, additional state aid to cities and towns would be granted if the share of property tax paid by owners of residential property increased by 10 percent or more as a result of revaluation.

More than 90 municipalities will go through property revaluation over the next three years, according to the governor's budget office.

The compromise calls for creation of a $155 million fund for the additional property tax relief. Of the total, $20 million to $30 million would come from the state's estimated $324 million budget surplus.

The rest of the money for the fund would come from a portion of the revenue from the state's 11 1/4 percent corporations tax on business income.

On the list of the final 13 bills released Friday, O'Neill signed into law measures that create a teen-age suicide prevention task force, study future uses of Brainard Airport outside Hartford and set up a task force on Indian affairs.

The General Assembly will have a chance to override the governor's two vetoes during the "trailer session" July 20.

The bills vetoed earlier include one aimed at closing a residential street in Hartford to truck traffic. The other was designed to expand protections of tenants.

Would-be Scout leader won't quit

MILFORD (AP) — A 69-year-old Milford woman whose bid to lead a Boy Scout troop was rejected earlier this week by the state Supreme Court may have grounds for a new appeal in the state courts based on the high-court decision, according to her attorney.

Catherine Pollard has said that she would take her fight to the U.S. Supreme Court, but her attorney now says any new action would be brought on the state level first.

"What is clear to me is that Mrs. Pollard is entitled to be a Boy Scout leader," said attorney Susan Bartholomew of New Haven. "The avenue still remains to be seen. We both agree this is not a dead issue."

In its decision, the state Supreme Court may have subtly suggested grounds on which Pollard's attempt to become the nation's first female Boy Scout leader should have been brought, Bartholomew said. Bartholomew said she may look at the state Equal Rights Amendment and fairness in employment laws as ways to pursue the case.

The Supreme Court unanimously upheld a lower court's overturning of a state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities decision ordering the Boy Scouts of America to appoint Pollard a scoutmaster.

The Supreme Court opinion, written by Chief Justice Ellen Peters, says the Scouts legally may deny scoutmaster posts to women.

But in the lower court ruling, Superior Court Judge Joseph Chermakus found that the human rights commission's ruling violated the state public accommodations law.

O'Neill names three judges

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill on Friday nominated six lawyers as Superior Court judges, including utility regulation chief John T. Downey, former Chief State's Attorney Joseph T. Gormley Jr. and former Connecticut Bar Association President Maxwell Helman.

Also nominated as judges were Assistant Attorney General Christina G. Dunnell of Newington, Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Hartmere of Milford and Robert C. Flanagan of East Haven.

"I am confident they will serve the state, and justice, well," O'Neill said.

Downey, a 57-year-old New Haven lawyer who served 20 years in a prison camp in China after his CIA plane was shot down in 1952, is chairman of the Department of Public Utility Control, a post he has held since 1985.

He made an unsuccessful bid for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination in 1982. Gormley, of Trumbull, became the state's first chief state's attorney in 1973 and remained in the job for five years.

Helman, 55, a Newington resident, was president of the bar association in 1981 and 1982 and is among the best known lawyers in the state. Dunnell, 43, has been an assistant attorney general for the past 12 years.

The 42-year-old Hartmere has served as assistant U.S. attorney since 1974.

Flanagan, 57, has practiced law in Connecticut for 24 years.

The nominations are expected to be approved on an interim basis by the legislature's Judiciary Committee, and then will have to be acted upon by the full General Assembly after the 1988 session convenes in February.

'Lost' for over 30 years

After being "lost" for more than 30 years, the thin-spined porcupine has been rediscovered in the tropical forests of eastern Brazil. The species, Chaetomys subpinosus, was feared extinct. Scientists know so little about the creature that they are not sure it is a porcupine at all. The nocturnal rodent taxonomically appears to fall somewhere between the porcupines and the spiny rats.

Frightening crime rate forces church to flee

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Parishioners of St. Joseph's Polish National Catholic Church have decided to move to their church to a neighboring community, saying crime in Bridgeport has kept their congregation from growing.

"I see a resurgence of people getting involved in the parish because they know we're relocating. They don't want to bring their children to this neighborhood. I hate to say that, but it's true," said the Rev. Anthony D. Kopka, church pastor.

St. Joseph's was founded by Polish immigrants and organized in 1907. Its first church building was constructed in 1909, while the present building was completed in 1936.

The church will be sold, and the congregation will relocate to a six-acre tract in Stratford near the parish cemetery.

Kopka said membership has been dwindling over the past 10 years. Now, most parishioners live outside the city. Only three of the 200 adult members reside in the immediate area, Kopka said.

The section in which the church is located ranks as the 10th highest crime area out of about 50 in the city, according to Joseph McCarthy, director of data processing for the city.

During the first half of last year, 3,811 crimes of all kinds occurred in the neighborhood. Figures for the first six months of 1985 show 3,379 crimes occurred there.

Although exact data for the same period this year is not available, McCarthy added, crime in the area has increased about 10 percent, and 398 serious incidents, such as homicide, rape, robbery, assault and burglary have occurred there so far.

Cesar Batalla, president of the Puerto Rican Coalition, argued that St. Joseph's should stay in the inner city.

"It surprises and angers me that some of these churches seem to cater more to the existing group instead of the neighborhood people ... The churches need to be the cornerstone to deal with the difficulties the neighborhoods are going through," he said.

Tensions linger one year after shootings

Norwalk trying to improve police relations with minority community

NORWALK (AP) — Although a year has passed since two white police officers killed a black man during a confrontation, racial and political tensions continue to linger.

Ralph Fuller, 27, who armed himself during a family dispute and refused to drop the weapon when asked by police, was shot by officers last year on July 8 when he allegedly raised the gun.

Investigations by the FBI, the chief state's attorney's office and the police department cleared the officers of any wrongdoing in the incident. A lawsuit filed by the Fuller family is still pending.

There was a second shooting death later of a Hispanic robbery suspect, 21-year-old Jay Reyes of Norwalk. He was shot twice in the chest while wrestling with a police officer who was attempting to make an arrest on Oct. 20, 1986.

The chief state's attorney and police found no violations by police in the Reyes case.

But after the Reyes shooting, the police department tried to improve sensitivity training of police officers and improve relations with the minority community.

A federal expert in police-race relations was brought in and two outside consultants were hired to develop a study on how to improve the police department's relations with the minority community.

Many in Norwalk, though, remain skeptical about whether anything has really changed.

"A year has passed, a long, hot summer is coming up and what's to stop the same thing from happening again," said Richard Fuller, director of the George Washington Carver Community Center and a cousin of Ralph Fuller. "The people on the streets, they're not going to stand for another incident."

"It's just gotten worse and worse," Fuller said.

Robert Burgess, director of NEON, the city's anti-poverty agency, said "I have not seen any visible proof that the strained relations between the police department and the minority community have improved that much."

Burgess says stricter guidelines for police officers faced with life-threatening situations must be established.

"I don't see things getting any better," said Mary T. Brown, a member of the Common Council. "They've gone as far as they can go in one direction and I don't think they can go any further without something breaking."

Mrs. Brown says more police officers should live in the community where they work, so they know the "social atmosphere and needs."

She said more foot patrols also are needed in the inner city.

Not everyone believes that nothing has been accomplished in a year. Police Chief Carl LaBianca said he has received positive feedback from many inner city neighborhoods where there has been more police participation with citizens.

"The contacts I have had with our minority community have been positive," LaBianca said. "In fact, one tenants' association sent me a complimentary letter expressing appreciation for the rapport we have established between the police and themselves."

LaBianca said the only way officers can deal with situations that are of special concern to the minority community is to assess each situation and act according to the law.

Mayor William A. Collins, a member of the Police Commission, said more needs to be done to improve relations between the department and the minority community, but says many steps have already been taken.

"I think the minority community has reacted in an extremely mature way to these incidents," Collins said. "Other communities would have blown up in the face of shootings like this."

Some say political tensions between the mayor and police chief have escalated the racial troubles.

"Carl LaBianca is making an honest effort to improve the department where improvements are needed," said the Rev. Richard Wood of Grace Baptist Church. "I think there has been entirely too much interference from the political arena."

S. Windsor Teamster loses job as 6 sentenced for embezzling

HARTFORD (AP) — The head of the Teamsters local in South Windsor lost his job as part of the sentencing of six union officials and employees Friday in federal court for accepting insurance benefits to which they weren't entitled.

U.S. District Judge Peter C. Dorsey noted that the six generally had led respectable lives, but said the sentencing was addressing an overall attitude in the Teamsters "of a lack of responsibility of taking something that doesn't belong to you."

Dorsey said the actions of the six represented "petty pilferages" but said the case in general highlighted "a flagrant disregard or laissez faire attitude or an innocent lack of understanding" of union officials' fiduciary obligations to their members.

Union members themselves sometimes appear unconcerned over the actions of their leaders, said Dorsey. The self-policing check-and-balance system of the union is not working, Dorsey said.

A union local is not anyone's "private fiefdom, rather it is held in trust for the membership," said Dorsey, who is a former Teamster.

The judge said the insurance embezzlement may have been tolerated by the union because the money is not taken directly from members and the insurance funds did not become impoverished. Union officials "put the arm on the employers" for more money for the insurance funds, he said.

The six sentenced Friday were among 15 top state Teamsters leaders and others who were indicted in June 1986 for embezzling at least $92,000 from various union insurance funds. Each of the six originally was charged with one count of embezzling and pleaded guilty to reduced charges.

Dorsey told Peter Susca to resign from his posts as secretary-treasurer of Teamsters Local 1035 in South Windsor and from the statewide Teamsters Joint Council 64.

"I paid a pretty stiff penalty," Susca told the judge. He criticized the government's prosecution of the case and said his family had suffered, including his teen-aged daughter who was taunted by schoolmates after the indictment.

Susca also was sentenced to a one-year suspended jail term and two years' probation, and was told to serve 600 hours of community service over two years. He was ordered to pay $2,600 in restitution and a $750 fine.

Susca had pleaded guilty to a charge that he allowed false records on his dental work to be maintained.

Philip Guarnaccia, 48, secretary-treasurer of Teamsters Local 493 in Montville, was sentenced to a suspended six-month jail term, two years of probation and 300 hours of community service. He was fined $750, while his lawyer said he had paid the union back $1,020 in restitution.

Guarnaccia, former president of the Teamsters Joint Council, also pleaded guilty to allowing false dental benefit claims be filed on his behalf. He was allowed to maintain his union leadership post, but was barred for three years from serving as a trustee on union insurance plans.

His lawyer, Max Shapiro of New London, said that Guarnaccia was a victim of a policy of the Teamsters dental insurance claims office to pay uncovered dental benefits to honest union leaders.

"Because they were such crooks up there ... he got swept in," Shapiro said.

George LaMontagne, who has resigned his post as president of Teamsters Local 677 in Waterbury, was sentenced to a six-month suspended jail term, one year of probation and a $750 fine. He had already paid $3,000 of restitution, his lawyer said.

LaMontagne pleaded guilty to allowing false dental claims to be filed.

Louis Mario, a member and employee of Teamsters Local 191 in Bridgeport, was given a three-month suspended sentence and one year's probation and was told to serve 200 hours of community service and pay a $400 fine. He was also ordered to pay $1,700 in restitution.

He had pleaded guilty to a felony charge that he failed to report to authorities his knowledge of falsified dental claims forms made on his behalf.

Patsy Ravalese Sr., 59, of West Hartford, was sentenced to a suspended 60-day sentence and one year's probation. He was told to pay a $250 fine and pay restitution of $2,600.

"I find myself very embarrassed and very sorry," said Ravalese, administrator of the Teamsters' Tri-State Legal Service Fund.

Stasia Altieri, a retired Local 191 clerk, was given six months probation and ordered to perform 100 hours of community service and pay a $250 fine. She was also told to pay $1,250 in restitution.

Altieri and Ravalese also pleaded guilty to one charge each of allowing inaccurate dental records.

William A. Keefe, the lead prosecutor in the case, said three more defendants face sentencing. All 15 indicted were either convicted or pleaded guilty to reduced charges.

Anthony G. Rossetti, former president of Joint Council 64, is serving a three-month jail term in connection with the case.

PRESIDENT RONALD REAGAN has bruised eyelid

Reagan hurts eye removing contact

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan bruised his lower left eyelid while removing a contact lens, creating a small bruise, the president's physician announced Friday.

Photographers noticed the tiny red bump when Reagan appeared at a meeting with administration supporters at the Old Executive Office Building.

Queried about the matter, the White House released a written statement from Reagan's physician, Army Col. John Hutton, saying the injury occurred Thursday.

"While removing the contact lens from his left eye, the president created a slight, superficial contusion (bruise) to his lower eyelid," Hutton's statement said. "The inside of the lid and eye are totally normal."

Collins' husband gives up

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Peter Holm, who had threatened to shoot anyone who tried to oust him from the house he had shared with actress Joan Collins, walked out of the hillside home Friday evening just before police arrived to evict him.

"I am a peaceful man," said Holm, who earlier had told reporters that all the doors to the house were barred and that anyone who tried to enter would face a "battle."

The onetime Swedish rock star who is engaged in a bitter divorce action with his estranged wife says he has nowhere to go.

"We have to go to the car and I have to decide what I'm going to do," Holm said as he left the house. "As far as I'm concerned, I'm right out here on the street and I don't know what I'm going to do."

Los Angeles County Superior Court Commissioner Robert A. Schneider on Friday afternoon ordered Holm to leave by 6 p.m., and Miss Collins' lawyer had asked Los Angeles police to assist with the eviction.

Holm's lawyer, Frank Steinschreiber, arrived at the home about 5:15 p.m. and waded through dozens of reporters outside the Coldwater Canyon residence.

Moments before police arrived, Holm emerged.

"The police are outside and I'm not going to be in confrontation with the police," he said. "I am a peaceful man."

Less than 90 minutes before the commissioner's ruling, Holm appeared on the balcony of the house and shouted: "Nobody's coming in, nobody, nobody, nobody. The doors can't be opened. They are barred. Every single door is barred."

Peter Holm walks below a painting of his former wife, Joan Collins, Thursday evening in Los Angeles as he shows reporters through their former home.

Three charged in deaths of aliens; two have fled

DALLAS (AP) — Federal authorities filed charges Friday against three Mexicans said to belong to a smuggling ring linked to the deaths of 18 illegal aliens in a locked boxcar.

One of the men was being held without bond Friday in the El Paso County Jail, but authorities believe the other two have fled to Mexico.

Arturo Hernandez Garcia was arrested Wednesday in Dallas on charges of transporting and encouraging aliens to enter the United States illegally, said Ronald Chandler, district director for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas.

Hernandez Garcia is the brother of Enrique Hernandez Garcia, 33, known as "El Chapulin" or "the Grasshopper," who authorities say locked the boxcar door before the train left an El Paso freight yard July 1.

Only one of the 19 men aboard survived the 14-hour ordeal as temperatures inside hit 130 degrees.

Enrique Hernandez Garcia, of El Saucito, Zacatecas state, faces 18 counts each of transporting aliens and of concealing aliens, and two counts of conspiracy, Chandler said.

The third man, Manuel Hernandez Hernandez, was charged with conspiracy, transporting and concealing aliens, he said.

"We believe 'Chapulin' is the one who did close the door on the boxcar, and the guy in custody is one of the principals of the operation," said INS spokesman Mario Ortiz.

Stephen Martin, commissioner of the INS Southern Region, said additional agents would be hired to increase the INS and Border Patrol presence in North Texas because many of the aliens are headed to the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"We're not going to tolerate it. I find it repugnant. We're going to stop this foolishness," Martin said.

Just a week after the 18 aliens were found dead in the boxcar, Border Patrol agents found 19 men trapped in a sweltering trailer atop a flatcar in Hebronville, 60 east of Laredo. Many of the men were dazed but none needed medical treatment.

Jose Rubalcaba of the Judicial State Police in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, just across the border from El Paso, said his agency had been coordinating its search with the Border Patrol.

Pvt. 'Slovik's' body finally gets home

DETROIT (AP) — Pvt. Eddie Slovik's remains, accidentally sidetracked to San Francisco, finally came home to Detroit on Friday, more than four decades after his execution for desertion in World War II.

A crate containing Slovik's body arrived at Detroit Metropolitan Airport about 4:30 p.m., 21 hours behind schedule because it had been shipped to the wrong city.

It was loaded into a casket draped with an American flag and carried away in a hearse, to be reburied Saturday at a Detroit cemetery with a Roman Catholic ceremony in both English and Polish.

"After seven years and all those obstacles we faced, he's finally here," said Bernard Calka, 60, undaunted by Thursday's problem.

"I talked to his relatives this morning and they're very joyous," said Calka, who won permission to return Slovik's body from a numbered grave in France.

Calka said he took up Slovik's case because "I realized this is history, and Eddie Slovik is an American and I'm an American, he's a Catholic and I'm a Catholic, and of course he was Polish and I'm Polish."

Slovik's body had been scheduled to arrive Thursday on TWA Flight 769 from New York's Kennedy International Airport.

"During the course of the night we found that it was loaded on Flight 803 and wound up in San Francisco," said Dwayne Swindle, TWA station manager in Detroit.

Slovik was 24 when he became the only U.S. soldier executed for desertion since the Civil War. He was shot by a firing squad Jan. 31, 1945, and buried among the graves of 94 other U.S. soldiers hanged for rape and murder.

Calka said his next step is to pursue a presidential pardon for Slovik "to restore some sense of dignity to a family that has suffered."

Slovik's remains were exhumed Wednesday and are to be buried next to the grave of his wife, Antoinette, who died in 1979 after years of unsuccessful efforts to obtain a presidential pardon.

PVT. EDDIE SLOVIK home to Detroit

"Her request before her death was to have Eddie brought back to the United States and buried next to her," Calka said.

Slovik's troubles began when he was 12, growing up in the Polish enclave of Hamtramck. He was arrested for breaking and entering in a foundry.

Later he was convicted of embezzlement and sent to prison. He was paroled after six months, but was linked to a stolen car and went back to prison. He was paroled again, married in 1942 and drafted on Jan. 3, 1944.

Slovik was declared a deserter later that year, a day after he reported as a replacement in an infantry company in Europe.

U.S./World in Brief

Weekend? This must be Iowa

DES MOINES, Iowa — From Van's Chat and Chew Restaurant to the Dubuque County Fairgrounds, some of the nation's most prominent politicians sipped coffee and shook hands in a weekend ritual deemed an essential step toward leading the free world.

"In Iowa, unlike any other place in North America, people will take a sip of coffee, chew that last bit of sausage and ask him precisely what he intends to do about the federal budget deficit," said Bruce Fisher, a spokesman for Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, one of the contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"The style of it is something that fits into the community," said Mark Gearan, a spokesman for Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis. "People know the coffee shops as a very nice place to visit comfortably. It's important to the campaign."

Filmmakers return to the table

HOLLYWOOD — Hours after a marathon bargaining session, filmmakers returned to the negotiating table Friday in an effort to avert the first walkout in the 51-year history of the Directors Guild of America.

Directors had set a 6 p.m. Friday deadline for the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers to respond to a complex offer on residuals and other issues made by directors July 1.

Representatives of the union and the producers, who recessed a 16-hour bargaining session at 2 a.m. Friday, were back in negotiations at midmorning.

Based on what producers propose during the talks, the guild's national board on Saturday will decide whether to order a strike, continue talks or take other action, union officials said.

"In some areas there appears to be room for movement, and in other areas crucial to our members, they (producers) appear to be inflexible," said Chuck Warn, spokesman for the directors guild.

Gar-barge cargo to be burned

NEW YORK — State and city officials agreed Friday to incinerate the unwanted cargo aboard the infamous garbage barge, but the local leader in Brooklyn where the incinerator is located vowed to fight their plan in court.

Brooklyn Borough President Howard Golden issued a statement Friday saying he would ask a judge for a restraining order to keep the garbage out of his borough. He claimed that it is a health hazard and said city officials did not give him enough advance notice of their decision.

The issue of what to do with the garbage had become a national joke as the barge was shunted from one state to another. Until Golden stepped in, the question had seemed to be resolved at a meeting involving state and city environmental officials and representatives from Islip, the town where much of the garbage originated.

Biden: Bork part of the agenda

WASHINGTON — Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden said Friday the choice of Robert Bork for the Supreme Court is designed to impose a conservative "political agenda" President Reagan has failed to get through Congress.

The Delaware Democrat, a presidential candidate who said Thursday that he "most certainly" will vote against Bork, said Friday there is a slim chance he could back the appeals court judge for elevation to the highest court.

"If I'm proven to be wrong — that Judge Bork is not part of the Reagan-Meese agenda on the court — then in fact, I would change my view. But I don't see any evidence of that at all," Biden said on a C-SPAN interview show.

Senators OK debt-limit boost

WASHINGTON — The Senate Finance Committee voted Friday to raise the national debt limit to $2.565 trillion and sent the bill to the full Senate where it will become the battleground for this year's major fight over budget reform.

Meanwhile, the White House ordered federal agencies to come up with $10 billion to $15 billion in new spending cut plans, to show President Reagan intends to meet his deficit-cutting promises under the Gramm-Rudman law without the tax increases Congress proposes.

Despite hard times, tent circus is magic

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Circus manager Jim Ridenour says life under the Big Top isn't easy these days, but the old-fashioned tent circus still holds a special magic for roustabouts and spectators alike.

"People like the closeness and intimacy of being here, setting right in front of the center ring," Ridenour says. "When a horse goes around, it flips sawdust chips up in their lap. They smell the real elephant manure, and they like it, they don't find it offensive."

Ridenour says his Great American Circus, here for a four-day run before Milwaukee's Great Circus Parade on Sunday, is one of 11 tent shows on the road in the United States this year, compared with 13 last year and 17 the year before.

"It's so hard to keep one of these things on the road," he said. "You've got to really want to."

Just paying for insurance costs his circus nearly $2,000 a day, Ridenour said.

Allan C. Hill, the 38-year-old owner of the Great American Circus, acknowledged the financial strains but said his Sarasota, Fla.-based operation is still a money-maker. Otherwise, he said, he would be in some other business.

Hill said it was an honor to be booked for the shows in Milwaukee, where circus buffs from around the nation have gathered for Sunday's parade. The event features more than 70 horse-drawn antique wagons restored at the state's Circus World Museum in Baraboo.

The tent circus remains distinct from the big arena shows presented by other circuses, such as Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey, Hill said.

"I think there will always be tent circuses around as long as there's children," said Hill, who grew up in a circus family.

"A tent circus is really the traditional circus," he said. "You smell the sawdust. You smell the manure. You breathe the canvas, just like it was 100 years ago. Nothing's changed."

A key thing that hasn't changed from the circus of a century ago is the demanding schedule of one-day stands for the troupe of 75-80 aerialists, animal trainers, jugglers, clowns and roustabouts.

The Milwaukee stay is a rare exception to the daily travel by truck and campers.

"We're playing seven days a week, seven and one-half months out of the year," Hill said. "Every day we put up this whole operation for one day, give two shows, tear it down, move 100 miles and do it all over again the next day."

Painkillers during labor create addicts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Women who take certain painkilling drugs during labor increase the risk that their offspring will become drug addicts later in life, according to a Swedish study.

The study also showed that various types of birth trauma are associated with higher suicide rates among adolescents or young adults.

Dr. Bertil Jacobson, who to report his findings Saturday at the Third International Congress on Pre and Perinatal Psychology, noted that only a tiny percentage of mothers given barbiturates or opiates at birth during the period studied produced babies who later became drug addicts.

Similarly, he emphasized that "very, very few of those who experienced trauma at birth actually committed suicide."

However, the association between the birth events and self-destructive behavior later in life was conclusively shown in the study, he said.

"People who committed suicide by violent means more often experienced mechanical birth trauma, such as forceps delivery, umbilical cord entanglement around the neck with multiple loops and breech (rear) presentation," said Jacobson, who works at the prestigious Karolinska Institute in Sweden.

"People who committed suicide by asphyxia, including hanging, drowning and poisoning by gas, more often experienced asphyxia (loss of oxygen) during birth," he said.

The study looked at 99 addicts with 144 siblings, comparing their birth records. Among addicts to opiates such as morphine or heroin, 24.5 percent were born to mothers who were given opiates and/or barbiturates while 9.6 percent of the controls' mothers were given drugs.

The Swedish researchers also looked at the birth records of 412 young people who killed themselves or died of drug or alcohol abuse between 1978 and 1984. The researchers compared those records with 2,910 people in control groups born at the same five Stockholm hospitals in the same years.

Among suicides by hanging, drowning or poisoning by gas, 10 percent suffered loss of oxygen at birth while only 2.3 percent of the controls experienced a similar birth trauma.

Among suicides by other violent means, such as firearms or leaping from heights, 20.6 percent experienced mechanical trauma at birth, including breech presentation, forceps delivery and multiple loops of the umbilical cord.

Dr. Mary L. Davenport, an obstetrician at the University of California-San Francisco and co-chairperson of the conference, said Jacobson's research could have a profound effect on obstetric practice.

"I really do think the administration of drugs to women is a risk factor," she said. "If people are worried about drug addiction, I hope they will pay attention to this. We need to be cautious about giving drugs to women in labor."

Chun steps aside as party chief

SEOUL, South Korea — President Chun Doo-hwan resigned as head of the governing Democratic Justice Party on Friday and said he would place himself above partisan politics during his last seven months in office.

No successor was named immediately, but Roh Tae-woo, whom Chun selected as the party presidential candidate, seemed certain to get the job. Giving Roh more power appeared to be one of Chun's main reasons for the action.

Chun praised Roh for recommending on June 29, after weeks of violent anti-government protest, that he agree to direct presidential elections, the release of political prisoners and other democratic reforms demanded by the opposition.

He said that "a new epoch of democracy is being ushered in."

Australians go to the polls

SYDNEY, Australia — One poll saw Labor Party Prime Minister Bob Hawke as heading for a historic third straight term as Australians voted Saturday, but another indicated John Howard's conservative coalition was closing the gap.

"I'm confident but not cocky," said Hawke, who campaigned on his government's tight-fisted policies of economic recovery.

Howard campaigned on a promise of tax cuts and said he expected to win a 10-seat majority in the House of Representatives. He is leader of the conservative Liberal Party, which would join with the National Party to form a coalition government.

Foreign policy was not an issue in the campaign, which centered on taxes and other economic issues.

About 10.4 million of Australia's 16 million people are eligible to vote for the 148-seat House and 76-seat Senate. The party that wins a majority in the lower House forms the government.

Demjanjuk's lead attorney fired

JERUSALEM — John Demjanjuk, on trial here on charges of committing Nazi war crimes, has fired the attorney who represented him for the past five years, an associate defense lawyer said Friday.

Demjanjuk's family decided to fire Buffalo, N.Y., lawyer Mark O'Connor because of the "long difficulties plaguing the defense team," said attorney John Gill in a telephone interview from his home in Cleveland, Ohio.

O'Connor was unavailable for comment. The phone at his Jerusalem hotel room rang busy for an hour and a hotel attendant told The Associated Press he had probably taken it off the hook.

His dismissal came as he and his two associates, Gill and Israeli attorney Yoram Sheftel, were in the middle of mapping out the case for the defense after five months of testimony by prosecution witnesses.

Methodists OK divestment plan

SEATTLE — A plan to sell holdings in companies that do business in South Africa, starting with those that fail to meet the Sullivan Principles, was approved by the United Methodist Board of Pensions.

The 30-member board, which manages one of the country's largest church pension funds, voted Thursday for immediate divestment of $25 million worth of holdings in six companies that had not signed the principles as of Thursday, three of the trustees said.

The board also voted to sell any interest in an undetermined number of companies that fail to achieve a Class I or Class II rating as of June 30 under the principles, which cover corporate conduct in South Africa.

United Methodists manage the nation's 30th-largest private pension fund, with about $2.75 billion in assets. About 12 percent, or $330 million, is invested in companies doing business in South Africa.

Americans drink less alcohol

NEW YORK — There was a record decrease in liquor consumption in the United States last year, but prepared cocktails seemed to be gaining favor among American drinkers.

According to a report published Friday in the Jobson's Liquor Handbook, an annual review and forecast of the distilled spirits industry, 146 million cases of liquor were consumed in 1986. The previous year, Americans had tucked away 154 million cases. That represents a 5 percent decrease in consumption.

Reporter fired on in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Soldiers fired shots and tear-gas grenades to break up a large anti-government demonstration Friday and several people were injured in a long afternoon of street skirmishes throughout the city.

No figures were available on how many people were injured. Reporters at the scene said none appeared seriously hurt. They said soldiers beat some people with rubber truncheons and also fired shotguns at the crowds.

Geoffrey Biddulph, 23, a reporter for The Arizona Republic in Phoenix, was among the people hit by pellets.

Biddulph, of Mill Valley, Calif., described his wounds as minor and said he was hit in the back by 16 pellets when police in a truck fired at least two shots at him and another person nearby.

As darkness fell, sporadic gunfire could be heard in various parts of the capital. Despite the attacks, the opposition vowed to continue the demonstrations.

Ricardo Arias Calderon, head of the opposition Christian Democratic Party, called the action by the military "the most unjustified, indiscriminate repression in recent history."

"It will strengthen the movement," he added. "We will continue our public protests because this crisis surpasses all acceptable limits."

Arias Calderon said he had received reports of dozens of people injured by soldiers and the demonstrations had been "completely peaceful and with absolutely no provocation."

Thousands of demonstrators tried to gather at the church of El Carmen in the downtown banking district, in defiance of a ban on public assembly, to demand the removal of Panama's military chief and strongman, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

About half an hour before the rally was to begin at 3 p.m., several hundred soldiers swept down the main avenue, Via Espana, in front of the white rococo church.

Firing tear gas and shotguns, the soldiers moved the crowds off the streets and sidewalks for several blocks in each direction.

West proposes talks on cutting back arms

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The 16 NATO countries on Friday submitted a long-awaited proposal for new talks on European military security and conventional arms reduction.

It was the most significant proposal from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization since 1980, said Warren Zimmermann, U.S. ambassador to the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

The Communist bloc had given the conference several proposals on security talks and had criticized the Western alliance for not presenting one earlier.

NATO and the seven-member Warsaw Pact have been holding exploratory talks since Feb. 17 on the possibility of new all-European arms negotiations.

On Friday, the West proposed two sets of talks within the framework of the conference, which is the third follow-up conference to the 1975 Helsinki conference on military security, economic cooperation and human rights.

The proposal differed from the Warsaw Pact's proposal last month by omitting mention of battlefield nuclear weapons.

One set of talks proposed by the Western alliance would involve all 35 nations in what would amount to a continuation of the Conference on Security Building Measures, which ended last year in Stockholm, Sweden.

In Stockholm, the 35 NATO, Warsaw Pact and neutral nations agreed on some forms of verification, including informing each other about military maneuvers and inviting observers to military exercises.

The new proposal would make the verification agreements binding. Verification has been a stumbling block at the 13-year-old talks on Mutual and Balanced Force Reduction, also held in Vienna.

The West also would like to see agreements on a broader exchange of much more detailed military information, said Portuguese Ambassador Jose Queiroz de Barros. The West contends the East has more troops in Europe and does not give accurate accounts in official statistics.

The second set of talks would involve only the 23 nations that make up NATO and the Warsaw Pact because they have the most military power in Europe, Zimmermann said. These talks would concentrate on arms reduction.

France had agreed with the Warsaw Pact that all 35 nations, including neutral and non-aligned countries, should participate in these talks. But France later dropped its objection.

Takeover talks raise disclosure questions

By Bill Menezes
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — When does a company have to let its shareholders know it has caught the eye of a potential buyer?

When the question applies to preliminary talks, there is sharp disagreement over when a company must disclose it has been approached about a possible buyout or merger.

Southland Corp.'s recent decision to go private in a $5.1 billion leveraged buyout raised furor among some shareholders and renewed the unsettled debate over whether the most informal takeover talk should be public knowledge.

The Securities and Exchange Commission requires companies to disclose merger talks or other material information that could account for unusual activity in their stock. But the courts, stock speculators and corporations disagree over what constitutes such information.

That creates a big gray area over what types of merger discussions must be public knowledge, and when they must be disclosed.

Many speculators and other shareholders claim a company should publicize even the most embryonic takeover discussions if its stock is behaving unusually so they can make an informed decision about buying or selling the shares.

But corporations and dealmakers contend disclosure of preliminary talks could have a chilling effect on potential deals.

"The problem is if you start talking too soon, then the potential acquirer runs away," says attorney William Golub. "The stock starts to move up and he gets priced out of the market."

Golub, a member of the New York firm Rosenman & Colin, represents Basic Inc., which is engaged in a landmark legal battle over the disclosure issue and will argue its case before the next term of the Supreme Court.

The issue was raised most recently this past week by the buyout of Southland. The company, which operates the 7-Eleven convenience store chain and other enterprises, said last Sunday it had agreed to be taken private by an investor group led by the Thompson family, which co-founded and controlled Southland.

Southland stock had been rising for months on rumors the company was a takeover target, but the company maintained it knew of no reason for the activity in its shares. Last month, after the New York Stock Exchange asked it to respond to the stock activity, Southland stated only that it was considering a restructuring.

But in SEC documents it filed about the buyout Southland disclosed its management had met several times with Canadian investor Samuel Belzberg, a prominent corporate raider who claimed he owned a 4.9 percent stake in Southland and suggested a possible buyout of the company.

Shareholder lawsuits filed to block the buyout include allegations that Southland violated federal securities law by failing to disclose the talks with Belzberg.

Southland maintained it did not disclose those talks because Belzberg had made no firm offers, and it had no proof Belzberg actually owned a Southland stake.

The New York Stock Exchange is analyzing heavy trading in Southland stock prior to the buyout announcement.

One Wall Street professional, who asked not to be named, complained that the company kept the overtures quiet because it wanted to keep control of its situation until it had a buyout plan ready.

"What occurred here is the company just did not want to open itself up to a public auction until the last possible moment," he said.

"This is unbelievably important and salient information. There is absolutely no reason that it can not be given to the public."

Highlights of the week

■ Australian investor Robert Holmes a Court disclosed he had raised his stake in Texaco Inc. to 9.5 percent of the company's common stock, heightening speculation that a settlement was near in Texaco's multibillion-dollar legal battle with Pennzoil Co.

■ U.S. auto sales fell by 13.8 percent in late June from a year earlier, according to reports by the nation's automakers.

■ The Federal Reserve said Americans paid off $560 million more in credit than they borrowed during May, the first reduction in consumer debt since a $4 million drop in July 1982.

■ The nation's largest general retailers reported mostly favorable June sales results, and analysts surveying the figures said they expected consumer spending to continue at a cautious rate.

■ Oil futures prices moved above the key level of $21 a barrel and remained there at week's end as tension escalated in the Persian Gulf after an Iranian gunboat attacked a U.S.-operated supertanker.

■ The Agriculture Department said U.S. farmers are harvesting a winter wheat crop forecast at 1.57 billion bushels, a 4 percent increase from last year despite the smallest acreage in nine years.

■ A federal appeals court upheld the Federal Reserve's decision to allow banks to offer investment advice and brokerage services, a ruling regarded as a victory for the banking industry in its attempts to further invade Wall Street.

■ A federal judge denied a defense motion that accused prosecutors of improperly leaking secret grand jury information about a major insider trading case to the press. The case involved Wall Street professionals Robert M. Freeman, Richard B. Wigton and Timothy L. Tabor.

■ The Senate voted to require employers to give workers 60 days' notice of plant closings or large layoffs, including the action as a provision in a sweeping trade bill that faces the threat of a presidential veto.

■ The Senate Finance Committee voted to increase the national debt limit to $2,565 trillion, setting the stage for full Senate action next week on a plan to restore automatic spending cuts to the Gramm-Rudman law.

■ Chrysler Corp. agreed to pay a record $1.6 million to settle federal charges of health and safety violations at its Newark, Del. assembly plant.

■ A record 919 companies changed their names in the first half of 1987, spurred by the continuing high pace of corporate acquisitions and restructurings, according to the consulting firm Anspach Grossman Portugal Inc.

■ Charles Skibo resigned as president of US Sprint Communications Co. as the long-distance company reported a $350 million pre-tax charge against its second-quarter earnings.

Business in Brief

Wholesale prices up modestly

WASHINGTON — Wholesale price increases eased in June to a modest 0.2 percent, the government said Friday in a report economists saw as fresh evidence that inflation is likely to stay tame through most of the year.

The slight rise in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index — equivalent to an annual rate of 2.9 percent inflation — was due mostly to higher energy prices.

Still, for the first half of 1987, wholesale prices climbed an annual rate of 4.5 percent — moderate by the double-digit standards of the late 1970s and early 1980s but still the briskest six-month clip in five years. Producer prices, one step short of the retail level, had fallen 2.5 percent in 1986.

The June increase followed rises of 0.3 percent in May and 0.7 percent in April and was the best performance since a 0.1 percent increase in February.

Peretto is assistant treasurer

HARTFORD — Maggie Peretto of the adjustments department of the Connecticut Bank and Trust Co. has been elected assistant treasurer.

Peretto is responsible for response to customers, branches and other bank adjustment requests. In addition, she maintains control over the adjustment suspense account and identifies error trends throughout the item processing systems. She joined the bank in 1971.

Peretto has attended Central Connecticut State University and Business School in Cuba and has completed several American Institute of Banking and CBT-sponsored courses. She and her family reside in Manchester.

Firm gets aid for new effort

HARTFORD — The Connecticut Product Development Corp. will provide $602,000 to a Glastonbury firm under its risk capital program to help improve and market a support, treatment and diagnosis system for pulmonary ailments.

Advanced Pulmonary Technologies Inc. will use the funds to further develop a ventilator system to aid persons suffering from Adult Respiratory Distress Syndrome (ARDS).

APT is a joint venture of Hartford Lung Physicians and staff members from Scientific Research Associates Inc.

First Federal conversion done

EAST HARTFORD — George E. Stewart, president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of East Hartford, has announced the completion of the association's conversion to a stock-chartered savings and loan association. The stock offering resulted in $22 million in new capital for the association.

"We are very pleased that over 70 percent of the stock was purchased in the community offering which is in keeping with First Federal's objective of serving that local community market," Stewart said. "And, we have over 2,000 shareholders giving us a broad foundation of investors," he continued.

Stewart said the proceeds will be used for general business purposes including the origination of mortgage and other loans and the investment in securities.

No new pension rules needed

WASHINGTON — The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission on Friday won reversal of a court order that had directed it to issue new pension regulations for workers who stay on the job until age 70.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here said the EEOC was not required to promulgate rules requiring employers to credit the service of workers between age 65 and 70 when calculating pensions.

How mutual funds are priced

QUESTION:

Mutual funds set their share prices every business day. That must involve some guesswork on days when there is no buying or selling activity in a fund's shares. Surely, there are such days and the fund's value fluctuates anyway.

As a skeptic of human nature, am I correct in being suspicious that the opportunity for manipulation exists?

ANSWER: In this imperfect world, some possibility of market manipulation has always existed, exists today and will exist in the future. Lately, newspapers have carried many stories of Wall Street rip-offs. When huge amounts of dollars are involved, temptation exists.

However, mutual funds have been notably free from scandal. And there's little or no chance of manipulating a mutual fund's share price.

The "pricing" of a mutual fund's shares is done in three steps: 1. The fund's assets, which consists mostly of the stocks, bonds and/or other securities held as investments, are totaled up. 2. The fund's liabilities are subtracted from the asset amount. 3. That sum is divided by the number of fund shares outstanding — owned by investors.

The resulting number is the fund's net asset value per share. The calculation is done by the fund's custodian bank — not the fund itself.

Investors' Guide

There can be days on which no one buys shares of a particular mutual fund and on which no shareholder redeems his or her shares. You redeem shares by turning them back to the fund for the redemption price.

For most funds, the redemption price is the net asset value per share. For funds with rear-end loads called "redemption fees" or "contingent deferred sales charge," the redemption price is less than net asset value per share.

On a business day on which there is no buying or redemption activity in a mutual fund's shares, the net asset value per share will change if there is a change in the fund's assets and/or liabilities.

If the market values of the securities the fund holds in its investment portfolio rise, it stands to reason that the fund's net asset value per share will rise. If the values of those securities drop, so will the fund's net asset value per share.

QUESTION: You stated that, in newspaper price quotations on mutual funds, the "bid" price is the net asset value per share and the

"asked" or "offering" price is net asset value per share plus maximum commission.

Then why aren't the bid and asked prices the same for the so-called "no-load" mutual funds, since no commission is supposed to be charged on them? There are many of these no-load funds listed but, on every one, the asked price is greater than the bid price.

ANSWER: You must be either kidding or badly misreading newspaper mutual fund price tables. In those tables, no-load mutual fund bid and asked prices are exactly the same.

Some newspapers tables list that bid price in a column headed "NAV," for "net asset value." Others list it under the heading "Sell," because that's the price a shareholder would receive when redeeming shares. Still others use the heading "Bid."

In the next column — headed either "Buy," because that's the price at which shares could be purchased, "Offer" or "Ask" — the letters NL appear. That, of course, stands for "no load" and means the prices in the two columns are equal.

Because there is no commission charged when shares of no-load funds are purchased, the "Buy," "Offer" or "Ask" price can't possibly be higher than net asset value per share.

Load mutual funds, which do levy commissions when investors buy shares, naturally are shown with two prices in newspaper tables. But no-load mutual funds have only one price on any day.

Prices of both load and no-load funds, of course, can change from one day to the next.

Senate seeks to pressure Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate called for stepped-up pressure against Japanese trade barriers Friday and overwhelmingly approved retaliation against countries with "a consistent pattern" of unfair trade practices.

"Make no mistake about it, the Japanese and the Taiwanese and the Koreans are cheating us day after day in this trade relationship," Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., declared in urging support for the measure.

The provision was approved, 87-7, in a tentative vote and then by voice in a second ballot.

Little opposition materialized on the Senate floor. Reagan administration aides said, however, expressed opposition saying it would narrow presidential flexibility to forgo retaliation.

Sen. Dan Evans, R-Wash., told senators the measure unveiled Friday morning would not help the nation's trade picture.

The Senate tentatively approved the plan in a test vote on a technical amendment. It then planned to attach it by voice vote to a sweeping trade bill that has been under debate for three weeks.

A parade of Senate leaders rose to draw contrasts between the newly minted compromise and the House provision sponsored by Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., which calls for dollar-for-dollar retaliation against Japanese and other "excess and unwarranted" foreign trade barriers. Like most broad trade bills under consideration in Congress over the last three years, the measure would overhaul section 301 of the Trade Act, which authorizes retaliation against unfair foreign trade practices. It was the basis for President Reagan's action against Japanese electronics earlier this year to counter alleged "dumping" of semiconductors.

Under the new provisions, the U.S. trade representative would draw up a list of countries with a "consistent pattern of trade barriers and market distorting practices."

He would pinpoint the major barriers and total the cost to Americans in lost export sales.

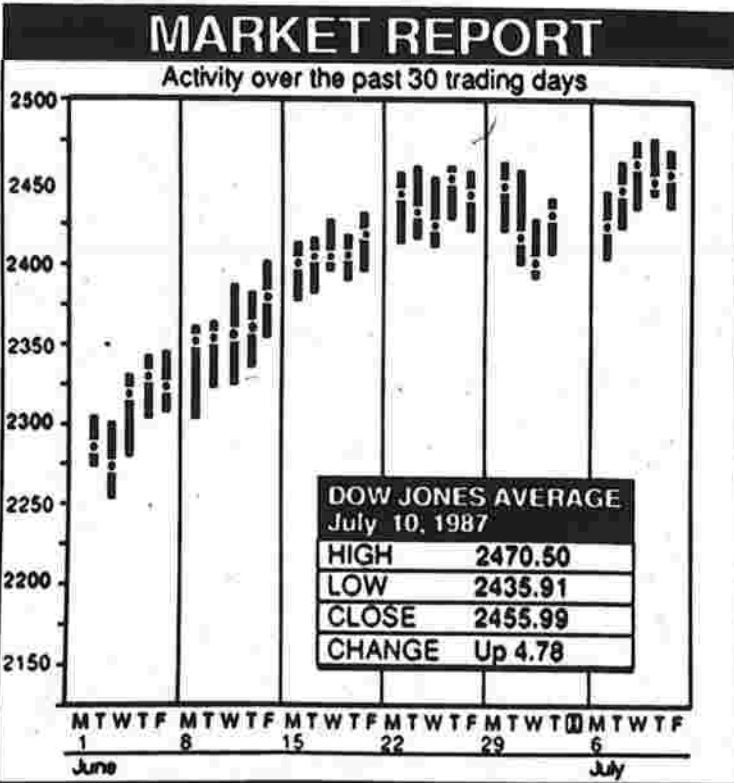

He would then be required to start a mechanism aimed at forcing specified countries to drop unfair practices or face U.S. retaliation. Failure to reach agreement would require retaliation, which usually means tariffs or quotas on the other country's products, within 19 months.

If agreement were reached on an end to the barriers, compliance would be featured in increased U.S. exports over three years.

Wall Street analysts wary over recovery in oil prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street analysts confess to some very mixed feelings these days about the continuing rally in oil prices.

The price of crude oil for August delivery climbed above $21 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange in the past week, more than double last year's low of about $10.

"That's plainly a plus for the energy sector of the economy, and for energy stocks, which have staged a strong advance of late. But it's also a source of concern for market-watchers who remember the woes inflicted by surging oil prices in the 1970s.

"There are some logical and psychological hangups in buying energy stocks here," said John Connolly at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. in a recent commentary on the subject. "If these stocks become really big winners, the implications for the rest of the portfolio are rather poor."

"Most money managers don't believe that inflation is on the way back, so energy stocks are used as a hedge against the unexpected, not as a core position.

"A heavy bet on energy is seen as a bet against the overall stock market and a bet against the U.S. economy."

Nevertheless, oil's comeback has brought some bounteous blessings to investors who were willing to take a chance a few months ago in the depressed shares of oil service and drilling stocks. Standard & Poor's index of drilling companies has virtually doubled since the start of 1987.

"We are beginning to see the first signs of recovery in demand for offshore drilling services," observed Robin Shoemaker, an analyst at E.F. Hutton & Co.

For many years, critical observers argued that Wall Streeters and their customers overestimated the strength and staying power of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

But by the time oil prices were bottoming last year, it appeared to some that those same people were too quick to write OPEC off.

Said Edward Yardeni, economist at Prudential-Bache Securities, "we've been impressed by OPEC's ability to stabilize crude oil prices. For now, we are no longer willing to bet against OPEC, especially when there is so much commotion in the Persian Gulf."

In the past week, whatever inflation worries were weighing down the market were eased by the news that the producer price index of finished goods registered only a modest 0.2 percent increase in June.

Frustration over delays on Vernon St.

Presumably if the Bristol Construction Co. completes the reconstruction of Vernon Street by its October deadline, as Public Works Directors George A. Kandra says the company expects to do, the town will have no valid legal quarrel with the company or with the state Department of Transportation, which is supervising the work.

But the people who live along the street, and the members of the town's Board of Directors, certainly can't be blamed for being frustrated and concerned when they observe the lack of progress so far and the apparent lack of activity on the job site.

The logistics of the road construction industry often do not jibe with the perceptions of people who use the roads. Remember when roads in town were stripped down by one contractor to be resurfaced by another and left in rough shape in the interim? That procedure may have been economical in the long run, but it was hard on motorists.

The best contractors may indeed be bidding on more jobs than they can handle, as Town Manager Robert B. Weiss suggests. Maybe having a good deal of work ahead of you is the key to staying viable and best.

In any event, now that Kandra has assured the directors that Bristol has a full crew at work on Vernon Street, the directors would be wise to keep close check to be sure the full crew stays there and the work keeps moving forward.

Rural government unable to serve

To the Editor:

A few thoughts have come to mind concerning the growing brouhaha between the town of Coventry and Caprilands herb farm.

Not too many years ago, bureaucratic arrogance and boon-doggle was confined to Washington and our various state capitals; however, as a result of the present administration's policy of political "trickle-down," this contemptible, insensitive approach to government has arrived, sadly so, at our town and village governments.

The ongoing skirmish between Coventry's fire marshal and Mrs. Simmons, the founder of Caprilands, is a prime example of rural government's inability to serve its people.

Perhaps a more serious violation of ethics overshadows the current book of fire codes and public safety. It would appear an overly zealous fire marshal applies rather heavily-handedly the required standards for public safety.

An obvious lack of experience, intellect, and wisdom to discern between the standard business operations (i.e., McDonald's) with the unique, rare enterprise which is, in this instance, referred to as "Caprilands," is most evident.

In time, hopefully, it will be understood that Mrs. Simmons' "home" and gardens are, indeed, within a "special use" category. Catering to a very select clientele which obviously has continued to choose "Caprilands" (for 50 years) to experience the joy, beauty, ambience that is special to all who arrive at the old farm, it would seem more fitting to award Mrs. Simmons an honorarium for her service toward the celebrity of Coventry, than persecute her for "code book" violations.

Persons attending garden tours, luncheons, festivities at the farm are drawn by the renown of Mrs. Simmons. It is her talent, intelligence, creativity that crowns this peace-filled, lovely home.

Let us not forget the great expense Mrs. Simmons has invested in the safety and enhancement of the farm over the last several years, shall we say B.C. (Before Cooper). This work was accomplished to bring the old farm up to safety requirements as agreed between the town of Coventry and Mrs. Simmons.

This present impasse may be fueled by the marshal's obvious poor judgment in calling in state authorities, when these matters could have been resolved at the local level.

It would appear that charges of harassment may have some hidden validity.

Perhaps the marshal is a pawn of ulterior design?

All the present "to-do" could have been avoided had there been an experienced, knowledgeable individual capable of sound judgment — determined to seek compliance with reason.

Clear to any reasoning individual is the simple fact that Mrs. Simmons "home," in its very nature, has never been an operation of a "conforming nature" by which the town of Coventry could, or should, demand across-the-board compliance.

The "farm" is special!

Wouldn't a statement requiring all guests, because of the farm's singularly unique status, to assume responsibility for their own safety while visiting partially resolve this matter?

In our view, had the fire marshal (the title is threatening, intimidating — perhaps fire inspector would arouse less fear?) used a modicum of common sense this continuing dilemma could easily have been avoided.

My thoughts and all good wishes go to Mrs. Simmons, the embattled Lady of Coventry Hills. May Caprilands remain as it has for half a century — unaltered by the force of blind regulation.

A nice welcome for the singers

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Manchester merchants and restaurants, with their assistance and generosity in making the BABS (Barber Shop Singers) most welcome in the Manchester area. This was a nice community effort and was well appreciated from our friends overseas.

Army's runway tests raise questions

WASHINGTON — When the Army tested asphalt sealers to determine which one gave airport runways the best protection from jet fuel spills, the testing methods raised almost as many questions as they answered.

Jet fuel can melt asphalt like butter. A sealer that would be impervious to spilled fuel would save the Army millions of dollars a year in repair costs.

But admitted irregularities in the field test conducted by the Army at the Davison Airfield refueling apron in Fort Belvoir, Va., made one manufacturer hopping mad. Carl Leverenz, of International Bitumen Consultants in Atlanta, challenged the test that flunked his sealant, Product 21.

Five brands of asphalt sealer were applied in 1984 at different refueling points, and examined six times during the test period, which ended in May 1986.

The Army stands by the results of its test. But a lengthy investigation by our associate Stewart Harris turned up these irregularities in the testing process:

- The test results were changed significantly between the draft and the final report. In the draft report, for example, one product was rated "excellent" in April 1985, but this description became only "fair" in the final report. Other products were upgraded.

- The sealer test was completed only at Davison Airfield. The Army customarily conducts tests simultaneously at several locations.

- Manufacturers were not invited, as they usually are, to be present at the periodic examinations of their products.

William Taylor, who retired last year after 30 years as an Army highway engineer, told us the sealer test wasn't objective. He theorized that those in charge got defensive when Leverenz complained to his congressman about the test.

"I think Leverenz is trying to force the issue and they just got their back up against the wall," Taylor said, adding: "I'm not saying Product 21 is the best material on the market, but it is one of the best."

Product 21 is used at Luton airbase in Britain, and the airport manager there told us the sealer works "fine" three years after it was applied to the asphalt.

The engineer who signed the Army's test report, Carl Williams of Fort Monroe, Va., agreed that the test differed from others conducted by the Army, and conceded that the procedures probably could have been more disciplined. But he said the test was conducted under real-life conditions; if a sealer must be applied under laboratory conditions, he said, it probably won't perform in the field. As for the changed test results, Williams explained that the five products were graded subjectively, and the grades might have been changed after he looked at photographs of the test patches as the test progressed.

Product 21 failed because it cracked, exposing the asphalt to spilled jet fuel, according to the final report. Williams said the cracks formed because Product 21 and asphalt expand and contract at different speeds.

On a visit to the airfield, Leverenz showed us the patch where he said his material had been applied. It was different from the spot shown in the Army test report. Leverenz signed an affidavit that the Army had confused his product with another.

Williams denied the charge.

We hired Dr. Walter F. Rowe of George Washington University, a distinguished forensic scientist, to examine samples of the sealers scraped from the refueling apron. Rowe concluded that material scraped from the patch where Leverenz said Product 21 was applied did not match a pure sample of his product.

This means that the Army probably did not confuse the test patches. But the question remains: Why the irregularities in the testing process?

Hidden agenda?

Conservationist groups suspect the U.S. Forest Service is deliberately planning to build access roads on forest lands that are uneconomic for timber harvesting to forestall possible action by Congress designating the undisturbed lands as wilderness areas.

Our reporter Lisa Sylvester has seen a copy of the Forest Service's priority list for road construction in the Northern Region, encompassing 13 national forests in Montana and Idaho. The list does indeed give top priority to "unroaded areas" in the region. What makes the conservationists suspicious is the fact that logging operations in such unspoiled areas are invariably money-losing propositions. The roads cost the taxpayers more than the government gets from sale of the timber.

The National Wildlife Federation filed suit three years ago to block the Forest Service road builders' plans for remote national forest land. But the federation lost on grounds that the road construction plans were budgeted activities and thus exempt from the National Environmental Policy Act.

Mini-editorial

Why is the Far Right so divided on the issue of President Reagan's choice for the Supreme Court vacancy? There are those who say that the Senate has no business inquiring into the ideology of a nominee and should, in effect, be a docile rubber stamp. Then we have direct-mail guru Richard Viguerie, who has declared that the president should pick an ultraconservative "and ask the American people to choose sides." Is he seriously suggesting that Senate "advice and consent" as laid out in the Constitution be replaced by a national referendum on every presidential nominee? Pretty radical idea, we think.

She's pregnant, 36 and black

By Chuck Stone

My anecdote-loving father used to tell this one about a conversation between two black women:

"You heard 'bout Tildy? She gon' have a baby."

"Oh, that be nice," nodded her elderly friend.

"And she gon' get married, too."

"Oh, that do make it nice."

Liz Walker, a popular black Boston television anchorwoman, is going to have a baby.

Motherhood is nice.

But Walker doesn't intend to get married.

She earns an estimated $500,000 a year. That's very nice.

When a recent news interview reported Walker's pregnancy, over 400 viewers sent supporting letters, with some enclosing baby-product coupons.

Amazing.

Years ago, a book wasn't worth its titillating salt unless Boston banned it.

Today, Bostonians subscribe to a higher ethic: A baby is God's opinion that the world must go on.

Syndicated columnist Carl T. Rowan isn't impressed.

"Walker refused to say who is the baby's father," grumbled the antediluvian Rowan.

More over, she "counts herself among ... the Mia Farrow and others who have thumbed their noses at the moral conventions without fear of losing their jobs ..."

"The father of my baby acknowledges paternity and wants to support the child," Walker told me.

"I'm not flaunting this. I am meeting my community commitments."

Walker was almost in tears when she recalled that "my mother died in childbirth at 40. I wanted to have this baby."

But she also sorrowfully concedes her contribution to a worrisome statistic — 60 percent of all black babies are born out of wedlock.

Northeastern University law professor Denise Carty-Bennia (also black and single), wryly counters, "I wish more 36-year-old black, single women earning $500,000 a year would have babies."

Good gracious, think what that could do for the black median family income.

Missionary ministers to the powerful

ATLANTA (AP) — Once a missionary among the poor, the Rev. Emmitt Young now ministers to the powerful — politicians, bureaucrats and business leaders.

His work, developed over the last 12 years under Presbyterian sponsorship, is carried on both in this country and several Latin American countries.

It involves helping society's leaders transfer "scriptural principles into the decision-making process of their professional life," he says.

Young, based in Atlanta, previously had served for a decade as a missionary among the poor of Brasilia, the capital of Brazil, but he says working with the elite is just as important.

Scripture shows "God is concerned about public life," Young said in an interview.

"I am absolutely convinced that the place for our obedience to Christ is to be the most authentic is in the midst of our secular life."

He shifted to his present work in 1975 in Brazil, moving his base to the United States in 1983 and establishing prayer groups among politicians in Washington and businessmen in Atlanta.

He also continues work with groups of legislators and other government leaders in Brazil and 11 other Latin American countries.

He said the meetings, including a Washington group that meets the second Tuesday of the month, follow a general structure beginning with "a short study of a biblical text" on Christ's teachings.

The studies are led by members of the group and "are not a platform for professional religious people," Young said.

The group then discusses such topics as: "What does it mean to be a congressman, or on the commission of education, responsible in that area of public life, and clearly to be a Christian?"

Or "How does one's faith get implicitly espoused in what one does with his public life?" or "Where do you gather the strength necessary to make decisions that are unpopular but for the public good?"

The Washington group consists of about 10 people, including officials of the Organization of American States and the World Bank, and is headed by Sen. Paul Trible, R-Va.

Unlike some politicians who make their Christianity a part of campaign rhetoric, Young said most of the participants in his various fellowships go about their work quietly.

Whether in Brazil or in the United States, Young said, legislation is never sought nor decisions made in the name of the group.

But if the group decides a particular action needs to be taken, or a position put forth, they will work that into speeches and votes, Young said.

In Atlanta, where he has been given office space by a downtown Presbyterian church, Young has established the Atlanta Resource Foundation, which brings influential businessmen together with people running various community programs.

The foundation's goal is to tap the resources of business for use in underfunded programs for helping others pursue their aspirations.

He said the foundation allows businessmen and other leaders to undertake projects that are "not wound up in religious cliches."

Day camp begins Monday

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
Executive Director

9:30 a.m. Monday — The first eager camper will be scrambling off the bus and tearing across the black top to the Interfaith Day Camp (nine out of 10 chances he is an 8-year-old boy who was sent last year).

9:35 a.m. — The last timid camper is being coaxed off the bus by a smiling teen-age counselor.

9:36 a.m. — Morning Risers (to get the blood running and spirits rising.) Morning Risers are not necessary for the first campers of the bus. Volunteer Maresa Easton will be leading opening exercises, circle games and sing-along.

10 a.m. — Snack time, then into separate groups for arts and crafts and sports and games. Have you been wondering what we'll be doing with the meat trays, egg cartons and cereal boxes you've saved for us? Monday morning my little campers will be transforming them into 51 robots. It's amazing what a clever gal like volunteer Susan Pike can dream up along with a little imagination on the part of the kids and lots and lots of glue.

While Susan and group 1 are making robots, Nancy Moan is doing double duty helping Camp Director Beth Harlow with counselor camper assignments and also organizing morning sports and games. We're still short on equipment and would truly welcome your old balls, Frisbees, soccer balls and other equipment.

Noon — Everyone including the counselors is ready for lunch. Camp costs are kept to a minimum thanks to participating churches who provide two snacks and a lunch for 100 people. Our thanks to food coordinator Ann Kibbe and Concordia Lutheran, North United Methodist, Center Congregational, St. Bartholomew, Church of the Assumption, St. James, South United Methodist, Emanuel Lutheran and St. Bridget not only for a day's food but the kitchen crews to prepare, serve and clean up.

Lunch is followed by round-up time for counselors. P-round up assigned camper(s), round up towel(s), round up bathing suit(s). Match appropriately. Get on bus for 5 minute ride. Get camper(s), towel(s), bathing suit(s) off together. It's an every-summer mystery to teen-age counselors how difficult it is to simply keep one 7-year-old, his towel and suit together.

1 p.m. — Highlight of the day: swimming at Globe Hollow. Highlight of the highlight: splashing your counselor, riding on his/her shoulders, seeing if you can yell louder than anyone else.

2:30 p.m. — Time to lure campers out of the water for the last snack of the day.

2:40 p.m. — Kids dressed, bus loaded and nothing is sadder than watching a 15-year-old male counselor who has his camper neatly on the bus complete with towel and suit but discovers one sneaker is missing.

SUE RYAN, bless her, is still giving us a hand acting as counselor recruiter. We have 25 wonderful teen-agers signed up: Jeff Rival, Chris D'Amato, Susan Bushnell, Katie Ouellette, Jennifer Rovigno, Jennifer Saries, Jennifer Mercier, Kerry Rohrbach, Christine Owens, Bill Wickersham, Chris Rakoczy, Richard Shemaksis, Avia Plovin, Christl Pic, Amy Kabot, Matt Ryan, Mark Massaro, Teri Baskerville, Tori Baskerville, Phil Moriarty, Matthew Badyk, Jeff DeJoannis, Greg Barry and Kevin Sadowski.

We're still short on teen-age counselors, so please call Beth at Concordia, 649-9349, early Monday if you would like to work with these little ones over the next two weeks.

Beth and Nancy have scheduled some special events. On Wednesday everyone (campers and counselors alike) is invited to a roller skating party (thanks to our generous sponsors). On Monday and Tuesday, Janet Ferguson (a lovely young woman expecting her own first child any day) will be introducing the youngsters to the pleasure of making candy. Next Tuesday, staff from the Lutz Children's Museum will bring animals to be marveled at and even touched. Wednesday is hike at Gay City day.

SPECIAL EVENTS are possible thanks to volunteers Jane Zadnik, Anna Marie Dianne, Sue Hodge and Steve Hodge. However, we still need several children lovers to bring their grills and help us end the day camp Friday, July 24, with the greatest cookout ever. Please call if you can help us.

The Interfaith Day Camp is made possible by all those who donate their time and by our sponsors including newest sponsors: South United Methodist, Henry and Grace Agnew, William and Barbara Gess, Steffie Borello, Manchester Council of Catholic Women, Eleanor Cole, Arthur and Carol Cunliffe, Frank and Judith Addabbo, Bruce and Dale McCubrey, Linda Ite, James and Joanne Carlson.

WARM RESPONSE — Manchester is such a caring community.

Churches, which had set Nov. 22 to 29 for churches to emphasize Indian problems.

That's the same week, Sunday before Thanksgiving to the following Sunday, that churches for 47 years have observed as "National Bible Week." Gum said one good cause should not be obscured by another.

We've already had a warm response to our article about the Human Needs fund. A total of $825 has been received from benefactors: George Ripley, Paul and Marjorie Falck, Joseph Schuster, Walter and Grace Holman, Edith Csatory, James and Joanne Carlson, Ronald and Nancy Gocht, The F. Millers, Elsie Lewis. Thank you all.

Contributions to the Day Camp or the Human Needs Fund can be mailed to MACC, Box 773, Manchester, and are, of course tax deductible.

We have a special request for you. The visiting nurse association has contacted us for outreach to one of their cancer patients. An elderly and avid gardener, he can still sit outside on sunny days but is depressed by watching his garden deteriorate. Anyone out there who can do a little weeding and caring, give our Human Needs Department a call at 646-4114 for more information.

DONATIONS TO MACC in memory of Gertrude Duncan have been coming in for several weeks. Thank you to friends of Trudy and her family: Claire Desrosiers, Barbara Farr, Francis Paradise, Mr. and Mrs. H.J. Cordts, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clark, Russell and Eileen Wilson, Robert and Phyllis Gordon and Janice Taft. Thanks also to Raymond and Pauline Schlosser for a gift in memory of Victoria Jennings, Peter and Paulette Smith in memory of Antoinette Harris, and Linna International for a gift made as a thank-you to Daniel Reale of Daniel Reale Inc.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS by Eugene Brewer

When a married couple consider terminating their marriage they likely will adopt a defensive posture. "It's our business what we do about our marriage," may well be their attitude.

This statement is true — in part. Surely it is their responsibility and theirs alone. But their marriage is the legitimate concern of others. Children stand closest and so are most likely to be struck by the lethal fragments of the exploding marriage. It is their "business" what their parents do with their marriage.

Other family members, especially parents, stand to be affected by a failed marriage.

If the couple are Christians their friends, indeed the entire church, will be impacted by the negative fallout. And society at large is the loser, for no society has long survived the deterioration of its homelife. No one is an island to himself — none lives or dies to himself alone. Romans 14:7.

Inzingas wed for 40 years

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Inzinga of Collins Road, Columbia, recently celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary. Their children surprised them with a brunch at the Adams Mill Restaurant in Manchester. About 20 guests attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Inzinga were married June 16, 1947, in St. James Church, Manchester. Mr. Inzinga is the owner of Russell's Barber Shop on Spruce Street. Mrs. Inzinga, the former Marjorie Anne Mallon of Manchester, is retired. She was employed for many years as an administrative secretary for the state of Connecticut at Eastern Connecticut State University, Office of Student Affairs, Willimantic.

The couple renewed their wedding vows recently at a mass celebrated in St. Columbia Church, Columbia.

Mr. and Mrs. Inzinga have five children: Joan Inzinga, Rochester, N.Y.; Mary Ann and Rudolph V. Pino Jr. of New Canaan; Carol Inzinga of Manchester; Thomas and Crystal Inzinga of Huntsville, Ala.; and Donna Inzinga, Princeton, N.J.; and two grandchildren, Anne Mallon Pino and Rudolph V. Pino III of New Canaan.

Irish birth rate lowest since '41

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Ireland's birth rate fell to its lowest level last year since records were first kept in 1941, but remains the highest in the 12-nation European Economic Community, the Department of Health said Friday.

There were 61,425 births, or 17.3 per 1,000 people, in 1986 — a drop of 2 percent from 1985. The department said 90.4 percent of the children were born to married couples.

In 1970 and 1980, the birth rate was 21.8 per 1,000.

Department spokesman Dr. Tim O'Dwyer attributed the decline in the birth rate to emigration of young people.

Ireland, beset by high taxes and 18 percent unemployment, has experienced its biggest wave of emigration since the 1920s. Of its 3.5 million people, 25,000 to 30,000 a year have emigrated.

Making waves about wake

DEAR ABBY: I recently lost my wife when she lost a six-year battle with a terminal illness. The medical school to which we had planned to leave her remains rejected her, so I was suddenly faced with changing all of our plans and arranging an open casket memorial service.

At the wake, knowing that after the casket was closed, I would not see her again until I joined her in eternity. I poured out my heart to her as she lay on display. I guess I shed a few tears as I said goodbye and planted a farewell kiss on her cold and silent lips.

The clergyman (I am a former clergyman) scheduled to preach her memorial service became highly incensed because of even having the viewing in the first place, talking to my wife while she lay in the casket and kissing her. (Her mother did the same thing.) He doesn't believe in the traditional American way of death and honoring the remains, but only in "commencements" as he calls them — when the body is not in view.

After the viewing, he telephoned me and "laid me out in lavender" using a few choice phrases, sug-

There's never warning of overnight diarrhea

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am terribly upset. Sometimes at night I wake up having had watery diarrhea. There's no warning. During the day I have to run to the bathroom for hours. What can I do?

DEAR READER: Chronic diarrhea, with or without urgency, can have many causes. Peptic ulcer, bowel inflammation and intolerance to certain elements in your diet — such as milk sugar — are common causes.

You need an examination, possibly with stool analyses and X-rays of your intestinal tract, to determine the reason for your problem. Your family doctor is the place to start. He or she can initiate the investigation and, if an obvious cause is not discovered, can refer you to an appropriate specialist for more sophisticated testing, such as endoscopy, during which a qualified doctor can examine your upper and lower intestine with a flexible, lighted tube. Once the cause of your unpleasant and distressing diarrhea is identified, treatment should correct the problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is the prognosis for bone cancer? I was told I had it nine months ago. I can cope with it if I have the information needed to make decisions.

DEAR READER: The prognosis for bone cancer — indeed, for any malignancy — depends on the type of tumor. Some bone cancers are highly malignant and resistant to treatment; the prognosis is poor. On the other hand, other types seem to respond quite satisfactorily to chemotherapy and radiation. For example, osteosarcoma of children, once a dreaded and fatal bone tumor, is now curable in a high percentage of cases.

Abby, is it very unusual and totally out of order for a husband to act as I did under the circumstances? And, what do you think of this minister?

BEN FROM BROCKTON

DEAR BEN: Forgive your minister for his lack of compassion and his insensitivity to your last moments with the remains of your beloved wife. I think he is a troubled man, and his behavior should be reported to whomever is his superior.

DEAR ABBY: My parents say that when my date picks me up, he should come to the door and get me. The guy I go with doesn't. I watch for him in the window, and as soon as his car pulls up in front of our house, I run out and get in.

I guess I will have to tell him, but I don't know what to say. Please help me.

STARTING TO DATE

DEAR STARTING: Say, "The next time you pick me up, would you please come to the door and get me?" Explain that it's the courteous and customary thing to do. (P.S. You don't say how old he is, but if he's old enough to drive, it's time he learned one of the elementary rules of dating.)

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion for "Motormouth," who asked for hints on how to refrain from talking too much.

I had that problem, and I keep reminding myself of the saying: "Blessed are they who have nothing to say, and the courage not to say it." It has helped me through the years.

Weekly Health Tip

BREAST FEEDING

Are breast-fed babies healthier? The medical profession is realizing that human milk possesses a chemistry, an inner power, that is uniquely suited to the human child. Human milk is more readily assimilated than cow's milk and does not cause allergic reactions — it also possesses immune factors which protect against various infections. Also important, breast-feeding helps the mother get her body back in shape. The baby's sucking causes the uterus to contract, which helps to prevent hemorrhage after delivery.

In my opinion, an effective and inexpensive douche can be made at home. To a quart of warm water, add either two tablespoons of white vinegar or two tablespoons of baking soda. These concoctions work, and I have yet to see a patient with an unpleasant reaction to them.

Remember that douching is not a necessary part of good female hygiene. The procedure is not appropriate for most women and should not be done frequently. Women who have recurring discharge or other gynecological symptoms should check with their doctors and not rely on periodic douching. And, of course, douching is totally useless as a form of birth control.

The story behind the story

By Josie

Jack Scalia

Steve Guttenberg

Q. Can you tell me what Melissa Sue Anderson, formerly of "Little House on the Prairie," is doing these days? Paul Janson, Jersey City, N.J.
A. Melissa Anderson, as the 25-year-old refers to herself these days, can be seen in the recurring role on "The Equalizer" of the daughter that the lead character, McCall, never knew he had. She was introduced in a recent two-part episode and has been asked back for at least another two-parter next season.

Q. Please tell me everything about Jack Scalia. D. Vorhees, Issaquah, Wash.

A. He's 36, from Brooklyn and Long Island, one of three sons of a baseball player and his wife who divorced when he was a child. They both married others, creating quite a large family — his mother and stepfather, a New York City cop whose name he took, had three children of their own; his father and stepmother had four. He was a natural athlete as a boy; later he attended Ottawa University in Kansas on an athletic scholarship and briefly played for the Montreal Expos before a shoulder injury ended his career.

After the big leagues, he drifted for awhile, living on welfare, then working in construction and as a packer for a soup company when a friend suggested that with his face and 6'1" frame, he could be a model.

His friend was right: Scalia was an instant hit in Milan and London, then took New York by storm, soon earning $100,000 a year (and appearing in a famous 1978 underwear ad.) At the same time, though, a drug problem that had started in his teens intensified and after two years of a severe cocaine habit that left him wasted and $50,000 in debt, he checked himself into a rehab center in Minnesota.

He kicked his habit, and upon his release, made the switch to acting with a role as Rock Hudson's son in the series "The Devil Connection" which didn't last too long, although his friendship with his co-star did.

That series was followed by three others, similarly short-lived: "High Performance," "Berenger's" and "Hollywood Beat" and the film "Fear City" and a TV movie "The Other Lover." Currently, he's working in a series with pretty good job security, "Dallas," as a new character, mysterious for the moment, named Nicholas Pierce.

Q. I have seen all of the "Police Academy" movies and I would love to know more about Steven Guttenberg. T.W., Lancaster, Ohio

A. He's 28 (born August 24, 1956), was born in Brooklyn and raised in Long Island, the son of an electronics executive and a surgeon's assistant. He decided to become an actor at the age of 16 while working as a messenger making deliveries to advertising agencies.

As he describes it, he would see all the young actors sitting there competing for work and think "Why not me?" so soon he began to slip his own photos into the piles of deliveries. It didn't bring him any work but it did plant the idea that acting could be a career, so he switched to New York's High School of Performing Arts, got a role in an off-Broadway production and studied with John Houseman at Juilliard.

Two days after his high-school graduation, he moved to Los Angeles, where he talked his way past the Paramount Studios guard but made little headway on the lot with anyone else. He auditioned nonstop, however, and soon got a role in the TV movie "Something for Joey," guest shots on the series "Police Story" and "Doc" and a role in the movie "Can't Stop the Music." His parents urged him to continue his studies, though, so he entered into the predoctoral curriculum at U.C.L.A., but after getting a call to appear in the movie "The Boys From Brazil," he packed the studies in.

In the last few years, he wouldn't have had any time for them: besides the "Police Academy" movies, he's been in "Diner," "The Day After," "Miracle on Ice," "Bad Medicine," "Cocoon," "Short Circuit" and "The Bedroom Window," among others. Since he prides himself on working nonstop, he also has two new films, "Surrender" with Michael Caine and Sally Field due out in October and "Three Men and a Baby" to be released at Christmas.

Actor Robert Loggia is on a roll

The 1980s have been kind to this versatile TV and movie star

By Linda-Marie Singer

"Great photo of Al Pacino," one of the workmen comments to Robert Loggia, in the midst of renovating the actor's Beverly Hills home. When there's no immediate reaction, Loggia adds, "Hey, that's me with Pacino during 'Scarface.'"

"Where?" the stranger asks, peering at the deeply tanned man with his arm draped around the star.

Loggia pauses as the workman moves on. "After a while you become philosophical," shrugs the polished actor, "but at 57, what can I do about becoming a household name? I've got to play it as it lays, so I smile when people ask me, 'Don't I know you from somewhere?'"

That "somewhere" may be traced back to the 1950s when the native New Yorker starred in two TV series: "The Nine Lives of Alfredo Baca" and "T.H.E. Cat," continuing into "The Pink Panther" movies.

But it's the 1980s that have been the kindest to Loggia, who rattles a list of hit films from "An Officer and a Gentleman" and "Prizzi's Honor," to the Oscar nomination for his supporting role in "Jagged Edge," where he played a gruff but likable detective.

"No doubt about it. I'm definitely on a roll," he declares, citing the soon to be released "Gaby" (with Liv Ullmann), "The Believers" (co-starring Martin Sheen), "Hot Pursuit" (John Cusack), plus Disney's animated canine version of Oliver, spotlighting Loggia's voice along with Bette Midler and Billy Joel.

Such workability could give others an overwhelming ego boost, but Loggia explains simply, "Upward mobility in your late 50s shouldn't be frowned upon."

Checking his watch, he realizes it's almost time for his tennis game. With less than an hour to go, Loggia still must change out of his immaculate attire. Meanwhile, his rugged good looks offset any worries as he contemplates his serve.

"When I'm not on the road, a group of us (including Charlton Heston, Lloyd Bridges and Don Budge) meet every day in Westwood. But I'll tell you something funny. In Manhattan I lived near the Town Tennis Club and for years watched the pros. Now I play with them."

It helps to be a natural athlete. At age 13 the teen-ager qualified for varsity baseball, and thought seriously of turning professional before receiving a bachelor's in journalism from the University of Missouri.

"Growing up on New York's Lower East Side automatically meant you had to be tough. My older sister Annabelle protected me — virtually closeted me from getting corrupted. Until age 10 I was house-bound and a bit of a sissy. Luckily, an older cousin came along who was tremendously athletic and became a kind of role model."

"Still, I loved continuing the jock thing we had in school, but when I reached 40 I thought it was getting ridiculous to bang heads playing touch football with a bunch of guys in Central Park. So I took up tennis and that's where I met Audrey."

That's also where Loggia — someone who doesn't invite extraneous conversation — lets the warm side show. "I came out to the West Coast because I was separated from my wife. I delayed leaving due to our three children (Tracy, now 32; John, 31; and Christina, 26). I was determined to try life as a bachelor. Well, that lasted two weeks. Audrey saw to that."

"Some tennis friends introduced us and I remember how I desperately needed a change. Somehow when I turned 38 I hit a mid-life crisis. From 1968 to 1973 I just... I don't know... dropped out. Nothing to do with drugs; just the era of rebellion. Life became topsy-turvy and for some reason I was melancholy all the time and felt totally lost."

More than a decade has passed and still the actor's voice gets soft and strained. "I really don't like to talk about this," he says quietly, "but to show you how lost I was, moving to the West Coast I was astonished when someone came up to me and commented, 'We thought you were dead.'"

Audrey O'Brien Loggia recalls that time with a certain uneasiness. "It didn't help that we were both separated. It was hard consoling him as he was a rather very sad fellow. Always serious — until you got him out on the tennis court!"

"Neither one of us was looking for someone special, yet when I went overseas for a few months, I began thinking more and more about him. Bob sneaks up on you that way."

Ten years later the couple married in Gstaad with Julie

Robert Loggia enjoys the limelight.

Andrews serenading. "But we never forgot the nightmarish times. You see, his wife didn't want to divorce him and there were so many complications. Bob doesn't like to talk about all this because he's still estranged from his children."

Workmen continue hammering away as Loggia finishes up that episode in his life he wishes he could push to Fast Forward. "I was like that cork in the sea of life just bobbing around. But then I managed an off-Broadway production of 'Wedding Band' with Ruby Dee, and 'In The Boom Boom Room,' David Rabe's play with Madeline Kahn.

"I think I was merely coming up for air, and wound up doing episodic TV where I usually played all the heavies. (He also directed several shows including "Magnum, P.I.," "Hart to Hart" and "Quincy.") That road was leading nowhere until "An Officer and a Gentleman" bailed me out."

It didn't hurt doing Sylvester Stallone's "Over the Top." "It was a (laughs) unique experience working with him. Unfortunately, the critics vented wherever he goes — something I've yet to worry about! In fact, when we were filming in Las Vegas and he walked into the hotel lobby, you would have thought the Messiah was coming the way fans chased him — literally tore after him. No wonder he's surrounded by six bodyguards."

Loggia shifts to another film, "Prizzi's Honor," and talks about working with director John Huston. "He put all of us (Jack Nicholson, Kathleen Turner) in the lap of Abraham. As a director he instills confidence and for some reason I liken him to Toscanini. He conducted me in such a way that I sure played the hell out of my violin."

With so many projects in the hopper, how can this man keep up his frenetic pace and style? "Acting is never tedious for me, for I've developed a big bag of tricks after all these years. So I don't do, for instance, what Dustin Hoffman did in 'Marathon Man' with Olivier. Dustin was supposed to be exhausted in this one scene, so he stayed up the entire night until he was absolutely worn out. When he told Olivier what he had done, he whispered in Hoffman's ear, 'Ever try acting, my boy?'"

Loggia tried the legitimate theater after the Korean War. "In those years New York was the hub, and there was a certain snobbery of belonging to the Actors Studio." (Some of the members at the time included Paul Newman, Kim Stanley and Ben Gazzara.) ■ their spleen with this film, and it's too bad that Stallone's become a target of scorn largely because he's so successful monetarily.

You can fight your fear of the dentist

By Pauline C. Bartel

As soon as Carol Miller sat in the dental chair, she felt her stomach tighten into a hard ball. The dentist greeted her cheerfully, but even his pleasant manner couldn't make Carol relax. Thoughts of the needle and that awful drill she remembered as a kid raced through her mind.

Carol's fingers gripped the leather armrests as the dentist probed her mouth. Many of her teeth were badly decayed, he told her, and two were severely infected. He could save one of the infected teeth, but the other must be extracted immediately. As the dentist prepared the syringe, Carol panicked. She tore the paper bib from her neck, bolted from the chair and ran out of the office.

Many people, like Carol, suffer from dental anxiety. Just the thought of going to the dentist fills them with terror. As a result, they postpone needed care until dental disease forces them to seek treatment. But why are people so fearful?

"Many people are afraid of going to the dentist because past experiences have been very poor," says Harvey Passes, D.D.S., director of Dental Anxiety Control at Jamaica Hospital's department of dentistry in Jamaica, N.Y.

Poor past experiences can include having had a shot of novocaine that hurt or having had the dentist start drilling before your mouth was numb. Parents often unwittingly add to their children's fear by threatening to take Susie or Billy to the dentist if the child isn't good.

Hearing another person's less-than-pleasant experience at the dentist adds to dental anxiety, as do TV and movie portrayals of dentists. Dentists are usually shown as the embodiment of evil with a drill in one hand and a foot-long syringe in the other. It's easy to see why nervous dental patients think of their six-month dental checkup as a torturous ordeal.

But thanks to modern techniques, today's dental visit is practically painless. Laughing gas (nitrous oxide) and hypnosis help patients relax. Solutions that dissolve decay mean decay can be scooped away with little drilling. High-speed drills cut down drilling time. And thanks to a new breed of dentist, today's dental visit can be anxiety-free as well.

Like Dr. Passes, many dentists gear their practices to helping anxious patients relax. In certain dental offices, patients can bring in their favorite audio cassettes, and the music is piped into their room during the visit. To block out the sound of the drill, some dentists let patients wear stereo headphones. Other dentists provide video games or small television sets mounted near the ceiling as distractions. For patients such as Carol Miller, though, these distractions aren't enough.

"Up until recently, the only way to treat dental anxiety patients was by general anesthesia or intravenous sedation. In other words, patients had to be medicated with tranquilizers before, during and sometimes after dental treatment," Dr. Passes says.

"These are good ways to help the anxious patient complete dental care. The disadvantage is that the anxiety is still present when the patient awakens."

Dr. Passes wanted a way to treat not only the patient's dental problems but the anxiety as well. According to Dr. Passes, the anticipation of a painful dental visit creates anxiety. This anxiety intensifies the patient's perception of pain, and as a result the discomfort of even the simplest dental procedure is magnified. To end this vicious cycle he developed the Dental Anxiety Control Program.

The program, offered at

Does just the thought of going to the dentist fill you with terror?

Jamaica Hospital's Anxiety Control Center, is a three-step strategy usually involving four visits. During the first visit, the patient simply meets the dentist so that the two can get to know one another. This also allows the dentist to evaluate who the patient is, where the anxiety comes from and the severity of the anxiety.

If the patient is a candidate for the program, he or she is taught a technique called progressive relaxation. The dentist shows the patient how to relax quickly and easily and records the session on an audio cassette. The patient takes the cassette home and practices progressive relaxation several times a day for a week. By the time the patient comes back for the second visit, he or she has established a reflex pattern in learning how to relax.

At the second visit, the dentist teaches the patient how to deepen the relaxation through biofeedback. Using a biofeedback device, the patient learns to relax all the voluntary muscles of the body and to know what the body feels like when the muscles are relaxed. The patient practices at home with the biofeedback device a few times a day for a week.

"After the patient knows how to relax himself and after he uses biofeedback, we still have the problem that the patient may, for example, be afraid of the syringe," Dr. Passes says. "So the next step is to have the patient undergo a period of desensitization."

During the desensitization process, the patient practices progressive relaxation with the biofeedback device. Then, while the patient is relaxed, the dentist has the patient slowly assemble a syringe.

"You can't be relaxed and tense at the same time," Dr. Passes says. "Having the patient bring on muscle relaxation will in turn bring on mental relaxation in the face of a threatening stimulus."

When the patient is able to assemble the syringe while remaining relaxed, the dentist then shows the patient how he or she can have a painless injection.

"When the patient has an injection while undergoing relaxation and does not feel the injection, the patient starts to develop confidence and to have self-control over the dental experience," Dr. Passes says.

Carol Miller learned she could be in control in the dentist's office after her husband convinced her to participate in the Dental Anxiety Control Program. By the fourth visit, her dentist was able to extract one of Carol's infected teeth, and she subsequently underwent treatment for her other dental problems. For patients like Carol, the Dental Anxiety Control Program has been so successful that Dr. Passes now teaches the program to dentists.

"We're hoping this program will become a uniform procedure throughout the country," he says. "The only way to do this is to teach other dentists so that more and more practitioners can have these feelings of consideration for the patient and also have the skills necessary to manage these dental cripples."

Does fear of the dentist keep you from getting regular care? If so, there are ways to cope with your anxieties. According to Dr. Passes, fighting your fear starts with communication.

"Communication is the most important thing," Dr. Passes says. "If a patient does not let his feelings be known, there's no way for the dentist to know the kind of person he's dealing with."

Talk to your dentist and ask if your dental work can be done without your feeling anything. Ask if there is a way you can be more relaxed while in the office. If, despite talking about your fears, your dentist is not sensitive to your feelings, seek out someone who is more considerate.

Your local dental society can supply the names of dentists in your area who gear their practices to anxious patients. Also, ask your friends and neighbors about the dentists they visit.

There are other ways that you can take the terror out of tooth care. Here are some hints for having a less stressful dental visit:

- When you call for an appointment with a new dentist, tell the person who answers the phone that you are a nervous dental patient.

- Ask for the first appointment in the morning so you won't have to worry about it all day.

- Go to the appointment with someone you trust. If you and your best friend have the same dentist, think about making back-to-back appointments.

- Get to know your dentist. A good dentist-patient relationship means you can relate to your dentist as someone who's more like a friend.

- Remind the dentist and the dental assistant that you are afraid. They'll be able to explain what they are doing during procedures.

- Relax in the chair. Breathe deeply and think about a pleasant scene. The more relaxed you are, the less discomfort you'll feel.

- If you are an anxious dental patient and a parent, you can prevent your fears from affecting your children. Here are some suggestions:

- Don't talk about your anxiety in front of your child and don't take your child with you when you go to the dentist.

- Never threaten your child with a visit to the dentist.

- Have a friend or relative who is a relaxed dental patient take your child along on a routine visit to let the child watch.

Sexuality

A double uterus can cause trouble

A woman wants to have children but she's not sure she can

By Dr. June Reinisch

The Kinsey Report

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 30 and have just been told that I have a didelphys uterus and a duplicated cervix. This was discovered during a hysterosalpingogram.
I want to have children. All I have been told is that a pregnancy should be monitored. What are my chances of having children? What special care will I need?

DEAR READER: Uterus didelphys is also referred to as a double uterus. This congenital (present at birth) physical malformation may be found alone or in combination with a double cervix (the passageway between the upper end of the vagina and the uterus) and/or a double vagina. These individual anomalies can be partial or complete and can occur in various combinations, with some aspects of the reproductive system being normal.

No one knows why these abnormalities occur, but it is known that normal development of a female fetus requires a complete fusion of the two müllerian ducts. This fusion must take place at three different levels at three different stages of development in order to produce one properly formed uterus, cervix and vagina. In some cases, the urinary tract is also involved.

Further evaluations will be needed to assess how your body might react to a pregnancy. Both the uterus and the cervix must be able to expand and dilate during pregnancy and labor. If a pregnancy is medically permitted, you will need careful monitoring, including ultrasound evaluations as the uterus enlarges.

Women with uterine abnormalities have a risk of uterine rupture, plus an increased risk of miscarriage or premature birth. Cesarean delivery is frequently necessary. However, many women can and do carry and deliver healthy, full-term babies. In fact, many women and their physicians are not aware of the existence of these malformations until they are discovered after a birth and then confirmed by a hysterosalpingogram (a special X-ray of the uterus and Fallopian tubes).

Because these malformations are not common and few physicians are experienced in evaluating them, call or write the nearest medical school and ask for the obstetrics and gynecology department. Ask if they have a staff member with expertise in managing the pregnancies of women with a double uterus and a double cervix. If not, ask them for the name and address of the nearest specialist who does.

Some specialists report good pregnancy results after plastic surgery to correct the uterine defect, but this probably varies greatly, depending on what is found during examination and on the experience and skill of the surgeon. Exactly what kind of specialized monitoring will be required during pregnancy can also be discussed so that you will know whether all or part of any pregnancy could be managed by a local physician.

AIDS is concern

DEAR DR. REINISCH: My girlfriend and I are 45. We enjoy oral sex. Should we be concerned about catching AIDS? Neither of us uses drugs or has sex with other people.

DEAR READER: If neither of you has ever been exposed to the AIDS virus, then there is no risk of AIDS, regardless of which sexual activities you engage in as a monogamous (no other partners) couple.

However, if either of you has had, or now have other sexual partners, shared needles with others using intravenous drugs or received a blood transfusion in the past 10 years, get a blood test to see if you carry antibodies to the AIDS virus.

"Women with uterine abnormalities have a risk of uterine rupture, plus an increased risk of miscarriage or premature birth. Cesarean delivery is frequently necessary."

A positive test result means that exposure has occurred. The infected person then must alter his or her sexual practices to avoid infecting sexual partners. This would include using condoms and/or dental dams during oral sex to reduce the risk of transmitting the virus.

Hair Inherited

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Is there any product that would completely stop the growth of pubic hair?

DEAR READER: No, none that I am aware of. The amount of pubic hair, like other types of hair, is genetically determined.

Looking for lover

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am a survivor of one marriage, five children and a divorce. I'm looking for a new friend/lover, but haven't found one yet. I miss the affection and warmth of a woman as well as the daily sex.

I am confused by ads like these. (Note: the reader enclosed personal ads placed by bisexual women seeking female partners.) What is it that women do to and for each other that a man can't do or won't do? Is it simply oral sex? I view these ads with hostility, because these women are my competition.

I think I'm a better-than-average lover (more complimentary than complaints), but I really want to know what my competition's doing that perhaps I should be doing. What could possibly take the place of the total coupling of a male and a female body?

DEAR READER: You're overlooking the important factor of sexual attraction or choice: feeling attracted to or in love with a person of a specific sex, even when that person happens to be of the same sex. If you are looking for a heterosexual woman, it is unlikely that she would answer such an ad; hence your worries about these ads as competition are unfounded.

Some people do change their sexual-object choice at different points in their lives and some are attracted to both men and women at the same time, but only rarely with equal interest.

About 1 percent to 3 percent of the U.S. population is "bisexual," when the term is defined as having equal amounts of sexual activity with partners of both sexes during the same period of time.

Your fear that sexual behavior between women involves special techniques is also not supported by scientific evidence. Research shows that sex between women usually involves many of the same techniques used between heterosexual couples, primarily kissing, body caressing, and manual and/or oral stimulation of the breasts and genitals.

"No one knows why these abnormalities occur, but it is known that normal development of a female fetus requires a complete fusion of the two müllerian ducts."

Contrary to popular myths, only a few female lovers use activities and mimic coitus. Any differences in technique between opposite-sex and same-sex partners are described as being differences of pace and demand. Women usually spend much more time on general (and gentle) caressing before focusing on the breasts or the genitals.

The encounter is often described as being much more leisurely and sensitive to the responses of the partner. In general, males often begin with breast or genital touching and progress quickly to intercourse.

A 1983 study that compared heterosexual couples to bisexual couples reported that lesbians (female homosexuals) had genital sexual activity significantly less often than married heterosexual couples. Another study which investigated the sexual activity of individuals (not couples) found that homosexual women had more frequent orgasms and a higher degree of sexual satisfaction than did heterosexual women.

There probably are greater differences between the sexes in their preferences for certain sexual techniques, or in the pace of sexual encounter, than there are among heterosexuals, homosexuals and bisexuals. For example, many women report needing more hugging and time spent on foreplay than most males prefer, and, in general, males report wanting more frequent sexual encounters than women do.

The only "secret" to learn about sexual techniques is that a good lover (whether male or female) should be sensitive to the preferences of the partner.

Widow worried

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am a woman of 86. My husband passed away three years ago. Is it normal for me to still want sex and to masturbate? Does this do any harm, such as cause infection in the bladder?

DEAR READER: Despite myths regarding aging and sex, continuance of sexual desire and orgasm into the 80s is not unusual for women or for men.

In one study of Americans age 50 and older, 33 percent of women age 70 and older reported masturbation and among men age 70 and older, 43 percent reported masturbation.

Urinary tract infections (including bladder infections) are common in postmenopausal women because the drop in estrogen causes atrophy (thinning and shrinking) of the vagina, external genitals and perineal area. It is then possible for sexual contact or self-satisfaction to irritate these fragile tissues, which are more easily infected due to their atrophied condition.

Ask your gynecologist about cyclic hormone-replacement therapy (HRT), which can help reverse these genital changes.

Recent studies have shown that regular sexual activity (including masturbation) with orgasm can contribute to maintaining the health of the vaginal and urinary systems of postmenopausal women. However, it is not clear if this practice would reverse atrophy that has already occurred.

If you are not eligible for HRT, or while you wait for HRT to take effect, you might consider trying a lubricant to reduce any genital irritation when masturbating. Regular pelvic examinations and prompt diagnosis and treatment of urinary infections should reduce problems for you.

Send questions to Dr. Reinisch in care of The Kinsey Report, P.O. Box 48, Bloomington, Ind. 47402. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest may be discussed in future columns.

Gifts and loans to family members can be risky business.

When $$ becomes a family affair

By Don D. Wagner

Sooner or later, giving or loaning money becomes a family issue. Whether it's sending the kids to college, helping a teen-age daughter buy her first car or providing living expenses for a married son during a brief period of unemployment, how these financial decisions are made can make or break family ties.

Unfortunately, gifts or loans to family members can be risky business unless they are made in a strictly businesslike way.

When financial crisis hits a family member, it involves two kinds of currency — the sum of money needed and the emotional currency shared by family members. Often parents give money they can't afford to give. Or more often, they give it without thinking about how it will affect family relationships after the crisis is over.

Would a gift break a child's self-image of self reliance when a loan would not? How can family members who want to help do so without jeopardizing their own financial security? Would a gift actually help the giver financially?

These are but a few questions rarely asked when money becomes a family affair. Depending on the circumstances, a family member able and willing to give financial help to another has four important options:

- Making an outright gift.
- Transferring income on a sum of money but keeping the principal.
- Offering a direct loan.
- Co-signing a loan.

One person can give up to $10,000 to another per year under the gift tax exclusion law. A gift tax return does not have to be filed as long as the money given is given within that limit.

On the other hand, a married couple can give up to $20,000 per year to another, representing a $10,000 gift from each spouse's income or bank account.

If the $20,000 legally belongs to only one spouse, the other spouse must legally "consent" in writing to the money gift in his or her name.

(There is no limit on tax-free gifts used for medical expenses or school tuition, but the money must be paid directly to the institution.)

If the family member receiving the gift is a minor, however, the Uniform Gift Tax to Minors Act demands a custodian if the amount exceeds $3,500.

When the gift is from a grandparent or an aunt or an uncle, the parent is often made custodian. The giver cannot be the custodian.

This money isn't taxed as income for the recipient, and the money is not a deductible item for the giver.

However, it does allow reduction of the size of the giver's estate for tax purposes later.

A Clifford Trust involves an income shift from a person in a higher tax bracket to a person in a lower tax bracket, usually a minor child or an elderly parent.

The trust must exist 10 years plus one day, although it can last longer, and it must be irrevocable for that period in order to qualify. The principal returns to the giver at the end of the specified period.

This should be done only through an attorney so there won't be any tax problems later on.

A Clifford Trust must include:

- A trustee.
- A trust instrument.
- A transfer of assets to the trust.

Your attorney will also want to file a gift tax return.

Several additional rule changes apply to the unearned income of children under 14.

Under the 1987 rule, the first $500 of a child's unearned income is not taxed. The next $500, however, is taxed at 15 percent.

And any additional income above this initial $1,000 will be taxed as if it were income received by the parents until the child is 14.

If the parent's next dollar of income would be taxed at 28 percent, the child's first dollar of unearned income in excess of $1,000 is taxed at that rate.

Unfortunately, this new rule applies to all unearned income, even income created from trusts established before the new tax law was enacted.

Since the new tax changes are so massive, it's wise to consult a tax attorney when setting up any trusts this year. It's also a good idea to have an attorney re-examine trusts set up before 1987 to ensure everything conforms to the new tax changes.

If a loan is made to a family member, verbal agreements tend to fade from memory. If it is truly a loan, it should be treated as any other business deal — it should be spelled out in black and white. The easiest way to do this is with a promissory note, and it's best to have an attorney draw one.

The promissory note should clearly indicate:

- The amount loaned.
- The specified due date.
- The interest rate. (As far as the Internal Revenue Service is concerned, a minimum interest rate of 9 percent should be charged, and the person making the loan should report that interest as taxable income.)
- The signature of the borrower.

If a minor signs the promissory note, however, it may be difficult to enforce. But it's still a good idea because the note emphasizes loan rather than gift.

It may also be a good idea to spell out what will happen in case of default.

For example, the note might state that no other loans will be made if the borrower defaults or, if there are more than the borrower as heirs to an estate, the sum of the loan plus interest will be deducted from the borrower's share.

If any property is put up as collateral, the note should contain a description of it.

Co-signing a loan is a legal commitment that transfers risk from the lender, either a bank or savings and loan, for example, to the co-signer when the borrower either falls behind in payments or defaults entirely on the loan.

A family member can co-sign a loan in two ways:

- As a co-borrower, you become an equal borrower of the money and equally liable for repayment of the loan.

As a guarantor, you are secondarily liable — you are liable only after the borrower defaults.

Before co-signing a loan, you should ask yourself the following questions:

- Can I afford to repay this loan?
- Am I willing to repay this loan?
- What are the chances I'll have to repay this loan?
- How much can I lose? Read the fine print on the loan contract you co-sign — you may be responsible for late fees, court costs, attorney fees.
- Is there an acceleration clause calling for the entire balance to be paid if a payment is missed?

When a family member suffers financial difficulty, the immediate impulse is to offer a helping hand. But without giving it careful thought and taking precautions, the entire family can get pulled into financial quicksand.

Gifts and loans to family members can be risky business.

Dining In

Enjoy fanciful summer salads

By Bonnie Mandoe

My favorite summer meal is a bowl full of best-liked foods — cooked or raw — drizzled generously with dressing.

Whether it's bananas, strawberries and melon dressed with yogurt and honey, or shrimp, peas and mushrooms in vinaigrette, these meals signal summer eating at its best — light, refreshing and celebrating the season in every bite.

Salads meant as full meals need a protein ingredient — beans, cheese, seafood, meat, eggs, tofu, nuts or yogurt, for example. To set off the protein, select fruits, vegetables or grains that contrast in color, texture and taste.

All types of ingredients can find their way into the summer salad bowl. Try using foods not generally associated with salad, such as water chestnuts, freshly grated ginger or salted peanuts. These surprises give even a casual salad a real lift.

MARINATED ZUCCHINI SALAD

- 4 ripe tomatoes, chopped
- 2 medium zucchini, chopped in small, bite-sized pieces
- 1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
- 1/2 cup minced sweet onion
- 6 ounces feta cheese
- 4 tablespoons olive oil
- 12 Greek olives

Bring one quart salted water to a boil and add the zucchini and garlic. When water returns to the boiling point, drain the vegetables through a fine strainer.

Place zucchini and garlic in a serving bowl and cool. Add remaining ingredients, toss and serve. The flavor of this salad is best at room temperature.

CORN OFF THE COB WITH CELERY AND EGG SALAD

- 6 hard-cooked eggs
- 4 tablespoons mayonnaise mixed with 1 tablespoon milk
- 1/2 teaspoon Dijon-type mustard
- salt and pepper to taste
- 3 ribs celery, minced
- 3 ears corn, cut off the cob
- 8 leaves lettuce

- 2 tablespoons minced parsley

Grate the eggs and add mayonnaise, mustard, and salt and pepper to taste. Add celery and corn, retaining 2 tablespoons corn for garnish.

Arrange two lettuce leaves per serving plate and scoop salad atop. Garnish each serving with reserved corn and minced parsley.

Serves 4.

HAZELNUT BEAN SALAD

- 1 pound green beans, steamed until crisp-tender
- 1 pound potatoes, peeled, cubed and boiled until tender but firm
- 1 cup chopped hazelnuts (filberts), baked 15 minutes on a cookie sheet at 350F, cooled
- 1/2 cup Parmesan cheese
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1/2 cup cider vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon Dijon-type mustard
- 1 teaspoon honey
- 1/2 teaspoon basil leaves, crushed

Combine warm beans and potatoes. Toss them with a mixture of the dressing ingredients: oil, vinegar, salt, mustard, honey and basil. When well mixed, toss in Parmesan and nuts, reserving a few nuts for garnish. Serve at room temperature.

Serves 4-6.

CARROT, SHRIMP, POTATO SALAD

- 2 small carrots, finely diced
- 2 green peppers, finely diced
- 1 pound potatoes, peeled if desired, cut in bite-sized pieces
- 1 cup minced celery
- 1 pound shrimp (small, but not tiny), shelled and deveined
- 1/2 teaspoon dill weed
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 cup sour cream or plain yogurt
- 3 tablespoons ketchup (or more to taste)
- parsley sprig for garnish

Bring 3 quarts salted water to a boil in a large pot. Add potatoes and boil until nearly tender. Add carrots and peppers and boil until potatoes are tender, drain. (Water may be reserved for soup stock.) While vegetables cool, combine mayonnaise, sour cream or yogurt, ketchup and dill weed. Shell and devein shrimp. When potatoes are cool, combine shrimp, celery, potato mixture and dressing. Garnish the salad with parsley.

Serves 4.

BROCCOLI CHICKEN SALAD, ORIENTAL STYLE

- 1/2 cup sliced almonds, toasted 10 minutes in a 350F oven
- 1 large stalk broccoli
- 1/2 cup thinly sliced water chestnuts
- 2 cups chicken, preferably lightly steamed, chopped (or leftovers may be used)
- 1/2 teaspoon minced or pressed garlic
- 1/2 teaspoon finely grated fresh ginger
- 3 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon toasted (aromatic) sesame oil
- 2 teaspoons rice vinegar
- 1/4 teaspoon honey

Cut the broccoli carefully into bite-sized pieces, and blanch it in boiling water until tender to taste; drain. Combine garlic, ginger, soy sauce, sesame oil, vinegar and honey in a small bowl.

Gently toss broccoli, water chestnuts and chicken with dressing. Top with toasted almonds and serve at room temperature or chilled.

Serves 4-6.

MARINATED RICE SALAD

- 3 chopped green onions
- 2 cups cooked brown rice, seasoned with salt to taste
- 1 large, ripe tomato, finely chopped
- 1 green pepper, minced
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 3 tablespoons white wine vinegar
- 1 cup cheese, minced, optional

Combine all ingredients and chill. Serve at room temperature on a bed of lettuce.

Serves 6.

CURRIED TOFU SALAD WITH VEGETABLES

- 1 pound tofu, well drained
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon mild rice vinegar
- 2 teaspoons curry powder
- 1/4 cup minced parsley
- 1 small carrot, grated
- 1/4 cup minced red (sweet) pepper
- 1 minced scallion
- 1 1/2 cups fresh garden peas, shelled (or frozen peas, thawed)

Dry tofu thoroughly with paper towels, and mash in a medium bowl. Add olive oil, soy sauce, vinegar, curry and all vegetables except the peas. Mix well and season to taste with salt and additional cayenne pepper, if curry is not hot enough. Mayonnaise may be added if desired for creaminess.

Finally, fold in the peas, gently. Serve the salad on a bed of lettuce or spinach greens. Garnish with sliced tomato.

This salad is a real show-stopper. Serve it once and you'll make it again and again.

BEST TABBOULI SALAD

- 2 cups boiling water, scant
- 1 vegetable bouillon cube
- 1 cup bulgur wheat
- 1/2 cup minced fresh mint
- 1/2 cup minced fresh parsley
- 1/2 cup diced sweet onion
- 3 ripe tomatoes, diced
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 clove pressed garlic
- 1 teaspoon honey
- romaine lettuce

Dissolve the bouillon cube in the water, and pour the water over bulgur. In about 20 minutes the bulgur will have absorbed the bouillon. Fluff the grain with a fork and combine with mint, parsley, onion, tomatoes and walnuts. Separately, combine remaining ingredients except romaine. Toss dressing with the mixed vegetables and place in a bowl. Surround the Tabbouli with romaine leaves, and use them to scoop up the salad.

Serves 4-6.

Roxanne (PG) Movie comedies are so frequently overwrought and frantic that a gentle film like "Roxanne" seems a special treat. This updating of "Cyrano de Bergerac" gives Steve Martin a role that is even more terrific than his plum parts in "Pennies from Heaven," "All of Me" and "Little Shop of Horrors."

It's only fitting that Martin, who plays a contemporary Cyrano — the quick-witted, agile, but huge-nosed fire chief in a gloriously picturesque Northwestern town — should enjoy this juicy role, since he wrote the inventive script himself. As star and writer, Martin achieves a synthesis of slapstick and lyricism, humor and romance.

It's easy to care about the Martin character's initially unrequited infatuation with the astrophysicist (Daryl Hannah) who has come to town for the summer. This blond, star-gazing goddess thinks she's in love with a beefy new firefighter (Rick Rossovich), a guy who's got far more brawn than brains. In keeping with the original "Cyrano," the thick-headed young stud enlists Martin to help him woo Hannah, and Martin — thinking that this is as close as he'll ever get to Hannah — agrees.

Directed with surprising lightness by the great Australian director Fred Schapell ("The Chant of Jimmie Blacksmith"), "Roxanne" finds time for several Keystone Kops-style sequences in which Martin attempts to whip his somewhat incompetent fire department into shape.

Not everything in this movie works: The happy ending seems a little drawn out, given how predictably sweet it is, and the quirky Shelley Duvall is wasted in an unresolved supporting role. Then too, the golden bewitching Daryl Hannah is less than completely convincing as the possessor of a top scientific mind.

Though not quite the romantic comedy of Mozart proportions that some of the reviews have suggested, "Roxanne" is still charming. Grade: *****

Dragnet (PG-13) It sounded like a promising idea for lightweight warm-weather entertainment: Bring the vintage TV series "Dragnet" up to date while parodying its conventions. But this movie is all downhill after one enjoys the initial joke of Dan Aykroyd doing a perfect-pitch impression of Jack Webb's deadpan delivery, while playing the supposed nephew of Joe Friday, the character Webb played in the original series. Forget "Dragnet" and start thinking big-breasted bimbo jokes and noisy car chases.

Aykroyd's partner — an innocuous disrespectful-sidekick role — is played by Tom Hanks, who must be wishing he were back in something comparatively meaty like "Nothing in Common."

The insipid plot pivots on a pagan cult and a televangelist who is obviously corrupt (obvious because he's played by Christopher Plummer, who practically oozes unctuousness). The gifted Dabney Coleman turns up briefly as a pseudo-Hugh Hefner, a role which he plays with a lisp like Truman Capote's. The movie's most distinctive moment has nothing to do with "Dragnet" or the plot: In a bedroom clinch with a beauty, Hanks waves an empty box of condoms, initiating AIDS awareness in Hollywood movies. Grade: **½

New home video

Marlene (not rated) Embassy, $79.95. Maximilian Schell's strangely moving documentary portrait of the great Marlene Dietrich actually benefits from the star's refusal to be photographed for the film; she offered only the most grudging and cantankerous participation. The tension between Schell as interviewer and Dietrich as subject gives the 96-minute film its character. Except for old footage and photos, Dietrich is a grumpy disembodied voice. Yet, even in absence, she has more presence than most stars. Grade: *****

Stars remember Wyler in PBS tribute Monday

By Kathryn Baker
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The late film director William Wyler said he was criticized for having "no signature" — you couldn't tell a Wyler film from that of another director just by the look of it.

But that didn't halt a stampede of stars who wanted his Midas touch on their careers. His 45 years' worth of films included some of their biggest hits — Bette Davis in "Jexebel," Gary Cooper in "Friendly Persuasion," Charlton Heston in "Ben Hur," Barbra Streisand in "Funny Girl."

"William really is the reason that I became a box-office star," Davis says.

"He directed more Academy Award performances than any other director," says Gregory Peck, who starred in Wyler's "Roman Holiday."

Fourteen actors and actresses won Oscars for Wyler-directed performances. Twenty-one others were nominated. Wyler himself was nominated 15 times and won three Academy Awards.

Davis and Peck are among an array of movie stars whose reminiscences are included in the PBS profile "Directed by William Wyler." It airs Monday as the second in the "American Masters" series.

Wyler's daughter, Catherine, is executive producer of the engaging, hour-long tribute, chock full of tidbits, anecdotes and film clips.

The endearing interview with Wyler was taped just days before his death in 1981. Folded into it are interviews with his wife, Talli, directors John Huston and Billy Wilder and actors Laurence Olivier and Greer Garson, among others.

Wyler was born in Alsace-Lorraine, now part of France. An uncle in the movie business paid his passage to the United States. He worked his way up from gofer at Universal, landing his first directing job in 1925, a western called "Crook Buster." It was shot in three days on a budget of $2,000.

In 1932, he successfully directed the difficult but brilliant John Barrymore in "Counselor at Large" and boosted his reputation in the industry.

His perfectionism was legendary.

"He made me do 48 takes in front of 200 extras. And I had never in my life done more than two takes before," Davis says.

"Somehow or other the number 71 comes out of the mists of memory," says Garson, "and I can't think that that's possible."

Heston says Wyler was never that bad, that he didn't recall more than 27 takes. He said Wyler could never be described as satisfied by a performance, but rather "resigned to the fact that you weren't going to do it any better."

Olivier recalls "overacting appallingly" in the 1939 classic "Wuthering Heights," until Wyler chewed him out. Olivier says Wyler made him a film star.

Wyler recalls that the studio didn't like the sad ending of "Wuthering Heights" and tacked on a silly cloud-walking scene Wyler refused to direct.

In another tidbit, Wyler reveals that in the pivotal scene of "The Little Foxes," it was a double, not Herbert Marshall who crawled up the stairs. He said Marshall had an artificial leg and couldn't go up the staircase on hands and knees, so he briefly leaves frame, and the double re-enters, far enough in the background so the switch went undetected.

Staying alert to exceptions

By James Jacoby

Here is another exercise for you. Cover the East and West hands with your thumbs and plan the play in four hearts. A diamond is led and you put up the queen from dummy, winning the trick. Of course you remember from Bridge Play I, taught by Professor Taketricks, that it's better to lead up to high-card combinations, so you will surely draw two rounds of trumps and then either lead toward the club queen in dummy or perhaps try the 10 of spades. Whatever you do, East will win that trick and return a diamond. And what will be the end result? The opponents, unfriendly souls that they are, will take a diamond and three tricks in the black suits, and you will be down one.

vice to lead toward honor combinations, there can be exceptions — for example, when you do not mind losing the trick to one particular opponent. After the diamond queen wins trick one, declarer should first cash the jack of hearts and then lead a low spade away from dummy's K-J. If West wins the queen, he cannot safely play another diamond, and declarer will be able to set up a spade winner to take care of his later diamond loser. If East hops up with the spade queen to lead a diamond, declarer takes the ace and plays the spade 10, establishing two good spade tricks that will eliminate the club losers in the South hand. In any event, by leading away from that K-J, declarer is assured of making his contract.

KEEPING YOUR CAR ALIVE

Peter Bohr

How engines beat the heat

By Peter Bohr
Contributing Editor, Road & Track

generates lots of heat. To keep the engine from melting, water is sent along little passages in the engine to cool it. A car radiator is one of those indispensable gadgets that's easy to take and the radiator's job is to keep it for granted — until it conks out. Then from boiling before it makes yet another hurry to people like Ted Chambers, proprietor of a radiator repair shop in Riverside, Calif. On hot summer days, Ted is the most popular fellow in town.

Make no mistake, a boiling radiator can be quite a calamity. It only takes a few minutes to fry an engine, especially one made of aluminum as many pass through the engine are these days.

While an engine operates, the fuel from the engine or by a small electric burning in the combustion chambers motor, blows air through the radiator when the car is stopped or is traveling very slowly. A pump keeps the water constantly moving through the engine and radiator.

A car radiator core can have from one to four rows of tubes; more tubes mean more cooling ability. Ted almost loses his cool when automakers skimp on their radiators. "That's ridiculous," he said, pointing to a radiator on his shop floor. "It's from a new turbocharged Thunderbird and it only has a single core."

Turbochargers, like emission control devices, air conditioners and other features on modern cars, create additional engine heat. Ted replaced the T-Bird's radiator with a triple-row unit and the car hasn't boiled its water since.

Actually "water" is a misnomer. A radiator should always be filled with a mixture of water and antifreeze. The antifreeze not only does what its name implies in the winter, it also raises the boiling point of the water during hot summer weather. Moreover, antifreeze lubricates the water pump and inhibits corrosion. For all these reasons, antifreeze (also called "coolant") is necessary the year around.

Although a car's cooling system is really quite simple, plenty can go wrong. Hoses can crack and leak coolant. Fan belts break. Electric fan motors quit. Spring-loaded pressurized radiator caps, which also raise the coolant's boiling point, wear out. Thermostats, which keep the water from circulating through the radiator until the engine reaches the proper operating temperature, fail to open.

The thin tubes in the core can clog up with mineral deposits. Or the core can be blocked from the outside. Ted discovered a mat of hair and lint in front of the radiator on one of his customer's cars; it seems the lady kept several cats and her washing machine and dryer in her garage next to her car.

Any one of these problems can cause an engine to overheat. So Ted urges his customers bring their cars into his shop once a year for a dose of preventative maintenance. He uses a machine that back-flushes the cooling system, rinsing out debris that can clog the radiator core. He checks the hoses and fan, installs a new thermostat and radiator cap if necessary, and refills the system with fresh coolant — all for about $40. That's pretty cheap insurance against a ruined engine or being stranded alongside the highway on a sweltering summer day.

from CONSUMER REPORTS

Auto law may run out of gas

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

The average fuel efficiency of American-built cars has soared during the past 12 years from 14 miles per gallon to more than 27 mpg.

The increase has stemmed largely from the fuel-economy standards enacted in 1975. The Corporate Annual Fuel Economy, or CAFE, law required automakers to meet progressively stricter minimum fuel-economy standards. But the program may be headed for rough waters.

The editors of Consumer Reports say the program has saved consumers hundreds of dollars a year. At today's gasoline prices, the owner of the average 1987 car will pay about $500 a year less for fuel than the owner of the average 1975 car, assuming both drive 15,000 miles per year.

The editors say the law has also helped reduce the nation's dependence on imported oil, and may have preserved the jobs of American workers.

Despite CAFE's success, the Reagan administration is toying with the idea of scrapping the standards completely. Last December, the Task Force on Regulatory Relief, a high-level group of government officials headed by Vice President Bush, issued a report suggesting that further adjustments in fuel economy should be "dictated by gasoline prices, not government fiat."

Wendy Gramm, executive director of the task force said that it doesn't make sense to limit American companies in the production of mid-size and large cars — the American cars that are most competitive on the world market.

The fuel-economy standards apply to both American and foreign automakers. But they require U.S. manufacturers to calculate the fuel efficiency of vehicles produced in this country separately from those built in foreign countries or those containing more than 25-percent imported parts. If a group of cars doesn't meet the standard, the manufacturer has to pay a fine for each vehicle produced in the offending group.

Gramm argues that, unless the standards are abolished, the U.S. automakers will either stop making some large cars or move their big-car production overseas. By moving offshore, they can meet the fuel-economy standards, averaging the large low-mileage imports with the small fuel-efficient ones.

Gramm adds that, "Americans are interested in buying larger cars. The standards are creating distortions in the market and can endanger the jobs of American workers."

Clarence Ditlow, head of the Center for Auto Safety disagrees. He explains that, in order to meet the fuel-economy standards, manufacturers have to keep making small cars in the United States because small cars are needed to offset the larger gas-guzzlers. Overseas manufacturers are geared up to produce small cars for the U.S. market, but they aren't set up to do that sort of production with big cars.

"If you abolish the standards," says Ditlow, the carmakers "will go to the Third World countries en masse to make their small cars."

Chrysler Corp., which retooled its production to meet the standards, supports them and says that scrapping the standards would undo more than a decade of fuel conservation and put the United States back in the grasp of OPEC.

On the other hand, Ford and General Motors put more production into big cars. They successfully lobbied the Reagan Administration to ease the law's original requirement for 1987 models from 27.5 mpg to 26 mpg — the maximum drop allowed without Congressional approval.

The fuel-economy standards will remain in effect unless Congress decides to modify them further, or abolish them.

Starling has 2nd thoughts about Carolina

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Marlon Starling is having second thoughts about fighting WBA welterweight champ Mark Breland in South Carolina, which Breland considers his second home, according to a spokesman for the challenger.

"At this very moment there are complications," Cedric Kushner, who is promoting the fight for Starling, said Friday in a telephone interview from New York. "We are desperately trying to work out the situation."

The problems arose after several newspapers in Connecticut — Starling is from Hartford — "came out with headlines" this week saying Starling was going to fight Breland in Breland's hometown Aug. 22, Kushner said.

"All of sudden," Kushner said, "Starling was saying he did not want to fight him there. But I don't think the fact that his mother lives (60) miles from Columbia makes it his hometown."

Breland was born and raised in New York but has said he views South Carolina as his second home because his parents live in Denmark, a small Orangeburg County town about 60 miles south of Columbia.

Earlier this week, Kathy Duva of Main Events Promotion, which represents Breland, said Starling had agreed to fight the champ in Columbia. The fight would be the first championship bout in South Carolina.

Kushner acknowledged he and Dan Duva of Main Events made a "verbal agreement" on Wednesday to have Breland fight Starling in Columbia.

"Any report Mr. (Dan) Duva may have issued to the press would have been done by virtue of the fact that I gave him my assurance that the Starling camp had accepted the fight in South Carolina," Kushner said.

A contract to hold the fight at The Township Auditorium was to have been signed Friday, but Kushner said he now expected negotiations to "stretch on into (Saturday) for sure."

"My position is that it's a World Boxing Association title fight and that I don't have any particular concerns about the way Main Events will treat Marlon Starling," Kushner said.

The Duvas could not be reached for comment by telephone Friday.

Starling, 29, who is 41-4 as a professional, was the No. 2-ranked contender in the last WBA ratings, behind Tommy Ayers. But Ayers lost to Rollin Williams on June 30, knocking himself out of a title shot against Breland.

Kushner said Starling wants to fight Breland.

"But it's not a situation where we desperately need the fight on that particular date in Carolina," Kushner said. "Notwithstanding that, I am negotiating diligently to try to effect a deal."

Breland has already fought at The Township once, knocking out Ralph Twining in October. Afterward, he paraded around the ring in a University of South Carolina football jersey and told the crowd he wanted to return to either fight for the title or defend it.

Breland, 24, is 17-0 as a professional after winning a gold medal in the 1984 Olympics. He won the WBA title by beating Harold Volbrecht of South Africa earlier this year.

Breland broke his left hand against Volbrecht and was to return to the ring for the first time Friday night in a non-title bout against Juan Ronbon in Europe.

Meanwhile, Starling's manager, Donald Bowers, also of Hartford, said Thursday he was worried his fighter would not get a fair fight in Columbia.

"It's not the money and it's not the options," Bowers said. "To be frank with you, we have problems with the site."

"It's more than the fact that it's Breland's (adopted) hometown. ... My concern is with the boxing commission. The fight will be under WBA rules, but the WBA will be under the jurisdiction of the state boxing commission, and it will be their responsibility to make sure that things go in accordance with the rules."

Bowers said unless he gets a change in the site or "certain assurances," the contract won't be signed.

McEnroe rejoins Davis team

NEW YORK (AP) — John McEnroe, who missed Wimbledon with a bad back, will play with the U.S. Davis Cup team for the first time since 1984 in its critical match with West Germany next month, the U.S. Tennis Association announced Friday.

McEnroe was one of five players named by Captain Tom Gorman to the team that will meet West Germany July 24-26 in Hartford, Conn., in a match that will determine if the United States will get to play for the Davis Cup next year.

The United States already has been eliminated from this year's competition because it lost to Paraguay. Another loss would drop the Americans into a second-string bracket next year and make them ineligible for the Cup they have won 28 times since 1900.

Joining McEnroe on the squad will be Paul Annacone, Tim Mayotte and the doubles team of Ken Flach and Robert Seguso.

McEnroe, once the world's top-ranked player, last played for the United States when it lost to Sweden in the 1984 final. After taking most of a year off from tennis, he returned last year and currently is ranked No. 10 on the Association of Tennis Professionals Computer, three spots above Mayotte and four behind Jimmy Connors, the top-ranked American man.

In his career, McEnroe is 35-6 in Davis Cup singles matches and 15-1 in doubles, giving him a total of 50 wins in Davis Cup play, most ever by an American. He also has appeared in a record 57 Davis Cup matches.

Flach and Seguso, who won the Wimbledon doubles title last week, are 5-0 in Davis Cup play. Flach also won in Australia last year when he teamed with Annacone after Seguso was injured.

Mayotte, who made his first Davis Cup appearance last year, is 1-2 in Davis Cup play, having won the deciding match against Mexico last year, then losing to Australia's Pat Cash, the current Wimbledon champion.

Gomez wins disputed Pro match

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Defending champion Andres Gomez won a controversial quarterfinal match over Jimmy Arias, who accused the winner of cheating at the U.S. Pro Tennis Championships Friday.

Gomez, the second seed from Ecuador, beat the seventh-seeded Arias, of the United States, 2-6, 7-5, 7-6.

The dispute erupted over the first point of the third-set tiebreaker.

A lineswoman called Arias' deep shot to the left corner out, then reversed herself. After a 15-minute dispute in which Gomez argued that he stopped going for the ball when he heard the out call, the point was ordered replayed.

It was won by Gomez, who also won the next three points and took the tiebreaker 7-3.

"I was on a roll," said Arias, who had won the previous three points to force the tiebreaker. "Then we waited for 30 minutes and I lost all the momentum. He just cheated, basically."

"I'm not a cheater," Gomez declared.

His semifinal opponent for the second straight year will be third-seeded Kent Carlsson, who beat fellow Swede Joakim Nystrom, the fifth seed, 6-1, 7-5.

Top-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden will play in Saturday's other semifinal after beating unseeded Tom Nijssen of The Netherlands 6-2, 7-5 Friday. He will meet the winner of Friday night's match between fourth-seeded Martin Jaitte of Argentina and sixth-seeded Aaron Krickstein of the United States.

The controversial play in Gomez' victory came when Arias hit a forehand that went by Gomez.

Umpire Richard Kaufman checked the mark the ball made in the clay, didn't see clear evidence that the ball was out and correctly upheld the lineswoman's call, tournament supervisor John Heiss said.

At that point, he added, Gomez argued that the original out call had caused him to stop running after the ball. The point then must be played over if the umpire feels the player could have reached it, Heiss said.

Olympic Festival: a story of growth

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Olympic Festival has grown in eight years from oversized sweat suits altered with staple guns to the high-tech computer software that will be used to keep track of the results of 34 athletic events.

It has grown from having more athletes than spectators to an event that commands a $410,000 budget just for the flowers that are planted along the roadsides. So much interest has been generated that thousands of eggs, pears, apples and oranges have been donated to meet the demand of healthy appetites.

While the previous festivals have been held in a single city, the events, which begin July 13, are spread across the state of North Carolina. More than half a dozen businesses have contributed $200,000 each to the project and more than 200 other companies have contributed between $100,000 to $1,000 to the effort. The state's General Assembly, with an appropriation of $800,000 is the largest single contributor.

"As the first state to host an Olympic Sports Festival, we reflect our unity and our own commitment to excellence."

said Gov. Jim Martin. "This event provides a rare opportunity to showcase North Carolina and we owe a great deal to the festival's overworked, but high-caliber staff."

"I think there were some people on the Olympic Committee who were skeptical that a multicity thing would be beneficial," said Mike Moran, a media coordinator for the U.S. Olympic Committee. "But (North Carolina) won the bid because it worked hard on it for several years. They had a practical plan, and they've accomplished their goals."

North Carolina considered the festival important enough to complete a 7.7-mile of Interstate 40 between Raleigh and Chapel Hill — not just on time, but earlier than scheduled. A state coast-to-coast torch run was organized and transportation plans were devised to help travelers. About $12,000 was spent on road signs alone. And college campuses have opened their dormitory doors to help house athletes.

Many of the athletes will eat their meals on those campuses, where food service managers say outfitting the training tables won't be very different from feeding hoards of students. At the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, a standard breakfast will consist of 150 dozen eggs, 50 pounds of bacon, 10 pounds of grits and 1,500 biscuits. Athletes can wash that down with 80 gallons of orange juice and 1,500 cartons of milk.

When the first festival was four-day affair held in June 1978 in Colorado Springs, it was called the National Sports Festival. But the name was changed, thanks to television.

"The first festival was so totally unknown that ABC Sports, which had purchased it as a portion of Wide World of Sports, changed the name to the mini Olympics for television viewing," Moran said.

There were 1,500 spectators for the first festival and 1,900 athletes — some of whom were wearing ill-fitting outfits.

"The USOC had put together the meet so fast and so late that there was not time to order all sizes of clothes," Moran said. "They used stapling guns to hem up the pant legs and sleeves which were way too long for short athletes. There were situations where athletes were trading warmups in the parking lots to find better sizes."

There is a warehouse in North Carolina where thousands of pieces of clothing in all sizes are ready for the 3,000 athletes participating in the festival.

For the entire month of May, Department of Transportation workers and volunteers planted 53,000 dozen perennials, annuals and wildflowers along the highways leading into Raleigh, Durham and the Research Triangle. The flower beds have been fumigated and fertilized and now workers are watering the plants so they will still put on a red, white and blue show for the two weeks of the festival.

"It doesn't do us any good to have the athletes here in July and have the flowers bloom in August or September," said Bill Johnson, the department's head of the landscape unit.

The festival will not only draw athletes. More than 200,000 sports medicine specialists from around the world will attend the U.S. Olympic Festival Congress on Sports Medicine and Science, to be held July 10-15 at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and at Duke University.

Mount St. Helens a magnet for climbers

By William C. Crum
The Associated Press

MOUNT ST. HELENS NATIONAL VOLCANIC MONUMENT, Wash. — Viewed by moonlight from a camp on its western slopes, Mount St. Helens is a sleeping giant, its ridges and crags obscured in shadow.

Later, the mountain begins to take shape. The gentle white slopes glow vibrant as the sun rises and the sky turns deep blue.

It is a peaceful scene. But here and there, gray patches of volcanic debris emerge in stark contrast to the mantle of snow.

Seven years ago, the mountain awoke as an explosion ripped it open. Half a cubic mile of the mountain cascaded down its northern side, forming giant mudslides.

Tons of ash billowed into the air, leaving behind a crater 2 miles long, 1 1/2 miles wide and 2,100 feet deep.

For geologists, who speak in terms of eras and epochs, and for the mountain, with its 40,000-year history of violence, only a moment has passed since May 18, 1980.

The mountain's magnetism is immense. Since May 4, when Mount St. Helens once again was opened to the public, the U.S. Forest Service has issued permits to about 2,500 climbers.

They come to stand at the rim and peer into the crater, to wander across the mudslides and to venture into the crater itself, where a steaming lava dome offers evidence that this is a restless mountain.

The climbers' camp near the 4,000-foot timberline at Butte Camp Dome is a two-hour hike from the nearest trailhead. But by 5 a.m., the voices of the first climbers of the day echo through the evergreens.

From here, it is another 4 1/2 hours to the 8,383-foot summit.

Climbers cross a snowfield and immediately begin to work their way up. The climb is essentially a walk and looks easy, but experts say looks can be deceiving in the Cascade Range.

Ethan Van Matre, chairman of the climbing committee of the Mazamas, a Portland, Ore., climbing club, said sunscreen and sunglasses are a must to prevent sunburn and snow blindness.

An ice ax is required for hiking across the steep snowfields, and snow conditions may dictate the use of crampons. Clothing must be flexible enough to adapt to temperature swings of up to 70 degrees an hour, Van Matre said.

As a rule of thumb, the temperature will drop 3.6 degrees for every 1,000 feet of altitude on a perfect day.

It may be a balmy 60 degrees by late morning at the snow camp at Butte Camp Dome, but the temperature at the summit is likely to be 45 degrees, and the wind whipping around the rim of the crater makes it feel even colder.

"You can lose a lot of energy real quick," Van Matre said.

As climbers continue up the 30-degree slope, the air gets thinner and the sun brighter — so bright climbers wince as they lift their sunglasses to look around.

Climbers begin counting the steps. On the steeper sections, 20 steps between breaks. On more moderate slopes, 40 steps or even 60 steps between breaks.

Up and over the first ridge, and the summit comes into view. Forested valleys spread out below. Mount Rainier comes into view to the north, Mount Adams to the east, Mount Hood to the south.

These nearby peaks exhibit the scars of Alpine glaciers, but Mount St. Helens' pristine, symmetrical slopes tipped scientists to her violent past.

In the 8,000 to 10,000 years since glaciers last spread an icy mantle over the Northwest, St. Helens has erupted again and again.

Streams of basalt lava flowed eight miles down the east and south flanks of the mountain 2,500 years ago, producing a system of lava tubes. The best known is Ape Cave, on the south side of the volcano.

The latest eruptive phase, beginning in the spring of 1980 and continuing as recently as last fall, was the first in 123 years.

As they reach the summit, climbers can smell sulfur rising from the crater. The verdant landscape to the south gives way to the dull gray of 150,000 acres of forest in ruins.

Two thousand feet below is the lava dome, where wisps of sulfurous steam escape from cracks in the rocks and rise to hang on the rim like ghosts.

Moriarty's to play Superior

Moriarty Brothers will host Superior Auto Saturday night at 7:30 at Moriarty Field. Moriarty Brothers is presently 9-7.

Orioles release veteran Burleson

BALTIMORE — The Baltimore Orioles released infielder Rick Burleson Friday as part of a continuing shakeup of their roster.

Burleson, 36, played in 62 games this season for the Orioles, primarily at second base. He hit .209 with 14 RBIs and two home runs, while making six errors.

Burleson, who was signed to a one-year contract plus an option in January, told a television station after his release that he is considering retiring.

He originally signed with the Boston Red Sox, but spent the last six years with the California Angels.

A series of injuries to his right shoulder had sidelined him for much of four seasons with the Angels before he made a successful return last year.

Breland outpoints Rondon

From the start, the unbeaten 24-year-old from Brooklyn pounded Rondon with his powerful left hand, showing no effects from a March operation to fix a sore tendon in his hand.

Breland knocked down his outclassed opponent late in the third round with a devastating right to the mid-section, but Rondon, 19-4, quickly recovered and fought defensively for the rest of the bout.

Breland, who entered his first fight overseas with a record of 17 wins, 12 by knockout, said his objective was to "keep a steady pace."

"I feel good ... I think my condition is improving," he said.

Breland said before the match that he is interested in unifying the WBA and World Boxing Council welterweight titles by fighting WBC holder Lloyd Honeyghan of Britain.

"We have challenged him several times, but he apparently is not interested," Breland said.

Breland, a 1984 Olympic gold medalist, is scheduled to defend his WBA title, probably against Marion Starling, Aug. 22 in Columbia, S.C.

More than 1,000 people watched the fight in a gymnasium at Forte Village, a recreation center, in this town 24 miles north of the Sardinian capital of Cagliari.

Gomez advances

Andres Gomez of Ecuador takes a backhand shot Friday against Jimmy Arias in action in the U.S. Pro Tennis Championship at Brookline, Mass., to advance to the semi-finals Saturday. Story on page 48.

Sports in Brief

Cubs trade Matthews to Seattle

CHICAGO — The Chicago Cubs on Friday traded left-fielder Gary Matthews to the Seattle Mariners in exchange for a minor-league player to be named later. "He's a great competitor," said Chicago Manager Gene Michael. "He'll do a fine job for them. He didn't get a chance here."

Matthews, one of the standout players of the Cubs' divisional championship team in 1984, had been relegated to a pinch-hitting role this year. Nine of his 13 hits were pinch hits.

Former Missouri hoop player shot

COLUMBIA, Mo. — A former Missouri basketball player, Cecil Estes, was shot in the chest Thursday night while trying to break up a fight in Columbia, police said.

Estes, 22, was in serious condition at the University of Missouri Hospital and Clinics, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Police have arrested a Columbia man who had a "running feud" with Estes, Sgt. Jack Phillips said. Witnesses said Estes had been trying to break up a fight when the man walked up and shot him with a small caliber revolver, Phillips said.

Estes played for the Tigers during their 1983-84 season, averaging 5.5 points and 2.4 rebounds per game in 30 games.

Mottet takes Tour de France lead

FUTUROSCOPE, France — Frenchman Charles Mottet took the overall leader's yellow jersey Friday after finishing second in the 10th leg of the Tour de France cycling race, behind Irishman Stephen Roche. Roche, of the strong Carrera team, captured the 54-mile leg, an individual time trial from Saumur to Futuroscope, in a time of one hour, 58 minutes, 11 seconds, riding at an average speed of 27.5 mph.

Jesper Skibby of Denmark placed third, 53 seconds off the pace.

Mottet, of the Systeme U, team finished 42 seconds behind and was jubilant after his ride in hot weather. "To wear the yellow jersey is every cyclist's dream," Mottet said. "It's great."

All-Star sluggers face stiff challenge

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — In the Year of the Home Run, the 58th All-Star Game poses a stiff challenge for sluggers — taming the twilight zone at one of the worst hitters' parks in baseball.

A notoriously bad glare, the most foul territory in the major leagues and seemingly dead air make the Oakland Coliseum a brutal place to hit. And a 5:30 p.m. local start, arranged to accommodate NBC-TV, will make it even tougher for batters.

The last time the All-Star Game started at twilight, in 1984 in San Francisco, there were a record 21 strikeouts. The time before, in 1980 in Los Angeles, 15 All-Stars struck out.

But Tuesday's game may not be a snap for Bret Saberhagen, Mike Scott, Rick Sutcliffe and other top pitchers.

Home runs are up 22 percent over last year's record pace, and many of those heavy hitters will be in Oakland.

"At the beginning of the season, I didn't know if I'd even have the chance to be on the All-Star team," said Oakland rookie Mark McGwire, who leads the majors with 31 home runs despite not starting until the third week of the year.

McGwire, George Bell and Dave Winfield highlight a homer-studded lineup that can give the American League something unique — its first consecutive victories in the All-Star Game since 1957-58.

The National League leads the series 36-20-1 and has won 13 of the last 15 and 21 of the previous 24. The AL broke through last year on home runs by Lou Whitaker and Frank White for a 3-2 victory at the Astrodome, which, statistically, is worse than Oakland when it comes to home runs.

Eric Davis leads an NL lineup that includes Jack Clark, Andre Dawson and Mike Schmidt. Davis tops the league with 26 home runs, and is batting .317 with 66 runs batted in.

Davis is also an oddity. While the AP graphic

All-Star Game moved west to Oakland for the first time ever, Davis was only player from a Western Division team voted to start. All 15 other players elected by fans came from the East.

"The East is where it's at," Winfield said.

Winfield, Don Mattingly, Rickey Henderson and Willie Randolph, the first four batters in the New York Yankees' lineup, were all elected to start. Reliever Dave Righetti was selected to the nine-man pitching staff.

Even with Mattingly and Henderson on the disabled list, the Yankees have been the best team in the AL this season.

Winfield, accused in the past by owner George Steinbrenner of not hitting in the clutch, has hit 19 homers with 87 RBI.

Righetti, though not as consistent as last year, has 17 saves and helped stabilize a pitching staff that was considered the team's weak spot.

Righetti will join Tom Henke, Jay Howell and Dan Plesac as relievers on the staff. In the past, AL staffs often have been overloaded with starters and not enough relievers, a problem the NL usually manages to avoid when it constructs its pitching corps.

"You look around and you see all these great players, guys you admire, and you want to say 'hello' but as a pitcher you don't want to get too friendly," Righetti said. "You've got to get these guys out sometime down the road."

One of the batters Righetti could face is Clark, who has been the strength of the NL East-leading St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cardinals have the best record in baseball and Clark is averaging one run batted in per game. He leads the majors with 82 RBI and is batting .306 with 25 home runs.

"This team never gives up. We don't feel like we can lose," said St. Louis' Willie McGee, selected as an All-Star reserve outfielder.

St. Louis shortstop Ozzie Smith, batting over .300, was the top vote-getter.

"I'm basically known as a defensive player. I feel I'm a better offensive player than I'm known," he said.

Also surprising this season are Saberhagen and Sutcliffe, former Cy Young winners who slumped during injury-plagued 1986 seasons.

Kansas City's Saberhagen has rebounded royally from going 7-12. He leads the majors with a 14-3 record and has kept the Royals close in the AL West.

Sutcliffe leads the NL with an 11-4 record. He went 5-14 last year for the Chicago Cubs.

"Sutcliffe should start, he deserves it," Cubs Manager Gene Michael said. NL Manager Dave Johnson of the New York Mets and AL Manager John McNamara of the Boston Red Sox will announce their starting pitchers Monday.

Missing will be the pitchers who started last year's game — Boston's Roger Clemens and the New York Mets' Dwight Gooden. Also missing for the first time in his seven full major-league seasons is Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela, who is just 7-7.

Clemens pitched three perfect innings in the 1986 All-Star Game and was its Most Valuable Player. He went on to a 24-4 record and was the AL's MVP and Cy Young winner.

Managers wouldn't have picked Strawberry

By The Associated Press

Darryl Strawberry may be a hit with the fans, but he's off the team as far as National League managers are concerned.

Strawberry, the New York Mets outfielder who was elected by fans to start the All-Star Game for the fourth straight season, failed to appear on a single ballot cast by NL managers in a survey conducted by The Associated Press.

He was not alone in his absence from the managers' team.

Neither Mike Schmidt nor Gary Carter, both elected by fans, would start for NL managers. Cal Ripken and Terry Kennedy of Baltimore, and Dave Winfield of New York would not start if American League managers made out that lineup.

Instead, Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves would take Strawberry's place, Tim Wallach of Montreal would play third instead of Schmidt, and Jody Davis of the Chicago Cubs would catch instead of Carter.

In the American League, Tony Fernandez of Toronto would play shortstop instead of Ripken, Kirby Puckett of Minnesota would start in the outfield in place of Winfield and Matt Nokes of Detroit would catch instead of

Murphy

Wallach

Nokes

Davis

Puckett

Kennedy.

Twenty-four managers responded to the AP survey, conducted from June 29 to July 8. Tom Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Tony LaRussa of the Oakland Athletics declined to pick a team.

Managers could not pick their own players. Three players received the maximum possible vote total — Ozzie Smith of St. Louis at shortstop in the NL, and Wade Boggs of Boston at third base and George Bell of Toronto in the outfield for the AL.

The All-Star Game will be played Tuesday in Oakland.

Strawberry, who has been criticized by his New York Mets teammates for not playing hurt, seemed to feel vindicated by the fans' selection.

"It's a big honor," he said Wednesday when the final fan votes were released. "It just shows there are people out there who do care. I'm just honored about the whole situation. No matter what happens, my being criticized, the people believe in me."

But Strawberry was not among the eight top outfielders in the NL according to the managers. Besides their starting trio of Eric Davis, Andre Dawson and Murphy, the managers voted for Tony Gwynn, Vince Coleman, Jeffrey Leonard, Willie McGee and Tim Raines instead of the Mets' outfielder.

"Basically it doesn't bother me," Strawberry said when told of the survey results. "If I'm not a starter, I would have been selected to the team anyway. I know that quite a few other outfielders are hitting for a better average, but I'm quite sure a lot of managers would pick me even if it were not to start."

Murphy, who had been the first NL outfielder to start in five consecutive All-Star Games since Hank Aaron, edged Gwynn 64-6 for the final NL outfield spot behind Davis and Dawson.

The Yankees' Don Mattingly watches his grand-slam home run go over the wall in the second inning off White Sox' relief pitcher Joel McKeon. McKeon had come in to relieve Scott Nielsen, who had loaded the bases with Mattingly up to bat Friday night in New York.

Homers lead Yanks to 9-5 win

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly hit his third grand slam in less than two months and Dave Winfield followed with a solo homer as the New York Yankees scored seven runs in the second inning Friday night and defeated the Chicago White Sox 9-5.

Both home runs — Mattingly's 12th of the season and fourth in the last three games and Winfield's 20th — came off Joel McKeon after the Yankees tied the score 2-2 with two runs against starter Scott Nielsen, 2-3, on RBI singles by Rick Cerone and Rickey Henderson.

McKeon relieved Nielsen after he walked Willie Randolph to load the bases, and Mattingly lined McKeon's 2-1 pitch into the bleachers in right-center. His other grand slams were May 14 against Texas and June 29 in Toronto after failing to hit one during his first four seasons in the majors.

In the last four games, Mattingly, who was 3-for-5 Friday, has 10 hits in 18 at-bats with two doubles, four homers and 11 RBI.

Winfield capped the biggest inning against the White Sox this season with his solo homer.

The White Sox made it 7-4 in the top of the fifth when Harold Baines hit his 12th homer, a towering 430-foot shot into the center field bleachers after Jerry Royster singled for the 1,000th hit of his 12-year career.

But in the bottom of the fifth, Mike Pagliarulo hit a two-run homer, his 16th of the season. It was the eighth home run surrendered by McKeon in 21 innings and the Yankees' 11th in the last four games.

Blue Jays 7, Royals 0

TORONTO (AP) — Dave Stieb pitched a four-hitter and George Bell hit his 29th homer and drove in two runs as the Toronto Blue Jays blanked the Kansas City Royals 7-0 Friday night.

It was the fifth victory in a row for the Blue Jays while Kansas City, which has been shut out 12 times this season, lost for the fifth consecutive time.

It was the first shutout and complete game since May 30, 1986 for Stieb, 7-5, who walked two and struck out seven. His longest previous outing this season was 7 2-3 innings on July against the Royals.

Royals starter Charlie Leibrandt, 8-7, was once again the victim of poor run support. The left-hander has had three shutouts tossed against him this year and in his other four losses, the Royals have totalled just six runs.

Mets top Angels, 7-3, McReynolds on streak

HOUSTON (AP) — Kevin McReynolds hit two home runs and a single, extending his hitting streak to 14 games, to lead the New York Mets to a 7-3 win over the Houston Astros Friday night.

McReynolds' homers, his 15th and 16th of the season, came off loser Mike Scott, 10-3, who lasted 5 2-3 innings, yielding seven runs on 11 hits.

Dwight Gooden, 6-2, struck out five and walked three in 8 2-3 innings for the victory. He needed last-out relief help from Jesse Orosco, who squelched a bases-loaded situation in the ninth.

Houston took a 1-0 lead in the second when Kevin Bass walked, took third on a single by Jose Cruz and scored on a wild pitch by Gooden. The Mets tied the score in the third as Len Dykstra hit a two-out double and came home on a single by Wally Backman.

McReynolds gave the Mets the lead with a solo shot in the fourth that sailed well over the left-field wall.

McReynolds' second home run, a two-run shot, highlighted the Mets' five-run sixth. Darryl Strawberry singled and scored ahead of McReynolds. Howard Johnson followed with his 17th home run of the season.

The Mets continued their sixth-inning rally when Rafael Santana singled, took second on Gooden's sacrifice bunt and scored on a single by Dykstra. Dykstra later scored on shortstop Craig Reynolds' throwing error.

The Astros cut the deficit to 7-2 in their half of the sixth when Bill Doran hit his second homer in as many nights, increasing his season total to 12, and added an unearned run in the eighth on Johnson's throwing error.

Expos 5, Reds 1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Andres Galaraga hit a single, double and triple and drove in two runs Friday night to support Bryn Smith's six-hit pitching and lead the Montreal Expos to a 5-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The win ended Montreal's streak of eight consecutive losses to the Reds. Montreal was 0-5 against Cincinnati this season and hadn't defeated the Reds since July 24, 1986.

Smith, 6-3, struck out two and walked one in his second complete game, defusing Reds' scoring threats in three of the first four innings. He lost his shutout when Eric Davis hit a solo homer in the sixth, his 27th of the season, matching his career high of last year.

Pirates 6, Padres 5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Johnny Ray double home the winning run with two outs in the 11th inning to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-5 win over the San Diego Padres Friday night.

Pinch-hitter Bobby Bonilla started the inning with a single off Rich Gossage, 1-2. Ray sliced a double down the left field line to score Bonilla and end the Pirates' third consecutive extra-inning game.

Don Robinson, 6-5, earned the victory despite allowing John Kruk's game-tying home run with two out in the ninth inning.

Pirates' reliever John Smiley retired the first two hitters in the ninth inning, but was lifted by Manager Jim Leyland when Bruce Bochy was announced as a pinch-hitter. When Robinson entered the game, Kruk batted for Bochy and hit Robinson's 1-1 pitch over the left field wall for his 10th home run.

Cubs 12, Dodgers 5

CHICAGO (AP) — Paul Noco drove in five runs and Rick Sutcliffe became the first National League pitcher to win 12 games as the Chicago Cubs beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 12-5 Friday in the completion of a game suspended the previous day.

The contest was halted after two outs in the bottom of the sixth inning for more than an hour by torrential rainfall Thursday. It was finally postponed because of darkness with the score 12-5 and resumed before the start of Friday's regularly scheduled game.

The win was the fourth in a row for Chicago, while the Dodgers have lost five straight.

Sutcliffe, 12-4, pitched five innings, allowing four runs, one earned, and seven hits, including a two-run homer by John Shelby and a solo shot by Pedro Guerrero in the fifth.

Phillies 5, Braves 2

ATLANTA (AP) — Shane Rawley and Steve Bedrosian combined on a six-hitter and Milt Thompson and Juan Samuel homered Friday as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Atlanta Braves 5-2.

Rawley, 10-5, gave up two runs on four hits in seven innings. Bedrosian finished for his major league-leading 24th save. Thompson hit a two-run homer and Samuel connected for a solo shot. Mike Schmidt hit a pair of run-scoring singles.

Thompson doubled and scored on Schmidt's single in the first inning. Thompson hit his third homer of the season in the third off Doyle Alexander, 4-5, after Samuel walked.

Samuel walked in the seventh, Thompson singled and Schmidt hit another RBI single.

RODRIGUEZ UP BY ONE IN SENIORS

By Chris Dahl
The Associated Press

FAIRFIELD — Chi Chi Rodriguez, winner of five tournaments already this year, shot his second straight 68 Friday to take a one-stroke lead at the midway point of the U.S. Senior Open.

Former NFL quarterback John Brodie was in front by as many as three strokes until he went a bogey-double-bogey on his final two holes.

Brodie, who finished with a 70, dropped into a tie for second place with Gary Player who closed his round with birdie putts of 18 and 30 feet for a 68. They were a stroke behind at 5-under 137.

Arnold Palmer shot his second straight 69 was two strokes back at 138.

The par-71, 6,599-yard Brooklawn Country Club course yielded 36 sub-par rounds through the first two rounds to smash the four-round Senior Open record of 31 rounds under par set last year.

"You know the USGA doesn't like those low scores," Rodriguez said. "Tomorrow, they'll probably put those flags in sand traps."

Rodriguez, 51, had six birdies and three bogeys as he took advantage of Brodie's misfortune on the final two holes.

"This is about the only time in your life you're going to see a jockey take down a quarterback," the slightly-bullied Rodriguez joked.

Brodie, who had a 4-under 67 in the opening round, picked up where he left off as he pursued his first pro victory.

The former all-pro with the San Francisco 49ers had four birdies and no bogeys until the last two holes, both par-4s. He called his second shot on No. 18, which went into a sand trap, the worst shot of his life.

"I guess that's what happens when you're paying your dues," he said. "I tried to hit a cute little seven iron ... I won't do that again."

But Brodie, who is also 51, said he was pleased to be among the leaders heading into the final two rounds.

"That's been my objective, to play with these players. You know when you're with them, you're not at the back of the pack," he said.

High heat and humidity blanketed the course in haze for the second straight day, leaving most of the over-50 field fatigued and sweaty.

But Player, who does 300 situps a day, marched ahead of his group in the same manner he did 20 years ago.

"I enjoy the heat," the 51-year-old South African native said. "It certainly keeps you loose, and when you get over 50 everyone wants to get those bones loosened up a little bit."

The first round co-leaders, five-time British Open champion Peter Thomson and little-known Gordan Jones, both faltered.

Thomson, an Australian, shot a 2-over 73 but remained three strokes behind Rodriguez in a group with Doug Sanders, Don Massengale and Bobby Nichols.

He scrambled with an early-morning round that included four bogeys, one birdie and a couple of saves.

"Generally speaking, I was not nearly as good as I was yesterday," he said. "I'm not an early-morning player and having gotten away with a 73 I'm quite pleased."

Jones, who hasn't won in 30 years of professional golf, ballooned to a 75 after his opening-round 66.

With himself, Rodriguez and Player coming on strong, Palmer, the oldest of the leaders at 57, remarked, "It's the same people I've played with my entire career. Gary, and Chi Chi a little later on."

"If you wanted a script, you couldn't write one any better."

Player, who captured his first victory of 1967 a month ago in the Senior Tournament Players Championship, said preparing for major tournaments is "something you have to do mentally."
