Poindexter says he alone OK'd diversion

By Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press
WASHINGTON - Former National Security Adviser John Poindexter testified today that he deliberately never told President Reagan about the diversion of Iranian arms sales profits to the Contra rebels to shield him from political harm.
Poindexter said he personally approved the diversion scheme in February 1986, and believed that Reagan "absolutely" would have approved the idea if he knew of it.
"Poindexter said he did not recall disagreeing with those who said he did," the spokesman said.
In an extraordinary morning of testimony, Poindexter also said he "personally approved" when Lt. Col. Oliver North came to him in February 1986 and suggested that profits from the sales be diverted to the Contra rebels. Poindexter said he saw the proposal as a way of occasionally puffing on his pipe as he answered the most serious questions that have arisen in the affair - the extent of Reagan's knowledge of events.
At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he discussed Poindexter's testimony with Reagan. "The president doesn't recall the finding, but he doesn't disagree with those who say he did," the spokesman said.

Democrats give up on gulf plans
Experts pull out the stops for Cheney organ repair

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Democrats said today they are dropping efforts to delay President Reagan's plans to protect Kuwaiti oil tankers, one week before the first U.S. Navy ships were to begin their escort duty in the Persian Gulf.
"His vote will be the end of it as far as I'm concerned," Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said shortly before senators refused to break a Republican filibuster blocking the chamber from seeking a delay in the escort plans.
"We've made our point that a majority of the Senate is opposed to this policy," Byrd said.
The Democratic-controlled chamber voted 55-44, six votes short of the 60 needed to impose cloture, the parliamentary device used to end a filibuster.
It was the third time in a week that the Senate refused to invoke cloture. With Democrats holding a 54-46 margin in the chamber, Republicans have been able to muster enough votes to block the cloture attempt.
At issue today was a proposal which called for a 90-day delay in Reagan's plans. The two earlier votes were on a different proposal, seeking to put the Persian Gulf policy "in abeyance" for an undetermined time.
The first tanker will be escorted up the 500-mile-long gulf to be loaded with oil and then back through the Strait of Hormuz at the mouth of the gulf, the legislators said Tuesday.
The first convoy will include only one or two Kuwaiti tankers while later groups will probably be larger, said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.
Aspin, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., said they were told that the first Navy mission would be July 22.
Sasser, a leader of congressional attempts to block President Reagan's plan, said Democratic opponents would try again today to win Senate approval of a resolution seeking a delay. Two earlier attempts failed.
Administration officials have refused to announce an exact start-up date for the escorts and Pentagon officials declined to comment on the July 22 date.
At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater would say only that the Navy's escort mission "will begin soon." He said it "could come as early as next week."
Later, an administration official who demanded anonymity said it was "unfortunate that congressional released details from a classified briefing."
But Warren Nelson, a spokesman for Aspin, said it is assumed that nothing in such briefings is classified unless it is identified explicitly as such and a degree of classification is given. He said Aspin told him that no one in the meeting said the information being discussed was classified.
Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., said he telephoned National Security Adviser Frank Carlucci Tuesday expressing concern that the date of the operation has been made public and asking that it be changed.

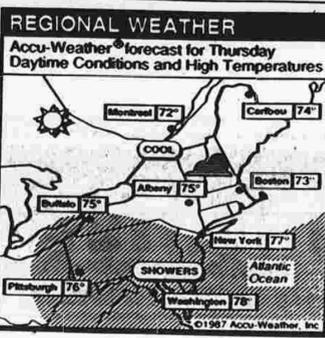

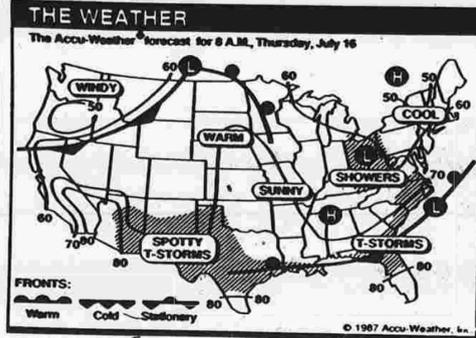

Ornate organ pipes line the floor of Cheney Hall Tuesday. At the rear of the stage, experts dismantle the rest of the organ for storage and eventual restoration.

Jaycees' leader doesn't consider herself pioneer

By George Loyng
Herald Reporter
Elizabeth Wilson of Manchester said she does not consider herself a pioneer, but she was one of the first women in the state to head a local chapter of the Jaycees.
She was asked to join the Manchester Jaycees two years ago, and just completed a one-year term as president. Currently, she serves as the local chapter's chairman of the board.
While president, Wilson said, things went smoothly. "Everybody was very cooperative," she said. "We just had a great time."
Currently, there are 30 members, 12 of them women, said John Hall, the Jaycees president. While bylaw changes that allowed women to become full members took effect two years ago, until now women have been members for the four years he has been with the organization.
"Women found absolutely no problems," he said.
The Jaycees was the first traditionally male-only organization in the area to allow women members, but others in Manchester are considering following suit.
The local Rotary Club will soon induct its first female member. The decision follows a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in May that allows states to force civic service organizations to allow women members.
Similarly, the Kiwanis Club of Manchester said it also plans to invite some women to join. The Lions Club of Manchester, though, is waiting to see what its internal organization decides at an upcoming convention.
Club President Peter Lozier said the reason women have been

Strong thunderstorms hit south High Plains

By The Associated Press

Strong thunderstorms continued to buffet the southern High Plains today after unleashing a Texas tornado that injured 10 people, twisters in at least two other states, and hail as big as baseballs.

"We were on the way out the door and the stuff started flying," said Pampa, Texas, police officer Gary Boydston, who was in his mobile home with his wife and two children when the tornado hit Tuesday night.

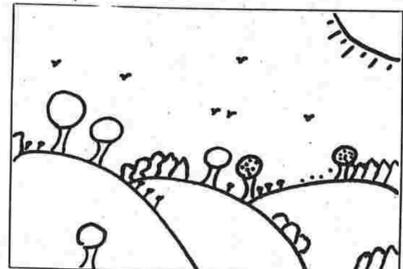

The Texas Panhandle twister destroyed nine mobile homes and injured a woman who remained in critical condition in a hospital today. Nine other people were treated for minor injuries.

Thunderstorms fell today over northwest Texas and eastern New Mexico, while showers and a few thunderstorms lingered over the upper half of the Mississippi Valley. Scattered showers and thunderstorms were developing along a cold front pushing across the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

The storm in Pampa, a town of about 21,300 people, also flooded streets, knocked out power and phone service, and did damage estimated at $900,000.

Tornadoes also were reported in Iowa and Minnesota, and there were unconfirmed reports of twisters in New Jersey on Tuesday.

The Tuesday night storms in the Texas Panhandle also spawned hail as big as baseballs in Baylor, Silverton and Floyd, and high winds and heavy rain around Lubbock.

Experts say the Frisbee is the most popular form of recreation in the United States. It is estimated that more Frisbees are sold each year than baseballs, basketballs, and footballs combined. While Frisbees are simply a way to relax for many people, others have made throwing them a serious sport. In 1982, a California man threw, ran and caught a disc a distance of 272.6 feet. The world's record for the fastest Frisbee throw is 74 miles per hour.

The Police is over

The Police, a three-piece band that evolved from punk to mainstream rock 'n' roll and achieved international success, is no more, says Andy Summers, the trio's guitarist.

"It's all right to say, officially, that it's over," Summers said Monday. "I feel not right in saying that it's still together, because things have been drifting the past three years."

In the interim, Summers, 44, has been writing soundtracks, making duet albums with guitarist Robert Fripp, and is writing, singing and touring with a new, four-man band.

The band's lead singer, Sting, has gone on to a solo career and acting in movies. Drummer Stewart Copeland composes music for movies and television.

"Anybody who's been up as high as the Police were, well, it's a wonderful thing, and it creates a high platform," Summers said. "But you have to get over it, too."

Hassan received a full ceremonial welcome Tuesday when he arrived at London's Victoria Station on a royal train that brought him 60 miles from the southern seaside resort of Brighton.

At a banquet to honor the king Tuesday night, Hassan ate a traditional English meal of roast lamb. The scent of mint tea, another of his favorites, wafted through Buckingham Palace's red-carpeted corridors, and tables were decorated with camel-shaped salt and pepper shakers.

Schoolhouse captures our town's past

Directors to tour structure

By Alexander Girelli
Associate Editor

In 1859 the Cheney Bros. built a two-room schoolhouse on Cooper Hill Street. But the growing Cheney textile empire came to need more production space. So in 1914 the school building, along with some houses, was moved to make way for a new mill building.

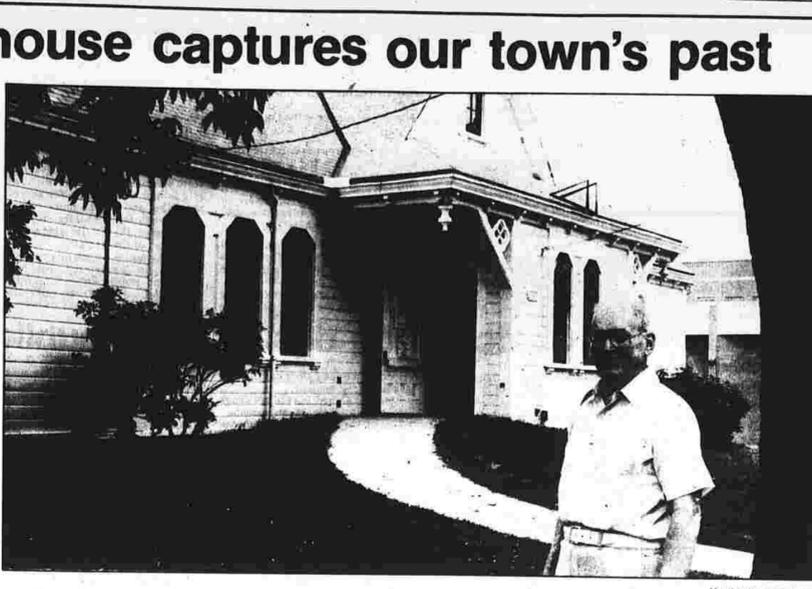

The school was set on the west side of Cedar Street just north of Cooper Hill Street. It served a number of purposes. It was once an annex to the nearby Washington School. It was most familiar as the site of the Lutz Children's Museum.

Now it is the site of the new Manchester Historical Museum operated by the Manchester Historical Society. The building has not been totally converted to the museum's purposes and many of the society's display materials are still stored in various places waiting for the time when they can be put on public view.

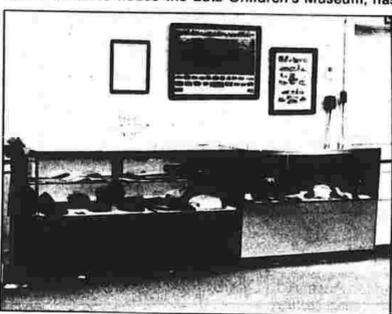

The school is replacing an old heating system that was expensive to run and took up a lot of space, and it has cleaned and painted the large display rooms on the main floor.

The building is owned by the town, and the society has invited the town's Board of Directors and their guests to tour the building Thursday evening to see what has been accomplished since the museum opened in June 1986.

Besides the tour, there will be a slide show on Manchester history by Herbert Bengtson, acquisitions chairman for the Manchester Historical Museum, which used to house the Lutz Children's Museum, has Herbert Bengtson, acquisitions chairman for the Manchester Historical Museum, stands outside the museum building on Cedar Street. The 1859 building, which used to house the Lutz Children's Museum, has been cleaned and spruced up. Members of the town's Board of Directors will tour it Thursday evening to see the work that has been done.

In one room is a special exhibit titled "Manchester at the Turn of the Century."

One part will be a traveling exhibit, done in cooperation with the Connecticut Humanities Council, which stressed that the Connecticut played in creating and ratifying the Constitution.

The other part of the exhibit will be more local, stressing vignettes of Manchester in the Federal Period. Savery said the role Connecticut played in the historical society hopes to cooperate with the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Pitkin Glass Works.

On October, the museum will see the need for a good deal more.

cooperative effort with Lutz Children's Museum to encourage children to visit the historic museum.

Only the main floor is open to the public now. In the attic are stored some materials that won't be hurt by the high temperatures that build up there. The basement, which isn't finished, has farm implements and a circa 1927 washing machine as well as an old wicker baby carriage.

About $15,000 has been spent on work done so far, with about half again as much contributed in materials and volunteer labor. Bengtson can see the need for a good deal more.

Firm puts up $25,000 for range

An East Hartford firm interested in managing the town of Manchester's rifle range has offered to pay for $25,000 of the estimated $75,000 to $80,000 cost of renovating the facility, according to a proposal filed with the town.

Town officials have yet to review the plan, but Recreation Director Scott Sprague said Tuesday he was encouraged by it. "It appears that they're making an effort to buy into it (the range)," he said.

Town officials had worried that a firm hired to manage the range would not make enough of a financial commitment to make it worthwhile for the town to cover part of the renovation costs.

Under the plan submitted by Wilderness Sports, Inc., the East Hartford firm would pay for the ceiling repair, painting, port construction and other carpentry required. The town would be responsible for installing an air ventilation system and any toxic cleanup costs.

The range was closed in February 1986 after health and safety violations were discovered.

In return for putting up $25,000, Wilderness is requesting that it be given a 20-year contract to manage the facility. In May, it had originally asked for a 15-year contract.

The original proposal by Wilderness called for the town to cover all major renovation costs. However, the firm's new offer comes after it and a Windsor group, Metropolitan Shooters, Inc., agreed to cooperate in the use of the facility.

Any final decision to have a private firm manage the range would be made by the town Board of Directors. The board last fall rejected a plan to have the town renovate and operate the range entirely on its own because of concerns that it would be too expensive.

Metropolitan and Wilderness were the only two firms to make offers to manage the range. Metropolitan's offer also called for the town to cover the renovation costs.

Metropolitan withdrew its offer after Wilderness agreed to set aside evening shooting times for Metropolitan shooters if it is selected by the town directors to manage the facility.

In its first offer, Wilderness said it hoped to have the renovations finished by December. However, Sprague said that projection now appears "pretty optimistic."

He said the town administration still has to review the offer, and make a recommendation to the directors. If approved, then specifications for the renovation work must be drafted, and bids solicited. Sprague said he did not know how long the actual renovation work would take.

Area towns work through UConn to train administrators

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herold Reporter

School Superintendent James P. Kennedy has announced a plan to develop a training program for administrators.

Manchester officials, along with officials from Windsorbury, Enfield and South Windsor, have been working for the past six months with the school education at the University of Connecticut to create a cooperative program to train educators to become administrators.

Kennedy said the need for new administrators will make itself felt as the current generation reaches retirement age. According to a report Kennedy provided, 50 percent of present school administrators nationwide will be retiring in the next five to seven years at the Oak Hill School in Hartford.

The Manchester school system has a six-month internship program for administrators through which two educators receive training each year. Joining forces with other school districts would be more economical and would allow each town to draw on the others' expertise, Kennedy said Tuesday.

Called U-GEMS, after the parties involved, the cooperative program would offer two-year internships for potential administrators. Ongoing training for administrators would include courses on timely subjects and "mini-sabbaticals" for four to eight weeks at UConn.

Kennedy said that U-GEMS will take advantage of the proximity of Hartford by seeking advice on administration from area corporations. Funding for the program would come from state or private grants, he said.

Board member Francis A. Maffe Jr. suggested that Manchester's participation in U-GEMS might benefit the other three participants more than it would Manchester.

negotiations have been scheduled between management and union representatives at five privately run mental health-care centers, including two which operate facilities in Manchester.

Members of the New England Health Care Employees Union, District 1199, who on June 30 voted to postpone a strike less than a day before the deadline, are asking that their wages be increased to a level equal to their counterparts in state-run facilities.

The five mental health-care centers that would be affected by a strike include New Seasons Inc. and Connecticut Community Services, which both operate facilities in Manchester. The others are Allison Memorial Manor in Woodbury, United Social and Mental Health Services in Danielson, and the Connecticut Institute for the Blind, which operates the Oak Hill School in Hartford.

According to union spokesman Bill Meyerson, negotiating sessions have been set at facilities of each of the five centers over the next eight days. The negotiations will take place separately at each of the five centers, with management representatives and union negotiating committees of each center being present at their respective centers. Meyerson said.

since Manchester is the only one in the group that already has an internship program.

"I for one believe there's always an opportunity to learn from the way other people do things," Kennedy answered.

Kennedy said Tuesday that he had no estimate of how many of Manchester's 35 administrators would be retiring in the future. He did say, however, that four of nine elementary school principals could retire within five to seven years.

In other business Monday, Kennedy released figures showing that classroom size in Manchester schools is approaching the desired number of 20 to 25 students. Last year, 84 of 159 classes had enrollment of the desired number, while this year 98 out of 164 fell into that category. At the same time, classes with an enrollment of more than 25 pupils decreased from 11 to four.

"This is significant progress to getting where we want to be," Kennedy said.

Weinberg lists campaign funds

Manchester Democratic Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg, who is seeking re-election to another two-year term on the town Board of Directors, has raised $1,494 so far to help her campaign, according to records filed at the town clerk's office.

The records show that between April 29 and July 8, she received $3,715 in contributions from individuals, and no donations from organizations or political action committees. Her expenditures totaled $2,220.

Most money received came from a campaign fund-raiser Weinberg held in May at the Manchester Country Club.

Weinberg is one of only two candidates for the board who are officially formed fund-raising committees. The other is Republican Geoffrey Naab, but Naab did not list any campaign funds or expenditures on the form filed with the town clerk's office.

IS IT TIME TO MOVE?

Sometimes the need for a move may be obvious. For instance, your work might require you to transfer to a new city. Other times, the change in your life and your housing needs may be less obvious. You might have twins, you may be marrying off the last child in your family, or you might have a big increase in income.

If you notice that your house or condominium is no longer serving your needs, it may be time to call in a professional Realtor for expert advice. He may suggest that you remodel your present home or find one that's more suitable to your current lifestyle.

If you do decide to move, what should you consider before listing your home and beginning the search for a new one? You'll want some idea of how much you can expect to get for your present home and how much you can afford to spend for a new one. You'll also need information about financing and the multitude of loan programs that are now available.

If you are considering a move, contact the professionals at Carl A. Zinsner Agency - "Your Hometown Realtor". Call us at 646-1511 or stop by our office at 750 Main Street in Manchester.

Connecticut In Brief

Study: Conserve energy, don't build

HARTFORD — New England can meet most of its expected growth in energy demand over the next 20 years through conservation, rather than building more power plants, according to a regional energy study group.

The challenge will be convincing consumers that conservation is still necessary, state officials and representatives of the New England Energy Policy Council said Tuesday.

"The fact that we're not in a crisis atmosphere gives us this opportunity to respond," said state Consumer Counsel James F. Meehan, who represents consumers before the Department of Public Utility Control.

Discounts are needed, such as rebates on new products, to encourage home and business owners to make their homes and plants more energy efficient.

"Energy that is now wasted can be captured, with the same effect as if a new source of energy had been added," said Chuck Morgan of the Connecticut Citizen Action Group, who joined the others at a state Capitol news conference.

O'Neill prepares for 1988-89 budget

HARTFORD — Just two weeks into the 1987-88 budget year, Gov. William A. O'Neill is telling state agency heads to get going on their budget requests for 1988-89.

In a letter dated July 1 and released Tuesday, O'Neill urged commissioners and department heads to "be sensitive to the need to preserve Connecticut's fiscal stability and to encourage further steady growth in our economy."

The budget that took effect July 1 represented a 14.5 percent increase in spending over the previous year.

The state ended the 1986-87 budget year with a surplus of more than $244 million, a near record.

O'Neill said he wants budget proposals from each state agency submitted to budget office, the Office of Policy and Management, by Aug. 3.

Jury indicts three in fake-ID scam

HARTFORD — A federal grand jury has returned indictments against three men who allegedly held illegal aliens obtain fake Social Security cards, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy said.

Orlando Dias and Raimundo Demoura, both of Bridgeport, and Nelson Oliveira of Newark, N.J., were charged with conspiracy to aid in the use of false documents in connection with applications for Social Security cards made to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Twardy said Tuesday.

Dias was also charged with production of false identification documents, possession of implements to make such documents and possession of a counterfeit certificate of alien registration.

State takes title to historic cave

SIMSBURY — The state of Connecticut has officially taken title to King Phillip's cave on Talcott Mountain, a famous landmark in Connecticut legend and history.

Legend has it that Wampanoag Indian chief King Phillip watched the burning of Simsbury by his tribesmen from the cave in 1676. In 1977, Joseph Wadsworth is said to have hidden in the cave after hiding the Connecticut Colony charter in the Charter Oak and eluding the British.

Gov. William A. O'Neill signed the deed in special ceremonies at Polly Farm on Tuesday afternoon for the 13-acre parcel given to the Department of Environmental Protection by Austin D. Barney II and Robert E. Fattori.

The parcel becomes part of Talcott Mountain State Park, site of the Heublein observation tower, built in 1914. The park covers more than 500 acres in Simsbury, Avon and Bloomfield.

Hearing set in Darien murders

STAMFORD — A probable cause hearing for Patrick Campbell, the 20-year-old Darien man accused of killing his adoptive parents, will be held Aug. 13, Campbell's attorney said.

Campbell was arraigned Tuesday in Stamford Superior Court, Terrence J. Murphy Jr., one of three attorneys representing Campbell, said Tuesday. Campbell had been arraigned in a lower court after he was arrested on July 2, but his case was transferred because of the seriousness of the crime, Murphy said.

Campbell, who had been living in homeless shelters, is charged in the beating deaths of 56-year-old Kenneth and 59-year-old Anna May Campbell.

Their bodies were found July 1 in the backyard of their Darien home by their natural daughter, Jill. The bodies had been set on fire.

Campbell was being held on $500,000 bond in Bridgeport Correctional Center on one count of capital felony, two counts of felony murder, two counts of murder and one count of second-degree arson.

Strikers picket Colt chief's home

VERNON — Striking Colt workers have made their first return to a picket line at the home of the company president since a state Supreme Court decision struck down a law prohibiting labor demonstrations near the homes of business executives.

Some 200 strikers and supporters demonstrated Tuesday in front of the home of Gary W. French, president of the Colt Firearms Division.

"It's a clear, silent message we want to get to the neighbors and Mr. French that we want him to come to the bargaining table," said Robert Madore, president of United Auto Workers, Local 376.

The local represents the Colt workers who have been on strike for nearly 18 months against Hartford-based Colt Firearms.

Tuesday's demonstration was the fourth time the workers had picketed at French's home, but the first since the state Supreme Court Decision last month.

New Haven gets Bork's tax check

NEW HAVEN — U.S. Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork has paid more than $1,000 in back taxes on two cars, city officials say.

City Controller Michael Milone said Bork's personal check for $1,316.09 was received at the tax office on Tuesday. The check and the postmark on the envelope were dated July 7, Milone said.

"Judge Bork's account with the city is now current," he said.

Bork's check covered $1,009.72 he owed on two cars and slightly more than $300 owed by his son. The judge's taxes date from 1972 and 1973 while his son's date from 1977.

Bork served on the Yale Law School faculty between 1962 and 1973, when he left New Haven. He returned to Yale in 1977, but left again for Washington five years ago.

Hit-and-run crash hurts officer

WALLINGFORD — Two local men were charged in a hit-and-run accident in which a police detective was struck and injured as he and another officer walked toward the men's car, police said.

Police Detective Richard Kearns was listed in satisfactory condition at Meriden-Wallingford Hospital, where he was to be held overnight for observation after the Tuesday night incident, hospital officials said.

David Pierce, 25, and Stephen Charlton, 25, were arrested at their homes about an hour after the incident, police said. Each was charged with first-degree assault, evading responsibility, first-degree reckless endangerment, criminal trespass, interfering with an officer and conspiracy, police said.

Panel to hear prosecutors' gripes

WALLINGFORD (AP) — The Criminal Justice Commission has agreed to meet with each of Connecticut's 12 state attorneys to discuss their recent criticism of the state's top prosecutor and his ability to lead the criminal justice division.

All 12 state attorneys signed a letter to the commission in June criticizing Chief State's Attorney John J. Kelly after he appeared to vacillate over disclosures that state police Lt. Bruce W. Haines secretly taped a meeting with Waterbury State's Attorney John A. Connelly.

The commission voted Tuesday to summon the state's attorneys to appear individually Aug. 3 and 4. Panel members, who are in charge of separate regions, will be allowed to express views about the complaints outlined in the letter, as well as opinions on the operation and effectiveness of the Division of Criminal Justice.

"It will give us the opportunity to meet with them individually in a give-and-take situation. Hopefully, the end result will be an improved system of criminal justice here in Connecticut," commission Chairman James G. Murphy said.

Commission member Margaret Rosita Kenny said, "I think that's the only way we can get to the bottom of this."

Haines made the recording during a March 4, 1985, meeting in Connelly's office. Since the state's attorneys' letter was written, Haines has admitted he secretly recorded a second meeting with Connelly on Jan. 17, 1986.

Haines' secret recordings have caused a split between Kelly and the state's attorneys—one of whom has called for his resignation. The state's attorneys condemned Kelly's failure to condemn the secret recording and said he made public statements that initially implied Connelly might be the subject of some sort of investigation.

The commission members also backed an agreement between Kelly and Public Safety Commissioner Col. Lester Forst, the state police commander that requires that Forst notify Kelly before state police officers tape record meetings with prosecutors.

Both of Haines' recordings seem to have been prompted by concern for longtime state police informant Thomas Speers, a convicted gambler. The first meeting Haines recorded was called by Connelly to discuss beginning a 1985 gambling investigation of Speers. It eventually included a wiretap of his phones.

Speers was arrested on a half-dozen gambling charges as a result of the wiretap. He has claimed the wiretap was based on a fraudulent statement made by a Waterbury police officer.

City evicts drug dealers from public housing

DANBURY (AP) — Local housing officials have decided the best way to fight the drug problem at public housing projects in the city is to evict anyone convicted of a drug crime and perhaps their entire families as well.

After consulting with project residents, the Danbury Housing Authority recently decided to take advantage of a lease provision that allows the authority to evict convicted felons and their families to go after drug dealers.

"We are determined to get drugs out of the housing developments," Bernard Fitzpatrick, Housing Authority Director, said Tuesday. "We want to clean up the drug situation and the lease and evictions are the only teeth we have to do it."

Fitzpatrick said he recently began eviction proceedings against a family at the Eden Drive housing project after a second teen-ager in the family was convicted of drug dealing. The case is pending.

Police praised the policy, but warned the Housing Authority may be busy with eviction proceedings.

"The more drug dealers they remove, the better for the community," Lt. Arthur Sulko said. "And any way we can help them we will. But the Housing Authority is going to have its hands full," he said. "If he goes through police logs, Mr. Fitzpatrick is going to be very busy."

Fitzpatrick said the authority will consider each case individually.

"We are not making a blanket statement that anyone whose family member is convicted is out, but we are going to do what we can to clean up these projects," he said.

U.S./World In Brief

Deficit grows, reversing trend

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit widened to $14.4 billion in May, reversing two consecutive months of improvement, the Commerce Department said today. Contributing to the worsening of the trade balance was a record $34.8 billion in imports — up from $33.5 billion in April.

The Commerce Department said the May trade imbalance increased from deficits of $13.3 billion in April and $13.6 billion in March.

The report came as a disappointment to economists who had expected continued improvement in the trade balance under the pressure of a weaker U.S. dollar.

However, Reagan administration analysts contend that the trade picture is improving, if slowly, and caution against reading too much into monthly fluctuations.

The May deficit was the highest since a $15.1 billion deficit in February.

Dam breaks; 50 dead or missing

ANNECY, France — An earthen dam collapsed, and a wave of mud and water from a rain-swollen river swept into five villages, killing 50 people dead or missing, authorities said today.

Hundreds of rescue workers digging through dirt and rocks in the French Alpine village of Grand Bourand found the bodies of 19 people, and 31 others were feared dead in the flood and mudslide, said police spokesman Jean Jouandret. Ten people were seriously injured and dozens were treated for shock.

Other estimates said as many as 40 people were missing. The dam of rocks holding back the Arve River beside the village broke in a storm on Tuesday, Bastille Day, at the end of the long holiday weekend. The water cascaded over tents, trailers and recreation vehicles, and pushed mud and huge rocks into the campsite, leaving no time for escape, witnesses said.

Drug firm: Jury award excessive

WASHINGTON — The makers of the anti-nausea drug Bendectin say they'll fight a "grossly excessive" jury award of $95 million to an 8-year-old boy born with deformed arms and hands.

A U.S. District Court jury on Tuesday ordered Merrell Dow Pharmaceutical Inc. of Cincinnati to pay Sekou Ealy of Washington, D.C., $20 million in compensatory and $75 million in punitive damages.

The jury award came after emotional testimony in which the boy described his anger and embarrassment at having deformed elbows that won't bend and hands that are missing thumbs.

Don't believe kids, defense says

LOS ANGELES — Children testifying in the McMartin Pre-School trial told stories of devil worship, animal sacrifice and sexual molestation but should not be believed, a defense lawyer said in his opening statement.

Attorney Dean Gits, challenging jurors Tuesday to discover the true "victims and bad guys" in the case, said peer pressure, conditioning by parents and interrogation techniques of a therapy center led children to make up stories about defendants Raymond Buckley, 29, and his mother, Peggy, 66.

For example, Gits said, a little girl parroted a molestation story first told by her sister, also a McMartin Pre-School pupil.

Hart, Nixon find common ground

WASHINGTON — Gary Hart says he and Richard Nixon agree on one thing: The "temporal, sensational and irrelevant" ought not to be the primary focus of politics.

The former Democratic presidential candidate made the assertion in a letter released Tuesday by political consultant Roger J. Stone Jr., who described himself as "a friend of Richard Nixon."

The letter was written May 21 to Nixon in response to Nixon's previously disclosed May 11 letter to Hart, shortly after Hart withdrew from the race for the Democratic presidential nomination due to allegations he was having an extramarital affair.

"I'm sure we agree that concerned citizens, leaders and opinion makers must try to focus national attention away from what is temporal, sensational and irrelevant to the real challenges confronting our nation and our world," wrote Hart, a former Colorado senator.

Deaver jury picks await ruling

WASHINGTON — The judge in Michael K. Deaver's perjury trial today suspended jury selection while a federal appeals court considered a request by news organizations that the proceedings be fully opened to the public.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson told the last 42 prospective jurors that he would delay questioning them until a federal appeals court rules on the news media challenge.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, meanwhile, convened an emergency hearing to consider the motion by two newspapers and four television networks to force Jackson to question all prospective jurors in public, not just those who agree to such an interrogation.

Explosions rock Karachi, kill 57

KARACHI, Pakistan — Rescue workers today pulled charred bodies from blackened cars after four bombs blew up during rush hour, killing at least 67 people and wounding 300.

Throng of weeping people gathered today at Karachi's two central hospitals to try to identify loved ones from grisly color photos posted on bulletin boards outside.

No group claimed responsibility for Tuesday evening's bombings, the worst terrorist attack in Pakistan's 40-year history. The municipal government issued a statement saying: "The explosions appeared to be the work of saboteurs of foreign origin." It did not elaborate.

Lebanon car bombings kill 13

TRIPOLI, Lebanon — A car bomb exploded today outside a busy supermarket in this northern Lebanese city and police said at least 12 people were killed and 30 wounded.

Another car bomb exploded a half-hour later in eastern Lebanon's ancient city of Beaalbek, killing a woman and injuring five other people.

Most of the victims of the Tripoli blast were women and children. The initial explosion occurred at 11 a.m. (4 a.m. EDT) on Azmi Street in a residential neighborhood of this Syrian-ruled city. The bomb, placed inside a red Fiat, went off at the entrance to a supermarket, which occupies the first two floors of a seven-story residential building, reporters said.

Panel starts tax-increase hearings

WASHINGTON — A Senate committee is starting hearings on tax increases, while the full Senate considers imposing automatic spending cuts unless the White House agrees to tax hikes and other deficit-reduction steps.

Finance Committee chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, today opens three days of hearings on how Congress should meet the mandate of its budget to raise $19.3 billion in taxes in fiscal 1988. Democratic lawmakers contend the taxes are necessary to reduce the deficit and are pushing ahead despite Reagan's repeated veto threats.

To push the president and Congress toward compromise, the Senate is braced for action on restoring automatic spending cuts to the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law.

Feds take hard look at Delta pilots

'Across-the-board' training review follows rash of mistakes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration plans an "across-the-board" review of Delta Air Lines training programs after a series of miscues by pilots including one that nearly resulted in a collision over the North Atlantic, agency sources say.

One source, who spoke Tuesday on condition he not be identified by name, said the review is expected to be announced today and will focus on Delta's training procedures, cockpit coordination and navigation techniques.

Training manuals and classroom procedures will be reviewed "across the board" by FAA inspectors, the source said.

During a two-week period, four

Delta aircraft have been involved in incidents in which pilots made mistakes. In two of the cases, the errors came close to causing aviation disasters.

On July 8, a Delta Lockheed L-1011 strayed 60 miles off course on a flight from London to Cincinnati and came within 100 feet of a Continental Airlines Boeing 747 at 31,000 feet over the North Atlantic. The two planes were carrying nearly 600 people combined.

Sources close to the investigation into the incident said Tuesday that the Delta jet likely strayed off course because the flight crew punched the wrong coordinates into the computerized navigation system before takeoff, although other possibilities have not been ruled out.

There also have been three incidents:

• On June 30 a Delta pilot flipped the wrong switches in the cockpit of a Boeing 767 and cut the fuel to both engines after swinging out over the Pacific during a takeoff from Los Angeles. The plane dropped to within 600 feet of the water before the engines were restarted.

The pilot said he thought he was switching off the automatic flight control system. After the incident, the FAA issued an emergency directive ordering a safety guard installed to prevent future mistakes of the same type.

• On July 7, the pilot of a Delta

Boeing 737 on a flight from Dallas to Lexington, Ky., became confused when his route was altered because of a thunderstorm and mistakenly landed at Frankfort, Ky., 19 miles from Lexington.

• On July 12, a Delta Boeing 767 on a flight from San Francisco to Boston landed on the wrong runway at Logan Airport. A controller cleared the pilot to land on runway 22-left, but the pilot landed on 22-right, which an Eastern Airlines jet was about to use.

Delta officials say they are mystified by the rash of incidents. "There's no connecting thread," said Delta spokesman Jim Ewing. He said the airline will cooperate with the FAA's investigation.

Worldwide, population is aging rapidly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of old people in the world is growing faster than the general population, with 23 nations now coping with more than 2 billion elderly apiece, the Census Bureau reports.

"Rapidly expanding numbers of older people represent a social phenomenon without historical precedent, and one that is bound to extend human lifespans. But it adds, 'the growth of older populations poses a considerable challenge to public policy.'"

Worldwide, the number of people aged 65 and over is growing at 2.4 percent annually, much faster than the global population as a whole.

In 40 years, the report "An Aging World" predicts, the number of nations with elderly populations of over 2 million will more than double to 57.

The trend "is an extraordinary testimony to the improvement of our lives," the report says, noting that better health care has helped extend human lifespans. But it adds, "the growth of older populations poses a considerable challenge to public policy."

study by Barbara Boyle Torrey, Kevin G. Kinsella and Cynthia M. Tseuber.

The world's population, which has just topped the 5 billion mark, according to population experts, is growing by an estimated 1.7 percent annually.

In many nations, the new study says, the elderly population is itself growing older, because of higher rates of increase of people aged 75 and over.

Indeed, people aged 80 and over constitute 14 percent of the world's elderly today, and in many nations these people could constitute the fastest growing segment of the elderly through the middle of the next century, the study reports.

"The stunning growth of the elderly population has various economic implications for individuals, families and public policymakers and planners throughout the world, particularly in terms of meeting the relatively greater health needs of the older population," the report observes.

Long-term debilitating illness could become an acute problem in many developing nations where preventive health measures are less common, the study says.

Town should help solve hydrant woes

The town of Manchester has a responsibility to help solve the problem of insufficient water for fire protection in the Redwood Farms area of Hillstown Road despite the fact that homeowners there made a bad decision four years ago to remain with a small private water company.

The evidence is that the company does not have the resources and probably cannot economically develop the resources to get enough water to the development's eight hydrants to protect the substantial homes there from fire.

The problem illustrates the difficulties that arise in any utility that cannot benefit from economies of scale.

Everyone agrees that John Wittenzeller, who was appointed a receiver for the ailing water supply company, has done a very good job of putting it back into sound condition. Some doubt exists over whether Wittenzeller did or did not promise four years ago to install booster pumps in the system to bring water to the hydrants.

When the homeowners there opted in 1983 to remain with the private company instead of asking the town to take over, they were motivated primarily by the desire to save money and to have better drinking water than they felt the town was supplying at that time.

For whatever reason, some of those who took part in the 1983 decision were not aware the hydrants were in place primarily to permit flushing the water system and not to provide fire-protection water. Other residents have moved in since, assuming that what looked like fire hydrants were in fact fire hydrants.

A new poll now might result in a preference for town service. Perhaps such a poll should be taken and the town should study the possibility of incorporating the system into the town's.

If that is not feasible or does not have the support of residents there, the possibility of having the town hook the hydrants into the town's water supply could be explored, with the cost to be passed on to the benefiting property owners.

The Redwood Farms houses are not totally without fire protection, of course. Pumper trucks can be used in alternation. But in a concentrated area like Redwood Farms, that does not seem adequate.

The Reagan road show in New Britain

As the good people of New Britain recover from their goose bumps over Ronald Reagan's materializing before their very eyes, and he faces up to reality after his huckstering tour which began there, a couple of disappointments are bound to remain for him and his fans.

They stem from a presidential reach that will probably exceed his grasp, but his performance last week showed a determination to try anyway. Let's understand from the outset that only the very naive believe that Reagan went to that city to salute its enterprise zone. That only gave him a local peg to get into a spot that was rooted in its true passion these days — a constitutional amendment mandating a balanced federal budget and congressional authority to line-item veto parts of that budget. They are the centerpiece of his pitch, though they are all dressed up with a lot of rhetorical generalities about his "economic bill of rights" brainstorm.

APPARENTLY IT WAS LOST on Reagan or his advisers that so much attention to New Britain's enterprise zone (something born five years ago in a Democratic state legislature) played beautifully into the hands of Democratic Mayor Bill McNamara, who seeks his sixth term this year and who was wondering if all that Reagan praise for his city and its administration was for real. After all, the visit was engineered mostly by GOP U.S. Rep. Nancy Johnson, who also lives in New Britain and will probably be running again next year.

As for the Reagan objectives with the constitutional amendment and the line item veto, all we can say is "fat chance."

Neither is likely to happen, despite the impressive road show Reagan is staging for this

Washington Wire

Squabble takes on an edge

By Evans WITT

WASHINGTON — Amid the political doldrums of summer, Rep. Richard Gephardt is working to focus the Democratic presidential race on what seems like a repeat of the old Abbott and Costello routine: "Who's on first? What's on second? I don't know it on third."

The Missouri Democrat is trying to make Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis the straight man in the well-known comic skit. The goal is to keep the spotlight on just these two contenders for 1988, not on the entire field of long shots.

Taking an opening presented in the Houston debate on July 1, Gephardt picked a fight with Dukakis on trade, oil import fees and economic growth.

Gephardt accused Dukakis of backing "the same old 'Blame America First' trade policy" pursued by Ronald Reagan, of taking credit for a Massachusetts recovery based on military spending and of taking a regional stance against an oil import fee.

Dukakis, for his part, says Gephardt is "dead wrong."

THE TWO WILL HAVE a chance face one another in a one-on-one debate later this month or early next month in Iowa, with the date and other details to be settled by their campaign managers this week.

All this has a strategic purpose, at least from the Gephardt campaign perspective, to make the race seem like a two-man contest, leaving the other announced and unannounced candidates in the shadows.

"I've had the opinion ever since Gary Hart got out that it was going to be a Gephardt-Dukakis race, based on several factors," says Bill Carrick, Gephardt's campaign manager. "One, both campaigns appear to be better organized than the rest of the pack. Dukakis clearly is the runaway winner on the fundraising end. We have a lot of things going for us in terms of congressional support."

"We're doing well in Iowa and he's doing well in New Hampshire," Carrick said. Paul Tully, Dukakis' political director, says the issue should not be trying to figure out the front-runners.

"It's much too early to be splitting the race into a front tier and also-rans," he said. "What they are trying (is) to stereotype Dukakis and then become the stereotypical alternative — the moderate versus the liberal... the heartland versus the East... or the working class versus suburban... or whatever."

THIS TACTIC is not new for Gephardt, a version worked briefly early this year, when Hart, the former Colorado senator, was still in the race and was the front-runner.

Hart, asked about Gephardt's trade ideas, talked of the specter of a trade war and the dangers of being a "one-issue candidate." Gephardt fired back, saying some of his friends "need a backbone transplant" on the issue.

"I've become a little cynical about the politics of this, because I was in a previous campaign this year in which the Gephardt campaign and this script was marched out once before," said Tully, who previously was Hart's political director. "The play is still in their playbook."

Negotiations over the debate have been marked by sniping between the two campaigns.

Army gets in director's seat

WASHINGTON — For a moviemaker interested in apparent authenticity and genuine economy, there's nothing like cooperation from the U.S. armed services. The Pentagon has historically provided background locations, military hardware and even masses of uniformed extras to Hollywood producers when asked.

But there's a price to be paid for this cooperation, and Francis Ford Coppola paid through the nose for the Army's help in making "Gardens of Stone." Released earlier this year to mixed reviews, the movie is set during the Vietnam era, but focuses sympathetically on Army men and their families back home.

The specific unit is the Army's "Old Guard," the spit-and-polish outfit at Fort Myer, Va., which does ceremonial escort duty for the president, stands guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and performs funeral processions at Arlington National Cemetery.

In the "production notes" — background material and authorized gossip sent to the media — Tri-Star Pictures brags about the level of cooperation it got from the Pentagon for its unabashedly pro-Army production.

"The Army provided uniforms, equipment, military training for the actors, technical advice, 450 precision soldiers for the battalion review scene, a performance by the U.S. Army Band and hundreds of extras," the notes disclose. They quote producer Michael Levy as saying, "This picture could not have been made without the Army. Period."

HOW DID COPPOLA win over the Army, which had not at all pleased with his earlier "Apocalypse Now?" The notes disclose he won by offering to give the Army a lowly recruit.

"There is excessive profanity in this script, which is both gratuitous and unrealistic," an Army critic observed in one memo. "The amount of profanity must be reduced." It was.

"We cannot allow the use of the Tomb Guard Quarters to be filmed at Arlington National Cemetery," the Army reviewer wrote. "We suggest the site of the 'assault' be moved to the ammunition dump at Fort Myer or that the production company's set designers duplicate the Tomb Guard Quarters at another location."

Building movie sets is expensive, so the producers settled for nearby Fort Belvoir.

There were more than 40 other complaints by the Army's critics. They included key characters who were "too old," a company commander who "is given too much authority," a recruit who is too "sloppy, disorganized and inept (to be) a member of the Old Guard" and an Army spokesman who "perpetuates the 'alcoholic-wife-of-the-colonel' myth."

The Army even offered advice on how to correct this last problem: "The (woman) need not be depicted in this manner to explain her weak, 'non-person' personality. She could be cowed by virtue of her husband's despotic personality alone." In the Army's view, despotism is better than alcoholism.

AT A NEGOTIATING SESSION five days after the memo, the moviemakers agreed to rewrite "the funeral and interment scenes with drunken widow," and were asked to make 31 other concessions to the Army censors. Three weeks later, the Army approved the revised script and agreed to cooperate in every way. Three months later, Coppola was made an honorary member of the Old Guard.

But at the final screening, on Nov. 25, 1986, though the Army "found the movie picture to be acceptable," it still urged elimination of "as much of the profanity as possible." It also called the depiction of two characters "underdeveloped," and suggested that the major action sequence be changed "for both technical accuracy and dramatic impact."

The Army critic complained that the character played by James Caan was not the "cultured, sensitive man" of the original script, and added: "We recommend that portions of those scenes from the script be reinstated in the film. Those attributes set (Caan's character) apart from other noncommissioned officers and make him a more sympathetic character."

Coppola paid the price for the Army's support, and expressed no regrets. The taxpayers subsidized the movie — and were never asked.

THE plastic trail The State Department, for reasons of its own, recently began making moves to keep Soviet diplomats from getting American credit cards. The FBI got wind of the plan and lodged a protest. Objected. Credit cards, the G-men pointed out, are one of the best ways to have to keep track of their Soviet targets' habits and whereabouts. The FBI won the argument.

No appeal, but donors got letters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North steadfastly insists that he never solicited private donations for the contra, but he wrote letters thanking contributors for their help and encouraging future support.

North sent letters to several wealthy Americans who gave large sums to the Nicaraguan rebel cause. Copies of the letters were released Tuesday by the congressional committee investigating the Iran-contra affair.

The contributors were among the individuals who gave money to conservative fund raiser Carl "Spitz" Channell in the private effort to help the contra during the congressional ban on U.S. military aid.

The documents show North wrote to many of Channell's contributors on Jan. 24, 1986, as Channell and North were gearing up for consideration in Congress of the administration's request for renewed contra aid.

The form letter speaks of the help Channell's National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty gave to the contra rebels in Nicaragua and calls the donors "Your support has been essential to those who struggle against the tyranny and oppression of the totalitarian communist regime in Managua. You have given where there would otherwise be despair."

The letter concludes: "In the weeks ahead, we will commence a renewed effort to make our assistance to the Democratic resistance forces even more effective. Once again your support will be essential."

North has insisted throughout his testimony that he understood it would be inappropriate for him to solicit money, and that he specifically avoided any such solicitation. "I understood that there were regulations against government officials soliciting, I do not recall ever asking a single, solitary American citizen for money," he said.

North willingly acknowledged making presentations on Central America to contributors who were being solicited by Channell, however, in what Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., called a "one-two punch." But he said people were angry because they wanted to, not because he asked for it.

North's congressional critics sternly summed up what they had heard, speaking in measured terms of the lies North had said he told, of the covert apparatus he had helped erect, free of the checks and balances of the Constitution.

Baskin-Robbins has Ollie cake

GREENWICH (AP) — Shredding documents may not have been a piece of cake for Lt. Col. Oliver North, but making a cake of the fired National Security aide was easy for a Baskin-Robbins ice cream store.

Joe Dell'Orfano, manager of the ice cream shop on Greenwich Avenue created the cake, complete with shredded papers and icing that says, "I don't recall."

"We found an old mold of a soldier and when (North's) testimony broke, we decided to add shredded documents," Dell'Orfano said. The shredded papers, the only inedible portion of cake, are held by North.

North, fired Nov. 25 by President Reagan, began testifying before a congressional committee last week on the tactics he used in the Iran-Contra affair.

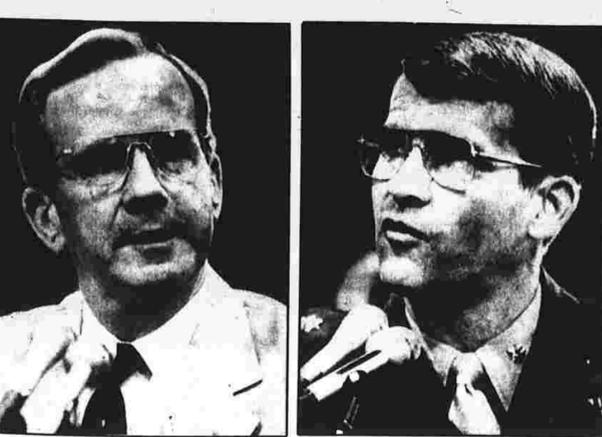

Dell'Orfano made one cake and is selling it for $27.95. The North cake is made out of chocolate and vanilla ice cream.

"It's our first venture into political satire," Dell'Orfano said. "We have a lot of fun making some cakes."

How's Your Hearing? Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

ROBERT MCFARLANE called back before panel. OLIVER NORTH sixth day of testimony

North's style: ramrod-straight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Never in six days of gripping testimony did Lt. Col. Oliver L. North inch back from either his strong convictions or the seemingly precarious balance he held on the edge of the seat from which he faced congressional investigators.

North braced, parade-ground stiff. His back never touched that of the black-leather arm chair, never came within a foot of its support. Leaning forward, elbows on the witness table, gesturing with both hands, North projected his personality and his cause across the Senate Caucus Room to Americans in the national television audience.

On Tuesday afternoon, when those half-dozen days were over, North's congressional critics sternly summed up what they had heard, speaking in measured terms of the lies North had said he told, of the covert apparatus he had helped erect, free of the checks and balances of the Constitution.

North, motionless, his face stripped of expression, stared straight ahead, his fingers interlaced on the table before him. Unseen, in a room nearby, lay symbols of support, tributes to North's persuasiveness: thousands of congratulatory telegrams hailing him as a patriot and hero, scores of floral bouquets.

That's how Brendan Sullivan, North's lawyer, wanted to leave it. The American people had spoken. The most important verdict of all was in.

And that's what Sullivan saw, in an explosive protest, when Senate Chairman Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, declared in his closing summary that the Nuremberg tribunal after World War II had destroyed forever the defense that the actions of a subordinate can be justified by the orders and authority of a superior.

North had declared repeatedly that in setting in motion the secret sales of arms to Iran in an arms-for-hostage swap, and in promoting the diversion of the proceeds to Nicaragua's contra rebels he had done nothing without the approval of his superiors.

"I find this offensive," Sullivan shouted, interrupting the senator's closing remarks. "I find you engaging in a personal attack on Colonel North," he said. "To make reference to the Nuremberg trials, I find personally and professionally distasteful, and I can no longer sit here and listen to this."

"There are 20,000 telegrams in our room outside in the corridor here that came in this morning," Sullivan said. "The American people have spoken and please stop this personal attack against Colonel North."

Inouye, who lost an arm to enemy machine gun fire on a hillside in Italy in World War II and won the nation's second highest decoration for valor, said he was not engaged in personal attack.

ANSWERS TO THE QUIZ

Testimony by North poses new questions

WASHINGTON — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's testimony raised new questions about what President Reagan knew and about the initial investigation conducted last November by Attorney General Edwin Meese III into the Iran-contra affair.

North left the witness stand Tuesday following six days of questions by the congressional Iran-contra committees, his words and implications framing the questions for today's testimony by his former boss, John M. Poindexter.

North sketched a picture indicating administration officials had wide knowledge of his activities. But he did not answer the big question about what Reagan knew about North's diversion of proceeds from the Iran arms sale to the Nicaraguan contras.

North's testimony cast a further shadow of doubt over the inquiry these conducted last November for Reagan, and left hanging questions about North's own efforts to cover up the affair.

The essential point of North's story was that everything he did was authorized. "I haven't in the years that I have been in the uniformed services of the United States of America ever violated an order, not one," North said.

He said he had assumed Reagan had authorized the diversion of Iran arms monies to the contra. But he said Poindexter, the former national security adviser to Reagan, told him when the affair became public that the president did not know. He added that Reagan told him the same thing at that time.

Here is a look at other key elements in North's version of the Iran-contra affair and at some new questions he raised: • Former CIA Director William J. Casey, who died in May, was the architect and overseer of North's covert operations and had known of the diversion plan since early 1986.

North called the diversion "a new idea," and said Casey enthusiastically embraced it as "the ultimate covert operation." • A part of his plan was that North was to be the "fall guy," a proposal North said he was willing to go along with as long as the blame was political. But he said his perspective changed when the possibility emerged that he might be charged with crimes.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, several CIA officials and others in the administration were aware of North's efforts to aid the contra as a time when Congress had banned direct or indirect U.S. aid.

North revealed he saw Reagan's signature on a November 1985 presidential finding to authorize the sale of U.S.-made missiles from Israel to Iran. The finding, a signed copy of which has never been found, stated that the arms sale was a straight hostages-for-weapons swap — directly contradicting Reagan's public assertions.

North raised questions about Meese's knowledge, saying he assumed the attorney general had cleared that November 1985 finding because Meese normally was brought in on such presidential findings. Meese, however, maintains he did not know about the transaction and was not aware of the finding.

North's testimony also raised serious questions about the non-criminal investigation or inquiry that Meese and top Justice Department civil attorneys conducted for the president in November 1986. Their weekend investigation led to the revelation of the diversion and North's firing as an aide to the National Security Council.

North also freely admitted to lying to Congress, to compiling a false chronology and to not telling Meese of Casey's role during the investigation. • North had explanations for his use of money from the covert operations. He said he was reimbursing himself for his own money he had used. He acknowledged he erred in accepting a $14,000 security system at his home, and in later trying to cover that up. He was motivated, he said, by a threat on his life. He denied knowing about arms finances. Albert Hakim's plans to create a $90,000 benefit fund for his family.

Some in 8th District want separate election for swap vote

By Alex Girilli
Associate Editor

When voters in the Eighth District decide whether they approve of an agreement between the district and town for a swap of responsibilities and assets, the vote will probably be in an election, rather than at a district meeting. Several district leaders contacted by the Manchester Herald Tuesday said they favor a machine vote.

Last week, Manchester Mayor Barbara Weinberg said all town voters will probably be asked to vote on the agreement, which is essentially a swap of the town-owned fire station in the Buckland section of town for the district-owned sewage collection system.

On Monday, Weinberg said that she had in mind a vote in which Manchester residents outside the Eighth District would be casting an advisory vote on the matter and voters within the district would be making a decision as the legislature of the district.

The agreement must be approved by the legislature of both political entities, but the legislature for the town is the Board of Directors. The district legislature is the entire district electorate.

Joseph Tripp, a district director who opposed the agreement, said today he favors a machine vote at a separate district election, before November if possible.

"When they vote it down, we won't have to worry about putting on the ballot in November," Tripp said.

Granville Lingard, district fire marshal and an alternate on the negotiating team that has worked out the major details of the proposed swap, also favors a vote by machine in a separate district election. He said the election could take place in one polling place and it could probably be done before November.

Lingard, Tripp and Gordon Lasow, a former district director and one of the negotiators, agreed that public meetings should be held in the district before the election. The meetings could be used to explain the referendum to district voters and to give those voters a chance to give their views.

District President Walter Joyner said today he favors a machine vote, but does not see any great difference between a separate election and the town's general election. He said it might cost less to include it in the town election.

Attorney John D. LaBelle, legal counsel for the district, said today it is too early to think about the mechanics of approval by the district voters because substantial details of the agreement have to be worked out.

He said that while he has not discussed with district leaders when the exchange, if approved, would take place, he said it should be July 1, 1988, the start of a new fiscal year. He pointed out that adjustments will have to be made in the taxable grand lists of the two political entities.

Presumably the decision about the approval process would be made by the Board of Directors of the district.

When she spoke of the possibility of a townwide vote on the question in November, Weinberg said town voters from outside the district would simply be casting an advisory opinion.

She said it would be necessary to have separate machines for district voters and probably to word the referendum question differently because district voters would be casting a binding vote, while other voters would not.

While home runs are up 22 percent in this season, the only balls that came close were fly balls out in the 10th by Kevin Seitzer and the seventh by Mark McGwire, the major league leader with 33 homers.

McGwire said he didn't hit his fly ball well, but thought it might fall in the right field corner.

"So much for the lively ball, right?" he said to the lively ball.

The pitchers, of course, didn't mind seeing the batters struggle.

"It was nice to see the pitchers do well, especially with all the talk about the juiced-up ball," Sabershen said. "It goes to show that maybe the ball isn't as juiced up as everybody thinks. It's just some bad pitches that guys have been hitting out."

Sabershen, pitching with the shadows creeping over the front of the infield, threw three innings of one-hit ball against a lineup that boasted 140 homers among its first seven batters.

"If every game is played in twilight, the pitchers will have their way all the time," Boggs said.

All-Star Classic turns out a yawner

By Steve Wilsen
The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — The All-Star Game ventured into the twilight zone again to boost television ratings and found itself back in the dead-ball era.

A string of zeros stretched across the scoreboard until the 13th inning Tuesday night when Tim Lincecum tripled home two runs to give the National League a 2-0 victory over the American League.

More than a dozen pitchers, part of a beleaguered brotherhood victimized by so-called "juiced-up" balls this year, took the sluggers back to a time of low scores and earned homers.

It was a brand of baseball rarely seen this year, a mound duel spiced with some spectacular defense that perhaps only a true baseball fan could really enjoy.

The play of the squinty twilight in which pitcher Jack Morris said he could hardly see the plate and 375 Hitter Wade Boggs said he could barely see the ball.

Bret Saberhagen threw the first pitch at 5:40 p.m. PDT, prime time in the East. The starting time was chosen to please NBC-TV, but not the batters.

"It's frustrating when you play in twilight," said Boggs, who went hitless in three at-bats. "It wasn't too easy to see the ball."

"I just couldn't follow the ball at all," said Darryl Strawberry. "It kind of snuck up on you. It was almost impossible to see."

"You couldn't pick up the spin or the rotation," said Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt.

One of the heroes, NL catcher Ozzie Virgil, said the game proved again that "good pitching will shut down good hitting any day."

It was the third-longest All-Star Game in history, exceeded only by 15 innings in 1967 and 14 in 1950, and it kept the Nationals unbeaten in eight extra-inning games.

The NL now leads the series for 37-20-1 and has won 14 of the last 16, 22 of 25. The AL, which was trying to win two in a row for the first time since 1957-58, instead was shut out for the fourth time.

In 1984, when the game was last played in twilight in San Francisco's Candlestick Park, pitchers notched 21 strikeouts. This time, they struck out 17.

Meanwhile the batters curred the semi-darkness and marched meekly from the plate. The Nationals managed only eight hits, and the Americans six in the first All-Star Game to go scoreless for more than five innings.

The Americans nearly won the game in the ninth, but the winning run was cut down at home plate after NL reliever Steve Bedrosian made a diving save of a wide throw to first base by shortstop Hubie Brooks. Bedrosian threw home where Virgil withstood a collision with Dave Winfield for an inning-ending double play.

"It was just full extension, one of those Ozzie Smith-type catches," Bedrosian said. "I just went for it. You either do it or you don't."

Bedrosian walked Winfield. After a sacrifice bunt by Tony Fernandez, Dwight Evans drew another walk to put runners at first and second.

Harold Reynolds followed with a grounder to the right side. It was fielded by first baseman Keith Hernandez, who threw to second to force Evans. Bedrosian was covering first when he made his saving game-saving dive.

"You saved the game," Brooks told Bedrosian.

"I thought I was going to have a little more time," Virgil said. "I looked up and he (Winfield) was there. He said he promised his wife one hit, but the last one was for the guys in the dugout."

"A couple of guys told me they were going to go to sleep on the bench," Raines said.

The Montreal speedster, 0-for-7 in six previous All-Star Games, reached third base after driving home Virgil and Brooks with the winning runs off Oakland's Jay Howell.

"It was just a thrill knowing when I rounded second that I had knocked him in the winning runs," said Raines, who won the game's Most Valuable Player award and the point he tried to make all winter as an unwanted free agent.

He missed spring training and didn't play until May 2 because he "I sort of felt like a little kid out there," Smith said.

To the batters, all the pitchers looked like giants and all the balls felt like duds.

Through eight innings, the Nationals had two hits. One of them was a first-inning double by Andre Dawson.

"You've got to give the pitchers credit. It was a good game from the pitchers' standpoint."

And the twilight?

"I don't like to make excuses," he said. "So he didn't."

Dale Murphy came into the game an inning before Hernandez.

"Everybody was saying they were having a little problem seeing," he said. "Twilight is never an ideal time to hit."

Eric Davis, who leads the National League with 27 home runs, had a simple explanation that goes beyond swinging against All-Star pitchers in lighting that would embarrass the electric company.

"Everybody talks about the lively ball," he said. "But you still got to hit it. Either you hit the ball or you don't."

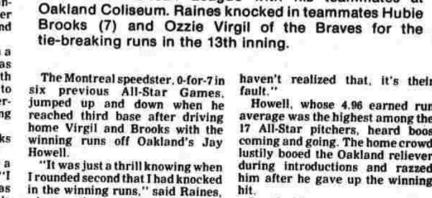

Now, what could be simpler than that?

Witness threatened by teen

A Manchester teen-ager arrested last week in connection with the distribution of LSD threatened a witness in the case during an incident at the Robertson School pool on Sunday, police said.

Robert P. Adams, 16, of 114F Rachel Road, was charged with threatening and tampering with a witness.

Police said Adams and another man, whom they would not identify, threatened to hold a gun to the 19-year-old woman's head during Sunday's incident, which occurred about 6:15 p.m. The other man grabbed the woman by the arm and spun her around, causing her to fall to the ground, police said.

Police said an arrest warrant will be sought for the second man.

The woman told police she believes the threats stem from an incident last Tuesday, in which police said Adams and another man were charged with distributing LSD, according to an arrest report. In that incident, Adams and the other man, Jeffrey Pte, 21, of 97 Mather St., offered the woman drugs just after the teen-ager brother overdosed on LSD that had been given to the boy, police said.

Adams was held on $15,000 bond and was to appear Monday in Manchester Superior Court.

Two charged in break-in Police arrested two men early Tuesday morning in connection with the break-in of two cars parked at the Southfield Greens condominiums on South Main Street earlier that morning, police said.

Rodney P. Stevens, 19, and Kevin Holmgren, 18, both of no certain address, were each charged with two counts of third-degree burglary, two counts of fifth-degree larceny, possession of burglars' tools and interfering with a police officer. In addition, Stevens was charged with failure to submit to fingerprinting and Holmgren was charged with impersonation.

Police found Stevens and Holmgren lying on a wooded area near the condominiums at about 4 a.m., about an hour after a resident at Southfield Greens reported to police that he had seen two men looking into two cars parked at the complex.

Nearby police found the car in which the men fled from the complex with the keys still in the ignition, police said.

Inside the car, officers found a tire iron and a blanket covered with glass chips, according to an arrest report. The two cars the men broke into were both entered by breaking a front side window, police said.

After his arrest, Holmgren identified himself with two fictitious names before providing his real name, police said.

Stevens and Holmgren were both held on $5,000 cash bonds and were to appear Tuesday in Manchester Superior Court.

Parkade fight ends in arrest

An East Hartford man who police said beat up a 17-year-old boy at the Manchester Parkade last month was charged Tuesday with third-degree assault and threatening.

Police said Joseph A. Goodrow, 31, attacked the youth, Kevin Hedges, at the Parkade on June 30, threatening to kill the teen-ager if the youth visited the home of his former girlfriend.

Hedges was with the 14-year-old girl when the attack occurred, police said. The girl's mother is Goodrow's girlfriend, police said.

Police said Hedges was leaning against a shopping cart outside Bradlees when Goodrow drove up in his car, grabbed Hedges from behind and smashed him into the shopping cart.

Hedges told police that Goodrow then struck him in the face several times and smashed him against the roof of his car.

Goodrow was released on a $500 bond. He is to appear Monday in Manchester Superior Court.

Preseason forecasts weren't that far off target

We're at the mid-year break and it's time to assess the choices made before the season — and see how those selections will stack up for the rest of the year.

The picks here, to refresh your memory, were Toronto, Minnesota, the defending World Series champ Mets and the San Francisco Giants.

Overall evaluation? Not bad, everything considering. The Blue Jays are in second place in the American League East, three games behind the pace-setting Yankees. Minnesota leads the AL West, two games in front of Oakland and Kansas City with California and Seattle lurking in the shadows. The Texas Rangers, despite a less-than-terrific 41-45 mark, are only 6½ games behind the Twins.

The Giants are in third place in the NL West at 44-44. Three games behind the floundering Reds, who lost three games behind the All-Star break. The Mets have the longest way back, needing to climb 9½ games — 10 in the loss column — back down against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Toronto still appears to be a solid choice. The Blue Jays have that formidable outfield led by Jesse Barfield and George Bell, and an infield anchored by all-world shortstop Tony Fernandez. The pitching staff is nothing to shout about, but strong enough to make a run at the Yankees. The Yankees, as everyone knows, have the shakiest pitching staff this side of the Bad News Bears.

Charlie Hudson, who started out 6-0 and appeared headed for the All-Star game, instead finished Columbus in Triple A ball after several undistinguished performances. Bob Tewksbury was up and down like a yo-yo before being dealt to the Cubs for Steve Trout.

The Yankees' strategy is like a bottomless pit. Lou Piniella has done a fine job of managing. George Steinbrenner notwithstanding, but the task he has to carry over the final 75 games of the season is to keep the mound corps headed in the right direction.

That won't be easy.

Minnesota was selected because a choice was needed in the AL West. The Twins still appear to be a good choice. And with Jeff Reardon doing the job as their ace pitcher, the Twins are a serious choice. They can score runs in a hurry and the defense is adequate. The pitching is in question but the acquisition of Joe Niekro has helped. Minnesota needs Frank Viola and Bert Blyleven to give the club some consistent outings to stay ahead of the pack.

The NL West is intriguing inasmuch as the Giants put on a good show early, the Reds came on in the middle, and no one has been playing well of late. The Giants, at 5-5 through their last 10 games, have the best streak. This race is going down to the wire.

The Mets have the biggest task in front of them. The giddyup Cardinals, who make the word "speed" a hazard to the rest of the National League, ran into hitting in the first half of the season. After a disastrous '86 season, the Cardinals have rebounded despite an assortment of injuries to the pitching staff that included the early season loss of left-handed ace John Tudor. The Cardinals have survived and persevered.

The same cannot be said of the Mets. The Mets lost Bob Ojeda; they lost David Cone; they lost Rick Aguilera; they didn't have Dwight Gooden at the outset. Internal problems have been headlines all over the place. Len Dykstra wants out. Mookie Wilson wants out. Darryl Strawberry wants out.

It sounds like the old Yankees, doesn't it?

The Mets have the talent to right the ship, but the odds appear to be rowing in different directions in '87. Putting your money on the Cardinals at this stage makes an awful lot of sense.

Jackson doubling his pleasure

By Curt Anderson
The Associated Press

AUBURN, Ala. — When Bo Jackson's playing days ended at Auburn University, he couldn't decide whether he wanted to make money hitting balls carrying a football or hitting baseballs over a fence.

After weeks of agonizing over the choice last year, the 1985 Heisman Trophy winner made up his mind to play baseball for the Kansas City Royals and sneered at questions about football, saying he was done forever with that contact sport.

But Tuesday, Jackson announced he would try to do what he secretly always wanted to do — play both professional baseball and football. He said he has agreed to a part-time contract with the Los Angeles Raiders that commences after his rookie season with the Royals ends.

Still, Jackson said at a news conference that baseball takes precedence over football.

"I made my choice last year. I am going to make a career out of baseball," he said. "Baseball is priority number one."

Asked if he thought he might change his mind and devote all his energies to football, Jackson said, "Not in this life."

Neither Jackson nor his agent, Richard Woods, would comment on the terms of the contract with the Raiders, which Woods said would likely be signed later this week. Sources told The Associated Press that the deal is for $2.6 million over five years, including a $1 million signing bonus, with salaries ranging from $250,000 to $330,000. He also will receive a $1 million loan. Jackson is believed to receive about $300,000 a year from the Royals on a five-year deal.

The 24-year-old Jackson, who comes with power and speed in both sports, said he would rest "as long as I need" back home in Alabama after the baseball season before joining the Raiders.

When the season in baseball's minor leagues.

This year, he is hitting .254 with 18 home runs and 45 runs batted in for Kansas City after surprisingly retiring with the Royals last year after turning down a $7 million, five-year offer from the Buccaneers and spent the last half of the season in baseball's minor leagues.

There has been criticism from some of the Royals about Jackson's decision. But he said today he made his choice and his promise that it won't affect his baseball play.

Jackson said he didn't think some of the Royals knew all the details when his desire to play football first surfaced. "They were just ticked off because they weren't told," he said.

A team meeting has cleared the air in the Royals' clubhouse. "They've accepted what I've done," Jackson said. "They're glad I'm going to do it."

Don Fingersh, co-owner of the Royals, said Jackson's contract will be restructured to protect the team if he is injured in football. Fingersh, who met with Jackson Tuesday, said he never considered giving Jackson an ultimatum to choose between the two sports.

As a football player at Auburn, Jackson gained a school record 4,303 yards on 650 carries, good for a per-carry average of 6.6 yards and a per-game average of 113.2. His best year was 1985, when he gained 1,786 yards and scored 17 touchdowns.

Jackson said he always wanted to play both sports at the highest level. "I could have done it last year, I would have," he said. "As I've said unspoken times, it's a lifetime promise."

O'Leary heads list of fame inductees

Scholar-athlete best describes Jim O'Leary's days as a student at Manchester High and Wesleyan University.

The 73-year-old Westport resident was named today the first to be tapped for 1987 membership in the Manchester Sports Hall of Fame.

The eighth annual induction dinner will be staged on Friday night, Sept. 25 at the Army and Navy Club.

O'Leary, winner of 14 varsity letters in baseball, basketball, football and track as a schoolboy, and nine letters in baseball, basketball and track as a collegian, also was named in the classroom. In addition to being an honor student, O'Leary was president of his freshman and sophomore classes at Manchester High, and president of the Wesleyan Trust Company in New York as executive vice president and chief economist with Edie and Company until 1967, and chairman of the board and chief economist in March 1969 to 1979 when he retired. He often was called to testify before congressional committees on economic and financial matters.

Four other former local sports figures will also be honored at this year's dinner. Tickets will be available shortly at several outlets.

Wesleyan, he received his master's from the same college in 1937 and his Ph.D. from Duke University in 1941.

O'Leary captained the football team his senior year at Manchester High and captained the Wesleyan baseball team in his senior year. He played a key role with Manchester High's 1930-31 basketball team which lost in the finals for the state championship at Yale.

When Sports Illustrated featured its Silver Anniversary

All-American Award team in 1960, made up of 25 men who played college sports a half century earlier and who subsequently achieved success in business, professions or sports, O'Leary was one of the elite chosen.

The distinguished former East Sider was the guest speaker at the 1983 Sports Hall of Fame dinner.

O'Leary's career in economics was launched at Wesleyan where he served as an assistant professor from 1939 to 1946. He taught air navigation in the U.S. Flight Preparatory School at Wesleyan in 1943-45, and was an assistant professor at Duke in 1946-47.

In the business field, O'Leary was director of Economic Research, Life Insurance of America from 1947-1961, vice president until 1967, and chairman of the board and chief economist with Edie and Company until 1967, and chairman of the board and chief economist in March 1969 to 1979 when he retired. Helin man of hour for Post 102 squad

ELLINGTON — Chris Helin was the man of the hour Tuesday night for the Manchester Legion baseball team.

The left-handed Helin tossed a one-hitter through five innings and Manchester shut out Ellington, 3-0, in a Zone Eight matchup called after six innings due to darkness. Manchester is now 2-1 in the Zone and 15-11 overall. The Post 102 contingent is back in action tonight against Zone rival Windsor at Windsor High School at 6.

In his five-inning stint, Helin struck out eight and walked three. Besides his fine pitching performance, Helin also scored Manchester's first run and knocked in a run. "He (Helin) did it all," Legion Coach Dave Morency said.

Scott Aronson came in for the final inning and picked up the save by striking out two of the three batters he faced.

Second baseman Jon Roe crossed his hot hitting with two hits.

Langer coming in confident of victory at British Open

By Andrew Warshaw
The Associated Press

MUIRFIELD, Scotland — The last 17 major golf championships have been won by 17 different players.

West Germany's Bernhard Langer thinks he could be the man to end that streak when the 116th British Open begins Thursday.

"I feel extremely confident and pretty good about my game," Langer said Tuesday after his first practice round over the Muirfield Open links. "I expect good things this week."

Langer, the 1985 Masters champion, is a 6-10 favorite to win his second major title along with Spain's Jose Ballesteros. Then comes defending champion Greg Norman of Australia at 8-1.

Langer has come close to winning the British Open in each of the last three years with two ties for third and one for second.

"Hopefully, I can do better — one or two spots," he said.

At Muirfield, a course which traditionally favors players with an all-around game, Langer is hopeful of being the man in the spotlight on the 18th green on Sunday afternoon. He has played well in Europe this year, winning the Whyte and Mackay PGA championship at Wentworth, England, and taking the Carrolls Irish Open by 10 strokes.

"One thing about Muirfield, it's a course that seems to isolate players from other players," Norman said.

Like Norman, Watson has been without this year. In fact, he has not won a title since the Australian Open in 1984.

But he came within one putt of winning the U.S. Open last month and has the additional incentive of needing one more British Open title to tie Harry Vardon's record of six.

Watson also was champion the last time the British Open was staged here in 1980.

"I played well enough (at the U.S. Open) to prove to myself that I am on the way back," Watson said Monday after his first practice round. "But winning is the name of the game and I have not done that yet."

The man who beat Watson for the U.S. Open title, Scott Simpson, 40-10 odds against him winning a second straight major were "about right," Simpson, who had won only three tournaments before his victory at the Open, said he realized his chances at Muirfield were slim.

Americans raising interest level in Games

By Enrico Jacomini
The Associated Press

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — The American track and field team has raised the interest level in the World University Games. The United States won three of six gold medals awarded in track Tuesday and closed in on the Soviet Union in the gold medal race, 15-13. The Soviet Union has 45 medals overall, while the United States has 36. Romania also has 13 gold medals, 31 overall. Lee McRae's 10:07-second clocking in the men's 100 meters was the fourth fastest time in the world this year and was by far the best technical performance seen here in nine days of competition. McRae beat compatriot Brian Cooper, who was second at 10:21, while Owen Torrence won the women's 100 in 11:09. The United States lost both sprint titles in Kobe, Japan, in 1985 and the victories here have stirred great interest in this young, inexperienced squad. "There is great talent in our team although many lack great international experience, but it is probably the strongest team we have ever had at a Universiade," track spokesman Bruce Tenen said. He said many of the athletes here were headed for outstanding performances in the future. McRae and Torrence were surely not green newcomers, but Patty Murray of Park Ridge, Ill., was and she was thrilled with her victory in the 10,000 in 33:11.27. Murray and China's Zhong Huandi waged a furious battle over 24 of the 25 laps before Murray sprinted away in the final 200 meters. "Everyone was switching and when I was in front I was comfortable," Murray said. "On the last lap I waited until the final straight and then I gave it everything I had." She called it the greatest victory of her life, and she said she expected to do well at the Pan Am Games next month at Indianapolis. "It was my second-fastest time ever, and it has given me the morale and confidence for my future," Murray said. "Torrence will join her at the Pan-Am Games, but McRae has already made it out on top qualifying for the World Championships at Rome in August. "I was able to get out of the blocks really well," McRae said of his victory. "Then I just ran my race and felt relaxed. I had no idea what kind of times we had. I just knew I was running like my old self." In other women's finals, Nawal El Moutawakil of Morocco, the only gold medalist in track and field from the 1984 Olympics competing here, won the 400-meter hurdles in 55.21. After winning the gold medal at the Los Angeles Games in 54.61, she is making a comeback after a leg operation. Svetlana Iseneva of Bulgaria cleared 6 feet, 4 1/2 inches in the high jump to capture the gold medal, while Liliana Nastase of Romania took the women's decathlon with 6,364 points. Michael Franks, who coasted to an easy semifinal victory in the semifinals of the 400 in 45.56, led today's list of competitors in today's finals. The Americans also topped the semifinals in the 110 hurdles with Arthur Blake and Keith Talley, and they had a good chance in many of the other track finals. Mlawsky finished first in the men's 1,500 freestyle in 15:23.22 after Williams captured the 50, a first-time event at the games, in 22.90. With three medals on the final day, American swimmers finished with nine golds in 32 events. Romania, with Noel Lung taking five gold medals herself, was next with seven.

individual gold. The American women's team of Mary O'Leary of Tucson, Ariz., Lisa Meyers of Mission Viejo, Calif., Cheryl Kriegsmann of Los Angeles and Mitzi Kremer of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., combined for a time of 8:09.32 in the 800, shattering the University Games mark of 8:20.51, set in 1985 by the Soviet Union. Alex Mlawsky of Sunnymead, Calif., and Tom Williams of St. Charles, Ill., won the longest and shortest men's swimming races. Mlawsky finished first in the men's 1,500 freestyle in 15:23.22 after Williams captured the 50, a first-time event at the games, in 22.90. With three medals on the final day, American swimmers finished with nine golds in 32 events. Romania, with Noel Lung taking five gold medals herself, was next with seven.

Lee McRae, of Pittsburgh, crosses the finish line in 10:07 in winning the 100-meter dash Tuesday at the World University Games in Zagreb, Yugoslavia.

Youngster hoping to emulate Caulkins' exploits

By Bert Rosenhol
The Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Chas Morton hated swimming at an early age. Now, he has grown up trying to emulate the accomplishments of Tracy Caulkins, one of the best women's swimmers in history. "I learned to swim at about 4 or 5 years old," Morton, 16, said Tuesday night after winning the men's 200-meter individual medley in two minutes, seven seconds — a national record for the 15-16 age group category — at the U.S. Olympic Festival. "I took lessons, but I despised them. My mom made me take them. "As a kid, I always had a lot of energy. At first, I just paddled away, and I wasn't getting anywhere. I was getting frustrated."

It wasn't long before Morton's frustrations ended. "By age 7, he was swimming in the country club circuit." Shortly before he was 9, he was swimming competitively, and by 10, he was swimming "seriously." Now, he owns more than 30 age group records, including the one he set Tuesday night in becoming the Festival's first gold medalist this year. "I've tried to emulate Tracy Caulkins," Morton, of Franklin, Tenn., said. "She grew up in the Nashville (Tenn.) Swim Club." Morton, a high school junior, swims for the Nashville Aquatic Club. "I admire Tracy," Morton said. "She was a tremendous swimmer." Swimming and wrestling were the only two of the Festival's 34 sports contested Tuesday. And they were the only sports on today's schedule. In wrestling, fourth seeds Jack Cuvo of Easton, Pa., and Kirk Trost of Ann Arbor, Mich., scored tie-breaking victories in their best-of-three matches at the Walker Center. Cuvo, a 114.5-pounder, rallied from a 9-0 deficit in the first period in earning an 18-15 decision over third-seeded Jim Sanchez of Lincoln, Neb., during the afternoon session. Cuvo trailed 11-6 at the end of the first period, but tied the score at 15 in the final minute of regulation. They scored a takedown to grab the lead. Sanchez, wrestling despite injuries to his right arm and left shoulder, scored an 11-9 victory at night.

Nearly an hour later, Cuvo breezed to a 14-3 triumph and advanced to a match today against second-seeded Jeffrey Henderson. Trost outpointed Wayne Cole of Davenport, Iowa, 8-5 in their opening match in the 220-pound class. At night, Cole won 9-5, before Trost took the third match 9-4. For Trost, a 1986 NCAA champion at Michigan, the three matches Tuesday gave him seven in two days. "I think I've had the most matches of anyone here," he said. "I was glad of the way I came back in the last match." In swimming, Morton was the only record-breaker in Koury Natatorium at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

Sarah Anderson, 17, of Moreno Valley, Calif., shattered the Festival record in the women's 200 freestyle, clocking 2:03.67, and swam on the North A team that smashed the meet record in the women's 800 freestyle relay, with a time of 8:22.03. Combining with Anderson on the relay were Sheri Smith, 17, of Hacienda Heights, Calif.; Mary Pety, 13, of Annapolis, Md., and Nadine Takai, 17, of Waipahu, Hawaii. Takai, a high school senior, and Jon Olsen, 18, of Jonesboro, Ark., joined Anderson in winning an individual event and swimming on a winning relay. Takai took the women's 400 individual medley in 4:59.30, her first time under five minutes, and

No surgery for All, yet

CHICAGO — Muhammad Ali, back from Mexico amid speculation about brain surgery, says he's considering a rare procedure to relieve Parkinson's Syndrome, but doesn't know when he'll make a decision. Ali was sluggish and barely audible Tuesday when he arrived at O'Hare International Airport after his trip brought news of his fight against the illness, which is a mild form of a degenerative brain disorder.

"I'd rather not talk about it." Ali, boxing's only three-time heavy-weight champion, said. "I'm thinking about it, that's all. "I don't know exactly," he replied when asked when he might decide. "I'd rather not talk about it." In Mexico, Ali was attending a symposium on sports medicine at the resort town of Cocoyoc, south of Mexico City, at the invitation of World Boxing Council President Jose Sulaiman. In Mexico City on Monday night, Dr. Ignacio Madrazo, a neurosurgeon, said there was a "great chance" he would perform an operation on Ali. The two had met to discuss the issue. The surgery involves taking cells from the adrenal glands, which produce dopamine, and placing them in the brain. Dopamine is deficient in Ali's condition, and he reportedly has been taking a form of the drug, L-dopa, as treatment. A spokeswoman at Humana Hospital in Mexico City, Lourdes Ortiz, said the 45-year-old Ali would be tested this week and surgery would depend on the test results. But that brought denials from an Ali associate and the former boxer's brother, each of whom talked to him before he returned to the United States. Longtime friend and business associate Larry Kolb of New York said Ali had decided against any operation at this time. "He said he would listen and see what the guy had to say, but his position throughout was that he wanted to get a lot of other opinions," Kolb said. All told his brother, Rachman: "I just want all my friends and family to know I'm OK. I'm leaving Mexico City, and nobody is going to touch me." At the Chicago airport, Ali stepped off an American Airlines plane about 8 p.m. CDT. He appeared fatigued and started when approached by reporters and stared straight down the terminal as he walked to pick up a suit bag. Wearing sunglasses, black pants and a black shirt, he declined to answer most questions. His few answers were slurred and muffled. All traveling alone, acknowledged the cheers of passers-by who called him "Champ," wished him luck and asked for his autograph. He signed scraps of paper and dollar bills — jokingly placing one in his pocket before returning it to a fan. Still, he said little. "Get well quick," a man said, slapping Ali on the back.

BLUEBERRIES and EGGS TAKE THE CAKE!

"You take the cake!" This phrase infers that a reward, a compliment, is merited for a particular achievement. Its origins go back to ancient Greece when an actual cake was the prize in certain competitions. At one time in Ireland, the best dancer in a contest won a cake. The same was true in America a hundred years ago.

The use of blueberries in our cuisine dates back even further, to the landing of the pilgrims at Plymouth Rock. Friendly Indians helped the settlers get through their first winter by supplying them with dried blueberries.

Eggs also have a long history. Many Bible scholars assume that eggs followed shortly after the Fourth Day, when "the fowl that may fly" were created.

Why have these two foods remained so popular among Americans over the centuries? Probably because they are both delicious and nutritious. And extremely versatile. Putting them together in a cake makes a great deal of sense. The eggs contribute rich flavor and a quality of protein not often found in a dessert, while the blueberries add delightful taste and some of the fiber we're all being encouraged to increase in our diets. On top of that, they both provide an assortment of vitamins and minerals which places blueberry/egg cakes in the category of "better desserts".

From the old-fashioned pound cake made by our ancestors in the days before measuring cups and spoons were readily available, to a dressed-up version of the griddle cakes that sustained the colonists, the modernized recipes that follow make the most of these two wonderful natural resources. Try one soon to see what all-American compliments you receive!

HOW TO FREEZE BLUEBERRIES FOR YEAR-AROUND TREATS

Note: It's best not to wash berries before freezing. They do not need to be defrosted before baking. Just like fresh berries, they'll cook as the cake bakes. Berries bought in pint boxes: Remove cellophane. With plastic wrap, overwrap box, completely covering air vents at bottom. Freeze. Berries bought in bulk: Spread in layer on baking sheet. Freeze. Transfer to freezer containers and return to freezer. To use frozen berries: Place in colander and rinse to wash. Drain in colander or spread on paper towels until dry. For use in cakes, sprinkle with a bit of the flour in the recipe before adding to batter.

"Berry" good and "berry" good for you, the eggs and cottage cheese in the batter provide enough protein for a serving to be an entree, but the luscious berries dress the cakes up for dessert...

BLUEBERRY BRUNCH PANCAKES

6 servings of 2 each

2 cups blueberries	2 tablespoons cooking oil
1/4 cup sugar	3/4 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 cup butter	1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon	1/2 teaspoon vanilla
6 eggs	Whipping cream, whipped, optional
1 cup low-fat cottage cheese
1/2 cup all-purpose flour

Reserving some berries for garnish, in large saucepan, combine blueberries, sugar, butter and cinnamon. Cook over low heat, stirring until butter is melted and sugar is dissolved. Keep warm while making pancakes.

BLUEBERRY ALMOND LAYER CAKE

12 servings

2/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar	1/2 cup chopped almonds
1 cup all-purpose flour, divided	1/3 cup butter, softened
2 cups blueberries	6 eggs, separated
3/4 teaspoon cream of tartar	2/3 cup granulated sugar, divided
1/2 teaspoon vanilla	1/2 teaspoon brandy extract
1/2 teaspoon salt	2 cups whipping cream, whipped OR 1 can (16.5 oz.) ready-to-spread frosting
Silvered almonds, optional

Stir together brown sugar, almonds and 1/4 cup of the flour. Cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Sprinkle half of the almond mixture (about 1/2 cup) evenly into each of 2 greased 9-inch round cake pans. Reserving some berries for garnish, spoon blueberries evenly over almond mixture in each pan. Set aside.

BLUEBERRY PATCH POUND CAKE

1 loaf cake or 8 servings

1 cup butter, softened	1-1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar	1 cup blueberries
4 eggs	1/4 cup chopped pecans
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg

Evenly spread half of the batter over blueberries in each pan. Bake on bottom rack of preheated 375°F oven until tops spring back when lightly touched with finger, 30 to 35 minutes. Loosen from pans with narrow spatula. Invert onto wire racks and allow to stand about 3 minutes. Gently shake from pans. Cool completely. Frost just before serving or frost and refrigerate until serving.

This torte is a marvelous meld of light sponge cake, juicy blueberries and crunchy almonds lavished with a whipped cream topping. Umm...

Ever-popular and easy-to-make pound cake goes from ordinary to extraordinary with the addition of bright blueberries...
Add remaining ingredients except flour, blueberries and pecans. Beat until thoroughly blended. Reduce mixer speed to low and add flour, 1/2 cup at a time, beating just until blended. Gently fold in blueberries and pecans. Spread evenly in greased and floured 9 x 5 x 3-inch loaf pan. Bake in preheated 325°F oven until cake tester inserted near center comes out clean, about 60 to 70 minutes. Cool on wire rack 10 minutes. Remove from pan and cool completely.

Clockwise from bottom: Blueberry Brunch Pancakes, Blueberry Patch Pound Cake, Blueberry Chiffon Cheesecake, Blueberry Almond Layer Cake, and Blueberry Sponge Cake Roll.

Start with a rich cream cheese base, lighten with beaten egg whites and spark with blueberry puree and a hint of lemon for a superb dessert...

BLUEBERRY CHIFFON CHEESECAKE

12 servings

1-1/2 cups graham cracker crumbs (about 20 squares)	2 packages (8 oz. each) cream cheese, softened
3/4 cup plus 1 tablespoon sugar, divided	3 tablespoons flour
1/3 cup butter, melted	1 cup blueberries, pureed
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel	1-1/2 teaspoons vanilla, divided
2 teaspoons lemon juice	1 cup dairy sour cream
6 eggs, separated	Thin lemon slices, optional
3/4 teaspoon cream of tartar	Additional blueberries, optional
	Mint leaves, optional

Thoroughly combine crumbs, 1/4 cup of the sugar, butter and lemon peel. Press firmly onto bottom and up sides of lightly greased 9 x 3-inch springform pan.

In large mixing bowl, beat egg whites with cream of tartar at high speed until foamy. Add 1/4 cup of the sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating constantly until sugar is dissolved* and whites are glossy and stand in stiff peaks. In small mixing bowl, beat cream cheese until smooth and fluffy. Add egg yolks and blend thoroughly. Stir together 1/4 cup of the remaining sugar and flour. Beat on low to medium speed until well blended. Gently, but thoroughly, fold cream cheese mixture into beaten whites. Pour into prepared pan. Bake in preheated 350°F oven 35 minutes. Turn off oven and let cheesecake stand in oven 1 hour.

BLUEBERRY SPONGE CAKE ROLL

10 to 12 servings

6 eggs, separated	1 tablespoon grated orange peel
3/4 teaspoon cream of tartar	1/3 cup plus 2 tablespoons orange juice, divided
2 cups sugar, divided	Confectioners' sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla	3 tablespoons cornstarch
1/4 teaspoon salt	2 cups blueberries
3/4 cup all-purpose flour

Lightly grease 15-1/2 x 1-1/2 x 1-inch jelly roll pan. Line bottom with waxed paper and grease again. Set aside. In large mixing bowl, beat egg whites with cream of tartar at high speed until foamy. Add 1/3 cup of the sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating constantly until whites are glossy and stand in soft peaks. In small mixing bowl, beat egg yolks at high speed until thick and lemon-colored, about 5 minutes. Gradually beat in 1/3 cup of remaining sugar, vanilla and salt until blended. Sprinkle flour and orange peel over whites. Pour into prepared pan and gently spread evenly. Bake in preheated 400°F oven until top of cake springs back when lightly touched with finger, 10 to 12 minutes. Dust a clean tea towel with confectioners' sugar. Loosen cake from sides of pan with spatula and invert onto prepared towel. Carefully pull waxed paper off bottom of cake. Trim off all edges with serrated knife. Starting from short edge, roll up cake, rolling towel in with cake. Place wrapped roll seam-side down on wire rack until cool, about 30 minutes. Meanwhile, in medium saucepan, stir together cornstarch and 1 cup of the remaining sugar. Reserving a few berries for garnish, stir in blueberries and 2 tablespoons of the orange juice. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture boils. Reduce heat to low and simmer 6 minutes, stirring occasionally. Chill. In small saucepan, stir together remaining 1/3 cup sugar and remaining 1/3 cup orange juice. Over medium heat, bring to boiling, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Carefully unroll cake. Brush or spoon 1/4 cup of the syrup on cake. Spread with chilled blueberry mixture. Roll cake, brushing with syrup at each turn. Place on serving plate, seam-side down. Brush with remaining syrup. Chill. Dust with confectioners' sugar and garnish with reserved blueberries before serving, if desired.

Grilled herbed steak

- One 2- to 3-pound beef chuck steak, cut 1 inch thick
- 2 tablespoons cracked black pepper
- 2 teaspoons dried thyme, crushed
- 1 teaspoon dried marjoram, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 bay leaf

Slash fat edges of steak at 1-inch intervals, being careful not to cut into meat. Place steak in a plastic bag, set in shallow dish. For marinade, in a mixing bowl combine wine, oil, lemon juice, onion, pepper, thyme, marjoram, salt and bay leaf; pour over steak in bag. Close bag. Marinate steak in the refrigerator for 6 hours or overnight, turning the bag several times. Drain steak, reserving marinade. Discard bay leaf. Pat excess moisture from steak with paper towels.

Grill steak on an uncovered grill directly over medium coals for 9 minutes. Turn and grill to desired doneness, allowing 9 to 11 minutes more for medium. Brush occasionally with reserved marinade during grilling. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Zucchini and walnuts

- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon margarine or butter
- 2 cups zucchini sliced 1/2-inch thick
- 1/2 cup broken walnuts, crushed
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 1/2 teaspoon dried marjoram, crushed

In a microwave-safe 1 1/2-quart casserole cook onion in water, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 2 minutes. Stir in zucchini and cook, covered, on high for 3 to 5 minutes or until zucchini is crisp-tender, stirring once. Drain. Stir in walnuts, margarine and lemon juice. Sprinkle marjoram over vegetable mixture; toss to mix. Cook, covered, on high for 30 seconds to 1 minute or until heated through. Makes 4 servings.

Spiced pork chops

- two 1/2-inch-thick slices gingerroot
- 4 pork loin chops, cut 1/2-inch thick
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

Peel skin from gingerroot. Rub gingerroot over surface of both sides of each pork chop. Brush chops with soy sauce. In a custard cup combine paprika, dry mustard and pepper. Sprinkle spice mixture over pork chops; rub in with your fingers. Grill pork chops on an uncovered grill directly over medium-hot coals for 5 minutes. Turn and grill 5 to 7 minutes more or until no pink remains. Makes 4 servings.

White-wine sangria

- 3 oranges
- 2 lemons
- 4 cups dry white wine
- 1/2 cup brandy
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 10-ounce bottle carbonated water, chilled

Halve one orange and one lemon. Slice one half of each to use as garnish; wrap and chill. Squeeze juice from remaining oranges and lemons. Stir together juices, dry white wine, brandy and honey; cover and chill. Just before serving, pour chilled mixture into a large pitcher or serving bowl. Slowly add the chilled carbonated water. Add reserved orange and lemon slices. Makes 14 (4-ounce) servings.

Rice & vegetable salad

- 2/3 cup brown rice
- 1/4 of a 16-ounce package frozen loose-pack broccoli, corn and red peppers
- 2 tablespoons snipped parsley
- 2 tablespoons sliced green onion
- 2 tablespoons sunflower nuts
- 1/2 cup bottled Italian salad dressing

Cook rice according to package directions; drain. Cook vegetables according to package directions; drain. In a mixing bowl combine rice, vegetables, parsley, onions and sunflower nuts. Add salad dressing; toss to mix well. Turn salad into serving bowl; cover and chill. Makes 6 servings.

Here's a guide for those new to wine

By Chonglin Times
The Kiplinger Magazine

If you're only now getting serious about collecting fine wines, the missed opportunities are so numerous you may find yourself awash in self-pity. Consider these examples: When Chateau Lafite released its 1961 vintage Bordeaux, some wine drinkers refused to buy it because, at $80 per 12-bottle case, they thought it was too pricey. Today, the auction price for a case of 12 Lafite runs to about $4,800—if you can find it at all. In 1964, Chateau Petrus was selling at retail for about $120 a case for its 1961 vintage—an outrageous price at the time. The going price today for that same case of Bordeaux is $12,000 or more.

But opportunities still exist. If you know how to find them. With some study and good counsel, you can collect wines in such a way that the appreciation on what you sell or trade will cover much of the cost of the wine you drink.

When buying wine for investment, you have to focus on a relatively narrow group of wines. William Sokol, author of "Liquid Assets," a new book on wine investing, calls this group IGW—an investment grade wine. IGW is a somewhat subjective term, but generally these are great vintages from internationally recognized wineries and are perceived to be the best. Investment grade wines must age well, tasting better after 20 or 40 years than they do after two, says Changing Times magazine. This rules out dry white wines and reds that peak when young, like Beaujolais. This also tends to preclude sparkling wines.

So what wines survive this process of elimination to become IGW? There are the famous, long-lived reds from France, the international market is dominated by the great red wines of France's Bordeaux region, followed closely by fine California wines. A few of the best Burgundies, such as Romanee-Conti and La Tache, are mainstays of the wine investment market but their initial prices are very high.

The second main group of IGW are the white dessert wines, especially the long-lived Sauternes of Bordeaux. At the head of this class—almost alone in investment value—is Chateau d'Yquem. Other avidly collected Sauternes include Chateau Climens and Gaudard.

Investment grade wines must age well, tasting better after 20 or 40 years than they do after two, says Changing Times magazine. This rules out dry white wines and reds that peak when young, like Beaujolais. This also tends to preclude sparkling wines.

So what wines survive this process of elimination to become IGW? There are the famous, long-lived reds from France, the international market is dominated by the great red wines of France's Bordeaux region, followed closely by fine California wines. A few of the best Burgundies, such as Romanee-Conti and La Tache, are mainstays of the wine investment market but their initial prices are very high.

The second main group of IGW are the white dessert wines, especially the long-lived Sauternes of Bordeaux. At the head of this class—almost alone in investment value—is Chateau d'Yquem. Other avidly collected Sauternes include Chateau Climens and Gaudard.

Investors must consider California's best wines made from cabernet sauvignon, some of which have beaten the best wines of France in blind tastings, to be more speculative because their record of longevity isn't known.

California cabernets that belong in the finest cellars, for good drinking as well as investment, include those of Robert Mondavi Reserve Cabernet, Montelena Napa Valley Cabernet, Beaulieu Vineyard Georges de Latour Private Reserve, Heitz Martha's Vineyard Cabernet, and the better vintages of Freemark Abbey, Jordan and Sterling.

The retail prices of fine wines have exploded over the past two decades.

Hot dressings can add sparkle to summer salads

Microwave Kitchen

Hot dressings can add new sparkle to summer salads, and give tired taste buds a wake-up message.

Hot dressings used with potato salad and cole slaw do not contain any mayonnaise, and therefore, are helpful for picnics and large family gatherings where refrigerators may be limited. These salads are also designed to be made well ahead of time, which eliminates the last minute rush of preparation.

Other hot dressings are added at the last minute before serving to fresh crisp vegetables. They are noted for a slightly tart and piquant flavor. Advanced preparation can be made even before serving. Vegetables can be prepared ahead of time and stored in a plastic bag. The ingredients for the dressing can be combined and set aside in a glass measuring cup, ready for last minute microwaving.

Many fresh and seasonal vegetables can be used for these salads. Use your imagination when shopping in the produce section of your grocery store. Always pick fresh vegetables that are crisp and have good color. Watch out for brown spots, limp appearance, or shriveled areas on fresh vegetables.

Two-week cabbage salad
1 large head of cabbage, sliced fine
1 large white onion, cut into thin rings, separated
1/2 cup vinegar
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup salad oil

Combine finely sliced cabbage and thinly sliced onion rings, separated, in a large mixing bowl. Toss to mix well.

Combine vinegar, oil, salt, sugar in a 1 1/2-quart bowl. Cover and microwave on high for 5 to 6 minutes, or until boiling. Pour boiling hot dressing over well mixed cabbage and onion. Cover and let stand unrefrigerated for 1 1/2 hours. Toss ingredients together, re-cover, and refrigerate for at least 12 hours. Remove from refrigerator and drain off excess dressing. Store in a sealed container for use as needed. This salad will keep for two weeks. Yields approximately 12 servings.

German-style potato salad
4 medium-size baked potatoes
1/2 cup chopped onion
3 slices of bacon, cut into eighth
1 tablespoon flour
1/2 cup elder vinegar
2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

Scrub potatoes, pierce skin in several places with a fork, and place in microwave in a circular pattern. Microwave on high for 10 1/2 to 12 1/2 minutes. Turn the potatoes and rearrange after half of the cooking time. Remove from microwave and wrap potatoes in aluminum foil. Allow to stand for 5 to 10 minutes while preparing dressing.

Place onion and bacon in a 1 1/2 quart casserole. Microwave on high for 3 to 4 minutes, or until onion is tender and bacon is lightly brown, stirring once during cooking time. Blend in flour. Add chopped, cooked potatoes and remaining ingredients, stirring to combine. Microwave at high for 3 to 4 minutes, or until mixture is slightly thickened, stirring after half of the cooking time. Salad may be served warm or placed in a refrigerator container, covered and served cold. Yields 4 to 6 servings.

Hot orange dressing
1/2 cup chopped green onions, both white and green portions
1/3 cup vegetable oil
1 1/2 tablespoons sugar
1/4 teaspoon celery seed
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 can (11 ounces) Mandarin

orange sections, drained
Toasted almonds
Fresh romaine or leaf lettuce

In a 2-cup measure, combine all the ingredients except orange sections, almonds and fresh romaine or lettuce. Microwave on high for 2 to 3 minutes, or until boiling, stirring twice. Gently stir in orange sections. Sprinkle with almonds and toss immediately. Serve immediately.

Hot spinach salad
8 slices of bacon
1/2 cup bacon drippings, reserved
1/2 cup sliced green onion, including green top
4 teaspoons flour
1/2 teaspoon celery seed
1/2 cup water
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

8 cups torn leaf fresh spinach
4 hard cooked eggs, sliced (cooked conventionally)

Place bacon slices on microwave bacon rack. Cover with a white paper towel and microwave on high for 7 to 8 minutes, or until crisp. Crumble bacon and set aside. Measure drippings, 1/2 cup, into a 2-cup glass measuring cup. Add green onions, and microwave on high for 2 minutes, or until onion is tender. Stir in flour; microwave on full power for 30 seconds. Stir in celery salt, water, lemon juice, horseradish, and Worcestershire sauce. Microwave at full power for 1 1/2 to 2 minutes, or until thickened and bubbly, stirring twice. Pour over fresh spinach which has been placed in a large salad bowl. Toss, then garnish with additional crumbled bacon and sliced hard-cooked eggs. Serve at once. Yields 8 to 8 servings.

Zucchini slaw
5 cups shredded cabbage
3 cups shredded zucchini
1 cup grated fresh carrots
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1/4 teaspoon celery seed
1/4 teaspoon pepper

In a large bowl toss together cabbage, zucchini, carrot and onion. Set aside. In a 4-cup measure, mix sugar, oil, vinegar, celery seed and pepper. Microwave on high for 1 to 1 1/2 minutes, or until boiling. Pour over vegetables; toss to coat. Serve at once. Yields 10 to 12 servings.

Fast food not junk, contrary to belief

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Contrary to popular belief, fast food is not junk food, according to a dietitian at the University of Rochester.

"There's plenty of protein, iron, B vitamins and calcium, and, with the welcome addition of the salad bar, even fiber has been added," says Liudmila Harker. "The problem is that fast food also has lots of fat, sugar and sodium."

The answer? Order milk or juice; ask for fries without salt, pick a smaller burger and balance it with a larger salad.

Danger lies to the west

By James Jacoby

No, ladies and gentlemen, the bidding diagram does not contain a misprint. The four-heart bid by North was a transfer bid, and South was only adhering to the convention when he bid four spades. If you employ such a bid, you can call it a Jacoby transfer bid at the four-level or you can call it a Texas transfer, but it is a good idea to discuss it with your partner before the game. Conventions like this one require partnership agreement.

Declarer ruffed the opening lead, drew trumps ending in dummy and took a heart finesse. After winning the heart queen, West realized that three club tricks were needed to set the contract. He therefore led the club queen, playing East for the A-J of clubs. Down one.

The contract can be assured after the opening lead if declarer makes the right avoidance plays. First let him throw a heart from dummy at trick one. East will win his diamond ace and presumably return a heart. Declarer wins the ace, draws the defenders' trumps and then plays the king and 10 of hearts. When West comes up with a transfer bid, and South is only adhering to the convention when he bid four spades, it is a good idea to discuss it with your partner before the game. Conventions like this one require partnership agreement.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Polly's Pointers

Use instant milk in cottage cheese

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY - Can you make cottage cheese from instant powdered milk? We get a lot of powdered milk from the government. - R.L.T.

DEAR R.L.T. - Yes, you can make cottage cheese from instant powdered milk—either non-fat or whole dry-milk powder. Reconstitute the milk powder with water as directed, then proceed with your cheese recipe as usual. The only drawback is that the cheese does retain the flavor of the dry milk, but it is not very strong and a little sour cream or heavy cream is mixed into the finished curds.

Here's a fairly simple recipe for making homemade cottage cheese. You'll need a fairly accurate thermometer to test the temperature of the milk.

Heat 2 quarts of non-fat milk (either fresh skim or reconstituted non-fat powdered milk with 1/4 cup additional non-fat dry-milk powder). Heat slowly to 86 degrees by placing the pan of milk in a larger pan half-filled with warm water. Turn the heat on under the larger pot and heat until milk temperature reaches 86 degrees. Stir in 1/4 cup buttermilk or 2 tablespoons dried buttermilk powder.

Hold the milk at about 86 degrees for 12 hours. You can occasionally test the temperature of the milk mixture and turn on the heat when necessary to keep it up to the proper temperature, or, if you're doing it overnight, insulate the pot of milk in some way, such as wrapping it in a thick blanket or putting the milk mixture into a thermal jug. By morning, the mixture should have formed a thick curd.

Using a knife, cut the curd in the pan into 1/2 inch pieces. Let stand for half an hour for the whey to separate from the curds.

Gently and slowly heat the curds and whey (again in a larger pot and water) to about 105 degrees, stirring occasionally. Maintain this temperature for half an hour. After this time, the curds should be firm like cottage cheese. If they seem crumbly and custardlike, continue to heat the curds to a temperature of about 110 to 115 degrees until they become firm, stirring frequently so the curds heat evenly.

Advice

Broken plans break bride's budget as well as her heart

DEAR ABBY: I became engaged last Christmas. We set our wedding date for June. When Joe (not his real name) proposed to me, he revealed that he had lived with a girl before I knew him. She became pregnant; he didn't want to marry her; she didn't want to abort, so she had the baby. Joe convinced me, and my mother and father, that he had no obligation whatsoever to this woman or the child—that his fiancée had settled it with her and had his attorney on a retainer. If he hasn't, he should!

Two weeks before our wedding date, Joe told me that he had been "suddenly" served with papers for child support, and he decided to support this child, and ask for visiting rights as well!

Because our life together would be changed drastically, and because I think Joe lied to me about his obligation to his child, I called the wedding off.

My parents spent thousands of dollars preparing for our wedding—the deposit on the hall (non-refundable), my gown and trousseau, engraved invitations, deposit for flowers, etc. I think Joe should repay my parents for all this. Joe disagrees because I'm the one who called the wedding off. (I called it off because he misrepresented himself and his intentions.)

DEAR ABBY: I am surprised at the number of men who tell me dirty jokes, then act annoyed when I don't react with a giggle, smirk or wink.

Frankly, I find this kind of talk embarrassing. Am I prude? If you say I should loosen up, I'll try, but I was taught to be...

A LADY

DEAR LADY: Loosen up? No way! Let the offenders know you don't appreciate that kind of talk. If you don't object at the onset, the "jokes" will get dirtier and dirtier.

DEAR ABBY: In reply to "Pro-Grammar" of Keane, N.H., I submit the following:

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: I'm in your corner. Retain an attorney and have him work it out with Joe's attorney. (I hope that Joe has his attorney on a retainer. If he hasn't, he should.)

Rejoice. You could have married this man. I think you (and your parents) got off cheap.

Naval discharge worrisome

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is a constant nerve discharge serious for a 14-year-old person?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a doctor told me I have cervical stenosis. Last week my urologist said the urethra is turning to stone. What's going on?

DEAR READER: Cervical stenosis means that the opening through your cervix into the uterus is becoming narrowed. This is a consequence of aging in women past the childbearing years. An additional part of the postmenopausal changes taking place in your body is the narrowing and loss of elasticity of the urethra, the tube leading from your bladder. Cervical stenosis is not serious; urethral stenosis can cause difficulty in voiding and repeated urinary infection. It is usually treated by dilation or stretching.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 51 on my feet eight hours a day and do hard physical labor in a plywood mill. Does this meet the exercise requirements to keep a healthy body? My wife and I walk on weekends.

DEAR READER: Without following you around and watching what you do, I can't say whether the amount of physical labor required for your job is healthy. There is no

Thoughts

I wonder what summertime was like in Jesus day. Living in a "beach" area as they did, I wonder if the disciples enjoyed that great summer pastime like we do. Of course, the beach and the sea were areas where their livelihoods were found, so perhaps they did not look upon the seashore as a vacation spot. It's too bad. If I find the beach to be a place of such blissful solitude, I think they would have felt great strength and a reviving of their souls and bodies after a vacation at the Sea of Galilee.

God has provided his people with the most wonderful resting places. The beach, forests, mountains. All there for the quiet comfort that one finds lapsing on the shore, rustling in the trees, or echoing in your mountain valley. With the exception of a few spots, a great deal of this natural beauty is free and available for everyone's enjoyment. It is with grateful anticipation that I take advantage of the warm sand, the cool forest trails and the beauty of the hills that surround me.

Thank you God, for all of your natural gifts that I enjoy and that I share with those I love.

Supermarket Shopper

Spend the $100 prize on a psychiatrist

By Marlin Sloane
United Feature Syndicate

DEAR MARTIN: I read about the winner of our Longest Register Tape Contest in your column, and I have been wanting to write to you since. I hope the $100 prize you sent her covers some of the testing she should take to see if she has all her marbles. Anybody who would spend 14 hours shopping in the supermarket has a real problem.

If I went to my local supermarket and they told me I could have more than $1,000 worth of groceries for nothing and I did as your winner did - carrying out half the store's groceries and using a trailer to haul everything away - I would need a doctor.

When you find out what hospital they put her in, I will be glad to send her a nice floral bouquet to help cheer up her extended stay.

LEONARD COHEN
SCRANTON, PA.

DEAR LEONARD: Everyone is entitled to a hobby, and many of us wish we could turn our pastimes into money the way Cindy Dorgan did. Her savings of $1,262 on a single shopping trip made her the winner of our Longest Register Tape Contest, and she doesn't need any flowers from you. Her husband Bob says she is in "wonderfully good shape, and he sends her flowers as well as his compliments for being his favorite smart shopper."

By the way, their young sons Richard and Jeremy have some extra marbles that you might be able to use.

DEAR MARTIN: Someone told me that if there were no coupons or refund offers, manufacturers would drop their prices. I would like your opinion.

MARSHA MILLAR
VIRGINIA BEACH, VA.

DEAR MARSHA: Coupons cost the manufacturers approximately three-fourths of a penny on every dollar's worth of groceries. If manufacturers dropped coupons, at best we would save only a penny on every $3 worth of groceries we purchased.

But with a single coupon, a smart shopper can save a lot more than this. This is why coupons have been the

New hormone could help detect cancer

NEW HAVEN (AP) - Researchers have identified a new hormone that regulates the amount of calcium in the human skeleton, a discovery that could have important implications for the detection of cancer and the treatment of osteoporosis.

The hormone, which removes calcium from bones and transfers it into the bloodstream, is found in excessive amounts among patients with tumors of the lung, breast, ovaries and bone marrow.

Researchers at Yale University and the West Haven Veterans Administration Hospital Medical Center are attempting to develop blood tests that would detect the hormone - called HMM factor, or humoral hypercalcemia of malignancy factor - which could lead to early identification of cancerous tumors.

Identification of the hormone also could lead to a treatment for osteoporosis, a disease that causes brittle bones, particularly among older women, researchers say.

The Yale scientists also suggest it might be possible to develop a chemical to counter the hormone's calcium-transferring effects, which would form the basis for treatment of osteoporosis as well as bone loss in cancer patients.

"We were trying to purify this chemical for eight years," said Dr. Andrew F. Stewart, chief of endocrinology at the Yale Medical Center and associate professor of medicine at the Yale School of Medicine.

"Now we have it, we can start asking more fundamental questions" about osteoporosis and cancer," he said.

Profs: Students are poor to fair

BOSTON (AP) - A majority of U.S. college and university professors rank their students' academic ability as "fair to poor," and say their jobs would be easier if students were better prepared in high school, a survey has found.

Of 5,000 professors polled nationwide, 54 percent characterized their students as fair to poor academically in study results announced Tuesday.

The results were announced by Ernest Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, at a four-day conference of 1,800 educators organized by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education.

Eighty-four percent of the professors said their jobs would be easier if students were taught better in high school and 66 percent said they were forced to spend too much time on high school-level work in their classes.

Boyer told an audience of 300 educators that the survey proves that education is a "seamless web" and urged more collaboration between college and secondary school faculties.

He also called for improving the status of elementary and high school teachers to attract a larger talent pool of instructors.

"We should encourage our outstanding students to enter teaching," Boyer said. "I do believe that if this nation would give as much status to first-grade teachers as we do to full professors, that one set of doors would bring excellence to higher education."

About Town

Gravestone expert to lead tour

As part of the 275th anniversary of Coventry, James Slater, professor of biological sciences at the University of Connecticut, will lead a tour of the Nathan Hale Cemetery at noon on Sunday. He will interpret symbols and lettering on the 18th century gravestones.

The tour will be canceled if it rains.

Agoraphobics meet

People who suffer from panic when they leave their homes for crowded, public, or unfamiliar places can meet on July 22 at the Concordia Lutheran Church on Pitkin Street, Manchester. Area Agoraphobics Together-Daytime, meet every Wednesday at the church at 10:30 a.m. The meeting is open to the public and is free.

Multi-media first aid offered

The Connecticut Valley East Branch of the American Red Cross will sponsor an eight-hour course in multi-media first aid on Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Hartford Road.

The course is open to anyone 13 years or older who has completed seventh grade. The cost is $30 per person. For enrollment information, call 643-5111.
