Rescue workers help an unidentified person after saving her from the rain-swollen Guadalupe River in Comfort, Texas, about 60 miles northwest of San Antonio, Friday. A church bus and van carrying 43 people toppled into the river at a crossing which was having its worst flooding in 55 years.

TWO DIE IN BUS PLUNGE

Eight still missing in Comfort, Texas, as search waits for light

COMFORT, Texas (AP) — A church bus and a van carrying 43 people from a children's camp to a rafting expedition were swept into a rain-swollen river Friday, killing two people and leaving eight missing as survivors clung to trees awaiting rescue, authorities said.

Sheriff's officers said they had called camp officials between 3 and 4 a.m. Friday to warn against crossing the swollen river.

"Everybody down the river was notified that the river was on the rise," said Kendall County Sheriff Lee D'Spain Jr. "I couldn't say for certain, but I think that would be right that it could have been avoided if they would have taken notice of the warning."

The body of one girl was found three miles downstream, and a 14-year-old girl died when she fell 100 feet from a rope dangled by a rescue helicopter.

"She couldn't hold on. She apparently was too weak to hold on. She had the rope around her properly, but she just couldn't hold on," said Sgt. Charles Seale, area supervisor for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The girl, who was from Mesquite, was identified as Melanie Finley. The second victim was identified as Tonya Smith, 13, of Scurry.

Survivors clung to trees or tried to form human chains to get out of the flood, but Seale said eight people ranging in age from 10 to 18 were still missing hours after the 7 a.m. accident. The accident occurred at a ford on the Guadalupe River, which was experiencing its worst flooding in 55 years, authorities said.

"It just may be some false hopes" that any survived in the churning waters, Seale said.

The search, called off at dusk, was to resume at daybreak, he said.

Two die in Texas bus plunge as grim search awaits light

At least 19 of the 33 known survivors were injured, said David Wells, another DPS spokesman. Only two were hospitalized late Friday, one in guarded and the other in stable condition, said James Taylor, a dispatcher for Kerr County Emergency Medical Services.

"I'm fine. I'm just worried about my kids," said bus driver Richard "Whitey" Koons, 26.

Koons said he was taking the youngsters to a rafting expedition when the bus stalled in about 12 inches of water at a ford on the Guadalupe River that normally is covered by low water.

He told the children to get out, and some were swept away as the river suddenly rose to as high as the van's steering wheel. The bus then toppled into the flood.

The empty bus was found about 5:30 p.m. on the north side of the river, but the sheriff said the van was still under water.

Almost a foot of rain fell in the area Friday morning, causing the worst flooding of the Guadalupe River at nearby Hunt since July 1932, the National Weather Service said. The river had risen to 28.4 feet, 16 feet above flood stage, by 4 a.m.

A volunteer firefighter said one of the survivors told him they tried to form a human chain to get to the bank.

"She said they were all holding hands like a chain and maybe work themselves up back to the pavement," said Charles Daggett of the Comfort Volunteer Fire Department.

"She said then a wall of water came so fast that it kind of broke them up, and that the bus started floating and that a lot of them stayed with the bus, but then it started going on down river," he said.

One youngster, Jason Hernandez, 13, of Dallas, said a friend rescued him by handing him a branch to grab onto until a helicopter could pick him up.

"He saved my life. I said several prayers," Hernandez said.

Seale said 43 people were aboard the two vehicles, which were from the Seagoville Road Baptist Church in Balch Springs, near Dallas. They had been at the Pot o' Gold camp, about 60 miles northwest of San Antonio, since Monday.

Koons, said the bus ahead of him created a wake as he tried to pass through the low-water crossing, and his bus stalled.

Koons, a youth pastor of the group, said he tried to back up, but the church van was following too closely. Koons said he told the youths to get out, but that when they did many were swept downstream.

Many of the children saved themselves by clinging to trees. Children emerged from helicopters wrapped in blankets, some without shoes and their clothes tattered.

"We have hypothermia and shock patients who are children," said Ms. Sakach. She said most of the injured were teen-agers.

One of those critically injured was a 14-year-old girl, and Ms. Sakach said another person in critical condition was suffering from severe shock and hypothermia.

"The water is running fast and it is very cold," she said.

Many suffered bruises and small cuts on their arms and legs from clinging to the trees, said Betsy Cox, a registered nurse at Sid Peterson Memorial Hospital in nearby Kerrville who was at the scene.

The sheriff's office said Friday's rainfall prompted deputies to evacuate hundreds of residents along the Guadalupe in Hunt and Ingram in neighboring Kerr County. As much as 4 inches of rain fell per hour after midnight, the weather service said.

Mom guilty of smothering baby

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — A woman whose nine children all died over 14 years and who confessed to three of the deaths was found guilty Friday of smothering her 3½-month-old daughter with a pillow but innocent of intending to kill the baby.

Mary Beth Tinning, 44, had been charged with two counts of second-degree murder in the December 1985 death of Tami Lynne Tinning.

The Schenectady County Court jury found her innocent of one count, charging her with acting with the intent to cause death, but convicted her of the second count, acting recklessly with a depraved indifference to human life.

At the time of her arrest a year ago, police said they suspected her of being involved in all but one of the nine deaths.

The jury deliberated 19 hours over three days. When the verdict was read by foreman Norman Small, Mrs. Tinning put her hands to her face. She cried softly and held the hand of her husband, Joseph, while jurors were polled individually.

"I can't really complain that they didn't think about it," Joseph Tinning said afterward. "They did their job. I just have a different opinion on it."

Mrs. Tinning's bail was immediately revoked and deputies took her to jail. She faces a minimum of 15 years and a maximum of 25 years to life in prison. Judge Clifford Harrigan set sentencing for Aug. 21.

Forty minutes before the verdict was read, the jurors asked Harrigan if they could hear again the elements of the charges.

Mrs. Tinning, who did not testify during the trial, made a 36-page statement to state troopers last February admitting to killing Tami Lynne and two other children because she "wasn't a good mother."

She denied involvement in the other deaths.

Defense attorney Paul Callahan contended she was pressured into making that statement and said he would appeal on grounds that the confession should not have been included as evidence.

District Attorney John Poersch predicted Mrs. Tinning would be brought to trial for the deaths of at least two more of her children.

"I never am overly pleased with the misfortune of another human being, so I'm not overjoyed (at the verdict)," Poersch said. "I hope perhaps ... that Mrs. Tinning can get some help."

MARY BETH TINNING led out of court Friday

Dr. Thomas Oram, who performed the autopsy on Tami Lynne, had testified that the infant had been smothered with a soft object, but defense witnesses questioned the thoroughness of the autopsy.

During the three-week trial, Callahan presented a defense based on three doctors who testified they saw signs that Tami Lynne had a rare hereditary brain disorder called Werdnig Hoffmanns Disease.

Poindexter sticks to his diversion story

Testimony brings quick new denials from White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former National Security Adviser John Poindexter testified Friday that no matter what the White House says he still believes President Reagan would have approved diverting Iranian arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan contras. His comments drew quick new denials from Reagan officials.

In the face of sharp congressional questions about his own credibility, as well as White House denials, Poindexter stood by his earlier testimony that he approved the diversion on his own to protect President Reagan, that he never told the president and that he believed he wasn't doing anything Reagan himself wouldn't have approved.

Confronted with a statement on Thursday by Reagan's chief spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, that the president would not have allowed the diversion to proceed, Poindexter told the Iran-contra committees on Friday, "I would have expected him to say that. That's the whole idea of deniability."

REAGAN DECLINED to respond to Poindexter's latest remarks, saying to reporters, "No comments until the investigation is over and then I will be eagerly responding."

However, his chief of staff Howard Baker challenged Poindexter's testimony and said of Reagan and the diversion, "had he known about it, he simply would have stopped it."

Baker contended Poindexter's statements were merely "the admiral's opinion," based on no facts, evidence or conversation with the president.

Poindexter told the committees that he had based his view on 5½ years of working for Reagan on the national security staff, including the final year during which he had nearly daily meetings with the president.

At the start of Poindexter's third day of testimony before the congressional committees, his attorney, Richard Beckler, objected that committee members were being quoted in news accounts as questioning the former White House official's truthfulness.

HIS PROTESTATIONS drew an acidic response from the Senate committee chairman, Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii.

"I don't think it is improper for any member of this panel to characterize that testimony as being incredible, mindboggling, chilling," Inouye said of Poindexter's version of events.

Also, during 5½ hours of testimony on Friday: Poindexter described a meeting in Attorney General Edwin Meese III's office early on the morning of last Nov. 25. He said Meese, who had been conducting an investigation of the affair, told him that it was time for Poindexter to resign, but "he indicated to me he didn't think there were any criminal problems. ... He said his people were still looking into it but he didn't think we had any problems."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., asked Poindexter why he didn't take public responsibility for the diversion at the time he resigned and thereby prevent "the agony we've had for the last eight months."

Poindexter responded that he was tired, that "this was a very difficult time" and that he had not known Meese planned to announce the diversion.

"It is my view that presidents ought to be allowed to committees investigating the Iran-contra affair on Capitol Hill Friday. Beckler complained that lawmakers and lawyers have treated his client unfairly.

create their own political disasters," Rudman said. "Nobody else ought to do it for them."

POINDEXTER, 56, fiddled with his pipe and responded in generally even tones as attorneys for the congressional investigating committees completed their examination and members of the panels began their first questioning. They will continue when the hearings resume on Monday.

A Navy rear admiral who served as national security adviser for nearly a year until his resignation last Nov. 25, Poindexter testified under a grant of limited immunity.

His wife, Linda, wearing her clerical collar as an Episcopal priest, sat behind her husband.

Throughout, Poindexter has portrayed himself as a loyal staff aide who sought to shield Reagan from potential difficulty. He repeated on Friday that he alone decided not to tell Reagan about the diversion of secret arms sales proceeds to the contras.

In rebuttal to Inouye's observation that he had withheld critical information from Cabinet officers, Poindexter replied, "I didn't withhold from them anything that they didn't want withheld."

ON ANOTHER KEY POINT, Poindexter said he withheld information from Congress last fall because "I simply didn't want any outside interference" in the secret program of support for the contras.

He said he feared revealing the truth to Congress would have destroyed the ability to secretly provide assistance to the contras and could provoke further legal restrictions on aid. Congress had already banned direct and indirect U.S. military aid to the contras.

Poindexter denied, however, that he was attempting a cover-up last November when he destroyed a key document Reagan signed that authorized the sale of U.S.-made Hawk missiles to Iran in November 1985 as a straight arms-for-hostages deal. Poindexter said he tore up the document, which seemed to contradict Reagan's assertion of broader goals in the dealing, because he viewed it as politically damaging if revealed.

He also said there was no cover-up intended when he and others compiled false chronologies of events in the arms sale for White House use as the affair was unraveling last fall.

"It would have been stupid to try to find out what all the facts were, which I think all the evidence indicates we were trying to do, if we had intended to cover up something," Poindexter testified.

HE STUCK TO HIS STORY on the diversion under rigorous questioning by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga. Asked if he stood by his version, he said, "I do."

"I have not changed my mind," he said. "I felt the president would have approved that if I asked him. I still feel that way."

However, he refused to agree when Nunn asked if that meant the White House was misleading the American public.

Three more sought in Suffield murders

SUFFIELD (AP) — Three more arrest warrants were issued Friday in the slayings of two men who broke up a noisy roadside party.

State police Sgt. Daniel Lewis said warrants were signed for Andrew Patterson, 21, his brother Bryan D. Patterson, 17, and Richard A. Bazzano, 18, all of Suffield.

The three are wanted in the fatal shooting of Daniel Seymour, 25, of Suffield, and Seymour's friend, William Price, 26, of Monroe. Lewis said. Seymour and Price were shot on July 11 during a confrontation in the front yard of Seymour's new family home.

Seymour and Price had approached a loud group of 25 to 30 people who had gathered in a cul-de-sac near Seymour's home at about 10:30 p.m. The two men asked them to leave the area. After an exchange of words, the group dispersed, but Eric Steiger, 25, of Suffield returned to Seymour's home in a car with two other men. After a confrontation, one of the youths in the car shot and killed Seymour and Price, police said.

Steiger surrendered on July 12 and was arraigned the next day in Enfield Superior Court on two murder charges and a capital felony count, police said.

Charges on each of the arrest warrants for Bazzano and the Pattersons include one count of conspiracy to commit capital felony murder, two counts of conspiracy to commit murder, one count of accessory to capital felony murder, and two counts of accessory to commit murder, Lewis said.

Capital felony murder is the killing of more than one person during a single incident, and is punishable by the death penalty, Lewis said.

Lewis said none of the three men were in custody Friday. He said they will be presented with the warrants as soon as they are located.

Kids give Bolton summer school good marks

By Bruce Matzkin
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — "It's really up to you, Miss Houston, whether I go to summer camp or summer school," read the caption of the comic, "What a Guy," which appeared in the Manchester Herald on July 10.

Above the caption a sad-faced child stood next to his teacher, who was seated at her desk reviewing the child's exam.

One doesn't need deep insight to understand the child's displeasure at the prospect of attending summer school.

But the child obviously doesn't know about the summer school at Bolton Elementary School. Students interviewed at the school Friday appeared eager to learn.

"I had a choice of coming to summer school or going to camp," said 11-year-old Mike Baran of Vernon. "School is better."

Julius Nichols, a 6-year-old from Vernon, said he was in summer school "because I don't know that much stuff. I wanted to come so I could learn."

His friend, 6-year-old Kevin Lada-bouche of Hebron, added, "It's fun. My favorite part is working."

The Bolton-Vernon-Tolland Cooperative Summer School Program, which is in its second year, is a remedial program for students in kindergarten through fifth grade. Basic reading, writing and math skills are emphasized.

—Betsy Wilson, the program's director.

said the school helps students "maintain and increase their basic skills over the summer."

Of the 138 children enrolled, 71 are bused in from Vernon, 43 are bused in from Tolland, and 24 come from Bolton and are either dropped off by their parents or ride a van. The session, which began July 1, runs until July 29, with classes meeting Monday to Friday, from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.

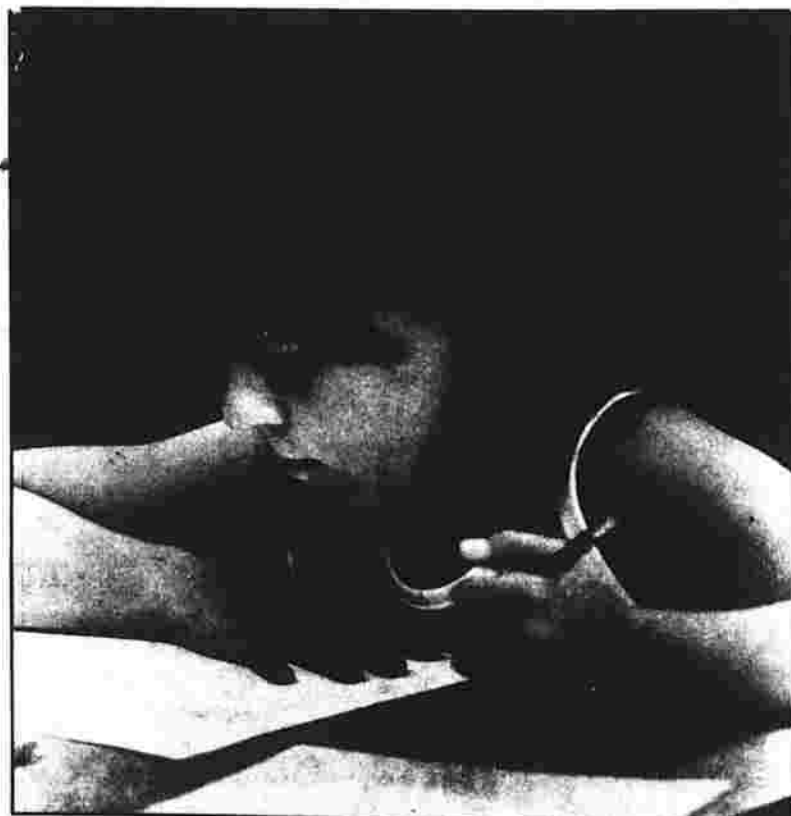

The several students spoken to during recess said they didn't mind going to summer school.

Amy Flynn of Vernon was sitting out of a kickball game at recess. "I would rather be on the boys' team, because I like some of the boys on the team," she said. "I came here because I can meet friends," she said.

"It's fun," added Amy's best friend, 10-year-old Carrie Moore of Vernon, who was also sitting out the game. "If Amy doesn't play, I can't play, because she gets bored without me," she said. "I need some help in some of my subjects, and I didn't want to stay home because it's boring," Carrie said.

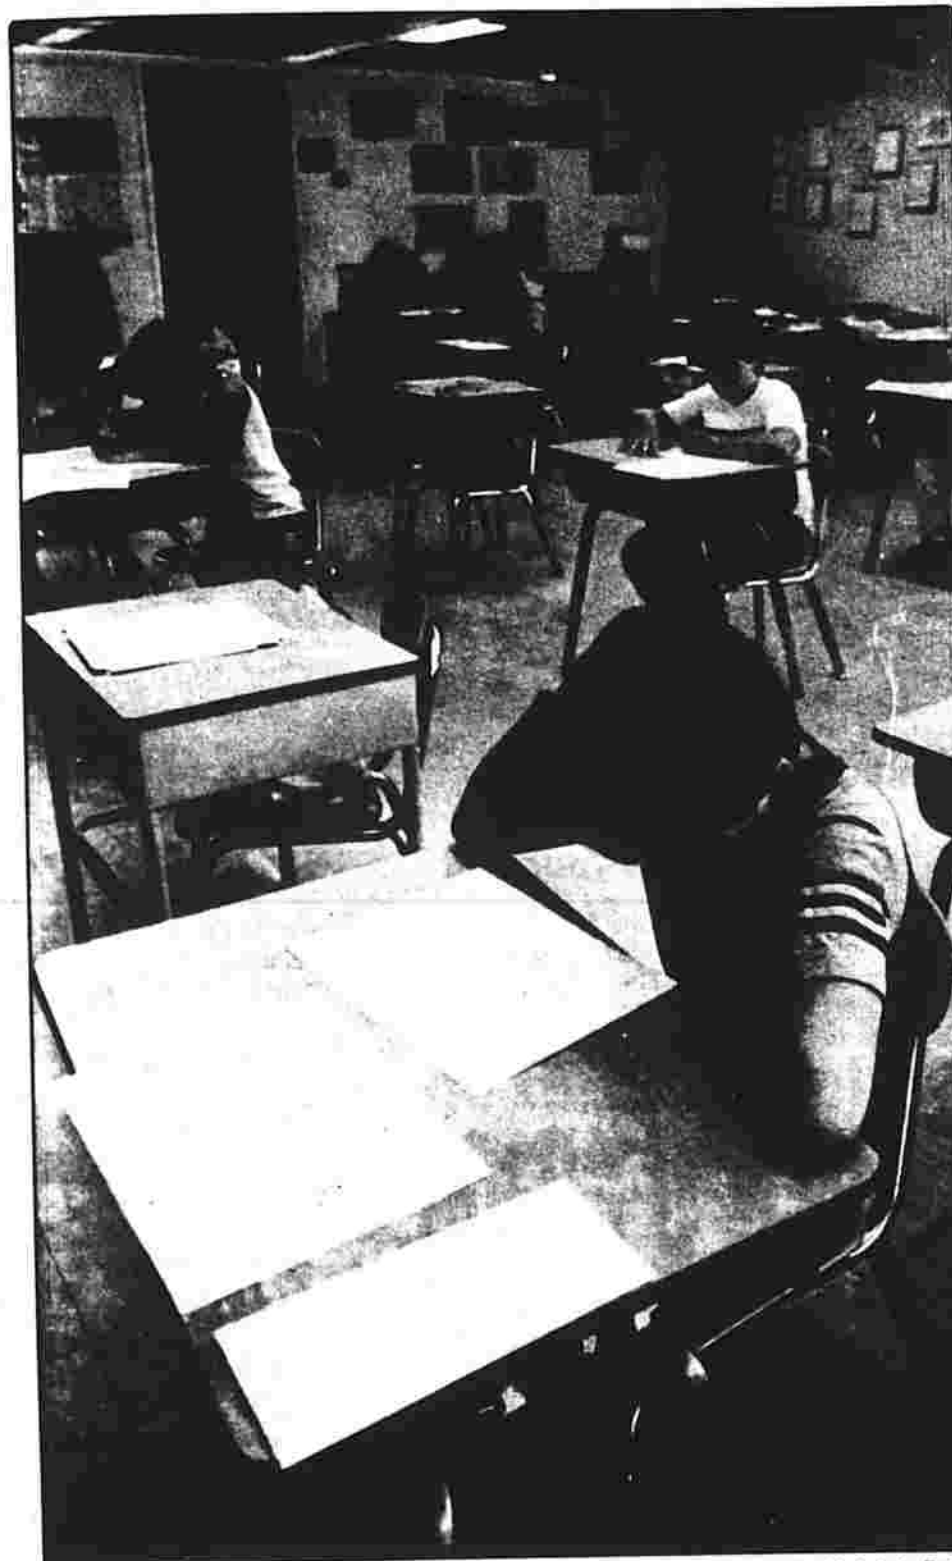

The school consists of 14 classes that are grouped according to grade and individual need. "The classes are small, only about 10 students per teacher, so the kids get individualized attention," said Wilson.

Students enrolled are referred by their regular teachers, who felt they needed to spend extra time working on their basic skills.

Three towns send pupils

"I tried to group according to similar needs," said Wilson. "If there were some kids of one grade who needed math work, they would be grouped together. If other kids of the same grade needed reading work, they were grouped together." Last year's program, which was held at Northeast Elementary School in Vernon, marked the first time Bolton, Vernon, and Tolland held a cooperative summer school.

The program, said Bolton K-8 Assistant Principal Steve Bent, is the result of a $62,000 grant from the Connecticut Department of Education.

Wilson, a special education teacher at Bolton Elementary School, is the special education coordinator for the Bolton school system.

"The working relationship between the three towns in terms of staff is very good, and all the students from the three towns get along. This is a very positive thing for the program," she said.

The program's 14 teachers and six instructional aides were selected after an interview process, Bent said.

Most teachers are from Vernon, Bolton, and Tolland, but a few are from other school systems. The school also has a full-time nurse and a part-time librarian.

NOTICE OF FUNDING AVAILABILITY FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF AFFORDABLE HOUSING

The State of Connecticut Department of Housing is accepting applications for the development of affordable rental housing for low income households.

A total of $55 million has been authorized by the General Assembly for projects which meet the Department's underwriting criteria and the requirements of Section 8-119aa through 8-119jj of the Connecticut General Statutes as amended.

The Affordable Housing program provides capital grants to non-profit corporations and housing authorities to develop affordable rental housing.

Grants are available for new construction and rehabilitation to create affordable rental housing units. Grants may be used for architectural and engineering fees, relocation expenses, reasonable development and administrative costs and a major portion of the site acquisition and preparation. Non-profit corporations and housing authorities will be required to have a minimal equity interest in the project.

The program is designed to meet the rental housing needs of households whose income does not exceed 50% of the median income for the applicable geographic area, adjusted for family size, as determined by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Department offers technical assistance to any interested non-profit corporation or housing authority.

Applications, program information and technical assistance may be obtained by writing to:

NOTICIA DE FONDOS DISPONIBLES PARA EL DESARROLLO DE VIVIENDAS A COSTO MODICO

El Departamento de Vivienda del Estado de Connecticut esta aceptando solicitudes para el desarrollo de viviendas de alquiler para familias de bajos ingresos.

La Asamblea General ha autorizado un total de 55 millones de dolares para ser utilizados en proyectos que llenen los requisitos de las Sección 8-119aa - 8-119jj de los Estatutos Generales de Connecticut, según amendados.

El programa de Viviendas a Costo Modico provee fondos a corporaciones no-lucrativas y autoridades de viviendas, para el desarrollo de viviendas de alquiler a bajo costo.

Los fondos estan disponibles para nueva construcción y rehabilitación de unidades con el fin de crear viviendas para alquiler. Estos fondos pueden ser utilizados para gastos de arquitecto e ingenieros, gastos de relocación, costos razonables de desarrollo y administración, y una porción de la adquisición y preparación. Se requiere que las corporaciones no-lucrativas y autoridades de viviendas tengan interés monetario en el proyecto.

El programa es designado para satisfacer las necesidades de vivienda de familias cuyas entradas no excedan el 50% de ingresos medios del área geográfica aplicable, ajustados al número de miembros de la familia, según determinado por el Departamento de Viviendas y Desarrollo Urbano de los Estados Unidos.

El departamento ofrece asistencia técnica a corporaciones no-lucrativas y autoridades de viviendas que estén interesadas.

Local News in Brief

Amazing to move by Labor Day

The Amazing Store in the Manchester Parkade is scheduled to move into the old Pic 'n' Save building on East Middle Turnpike by Labor Day, an assistant manager said Friday.

The assistant manager, Michael Merriam, said the new location, with about 20,000 square feet of area, will be double the size of the present store. The new location will make the Manchester store one of the largest in the five-store discount chain.

Merriam said a need for more space is the main reason behind the move. The same kind of discount merchandise will be sold at the new location, he said.

Amazing Stores has been located at the Parkade for almost four years.

Bolton resident sought for panel

A Bolton resident who has a disability or who is the parent of a child with a disability is being sought to serve as a member of the Connecticut Disabilities Council. The council, whose members are appointed by the governor, works toward establishing state policies affecting people with disabilities.

Twelve of the members of the 24-member council are disabled people or parents of disabled people, but Bolton has never had a member on the council.

Any Bolton resident interested should call Ed Preneta, director, Connecticut Developmental Disabilities Office, 90 Pitkin St., East Hartford, at 725-3829.

Students attend business confab

Two Manchester High School students, Jennifer Benoit and Kevin Malloy, will be among 120 high school students in the state who will attend Business Week today through July 24 at Quinnipiac College in Hamden.

The event is sponsored by the Education Foundation of the Connecticut Business and Industry Association. Students will hear talks by business executives on career trends, business operations, the economy, production, sales, advertising, and marketing.

Near drowning is lecture's topic

"Near Drowning and Resuscitation Decisions" will be the topic of a lecture Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the conference room of Manchester Memorial Hospital as part of a continuing education program of doctors, nurses, and paramedics. The program will be videotaped and copies will be available for loan from the hospital's emergency department.

Those who want to attend should contact the Emergency Department Management Office at 647-4738 to reserve space.

Register to vote at the Parkade

The registrars of voters will hold a voter-registration session Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Super Stop & Shop in the Parkade. If the weather is inclement, the session will not be held. Voter registration will be taken for residents of any town in Connecticut. Changes of address and changes of party affiliation will be taken for Manchester voters.

Meals volunteers in short supply

By George Lavng
Herald Reporter

When Meals on Wheels started 11 years ago to deliver meals to those unable to shop or prepare their own food, there were only two delivery routes.

Starting on Monday, the nonprofit agency will open up its ninth route, and if it had enough volunteers, could also begin a tenth, said coordinator Melanie Moroney.

"I'm just getting more and more referrals all the time," Moroney said Friday. "It's just amazing."

Currently, Meals on Wheels serves 111 clients. Though she's glad more people are being helped, Moroney said the increase has also made more pressing the problem of getting enough volunteer drivers.

If the agency is not able to interest new volunteers, then new clients will have to be put on a waiting list until enough help is found, she said.

Delivering meals takes between one and two hours around noon-time. Drivers use their own vehicles, and serve 13 meals on a route, she explained.

Meals on Wheels currently has more drivers than routes, but some drivers only deliver once a month or once a week, Moroney said. Before volunteers begin, they will be trained. Prospective volunteers should call Moroney between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. on weekdays at 643-9511.

Meals on Wheels is run by the Visiting Nurse and Home Care, Inc., and receives funding from the town of Manchester and United Way.

The agency serves the elderly, disabled and others who are home-bound. Those who receive meals are charged on a sliding scale based on their income.

Every weekday, a hot lunch and a cold supper is delivered. Food is distributed from the hospital.

Moroney attributed the increase in clients to a number of factors. For one thing, more people are now aware of the service, she said. Also, there are more elderly people in the Manchester-Bolton area.

Despite the large workload for volunteers, Moroney said the agency will not cut back on its services if it does not get more help. If necessary, she said, she will deliver some meals herself.

The agency has a good track record. "We've never missed a day in all 11 years," Moroney said.

Joy D. Wheeler, 25, was charged with third-degree larceny. Police said Wheeler and her marijuana, possession of hallucinogenics and simple trespass.

About 15 young people were at the party when police arrived, but most of them fled, police said.

Koblect was held on a $5,000 cash bond and was to appear Friday in Manchester Superior Court.

boyfriend were staying at the home when the owner reported to police that the items, valued at $1,000, were missing. Wheeler told the homeowner that the television had been seized by police because it had been stolen, police said.

Wheeler was to be presented in Thursday in Manchester Superior Court.

N.Y. has no case without Ross confession

NEW LONDON (AP) — After a meeting with State's Attorney C. Robert Satti, a New York state prosecutor has conceded that trial testimony by convicted serial killer Michael B. Ross probably won't help solve the 1981 death of a Cornell University student.

Tompkins County, N.Y., District Attorney Benjamin Bucko, whose jurisdiction includes the Cornell campus, said Thursday that he didn't think he would be able to use the testimony because it was part of the psychiatric defense in Ross' trial in Bridgeport Superior Court.

Ross, a 1981 Cornell graduate and former insurance salesman from Griswold, was convicted June 5 of murdering four teen-age girls. On June 26, he became the first person condemned to die in Connecticut's electric chair since the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the death penalty in 1976.

During Ross' trial, a psychiatrist hired by the defense disclosed that during one of many interviews, Ross had told him of two New York slayings.

"Without a confession at this time I feel that I do not have a case, although, you know, he did admit to the psychologists and psychiatrists that he was involved in the death," Bucko said in an interview with Norwich radio station WICH-AM.

The body of Dzung Tu was found in a ravine near the university in 1981 and no cause of death was determined. Bucko said.

Bucko said he tried to see Ross in Connecticut in 1985 when he first learned that Ross and Ms. Tu attended the same agricultural class, but Ross' attorney refused to allow the visit.

New York state police investigators had also sought to question Ross about the slaying of a 16-year-old girl in 1982 in Orange County, according to Sgt. Alfred Dorer, of the state police barracks in Middletown, N.Y.

Dorer said last month that as a result of the testimony in Ross' trial, state police were pursuing new leads in the unsolved murder of Paula Ferrera of Montgomery, N.Y.

She was last seen March 1, 1982, hitchhiking along Route 17K in Montgomery, Dorer said. Her body was found March 18 in woods along state Route 211, he said. She had been sexually assaulted and strangled.

Hearing best at age 10

For most normal children, hearing is most acute at about age 10. It takes about 30 to 40 years before any noticeable change occurs. Higher-pitched sounds fade first.

Accident hurts state senator

GLASTONBURY — State Sen. Anthony Truglia was in critical but stable condition Friday after sustaining injuries in an automobile accident.

Glastonbury police officer Kevin Martin said Truglia was driving a passenger car on Route 3 eastbound just before the Glastonbury Main Street exit ramp when his car collided with a platform truck loaded with cinder blocks.

Witnesses say Truglia's car was struck broadside by the truck owned by Cromwell Concrete. Steven Scarmella, the driver of the truck, was not hurt in the 11 a.m. accident, Martin said.

Truglia and his passenger, Elmer Koczanski, were taken to Hartford Hospital where Truglia was admitted and underwent surgery, Martin said.

Truglia is a state senator from Stamford.

Teamster's sentencing postponed

HARTFORD — The sentencing of the head of a Teamsters local in New Haven on racketeering and embezzlement charges was postponed from Friday to July 24, a federal court worker said.

Vincent "Chick" Pisano, who heads Local 443, faces a maximum of 35 years on racketeering and embezzlement charges. He was to be sentenced today by U.S. District Judge Peter C. Dorsey.

Pisano, one of the 15 people indicted last year on charges of draining about $130,000 from union health insurance funds, originally was scheduled to be sentenced on June 26.

Nude-bar ruling upsets mayor

BRIDGEPORT — Mayor Thomas Buccì said Friday that he is outraged by a federal judge's ruling that police raids on a local bar featuring nude female dancers were made in "bad faith."

"He's sending a bad signal to the community, saying that the city of Bridgeport can be wide open to violating obscenity laws," Buccì said.

U.S. District Court Judge Warren W. Eginton decision exonerated Dennis Capozziello of Fairfield, whose bar, Tuesday's Den, was raided four times this year and closed twice after his demolition company won an earlier law suit against the city.

Eginton's ruling against the Board of Police Commissioners, Buccì and State's Attorney Donald Brown stops the prosecution of charges resulting from the raids and orders the defendants "to cease any and all bad-faith enforcement efforts."

Sand holes out in New Fairfield

NEW FAIRFIELD — Parks and Recreation Director Kevin Walsh has directed lifeguards to discourage overzealous young construction workers from digging big trenches along the town beach at Candlewood Lake.

Walsh said some of the holes dug this summer by beachgoers measure 15 feet long and three feet wide.

Fearing someone will fall and sue the town, Walsh asked lifeguards to ask children to limit the sizes of the holes and to fill them before they leave. "The lifeguards are watching to see what gets out of hand," Walsh said. "They are left up to their own discretion."

No one hurt in W. Hartford heist

WEST HARTFORD — A man fled on foot Friday after robbing more than $5,000 from a savings bank, police said.

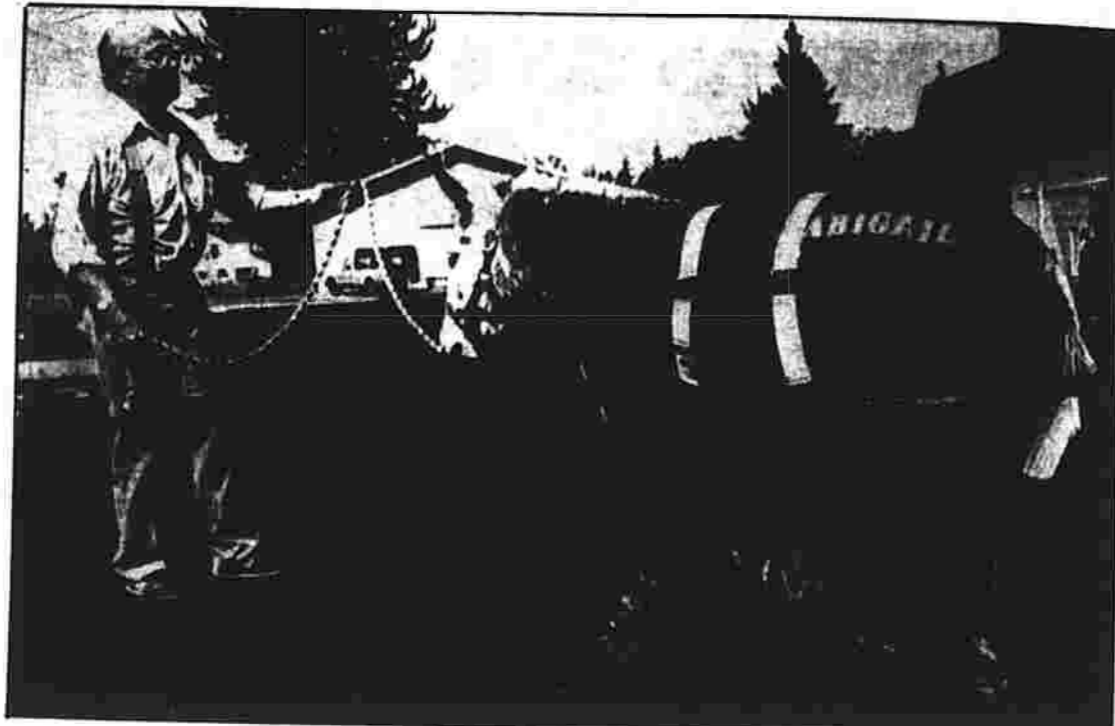

Nobody was hurt in the robbery, which took place at about 9:30 a.m. at the Society for Savings bank, police said.

The suspect's photograph was taken by a bank camera and a $1,000 reward was offered by the Connecticut Bank Reward Association for his arrest and indictment, police said.

VP to dedicate Yale accelerator

NEW HAVEN — Vice President George Bush is expected next month to help dedicate Yale University's new $11 million nuclear accelerator, described as one of the three largest of its kind in the world.

Bush, along with William R. Graham, science advisor to President Reagan, and William F. Martin, deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Energy, will speak during the Aug. 7 ceremony marking the debut of the 100-foot-long instrument.

Bank robber finally strikes out after 3 failed tries at a heist

MIAMI (AP) — A commuting Connecticut bank robber was finally nabbed after trying three times to rob the same tellers at the same bank while wearing the same clothes and using the same BB gun, the FBI said.

Michael Charles Patterson, 36, of East Hartford, Conn., pleaded innocent Friday to two charges of bank robbery, and threatening the lives of two tellers. He was ordered held on $75,000 bond.

The FBI said that three times Patterson flew to Miami to hold up the Eagle National Bank, returning for the third attempt even though red-dye packs exploded in his shoulder bag after the second robbery.

According to an affidavit by FBI

Special Agent Ronald G. Risner, Patterson waived his rights after his arrest July 7 and spoke to agents about the robberies.

He first entered the bank March 16 wearing a baseball cap and sunglasses and carrying a shoulder bag, and handed manilla envelopes to tellers Lizeth Torres and Innocente Constant. Inside were notes demanding money and threatening them, the affidavit said.

He also showed one teller a dark handgun in his waistband, and fled with $8,523.

On May 19, he entered the bank, again wearing sunglasses, a baseball cap and a shoulder bag. He was recognized by the tellers, to whom he handed the same note, the FBI said.

They gave him $3,554, but slipped in two red-dye packs.

"After the robber left the bank on foot, the two dye packs exploded in the shoulder bag, causing red dye and smoke to spew from the shoulder bag," said the affidavit. A witness saw the smoke and watched Patterson enter an apartment complex, using a plastic card to go through the security gate.

The FBI went to the complex and found that Patterson had lived there previously and had never surrendered his card.

Once again, on July 7, Patterson showed up outside the bank wearing sunglasses, a baseball cap and carrying a shoulder bag, the FBI said.

Jury finds lawmaker innocent

NEW HAVEN (AP) — State Rep. William Dyson, D-New Haven, and a self-employed bookseller were acquitted by a jury on Friday of disorderly conduct charges lodged against them last fall in an anti-apartheid demonstration at Yale University.

The six-person jury deliberated for a little over an hour before the verdict was announced in New Haven Superior Court.

Supporters of Dyson and co-defendant John Hannan broke into cheers, said Dyson's lawyer, Elizabeth Curry.

"It was an implicit recognition of the fact that the defendants were engaged in the exercise of political rights when they were protesting and that the police had clearly acted prematurely in arresting them," Curry said.

Police arrested Dyson, 47, and Hannan, 28, on Sept. 22, 1986, along with 19 others during a sit-in inside and outside of a Yale University building. The protesters were demonstrating against Yale's estimated $350 million in stocks in companies that do business in South Africa.

The other 19 performed 10 hours of community service in exchange for having the charges dropped, but Dyson and Hannan insisted on a trial, which was postponed several times before jury selection started on Monday. Superior Court Judge Howard F. Zoarski presided.

"I believed that no group of jurors would find us guilty and that was proven out," said Dyson, who is also a teacher. His district encompasses most of the Yale campus.

"I'm very pleased with the verdict," said Hannan. "I felt all along that jury ... would find us innocent and now I'm waiting for Yale to do justice to the people of South Africa."

Curry said the jury rejected Assistant State Attorney's David P. Gold's contention that the two were blocking police from removing protesters who were inside the building.

A pit bull terrier, named Pete, looks out from behind a fence at the Monroe County Humane Society in Rochester, N.Y. The dog is to be destroyed Monday, following the Thursday death of a 29-year-old Rochester man who was injured two weeks ago by the dog.

Man dies of pit bull injury

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A 29-year-old man attacked by a pit bull terrier two weeks ago has died, and officials said they would consider classifying the death a homicide.

Monroe County Medical Examiner Nicholas Forbes said Robert Barbarita of Rochester died Thursday from a blood clot that traveled from his leg to his lung. He called the clot "a complication from the dog bites to both legs." Forbes said he wants to review police and medical files before deciding whether to classify the death a homicide.

He was to meet Monday with Mary Ann Hawco, second assistant district attorney, and police investigators to discuss the case, Ms. Hawco said Friday.

Barbarita was watching fireworks with his father and brother in a park on July 4 when the dog bit him. It bit two other people moments earlier.

The dog ripped a 15-inch gash in Barbarita's leg, requiring a skin graft, police said.

The dog's owner, Mark Parise, 27, of Rochester, turned himself in to police Thursday night and was charged with second-degree criminal contempt after he failed to meet police and comply with a July 13 court order to keep the dog confined.

The dog was at the Monroe County Humane Society on Friday. Authorities said if the dog is positively identified, it will be destroyed Monday.

FAA investigates new Delta mishap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating an incident in which a Delta Air Lines pilot took off from Boston's Logan Airport without proper clearance as another jetliner was about to cross the runway, officials said Friday.

The incident involving Delta Flight 670, bound from Boston to Montreal, occurred late Thursday night. It was the sixth unusual incident involving a Delta flight since June 18.

It came a day after the FAA announced a special surveillance of Delta because of a rash of unusual pilot mistakes in recent weeks.

FAA officials, responding to an inquiry about the incident, said the Delta Boeing 727 had been cleared onto the runway, but had not received the go-ahead from the control tower to take off.

"He was not cleared to take off," said Fred Farrar, an FAA spokesman, who added the agency was investigating the incident.

Farrar said the air traffic control tower noticed the plane taking off and directed a USAir jetliner that had just landed on another runway not to proceed across the runway being used by the Delta plane. The USAir pilot stopped just short of the runway.

Delta spokesman Jim Ewing said the incident involved "a possible misunderstanding of directions" from the air traffic control tower and that the airline believes the pilot did not act improperly.

"We're confident he had the authority to take the airplane off," Ewing said in a telephone interview from the airline's Atlanta headquarters.

Smeal pledges NOW will play role in 1988

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The women's movement is determined to play a significant role in the 1988 presidential election and will push for a woman candidate, the president of the National Organization for Women said Friday as the group opened its annual convention.

"We are determined to fight from the top of the ticket to the bottom of the ticket to change the direction of our country to be much more concerned with human services and modern problems," said Eleanor Smeal, who is stepping down as head of the nation's largest women's group.

"You will hear from us," said Smeal before greeting 2,500 convention delegates.

The three-day convention, the 21st national meeting of the 150,000-member group, will choose Smeal's successor and push for the Equal Rights Amendment in the city where the Constitution was born 200 years ago.

Delegates gave Smeal a thunderous ovation before and after her keynote speech, chanting "ERA! ERA! ERA!"

"The fight goes on and on and on and on until justice is ours," said Smeal, who predicted passage of the amendment by 1992.

She also proclaimed the women's movement alive and well.

"Every once in a while, they ask us, 'Are we dead?'" Smeal said. "And we say, 'Feminism lives.'"

Molly Yard, NOW's national political director who is in her mid-70s, has been picked by Smeal to be her successor. Her challenger is Noreen Connell, 40, president of New York NOW who is supported by Betty Friedan, NOW's first president.

After nominations from the floor Friday, the two candidates scheduled campaign sessions with regional caucuses. Voting is Saturday, and the winner will be announced Sunday.

ELEANOR SMEAL ... stepping down

"I don't believe there's a difference in goals, but there's a difference in emphasis," Smeal said.

Smeal was NOW president from 1977 to 1982, then won her job back in 1985 by advocating that NOW go "back to the streets" instead of taking a low-key approach.

Smeal, who lobbied Walter Mondale to choose Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate in 1984, has encouraged the Democratic presidential candidacy of Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo.

Schroeder, who has formed an exploratory committee and is raising money for a possible presidential bid, will address the convention Saturday.

Forecasters blamed for typhoon

SEOUL, South Korea — Weather forecasters drew fire for mischarting the path of Typhoon Thelma. The storm left 91 people known dead, 244 missing and 117 injured, the government said Saturday.

Thelma, packing 80 mph winds, sent sheets of heavy rain over South Korea late Wednesday and early Thursday, capsizing boats, causing rivers to burst their banks and flood villages. Tons of dirt and rocks buried people in their homes.

Issuing the latest casualty figures Saturday morning, the Home Ministry estimated that Thelma wrought $150 million in damage and left about 15,000 people homeless.

The influential Seoul newspaper Donga Ilbo said Friday that the weather forecast left people ill-prepared to take precautions and contributed to the high toll in casualties and property damage.

Court prevents Vatican arrests

ROME — Italy's highest court Friday threw out arrest warrants for U.S.-born Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus and two other Vatican bank officials charged in the nation's worst post-World War II banking scandal.

"I am satisfied that the court allowed the appeal proposed by the defense," said Adolfo Gatti, the lawyer who represented the Vatican in a five-month legal battle that strained relations between the Roman Catholic Church and the Italian government.

"My faith in Italian justice has been restored," Marcinkus said in a telephone interview from his Vatican office.

Italian authorities had charged Marcinkus, president of the bank, and Luigi Mennini and Pellegrino De Strobel, two lay officials, with being accessories to fraudulent bankruptcy in the 1982 collapse of Banco Ambrosiano.

Nixon had leak-tracking system

WASHINGTON — In the year before Watergate, Richard M. Nixon became so obsessed with leaks from his administration that a system was set up to track down leakers and punish them, according to documents released for the first time on Friday.

Nixon's chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman, agreed that in severe cases "direct means, FBI, polygraphs, etc." be employed.

Fred Malek, a White House aide, was put in charge of the "leaks project" by Haldeman in September 1971 after Nixon complained about leaks, the documents show.

Democrats look at candidates

CLEVELAND — Democratic presidential candidates got their first chance Friday to woo a nationwide gathering of party officials, and attacked the Reagan administration using material gleaned from the Iran-Contra hearings.

Rep. Richard Gephardt accused the White House of being run by "a junta of colonels," while former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt said the congressional investigating committees "may yet discover a link between Ronald Reagan and the presidency."

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Colorado Rep. Patricia Schroeder also mentioned the Iran-Contra affair in their speeches to the party chairmen and vice chairmen from all 50 states and six territories.

Train derails, 1,000 flee

ERWIN, Tenn. — Twenty-five train cars derailed Friday and a tanker containing a potentially explosive chemical burned for several hours, forcing the evacuation of 1,000 people, officials said.

Firefighters extinguished the blaze in a leaking tanker carrying methyl alcohol and burning debris around the derailment site near here early Friday evening. At least three other chemical tankers also derailed but did not burn.

Capt. Roger Lloyd of the Erwin Emergency Rescue Squad said the leak was plugged shortly after the fire was extinguished and that authorities began allowing about evacuees to return about 7:15 p.m. Among the evacuees were 300 to 400 workers at a nearby plant.

Two firefighters suffering minor injuries were treated and released at Unicoi County Memorial Hospital, said Jim McMackin, hospital administrator.

Rain and snow dampen forest fires in 6 states

Rain and snow Friday helped fire crews put a damper on blazes that charred more than 48,000 acres of range and forest in seven Western states, while officials said a blaze that killed two loggers was started by a short circuit in a battery.

"Things are looking pretty good," said U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Gail Tow in Oregon. "The humidity is up and the temperature is down."

A weather system out of the Pacific Ocean brought chilly, damp weather across the Northwest. Fires continued to burn Friday in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana, but were doused in Utah and New Mexico.

In southwestern Oregon, officials said a drizzle slowed the Bland Mountain fire, which scorched more than 8,600 acres, killed two lumberjacks and destroyed at least eight homes. About 800 firefighters, aided by 10 engines and six bulldozers, struggled to contain the blaze.

"It's very difficult work, with all steep country, heavy fuels and spot fires to contend with," said Jim Fisher, a spokesman for the state Department of Forestry. "The weather has been very favorable to this point. The fire has not threatened any major spread, nor has it threatened any new structures of any kind."

The blaze was caused by a short in a battery on a piece of farm equipment, said Lynn Anderson-Farr, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Forestry in Roseburg.

Smoke from the fires spread through the valleys of Oregon and California, reducing visibility at some airports for a time. The National Weather Service issued a warning to motorists and those who suffer health problems.

Fire supervisors established air-traffic restrictions over one Montana blaze, asking pilots not approach lower than 15,000 feet or within a five-mile radius of the flames. "We've already got thrill-seekers and camera people wanting to come in," said a Flathead National Forest spokeswoman.

The weather was a pleasant surprise to firefighting officials, but they said it was not time to relax.

Death call fake, says embassy

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Telephone callers claiming to speak for Shiite Muslim kidnappers said Friday that the pro-Iranian militants will kill two French diplomat-hostages because France broke relations with Iran.

But French Embassy spokesman Gerard Bovineau said he doubted the calls were authentic because the callers did not say they would provide a picture of a captive. "It has been decided to carry out immediately the death sentence against Marcel Carton and Marcel Fontaine," calls to two Western news agency offices in Moslem west Beirut said. The callers claimed to speak for Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War.

Carton, 63, protocol officer at the French Embassy, and Fontaine, 46, the vice consul, were abducted separately in west Beirut on March 22, 1985.

It was not clear whether the same person called both agencies. The statements, in classical Arabic, were almost identical.

The calls said the telephone was used because Syrian secret servicemen had been placed around Western news agency offices in west Beirut.

Islamic Jihad, which had claimed it abducted Carton and Fontaine, has said its statements should not be considered authentic unless they are accompanied by a photograph of a hostage.

Islamic Jihad is believed made up of Shiite extremists loyal to Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The midafternoon calls came hours after the government in Paris announced France was severing diplomatic ties with Iran. Iran had refused to allow French police to question an Iranian Embassy employee about bombings that killed 11 people in Paris last September.

Islamic Jihad had not issued any communique since Syria deployed 7,500 troops in west Beirut on Feb. 22 to quell fighting among militias.

Its last previous statement on Nov. 15, 1986, warned the United States that it would free no American hostages.

That statement was accompanied by a picture of American hostage Terry A. Anderson, 39, the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

Anderson, abducted March 16, 1985, has been held the longest among the 25 foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon. In addition, Anglican Church hostage-negotiator Terry Waite also vanished in Beirut last January.

Friday's statements began with an identical verse of the Koran, Islam's holy book. They accused French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac of deciding to cut off relations with Iran to further his presidential prospects.

"After the provocative and escalating step taken by America's agent and presidential aspirant, Chirac, against the Islamic Republic, thinking he will win over French public opinion in the coming elections, we inform him the following," the statement said.

U.S./World in Brief

France alone in breaking ties

BONN, West Germany — Britain has reduced diplomatic ties with Iran to a minimum in the past year, while Italy and West Germany have suffered retaliation for television spoofs of Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

But no other Western European country appears ready to follow the lead of France, which broke diplomatic relations with Iran on Friday over a long-simmering dispute.

European nations, with the exception of Britain, avoided immediate comment on the French move, saying it was a matter between France and Iran. Britain said it sympathized with France.

Ford recalls van-ambulances

WASHINGTON — Ford Motor Co. has recalled as many as 22,000 ambulances to correct safety-related fuel problems that have caused at least two dozen fires and 15 injuries, company officials said Friday.

Ford officials insisted the problems were the result of modifications made in adapting the chassis of the Ford E-350 vans for emergency vehicle use after they were sold, but said it was recalling them anyway to satisfy customers.

Auto safety advocates, attorneys general in at least a half dozen states, and groups representing ambulance users had demanded a recall because of several hundred incidents in which fuel spurted from ambulance gas tanks.

Vietnam resumes departure setup

WASHINGTON — After 18 months of inaction that sparked a new and dangerous surge of refugees fleeing in rickety boats, Vietnam has agreed to resume the Orderly Departure Program for citizens seeking to emigrate to America, the State Department said Friday.

The Vietnamese decision lifts a January 1986 suspension of permission for U.S. officials to go to Vietnam and interview applicants who want to fly to the United States by way of other Southeast Asian countries.

Interviews are now expected to resume "in the not-too-distant future," said Deborah Cavin, a State Department spokeswoman.

Notziger faces six counts

WASHINGTON — Former White House political director Lyn Notziger was charged with violating federal ethics laws in a six-count indictment, unsealed Friday, which revealed he had written then-White House counselor Edwin Meese III on behalf of scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp.

The indictment accuses Notziger of violating conflict-of-interest provisions of the 1978 Ethics in Government Act in connection with lobbying for Wedtech, Fairchild Industries, which is a Chantilly, Va.-based defense contractor, and the National Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, an AFL-CIO maritime union.

Notziger said in a statement that he is innocent "of any deliberate violation of the law" and added: "If the independent counsel wants my scalp, he will have to get it the old-fashioned way."

Thatcher praises Reagan

WASHINGTON — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher declared her confidence Friday in President Reagan despite his difficulties with the Iran-contra affair, telling Americans "we need... leadership and your president is uniquely able to give it."

Thatcher, after two hours of talks with Reagan, warned that the United States must not become so preoccupied with its problems that it fails to aggressively pursue vital issues such as arms control or a Middle East peace.

"It's a time of unprecedented opportunity if we are wise and skillful enough to grasp it," Thatcher declared in her departure statement.

"Now more than ever we need American leadership and your president is uniquely able to give it and will give it. We must not let slip the tremendous gains of the last few years," she advised.

Handler John Turman works for Tadd Services, a pest-control company. The dog determines through smell and sound where the insects are located and then pesticides are used to combat the bugs.

Dogs sniff out beetles in Old North Church

BOSTON (AP) — Two specially trained beagles spent Friday sniffing for the wood-loving beetles that are chomping on the Old North Church, where a patriot hung the legendary lanterns that sent Paul Revere on his midnight ride.

Powder post beetles have infested parts of the church's north aisle and basement, and church officials fear the bugs will cause serious damage if they are not exterminated.

"The church in no way is structurally weakened, but preservation of the Old North Church is important," said exterminator Stephen Keris. "We just can't let it go away."

Robert Gollidge, vicar of the Episcopal church also known as Christ Church of Boston, said extermination will prevent further deterioration of the 264-year-old facility visited by one-half million people each year.

The dogs, Stewart I and Stewart II, sniffed, scratched, whined and

Homeless are target for cops

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Police targeted transient shacks, and shelters for demolition and promised an aggressive campaign of arrests Friday following a report that linked the homeless to two-thirds of the city's homicides.

Deputy Police Chief Bob Lutz said officers will look at shelters over the weekend and get the Public Works Department "to bring out a front-end loader and haul that junk away."

"When they break the law, when they try to take money from other people, when they urinate in public and are involved in disorderly conduct, there are no constitutional protections for that conduct and we will aggressively move against it," Lutz said.

The crackdown comes after the department's homicide unit earlier this week released figures showing that two-thirds of the suspects and half the victims in the city's 1987 homicides were drifters or new arrivals.

At least eight transients have been slain since last July. Others are suspects in what police say is a growing number of violent assaults committed by transients.

Lutz said transients will be arrested for minor infractions such as drinking in public. Previously they would have gotten off with a warning, he said.

The campaign will allow officials to keep track of law breakers and encourage some troublemakers to leave the city, Lutz said.

Jane Eastham, program supervisor at a Catholic Charities social services agency for the homeless in Minneapolis, said the crackdown won't address the real transient problem.

She said the real issues concern severe homelessness and joblessness. An estimated 500 transients live under the city's bridges and near railroad tracks, according to police figures.

Ma. Eastham said she was worried that the homeless would suffer because they lacked the funds for proper legal representation.

But Lutz said officers will only be enforcing existing laws.

The deputy chief said he, too, was concerned "that the rights of every citizen, rich and poor, are guaranteed and guarded, but when they cross that line and break the law, they're up for grabs."

The demolition of transient shelters has occurred on a regular basis in at least one other city. In Los Angeles, police and sanitation crews conduct regular sweeps of the downtown area, removing temporary shelters from sidewalks and vestibules.

Transients have been ordered, at pain of arrest, to go to a tent city housing about 1,000 homeless people in the downtown area or to a hotel for the night.

Highlights of the week

By The Associated Press

- The U.S. trade deficit widened in May to $14.4 billion from $13.3 in April as Americans bucked rising prices and imported a record level of foreign goods.
- Business inventories soared 0.7 percent in May to $670.4 billion, the biggest rise in more than three years.
- During June, production at the nation's factories, mines and utilities edged up a slight 0.2 percent; retail spending edged up only 0.4 percent; and the nation's factories, mines and utilities operated at 79.7 percent of capacity.
- Sales of domestic cars fell 12.4 percent in early July while light truck sales improved 2 percent over the same period a year ago.
- Jim Walter Corp., a building materials and natural resources concern, said it would consider a $2.63 billion, $50-a-share cash buyout offer from Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co.
- Marine Midland Banks Inc. stock soared in response to a $677 million offer from Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corp. to buy the 48 percent of Marine it doesn't already own.
- British Airways will buy its smaller rival, British Caledonian Group, for about $382 million in a move aimed at blunting increased foreign competition.
- The Denny's Inc. restaurant chain agreed to be acquired by TW Services Inc. for $218 million in cash and the assumption of $625 million of Denny's debt.
- Plenum Publishing offered to acquire the Arthur D. Little Inc. consulting firm for $50 a share, or about $128 million.
- Australian investor Robert Holmes a Court raised his stake in Texaco Inc. and disclosed he wants to buy more than 10 percent of the company's stock.
- A number of major banks reported steep second-quarter losses as a result of their decision to increase loan-loss reserves to cover troubled Third World loans.
- International Business Machines Corp.'s profit fell 9.8 percent in the April-June period, the fifth consecutive quarterly decline.
- American Telephone & Telegraph Co. announced a 41.2 percent increase in its second-quarter profit, boosted by one-time charges.
- Japan vowed to toughen its export-licensing policies to prevent any repeat of a Toshiba Machine Corp. subsidiary's sale of sensitive technology to the Soviets.
- A federal bankruptcy judge denied requests to split LTV Corp.'s profitable aerospace unit from its Chapter 11 proceedings and extended LTV's deadline for filing a reorganization plan.
- Pay 'N Pak Stores Inc. said about 96.7 percent of its common stock was tendered under a $212.5 million management-led buyout offer.
- Business starts fell 6.1 percent in May from year-ago levels to 23,528 as the nation's economy slowed and large corporations moved to cut costs.
- There were 927 mergers and acquisitions in the first half of 1987, down from 1,527 in 1986, but the dollar value of the deals rose by 18 percent to $91.3 billion.

The Dow breaks 2,500

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's bull market lumbered passed a new milestone Friday as the Dow Jones Industrial average closed above 2,500 for the first time.

The average of 30 big-name stocks — one of the market's most closely watched barometers — climbed 13.07 to 2,510.04. Several other market measures also hit new highs.

Analysts said the market's blue-chip stocks benefitted from strong earnings reports. Stocks of companies involved in takeovers also moved up strongly.

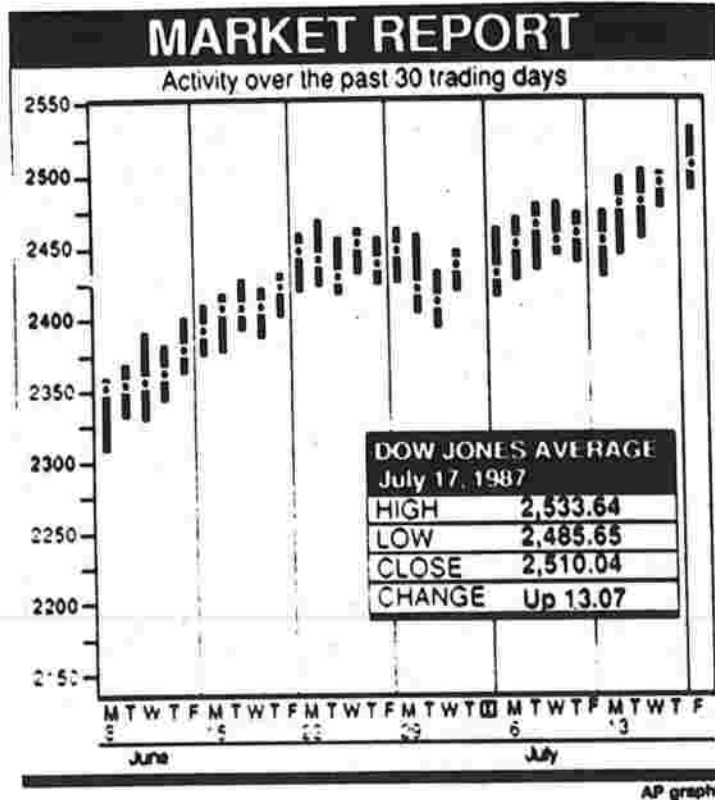

Trading on the New York Stock Exchange was active, with 209.98 million shares changing hands.

The Dow Jones industrials flirted with the 2,500 mark Wednesday and Thursday, only to close below it both times.

But the average moved swiftly past the mark Friday morning, as the dollar strengthened in foreign exchange markets and bond prices increased.

Also helping was the government's report on housing starts, which registered their fourth decline in as many months. The news, although bearish for the housing industry, was a signal to traders that inflation should remain cool despite the recent runup of oil prices.

Among the issues that paced the Wall Street advance were Kenner Parker, which received a takeover bid from New World Pictures, and Coca-Cola, which announced plans to buy back as many as 40 million of its common shares over the next three years.

Philip Morris and RJR Nabisco, which reported strong second-quarter earnings Thursday, also moved up.

Treasury halts sales of bonds until Congress hikes debt limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury announced Friday that sales of savings bonds will be suspended Saturday until further notice because Congress has failed to pass legislation increasing the national debt limit.

The $2.32 trillion debt ceiling was expiring at midnight Friday, reverting to the "permanent" level of $2.111 trillion. Because that lower level already has been exceeded, the government is beyond its credit limit and cannot issue any new securities.

The House has approved and sent to the Senate a new debt ceiling of $2.565 trillion.

The Senate was in session Friday but was not expected to act on the debt limit until next week, when lawmakers plan to attach to the bill an amendment to strengthen the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law.

In addition to halting savings bond sales, the Treasury said the federal government was suspending the sale of its special securities for state and local governments.

The debt problem was likely to force cancellation of Monday's scheduled auction of $13.2 billion in Treasury bills, although that has not been officially announced.

Through the Federal Reserve, the government will be notifying 44,000 outlets, mostly banks, to stop selling savings bonds.

"Without new legislation to increase the debt limit, the government lacks authority to issue new debt obligations," the Treasury announcement said.

Treasury Secretary James Baker has warned Congress against delaying action much longer because the government can be pushed into default unless its credit limit is increased by month's end.

The U.S. government has never defaulted, and the repercussions on the nation's position in international finance would be catastrophic, he said.

The additional debt is needed because the government spends far more than it takes in. The Treasury can pay the bills only through the end of the month by using the $31 billion on hand, officials say.

Congress almost certainly will pass a new debt ceiling, if only a temporary one, before a default occurs.

The permanent legislation — enough new debt to last through fiscal 1988 — has been held up in the Senate as lawmakers craft their plan to revive the Gramm-Rudman law.

Gramm-Rudman, enacted in 1985, sets out annual deficit targets which get smaller each year until a balanced budget is reached in fiscal 1991. But the Supreme Court threw out the automatic spending cuts that were to enforce the targets, and as a result Congress and the White House have failed to obey the mandate.

Some Democratic and Republican senators are drafting a new automatic-cutback scheme in an attempt to satisfy the court's objections and put new teeth into the law. They would also ease the deficit-reduction program, delaying a balanced budget until fiscal 1992.

The Senate is not expected to begin debate on the debt bill until Tuesday evening or Wednesday, and it could take several days to complete. Since the House did not consider a Gramm-Rudman amendment, the two chambers would have to work out their differences before the bill could go to the president.

Lawmakers are already predicting those negotiations will extend into next month, requiring enactment of a stopgap debt bill to stave off default.

Stephen Meyerhardt, spokesman for the savings bond program, said the suspension of sales causes confusion but bond buyers won't be penalized.

Business in Brief

Lourie now assistant treasurer

HARTFORD — Leah J. Lourie of the adjustment department of the Connecticut Bank and Trust Co. has been elected assistant treasurer.

As information systems manager, Lourie is responsible for support adjustment research through innovated systems and the maintenance of on-line adjustment systems, micrographic equipment, record retention and microfilm processing. She attends Manchester Community College and has completed various American Institute of Banking courses. Lourie and her husband live in Manchester.

Auto dealers elect officers

HARTFORD — The new officers of the Greater Hartford Automobile Dealers Association were presented at their May annual meeting. Elected to office were C Bowie Thomas, Thomas Cadillac, president; Mark Mitchell, Mitchell of Simsbury, vice president; and Brad Hoffman, Hoffman Enterprises, secretary-treasurer.

Elected for this first time to the GHADA board of governors was John Gengras, Gengras Motorcars. Re-elected for three-year terms were Diane Lipman, Lipman AMC-Jeep-Renault and Charles Long, Crest Pontiac-Cadillac-Mazda. Continuing to serve on the board are Art Shaller, Shaller Oldsmobile-Honda-Subaru; James Sinclair, Sinclair Oldsmobile; Rachel Grody, Grody Chevrolet; Samuel Chorches, Chorches Motors; and Kenneth Crowley, The Crowley Group.

Hall becomes securities rep

Randall R. Hall, FIC, of Manchester, has become a registered representative for Lutheran Brotherhood Securities Corp.

As a registered representative, Hall is now qualified to sell the five mutual funds distributed by LBSC. LBSC is a subsidiary of Lutheran Brotherhood, a fraternal insurance society. Both corporations are headquartered in Minneapolis.

Also a Lutheran Brotherhood district representative, Hall is associated with the Bernard Johnson Agency headquartered in Manchester.

Finnegan receives certificate

Timothy R. Finnegan, of 160 Briarwood Drive, has been awarded a certificate by the Insurance Institute of America for successfully completing the Institute's Introduction to Property and Liability Insurance course and national examination. Finnegan is employed by the Hanover Insurance Co.'s Meriden branch as a commercial property underwriter.

The Insurance Institute of America is a non-profit educational organization serving the property and liability insurance industry. It offers a number of educational courses leading to certificates and designations in a wide range of insurance-related specialties.

Lummus gets $300 million order

STAMFORD — Combustion Engineering Inc. said its Lummus Crest Inc. subsidiary was awarded a $300 million contract by Applied Energy Services Inc. to construct a coal-fired cogeneration plant and carbon dioxide production facility.

The project, planned for Le Flore County, Okla., is scheduled to be completed in December 1990.

Combustion Engineering said Wednesday that the plant will be one of the largest in the United States and will be the largest power plant in the world to utilize boilers with new circulating fluidized bed technology. Those boilers can burn a variety of fuels economically in an environmentally-controlled manner, the company said.

The power plant and the carbon dioxide production facility will be owned by Applied Energy Services.

Make sure you know the risks if you're 'too old' to take them

QUESTION: My husband will retire next March at age 65. Our combined Social Security benefits will be approximately $1,015 per month. We have a principal residence worth $120,000, a summer home worth $300,000 and $100,000 in bank certificates of deposits.

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

I am planning to put a portion — just a portion, certainly not the whole amount — of the money now in CDs in a no-load income mutual fund. But I am being discouraged by family members, who say we are "too old" to take risks and who say we should leave the cash in CDs.

My husband says it's up to me. What are your comments?

ANSWER: First off, make certain you are aware there is risk in that type of mutual fund — one holding bonds and preferred stocks. The fund collects interest from the bonds and dividends from the stocks. Then, after deducting its operating expenses, the fund passes that money along to shareholders as dividends.

Well-managed income mutual funds provide higher dividend yields than the interest you are collecting from CDs.

But — and this is a big BUT — the value of the fund's shares can rise or fall. The share value goes up when interest rates fall and goes down when interest rates rise.

Many investors in income mutual funds were shocked to see the values of the shares they own tumble 15 percent or more just this past spring. Nonetheless, investments in most such funds have risen in value over the years.

By putting some of your cash hoard into an income mutual fund now, you might be getting in near the top of the interest rate cycle and close to the bottom in income mutual fund share prices. However, there is no assurance of that.

You undoubtedly would welcome the extra income from an income mutual fund's dividends. In your shoes, I'd be inclined to put a "portion" of that CD money into an income mutual fund. How big a chunk? As your husband says, that's "up to you." I'd keep it at less than $25,000.

QUESTION: Please repeat your warning against mutual fund contractual plans. The outfit that sheared me is appearing at meetings of elderly people in the mobile home park in which I live. The people in these parks are easy prey to fast-talking mutual fund peddlers.

ANSWER: OK! Contractual plans — methods of buying mutual fund shares over periods as long as 15 years — have front-end loads as high as 50 percent. That means that half the money an investor pays in the first year can go out in commission charges. They are absolutely the worst way to invest in mutual funds, for the simple reason that the shares purchased during the first year of the plan have to double in value before the investor even breaks even.

Contractual plans are bad enough for young and middle-aged people. They are unconscionable for older folks, who might not live to see the plans completed and are almost certain to take financial beatings.

Anyone who would try to peddle mutual fund contractual plans to the elderly should be horse-whipped.

QUESTION: You wrote, "For 1987, the entire amount of a (mutual fund) capital gains distribution is taxable at ordinary income rates, but no higher than 28 percent."

It is my understanding, after numerous calls to the Internal Revenue Service, that only the profit on the sale of stock or other capital asset is taxable as a capital gain. The profit, of course, is the difference between the cost and the higher sale price.

How can all of a capital gains distribution be taxable?

ANSWER: Because a capital gains distribution represents a mutual fund's profits from sales.

In the normal course of its operations, a mutual fund sells some of the securities it had held as investments. The net profit from those sales is passed on to fund shareholders as a capital gains distribution. The fund doesn't pay tax on the profits it realized from those portfolio transactions. Fund shareholders pay the tax when they receive the profits as capital gains distribution.

Smart house needs smart owner

By John Cunniff
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — You probably haven't asked for it, but the smart house is coming, and early indications are that it will operate perfectly if it has a smart owner.

In truth, it is being designed to overcome even the absence of smarts in the owner, but a question arises concerning who might feel comfortable living in a genius house they do not understand.

As envisioned, the smart house will receive telephoned instructions, such as to turn on the oven, alert the homeowner to smoke or fire problems, and turn off lights when a person leaves the room. It will protect kids too.

The smart house is being developed by the National Association of Home Builders and its associate NAHB Foundation. Now in the laboratory stage, it might be demonstrated in late 1989 and made commercially available soon after.

Asked why it is being developed, a spokesman for the foundation observed that so many patchwork schemes for automating houses were being developed that they thought it best to begin from scratch and rethink the entire matter.

If it turns out as planned, a chip in each smart-house device and appliance will identify what is being plugged into any outlet, as well as the specific amount of current needed for its operation.

Only after this identification is made can the device receive current. Thus, a baby sticking a finger into a smart-house outlet would not be harmed because its finger is not an authorized device.

The smart house looks after its occupants, no matter how absent-minded. It can, for example, be instructed not to provide power to an electric guitar plugged into a bathroom outlet.

Even if such an instruction weren't given, a teen-ager trying to play that guitar in the shower would be protected, because any deviation from the power level the system has been instructed to receive will trip the circuit.

The smart house seeks elegance also. Stereo speakers can be plugged into any outlet in the house without running additional wiring. A stereo receiver in the living room can provide music in the bedroom or even the basement too.

Any smart-house device can operate in any outlet, which means you can unplug the stereo speaker and plug in a telephone and immediately make a call.

Through a video display it can also alert you to an open refrigerator door, an oven unintentionally left on or a front door left unlocked.

All smart-house devices can be given instructions from a control panel placed anywhere in the house. Thus, a panel next to your bed can be instructed to wake you up with music.

New study of '84 tests encouraging

We have become accustomed to reading about tests that indicate our education system has gone amiss in one respect or another, shortchanging our young people by leaving them uneducated or miseducated and without the skills they need to make it.

So it is a welcome change to learn that a new analysis of 1984 test results comes up with an encouraging conclusion.

The newest analysis indicates that older students master the grammar, spelling and punctuation of the English language.

Ironically, the same test also gave rise to two earlier studies that concluded younger students have trouble organizing their ideas and putting them into writing.

The new report, released by the National Assessment of Education Progress, concludes that "Older students are more proficient than younger ones in their use of written language at both the sentence and the word levels."

That seems to mean that as students spend more time in school, they learn how to write better, which is exactly what is supposed to happen.

Written language, as the populists are always ready to point out, is a whole series of more or less artificial conventions superimposed on spoken language, which is more natural, as are the feet on which we superimpose shoes so we can survive modern pavement.

Until a person masters those conventions — the tools of written language — he cannot use written language as a means of expression and communication adequate for modern culture.

To put in another way, writing does not come naturally. It has to be learned. The new analysis seems to show that schools are teaching it.

Game ordinance wouldn't be fair

To the Editor:

The Manchester Board of Directors should vote against the "amusement center" ordinance on July 20.

I know that the neighbors are opposed to the location, but then neighbors are always opposed to anything new in their neighborhood.

I know that some ministers such as the Rev. Curtis are opposed to the games. I believe that the Rev. Curtis is free to believe as he does.

What I am opposed to is their trying to stop me from doing what I want to do.

If I want to pay the admission fee to go inside the "Laserquest" building and play the laser games; what is wrong with that? If I don't like the games I won't go back again.

I remember from high school history that when the Puritans ran Manchester, they did not allow any games at all.

What bothers me is that without knowing what the games really were, the Rev. Curtis and the other ministers got everybody all excited and all worked up to stop them.

A friend told me his minister spoke against the games months ago and asked everyone to sign the petitions as they left church. He signed the petition because from what the minister said it sounded pretty bad — now that he knows more about it, it sounds fun.

I wonder how many other people who signed the petition really knew what they were opposing? But I don't think that numbers really matter here.

What difference does it make whether one person, 10 people or ten thousand sign a petition if what the petition asks for is wrong? If ten thousand people signed a petition asking the Board of Directors to pass a law banning Congregational churches in the town because they didn't like what was said in Congregational churches, would that be legal?

I don't think so and for the same reasons, I don't think the "Laserquest" ordinance is fair, either.

Proud of North, not his methods

To the Editor:

I am proud of Lt. Col. North. I am proud of what he did.

However, I am having some problems with the way that it was done.

Did it have to be done this way? In this world of duplicity, wherein every diplomatic agreement has a separate secondary meaning no one can be trusted to do a secret assignment and only that and nothing more, or keep a secret; in this competitive era wherein many seem to be trying to take advantage of someone else:

Can democracy as we know it, survive? Without covert acts?

Can it survive with covert acts? History alone will write the final opinion of that question which is troubling millions of people, both within this country and outside it.

Blood donations can save millions

To The Editor:

Much has been said recently about the safety of the blood supply. Certainly there are risks with blood transfusions, just as there are risks associated with everything in life.

But imagine for a moment that there was no blood supply, that the fear of spreading disease caused blood to be no longer available to the sick and injured. What would happen to these people? What would have happened to two-year-old Marissa Emple of West Haven, who is alive today thanks to a liver transplant and 27 pints of donated blood?

Remember that AIDS is a public health issue. The disease is primarily spread by sexual relations and sharing of needles. It is no longer a blood transfusion issue, thanks to stringent donor screening and AIDS antibody testing. In this report on AIDS, U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop says "the blood supply for transfusion is now safer than it has ever been with regard to AIDS."

Millions of lives are saved by blood transfusions every year. Blood cannot be manufactured. Only through healthy, volunteer donors — like the 4 percent of Connecticut's population that regularly donates — will blood be there when it's needed. Please give blood this summer.

Thieves busily loot Labor Department

WASHINGTON — The Labor Department's investigators have been busy lately, sniffing out fraud and corruption in a wide variety of compensation programs intended to help the needy and deserving. The culprits are individuals who make false or exaggerated claims, bureaucrats who line their own pockets at the taxpayers' expense, and lawyers and other professionals who encourage cheating to rake in lucrative fees.

Here are some of the more outrageous examples of chiseling that were compiled by our reporter Karen Talley from investigative reports:

- Twenty-seven employees of an Indiana resort allegedly conspired to milk Uncle Sam of $150,000 by filing false unemployment claims.

- A Labor Department claims interviewer in North Carolina was indicted for reactivating dormant accounts and diverting $65,000 in unemployment benefits before he was caught.

- A claims examiner in Washington, D.C., was accused of accepting money and heroin to expedite claims. The same employee was also charged as part of a ring that netted $17,000 in bogus unemployment checks by using phony names on jobless claims.

- An accountant got $16,000 from the government by creating fake corporations in New York and New Jersey and claiming the firms laid her off, investigators reported.

Jack Anderson

- The son of a coal miner who had black lung disease and died continued to make claims on the special federal fund set up for the victims of the disease. The son received more than $21,000 by claiming his father was still alive.

- A West Virginia woman collected $38,427 in black lung compensation after claiming falsely that her ex-husband had the disease. She filed the claim without his knowledge; he had never even been a coal miner.

- Lawyers take advantage of black lung claimants by charging exorbitant — and unnecessary — fees to make claims for victims. A West Virginia attorney has been ordered to repay $63,764 in fees he charged to 16 black lung victims.

- A pharmacist was prescribing generic drugs for his customers and then charging the Labor Department for more expensive, name-brand prescriptions. He was caught, fined $4,000, put on probation for two years and ordered to perform 200 hours of community service. He had been chosen "Pharmacist of the Year" by his professional colleagues.

- A Defense Department employee was awarded disability compensation in 1971, and opened a highly profitable business a year later. But for more than 10 years he claimed that he was unemployed and had no income, according to investigators. He collected more than $102,000 before he was discovered.

- A former postal clerk was just about to collect a $60,450 lump-sum compensation for a work-related injury when investigators discovered that he wasn't disabled; he was gainfully self-employed. Confronted with the evidence, he withdrew his disability claim.

FBI soft on bankers?

Criminal conduct by the nation's bank managers and insiders has become an epidemic, especially in California and Texas. There have been 34 savings and loan failures in California in the last 36 months; the federal insurance fund for S&Ls has lost $4 billion on that state's collapses alone.

But according to congressional investigators, the FBI and the Justice Department are coddling the white-collar crooks whose reckless investments, extravagant expenditures and outright frauds are to blame for many of the banking industry's problems.

There hasn't been a single criminal prosecution of those believed responsible for the California collapses. One California banking supervisor, according to congressional sources, had to make 16 telephone calls to the FBI before G-men showed up to look into his suspicions of gross violations at one savings and loan.

Attorney General Edwin Meese ordered U.S. attorneys last February to accelerate prosecutions of crooked bankers, but sources say such cases are still assigned a low priority.

Inflation warnings

Treasury economists are worrying about the old pre-Reagan bugbear: inflation. If the annual inflation rate reaches 5 percent, they're afraid it could spiral out of control in short order. Their reasoning is that anything over 5 percent would begin to be felt by consumers and would lead to higher wage demands. That in turn would eat into corporate profits, double-digit Carter-era inflation would be just around the corner. Furthermore, these Cassandras claim, 5 percent inflation would worry foreign investors to the point where they'd pull their money out of the United States, weakening the dollar drastically.

Proletarian prep

Mikhail Gorbachev's attempt to "reform" the Soviet economy by decentralizing production planning and controls isn't working out too well — possibly because it comes 60 or 70 years too late. The workers and lower-level managers aren't ready for decision making after decades of rigid Moscow control. A cartoon in a Soviet trade union paper illustrated this weakness neatly: It showed a factory manager on the phone with Moscow. "Of course I'll show initiative," he says "What would you like me to do?"

Borking the U.S. Constitution

By Chuck Stone

Trying to prevent Robert Heron Bork's confirmation as Supreme Court associate justice is like standing on top of a garbage dump ringed by cesspools and fumigating the air with perfume spray.

The intent is eminently noble. The need is imperative. The tool is miserably ineffective.

Opponents just aren't going to be able to block the confirmation of this prepossessing legal genius, despite his impassioned affinity for an era that confined blacks to lynching trees, women to pots and pans, abortions to back alleys, gays to non-personhood and atheists to jail.

Of course, Bork's ultra-conservatism threatens judicial balance, but presidents have always factored in ideology in their choice of Supreme Court appointments.

The difference is that Democratic presidents have been more evenhanded.

A dramatic case in point is Democratic Franklin D. Roosevelt's promotion to chief justice of conservative Republican Harlan F. Stone, who had been appointed by conservative Republican Calvin Coolidge.

Still, as is true of Mussolini's stewardship, which at least made the trains run on time, Bork isn't all bad.

His reactionary views on abortion may be reprehensible, but at least they are constitutionally consonant with the Supreme Court's states' rights position on pornography.

On freedom of the press, he was part of a 6-5 Court of Appeals majority decision in December 1984 that upheld two syndicated columnists who had written a damaging opinion piece about a university professor.

"In the past few years," wrote Bork, "a remarkable upsurge in libel actions, accompanied by a startling inflation of damage awards, has threatened a self-censorship which can as effectively inhibit debate and criticism as would overt government regulation."

Such enlightened Homes-Brandeis sensitivity is a fleeting part of what he characterizes as an "intellectual evolution."

The question is: evolution toward what?

Bork has not entirely abandoned a 91-year-old racially divisive Supreme Court decision: "The objective of the (14th) Amendment was undoubtedly to enforce the absolute equality of the two races before the law, but in the nature of things it could not have been intended to abolish distinctions based upon color, or to enforce, as distinguished from political equality, a commingling of the two races ..." (Plessy v Ferguson, 1896.)

God save the queen! Segregation, forever!

If nothing else, we can hail this nappy-haired, scholarly jurist for enriching our lexicon of eponymous words (which already includes such examples as Elizabethan, Jeffersonian, McCarthyism and Quisling).

"Stone's Dictionary of Eponymous Neologisms" lists the following:

Bork, n. — a reactionary scholar; a brilliant but repulsive person (He screwed things up. What a Bork!)

Borkism, n. — an intractably conservative mindset; a movement to turn back the clock of progress; an attempt to reverse judicial precedent.

Bork, vt. — to set back (Reagan's Supreme Court appointment borks blacks and women.)

Unhappily, on the Constitution's 200th anniversary, that document has been borked by Reagan's appointment.

Chuck Stone is a syndicated columnist.

Church of Christ

The film "Cut Your Line When It's Tangled" will be shown at 7 p.m. on Wednesday at the Manchester Church of Christ. It is one of five films featuring the humor and practical advice of Dr. Paul Faulkner, a counselor and researcher.

Fellowship leader resigns

MADISON, Wis. (AP) The president of InterVarsity Christian Fellowship, Gordon MacDonald, has resigned because of involvement in an "adulterous relationship in late 1984 and early 1985," says the organization's board chairman, James Kay. The board elected Thomas Dunkerton, a retired New York advertising man, as new president of the organization that works among college students.

China has 'as much to offer'

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Christians of China "have as much to offer us as we have to offer them," says the Rev. R. Keith Parks, president of the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board, after a two-week visit there. He says Chinese Christians have something many believers in the West lack — a spiritual depth born of hardship. They "have learned something about the Christian experiences because of what they've been through that most of us have not learned," he says.

TV preachers' audiences slipping

By George W. Cornell
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The United States faces a "moral and ethical crisis of the first dimension," says pollster George Gallup Jr., and it demands a resurgence of faith. By the indications, TV evangelists aren't improving the situation.

Instead, a survey finds confidence in them has plunged sharply. Most Americans consider the electronic preachers dishonest, insincere, without any special relationship to God, and especially untrustworthy with money.

Among the big-name figures, only Billy Graham still holds predominant esteem. Meanwhile, the Rev. Ben Armstrong, executive director of the National Religious Broadcasters, said religious broadcasting has suffered its "worst public disaster" from the sex scandal involving former PTL star Jim Bakker.

"The credibility crisis for religious broadcasting is real and wishful thinking will not make it simply go away," Armstrong editorializes in the NRB's journal.

"The general public is now demanding greater accountability for their donations," he says, adding that his organization is developing new standards for implementation Aug. 1. "We must set our own house in order."

Gallup, whose surveys keeps extensive tab on the nation's spiritual health, told a recent Minnesota Prayer Breakfast of

Soup kitchen calm and cool

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
Conference Director

Due to our wonderful volunteers, the soup kitchen has been calm and cool while delicious and nutritious hot meals have been prepared for the hungry people of Manchester. Our heartfelt thanks to our volunteer coordinators Emily Miller, Barbara Phillips and Lucille Simon.

Volunteers are needed on Thursdays and Fridays between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. to make sandwiches and juices and to serve the meal. The soup kitchen is open each Monday through Friday in the ground-floor kitchen of Center Congregational Church. Hot meals are served daily between 11 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. to an average of 40 people.

Bag suppers are made available to persons of special need. Since there are no cooking facilities at the Samaritan Shelter, 40 sandwiches are prepared each day for evening distribution at the shelter.

Meals are coordinated by a part-time coordinator and 40 volunteers who assist with food preparation, food serving, client sign-in, set up and cleaning and general supervision. Volunteers typically work one day per week for four hours.

Two work service program personnel from Manchester Memorial Hospital have been assigned to Shepherd's Place and assist with daily cleanup and food sorting and storage.

Funding for Shepherd's Place operations is provided by the state Department of Human Resources, the Federal Emergency Management Administration, churches, individuals, businesses and organizations in the Manchester area. Several agencies help us stretch dollars.

MACC News

MACC IS A MEMBER of the Greater Hartford Foodshare Commission and can purchase foodstuffs available at Foodshare at a cost of 8 cents a pound. Government surplus commodities (cheese, dry milk, flour, rice and honey) are also made available, for the cost of storage overhead, through the state Bureau of Purchases in Middletown.

Local organizations, businesses and individuals supplement the dollar grants and donations by in-kind contributions. Farmers participating in the MACC-sponsored downtown Farmers' Market donate extra vegetables throughout the season as do Manchester backyard gardeners. Local stores donate a steady and welcome supply of bread and rolls.

Original plans for the building at 466 Main Street projected completion of the ground floor feeding area by December of 1986. Complications have delayed construction; the new renovation schedule should see Shepherd's Place incorporated into the Samaritan Shelter by the end of 1987.

Our gratitude to Center Congregational Church for continuing to provide space and equipment in support of Shepherd's Place.

MANY THANKS to all individuals, businesses, organizations and churches that have generously donated several essential items for the Shepherd's Place in June: Emily Miller, MaryLou Tonski, Mary Kuznickas, Mr. and Mrs. William Ryder, Lily Krob, Harriet Potts, Richard Shour, Catherine Byron, Mary Leslie, Florence Parker, Arthur Chaper, Ed Bushnell, Royal Ice Cream, Helen's Bakery, Boy Scout Troop 25, K of C Verplanck PTA (lovely lady brought boxes and boxes of pancake mix, syrup and even sausage). St. Maurice Church of Bolton and Temple Beth Shalom.

The shelter received many in-kind donations in June and to these friends we also say thank you: Charles Plese, Winifred Worsham, Al Bourreit, Mary Burke, Gloria Weiss, Gail Slover, BettyLou Nordeen, Mary Juleson, The Whole Donut, Manchester Grange 31, St. James Church, Concordia Lutheran Church, Church of the Assumption, North Methodist Church and St. Bridget Church.

AN INCORRECT NAME was listed in last week's column for the leader of the Interfaith Day Camp opening exercises. The name should have been Maresa Slater.

Contributions to the Shelter/Soup Kitchen Renovation Fund or Human Needs Fund can be mailed to MACC, Box 773, Manchester, CT 06040.

Donations to MACC have been received from the Junior High Youth Fellowship of Vernon and Bolton United Methodist Churches, Christian Involvement Committee of St. James Church, Richard and Lisa Ploirn, Presbyterian Church, Manchester Telephone Employee Community Service Fund and Loraine Smith.

Most people would admit that they commit sins, but few will admit to being "sinners." Yet sinning is what makes one a "sinner," and without divine assistance he is doomed to remain such — with all the consequences thereof.

The Bible clearly establishes the universality of sin (Romans 1:18-3:20). The wages of sin is death (Romans 6:23). The very purpose of the Law of Moses was to make men painfully aware of his sinful state (Romans 7:13).

Thankfully, God provided a righteousness or innocence apart from law-keeping, seeing that the Mosaic Law demonstrated man's incapacity to become righteous in this way. Only by God's grace may any become so. This grace is equally intended for all people (Titus 2:11). But as with any gift, God's righteousness must be accepted — and that by the terms Jesus announced (Mark 16:15-16).

Falwell, who was not included in the earlier survey, got a "favorable" rating this time only from 38 percent of respondents.

Check your pulse

NEW YORK (AP) — You can check your aerobic fitness level by taking your resting (lying down) pulse, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau. The best time is right after you wake up and before you consume any stimulants or experience any stress. A fit heart pumps more blood per beat, so it uses less beats to supply the resting body. Count your pulse for 30 seconds and double the result. Under 50 is very fit. Over 80 and you better see your doctor and start exercising.

About Town

Legion elects officers

ROCKY HILL — Julie Demeo of West Hartford was elected governor of the American Legion Auxiliary's Laurel Girls State during the annual session at Quinnipiac College in Hamden.

Senators elected to represent Connecticut at the National Girls State Program in Washington, D.C. later this month are Eileen Prendagast of Newington and Elizabeth Petersen of Shelton.

Irish festival planned

GLASTONBURY — The Greater Hartford Irish Festival is planned for July 24 to 26. Crowning of the Miss Irish Festival will be held at the Irish American Home, 312 Commerce St., July 24 at 8 p.m. Applications are now available at the Irish American Home or by calling Mary Canny at 688-2436.

Single parents meet Tuesday

VERNON — Parents Without Partners will meet on Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Talcottville Congregational Church on Main Street, Talcottville. For more information, call 675-7651 or 646-8643.

John Sebastian performs

GLASTONBURY — John Sebastian, lead singer of the 1960s' folk-rock group the Lovin' Spoonful, will perform in a free outdoor concert at Hubbard Green July 22 at 7 p.m.

Sebastian is a singer, guitarist and arranger who has been performing as a solo artist since the group disbanded in the early '70s.

The concert is sponsored by the Glastonbury Chamber of Commerce and the Parks & Recreation Department. Funding is provided by Pequot Spring Water Co., Connecticut Bank & Trust Co., Flanagan Brothers Inc., the Glastonbury Exchange Club and the Glastonbury Fine Arts Commission.

If it rains, the concert will be held at Glastonbury High School. For more information, call the chamber at 659-3587.

Marine trade show slated

CLINTON — The Connecticut Marine Trades Association will hold its second annual exhibit of more than 300 vessels at Cedar Island Marina from July 24 to 26.

Admission is $4 for adults and 99 cents for children 7 to 12. Children under 7 are admitted free. Show hours are noon to 7 p.m. on July 24, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on July 25, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on July 26.

Cedar Island Marina is located off Exit 63 from I-95. For more information, call 529-7827.

GOP officers elected

At a recent annual luncheon of the Manchester Republican Women's Club, Edith Muse was elected president.

Other officers elected were: Donna Mercier, vice president; Beatrice Bagley, treasurer; Linda Gray, recording secretary; and Judy Kargl, corresponding secretary.

The following committee chairmen were named: Johanna Gremmo, cheer; Jean Kocsis and Mary Fletcher, hospitality; Betty Thibeau, legislative; Elsie Swenson and Annabelle Dodge, membership; Everis Haugh, newsletter; Marion Taggart and Ellen Burns, program; Annabelle Dodge, publicity; Emily Bostick, telephone; Patricia Cotton and Mary Willhide, ways and means.

Dorothy Hoey was named member-at-large. Anyone wishing to join the club should call 646-5255 or 643-1616. The club's annual fashion show is scheduled for Oct. 21.

MCC offers workshop

A new workshop, "The Gourmet's and Gourmand's New York," is being offered Aug. 1 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at Manchester Community College.

Dan Feldman, a native New Yorker and food expert, will provide inside information on shopping at the best ethnic food markets and dining at unique area restaurants.

The registration fee is $10 per person or $17 for two. For more information call the MCC Continuing Education office at 647-8342.

Society raises income limits for medical courtesy cards

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Jeannette Cove
Senior Center Director

The Connecticut State Medical Society has increased the income limits for eligibility to receive a medical courtesy card.

You can now qualify if you are single and earn no more than $19,950. For a couple, the income limit is $24,000. This program ensures that Medicare-eligible seniors will have assignments accepted for medical services.

The center should have new applications available in a week. For more information about the medical courtesy card for seniors, call 1-800-843-4854, toll-free.

The senior center has two volunteers working with the summer lunch program — Helen Wittkofske and Mary Nixon. We appreciate their efforts. The lunch program operates every Wednesday, Thursday and Friday starting at 11:45. Picnics are held each Thursday. No reservations are required for any summer lunches. In August, our Thursday picnics will be held in the evening, with servings beginning at 5 p.m.

The senior center will be closed the last two weeks in August for sprucing up and repairs. We will reopen Tuesday, Sept. 1. Volunteers are being sought to help with painting. If you're interested, call Joe at the center.

OUR TRIP SCHEDULE is as follows:

Aug. 3 — Harkness Memorial State Park — $3.

Aug. 14 — Ingleside Mall — $3.

Aug. 18 — Newport — $32.50, includes transportation, lunch (chicken or scrod), tour and cruise on Narragansett Bay. Call Senior Travel of Connecticut at 875-0538.

The story behind the story

By Josie

Mickey Rourke

Lisa Bonet

Q. Could you please settle an argument? Did Mickey Rourke and Lisa Bonet really have sexual intercourse during their love scenes in "Angel Heart" or was it just great acting by the two? Rembert Erwin, Waterbury, Conn.

A. Both claim it was just great acting but it may have stirred up something else because, as various crew members noted, the two did disappear together for awhile after those scenes were shot. The studio also carefully pointed out that Lisa is over 18.

Q. William Petersen is my favorite actor after seeing him in "To Live and Die in L.A." Where is he from, what's he been in and what will he be in next? D.V.T., Linwood, N.J.

A. He's from Chicago, where he's active in the theatrical scene as co-founder of The Remains Theater. Unless you happened to have seen some shows in Chicago or at the Stratford, Ontario, Festival you probably haven't seen him in anything.

He was spotted at Stratford playing Stanley Kowalski in a production of "A Streetcar Named Desire" and flown in to read for "To Live and Die's" director William Friedkin. After reading two pages of the script aloud, he had the part, his movie debut. He followed that with "Manhunter," the recently released "Amazing Grace and Chuck," and HBO's "Long Gone," a baseball story that takes advantage of his athletic skills. Currently, he's finishing up a shoot in the Soviet Union on a medieval sci-fi adventure called "Hard to Be a God."

Anything you'd like to know about prominent personalities? Write to Josie, King Features Syndicate, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Q. I always like the actor Michael Ontkean but I haven't seen him lately. Can you tell me a bit about him personally and what he's been up to? John Simmins, Fredericton, N.B., Canada

A. He's 37, from Vancouver, the son of actors Muriel and Leonard Ontkean, who quickly brought him and his sister into the family trade. When he was 9, the family moved to Toronto to be closer to TV work, and he regularly began appearing in Canadian Broadcasting Company productions.

He also developed a passion for hockey during his teens and at 18, went off to the University of New Hampshire on a hockey scholarship. He was good enough to be drafted by several teams and played for awhile in the Toronto Maple Leafs farm system but he decided instead to return to his roots and become an actor. He moved to Hollywood, auditioned for fellow Canadian Norman Jewison, who was casting the movie production of "Fiddler on the Roof," didn't get the part but did get introductions to other producers, courtesy of Jewison.

The film roles that resulted were highly forgettable, but the introduction to TV producer Aaron Spelling paid off handsomely when he was cast in Spelling's series "The Rookies." It was his big break, but two years later he quit the show, claiming the grind of production and the mindlessness of the plots were getting to him. For the next two years he wrote poetry until he was rescued by director George Roy Hill and cast in his hockey film "Slap Shot."

That led to "Willie and Phil," "Voices," the controversial "Making Love," HBO's "The Blood of Others," CBS' "Kids Don't Tell" and a movie with Kristy McNichol "Just the Way You Are." Currently, he's in "The All Nighter," and has two movies due for release, "Maid to Order" and "Street Justice."

E.G. Marshall

A. "Eeg," as his friends call him (he once claimed the initials stood for Edda Gunnar, then immediately retracted the statement: now he doesn't tell anyone what they stand for), is 72, from Owatonna, Minn., the son of a telephone company worker and his wife, both of Norwegian heritage. As a teen-ager, he considered going into the clergy, then reconsidered, due to what he called his eccentric personality, and ran off with a touring Shakespeare troupe instead.

Within a couple of years, he was in New York working in radio and in 1942 he made his Broadway debut in a play called "Jason" portraying a 72-year-old man. A number of prestigious stage roles followed in, among other things, "The Iceman Cometh" (a part he got through the personal intervention of playwright Eugene O'Neill) and the American premiere of "Waiting for Godot." He has continued to work in theaters in the years since, on Broadway last in "The Gin Game" a couple of years back, and at the Spoleto Festival in Charleston, S.C., in May.

He made his movie debut in 1945 in "The House on 92nd Street," acted in the live TV dramas of the '50s and has worked steadily in those media over the years — in a wide variety of roles. Besides his lawyer character of "The Defenders," which aired from 1961-1965, and his doctor character in another series "The Bold Ones" which aired from 1969-1973 (he won Emmys for both), he's played everything from a landlord whose brain is infested with roaches in "Creepshow," Diane Keaton's father in "Interiors," the president in "Superman," the patriarch Joseph Kennedy in the miniseries "Kennedy" and a senator in "Billy Jack Goes to Washington." Currently, he's doing some real-life political work, preparing a series of Constitution specials for ABC and specials on the Supreme Court for PBS.

He has five children from two marriages and lives in Bedford, north of New York City, with his wife, Judy.

Q. We just happened to see Lynda Day George and thought she looked heavier than she used to. Has she put on weight? What is she currently doing? Alma H., Homer, N.Y.

A. Her manager's response is "I just saw her last week and she looked the way she always has to me," but if she looked heavier to you, I would believe that. She's currently preparing for her marriage to a Los Angeles businessman, and doing a bit of episodic TV.

Cover Story

Burt Reynolds: to hell and back

By Jane Ardmore

They seem perfectly melded, beautiful together, standing at the door of the Holmby Hills house to welcome me, their arms encircling each others' waists. Loni Anderson, as always, is fresh and radiant. "I've no idea what tomorrow will bring but this is the most wonderful time of my life and Burt is a major part of that wonderful," she recently told me. And Reynolds, whom I haven't seen since he fought his way back from wrenching illness, is looking so well, strong, fit, black eyes flashing, up from 140 to 185 pounds, from what he considered "wimp" to a guy who can hoist 250 pounds of iron.

En route to the den, we exchange greetings, then Anderson leaves us to our interview and Reynolds watches after her with such pleasure, pride, love and a hint of possessiveness.

"Wouldn't you like to be married?" I ask, and he laughs. "I'd like to be, sure," he says. "Loni and I have been together almost five years now and it's been terrific. So good I'm almost afraid to do anything that could change or screw it up."

He continues, "I don't know how I'd have lived without her these last three years. She was so tremendous — supportive and strong. The last three years she's been with me to hell and back and she has proven not only loyal and staunch, she's also been tough, and I mean that as a compliment."

"She was there for me. And I wasn't exactly a great romance, you understand. I was too sick. When you are as sick as I was, you have a lot to think about. Career used to be the most important thing in my world. I'm a workaholic, you know that. But in sickness, you come to realize career isn't the most important thing. Love becomes most important. Your family also becomes more meaningful than ever. All things become meaningful. Just being able to stand up without losing balance, just being able to eat without overwhelming nausea, being able to chew, to swallow."

"I've never told anybody the details of what was wrong with me, but I'm going to tell you, because, first you never used the word that I've been clobbered with, the word that stands for death in our world today, the word the media hung on me, I suppose, because I lost so much weight maybe I did look like I was dying. And, second, because I obviously have recovered and have proved it by turning in some strenuous performances back-to-back in "Heat," "Malone," "Rent-a-Cop" and now filming and directing "Ruby Jean and Joe."

"You already know that what I had was not AIDS, the rumor of which almost ruined my chances of returning to films. Who is going to hire someone they think terminally ill? Can't you imagine them saying, 'Let's give him $3 million five and see if he makes it 'til Thursday?'"

"I had Temporo-Mandibular Joint Disorder. On the very first day of filming 'City Heat' with my old friend Clint Eastwood, I got hit on the jaw. It was an accident, of course. A stunt guy was to swing at me with a break-away chair. He picked up the wrong chair, swung and broke my jaw in three places. That was the beginning of unrelenting agony. The break moved my jaw about an inch to the right and I didn't do anything immediately about it, which is one of the reasons I had all the problems."

"You have to realize that over the years I've probably broken a hundred bones doing stunts. No big deal. I just thought 'I'll get it fixed when the picture's over because I certainly can't get my jaw wired during filming.' In those four weeks I didn't eat at all." He was barely able to take liquids. Once the picture was finished, he started making the rounds of doctors, every doctor he could find — orthopedic surgeons, dentists, TMJ specialists, ear specialists. He shakes his head.

"There is not a lot you can do with TMJ. It's one of the best-kept secrets in this country. For two years I criss-crossed America looking for the right doctor. I saw people in waiting rooms, their mouths filled with Kleenex, their faces gray with pain. We talked, we compared notes. It is the nausea that's unendurable, the inability to stand up because your equilibrium is affected. The doctors give you pain pills. You swallow them like popcorn. You're in agony all day long, month in, month out, in my case for two years."

"Would you believe that of the people I met in doctors' offices, I later discovered four of them killed themselves because they could no longer stand it? It's like being constantly seasick. You throw up all the time. If the phone rang, I fell on the floor and covered my head with pillows. I had tubes in my ears. I'd always thought I could deal with pain but this was something else and you never knew if it would ever stop.

He's fought to overcome rumors of AIDS

"A number of orthopedists wanted to operate on me. Thank God I didn't let them. I'd met too many other people who had had surgery which did not help. And surgery is irreversible. I was sure that some day I'd find a cure."

"I wasn't frightened. I was angry, just really angry that there wasn't something to do about this condition. I am a fighter and when there is nothing to fight back at, you become angry. I knew I wasn't dying. I knew exactly what was wrong — I had a broken jaw. But I also knew the rumors. Some people thought I was mentally ill, some thought brain tumor. I was given CAT scans. But primarily, because this was at a moment when the world was in a panic about an illness as lethal as the Black Plague, the supermarket-media was having a field day with my oncoming 'demise.' That hurt."

"Ever since I've been in this business, I've been totally open with the press, discussing everything, sharing the excitement of making films and living the movie-star life. I felt the public were my friends and I was always open and talkative; but during this illness I was too miserable to talk and when a couple of hairdressers started this sordid rumor-mongering, I had gone back to work and to do so had been given the sort of major physical testing they use for astronauts in a business where they take no chances. How in the world did the press think I was being offered films if the industry thought I was dying? There's nobody that nice or kind in movie business, you know that."

"I understand fear. That wasn't what made me angry. What angered me was people loving to tell on someone. One famous producer who shall go nameless told me he'd always known I was OK, but had I heard about the famous star couple, man and wife, and how they had AIDS? He named them with relish."

He continues, "And my rumor went on and on. It may have been somehow related to the fact that the homosexual community was in dire straits and were being abandoned by a lot of people. One thing that couldn't hurt their cause would have been to have a well-known male heterosexual suddenly stricken. That in itself was a reason to keep the rumor going."

"Meanwhile, I did not think I was going to die but I did get to the point where I was losing the will to fight. I guess what scared me most was when I stopped being angry and just started giving in to pain. Loni helped me a lot with that. She's a good fighter; and at about the ultimate moment, I found the right doctor — a dentist in San Diego who started from square one — gnathology, which means going back to basics to find where your jaw should be."

"If we have to cap every tooth in your mouth to get it back into the right place, then that's the way you go," he said.

wasn't about to get into it. My friend Dinah Shore told me long ago that a lie will die if you don't respond to it... just give it a little time.

"But this lie didn't die. And I refused to debate it until I was well. It went on for two years and got to be really stupid... even after I was well again and after a year of reconstruction.

Do-it-yourself dream house can be yours

By Phyllis Zauner

Recently, high interest rates and out-of-sight real-estate prices have caused many Americans to hit the Hold button on the Great American Dream of home ownership. But a scattering of intrepid couples, outraged at new-home price stickers they can't afford, are finding a new solution: They're enrolling in schools that teach them to build their own. Sweat and muscle may yet salvage the American dream.

If this idea strikes you as somewhat less realistic than trying to levitate or to explain the workings of the universe, you'd be surprised to meet some of the folks who have done it. ● Mike Grbich, an Oakland, Calif., public-school art teacher, took a one-year leave of absence, built a $140,000 home that actually cost him $70,000. "Home prices make you feel ripped off and outraged," he said. "But it gets your adrenalin going to the point where you decide to do it yourself."

● Walt Auburn, a 29-year-old Conservation Corps coordinator, and his wife, Jill, who was working on a Ph.D. in zoology, built their first home, using a pre-designed package and ending up with a custom home with solar energy features. Says Jill, "We keep thinking we ought to build another home to take advantage of all we've learned."

● Alan Leavitt, a government official, resisted the idea of spending $125,000 to buy a well-maintained house; instead he paid $20,000 for an old, run-down house. After two years of gradual restoration, he feels tremendous satisfaction that he was able to complete the project while maintaining his full-time job. "I didn't want to spend the rest of my working life strapped to a job just to pay off a high mortgage," he says.

These amateur builders are veterans of a private, non-profit Berkeley, Calif., school, the Owner Builder Center, one of a handful of such schools around the country. One of the largest of its kind, it has set out to prove that the average homeowner is capable of pouring concrete, framing, siding, roofing and doing plumbing.

The idea is to take an unmanageable project like housebuilding and break it into segments that can be mastered. Courses at OBC are a combination of classroom instruction and on-site experience, and can even include a three-week "vacation" in California's Gold Rush country practicing skills on a house the center is building (it will later be sold to support the center).

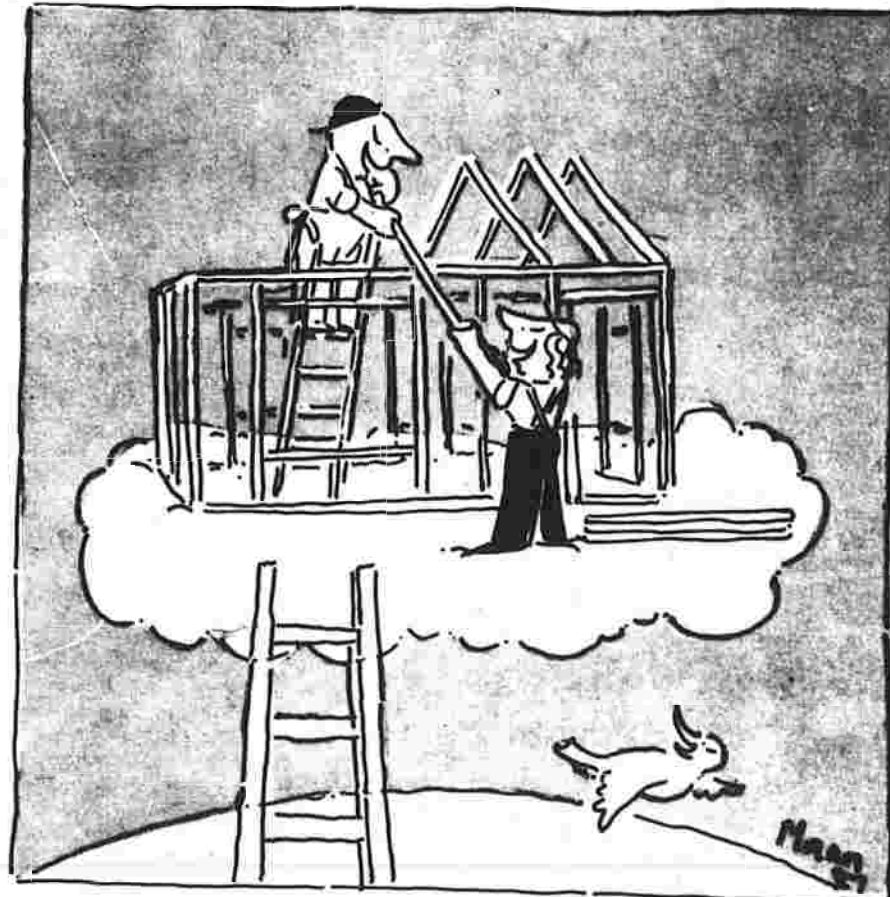

The concept is so popular that it has expanded nationally into a dozen states through offshoots organized and managed by former students — in such locations as Seattle; Houston; Miami; Boulder, Colo.; Tempe, Ariz.; Chapel Hill, N.C., and more.

Lack of experience is no deterrent; 20 percent of the students don't even know the proper way to hold a hammer.

The word "greenhorn" certainly did fit Tom and Helen Graham, an Oklahoma couple in their early 60s. "We had bought land in Hawaii to retire on," Tom said. "But with costs around $80 a square foot it looked hopeless." Then somebody told them about the OBC summer camp. "I enrolled us both, and after three weeks I felt confident enough to tackle the job."

That summer Tom and Helen Graham built a 2,350-square-foot house. Until then, neither had ever built anything. The house has four bathrooms, is built of cedar, with open beam ceilings. Cost per square foot: $34, phenomenally low in Hawaii.

The summer camp is one of the most popular Owner Builder Center concepts. For an enrollment fee of $1,500 ($2,770 for a couple), the house-dreamers get board and room and three weeks of instruction and experience. The center leases the 300-acre campus of a Quaker school that features rustic cabins, classrooms, playing fields, creeks and a lake.

Students come from all over the country, bringing along their hopes and their dreams. They start at 6:30 a.m., and after a full day of classwork or bruise-and-blister labor, they join in talks that often last until 10 at night.

But on hot days there is time for an afternoon swim in the nearby Yuba River.

About one-third of those enrolled have been women. Age range is from 18-year-olds looking to start a building career, to the mid-60s. And they represent a wide economic range.

By doing the hammering and nailing on their own, students find they can save up to 60 percent, depending on how much of the work they are willing (or have time) to tackle. Serving as your own general contractor will save an estimated 20 percent, according to OBC, even if you never touch a hammer. Doing the finishing as well will increase savings to 30 to 45 percent. Owner-builders who are ambitious enough to undertake design, actual building and finishing can save between 50 to 60 percent.

Those are impressive figures. But Robert Roskind, the North Carolina builder who founded the center, is the first to point out that housebuilding or major remodeling can be very demanding, adding up to an arduous year of hard work (longer if you only work weekends). Nevertheless, he says, the rewards go beyond the savings. He grew up in a family that looked down on manual work. "Only as an adult did I discover the joy of using my hands, making things."

Aside from the summer camp, Owner Builder Centers across the country offer evening classes, weekend seminars, and 14-session courses on every aspect of building, with hands-on experience.

Typical of many who enroll in these classes, Tom and Gay Englezos were the disenchanting veterans of countless weekend trips searching for a house they could afford. Tom is the proprietor of a hair salon, and Gay is a university administrator. They're not sure at just what point they decided to tackle building their own.

"Neither of us had ever built anything," Tom says. "But there was a spirit in that class that made feel I could do it. That's probably the most important thing I got out of it. If you think of the project as a whole, it's overwhelming. So you learn to think of housebuilding as just a series of logical steps. You deal with the two-by-four you've got in your hands. After that you go on to the next two-by-four. It was exciting to feel my confidence swelling."

Except for some casual labor to lug lumber, they did it all. Tom took on the heavy carpentry chores. Gay did the electric wiring (after taking a special course). She also did the roofing after Tom's acrophobia got the best of him — sometimes hanging 30 feet above the ground on their hillside lot. They had heard that building your own home is the stuff that breaks up marriages. But theirs survived well. No bitter battles, they say.

The Englezos' house cost around $100,000, lot included. Comparable houses in the neighborhood run $145,000 to $165,000.

But instructors at the Owner Builder Center aren't eager to sugar-coat the difficulties. They emphasize that housebuilding or remodeling is very demanding. "Building a home is not just a nice little idea," says Roskind. "It's a lot of work and planning. We want everyone to feel the inspiration and excitement of building a house. But it's absolutely necessary to judge time and expenses realistically."

Still, the success stories of those who have embarked on low-budget restoration are inspiring.

Larry McQueen and his wife, Sandy, started their first-ever restoration on an aging Victorian house on what Larry calls a no-budget budget.

They started with a simple project, removing a concrete driveway with a jackhammer and putting in a wooden deck. Next they spent an enormous amount of time melting paint off the hallway walls. "But our major project," Larry said, "was to open up the living room by tearing out a wall. We held a demolition party. We told our friends it was a great opportunity to let out their anxieties. After it was over we started examining the remaining walls and discovered, under the masonry, the original tongue-and-groove wainscoting." ■

Astrograph

July 18, 1987

In the year ahead, your social life as well as your material affairs will be caught up in a favorable trend. Both areas will provide you with fulfillment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take extra pains selecting your attire if you are stepping out today. You might meet someone you'll want to impress. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Boasting about others will have a double-edged effect today. It will help promote them, and it will make you look good in the process.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) When you enter the scene today, your charisma will buoy the spirits of everyone present. You won't do it consciously; it will just happen naturally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Even though you'll have a minor role, an arrangement you'll make with another today should work out profitably for you. It will be a commercial situation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your primary concern today will be to see that everyone you're involved with is treated fairly. You're apt to take definite measures to make sure this happens.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Set your sights high in business situations today. Keep in mind that you are in control. As long as you believe this to be true, it will be.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Sometimes when one makes a new acquaintance, it's just a fleeting experience. Today, however, you may meet someone who will become a staunch ally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If you have the urge today to do something ar-istic or decorative around the house, by all means do so. The results will be pleasing.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You can master any situation today if you keep a stiff upper lip. Your composure may falter a bit inwardly, but those around you will never know it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you see something you like when shopping today, try a little spirited bargaining. You may be able to buy it for less than the sticker price.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll have all the right words today and no one will accuse you of being glib or insincere. Your listeners will know what you say comes from the bottom of your heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't be unduly alarmed if a friend pokes a nose into your affairs today. Your pal may point out gainful avenues you have overlooked.

Sexuality

Exactly what is a French kiss?

This type of activity isn't for those who are sexual amateurs

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: What is a French kiss? When is it performed? These are probably dumb questions, but I am very bashful and don't know who else to ask.

DEAR READER: French kissing (sometimes also called soul kissing) involves one partner putting his or her tongue into the other partner's mouth.

The mouth, lips and tongue are among the several highly erogenous (sexually sensitive, capable of arousing sexual desire) areas of the body. French kissing often accompanies a change in a couple's relationship from friendship to a more emotional, intimate involvement.

Therefore, this type of kissing is usually introduced when a couple progresses from less intimate kissing to a more advanced stage, signaling existing sexual arousal or stimulating sexual arousal in the partner.

Not enough sex

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm 35, married and have an attractive wife, but we only make love about twice a week. During the last four or five years, I think that I have lacked sex drive. When I ejaculate, there is only a small amount of sperm. Also, our lovemaking only lasts for about 10 to 15 minutes, which is not enough to satisfy my wife.

I went to urologists. They told me I am OK and gave me some pills, but that's about it, and the problems are still there.

I've been taking many kinds of pills to help these problems, but with no results. My sex life is still not as active as I would like it to be. Should I try some other kind of medication?

DEAR READER: First, having marital intercourse twice a week is not an unusual frequency. This is very near the often-cited average of 2.5 times per week for married couples.

Second, the length of time you spend having intercourse is not particularly brief. Only about one-fourth of men asked this question reported intercourse lasting longer than 10 minutes; more than half reported six minutes or less.

The amount of semen ejaculated varies from one man to the next, and even from one time to the next for the same man, but is usually about one to three teaspoons. The only way to determine how many sperm are in the semen is to have a sperm count done using a microscope; sperm re not visible to the naked eye.

However, the outcome of making love should be the mutual satisfaction of both partners, to matching or bettering some statistical average. Each couple must gradually learn what frequency and duration of intercourse is most satisfying for them.

What pills did the urologists give you? Unless you were tested and found to be lacking an appropriate level of male hormones, I'm not aware of any pills that would resolve your concerns. Since they said you were OK, I'm not surprised that the pills had no effect.

What other kinds of pills have you been taking? If they are non-prescription medications that are advertised to increase sex drive or cure other assorted male sex problems, it's not surprising that they didn't work either. No pill or other substance, prescription or non-prescription, has yet been found to correct problems of sexual desire or functioning for the vast majority of men with sexual dysfunctions.

I suggest that you and your wife talk to a sex therapist or sex counselor. It is important to evaluate your feelings about your sex life with a focus on your mutual level of satisfaction. The therapist or counselor can also determine if you need further medical evaluation, or if you simply need a few meetings to learn more about what to expect with regard to sexual functioning and how to achieve sexual pleasure. Consultations with the sex therapist would also help your wife learn techniques to increase her orgasmic potentials.

So far, no luck

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 28 and have been trying to get pregnant for five years. A fertility workup found that I have Stein-Leventhal syndrome.

My doctor put me on Clomid, Parlodel and prednisone. I take my temperature every morning, but so far, no luck. Isn't there some drug to thin out the hard shell surrounding the ovary so an egg could get out and I could get pregnant? If I do get pregnant, what are my chances of having a normal baby?

DEAR READER: The various drugs you're taking are often used to treat infertility due to Stein-Leventhal syndrome (more commonly called polycystic ovarian disease, or PCO) when it coexists with other hormonal problems.

You do not say how you take these drugs, what tests you've had or what else the physician may have found. Therefore, I can only outline the complex PCO situation and briefly describe some general treatments.

In PCO, the ovaries do not release an egg every month or do not release eggs at all. The egg follicles swell and change into cysts, and the membranes around the ovaries thicken. Women with PCO have constant levels of various hormones, unlike the normally fluctuating monthly hormone patterns of other women.

PCO can be difficult to diagnose, requiring extensive blood testing for many different hormones. When high levels of male-type hormones are found, a cortisone drug can be used to test whether the source is the ovaries or adrenal glands. If abnormal levels of some other hormones are detected, different drugs are given to bring levels within the normal range. For example, taking bromocriptine (Parlodel) can block the production of excess prolactin. A progestin drug is often used to start regular shedding of the uterine lining.

These types of hormonal manipulations are often done to stabilize a woman's menstrual cycles before a pregnancy is attempted. It is not unusual to spend several months at this testing, retesting and stabilizing stage of treatment.

The first fertility drug usually tried is clomiphene (Clomid), which tricks the hypothalamus, a part of the brain, into stimulating production of higher levels of estrogen. Often a woman begins clomiphene on day four of a menstrual cycle and takes it for five days. When this drug is stopped, the high estrogen level stimulates a surge of luteinizing hormone (LH) to break the egg out of the ovarian follicle. If the LH surge is too small, a different drug (HCG) can be injected for two days. Careful monitoring by a physician is needed throughout this treatment.

Clomiphene treatment induces ovulation in approximately 75 percent to 80 percent of cases, although it may take several cycles to determine proper dosage. About 65 percent of treated women become pregnant, but many require six months or more of treatment. If clomiphene is not successful, often the next step is to try menotropine (Pergonal). This fertility drug works directly on the ovaries, is taken for five to 10 days of a monthly cycle and requires extremely careful monitoring to ensure that the ovaries are not damaged. Ultrasound monitoring is done to determine how many eggs are developing to avoid the risk of multiple pregnancies. When monitoring shows that one egg is mature, injection of yet another drug releases the egg.

As you can see, treating infertility related to PCO takes a great deal of testing, monitoring and time. Because the drugs used are extremely powerful, it is important that a pregnancy be detected quickly and the drugs stopped immediately. If this is done, the chances of having a healthy, normal baby are equal to those of women not receiving these treatments. If you are being cared for by an experienced fertility specialist, your chances of becoming pregnant without high risks are good. However, if you have not been thoroughly tested or are not being closely monitored, you should consider consulting a specialist or a fertility clinic.

Sex increases

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 38 and happily married. My husband and I have always had beautiful and fantastic sex two or three times a week, but lately our rate has increased to each night and some mornings. I thought people slowed down as they approached 40.

The other day a friend was griping to me that her husband wanted sex too often. When I said we had it every night, she said I wasn't normal and must be perverted. I didn't tell her that I also sometimes masturbate, or that my husband and I also fondle each other while watching TV, so I nearly always feel ready, or that having sex is sometimes my idea.

Is there something wrong with me? Is this unhealthy? What caused this recent increase?

DEAR READER: As long as both spouses are in general agreement about how often to have sex, when and what activities will be done, there is greater likelihood of marital happiness and a reduced likelihood that anything is "wrong," either physically or psychologically.

It is often reported that the "average" American couple has intercourse two or three times per week during their 20s and 30s and then gradually less frequently after that. However, the range of actual frequencies reported is quite large (some couples have no intercourse, while others have intercourse at least two or three times each day). Each rate is considered "normal" as long as both partners are satisfied with it, regardless of whether or not their rate is close to the statistical average.

In addition, it is not considered unusual for couples to increase their rate of intercourse later in life as they develop a better understanding of their sexual responses, achieve happiness or stability in other aspects of the marriage, or find new freedom from the demands of childbearing or careers.

A 1983 study of U.S. couples reported data that many reassure you about initiating sex as well. One important factor in couples' satisfaction with their sexual lives was when both partners initiated sexual activity equally and each had equal right to refuse to have sex. When sexual initiation and/or sexual refusal was one-sided, both partners had less sexual satisfaction. ■

Master gentle art of complaining

You can be mad as hell and don't have to take it anymore

By Frances Sheridan Goulart

Does fear grip you every time you have to register a complaint about a minor car repair or a product that doesn't work? Do you think one complaint isn't worth voicing because "it won't change anything"? Do you ramble apologetically when you do try to complain, conveying a murky idea of what you want to say?

If you answered yes to more than one of these questions, you need a quick course in clout-strengthening. Whether it's your toaster oven or your new car that's the lemon, it pays to bitch. There are people out there who are paid to see that you get what's legally yours. The trick is to find out who they are, where they are, and then to communicate with them effectively.

Trouble is, most of us don't know how to complain effectively. There's a fine art to grooving, and it doesn't involve verbal abuse or putting others down.

Understanding the difference between assertion and aggression helps. According to Malcolm E. Shaw, author of "Making It Assertively," that distinction is a crucial one. Assertive behavior expresses your wants, goals and feelings. It is straightforward, direct and non-abusive. Aggressive behavior, on the other hand, denies the rights, resources or dignity of another.

So if you're mad as hell and don't want to take it anymore, take the advice outlined here. It's cool, calm and collected. And it works.

1. To put a stop to unsolicited mail:

Obscene mail. Pick up Form 2152 at your local post office. This is an affidavit that the material you're receiving is sexually offensive to you and you want it stopped. It empowers the Postal Service to prohibit the offender from ever mailing to you again.

Other unsolicited mail. Write the Direct Mail Marketing Association, a trade group representing direct-mail companies. For no charge, it will see that your name and address are removed from the lists of all companies they represent. Their address: Direct Mail Marketing Association, Mail Preference Service, 6 East 43rd Street, New York, N.Y. 10017; telephone (212) 689-4977.

2. A seam pops in your two-day-old $75 aerobic shoes (or $500 business suit).

The Consumer's Resource

Being cool, calm and collected pays off

Handbook published by the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs recommends the following:

Confront the dealer. Request repairs, an exchange or a refund. The success rate for this tactic is 88 percent. Most companies are anxious to keep your good will.

If this strategy doesn't resolve the problem, write the manufacturer and direct your letter to the consumer complaint office, or write directly to the company's president. Explain that you tried to settle your dispute with the dealer but failed.

Remind the maker that under warranty law you have a right to a product that is fit for its intended use unless you have a contract that says otherwise. Politely demand replacement, repairs or exchange.

If this fails, contact any or all of the following groups:

The manufacturer's trade association. A list of most professional associations appears in the "Encyclopedia of Associations" (Gale Research Company) which can be found at your local library. A phone call to the library's research department may help you get the correct address without having to look it up yourself.

State and local consumer protection agencies. Check your phone book for local numbers. Your local newspaper or television station's consumer-action column.

A state consumer source. Some states have consumer hotlines that can direct you to help with policing consumer complaints and trying to help resolve them.

The Better Business Bureau. The BBB maintains a computerized file of complaints. Check your phone book for their number.

3. Your used car develops an expensive ignition problem one week after purchase.

For both new- and used-car complaints, the national automotive program of the Council of Better Business of America recommends this plan:

● Don't complain to lower personnel at the dealership where you bought the car. They have no power. Talk directly to the general manager or the owner.

● If you don't get any satisfaction, call the Better Business Bureau, which operates a dealer-consumer arbitration program on local levels across the country. Most local car dealers sign contracts with the BBB, agreeing to submit customer complaints.

If your dealer isn't a member of a BBB program, he or she may belong to AUTOCAP, another mediation program whose standards and guidelines are sponsored by the National Automobile Dealers Association in McLean, Va.

4. You're tired of the fender benders at the heavily trafficked intersection in your neighborhood and would like to see a traffic light or Stop sign installed.

The traffic safety division of your local police department or city government handles these requests. Your first step is to call and make a formal complaint. Mention the frequent accidents and close calls, the danger to children and seniors, the noise, the speeding cars and so on. Follow up your telephone call with a letter.

When your complaint is processed, the police or city traffic department will conduct a study of the street's traffic patterns: number of cars passing through at peak hours, radar surveys of actual speeds, plus a review of the street's past accident record. A good police department will then analyze the information and decide whether a light or a sign is the best way to alleviate the problem.

If these studies determine that some sort of action is appropriate, a formal report will be submitted to be approved by the town council or other local officials. Money must be budgeted to obtain and install a traffic device, so be prepared for a wait. If you feel that time is of the essence, request a Stop sign rather than a light. It's cheaper.

5. You'd like to complain about the cigarette smoke and smokers you're exposed to at your office.

Advice from Action on Smoking and Health (ASH), in Washington, D.C.:

● If you don't feel comfortable confronting smokers directly, try using signs or buttons that say "Thank you for not smoking," available from the American Heart Association.

● Organize. You're much more likely to be listened to when you're not the sole complainer. However, have a game plan worked out before you confront your supervisor. Suggest a new arrangement of desks, or a way to keep the smokers in one general area away from others.

● Use tact. Tell your co-workers who smoke how you feel by the end of the day after breathing in their smoke. Tell them how congested your sinuses get, how your head aches. Be polite, but don't be a marshmallow.

● In extreme cases, workers have brought lawsuits against employers on the following grounds: Under common law, an employer has an obligation to provide reasonable protection for employees.

And under the Handicapped Act, a person with a sensitivity to smoke is considered handicapped and therefore entitled to reasonable accommodation. If you file such a suit and win, your employer will be forced to provide a smoke-free environment satisfactory to non-puffers.

For more information, write ASH, 2013 H Street, Washington, D.C. 20006. Telephone (202) 659-4310.

6. You've been turned down for a major credit card, but you know your credit is good.

Dana Shilling, a New York lawyer and author of the guide to complaining called "Fighting Back," suggests the following strategy:

● Write the organization that refused you. Under the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, it's illegal for a credit grantor to refuse to grant credit based only on race, color, religion, nationality, sex, age or marital status. Demand to know why you were refused. You're entitled to an acceptable explanation within 30 days.

● If you aren't satisfied with the answer and still think the ECOA was violated, complain to the following agencies, depending on who the lender was:

A national bank: Contact the Officer of the Comptroller for Customer and Community Programs, Department of the Treasury, 6th Floor, L'Enfant Plaza, Washington, D.C. 20219.

A department store, a consumer finance company or any credit-card issuer that is not a bank: Contact the Federal Trade Commission, Correspondence Branch, Room 701, Washington, D.C. 20580. Or call the Public Reference Office at (202) 523-3598.

A state-chartered bank: Contact the Division of Consumer and Community Affairs, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, 20th and C Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20551. ■

Dining In

Break the potato-salad syndrome

By Philomena Corradeno

And then there's potato salad — good, familiar, almost always there at summer barbecues or parties ready to please nearly everyone. While the classic potato salad remains reliable, maybe it's time to take a look at some new and interesting variations.

This first one is a baked potato salad made with small unpeeled new red potatoes with a "mysterious" flavor. The secret is tarragon, an anise-like herb that is an essential in the French blend, fines herbs. And you are familiar with tarragon vinegar and tarragoned chicken and seafood. It has a subtle but delicious essence. During the baking the potatoes absorb the flavors of the dressing.

BAKED POTATO SALAD

- 1 cup hot water
- 2 houlion cubes, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon instant minced onion
- 1 teaspoon instant minced garlic
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 2 tablespoons white vinegar
- 2 teaspoons tarragon leaves, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 2 pounds small red potatoes, cut into quarters

Preheat oven to 350F. Combine water, bouillon, minced onion and minced garlic; let stand for 10 minutes. Add oil, vinegar, tarragon and black pepper. Place potatoes in shallow 3-quart casserole. Pour dressing over all, tossing to coat. Bake, uncovered, until potatoes are fork tender, 35 to 40 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serve warm or at room temperature on lettuce leaves, if desired.

Yield: 6 servings.

Potatoes go Oriental with soy sauce, bean sprouts and mushrooms. It's a crunchy, refreshing dish and relatively low in calories.

SHANGHAI POTATO SALAD

- 4 cups diced cooked potatoes (about 1 1/4 pounds)
  - 1 1/2 cups bean sprouts
  - 1 cup sliced mushrooms
  - 1/2 cup sliced celery
  - 1/4 cup sliced green onions
  - Soy Dressing
  - 1/2 cup chopped parsley
- In large bowl, gently toss potatoes, bean sprouts, mushrooms, celery and green onions with Soy Dressing (recipe follows). Garnish with parsley.

Chill.

Yield: 6 servings (about 206 calories per serving).

SOY DRESSING

- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon water
- 1/4 teaspoon sugar
- 1 clove garlic, minced

Whisk together all ingredients until thoroughly blended. Makes about 1/2 cup.

Pistachios garnish this salad, giving the potatoes the unique flavor found only in this little nut.

PISTACHIO POTATO SALAD

- 2 pounds small red potatoes, unpared
- boiling water
- 1/2 cup paper-thin slices (about 2 inches long) green pepper
- 1/2 cup sliced green onions
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- 1/4 cup oil
- 1/4 cup white wine vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar, optional
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 cup chopped shelled pistachios

Cook whole potatoes in 1 inch of boiling water 15 to 20 minutes or until tender; drain. Slice 1/4-inch thick while still warm. Gently stir in green pepper, green onions and parsley. Combine oil, vinegar, salt, sugar and pepper; pour over potato mixture, toss. Cover and refrigerate 3 to 4 hours. At serving time, sprinkle with pistachios.

Yield: 6 servings.

Potatoes and salmon are flavored with dill pickle and green onion and dressed with a blend of mayonnaise, sour cream, horseradish and mustard.

SALMON POTATO SALAD

- 6 medium potatoes
- 1/2 cup bottled Italian dressing
- 1 (1 1/2-ounce) can salmon*
- 1/4 cup chopped celery
- 1/4 cup chopped green onion
- 1/4 cup chopped dill pickle
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- 1/4 cup mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 1 1/2 teaspoons prepared horseradish
- 1 1/2 teaspoons prepared mustard
- 1/2 teaspoon seasoned salt
- lettuce
- 1 sliced hard-cooked egg
- paprika

Shangahi potato salad is crunchy and refreshing.

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. Drain, peel and cut into 1/2-inch cubes. Toss with Italian dressing. Cover and chill thoroughly. Drain and flake salmon. Add salmon, celery, green onion, dill pickle and chopped hard-cooked eggs to potatoes. Combine mayonnaise, sour cream, horseradish, mustard and seasoned salt. Add to salad; mix gently but thoroughly. Serve in lettuce-lined bowl or individual lettuce cups. Garnish with egg slices and sprinkle with paprika. Yield: 6 servings. *One and one-half to two cups chunked cooked salmon may be substituted.

A medley of green beans, artichoke hearts and chicken browned in olive oil give potato salad the character of a warm antipasto but is substantial enough to serve as a main dish.

BRAISED POTATO SALAD

1 pound small new potatoes,

cut in wedges
1/4 pound fresh green beans, trimmed and halved
1 (10-ounce) package frozen artichoke hearts
1 whole chicken breast, boned, skinned and cut in julienne strips
1/4 cup extra-light olive oil
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1/4 teaspoon oregano, crushed
1/2 teaspoon pepper
crisp salad greens

In 1 inch of salted boiling water, cook potatoes 2 minutes. Add green beans and artichoke hearts and cook 5 minutes longer, or until vegetables are tender. Drain. Meanwhile, in skillet brown chicken in oil. Reduce heat and cook, stirring, about 5 minutes or until chicken is cooked. Stir in drained vegetables, vinegar, oregano and pepper. Remove from heat. Serve warm on crisp greens. Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

CLASSIC POTATO SALAD

- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 pounds potatoes, cooked then peeled and cubed (about 4 cups)
- 1 cup sliced celery
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- paprika, optional

In large bowl, stir together mayonnaise, vinegar, salt and pepper. Add potatoes, celery, onion and eggs; toss to coat well. Cover; refrigerate. When ready to serve, toss again and if desired, sprinkle lightly with paprika. Yield: about 5 cups. ■

Neighborcare is a structured recreational program offering arts and crafts, sports, outdoor activities, drama, cooking, homework time and snacks. It is open to boys and girls in kindergarten through Grade 6. The program is available at four elementary schools in town: Martin, Buckley, Keeney Street and Waddell. They have morning care from 7 a.m. until the start of school and afternoon care from school dismissal time until 5:30 p.m. Nathan Hale School students are transported to Buckley School for an afternoon-only program. Neighborcare follows the school calendar, yet on most school holidays and vacations the YWCA offers all-day programming for children. The program is state-licensed. For more information call Mary Prewitt-Wood at 647-1437, weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Thoughts

It is always difficult to write this sixth in the series of "Thoughts". I don't know why — it just is. There is so much to say in some columns and in others, just a few words will do. Perhaps this is one of those times. Maybe it's time — this midway of the summer season — for us to see what we've done and need yet to do. I always make out a list of "Summer Projects", it usually includes painting one room or another, cleaning out closets, changing a room around to accommodate a better summer breeze, and truly finding some peaceful summer minutes. I can proudly say that at least two of those things have been accomplished. But what about our spiritual summer project. Have we kept up with our family devotions? Have we written that note to the shut-in, or visited at the nursing homes? Have we taken a deep breath and thought about our soul's refreshment? It's not too late. Add it to your list. Make it a priority during the summer, and all year through. Dear God, I need a bit of your strength to do all that I need to do personally, physically and spiritually — for me — and for you.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will print the enclosed piece in your column. Perhaps someone will read it and realize that people in nursing homes need company more than only once a year during holiday time. I am not in a nursing home, but one day I may be.

MRS. CHRISTIAN,
BELTSVILLE, MD.

Come visit You say that you can't do anything. Can you read? Good. Read to me. My eyes aren't what they used to be. Can you write? Good. Write a letter or a card for me. My hands are shaky. Can you sing? Good. Help me with the words and I'll sing along. Can you tell me about your job? I was a nurse once, myself. Can you listen? Wonderful. I'm starved for conversation. Can you make a sponge cake or zucchini bread or angel biscuits or fudge? They aren't on the nursing home menu, but I remember how always out — not just on Thanksgiving. I hope you will keep this and read it again in January, February, and every other month of the year. We'll still be here and our needs will be the same. AUTHOR UNKNOWN

DEAR ABBY: I need a family matter settled fast. Yesterday I went to my in-laws wearing a fairly expensive brand of perfume. I might add, I have worn it over there several times in the past. I do not overdo it. I just spray enough on to give off a nice fragrance. My father-in-law walked up to me and said, "Please do me a small favor and change your brand of perfume; I had to go outside to keep from choking." Abby, I was hurt beyond words. Should I quit wearing that brand around him, or just stay away and tell him why, if I am asked? Nobody else has ever complained about my perfume. HURT AND INSULTED

DEAR HURT: Perhaps your father-in-law has an allergy to that fragrance. It's also possible that you use more than you should. Try another brand. Don't be hurt. He may have done you a favor.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in regards to house vs. home reminded me of a poem I learned many years ago: "You rent this home?" She asked, amazed. "The place looks so contented!" "The home is mine," I proudly said. "It's just the house That's rented." JEAN TAYLOR ORANGEBURG, S.C.

There's no 'best' type of a hip replacement

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Several of my friends have had hip replacements. Some had steel sockets, some plastic. Which is better?

DEAR READER: The type of hip prosthesis and the precise technique of implanting it are highly individualized decisions that are made by the doctor, depending on the patient's needs, and the skill, experience and preference of the surgeon. I do not know which artificial hip is "better"; that is a choice best left to you and your orthopedic surgeon.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 18 and a senior in high school. I have not yet matured physically and sexually. What should I do?

DEAR READER: Although most adolescents have fully matured physically by age 18, some teenagers are late bloomers. I think that you should be examined by a doctor to make sure that there is no glandular problem causing your slow growth.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been diagnosed as having a non-cancerous cyst in my scrotum. The internist and urologist both say that surgical removal of the cyst will leave scar tissue which may cause as much pain as the cyst itself. Do you agree? I'm 31 and feel that there must be some alternative.

DEAR READER: Scrotal cysts are common and usually require no treatment. When small, they are painless and resemble the benign sebaceous cysts that can occur anywhere on the body. If your cysts are painful, they must be either large or infected. I do not know whether scar tissue from surgery would be as painful as the cysts themselves. Because your situation is somewhat unusual, you evidently have a difficult decision to make. Perhaps a third opinion would help you to make up your mind. ### A world on the brink of war

THE KREMLIN CONTRACT. By James Barwick. Putnam. 254 Pages. $17.95.

As spy stories go, James Barwick's "The Kremlin Contract" goes about like countless others of recent years.

Addicts of such fiction, however, probably will regard it as quite a hotcake.

There certainly is an impressive cast of characters: top echelons of the powerful in Russia and the United States — from Stalin and Eisenhower on down — along with spies and counterespies galore.

In 1953, Stalin, aging, ill and half crazy, is on the verge of setting off World War III by invading Western Europe. But since America has the atom bomb, Russian generals can see only disaster. They plan to assassinate Stalin.

Yet, before they can get a chance, monumental military preparations by both nations are carried right to the trigger stage. Secretly, Russian military leaders plead with their U.S. counterparts to wait....

In the meantime, spies of the two countries both work together and double-cross each other amid an orgy of torture, killings and, yes, sex aplenty.

THE GOOD RED ROAD. Passages into Native America. By Kenneth Lincoln with Al Logan Slagle. Harper & Row. 271 Pages. $17.95.

Those with a desire to know more about the life of the American Indian today should find "The Good Red Road" both rewarding and touching. They also may find much that is sad and dismaying.

Though written by two college professors, one of them an Indian himself, this is no pedantic overview couched in dry, scholarly prose.

It is instead a human and often wrenching account resulting from years of visits to various Indian tribesmen both on and off reservations.

Today there remain about 1.5 million "Native Americans," with 38 percent still dwelling on tribal lands. Many are caught in a struggle to cling to ancient ways while yet seeking to meld into the white man's cultures.

There are woeful reports, many in the Indians' own words, of the agonizing problems they find themselves facing: poverty, joblessness, poor housing and medical care, alcoholism, scorn and failure to cope with ways of life imposed on them.

The book is a down-to-earth narrative and eminently readable. But it is far from a happy tale.

Writer hunts ancient navigator, realizes he was seeking father

By Robert Barr
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stephen Thomas went to a remote Pacific island looking for a navigator who would share his ancient knowledge. It wasn't until he came home that he realized he had been searching for a father.

He found both in Mau Pialug, a native of Satawal who had mastered the ways of crossing the open ocean guided by stars, winds, waves and birds.

"The process of writing the book was a process of figuring out why I went there and what I really did there," said Thomas, author of "The Last Navigator" (Henry Holt, $22.95).

"I always told myself that I wanted to go learn navigation, and I wanted my piece of old Oceania. I wanted to get out of my own skin and into the skin of a pre-Western navigator," Thomas, 35, said on a recent visit to New York.

"I didn't know that I was looking for a kind of father, looking to resolve questions that I had about my own father and questions about how I would be a father myself later on, and what are the bonds between father and son. There were a lot of those issues that I had just never faced at all, until I was sitting there with a huge stack of manuscript, and it just wasn't going anywhere."

Eventually, Thomas saw his relationship with Pialug in a new light.

"He gave me everything I needed to know," Thomas said. "At the end, he said, 'Think well.' He took my hand, and jumped into the ocean."

"I came to understand later that he was saying, 'I have a better idea why you came here than you do yourself. You won't figure that out for a while, but you got everything you need. Now go figure it out. Think well.'"

Pialug, too, was disturbed by the broken connections between fathers and sons, and feared his own sons would not carry on his sea-faring tradition.

"This year my sons are on Satawal, but next year they will return to high school," he told Thomas. "Why is it they want to learn your way of navigation but they never, never come to ask me about mine?"

At another time, Pialug explained why he was eager to cooperate with Thomas. Perhaps his sons could learn navigation from Thomas' book, though Pialug would prefer to teach them.

"I want my sons to learn so they will have a name. If they have sons they will teach them so they will know," Pialug said. "From the first father through all the fathers, navigation has come down to me. When I am dead, I want it to go on."

Pialug had become famous far beyond his home island in the central Pacific, about 500 miles southeast of Guam. He had been the navigator of the Hokule'a, the Hawaiian sailing ship which had crossed the Pacific to Tahiti in 1976 and again in 1980 without modern navigational gear.

Writer Stephen Thomas, author of the book "The Last Navigator," with sunglasses, sits on a boat with his friend and teacher, Mau Pialug, a native of the Pacific Island of Satawal. Thomas went to Micronesia to learn the ancient art of navigation from Pialug, and along the way he resolved some of his longstanding questions about fatherhood.

charter boats, was already a seasoned sailor when he went to Satawal in 1983. He was adopted into Pialug's clan and, in two long visits over the next two years, absorbed the Micronesian way of navigation.

He also learned the ritual songs and dances called "umau," and an old chief taught him about "itang," the "talk of light" to which even the chiefs were submissive.

Old ways, however, seemed to be losing out against the lure of Western culture. Youngsters returned from schools on distant islands with videotapes of "Flashdance" and "Hill Street Blues." Though Thomas came to learn Micronesian navigation, the young men were fascinated by his sextant.

"One night, Pialug fell asleep and didn't wake up, so we drank with the younger guys and some of them recited 'itang' and another young man recited another chant to call octopus to the reef," he recalled. "So I left with an open question as to how much they were learning. They just sort of held back, and I wasn't interested in the young men. I was interested in getting to Pialug himself and the older men.

"In the end, I had profound respect for Pialug," Thomas said. "I don't think I over-romanticize him. He does drink like a fish; he can drink for three days but then hop on a canoe and navigate for another three days. He is still abrupt and still rough, but fascinating."

Thomas, who lives with his wife and son near Boston, said that he hopes to return to Satawal. As part of a proposed film project, he may have his chance to navigate an outrigger from Satawal to Saipan, an island just north of Guam.

"What I wonder now is if I went back if another whole level wouldn't open to me," he said. "Going back is very important. The first time I was there it was fine but when I went back they said, 'oh, you're back,' and they taught me a lot more."

"And if I went back a third time, I wonder if — they taught me 'itang' — but if there is something beneath that."

In movie theaters

Full Metal Jacket (R) Stanley Kubrick's long-awaited Vietnam War drama has been proclaimed a masterpiece in so many quarters that one feels almost churlish complaining. But the film — despite powerful, virtuosic moments — is also lumpy, portentous and coldly detached. Timing counts for a lot with movies, and coming on the heels of the impassioned and harrowing "Platoon," the war-is-hell insights in "Full Metal Jacket" seem rather familiar.

What begins as a portrait of a Marine Corps boot camp segues midway to a blood-soaked chronicle of a squad of grunts fighting the crucial Battle of Hue City. In both sections, the movie's approach is almost abstract. The main character — an ambivalent private (Matthew Modine) who endures boot camp under the training of a brutal drill sergeant (Lee Ermey) and goes on to become a combat correspondent — remains disconcertingly sketchy for most of the film.

Since "Platoon" lacked an articulated historical and political perspective on the war, one hoped that "Jacket" would make up the difference. Kubrick deliberately deprives us of the direct emotional involvement by which "Platoon" moved so many viewers, but he doesn't give us enough in its place. His renowned aestheticism seems rigidly at the service of a statement about how the U.S. military trains boys to become killing machines, and how, in the case of Vietnam, it left them stranded in a senseless war.

"Jacket" makes these points with clinical, single-minded skill; perhaps those who are most upset by this picture may be recalling from Kubrick's relentless and heavy-handed approach.

This is not to deny the effectiveness of the grueling black-comedy in the early training scenes, in which real-life ex-drill instructor Lee Ermey barks out commands with fascinating ferocity.

Vincent D'Onofrio makes a memorable impression, too, as a fat, clumsy recruit who proves his worth tragically with a gun. And the gifted Modine finally holds the screen in a revelatory close-up that comes right at the movie's end. Throughout, Kubrick's Vietnam landscape is freshly, hellishly, imagined as a smoking expanse of ruins. On the other hand, the narration, spoken by Modine, is as trite as those in "Platoon" and "Apocalypse Now." Grade: ★★½

Innerspace (PG) A brash test pilot (Dennis Quaid) involved in a miniaturization experiment is accidentally injected into the body of a wimpy supermarket clerk (Martin Short) in this half clever, half dumb entertainment.

Taking off from "Fantastic Voyage," this new picture would benefit from a script with simpler contours; Jeffrey Boam and Chip Proser's screenplay tends to throw in everything but the kitchen sink.

Director Joe Dante ("Gremlins") brings some quirkiness to the project, and Quaid and Short make a nifty contrasted pair sharing the same body. The movie's best moments occur when the nervous, hypochondriacal Safeway employee played by Short thinks he's possessed or going crazy: He doesn't know that a miniature Quaid is inhabiting him. Grade: ★★½

New home video

The Color Purple (PG-13) Warner, $89.95. Steven Spielberg's attempt to make a serious, heartfelt movie about the hardships of black life from a female point of view misses the darkly passionate undercurrents in the Alice Walker novel, settling for a spurious lyricism — a brazen, silent-film-style corniness.

The movie works pretty well on its own naive, overblown terms, benefiting from lively supporting players (especially Oprah Winfrey and Margaret Avery), and from a few sequences that are like Spielberg epiphanies. But the script is disjointed, leading actress Whoopi Goldberg makes an uneven screen debut, and the last half-hour wallows in sentimentality. Grade: ★★½

Short meets Spielberg challenge with no surprise to Grimley fans

By Bob Thomas
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — How would you react if you had a microscopic human in a space capsule buzzing around inside your head? That was Martin Short's challenge as an actor in Steven Spielberg's new presentation, "Innerspace."

He meets the challenge, and more. But that should be no surprise to the ever-growing numbers of Martin Short fans who have been astonished by his comic inventions on "SCTV" and "Saturday Night Live," notably the pointy-headed, superkinetic Ed Grimley ("I must say!").

Then there are his albino lounge singer Jackie Rogers Jr., and the slimy shyster Nathan Thurm. Then there's his poor and unknown relative of Katharine Hepburn and his Montgomery Clift, stuck in a 1960s situation comedy.

"Innerspace" casts Short as a grocery checker who mistakenly becomes injected with a fluid containing a miniaturized Dennis Quaid, a navy pilot who volunteered for a top-secret experiment. Short is pursued by Silicon Valley bandits and international terrorists while trying to cope with a strange, internal voice.

"It was interesting work because of simulating someone in my head," he remarked. "It required a surprisingly high level of energy. By the day I did the final sequence in which I run in and sneeze (Quaid) out, I was wiped out. I realized I had maintained that high level throughout the film."

Short's performance evokes memories of some of the film world's great clowns, and he admitted that many of them have been his idols. "Buster Keaton was astounding at physical comedy," he said. "I always was a fan of Harpo Marx; also Jonathan Winters, Jackie Gleason, Lucille Ball, Jerry Lewis, Dudley Moore, Bill Murray, Dick Van Dyke, Chaplin, of course, is a mythic given."

MARTIN SHORT
... "I must say!"

"I've always been fascinated by people like Gleason in 'The Honey-moosers' who go as broad as you can go. Like 'Waaaaaaahhhhh!' You never misbelieve him. It's an amazing gift.

"Harpo always fascinated me because he was so insane; it was just madness. He was so original. I love comedy that makes you think that the audience cannot lull themselves into any expectation. You had to watch Harpo because you never knew when he was going to jump on a desk or just fly through the air."

Off-camera, Martin Short looks nothing like the clown. He seems fairly sedate, level-headed, thoughtful, a thin-boned Canadian of 37. He was the last of five children born into a Hamilton, Ont., family who were naturally funny, he says. Martin's brother, Michael, has a few Emmys for comedy writing to prove it.

"When you're the youngest, it's like Mr. Reagan's trickle-down theory; you can't help but soak it in," he remarked. "Being funny was the norm of communication. You had to laugh at yourself because if you didn't, someone would laugh at you."

Short was studying to be a social worker at McMasters University when he met Eugene Levy and Dave Thomas, his future co-stars on "SCTV." They encouraged him to try acting, and he made his debut in several roles of "Godspell." He became part of the comedic explosion that hit Canada in the 1970s.

"Canada had untapped resources," Short observed. "It's an amazing interesting place to work. Toronto is like London: you're expected to do it all. From '72 to '79, when I first came down here, I did everything: a cabaret show at night, 'The Tempest' for CBC radio in the morning, a Pepsi commercial in the afternoon."

"When I began in '72, Danny Aykroyd, Gilda Radner, John Candy, Dave Thomas, Andrea Martin, Katherine O'Hara, Eugene Levy were working in Canada," he said. "When I started with 'SCTV,' Danny and Gilda had already gone to New York, but there was still a great amount of talented people who hadn't become international stars."

Short came to Hollywood for one season in the well-remembered "The Associates," with Wilfred Hyde-White, and another in "I'm a Big Girl Now," with Danny Thomas and Diana Canova.

Wounded, but not fatally

By James Jacoby

North-South had plenty of high cards to be in a slam, and they also had eight cards in the trump suit. But the texture in spades was a little weak. You often lose two tricks when the defenders hold five to the K-J-10. Here, after winning dummy's ace of hearts, declarer played the spade ace. When East produced the king, South played another spade and conceded down one. But even after this bad split in trumps was revealed, South could have reduced his trumps to the same length as West's and have made the slam.

At trick three, South should play the queen of hearts, ruffing East's king. Now three rounds of clubs ending in dummy will tell declarer that West started with four clubs. Declarer can try to cash the jack of hearts or not. If South decides that the heart jack will live without being ruffed, then he should make his contract. The play proceeds: heart jack, discarding the diamond queen, then A-K of diamonds, followed by the last club. Declarer now has Q-9-8 of spades, while defender West is left with J-10-6. Playing a low spade will put West on lead with nothing to do but lead back into the declarer's strength, and 12 tricks will be made.

Declarer might guess wrong and try to take three top diamond tricks. Then West will make a trick with his little spade and set the contract. But even that is better than just giving up at trick three by playing a second trump.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

KEEPING YOUR CAR ALIVE

Peter Bohr

Priming a car for a long trip

By Peter Bohr
Contributing Editor, Road & Track

Cynics won't be amazed by a recent article in the Reader's Digest proclaiming a national "scandal" in the auto repair business.

The magazine sent a fellow around the country sampling the service — or more often than not, the disservice — of hundreds of repair shops. Before each stop, he yanked the ignition wire from one of his car's spark plugs, making the engine stumble and wheeze.

Even the most inept grease monkey should have quickly spotted such a simple problem. Instead, Reader's Digest found that only 28 percent of the shops gave a satisfactory diagnosis and repair. Often the driver was victimized by incompetent mechanics, or even worse, was defrauded outright.

Yes, that's depressing. But understand the magazine was setting up a unique situation, one not routinely faced by most of us. The fellow was obviously passing through town, and was stopping at unknown, unrecommended repair shops. In other words, he was a plump pigeon ready for plucking.

Of course, that's no excuse for thievery. But the fact is, your hometown garage is less likely to pull a fast one because the owner knows you can come back the next day, perhaps waving small claims court papers. Moreover, most garages need to develop loyal, local customers who will return to the shop for regular service.

But what about those occasions when, like the fellow from Reader's Digest, you sally forth on a trip far out of range of the loving and honest hands of your regular mechanic?

If you enjoy thinking of life as one big Cracker Jack box, just take an unprepared car on a long trip and you'll be guaranteed surprises.

Otherwise, have your local mechanic give your car a tune-up and thorough inspection before you shove off. It seems most out-of-the-clear-blue-sky type of breakdowns involve tire, cooling system or electrical problems. A tune-up usually includes replacing minor electrical components (spark plugs, points, distributor rotors). Your mechanic should also check the battery's fluid level, its ability to hold a charge and the generator's or alternator's ability to provide a charge.

Although they're not part of the electrical system, your mechanic should inspect the brakes and transmission, and should change fuel system filters too.

The state of your car's cooling system is especially important on summertime journeys. Changing old hoses, fan belts and the thermostat (if they're more than 2 years old), as well as flushing the radiator and refilling the system with fresh coolant will usually cost no more than $50 or $60.

Replacing items like filters and thermostats accomplishes two purposes. First, you may avoid a dreaded breakdown. Second, if some dishonest gas station mechanic in a distant town insists that you need a new fuel filter or your engine will blow up, you'll know better because you will have just had it replaced.

As for tires, make sure you have the correct jack (many cars require special jacks) and the right lug wrench. And please, check the spare tire for proper inflation; changing one flat tire for another won't get you back on the road. You'll also get better fuel economy and handling if you inflate the tires to the highest recommended pressures before a long highway journey (refer to your car owner's manual for tire pressures).

I've driven a far piece several times, usually in some oddball foreign car. Besides having my mechanic put the car in top shape before I left, I asked him to assemble a "boondocks touring kit."

It contained things like a fan belt, throttle cable, points and other likely-to-break odds and ends that fit my particular car — items that a garage in Coon Rapids, Iowa, probably wouldn't have on hand for a car like mine. I never needed to use the kit, but it was always comfort to know it was there.

Consumer Tips

Give Your Car A Hot Weather Checkup

Since hot weather puts extra strain on your car, it's important to keep it in tip-top condition to avoid problems. The following preventive maintenance tips should help keep your summer driving cool and worry-free.

HOW DOES DILLON DO IT

for life.

It's our free Lifetime Service Guarantee, and you won't find a better repair guarantee anywhere. Here's how it works. As long as you own a Ford, Mercury, Lincoln or Ford light truck, if we repair it, we guarantee the covered part ever fails or wears out, we'll fix or replace it free. Free parts. Free labor. It covers thousands of repairs and lasts as long as you own your vehicle — no matter where you bought your car or how old it is. So whether you drive a "golden oldie" or a newer model, the next time it needs repair, bring it to us and get the best repair guarantee anywhere — our free Lifetime Service Guarantee.

Ask us to see a copy of the Lifetime Service Guarantee.

DILLON
SINCE 1933
319 MAIN ST. (Across from Armory), MANCHESTER, CT 643-2145

1. Make sure that the engine oil and transmission fluid are at the proper levels. Oil cools as well as lubricates. Clean, well-filtered oil will help your car beat the heat.

2. Check the battery to be certain it is properly filled and charged. Check battery cables for signs of corrosion. Heat can cut your battery's performance. Check it often.

sure in the morning when tires are cool. Inflate them to the pressure recommended in your owner's manual. Proper inflation will give you better fuel mileage, longer tread life and sharper handling.

4. Use a 50 percent mixture of antifreeze/coolant to water to cool your engine most effectively. Never add cold water to a hot engine. This could crack the engine block and necessitate expensive repairs. Turn your cool engine on and let it run while adding water to the radiator.

5. Check all fan and power belts, particularly those that run your car's air conditioning system. Replace any that are cracked or frayed and be certain they are adjusted to the proper tension.

6. Replace any brittle, cracked or soft hoses. A split hose can leave you stranded far from a service station or repair shop.

7. Get your transmission checked, especially if you plan to tow a boat or trailer. Since most automatic transmissions share the cooling system with the engine, towing may create the need for a transmission cooler, an inexpensive device that can be installed at many auto service centers.

McCallum, Curry In title matchup

By Tim Dahlberg
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Undefeated Mike McCallum, boxing's longest-reigning champion, is seeking the recognition and big paydays that have so far eluded him. Donald Curry says his future as a fighter is at stake.

McCallum defends his World Boxing Association junior middleweight title Saturday night against Curry, the former welterweight champion once considered the best pound-for-pound fighter in the world.

Curry hopes to regain the stature he had before losing his undisputed welterweight crown.

"I feel like he's my whole career," said Curry. "It's a must-win situation for me."

Curry, 27-1 with 20 knockouts, is a 2-1 favorite in Las Vegas sports books, but their scheduled 15-round fight figures to be an attractive matchup featuring two boxers with fine skills and proven knockout power.

The fight is scheduled to begin about 7:15 p.m. PDT.

"It will be a good fight, a sensational fight," predicted Lou Duva, who manages McCallum. "This fight really belongs up there as a great fight."

McCallum, 31-0 with 28 knockouts, has held the WBA 154-pound crown since winning it from Sean Mannion in October 1984. He knocked out all five opponents in title defenses, but has drawn little attention for his work.

"If I knock out Donald Curry, the whole world will know it," said McCallum, a Jamaica native who now lives in Valley Stream, N.Y. "Everyone will know what a great fighter Mike McCallum is."

While McCallum has remained an enigma for all but the most dedicated boxing fans, Curry's talents are well documented.

The 25-year-old Fort Worth, Texas, fighter was the rave of the boxing world when he scored a stunning second-round knockout over previously undefeated Milton McCrory in December 1985 to unify the 147-pound welterweight title.

But a shocking knockout loss at the hands of Britain's Lloyd Honeyghan last September cost him his title and raised some questions about how good Curry actually was.

"Anybody could have beaten me that night," said Curry, who blamed his loss on managerial problems and trying to lose 11 pounds in three days before the fight. "I had stopped trying to improve as a welterweight and it caught up to me. I had no motivation."

Curry has won his only two fights since the loss, both on fifth-round disqualifications for butting. He knows he must look impressive against McCallum if he is to get in line for some future big paydays.

Mottet holds lead of Tour de France

AVIGNON, France (AP) — Dutchman Jean-Paul Van Poppel outprinted the pack Friday to win the 17th stage of the Tour de France cycling race, but Charles Mottet of France retains the leader's yellow jersey.

Points leader Van Poppel of the Superconfex team beat Italian Guido Bontempi by the width of an inner tube at the end of this 148.5-mile route from Millau to Avignon. Officials needed a photo finish to separate the two riders.

The climbers dominated the first part of the course leading up to the second category climb at the Aigoual Pass, where Colombia's Luis Herrera gained enough ground to overhaul Raul Alcalá of Mexico as leader of the official King of the Mountain competition.

The overall classification was barely affected after this leg. Mottet still leads Bernard and Ireland's Stephen Roche by more than a minute.

The riders rest Saturday before an important time trial Sunday that finishes on Mount Ventoux, the highest peak of the tour at 6,266 feet.

Sports in Brief

Liscomb in need of funds

Todd Liscomb, who'll be a junior at Manchester High School in the fall, has qualified for next Saturday's National Junior Olympics at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, where he'll compete in the 1500-meter run. But Liscomb is in need of financial assistance to help defray the cost of the trip, approximately $500. Anyone wishing to help Liscomb can forward donations in his behalf to George Suitor, c/o Iling Junior High School, 227 E. Middle Tpke., Manchester.

Moriarty Brothers home tonight

Moriarty Brothers resumes play in the Greater Hartford Twilight Baseball League today with a two-night double-header at Moriarty Field. The first game will match MB's against the Vernon Orioles at 5 p.m. with the nightcap against the Newington Capitols, tentatively set for a 7:30 p.m. start.

Legion to face Torrington Sunday

The Manchester Legion baseball team will travel to Torrington on Sunday to face the Torrington Legion team at 6 p.m. in a nine-inning non-Zone contest.

Midget football holding signups

The Manchester Midget Football League is holding another signup session for the 1987 season Tuesday night at 6 at Charter Oak Park near the warming hut. The league is for youngsters ages 10-14. There is a $15 registration fee and a parent or guardian must accompany a youngster at the signups. There is a $25 maximum per family. Cheerleader registration fee is $10.

Practice will start on August 17 at the Martin School.

Judgment for Hornung upheld

FRANKFORT, Ky. — The National Collegiate Athletic Association on Friday lost its first appeal of an order to pay $1.16 million in damages to Paul Hornung for barring the pro football Hall of Famer as an announcer of college football telecasts.

A three-judge panel of the Kentucky Court of Appeals ruled unanimously that the NCAA had a duty to act in good faith, but failed to do so, in exercising a contractual right to refuse announcers chosen for the telecasts by Atlanta-based WTBS in 1982.

Neither Hornung nor attorneys for the NCAA were immediately available for comment.

Sports in Brief

Golf tournament is upcoming

COVENTRY — The Henry McNamara Golf Tournament, sponsored by the Democratic Town Committee, will be held on Aug. 22 at the Twin Hills Country Club. Prizes will be awarded all players. Fee is $18 per person; the fee includes lunch. For reservations, call 872-7446.

Randolph undergoes surgery

NEW YORK — Willie Randolph, the New York Yankees All-Star second basemen, underwent successful surgery Friday to repair torn cartilage in his left knee, the club said.

The surgery was performed by Yankees physician Dr. John Bonamo at NYU Medical Center. Bonamo said Randolph could be back in action in 3-4 weeks.

In the meantime, the Yankees have activated infielder Bobby Meacham from the 15-day disabled list, and he is expected to replace Randolph. Meacham was out with an injured right ankle.

Houston officers file lawsuit

HOUSTON — Two Houston police officers filed a lawsuit Friday seeking $10.2 million in damages stemming from a July, 1986 incident that resulted in four New York Mets baseball players being charged with assault and battery.

Named in the suit were Mets Manager Davey Johnson and four players — Ron Darling, Tim Lincecum, Bob Ojeda and Rick Aguilera — Houston attorney A. Lee McLain said.

Also named in the suit, filed in State District Court, were directors of Sterling Doubleday Enterprises, which owns the Mets, and Suzanne Bonacci, who was present at the club when the incident occurred.

Shriver overcomes erratic serve

NEWPORT, R.I. — Defending champion and top-seeded Pam Shriver overcame an erratic serve Friday and advanced to the semifinals of the Virginia Slims of Newport.

Shriver, ranked No. 5 in the world, defeated seventh-seeded Gigi Fernandez of San Juan, Puerto Rico, 7-6, 4-6, 6-2, in 1 hour and 45 minutes at the Newport Casino.

Shriver, who won the first-set tie-breaker 8-6, will play unseeded Alycia Moulton on Saturday. Moulton upset sixth-seeded Terry Phelps 6-4, 6-3 in another quarterfinal match Friday.

Fifth-seeded Rosalyn Fairbank of San Diego will meet eighth-seeded Wendy White of Fort Worth, Tex., in the other semifinal.

Mecir advances to semifinals

STUTTGART, West Germany — Top-seeded Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia advanced to the semifinals of the $231,000 Mercedes Cup tennis tournament Friday, but second-seeded Henri Leconte of France was eliminated.

Mecir overcame a slow start against countryman Marian Vajda and rallied to win 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Leconte suffered an upset to West Germany's Carl-Uwe Steeb 7-5, 6-3, in a match that was delayed by rain for 1 hour and 40 minutes when Steeb was leading 1-0 in the second set.

Wilander leads semifinalists

INDIANAPOLIS — Top-seeded Mats Wilander beat Richey Reneberg 6-4, 6-4 Friday night, putting three Swedes and a 17-year-old Argentinian into Saturday's semifinals of the U.S. Clay Court tennis tournament.

Reneberg, the NCAA singles champion from Southern Methodist, was the lone American left among the final eight in the $375,000 tournament at the Indianapolis Sports Center.

Wilander will play his doubles partner and childhood friend, Joakim Nystrom, in one of the singles' semifinals. In the other, Sweden's Kent Carlsson will face 17-year-old Guillermo Perez-Roldan of Argentina, the No. 10 seed, who advanced with a 1-6, 6-3, 6-4 victory over South Africa's Gary Muller.

In the other quarterfinal matches Friday, Carlsson took advantage of his opponent's repeated errors and beat Patrick Kuhn of West Germany 7-6, 6-1.

Behind the four-hit pitching of Matt Heine, the Manchester Merchants downed Herb's of West Hartford, 8-3, Friday night at MCC's McCormick Field. Erik Wolfson and John Carlin each drove in two runs while Craig Ford added a pair of singles for the Merchants, now 5-6-1 in JC-Courant League Junior Division play and 7-7-1 overall. Jason Stanizzi and Heine each had two hits while John Cunningham doubled. Devon Marquez and George Covey played well defensively. Manchester is back in action today against the South Windsor Juniors at McCormick Field at 10 a.m.

Building strength

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Kent State University has inaugurated a plan designed to increase athletes' strength without resorting to sometimes-dangerous steroids.

Acting on a grant from the Weider Health and Fitness Company, researcher Peter W.R. Lemon will work with 10 to 12 weightlifters in active training.

Each of the athletes will be given a diet supplement consisting of two natural amino acids. They reportedly have no side effects, often associated with steroids.

Louganis and Mitchell dominate the diving

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Two familiar athletes, divers Greg Louganis and Michele Mitchell, continued their U.S. Olympic Festival domination Friday by winning the preliminary rounds of platform diving.

There was little competitive action as the Festival staged its opening ceremonies at Carter-Finley Stadium in Raleigh. The ceremonies, which featured entertainment by the Charlie Daniels Band and Roberta Flack, were sold out.

In addition to the divers, Greco-Roman wrestlers were the only athletes competing Friday. The Festival, which began with wrestling and swimming and diving earlier this week, gets into full swing Saturday with competition in 17 sports.

Louganis, holder of 41 national titles, two gold medals from the 1984 Olympics and all but two of the golds in Festival diving since 1979, led the preliminary round off the 3-meter springboard on Thursday. He moved into first place in the platform event on Friday with a late surge.

"I felt pretty steady," Louganis said after taking the lead on his sixth dive, a reverse triple-twist on which he scored 91.08 points. "I hate to rate myself today, but I was probably a 6½."

That still was far better than Bruce Kimball, who was second with 578.25 points, well behind Louganis' total of 645.90. Mike Wantuck was third with 577.56 points.

Louganis said he prefers the tighter competition he has had this year to the years in which he totally dominated his sport. Earlier this year, Louganis was beaten in the U.S. indoors on both the platform and springboard.

"In some ways, it's more of a challenge now because it makes it difficult to concentrate," the 27-year-old Louganis said. "But it's more fun for me now than it was before. Before, it was just part of something I was good at."

Mitchell is particularly good on the platform, where she won the 1984 Olympic silver medal. She won both the platform and springboard events at the last two Festivals.

Mitchell said her sixth dive — an inward 3½ somersault in the tuck position — usually provides a pivotal point in the performance. She said she had to work on her concentration for that dive and not look ahead.

"You sit there for 20 minutes and think 'It's coming up,'" Mitchell said.

The dive carries the highest degree of difficulty in her program — a 3.2 — and she scored high with 72 points.

"I really go after it," Mitchell said. "You say, 'Be with me,' and go. Just let it fall into place."

Genna Weiss, the youngest diver in the field, was second, more than 78 points behind. Lori Rizzuto of Cincinnati was third.

U.S. athletes rack up medals

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — The United States took four of six track gold medals at the World University Games Friday, and came within striking range of the Soviet Union in the gold medal count.

The Soviets had a bad day, with just one gold from the women's tennis doubles, and the Americans advanced to two golds from the lead, 22 to 20.

The Chinese women dealt a severe blow to the Soviets, beating them in three finals: the 5-kilometer walk, the platform diving, and volleyball.

Gwen Torrence led the strong American track performance with her second gold medal of the Games, a 22.44 seconds win in the women's 200 meters.

"I hope to win a third gold in the 400 meters relay on Sunday," said Torrence of Decatur, Ga. She had taken the 100 meters in 11.09.

Wallace Spearmon upset favored teammate Floyd Heard to win the men's 200 meters in 20.42 seconds in another strong U.S. performance. Heard, who holds a 19.95 this year, trailed all the way and was second with 20.44.

"I figured it would come down to Floyd and myself, but I must say I am stunned by my recent performance at the TAC (The Athletic Congress meet) and here," Spearmon said.

Charlie Simpkins won the triple jump with 56 feet, 3¼ inches, which he matched on his first two jumps. Simpkins, from Summerville, S.C., edged teammate Kerry Harrison, second at 56.

The fourth American gold came from Randy Heisler in the men's discus with 204 feet, 8 inches. The 88-70 triumph of the U.S. men's basketball team over Cuba completed the good day for the Americans.

Guards Mitch Richmond of Kansas State with 19 points and Perry McDonald of Georgetown with 18 paced the United States into the final against host Yugoslavia on Saturday.

It was the American team's seventh straight win here. Again the team had a strong finish after leading 45-43 at halftime.

Union, management play hard ball

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

While the NFL Management Council and the Players Association negotiate over a new contract, they've also injected themselves into the individual negotiations between players and teams.

In fact, they're viewed as the major reason barely more than 10 percent of the 335 players drafted have been signed, about the same percentage in the week before training camps opened last year.

According to both agents and club officials, the Management Council's desire to slash rookie salaries 10-15 percent from last year and the Players Association's determination to fight the cuts have severely impeded signings.

Agents ready to sign a player for less than the union deems suitable are getting calls from the union; general managers get calls from the Management Council if they offer too much.

"The union is being heavy-handed with agents and the Management Council is being brutal on teams," one agent said. "Nobody's allowed to be creative or do anything on his own any more."

"Simple socialism," is how a management man put it. The key to the impasse appears to be Brian Bosworth, chosen in the supplemental draft by the Seattle Seahawks. If he signs soon, most of the early picks will probably follow in time to avoid missing much of training camp.

Bosworth now seems ready to play for Seattle, and is seeking $9 million over seven years. The Seahawks want him but have to structure the contract so his salary isn't higher than established stars like Curt Warner and Kenny Easley. About the best he can expect is an $800,000 average, including signing bonus.

NFL Notes

Once Bosworth signs, four other linebacker dominoes may fall — Cornelius Bennett, taken second by Indianapolis; Mike Junkin (No. 5, Cleveland); Shane Conlan (No. 8, Buffalo) and Seattle's own Tony Woods (No. 18). Bennett's agent, Richard Woods, has made it clear he won't accept less than Bosworth, who would have been drafted below him in the regular draft.

Another key is quarterback Chris Miller, Atlanta's first-round pick and the 13th overall.

Vinny Testaverde, signed by Tampa Bay before the draft for $8.2 million over 6 years, is considered out of what has become a general wage-scale pattern — each player signed gets a little more than the guy picked below him. He's a Heisman Trophy winner, a No. 1 pick and a player Tampa Bay desperately needs to re-establish credibility with its fans.

The other first-rounder signed, No. 14 D.J. Dozier by Minnesota, is also considered out of the pattern. The agents and union think Dozier took a beating and both sides rarely consider Minnesota a model for contracts.

Miller becomes important because the next quarterback taken after Testaverde, Kelly Stouffer (No. 6 by St. Louis), may have to settle for less than he wants from the low-paying Cardinals. The Cards figure to start the season with Neil Lomax anyway and can afford to wait.

But the Falcons, who in recent years have passed up Dan Marino, Boomer Esiason and Jim Everett, will take a beating in an already cynical local press if they don't get Miller into camp early to compete with David Archer and Turk Schonert for the No. 1 quarterback job. He could then set off a chain reaction for the middle and bottom of the first round.

Hobby Corner

Take it from Dallas Coach Tom Landry — Bo Jackson will not have an easy time when he joins the Los Angeles Raiders after his baseball duties end.

Landry, who had to work a late-signing Herschel Walker into his system last year, notes that Walker had a number of advantages over Jackson.

He had two years of professional experience in the USFL when he joined the Cowboys; he had a month of training camp to learn the Dallas system, and he had never switched sports — his muscles and his mind were geared for football.

And yet, Landry says, "I don't know that he was ever sure of everything last year." This despite leading the team in receptions with 78; a 4.9 yard rushing average, and Walker's "remarkable ability to concentrate."

What does that bode for Bo? "It would seem to be a very difficult task," Landry says. "Physically, he hasn't trained his body to play football. He hasn't been trained to take the punishment. It's going to be a real awakening trying to get into pro football when we're at the height of our season."

Fabel in front at PGA event

Golf Roundup

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Brad Fabel, a former coal miner from Kentucky, shot a 5-under-par 65 on Friday to take a two-stroke lead midway through the $500,000 Hardee's Golf Classic.

Fabel completed two tours of the par-70, 6,602-yard Oakwood Country Club in 129, the lowest midway score on the PGA Tour this year.

Mark McCumber, who was tied with Fabel one stroke off the lead after Thursday's opening round, had a 67 on Friday to complete 36 holes at 131, nine strokes under par and two out of the lead. He was joined by Ray Barr Jr. and Tom Purtzer, each with 64.

Mike Smith, in danger of missing the cut after an opening 71, stormed within three shots of the lead after the lowest round of the year, a 61 that featured nine birdies and no bogies. Smith's round broke the tournament scoring record of 62, set by Jon Chaffee in 1963 and tied two years later by Ron Streck.

Also at 132 were Jim Gallagher, Charlie Bolling, 1980 Southern Open champion Mike Sullivan and 1986 Southern winner Fred Wadsworth. Gallagher had a 63, Bolling a 65, Sullivan a 66 and Wadsworth a 67.

Fabel, 31, said he gave up golf after his sophomore year at Western Kentucky University in order to work in the coal mines near his Madisonville home. But he returned to the links after a near cave-in.

"It made me think I'd like to try those four-footers again," said Fabel, who missed a four-footer for par on the 18th. "I said, 'That's enough,' and I never went back to the mines."

Dave Rummells, the first-round leader, struggled to a 71 and was among eight players at 134, six under par.

Rosenthal in front

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Jody Rosenthal fired a 6-under-par 68 Friday to take a two-stroke lead at the midway point of the $300,000 Boston Five Classic.

Rosenthal, who won last week's du Maurier Classic, finished two trips over the Ferncroft Country club course in 9-under-par 135. Local favorite Sally Quinlan, Betsy King and Becky Pearson were next at 137.

Quinlan had a second-round 70, while King eagled the 18th hole to finish with a 66 and Pearson shot a 68.

Veteran Amy Alcott, who shared the first-round lead with Quinlan and Cathy Marine, soared to a 77 and dropped back to 144, nine shots off the pace. Marine had a 74 and was at 141.

Rosenthal, last year's LPGA Rookie of the Year and a two-time winner in 1987, bogeyed the first hole but rebounded with a birdie on No. 2 and went on to match her best round as a pro. She sank birdie putts of 12, 18, 12, 10, five and four feet.

LPGA veteran Hollis Stacy, a three-time winner of the U.S. Open, shot a 68 and was at 138, while Jan Stephenson shot a 71 for a 139 total and Rosie Jones shot a 69 and was at 140.

Quinlan, playing out of Dennis on Cape Cod, said she had calmed down while playing in front of a growing gallery of family and friends. She was at 9-under, but bogeyed the last two holes when she missed putts of four and 12 feet.

Crampton takes lead

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Defending champion Bruce Crampton shot a 7-under-par 65 Friday to take the first-round lead at the $250,000 Syracuse Senior Pro Golf Classic.

Crampton, who won his second of seven PGA Senior Golf events here last July, led former U.S. Open champion Orville Moody by one stroke. Moody was one of three players who tied for second behind Crampton last year.

Four players, including 1984 Syracuse Senior champ Miller Barber, Charles Sifford, Jim Barber and Quinton Gray, were next at 67.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, the leading money-winner on the Senior Tour this year with five victories, and 1985 Syracuse champion Peter Thomson were among five players at 68.

contend with more than the pressure of the lead in this oldest of tournaments.

Watson, although a non-winner for three years, may be the most formidable of the group behind him.

A five-time winner of this championship and the man who once dominated the game, Watson provided evidence he has snapped his slump with a one-shot runner-up finish at the recent U.S. Open.

"It came," Watson said, paused, and snapped his fingers, "like that. In the second round of the U.S. Open. All of a sudden, it's Yeah. That's it. That's the way to do it. That's the way to play golf."

"I'm playing with confidence now. But I'm just a little concerned with the putter. If I putt well, I can win the tournament." Watson three-putted twice.

Faldo, a three-time British PGA champion, shot 69. Taylor holed three putts of 30 feet or more in a 68. Davis went up nine shots from an opening 64 to a 73.

"Not a great effort," he said. "Langer and Stadler, both former Masters champions, each shot 69. Frost had a 68.

Bracketed at 139 were PGA champion Bob Tway, Masters titleholder Larry Mize, Mark Calcavecchia, Carl Mason of Great Britain, Graham Marsh Australia and Niak Price of South Africa.

Mason moved up with a 69. Calcavecchia and Marsh each had a 70. Mize and Price matched par 71 and Tway took a 72.

Lee Trevino and Ken Green, who shared second at the end of 18 holes, dropped back. Green went to a 76 and was at 143. Trevino had 74-141.

And Arnold Palmer was out. The 57-year-old Palmer failed to qualify for the final two rounds with a 153 total. He had a second round 78 that included a score of 10 on the 14th hole.

Palmer drove into a fairway bunker, played out, and then hit his third into a deep, steep-sided greenside bunker.

It was in an impossible position. But Palmer refused to play away from the hole.

"I wouldn't say God couldn't get it out in one — but He'd have to throw it," Palmer said.

Palmer suffers nightmare

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Arnold Palmer's nostalgic return to the British Open was buried in a sandy grave Friday.

The two-time Open champion, 57 years old and playing the tournament for the first time since 1984, was sailing toward a spot in the final two rounds when he ran afoul of the deep bunkers that make the par-71 Muirfield links look like a moonscape.

At 1-under par for the round and 3-over for the tournament, Palmer over-clubbed with a 7-iron on the 13th hole and landed in a bunker. He chipped out and two-putted for a bogey-4.

That was just the beginning of Palmer's time on the beach.

Still angry about the previous hole, he hit his tee shot into a fairway bunker at No. 14. Palmer blasted out of that sand trap but sent his third shot into a green-side bunker, landing on the steep side toward the hole and in a very difficult position.

"I am not saying that God couldn't get the first attempt in the greenside bunker out," Palmer said. "But he'd have had to throw it."

Palmer swung and swung. All his first four attempts did were spray sand, move the ball slightly to the left and so fluster the gray-haired commander of "Arnie's Army" that he could be seen shaking his head and even smiling faintly.

On the fifth shot, Palmer made it to the green. He two-putted for a 10 — six shots over par and one of the worst hole scores of his career — and his latest journey to an event he first visited in his golfing prime 27 years ago was nearing an end.

Palmer birdied the 15th and 16th holes but that was the end of his heroics. He bogeyed the 17th and took a double-bogey 6 on the 18th, finishing the round at 7-over 78 for a 36-hole total of 153.

Yankees triumph; Red Sox routed in 10

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Don Mattingly set an American League record by homering in his seventh consecutive game and Mike Pagliarulo also homered as the New York Yankees beat the Texas Rangers 8-4 Friday night.

Mattingly hit his record-breaking homer off reliever Paul Kilgus in the sixth inning. It was his ninth homer during that span, a major league record, and his 17th of the season.

The Yankees' All-Star first baseman had matched the achievement of six other AL players when he homered in his sixth straight game in Thursday night's 12-3 victory over the Rangers. Pittsburgh's Dale Long holds the major league record with homers in eight consecutive games.

Rick Rhoden, 12-5, was the winner. He allowed two runs on seven hits, walked three and struck out four in 6 1/3 innings before needing relief help from Pat Clements.

Ranger starter Bobby Witt, 4-5, was chased in the third inning, when the Yankees built a 5-0 lead. He walked four and three of them came around to score.

Witt walked Mike Pagliarulo leading off the Yankees' three-run second and Mark Salas followed with a double. After Paul Zuvella popped out, Witt walked Wayne Tolleson to load the bases and Rickey Henderson singled home two runs. Claudell Washington then singled home Tolleson for a 3-0 lead.

In the third, Witt walked Gary Ward leading off and Pagliarulo followed with his 17th homer of the season to make it 5-0, chasing Witt in favor of Kilgus.

Kilgus walked Salas, who came around to score on Zuvella's sacrifice bunt and Tolleson's RBI single.

The Rangers scored in the fourth as Oddibe McDowell bounced into a double play with the bases loaded.

In the Yankee sixth, Kilgus got Henderson and Washington and had a 2-1 count on Mattingly when the Yankee first baseman homered into the bleachers in right.

In the first inning, Mattingly doubled high off the wall in center, missing a home run by a foot or so. He then fled to right and grounded out before hitting his record-setting homer.

The Rangers got their second run and chased Rhoden in the sixth on a walk to Geno Petralli, Washington's fielding error in center, a groundout and Scott Fletcher's RBI single.

AL Roundup

McGwire and veteran Carney Lansford capped a seven-run 10th inning with consecutive home runs off reliever Calvin Schiraldi Friday night, pacing the Oakland Athletics to an 11-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

McGwire, the major league's home run leader hit a three-run shot for his 34th homer of the season to make the score 9-4 and Lansford followed with his 10th home run. McGwire now had 71 runs batted in.

With the score tied 4-4, Terry Steinbach started the 10th by bouncing a ground-rule double into the Boston bullpen in right-center field against Bob Stanley, 3-9. Steinbach scored when Alfredo Griffin bunted in front of the plate and rookie Mike Greenwell, an outfielder forced to make his major-league catching debut, made a wild throw to first base.

Griffin, credited with a sacrifice, took second on the error and scored on Luis Polonia's single.

Steinbach drove in the final run of the inning with an RBI single.

Rookie Greg Cadaret, the fifth Oakland pitcher, earned the victory, his first major-league decision. Dennis Lamp got the final two outs of the game.

White Sox 4, Indians 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Carlton Fisk singled off second baseman Tommy Hinzo's glove with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning to score Gary Redus from third base Friday night and lift the Chicago White Sox to a 4-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

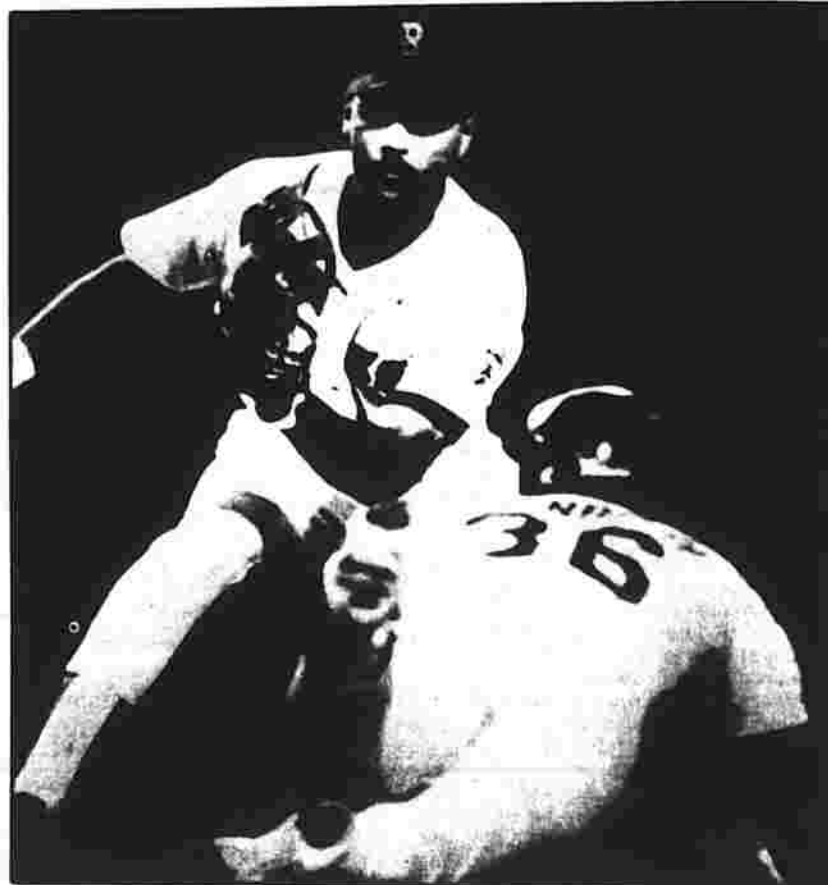

Fisk's game-winning hit, his 11th of the season, came off Indians loser Doug Jones, 3-3. Redus singled with one out and Jones loaded the bases with walks to Ivan Calderon and Greg Walker.

Tigers 7, Mariners 0

DETROIT (AP) — Alan Trammell had three hits, including his 14th home run, and Frank Tanana pitched a three-hitter Friday night to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 7-0 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

won his 700th game to become the first manager in baseball history to reach that level with two different teams. He won 863 with the Cincinnati Reds.

Twins 3, Blue Jays 2

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Frank Viola scattered eight hits over seven innings and Al Newman doubled in the game-winner in the seventh inning to give the Minnesota Twins a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Friday night.

The win was Minnesota's first in six tries against Toronto this season, and first in 11 games dating back to last year.

Orioles 3, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Ray Knight and Eddie Murray hit RBI singles in a two-run eighth inning Friday night to lift the Baltimore Orioles past Kansas City 3-1.

Brewers 12, Angels 2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dale Sveum hit three home runs and drove in six runs Friday night and the Milwaukee Brewers used a season-high 20-hit attack to bury the California Angels 12-2.

Sveum tied a team record last set by Ben Oglive in 1983 with his three homers.

Reds rally in ninth to beat Darling, Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Nick Esasky capped a four-run rally with a three-run homer with two out in the ninth inning to give the Cincinnati Reds a 5-2 victory over the New York Mets Friday night.

Ron Darling carried a three-hitter and a 2-1 lead into the ninth inning, but Buddy Bell led off with a single and one out later Dave Parker singled. Tracy Jones then bounced a single off the glove of third baseman Howard Johnson into left, scoring pinch-runner Max Venable from second base with the tying run.

After Bo Diaz flew out to left, Esasky hit a 3-2 pitch from Darling, 4-7, over the left-field fence. It was the 11th time the Reds have won this season in their final at-bat.

The victory snapped a four-game Reds' losing streak.

Frank Williams, 1-0, pitched one inning for the victory. John Franco pitched the ninth inning for his 18th save.

single by leadoff batter Barry Larkin, consecutive walks to Bell and Eric Davis, and a sacrifice fly to right by Parker.

Following the first inning, Darling retired 15 consecutive batters before hitting Larkin with a pitch in the sixth. Darling finished with seven strikeouts.

Phillies 2, Astros 1

HOUSTON (AP) — Lance Parrish and Glenn Wilson hit run-scoring singles in the first inning and Shane Rawley struck out a career-high nine batters as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Houston Astros and Mike Scott, 2-1, Friday night.

Rawley, 11-5, scattered eight hits in 8 2/3 innings en route to his fourth straight victory and the Phillies snapped a three-game losing streak. Steve Bedrosian got the final out for his 25th save.

Scott, 10-6, allowed six hits in seven innings and struck out seven, taking over the major-league strikeout lead from Seattle's Mark Langston. Scott has 155 strikeouts and Langston, 152.

Expos 5, Braves 4

MONTREAL (AP) — Tim Lincecum's infield single with the bases loaded in the eighth inning gave Montreal a 5-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves Friday night for the Expos' fifth straight victory.

With the score tied 4-4, Raines hit a 3-1 pitch from reliever Paul Assenmacher deep into the hole at short to score Jeff Reed from third with the winning run.

Jim Aker, 0-4, was the losing pitcher for Atlanta, while Montreal's Tim Burke improved his record to 2-0. Bob McClure came on in the ninth inning after Dion James reached third on a single and a two-base error to get the last out and his first save.

Moriarty's again on hitting spree

For the second consecutive game, Moriarty Brothers had its hitting shoes on.

Following a 16-2 rout of Herb's Thursday night in Manchester, the MB's ripped Society for Savings pitching for 24 hits en route to a 17-7 victory Friday night in Greater Hartford Twilight Baseball League play at Trinity College with the game called after six innings because of darkness.

"We're hot," said Moriarty Manager Gene Johnson. "It's unbelievable. We're hitting rockets."

Moriarty's, 11-8, had 16 hits in the win over Herb's. Moriarty's leapfrogged past Society in the Twilight League standings, taking over fourth place. The top eight teams make the Twilight postseason which begins August 14.

Moriarty's scored four runs in the first inning, six in the second and salted matters away with a five-run sixth frame. Jeff Johnson was a perfect 5-for-5, including a pair of doubles and two RBIs, to lead the MB's. Steve Chotiner had four hits including a homer, Ray Sullivan and Chris Petersen three apiece and Ralph Giansanti and Brian Crowley two safeties each. Petersen knocked in four runs.

Craig Steuernagel was the winning pitcher. He "scattered 13 hits" quipped Johnson. Steuernagel struck out four and walked two.

Moriarty's has a twinbill today at Moriarty Field, hosting the Vernon Orioles at 5 p.m. and then the Newington Capitols in the nightcap.

Nationals triumph in All-Star play

Pushing across the winning run in the bottom of the sixth inning, the Manchester National All-Stars nipped Thompsonville, 6-5, in District Eight Little League All-Star play Friday night at Leber Field.

Kirk Ringbloom walked with the bases loaded to put the Nationals in the winner's bracket in the double elimination tournament. The Nationals face the South Windsor-Rockville winner next Friday on the road.

The Nationals scored three times in the first inning for a 3-0 bulge, highlighted by singles from O.J. Cromwell and Bryan Gagnon. Thompsonville scored four times in the fourth and one in the fifth to take the lead before the Nationals tied it in the fifth with two runs, scoring on a passed ball and wild pitch.

In the sixth, Dan Carangelo led off with a walk, John Ahlberg singled and Luis Rivera walked to jam the bases to set the stage for Ringbloom. He walked on a full count, one-out offering.

Cromwell was the winning pitcher for the Nationals. He gave up seven hits, walked one and struck out six. Cromwell had two of Manchester's seven hits and drove in two runs. Second baseman Matt Sullivan and shortstop Mike Bottaro played well defensively for the locals.

Americans also win

Behind the two-hit, 10-strikeout pitching of Jason Marston, Manchester American All-Stars nipped Windsor Locks, 2-1, in District Eight Little League All-Star play Friday night at Waddell Field.

The Americans remain in the winner's bracket in the double elimination tournament and face the Suffield-Windsor American winner Thursday at Waddell.

The Americans did their scoring in the first and third innings. Dave Rohrbach plated both runs for the local squad.

The left-handed swinging Rohrbach led off the first with an opposite field triple and scored on a wild pitch by Dave Bassett. Rohrbach reached on a bunt single in the third and took second on an overthrow. He advanced to third on a wild pitch and scored on Dave Gilbert's clutch two-out single up the middle.

Marston walked five in going the distance. Keith Carini had one of the American's five hits. Jason Romeo at second base and Greg Griffin at first base played well defensively for the Americans.

Manchester Legion catcher Mike Charter is out quickly from behind the plate to pounce on a suicide squeeze bunt by East Hartford's Kevin Lawrence, who begins to race for first base. Charter grabbed onto the bunt and tagged out

Jim Bidwell, coming down the line from third base during third-inning action Friday night at McKenna Field. East Hartford scored two unearned runs in beating Manchester, 2-1.

EAST HARTFORD — Another heart-breaking loss was inflicted upon the Manchester Legion baseball team Friday night by East Hartford.

The Nos. 1 and 2 teams in Zone Eight, East Hartford and Manchester, respectively, battled each other as two rivals should — on the pitcher's mound. Manchester southpaw Chris Helin and East Hartford right-hander Tim Cain hooked up in a heated pitcher's duel.

Two unearned runs gave Cain and East Hartford a 2-1 victory over Manchester at McKenna Field. Helin, who hurled a masterful game, was the repeat victim of another hard-luck defeat. Helin suffered a 2-0 defeat (both runs were unearned) to East Hartford in the teams' first meeting on July 1.

The Post 102 contingent didn't aid Helin in the field as it committed four costly errors.

"It was a toughie," Legion Coach Dave Morency said. "I can't say enough about Chris Helin. He's got some guts. He's not overpowering, but he throws strikes."

Manchester is now 9-4-1 in the Zone and 16-13-1 overall while East Hartford moves to 14-1 in the Zone and 19-3 overall. Manchester's next game is a non-Zone encounter Sunday at Torrington at 6 p.m.

In his six innings pitched, Helin scattered six hits, struck out seven, and walked only one. Cain allowed one earned run, gave up five hits,

Manchester jumped to a 1-0 lead in the first inning. With one out, Rob Stanford walked and moved to second base on a wild pitch. Joe Casey then blooped an RBI-single down the right field line out of the reach of a diving Marc Mangiafico to score Stanford with Manchester's only run.

East Hartford tied it in the bottom of the first with the first of its two unearned markers. After two outs, Cain drilled a double to deep left field. Paul Caccavale followed by singling to right and the ball got by Keith DiYeso, scoring Cain from second with the tying run.

"The key was they got that one run right back," Morency said.

Things looked bad for Post 102 in the East Hartford third frame after Mangiafico began matters with a leadoff triple. Jim Bidwell then grounded to Pat Merritt at third. Merritt looked Mangiafico back, but fired errantly to first and Bidwell was safe. Mangiafico took off for home and got caught up in a rundown and was tagged out, but not before Bidwell took third base. Kevin Lawrence attempted a suicide squeeze bunt but Manchester catcher Mike Charter pounced on the ball and tagged out a charging Bidwell from third.

The East Hartford fourth inning began like the third. Caccavale led off with a single to right which evaded DiYeso with Caccavale winding up at third. Helin hung tough and got the next two batters with the runner still at third. Tylon Crump then grounded to Merritt at third, who bobbled the ball and threw wildly to first to allow Caccavale to come home with the winning run.

"Cain is a super pitcher," Morency said. "But four errors and that was it right there."

Manchester had a chance to tie the game in the fifth after Helin led off with double down the right field line. After one out, Stanford grounded to Crump at first, who made a fine play keeping the ball from going into right field and nailed Stanford at the bag. Helin moved to third on the play. After Casey walked, Charter struck out to end the threat.

Caccavale had two hits for East Hartford while DiYeso had two hits for Manchester. Manchester second baseman Jon Roe was injured during warmups when a ground ball came up and hit him in the face. Roe went to the hospital and received eight stitches before returning in the fourth inning. He batted twice, seeing his 10-game hitting streak stopped.

The Associated Press

MUIRFIELD, Scotland — Paul Azinger, the best bunker player on the American golf tour, scrambled out of wet sand and into the lead Friday in the second round of the 116th British Open.

Azinger, the tour's leading money-winner, preserved a 3-under-par 68 and a one-stroke lead over a tightly bunched field with a great sand shot on the 18th hole at Muirfield's soggy links.

His blast to about 6 inches on the final hole enabled him to complete 36 holes with a 136 total, six under par.

Thirteen of the world's leading performers — including Tom Watson — are within three strokes of Azinger at the halfway point. Americans, who have fared poorly in this tournament in recent years, hold seven of the first 15 places.

Among them is Payne Stewart, who one-putted nine times in a 5-under-par 66 that was the best round of the day. He played in late afternoon when the rains had subsided and the cold abated.

Stewart was tied for second, a single shot back, with Nick Faldo of England and a pair of Australians, longshot Gerry Taylor and first round leader Rodger Davis.

Watson, with a five-birdie 69 Friday, was another stroke back at 138 and was tied with Craig Stadler, Bernhard Langer of West Germany and David Frost of South Africa.

The close quarters put Azinger in position for the self-test he has been seeking.

"I wasn't nervous today. I was just trying to figure out how to cope with the conditions," said the 27-year-old called "Zinger."

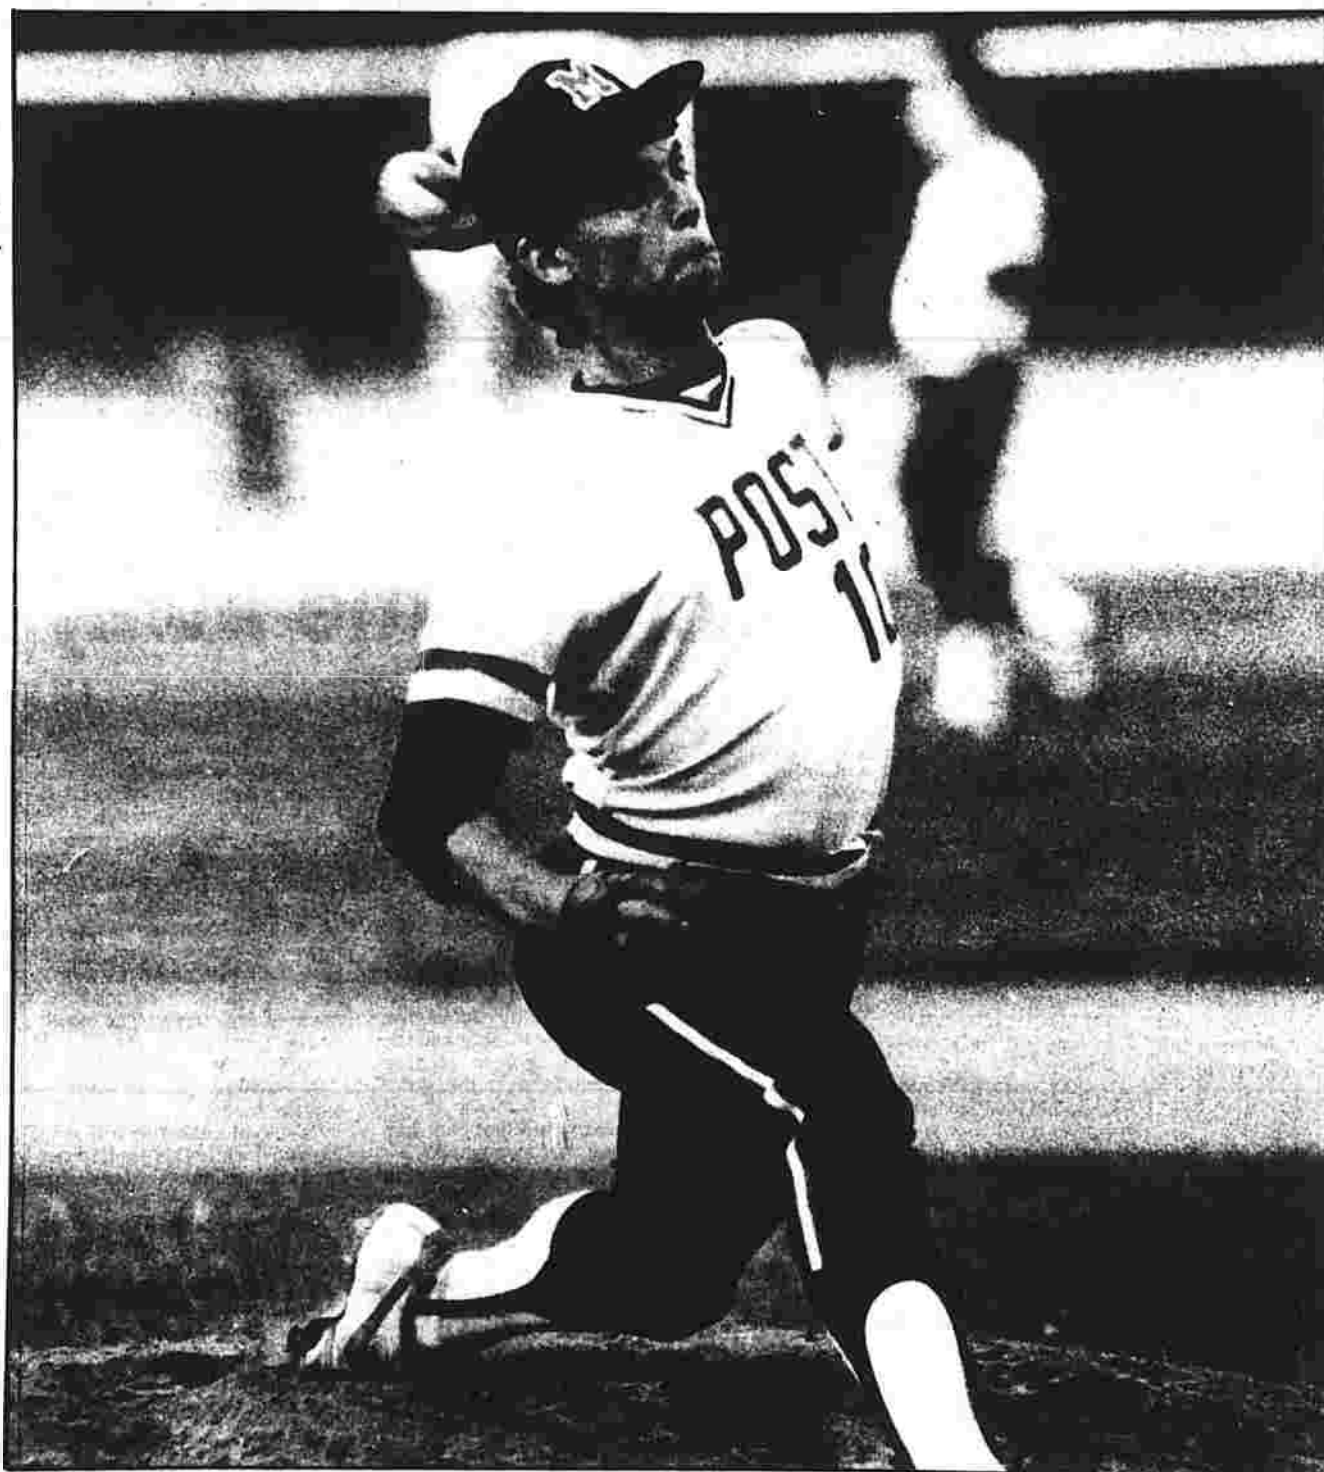

But the nerves are coming, predicted Azinger, playing in his first British Open.

"I haven't been in this position in a major tournament before," he said.

"I'll probably be more nervous than usual teeing off tomorrow. I want to find out. I want to be there. I want to find out about the pressure. I welcome it," he said, then flashed a wry grin.

"You'd better welcome it — or go home."
