Millionaire adds class to reunion

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — More than 400 people left for the Bahamas today as guests of a millionaire who invited the entire Class of '82 to join him on a cruise because he wanted to add "razzle-dazzle" to his 35th high school reunion...

Delbert Dumire shows off his high school class ring that his wife, Debbie, wears around her neck. Dumire is taking his classmates to the Bahamas for their 35th reunion.

"I never travel over water unless I take along something like this," he said, laughing. "When I do things, I like other people to enjoy them, too," said Dumire, who has never forgotten his small-town roots or his school chums...

Auditors knock treasurer - again

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — In what is becoming an annual event, the state auditors are highly critical of the operations of the state treasurer's office.

"The problems are very serious over there," said Auditor Henry J. Becker Jr. "We've had a couple of sessions with (Treasurer Francisco J. Borges) and he's indicated he takes our report very seriously and that he's going to take action."

All I can say is, time will tell," Becker said Wednesday. "We've heard it all before."

In a letter to Gov. William A. O'Neill, Borges called the audit — which covers the year ending June 30, 1986 — "a blueprint for making improvements. Borges was elected in November 1986."

He also said a consulting firm was in the midst of a "top to bottom" review of his department's operations.

The audit being released today lists 13 recommendations for improvements, several of which are repeats from the previous audit, according to Becker.

He said some were simple, such as the need for manually covering all operations of the office, improvements in controls over payroll and personnel operations and equipment inventory. Elsewhere, errors were found in the calculation of refund checks.

The auditors also called for more timely settling of cash accounts and a reconciling of some bank and custodial accounts that Becker said had not been done in years in some instances.

Outstanding checks to vendors doing business with the state were not promptly followed up, the auditors found.

"Although cash management and other advantages may result from outstanding checks, internal controls over state disbursements could be improved if authorized personnel at the various agencies were requested to follow up, at least annually, on the older checks concerning their accounts," the auditors said.

They also found that the same person was responsible for opening incoming mail and depositing the checks, a practice clearly at variance with the state comptroller's accounting manual.

"I not only fully share the concerns of the auditors about this department, but I also greatly appreciate the fact that their report provides me with a comprehensive blueprint for action to improve upon treasury operations."

Borges, when the consulting firm completes its review of treasury practices and procedures, he will "understand fully where we are, where we need to be and how we will get to where we need to be."

Borges also noted that his office is in the middle of a "three-year automation program designed to streamline and upgrade the abilities of the treasury to carry out its responsibilities efficiently and effectively."

For at least the past three years, the auditors, Becker and Leo B. Donohue have been issuing reports highly critical of the treasurer's office.

Connecticut In Brief

School boss quits; won't take test

SOMERS — The town's new school superintendent has resigned rather than take a test of basic skills required by the state of all teachers and school administrators.

Edward M. Malvey, who resigned Tuesday, complained that the state failed to give him the test before he started the job two months ago and that he shouldn't be required to take it now.

"I have a high school and college education, as well as a master's and a six-year degree and now I'm being told that I'm incompetent," Malvey said. "It's crazy, absolutely crazy."

Malvey, who was previously school superintendent in West Brookfield, Mass., said he was unaware of Connecticut's new CONCEPT test and believed he was properly certified for his new job.

The state has required the test since 1985 of all public school educators who didn't score a combined total of at least 1,000 on the two parts of the Scholastic Aptitude Test. Most students take the SAT before entering college. The maximum possible SAT score is 1,600; the minimum is 400.

State has no border with Rhode

HARTFORD — Crossing the state line between Connecticut and Rhode Island might seem simple but for one obstacle — there is no officially recognized border.

And there isn't much of a rush to make one.

Most would agree that the state line runs, more or less, 40 miles due south from Connecticut's northeast corner in Thompson to the Pawcatuck River, then follows the river for about 10 miles to its mouth at near Stonington.

The stretch, which goes from Burrillville to Westerly on the Rhode Island side, is marked only by survey set in place in the 1800s, most of them by an 1840 joint commission from the two states.

Connecticut's line with Massachusetts was ratified by Congress in 1914. The western border with New York was set in 1881.

In 1940, the states reached agreement on where the Connecticut-Rhode Island line was, but never marked it with monuments or submitted it to their legislatures for approval. That step, followed by ratification from the U.S. Congress, is the routine by which state lines are approved.

Car-operating cost above average

HARTFORD — Owning and operating a car in Connecticut costs state motorists more than the national average, according to figures compiled by the Automobile Association of America.

AAA statistics show that Connecticut drivers paid an average of 25.9 cents per mile to own and operate their cars in the second quarter of this year. The figure is an increase of less than a penny from the first quarter and is higher than the 25.1 cents paid nationwide, according to AAA.

"Connecticut has the highest per capita income in the country. It's a very 'money' area so naturally all prices would be higher here," AAA spokesman Michael Klein said Thursday.

Another reason for the higher cost is reflected in the state's 19-cent per gallon gasoline tax, which is the third highest in the nation, Klein said.

The figures mean that a motorist who drove 15,000 miles a year would pay $1,049 in operating costs, which include fuel, oil and maintenance.

That same driver would pay another $2,850 in ownership costs, which takes in insurance, license and registration fees, taxes, depreciation and finance charges.

Avon men fall from speeding boat

BOLTON, N.Y. — Two Connecticut men who fell out of a speeding motorboat in Lake George narrowly escaped injury as the out-of-control craft circled above them, Lake George Park Commission officials said.

Kevin Rorge, the driver of the 15-foot boat, told rescuers that the propeller nearly sliced his face as it passed over him, said Sgt. Fenton Sabo.

Sabo and Harry Robinson, a state Department of Environmental Conservation ranger, stopped the circling speed boat by throwing a rope across its path and letting the rope tangle in the propeller, he said Thursday.

Rorge and a friend, Eric Wawoznak, both of Avon, Conn., had been standing in the boat as it sped across the lake, Sabo said. When the boat made a sharp turn they apparently lost their footing and fell out, he said. Both men appeared to be in their mid 20s, Sabo said.

Man, hit by train, in bad shape

NEW BRITAIN — A 47-year-old New Britain man who was struck by a freight train was in critical condition, authorities said.

Royal Reyes of New Britain apparently walked into the path of a Boston & Maine Railroad train at about 9 p.m. Thursday and was dragged 30 yards, said Robert Perry, a railroad employee who was on the train.

The train was traveling at 10 mph when it struck Reyes, Perry said. He said the engineer hit the brakes but could not stop in time.

Reyes was taken to New Britain General Hospital where he was in critical condition, hospital spokeswoman Pat Siegel said.

Feds enforce farm labor laws

CHERRYFIELD, Maine — Officials of the U.S. Department of Labor are investigating complaints aired during an annual meeting with growers and farm workers designed to help enforce farm labor laws throughout New England.

About a dozen people, mostly migrant workers harvesting the wild blueberry crop, raised complaints Thursday about poor conditions in work camps, including a lack of mattresses and shelters. Some said the processing companies that provide the seasonal housing furnish tents as shelters.

Walter Parker, a regional administrator with the Department of Labor, said his office was investigating the complaints.

"We had some real problems a few years ago, but we imposed some fines and took court action," said Parker.

Feds urge routine AIDS testing

ATLANTA (AP) — Long-awaited federal recommendations urge doctors and clinics to do routine, but not mandatory AIDS tests to members of groups considered most likely to get the deadly disease.

The U.S. Public Health Service's recommendations Thursday also stressed the need for "every reasonable effort... to improve confidentiality of test results."

The recommendations do not include mandatory testing for all hospital patients and couples seeking marriage licenses. Ideas that met with harsh criticism by AIDS activists and civil liberties groups when presented at a public meeting in Atlanta in February.

The agency said that while "individuals have the right to decline," health professionals should begin "routine counseling and testing" for exposure to the AIDS virus for:

- Patients with sexually transmitted diseases.
- Drug abusers who inject narcotics, especially if they shared needles with infected people.
- Women of childbearing age at risk for AIDS infection, chiefly through drug abuse or sexual contact.
- Patients infected with tuberculosis, which can be compounded by an AIDS infection.
- Sex partners of infected people.
- Male and female prostitutes.

The final recommendations, according to federal health officials, are directed at medical practitioners.

"We're hoping health practitioners... would take advantage of the opportunity when they see persons at increased risk, in virtually every setting," said Dr. James Curran, chief of the AIDS task force at the national Centers for Disease Control, a Public Health Service unit based here.

According to the CDC, "routine counseling and testing is defined as a policy to provide these services to all clients after informing them that testing will be done. Except where testing is required by law, individuals have the right to decline to be tested without being denied health care or other services."

The idea is "to reduce further spread of infection," with priority on "persons who are most likely to be infected or who practice high-risk behaviors," the CDC said.

AIDS, reported most often among homosexual men and drug abusers, is transmitted most frequently through sex or sharing of hypodermic needles or syringes. It also can be transmitted from mother to unborn child and through transfusions of tainted blood or blood products.

The Public Health Service recommended that AIDS testing should be available to all Americans who believe they are at risk. Further, the CDC called for prison systems to study means of testing their inmates. Federal inmates already are under a testing program.

The CDC said state and local officials should decide about routine, or even mandatory, AIDS tests for engaged couples, taking into account "the prevalence of HIV (AIDS virus) infection in the area."

Federal health officials estimate that between 1 million and 1.5 million Americans are infected with the virus.

IRS adds paperwork for returns

WASHINGTON — If you thought there was a lot of paperwork involved in your home-equity loan or IRA account, wait until you see what the Internal Revenue Service has waiting for you.

For the home equity loan, it's called Form 8889 and it can get complicated. The IRS estimates that as many as half the 27 million couples and individuals with deductible home mortgage interest will have to file the form with their tax returns next year.

The two-page form and its four pages of instructions were made public Thursday. At the same time, the IRS released new forms that will be required of taxpayers who make non-deductible contributions to Individual Retirement Accounts and of those whose passive investments result in losses.

Illinois finds roots of soybeans

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — These days Illinois produces more soybeans than any other state in the nation, but until recently their first appearance in the state had been a mystery.

Scientist Theodore Hymowitz came to the rescue. Tackling the role of detective, he found clues that led to the community of Alton. A doctor returning from San Francisco had obtained soybeans from Japanese sailors and brought the first seed to Illinois in 1851.

After planting, done by a friend of the doctor, seed from the state's first soybean harvest was, according to Hymowitz, "meticulously, disseminated and evaluated by farmers throughout the United States."

10 killed, 21 lost in building collapse

BELEM, Brazil — Rescuers tore frantically through twisted steel and concrete today in search of victims buried when a building under construction collapsed, taking part of a nearby church with it. At least 10 people died.

"It's hard to imagine it was once a building," said Police Chief Joao Damasceno, hours after the Thursday evening disaster in this remote Amazon city of 1 million, which lies 2,277 miles northwest of Rio de Janeiro.

Three neighboring houses and a Protestant church were damaged by the falling, 15-story building. Police said 21 laborers were missing in the rubble of the construction site, and an undetermined number of people were believed trapped in the church.

The disaster was similar to one in Bridgeport, Conn., on April 23, when L'Amance Plaza, an apartment building under construction, collapsed and killed 28 workers.

Whale sighting excites scientists

BOSTON — A quest to find an elusive 70-foot-long blue whale sighted earlier this week off Plymouth is exciting scientists and amateur whale-watchers who hope to see more of the largest species on earth.

"It's like when the peregrine falcon was sighted in downtown Boston or seeing a bald eagle in Massachusetts," said Fred Wenzel, a scientist based in Plymouth who saw the whale Tuesday. "You're seeing a very rare thing."

It's hard to imagine it was once a building, said Police Chief Joao Damasceno, hours after the Thursday evening disaster in this remote Amazon city of 1 million, which lies 2,277 miles northwest of Rio de Janeiro.

Police fire at strikers; 60 hurt

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police and mine security guards fired rubber bullets today at hundreds of striking black miners who hurled rocks and defied orders to leave a miners' hostel, mine owners said. At least 60 were injured.

The Anglo American Corp. said 14 miners were hospitalized, one in serious condition, after police were called at 4 a.m. to the miners' residential hostel at the Western Deep Levels gold mine west of Johannesburg.

John Golding, a spokesman from the National Union of Mineworkers, said the union believed many more were injured. Anglo American Corp. is South Africa's largest gold producer.

Of the six major mining houses, it has been the most seriously affected in the nation's largest legal work stoppage, now in its fifth day.

Most in poll think Reagan is lying

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's credibility on the Iran-Contra affair went down after his nationally televised speech on the matter, with a majority of Americans polled saying they believe he's lying about it, an ABC News survey says.

Following Reagan's speech Wednesday night, 58 percent of the 512 people contacted by telephone said Reagan had not told the truth about the Iran situation, while 38 percent said he had and 4 percent had no opinion.

Only 35 percent — 177 of the 512 surveyed — had heard the speech, ABC News found. Of that group, 55 percent said Reagan has not told the truth and 42 percent said he had. Of the non-viewers, 59 percent said Reagan is lying, while 37 percent said he is being honest.

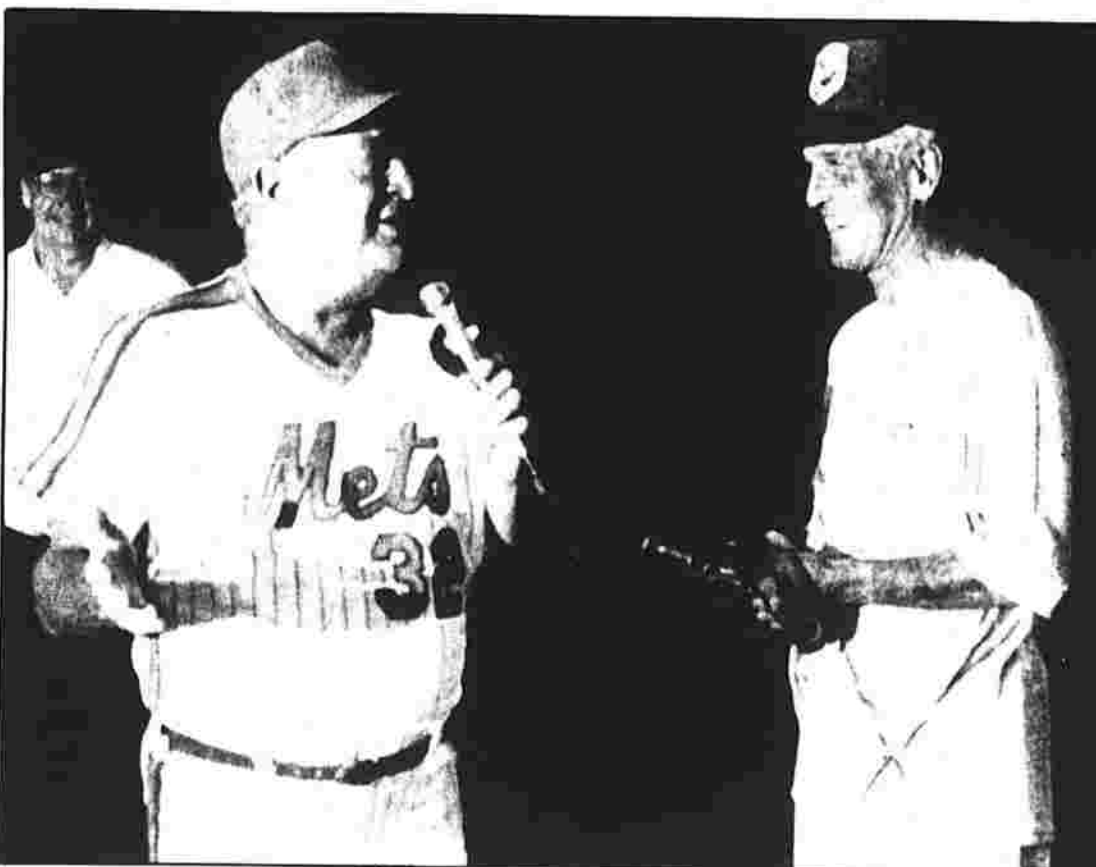

Students demonstrate in Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea — About 3,000 students and a disaffected campus in Seoul as hundreds of thousands of workers around the country were idled by strikes.

The four-hour demonstration at Seoul National University was largely peaceful. About 2,000 riot police were stationed outside the school's gate, but did not intervene. No clashes were reported.

The protesters, most of them students, danced and sang and raised clenched fists. They shouted "Down with military dictatorship" as speakers urged the government to release all political prisoners.

The crowds also voiced support for the striking workers, who are seeking more pay and freer unions.

Son says he was driven to kill

STAMFORD (AP) — A man accused of slaying his parents with an ax in the basement of their home had broken into the house to kill them a year earlier but fell asleep while waiting to attack, he said in a signed confession.

The confession by Patrick K. Campbell, 29, tells how he finally carried out the killings on July 1 of Kenneth Campbell, 56, and Anna May Campbell, 59, in their Darien home.

The confession was entered into the court record Thursday at Stamford Superior Court.

The slayings were triggered by the couple's refusal to accept charges for a telephone call Campbell was placing early July 1 from Danbury to a woman in Norwalk, according to the confession.

But the document says the incident capped a lifetime of despair that drove him to kill.

"I really didn't want to do it," the confession says. "I felt like something was forcing me to do it. The anger, the hurt, everything."

"About a year ago, I was going to kill my parents," Campbell's confession says. "I went into the house by breaking a window at the back of the house. I opened the window and climbed in. I was waiting for my parents to come home and I fell asleep. My parents came home and found me and (threat) me out of the house."

After his parents refused to accept charges for phone call last month, Campbell said: "I got mad."

He hitchhiked to Darien, broke into his parents' house around 2 p.m. and hid in the basement. He had a small ax in his hand, awaiting his parents' return.

His father came down the stairs first.

"He didn't see me," the confession says. "I hit him in the back of the head and he went down. I hit him some more until he was dead."

Campbell then dragged the body through a sliding door and into the yard. He hid again and waited for his mother.

She came down the stairs, calling her husband's name. Campbell struck her twice, the statement says.

Her body was dragged into the backyard and both were set on fire, police have said.

"I never got along with my parents all my life," says Campbell, who was adopted when he was 1 year old. "We were always fighting. They favored my sister Jill, not me."

Jill Campbell, 25, discovered her parents' bodies and called police.

Two independents run in 4th District

STAMFORD (AP) — Two other candidates besides those from the major parties are vying for the vacant 4th district congressional seat — a humorist and writer, and one who calls himself the War Against AIDS candidate.

The four candidates will face each other in Tuesday's special election. The seat was left vacant with the death of Stewart B. McKinney in May.

The two independents are Alan Abel, 62, and Westport writer, lecturer and humorist, and Nicholas Tarnia, 61, a Stamford plumber and War Against AIDS candidate.

The two major party candidates are Republican state Rep. Christopher Shays of Stamford, and Democrat Christine M. Niedermeier, a Fairfield attorney.

Abel, the author of eight books including "How To Thrive On Rejection," hopes to use humor and an unusual approach in running for office and, if elected, working as a congressman.

His campaign platform includes: • Embarrassing at least one member of Congress each year by presenting him or her with a "House of Shame" Award.

"If I go to Washington as a tourist, I can't do it take a tour, but as a provocateur I can raise hell," he said. "I will use my humor background to embarrass them to work."

• Minimum hourly wages paid to working prison inmates with portion going to the victims of their crimes and the balance toward rehabilitation.

• A federally-funded 24-hour cable television program listing job openings nationally.

• A national evaluation program for teachers to grade their educational skills and justify salary increases.

• Ten percent of every dollar allotted for defense weapons to be spent for AIDS research and low cost national health insurance.

"A lot of voters in Fairfield County will say, 'Why not send a maverick or a provocateur... one more politician in the chain gang will not do a lot.'" Abel said earlier this week. "If someone could get in there to embarrass other members of Congress to perform now — not five or 10-year-plans — we could solve the homeless and transportation problems."

Abel is a graduate of Ohio State University. After a stint of teaching, he began lecturing to corporations on "the creative process."

Both Abel and Tarnia are spending just a few thousand dollars on their campaigns. Abel plans to load a caboose he has in his backyard onto a flatbed truck and haul it

Panel OKs new rules for veteran's home

HARTFORD (AP) — A number of recommendations aimed at creating a better system for handling residents' money at the state Veterans Home and Hospital and the billing system for those residents have been approved by a state panel reviewing the Rockville Hill institution.

Panel members said the recommendations approved Thursday would create a better system that would charge many residents less for their care and also would give residents more control over their own money.

"We are not out to harm the veteran," said A. Bates Lyons, co-chairman of the 13-member panel and an undersecretary at the state Office of Policy and Management.

The panel is recommending the legislature pass a law that would clearly allow the institution to get payments from health insurers that care at the hospital. Blue Cross-Blue Shield has said its contract does not cover veterans' hospitals.

The panel is also recommending a sliding scale of billing for residents based on income and the kind of care received. Under the recommendation, the full fee for hospital care would be based on only 75 percent of actual cost.

Other recommendations include: application by the institution to become a Medicaid provider which would enable it to collect about $2 million a year, pending legislation to control their own bank accounts so long as they pay their monthly bills and are not deemed incompetent; and exempting at least $200 a month of each resident's income from billing.

Lyons said some recommendations could be implemented quickly through policy changes while others required changes in state laws.

Sen. Marie A. Herbst, D-Vernon, a panel member, pledged that the General Assembly's public safety committee would consider legislation

Another depression is brewing

MIAMI (AP) — A newly formed tropical depression with 35 mph winds moved toward Antigua today, while the Atlantic's first tropical storm, Arlene, teased Bermuda with 50 mph gusts and moved out to sea.

The depression, about 250 miles east-northeast of Antigua, already has generated sustained wind speeds of 35 mph and could become Tropical Storm Bret as early as tonight, said Bob Case, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center.

A tropical storm has sustained winds from 39 to 74 mph.

"Conditions are optimum for development," Case said. "The water is warm, the atmosphere is most favorable in later August and September, and it has days to develop over water without hitting land."

Overnight satellite photographs showed the depression was slowing its west-northwest movement.

National Weather Service specialist Bob Ebaugh said today.

"It's not quite as tight a (spiral) pattern as it was yesterday," he said, "but it still has its potential."

"Once it slows down its forward speed it has a better chance to reorganize," Ebaugh said.

At 6 a.m. EDT, the depression was moving at about 20 mph.

Meanwhile, the remnants of a tropical depression that hit Louisiana and Texas Monday stalled over the Gulf coast and dumped from 3 to 12 inches of rain on parts of southern Mississippi, coastal Alabama and the Florida panhandle.

The stalled depression could become a threat again, Case said.

"If it gets pushed out over Gulf waters there is a possibility it can strengthen," he said.

Arlene passed just north of Bermuda on Thursday morning and headed eastward. Arlene was expected to gradually weaken over the next 24 hours, he said. Two inches of rain fell on the island, but no damage was reported.

"It looks like 50 mph gusts were as strong as they saw" on Bermuda, said Case. "The winds were very strong out of the south, and there is still shower and thunderstorm activity."

At 6 a.m. EDT, Arlene was centered at 33 degrees north and 62 degrees west, or about 175 miles east-northeast of Bermuda. It was heading east at 5 to 10 mph and was expected to drift slowly eastward. Maximum winds were near 50 mph and little change in strength was expected.

"From here on in conditions just gradually improve," said Case. "The winds will gradually decrease and the rain will gradually diminish."

Dr. Paul Pion, left, a veterinarian at the University of California at Davis, and co-worker Dr. Mark Kittleson say some commercial cat food has caused a severe heart ailment in cats.

Cat foods change to make them safe

NEW YORK (AP) — Commercial cat foods that had been found to cause a feline heart ailment that kills tens of thousands of cats in this country each year have been changed to make them safe, a researcher says.

"What we have found applies directly only to cats," he said. "Whether there's a human component, we don't know yet. We have people who are looking at that."

Pion said the products found to cause low taurine in cats have been now been supplemented with taurine.

"There's no blame here, and there's no way anybody could have known taurine deficiency caused this disease," Pion said. "Taurine is found in fish and meat, he said.

Bork debate spills out of Washington

By The Associated Press

President Reagan is on vacation and so is Congress, but there's no break in the debate over Robert H. Bork's Supreme Court nomination.

Both the president and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., complained Thursday that the Democratic-controlled Senate is stalling the nomination.

"The American people want to see a full complement of nine justices on the bench when the Supreme Court reconvenes," Reagan said in a speech in North Platte, Neb.

But the man controlling the pace, Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said Bork is "not a moderate fellow" and the nomination is in the middle of "a major, major philosophical disagreement."

Speaking at a ranch in North Platte, Reagan recalled that former Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., whom Bork would replace, "said that it wasn't fair to the Supreme Court, or the parties to the case before it, for the court to operate at less than full strength."

"Well, since last June, that's just what's happened. The approval process for Judge Bork's nomination is already the longest in 25 years."

The president said the workload of the justices' law clerks in preparing for the court's fall term, which begins in October, has reached the breaking point.

"The delays and added burdens that have already occurred can't be undone," Reagan said. "But what can be done is completing the confirmation process well before the Supreme Court begins its October term."

Biden, in Logan, Iowa, where he is campaigning, said he doubted that senators holding the key swing votes will be influenced by Reagan's complaints.

Biden said the president's decision to talk about the Bork nomination ahead of other issues such as arms control is a signal that the president views the nomination as his top priority.

He said Reagan is attempting to do through the court what he couldn't accomplish through Congress and that Bork is too ideologically rigid and would realign the court drastically on a series of important social issues.

Dole, addressing the Fraternal Order of Police convention in Mobile, Ala., accused Biden of being a hostage by waiting 70 days after the nomination to begin confirmation hearings. They will start Sept. 15.

AIDS risk for medics

When paramedics become worried about their possible exposure to AIDS, the consequences can be serious.

More and more frequently, health workers are several levels are giving thought to changing careers. Obviously the threat of exposure to AIDS is affecting people who are now choosing life careers.

Unless precautions against contacting AIDS from the body fluids of victims prove effective soon, a day might come when there will be a severe shortage of people willing to be involved in health care.

Obviously there is no easy solution, because there is no cure for AIDS and because once a paramedic or other medical aide tests positive for the AIDS virus, whether or not he ever contracts the disease, he becomes ineffective.

But there is something that can be done. Paramedics should be required to take whatever precautions are developed, even if the gloves, goggles and other devices make their job more cumbersome. And it probably should be presumed as a matter of fact that if a medical worker gets AIDS he contracted it in the course of his work, unless someone can prove otherwise. That would be very costly, but the alternative could be even more costly down the line.

Getting along without border

Connecticut and Rhode Island have been getting along pretty well for a lot of years without legally fixing the boundaries between the two states.

That revelation is a bit surprising in light of the fact that much smaller jurisdictions, like the town of Manchester and the Eighth Utilities District, keep running into problems over common boundaries.

Maybe there is less difference between eastern Connecticut and western Rhode Island, assuming Rhode Island is wide enough to have an east and a west, than there is between the parts of Manchester.

Everyone seems to agree on where Connecticut ends and Rhode Island begins, but the two states have never taken the necessary legal steps to establish the line and mark it accurately. Some of the marking stones set in the 1800s are inaccurate. An effort to set things right in the 1940s ran afoul of a world war and another in 1960s petered out, apparently because Rhode Island didn't want to spend the money for markers.

It is probably very important to somebody to have the line officially and legally fixed, but if the two states have been able to live with the situation this long, it's likely the problem can wait a few more decades.

Executions: The thrill is gone in Texas

They've got a heap of Texas-sized problems in Texas these days. The one getting the most publicity is the state's inability to find money to meet its budget. But there's another man-sized problem which is that people in the Lone Star country are getting blasé about capital punishment. With a backlog of more than 250 men on death row, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox is worried that people are paying so little attention to executions these days that the deterrent effect of these ceremonies has been seriously vitiated.

He says that "The public appears to take this in stride. For these things to be conducted in the still of the night with no crowds around, it is likely not to bring about the deterrent impact that people would like for it to have." Forgetting the capital crimes the AG himself may be committing against the English language when he attempts coherent speech, his point is well taken. When executions were first reintroduced there were speeches pro and con, demonstrations and even collegiate beer busts outside the penitentiary walls on death nights. In those days the business of official human sacrifice seemed rare and terrifying. Now the thrill is gone for the college crowd, and the anti-capital punishment people are fagged out from too many all-night vigils in too many different places.

TO STIR UP INTEREST, Attorney General Mattox is proposing letting the public in to see executions close up. "The public should have an understanding of what takes place," he argues without explaining why, inasmuch as the public doesn't understand the tax system or why the

No lack of logic or common sense

To the Editor:

This is in reply to Anton Larson's letter of Tuesday, Aug. 11.

Speaking about all of us who voted against forced consolidation, Mr. Larson says we aren't stupid, just lacking in logic and common sense.

I personally prefer not to be analyzed in the paper by someone who gets some of his ideas from a crystal ball and the rest from some phantom non-resident. I believe that all who voted against forced consolidation thought the issue through and used both logic and common sense.

The volunteer fire department has spent 99 years of service in Manchester and is still going strong. The difference between the town and the Eighth District is more than fire stations and sewers.

One difference is the Board of Directors. The town Board of Directors tried to push through a bond issue without a referendum. If the coming referendum is "nay," will the board consider it only an advisory vote and continue to look for other ways to get what it wants? The town Board of Directors certainly has not heeded the people's wishes to get some potholes and sidewalks repaired before spending millions on an empty lot in Buckland.

On another subject, I agree with the Main Street merchants that the J.C. Penney Co. zoning should be changed. Comparing J.C. Penney to Manchester Modes is like comparing apples and

When a federal worker wins back pay and a promotion that was denied to her because she blew the whistle on illegal behavior, that's news. It happened recently to Anastasia Miragias, a secretary in the Boston office of the Housing and Urban Development Department. During an internal investigation of a HUD grant to the city of Manchester, N.H., Miragias told an inspector general's interviewer that her boss had several phone calls about grant with a former HUD official employed by Manchester — a violation of federal conflict-of-interest laws.

Her boss, John C. Mongan, thereupon refused to approve promotions for Miragias, even though other supervisors supported her. Miragias filed a formal complaint, and an administrative law judge decided in her favor. The judge was unimpressed, with Mongan's explanation that he didn't think Miragias could be trusted with confidential information. High-tech sales to Soviets were known in 198

WASHINGTON — The U.S. intelligence community took far too long to discover the illegal sale of submarine propeller-making machinery to the Soviets by C. Itoh and Toshiba — especially since major clues on such diversions from Japan were available as early as 1984.

We can say this with some authority because we were reporting that year on the Soviets' legal and illegal acquisition of high technology from Japan. Dale Van Atta flew to Tokyo to investigate the situation, while our associate Michael Binstein developed Washington sources.

The result from columns in April and May 1984 that offered solid evidence that "the KGB has found Japan a rich source of high-technology products that can be turned to military advantage by the Kremlin."

We reported that the CIA had uncovered "about three dozen documented cases of high-tech diversion by the Soviets through Japan since 1968." More than half of these, we noted, had been approved by the Japanese government, which "put short-term profits ahead of the West's long-term security needs."

We even pinpointed the areas of Soviet interest, reporting that "the KGB has gone after micro-electronic equipment, machine tools, computers, telecommunications, automation devices and specialty steel." The Itoh/Toshiba sale was in the machine-tool category, and enabled the Soviets to develop quieter submarines that are much more difficult to detect.

Even if the CIA brass wasn't reading our columns, they might at least have paid some heed to a highly sensitive report completed in 1984 by their own analysts. Still classified "Secret," the report not only described the kind of tricks that Itoh and Toshiba later used to disguise their illegal sale, but actually identified Itoh as one of five Japanese companies to watch for illegal trade with the Soviets. The others were Mitsubishi, Mitsu, Marubeni and a small trading company, Taiyaku.

If there is a truth in illegal trade it is that no two cases involving illegal shipments of goods to proscribed destinations are ever the same. "The secret report stated. But it cited as a 'typical example' the following scenario:

"First the Soviets, through a foreign trade organization, would indicate one of the 'friendly' Japanese companies that it is interested in obtaining a certain piece of... restricted technology."

"The friendly company... contacts a local wholesaler who would place an order with a major trading firm to import the equipment that contains the restricted technology from the United States.... The wholesaler arranges to resell the item to either the friendly company or to a 'cutout' firm."

"Ultimately, the friendly firm takes possession of the article and extracts the restricted portion of the equipment. The extracted portion is then installed inside a low-grade piece of machinery that is sent to an exporter for shipment to the Soviets."

"The exporter and wholesaler are often unwilling of the illegal nature of the transaction, and the cursory check by Japanese customs officials is not sufficient to determine the exact nature of the machinery's internal components."

In the Itoh/Toshiba case, this scenario was followed almost exactly. The Soviet foreign trade organization, Tekmashimport, contacted a "friendly" Japanese company, Wako Koeki, which then found a company that would supply the desired technology (in this case made in Japan). The company was Toshiba Machinery, a subsidiary of Toshiba Corp.

Toshiba Machinery then asked its regular export broker, Itoh, to be the "cutout" firm that actually handled the sale.

United order to P&W worth $400 million

CHICAGO (AP) — United Airlines says it has ordered 60 jet engines and spares from Pratt & Whitney for an estimated $400 million.

The "4000 turbo fan" jet engines will be used to power 15 Boeing 747-400s, which were ordered in May, the company said Thursday.

The new engine design will provide significantly greater thrust and fuel efficiency than engines now in use in wide-body aircraft, and engine maintenance costs should be reduced up to 25 percent, according to United.

Four of the Pratt & Whitney-earmarked 747-400s will be delivered to United in early 1989, said spokesman Matt Goring of Allegis Corp., United's parent company.

The remaining 11 aircraft will be delivered by 1995, the Chicago-based company said.

The aircraft will be used on trans-Pacific routes, the company said.

"We are certain this airplane engine combination will set the standard for economy and efficiency in Pacific air travel well into the 21st century," said United Chairman James H. Hartigan.

"United Airlines is an old and valued customer, and we are pleased they continue demonstrating great confidence in our products," said Selwyn D. Berson, executive vice president for Pratt & Whitney, based in East Hartford, Conn.

Wholesale prices up a modest 0.2%

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose a modest 0.2 percent last month as large jumps in gasoline and heating oil costs were offset by slightly lower food prices, the government said today.

The July increase followed an identical 0.2 percent jump in June and a 0.3 percent rise in May, bolstering Reagan administration predictions that inflation would slow in the second half of 1987.

So far this year, inflation at the wholesale level was running at an annual rate of 4.2 percent. Through June, the annualized rate had been 4.5 percent. July's increase, if it persisted for 12 months, would amount to an annual inflation rate of 2.0 percent.

The administration is forecasting that increases in both wholesale and retail prices, by year's end, will slow a full percentage point from the annualized gains recorded in the first six months of the year.

"After a temporary increase early this year, inflation is returning to the 4 percent range characteristic of the first three years of the current expansion," said Beryl W. Sprinkel, President Reagan's chief economic adviser.

As for last month, the Labor Department said food prices dropped 0.6 percent after large

IRA commissions can't be deducted

QUESTION: My wife has a "self-directed" individual retirement account with a discount brokerage firm. She buys and sells stocks and other securities for the IRA.

ANSWER: No. The Internal Revenue Service came out four-square against that notion last year in Revenue Ruling 86-142. A commission is added to the cost when a security is purchased and deducted from the proceeds when sold. In its ruling, the IRS said those commissions are "intrinsic to the value of the assets" in the IRA and stressed that tax-deductible contributions cannot be added to the IRA to offset the commissions.

Furthermore, if your wife puts money into her IRA above and beyond her allowed contribution, that extra money will be counted as an "excess contribution."

She would then be subject to a penalty tax equal to 6 percent of her excess contribution. And that's just a one-time penalty. It would be levied each and every year until she removes the excess contribution from her IRA.

Like all IRA participants, however, your wife can make an extra payment to cover the annual fee most IRA trustees and sponsors charge. The terminology varies but that fee usually is called a "custodial," "administrative" or "fiduciary" charge.

For 1986 and previous years, that annual IRA fee could be taken as a itemized tax deduction on a federal income tax return if the IRA participant paid it separately. Beginning this year, itemized deductions can be taken only to the extent that they exceed 2 percent of adjusted gross income.

QUESTION: Why does a brokerage firm charge custodial fees for maintaining IRAs? At $60 a year — $30 for my IRA and $30 for my wife's — I think that's going too far. The brokerage does have the use of our IRA money for its benefit. I would think that would be sufficient.

ANSWER: There are expenses involved in the paperwork, time and effort of handling your accounts. At $30 per IRA, the brokerage might be breaking even, or perhaps, turning a small profit. The brokerage does not have the use of your money "for its benefit." An IRA at a brokerage firm is a self-directed account. You own the assets — all the securities and cash — in the account. The brokerage can't use those assets in its business.

Trade deficit in June worst shortfall ever

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit widened to $15.71 billion in June, possibly the worst shortfall ever, the government reported today.

The change in the Commerce Department's merchandise trade deficit figure, from $14.04 billion in May, was led by a $2 billion surge in petroleum and other imports.

The widening of the trade gap came even though the government, with this report, began using new calculations showing smaller deficits with Canada.

The change in calculations was an effort to correct a previous underreporting of exports to Canada, the agency said.

Without the "Canadian adjustment," the trade shortfall would have been $16.32 billion — a clear record.

A deficit of $16.05 billion was posted in July 1986. However, that number was not adjusted by the government to take into account the Canadian modifications.

The department analysts said that June's figure may well have been the all-time record. "It may well be a record, but we don't know that. It's on a different basis," said agency analyst Adren Cooper.

In a record, the June 1987 deficit is the second-worst on record without question. Imports increased in June to $36.84 billion, from $34.82 billion the month before.

Exports, meanwhile, also increased, but much more modestly — to $21.13 billion from $20.78 billion in May.

The May deficit had originally been reported as $14.4 billion.

Once again, the United States ran its worst single-country trade deficit with Japan — $5.35 billion in June, up from $5.07 billion in May. It ran a $2.92 billion deficit with Western Europe, up from $2.60 billion in May.

The deficit with Canada was a relatively small $530 million — after the agency's adjustment that improved the trade balance by $68.5 million.

Commerce Department officials said earlier this week that they would start using Canadian figures on shipments from the United States into Canada, claiming they were more reliable than U.S. figures.

They said this is because many truckers failed to complete detailed declarations for the U.S. Customs Service on what they are taking into Canada.

By contrast, Canadian customs procedures are more stringent and exports missed by U.S. authorities are usually logged as imports on the Canadian side of the border, the officials said.

The decision to use Canadian figures on U.S. exports was expected to improve the U.S. trade deficit — at least on paper — by about $10 billion a year.

For all of 1986, the U.S. trade deficit was $15.2 billion, revised downward from the $16.3 billion previously reported.

The deficit this year, for the first half of 1987, was running at $163.9 billion.

The projected increase in the trade deficit in 1987 over 1986 came as a disappointment to many economists, who had expected to see a turnaround in trade accounts by now.

More women run radio-TV news

WASHINGTON — More women are running radio and television newscasts around the nation, according to a new survey from the Radio-Television News Directors Association.

Women were news directors at 27 percent of commercial radio stations sampled last summer, compared with 21 percent in the summer of 1985, according to a survey released by the association this week.

The survey found 14 percent of TV news directors were women last year, compared with 10 percent in 1985, with gains coming mostly at independent TV stations rather than network TV affiliates.

Taking out insurance by James Jacoby

South arrived at a three no-trump contract, even though East had opened the bidding with one heart. And it looked fairly easy if the club suit divided 3-2, surely a reasonable expectation. In such circumstances the proficient declarer looks for some additional insurance.

A low heart was led to East's ace and a heart was returned. When South put in the 10, West won the jack and played a third heart. Declarer now won the nine. Meanwhile three diamonds had been discarded from dummy. Although it was likely the club suit would pose no problem, South could see that taking six club tricks would create some discarding cramps in his hand. For example, if he played the king of diamonds and the spade finesse lost, the defenders might take two diamond tricks to set him. So it seemed prudent to just lead the jack of spades out of his hand. East won the king and, fearing that the club suit was solid, cashed the ace of diamonds and played another, hoping West had the king. Declarer won the king and now proved his mettle.

He cashed the king of hearts, on which West discarded a spade. He then played the ace and queen of spades. Now what was poor West to do? If he threw a club, all of dummy's clubs would become good. And if he let his queen of diamonds go, the four of diamonds left in South's hand would be a winner. By not taking the club suit for granted, declarer had brought in three no-trumps.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Velcro can hem a child's jeans by Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY - When my son was young and growing fast, I hand-basted Velcro strips placed in two or three places on his jeans' bottom edges, then folded up the bottoms to the correct length and pressed the velcro strips together. I let them down when I washed the jeans. These jeans grew with my child and the method didn't seem to leave as much of a crease mark as when you make an actual hem. - BARBARA

DEAR BARBARA - This is a great Pointer for those with fast-growing young bodies to cloth! Just to clarify the method, a strip of the "loop" half of the Velcro can be sewn at the very bottom inside edge of the jeans, then strips of the "fuzz" half of the Velcro can be sewn at intervals inside the leg as needed to make various lengths. Your helpful Pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book "Polly's Pointers: 101 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book may order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - I like making deviled eggs in many ways other than the conventional way. When mixing the egg yolks, I add sandwich spread instead of mayonnaise. To make the mixture different, I use chopped olives. I decorate each stuffed egg half with a half olive. Or, use one of the following mixed in with the egg yolk mixture: Finely chopped ham or other meat. Grated cheese, topped with paprika. Grated carrots or dried parsley or other vegetables, dried or chopped fine. Very crisp bacon or bacon bits, crumbled. Finely chopped pickles. Your favorite dried herbs or spices. Tiny or finely chopped shrimp or other seafood. Any leftover egg mixture can be put on cheese or other snack crackers, or even used to make tiny sandwiches to be served along with the deviled eggs. - EUNICE faculty, many of whom have experience in more than one discipline, he said.

Herdman said that the only drawback to Daube's style of administration is perhaps a tendency to move too fast. But during his years at Berkshire, Daube learned that things do not move quite as quickly as he might like, Herdman said.

Wendy Waiz, who was a student trustee before graduating from Berkshire Community College last May, said Manchester Community College is lucky to be getting Daube.

"He's done a lot of productive work at MCC," said Waiz. "He's student-oriented as well as faculty-oriented — he's very well-rounded in that respect," she said.

McKirley said that Daube's starting date has not been set because of his commitments to the University of Massachusetts. It is expected, however, that he will take over in early October.

Daube's wife, Linda, was with him when he spoke at MCC this morning. The couple has three teen-age children.

Lion tamer Julius Von Uhl and his assistant, Linda Pritchard, are married Thursday inside a cage with six lions in Warren, Mich.

Lion tamers have a wild wedding

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — Julius Von Uhl and Linda Pritchard probably were nervous at their wedding, but so were the six lions watching from inside the cage where the ceremony took place.

Uhl, a 49-year-old lion tamer, and Pritchard, his assistant of six years, were married Thursday night at the suburban Detroit dealership.

Von Uhl, a Cedar Key, Fla., native and a lion tamer since his youth in Hungary, met Pritchard while she took riding lessons at his horse farm in Florida, Spisock said.

Pritchard, 23, a Jacksonville, Fla., native, said earlier that the lions' presence during the nuptials was less frightening than the prospect of marriage. "We're already married to the lions," she said.

"We travel with them, feed them and take care of them. They are our family," Best, of the United Universal Church of God, said in a letter to reporters that God told her: "You should do that lion tamer's wedding, he's looking for someone to go in the Lion's Den."

Teens risk their health

• About eight percent of seventh graders and 44 percent of 12th graders say they either drink and drive, or ride with a driver who is under the influence of drugs or alcohol. Car injuries are a primary risk factor for teen-agers, DeMusis said.

"These are steady increases," DeMusis said.

DeMusis said the survey, administered by the health department's education office, helps school officials tailor health education programs.

More than 70 percent of the schools that participated in the survey have altered their health education curricula, she said. Students also get individual computer printouts that highlight their potential health problems and offer prevention advice, she said.

DeMusis said the data was not structured in a way to pinpoint geographic areas in Connecticut where bad health behaviors were more likely to be practiced among teen-agers.

The survey is based on a program started in Rhode Island and has accumulated two data sets, one for the 1985-86 school year and a second for the 1986-87 school year, she said.

Some of the 1986-87 data had not been completely analyzed and combined with data from the previous year, she said. For example, results of teen-agers' knowledge of sexual matters have been analyzed only for the first year, DeMusis said.

The first year's data, encompassing about 7,000 students, shows that 17 percent of teen-agers were not sure if engaging in intercourse once without effective birth control could result in pregnancy. Eighteen percent did not know that having several sexual partners increased the chances of getting sexually transmitted diseases.

"There is a need to increase students' knowledge" of sexual matters, DeMusis said.

The survey did not ask questions about the students' sexual behavior, she said.

In the first year's data, two-thirds of the students' health practices were rated as less than excellent, DeMusis said.

"That definitely is cause for concern. If you think about it, if children are in less than excellent health (now), what can we expect to be their future?" she said.

DeMusis was encouraged by the use of seat belts by teen-agers. About 50 percent of the teen-agers said they don't always use seat belts, while DeMusis said about 86 percent of 11,000 Rhode Island teen-agers surveyed several years ago said they don't always use the restraints.

Obituaries

Lois Norton

Lois Norton, 73, of 144 Lenox St., died Thursday evening at a local convalescing home. She was the wife of Charles F. Norton.

Born in East Hartford Aug. 13, 1914, she was a Manchester resident since 1948. Before retiring eight years ago, she was employed as the children's department manager at the former Burton's store on Main Street for many years.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Maj. Thomas J. Norton, who is stationed at the Nellis Air Force Base, Las Vegas, Nev.

The funeral is Saturday at 10:30 a.m. at the Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St. Burial will be in East Cemetery. Calling hours are Saturday from 9:30 a.m. until the time of the service.

Memorial donations may be made to a charity of the donor's choice.

Ships avoid place where mines found

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Ships avoided a busy anchorage just south of the Persian Gulf today despite assurances it has been cleared of floating mines, shipping executives said.

The newspaper al-Khaleej meanwhile quoted a United Arab Emirates official as warning there may be small "booby-trapped" boats operated by remote control in the same waters outside the Strait of Hormuz.

The Emirates' Ministry of Agriculture warned fishermen and swimmers Thursday not to approach "suspicious objects and small boats on the eastern coast of the country," said the paper, based in Sharjah.

Emirates' President Sheikh Zayed Bin Sultan Al-Nahyan is to fly to Damascus Saturday to enlist Syria, which has good relations with Iran, in efforts to end the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. Developments arising from the conflict are heightening tension in the gulf, through which passes 20 percent of the oil used in the non-communist world.

Coast guards of the United Arab Emirates and Oman, supported by a Saudi Arabian mine sweeper, today continued search for mines in the Gulf of Oman about 30 miles south of the Strait of Hormuz, sole inlet to the Persian Gulf. The anchorage is off Fujairah.

Sharjah and Fujairah are two of the seven sheikhdoms that make up the United Arab Emirates federation.

The U.S. Navy was reportedly checking for mines farther off the Emirates. Iran, which has been accused of laying the mines, offered to help in the search.

Meanwhile, a Soviet destroyer steamed southward through the Suez Canal from the Mediterranean Sea, sources at the canal authority said.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the destroyer reported its destination was the Red Sea and gave no further information. They said they had no way of knowing whether the vessel was headed for the Persian Gulf.

At the northern end of the gulf, Kuwaiti tankers flying American flags were loading cargoes in preparation for their trip south under U.S. Navy escort.

"It's all normal, and there are no more mines," an official at the Fujairah harbor control said in a telephone interview.

He reiterated a statement put out overnight by Col. Saeed Samansour, the Fujairah police chief, ending a day-long exclusion zone in the 35-square-mile area where ships anchor before they travel through the Hormuz and up the Persian Gulf.

Samsour said that two mines had been located and detonated, and a thorough combing of the Emirates' coastal waters showed there no longer was a threat.

The port official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, denied reports that as many as six mines had been spotted in the waters off the coastline of the United Arab Emirates and Oman.

"One suspect object that was spotted in Oman's territorial waters turned out to be the hump of a floating dead camel," he said.

"From a distance, the objects are not clear and everyone has been jittery."

Executives at shipping agencies in the U.A.E. and along the gulf said, however, that they remained skeptical about the situation.

"I cannot believe we are through with the mines. They seem to be everywhere," said a Western shipping executive based in Saudi Arabia.

Officials had closed part of the Fujairah anchorage early Thursday after the reported discovery of a sixth mine.

Actor-singer John Schneider is urging children to write letters on behalf of peace, to be delivered to the United Nations in October.

Actor-singer urges letters for peace

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Actor-singer John Schneider is spearheading a letter-writing campaign for peace that he says could be the most important humanitarian project backed by the music industry.

Schneider, who starred on the TV show "Dukes of Hazzard," is co-chairman of the movement "Peace on Earth for a Day."

He is encouraging youngsters to write letters to a special address on behalf of peace. The letters will be delivered to the United Nations on Oct. 23, the same day radio stations are being urged to simulcast a song Schneider has written about peace called "The Gunfighter."

The song notes the similarities between gunfighters and the roles of President Reagan and Soviet Premier Gorbachev.

"If not fighting for a day is out of the question, maybe we've gone more every than we think," Schneider said. "No one thinks we'll not have another war. The next one will be our last. It's not a good thought."

The project is the latest in a series of humanitarian ventures by the music industry that have included Band Aid, the record "We Are the World," Hands Across America and Farm Aid.

"This is not a fund-raiser," Schneider said, comparing the project with the others. "Nothing like this has been done. We're not selling records and we're not asking anyone for anything. We're not selling T-shirts or holding hands or saving starving people."

"We just want people to think we want people to write us, to write their congressmen or to write the United Nations. We are initiating peace and maybe saving something bigger — the entire world."

Other performers endorsing the project include Bryan Adams, Loverboy, Roy Clark, Restless Heart, Dan Seals, Sawyer Brown, Michael Martin Murphey, The Whites, the Bellamy Brothers, T. Graham Brown, Chilliwack and Lynn Anderson.

As of late July, an estimated 13,000 letters had been received in Calhoun, Ga., the home base for "Peace on Earth for a Day." Officials expect the number to reach 1 million as schools reopen and classes start letter-writing projects.

One unsigned letter says: "It will be fun for one day to not fight or have a war." Another includes a crude drawing of a helicopter and a soldier, and says: "Do you remember the Vietnam, everyone was fighting your brothers, and we keep peace for one day?"

But the letter Schneider remembers the most is one from a youngster, who just wanted peace at home. "He didn't want to see his parents fighting anymore."

Schneider says children are amazingly astute. "We as adults get caught up in red tape and our plans. We forget to look at the obvious. Children don't. I used to be a magician and the hardest thing to fool was kids. They are looking where you don't want them to."

The art of railroads at night

By Robert Borr
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Steam locomotives are not subtle things, and that's why O. Winston Link loves them.

"The steam engine is alive; it's almost a human being," the photographer said recently. "It has many sounds, and from the sound it makes you can tell what its ailment is and what it's doing, whether it's going fast or struggling or just sitting still, pumping air."

Steam locomotives assaulted the senses with their noise, their pollution, their heat and immense size.

In Link's night-time photographs, however, the locomotives of the Norfolk & Western Railroad often hover in the background of a down-home scene: a couple standing on a porch, kids playing gasoline or swimming in a river.

In other scenes the locomotives intrude, sometimes disturbingly. One such picture frames an approaching passenger train within a signboard which announces the location: Solitude.

"I did that all by myself, and I wanted to get out of there fast. It had a real weird, lonely, sinister feeling in that place," Link said. "There was nothing there at all. That siding was well named."

The image is as unsettling as surrealist painter Rene Magritte's "Time Transfixed," in which a steam locomotive flies out of a fireplace into a living room. Indeed, many of the night-time photographs, bathed in intense, artificial light, recall Magritte's "Empire of Lights," a series of night scenes under bright daylight skies.

Link denies being influenced by the surrealists, or anyone else.

"One of the things they found out that surprised them in England when I was there was that I never studied art, I never looked at any art books, I never studied under any other photographer and I didn't know what the hell anybody was doing in photography. I was just doing my own," he said in an interview in his midtown studio.

Of all the photographers who have chased locomotives, Link is one of the few to secure a place as an artist. A copy of his most famous picture, "Hot Shot Eastbound," is owned by the Museum of Modern Art, and he sells prints for $1,000 each.

That picture was made at a drive-in theater, with two lovebirds in a convertible in the foreground watching an airplane on the screen while a freight train roars past.

"Everything that's difficult in photography is there: depth of field, darkness, motion," Link said.

The best of Link's work was recently collected in "Steam, Steel and Stars" (Harry N. Abrams, $35), bringing his pictures within the budget of those who can't afford "Hot Shot Eastbound" or $500 for any of his other prints.

The most difficult pictures took days to set up, were as thoroughly planned as a military maneuver. Link had to see the picture in his mind, then calculate the intensity of the flashbulbs and diagram their placement.

"There were very few failures; I always went back and corrected them and got the picture," he said. "I had three cameras (two 4-by-5 Graphic-Vias, and one Speed Graphic) synchronized, and I could handle a mile of wire and 60 flashbulbs."

In one case, he spent six days setting up a shot, which required carrying heavy equipment across a river and stringing lights in trees.

"It's a beautiful sight when that flash goes off," he said. "The whole world lights up and you get so intense you can see everything."

Link received extraordinary cooperation from the Norfolk & Western, the last major railroad to abandon steam. If necessary, dispatchers would slow trains so that Link had time to replace flashbulbs. The coal-hauling railroad had only one condition: no pictures of black smoke, because black smoke meant coal was being wasted.

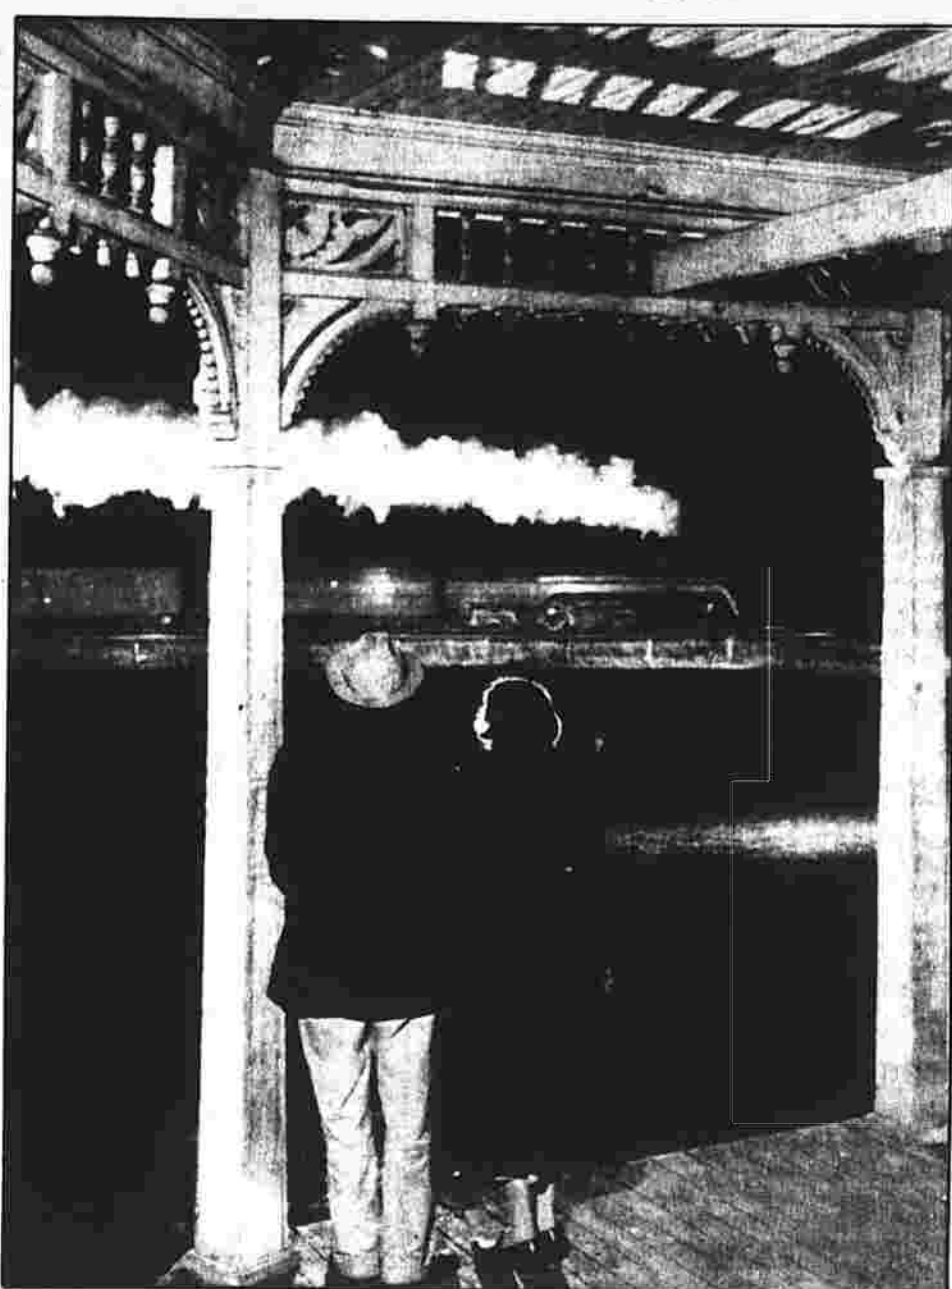

Link once flashed his bulbs on a passenger engine which was belching black smoke. He called a dispatcher, the train was stopped and backed up, and they did it again, delaying the train about 30 minutes.

"Norfolk & Western was ideal," Link said. "It went through interesting country, and they had beautiful locomotives, and everything was well maintained. They were making money, and that helps. Everyone's happy."

"They didn't pay me, my agreement was that I wouldn't charge them anything and all wanted was their cooperation. They gave me that cooperation, they gave me 450 engines to use with and 2,500 miles of track and about 20,000 employees."

The project ended in May 1960 when the Norfolk & Western stopped running steam engines. He also made several records of locomotives at work.

"Thing is, I went to extremes with this," said Link, 76. "I neglected everything but my business. I had to do commercial work, industrial things, in order to finance it."

Photographer and steam locomotive enthusiast O. Winston Link sometimes spent days at a time arranging and shooting just one of the dynamic, surrealistic photographs featured in his recently published book, "Steam, Steel and Stars." This Link picture shows a Class J locomotive in Virginia in 1957.

Duran Duran, back with its first album since 1983, has three of the original five members: from left, Nick Rhodes, John Taylor and Simon LeBon.

Duran Duran becomes 'Notorious'

By Mary Campbell
The Associated Press

Duran with its first LP since 1983, "Notorious." But not with the original personnel. Roger Taylor has dropped out of the music business and Andy Taylor has gone solo.

"Had the Power Station or Arcadia been a lot more successful, then Duran Duran probably wouldn't have got itself back together again," said Le Bon, who was interviewed during a 2½-month summer tour.

It was May 1, 1986, when Duran Duran reunited. "We'd already realized that Roger was going to leave," Le Bon said. "He'd spoken to us at Christmas. We made sure he knew if he wanted to come along he could."

"Andy kind of left us in the lurch. It's a whole drama that surrounds that episode in the band's history, culminating in too many lawyers and accountants getting involved. It got quite nasty."

"I don't know if Andy realized we would do it without him. I think he thought we would quietly sink into obscurity, leaving him free to carry on by himself. I spent two weeks chasing him down. He said he'd do it and he didn't turn up."

"We worked it out eventually. It was quite difficult to make an album going to lawyers' meetings and laying down tracks in the studio afterwards. The God for (producer) Nile Rodgers; he held it all together."

In Japan, Duran Duran performed for 35,000 in Tokyo by playing two March dates in a 2,000-seat theater in Fukuoka.

"I think it's harder to play a small place than a big one," Le Bon said.

He's bucking the odds with a double bass

NEW YORK (AP) — What James Galway is to the flute and Richard Stoltzman is to the clarinet, Gary Karr is to the double bass.

Karr, who has played 100 or more concerts and recitals a season for some time, is celebrating his 25th anniversary as a double bass soloist.

Though his career really began in 1961 when Thor Johnson heard him at a string players convention in Puerto Rico and invited him to be a soloist on a tour with the Chicago Little Symphony. Karr considers a televised 1962 young people's concert, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, as his real start.

"I had approached management companies; nobody could imagine a double bass player making a career. After the concert with Bernstein, I was immediately booked all over America," he said.

"I was delighted to hear a year ago that a management company approached a bass player to be on their list. That was history, I thought."

Karr's career has been marked by the supernatural. It all started when the widow of Serge Koussevitzky, who played double bass before he became a conductor, first heard Karr play. She called him the next day and told him she had seen her husband's aura near Karr.

She gave him Koussevitzky's bass, made in 1811. "She saw me as the continuation of the Koussevitzky legend," Karr said. "She took me to his grave near Tanglewood (Mass.). I learned at his grave I'd started studying the double bass the week he died. I was 9."

"A number of psychics... have come up after concerts and told me, 'Did you know when you're playing there's a man standing next to you in a long frock coat?'"

"There are times I'm playing in public, especially when I'm playing music Koussevitzky composed, when I get the sensation that someone else is playing me, that I'm hardly even participating in the event."

On the young people's concert, Karr performed a piece by Paganini, a soulful prayer by Ernest Bloch and "The Swan" from Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals." Bernstein had asked him to play "The Elephant Waltz." Karr, a student at the Juilliard School, balked.

"I said it's such an insult to the elephant, the most beautiful, graceful animal in the zoo," he said. "I convinced him Saint-Saens made a mistake. So I played 'The Swan.' Bernstein asked me if I had orchestration to it. I lied and said yes. Just having taken an orchestration course I thought I was an expert. I went home that night and wrote it. It took forever to copy out the parts. It was worth it."

Bassist Gary Karr proclaims his affection for his instrument.

Alice dresses up

This photographic portrait called "Alice," from a series titled "Dressing Up," is included in the new exhibit at the Atelier Studio, 27 East St., New Milford. The show, which opens Saturday, includes watercolors, oil paintings and photographs. The gallery is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Roll out the barrel

The Barrelhouse Boys will be featured at a free concert Saturday evening at 6 in Lions Park, Hebron. In case of rain, the concert will be moved to the RHM High School auditorium. This group entertains with a wash tub bass, a few jugs, harmonicas, kazos and other unusual instruments.

British are coming!

Putnam Memorial State Park in Bethel will be the scene of the largest Revolutionary War re-enactment in New England this weekend. British "soldiers" will do battle with Americans and other Revolutionary forces. Troops from 60 regiments in 11 states and Canada will participate. Both Saturday and Sunday, the public may tour American and British military camps, as they would have looked in 1778. Admission is free to the weekend events, which will be held from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The park is southeast of Danbury, at the junction of Routes 107 and 88.

For couch potatoes

Have you heard the latest? It's now a compliment to call someone a couch potato! So if you're looking for status, and a new couch or two, you might want to look into the State of Connecticut's giant tag sale, on the campus of the University of Connecticut in Storrs. There will be lots of used couches, as well as tables, chairs, lamps and other furnishings. The sale is 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Towers Complex. Follow the signs when you get to the campus.

Don't be depressed

The annual Depression Era Glass and Pottery Show will be held on Sunday at the Plainville Stadium, Route 372 in Plainville. There will be complete dinner sets, as well as pieces to complete sets in all colors and patterns. The show, rain or shine, will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $1.50.

Eartha Kitt visits

If you've never heard jazz singer Eartha Kitt in person, then you're in for a treat. She is presenting two shows tonight at Lloyd's Restaurant in Hartford, at 8 and 10 p.m. Tickets are $15 each. For more information, call 549-4322.

It's a guest gig

Manchester Orchestra's conductor, Paul Phillips, will be guest conductor of the Hartford Symphony Orchestra on Sunday, for an all-Mozart program at 6 p.m. on the common behind West Hartford Town Hall. Those attending the free concert are invited to bring lawn seating and picnic suppers. In case of rain, the show will move into Hall High School, 975 N. Main St., West Hartford.

Dance fever

The Vintage Music and Dance Society is putting on an event called the Ragtime Tango Social on Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. The first two hours consist of workshops, and the party is from 3 to 5 p.m. It's going to take place in the South Congregational Church, 277 Main St., Hartford. For more information, call 233-5083.

Buy into the dream

How would you like to own furnishings from the Hollywood home of Orson Welles? How about a few accessories from other celebrity estates? Then get over to the Treadway Cromwell Inn on Sunday evening for an enormous auction. There will be Oriental porcelain, rugs, paintings, large bronze statuary and more. Knowledgeable buyers will wish to arrive at 6 p.m. for a viewing. The auction gets underway at 7 p.m. Admission is free, but for a complete catalogue, you'll be charged $3. The hotel is at 100 Berlin Road, Cromwell, near Exit 21 off Interstate 91. There will be auctions at 7 p.m., both on Sunday and Monday evenings.

Under the big top

Have you ever seen a real circus, under a real canvas tent? Tonight you'll have the rare opportunity to see this old-fashioned spectacle. The Roberts Bros. Circus of Sarasota, Fla., will do two shows, at 6 and 8 this evening. In front of the Windham Franco-American Club, Catholic Cemetery Road, in the Willimantic section of Windham. They've got one elephant, two camels, three llamas, and any number of performing sheep, rats, horses, ponies and dogs.

Families taking off

This is the last weekend to see an exhibit called "Families," at the Lutz Children's Museum, 237 S. Main St. The exhibit, put together by the Boston Children's Museum, explores American's many types of families, and celebrates their diversity with photographs and words. "Children of China," and "Child of the Philippines: No Time to Play," will be shown at 2 and 4 p.m. each day. The museum is open Saturday and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. Live animal shows are offered at 1 and 3 p.m. Admission is $1 for adults, 75 cents senior citizens, 50 cents for children.

Tribute to the king

A tribute to Elvis Presley, in honor of the tenth anniversary of his death, will be presented this weekend at Hershhey Lake Compound, an amusement park on Route 228 in Bristol. The tribute, with John Beardsley acting as Elvis, is presented at 8:45, 5:15, 8:30 and 8:45 p.m., today through Sunday. Magic shows are presented daily at 11:30 a.m., 12:30 and 1:15 p.m. "Salute to America," a musical revue, goes onstage daily at 3:15, 4:30, 5:45, 7:15 and 8:15 p.m. All entertainment is included in the cost of admission, which ranges from $9.95 to $5.

Rock is here to stay

The Mansfield Recreation Department's Sunset Concert series continues Saturday with a rock 'n' roll concert in Bicentennial Park, Mansfield. The band Main Street will play at 6:30 p.m. To gain free admission, arrive an hour early.

Elvis fans create billboard of devotion

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Twice a year for the past 13 years, Beth Chandler has made the pilgrimage popular among Elvis Presley fans — to Graceland, the late singer's estate. Chandler, who lives in Santa Bruno, Calif., says she was often among the fans who waited for hours by the stone wall surrounding Graceland in the hopes of spotting Presley. "He came out," she said with a sigh and a smile.

The wall's smooth stones bear the messages of hundreds of fans who have visited Graceland, many apparently confident of meeting the king of rock 'n' roll someday in heaven. "Elvis — if you knew Christ then I hope to see you in Heaven," wrote G.J.D. of New Jersey. On the adjacent boulder, Linda, who left no address, wrote simply "Love ya."

Advice

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: You've had so much in your column lately about gifts. I want to tell you what happened to me. First of all, I'm a widow, past 60, with grown children, and I know I'm hard to buy for, but last Christmas my son and daughter-in-law gave me a gift certificate for a one-way ticket to Phoenix!

Abby, my home is in Ohio, and I have been to Phoenix, and don't care to make my home there in the United States and they would pay for it — but it had to be one way. I told them there was no place in the U.S. I wanted to go — and stay — so they said, "Either take a one-way ticket, or you're out of luck!"

What is your opinion on this? DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl who needs your help to settle a dispute between my mom and me. My mom will not allow me to wear men's boxer shorts and a tank top in public. I am trying to tell her there is nothing wrong with it — it's the style. Lots of girls are wearing them.

DEAR ABBY: Our son, I'll call him Derrick, is 18 and lives with a woman who has two small children and is 10 years older than he is. He is planning to marry her when she gets her divorce. Derrick seems happy living the way he is although he was raised in a Christian home. In this state, he can get married at 18 without parental consent.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a big, strong, healthy kid, but he doesn't like to work, so he seldom holds a job for very long. He has obligations at the bank for a new truck and is looking for his father and me to bail him out. Should we help him financially, or

Recheck blood pressure device yearly

DEAR DR. GOTT: When I purchased a home blood pressure device, how can one be sure they are properly calibrated? They seem to vary a lot.

DEAR READER: I encourage hypertensive patients to purchase home blood-pressure monitoring devices and to become proficient in using them. Most reliable blood-pressure gauges are factory-calibrated; however, it's a good idea to recalibrate them periodically at say, yearly intervals. This can be done easily in the doctor's office.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 71-year-old veteran of World War II and Korea, and have been taking steroids (prednisone) for about six months. I'm going blind from these drugs. My doctor tells me I can't stop the drug. He and my so-called eye specialist tell me I have the choice of going blind or quitting breathing. I don't believe this. Do you?

DEAR READER: I'm not sure. Prednisone and other cortisone drugs (steroids) can be of inestimable help in treating certain diseases, such as asthma, allergic conditions, some cancers, blood disorders and autoimmune diseases (including rheumatoid arthritis and lupus). I'd have to know why you are taking steroids before I could fully answer your question. Apparently, you are having trouble breathing. This may mean your doctors believe that steroids are a necessary part of treating your asthma. If so, the drugs can be administered in ways that may not affect your entire body. For instance, steroids are available in hand-held nebulizers that deliver the medicine in inhaled form. Prednisone and other steroids cause cataracts. Surely, loss of vision is too dear a price to pay when alternative therapy may be available. Ask your doctor if the medicine can be prescribed in reduced doses or by metered inhalers, or ask for a referral to a pulmonary specialist, who may determine that other, less dangerous drugs might be used for your problem.

Finally, ask your eye doctor if you are a candidate for cataract removal and lens implant in the unlikely event that the prednisone is indeed lifesaving, but has a negative effect on your vision.

Be informed about prescription drugs. Send for Dr. Gott's new Health Report, Consumer Tips On Medicines. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Thoughts

Our world needs the Spirit of Truth. Jesus promised to send us the Holy Spirit. "I will ask the Father, and He will give you another Helper, the Spirit of truth. He will remain with you forever." In 14:15 The Spirit of truth is missing in our world. Totalitarian countries hide the truth from their people. And in our country bureaucrats hide the truth from the president, the congress and the people. Each thinks their truth is right but are unwilling to test it against the objections of other people. They are confused and wonders what is the truth. Our passions cause us to distort the truth. So Irish Catholics and Irish Protestants see truth differently. So do Arabs and Israelis and Sunni and Shiite Muslims. The truth seems so subjective we wonder how truth can be recognized.

Appalachian Trail 50 years old

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Fifty years ago, in the depths of the Depression, members of the Civilian Conservation Corps cleared a path along Spaulding Mountain to forge the last link in the nearly 2,100-mile Appalachian Trail. Members of the CCC who participated in that project planned to return to the western Maine site today to help install a brass plaque that pays tribute to their work in completing the nation's best-known hiking trail.

Cunningham third best in amateur tourney

Pam Cunningham looks over a putt finished in third place with a 54-hole total of 228.

Cunningham, the 1987 Manchester Country Club women's champ, at No. 7 where she had a double-bogey 6.
When they look back at the leader board at the end of the 54-hole Connecticut State Women's Amateur Golf Championship Thursday at Manchester Country Club, three of the top names that will be found are three of the best known and most prestigious lady golfers in the Nutmeg State.
And then there was Pam Cunningham.
The 23-year-old Manchester native fired a final round 2-over-par 75 to find herself sandwiched between the likes of Caroline Keegi, Lida Kinnicut and Barbara Young at the end of the 22nd annual event. Keegi won her second championship, completing a double having won the CWGA Championship earlier in mid-June, with a record-setting three day total of 219, even par. Keegi had a final round 1-over-par 74, capping her day with a fine 25-foot birdie putt on the 18th. This marked the second time Keegi won both the CWGA and amateur title in the same year.
Keegi's total eclipsed the previous amateur record of 221 set by Kinnicut in 1979 at Lyman Meadows. Kinnicut, representing the Hartford Golf Club and a four-time champion of the event, closed with a 75 for a total of 225. Young of the Aspetuck Valley Country Club in Weston, a four-time winner and defending champ, had a final round 73 for a 230 total. She recovered nicely from a painful opening-round 82.
And nestled in between this elite threesome in third place was

Cubs catching up to Gooden

By Joe Moosli
The Associated Press
CHICAGO — It could be the law of averages, but one thing's for sure — the Chicago Cubs seem to be catching up to Dwight Gooden.
The New York Mets' ace right-hander was unable to pitch a 6-0 lead Thursday as the Cubs battled back for a 7-5 victory.
"McDowell said Hernandez' error and Strawberry's inability to make the catch did not cost the Mets the game.
"The walks got me in trouble," he said, "not the error or Jody's fly ball. I know it's unusual but I can't explain it."
Gooden tried to explain his ineffectiveness after surrendering 17 hits and 11 runs in 11 1/3 innings against the Cubs in the last two games with three runs in the third and two more in the fifth. He was touched for eight hits and one walk while striking out four.
Roger McDowell, 7-4, was the victim in the eighth. McDowell, who usually has excellent control, walked Jerry Murphy and Keith Hernandez with one out and Luis Quiñones got on base on an error by Chicago's Luis Quiñones (28) slides past Mets' catcher Gary Carter to score a run in the fifth inning in their game Thursday afternoon at Wrigley Field in Chicago. The Cubs won, 7-5.

Lee Elia looking for the Phillies to finish strong

By The Associated Press
Philadelphia Manager Lee Elia says finishing with a winning season means a lot to the Phillies, even if it doesn't mean a trip to the playoffs.
The Phillies were expected to be a prime candidate for the National League East title this season after signing free-agent catcher Lance Parrish. But Parrish and the Phillies got off to an 8-18 start and Elia says he's not sure he'll be in control of all his pitches.
The club fired John Felske as manager on June 18 when it stood 23-32 and gave Elia the job. Since then the team is above .500.
"Elia'll win a lot the rest of this year," Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson said of Morris. "Watch his numbers the rest of the year. You'll be impressed."
Anderson said pulling closer to the first-place Blue Jays means little because the two teams play seven times in the last 11 games, including a season-ending three-game series at Tiger Stadium.
"We've got seven games with them," Anderson said. "So either one of us is going to be ahead of the other a little here and there, and both will have a shot. No matter what happens here, it's going to come down to that. We'll stay close. These guys can play, and they love to play."
Matt Nokes drove in Detroit's first run with an infield out after Royals starter Mark Gubicza infield single, and threw the ball into the dirt, past first base, allowing Thompson to score the winning run. The error made a winner of reliever Gary Lettfrs.

Mitchell went 4-for-6 for the Giants and drove in four runs, three with his 15th home run of the year.
Jack Clark's streak of walking in eight games for the Giants, who remained tied with Cincinnati for the NL West lead. The defending champion Astros lost for the sixth time in seven games and dropped four games out of first.
Reds 5, Dodgers 2
Kal Daniels sparked a five-run eighth inning with a leadoff home run and pinch-hitter Tracy Jones singled in the tying and winning runs, helping the Cincinnati beat Los Angeles in a rare weekday Dodger Stadium day game.
Daniels, who went 4-for-4, homered off starter Orel Hersher, victory and got relief help from Keith Comstock and Lance McCullers.
It was the Padres' eighth victory in their last nine games.
Expos 9, Pirates 7
Tim Lincecum drove in five runs and Tim Rains equaled his club record by scoring five times as Montreal defeated visiting Pittsburgh. Rains also homered and stole his 500th career base.
The Expos, who overcame a 5-0 deficit, trailed 6-5 when Rains led off the seventh with a single and Mitch Webster followed with a walk. They pulled off a double steal as Rains scored as catcher Mike Lavalliere made a wild throw to second base. Two outs later, Webster scored on Dave Eler's single for a 7-6 lead.
Wallach hit an RBI triple in the first, a three-run homer in the third and a run-scoring grand slam in the eighth to give him 99 RBI.

Morris in control in disposing of the Royals

By Bill Barnard
The Associated Press
The Kansas City Royals didn't have much of a chance to extend their four-game winning streak once Jack Morris found out he was in control of all his pitches.
"I just felt like if I kept throwing good I would win," Morris said after he pitched a five-hitter and struck out 11 as the Detroit Tigers beat the Royals 4-1 Thursday night.
"It's the first time in a long time that I've thrown all four of my pitches and had a pretty good idea of where they were going. It was just a good night for me."
Morris, 34-6, who walked only one, retired 16 consecutive batters from the second to the seventh inning. He gave up a solo homer to Jim Eisenreich in the eighth, then retired the Royals in order in the ninth to pull the Tigers within a half-game of first place Toronto in the American League East.

"Elia'll win a lot the rest of this year," Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson said of Morris. "Watch his numbers the rest of the year. You'll be impressed."
Anderson said pulling closer to the first-place Blue Jays means little because the two teams play seven times in the last 11 games, including a season-ending three-game series at Tiger Stadium.
"We've got seven games with them," Anderson said. "So either one of us is going to be ahead of the other a little here and there, and both will have a shot. No matter what happens here, it's going to come down to that. We'll stay close. These guys can play, and they love to play."
Matt Nokes drove in Detroit's first run with an infield out after Royals starter Mark Gubicza three-run homer to Donnie Hill in the sixth. Then the White Sox routed two relievers with seven runs in the eighth inning.
Juan Beniquez's fourth-inning homer put the Blue Jays ahead 1-0, but Hill's homer in the sixth gave the White Sox a 3-1 lead.
The Blue Jays cut the deficit to 3-2 in the seventh on Kelly Gruber's RBI single, but Fred Manrique hit a three-run homer and Gary Redus a two-run shot in the eighth, high-lighting Chicago's seven-run inning.
Angels 10, Twins 1
California cut Minnesota's lead to 2-0 games in the West as the Twins failed to deliver in the clutch, stranding 10 batters and losing their first six innings off Mike Witt.
Witt, 14-8, allowed nine hits in the first six innings, but he and DeWayne Buice, who pitched the

Jim's, Allied win in eight innings in tourney play

Second day play in the Manchester Rec Department's Slow Pitch Softball Tournaments Thursday night saw Manchester Medical Supply outpitch Pagan's Caterers, 15-11, and Main Pub overwhelm J.C. Penney, 21-5, in 'A' Division play at Fitzgerald Field. In 'B' Division action at Nike Field, Jim's Arc scored twice in the eighth inning for a 14-12 win over the Tigers while Allied Printing also needed eight innings to down Elmore Associates, 12-4. And in 'C' Division bracket at Robert's Park, Army and Navy Club bested Reed Construction, 4-1, and Winnick Gymnastics tumbled past B.A. Club, 6-1.

The double elimination tournaments resume play Monday with lower bracket games in all divisions.

Americans piling up medals at the Pan Am Games

By Rusty Miller
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Americans ran away from the Cubans in the medals race at the Pan Am Games. Jackie Joyner-Kersey jumped away with hers.

After four days, only 69 medals separated the United States from Cuba — traditional 1-2 rivals at these games. Brazil, picking up medals from swimming to shooting.

Track and field

Joyner-Kersey, of East St. Louis, Ill., tied the record on her sixth and final jump.

I realized on the fifth jump I did something wrong, so I hit myself on the side of the head and talked about it and got it together and prayed to God and just tried to put it all together on the last jump," she said.

The biggest upset, though, came in the men's 400 meters, where American Raymond Pierre came out of the gate and broke the Pan Am record, winning gold over 1983 world champion Bert Cameron of Jamaica.

Swimming

For the eighth straight Pan Am Games, the record in the 200-meter breastroke fell this time to the hands of Kobiak of Davis, Calif., who finished in 2:17.62 for a gold medal.

The United States picked up four gold medals in the pool.

The golds came in the men's 400 freestyle and 400 free relay and in the women's 100 butterfly. Canada's Keltie Duggan presented a U.S. swimmer with the women's 100 breastroke.

Boxing

Maynard, a powerful puncher, knocked down Oscar Gonzales while Banks, the 125-pound world champion, beat another Argentinian, Marcos Cristofalo.

Banks will meet Arnold Mesa on Sunday and Maynard will fight two-time world champion Pablo Romero on Wednesday. The Cubans have had the world's most powerful amateur boxing team since 1974.

Team sports

In basketball, Rex Chapman of Kentucky and David Robinson of Texas scored 17 points each in the victory over Venezuela — the first gold in which the Americans didn't start slow and finish fast.

"We're pleased we're undefeated and we've made progress," said U.S. Coach Denny Crum. "We did some pretty good things tonight and did some things we hadn't done in earlier games."

In women's softball, Granger, a 17-year-old left-hander from Ft. Collins, Colo., had 14 strikeouts against Belize. JoAnn Ferrieri, of Orange, N.J., Josie Carter, of College Station, Texas, and Sheila Cornell, of Glendale, Calif., each had two hits.

Drug testing

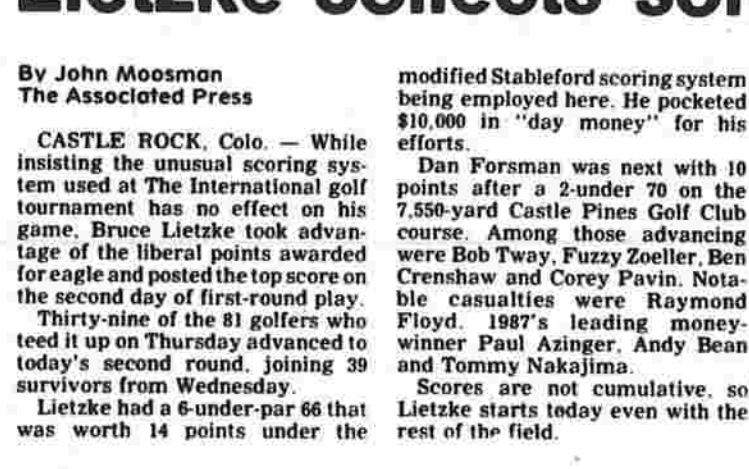

Castan swimmer Sally Gilbert failed her drug test because she used an antiasthmatic to treat a cold, but she was allowed to continue competing and finished fourth in the 100 butterfly.

A spokesperson for Mario Vazquez Rana, head of the Pan American Sports Organization, said the amount of the banned substance found "was so small" that no official case was made against Gilbert.

Sports In Brief

Moriarty's begins Twilight playoff

Moriarty Brothers begins its quest for the Greater Hartford TwiLight Baseball League Jack Roe Memorial Playoff championship tonight against Marco Polo at Moriarty Field at 7:30 p.m. The MVP award is in the eighth team double elimination field with their 19-11 regular-season mark while Marco Polo comes in the No. 6 seed at 17-12.1. Three other first round games will be played tonight at various sites with the rest of the playoffs to be played at Moriarty Field.

Morhardt new assistant at UofH

WEST HARTFORD — Manchester native Moe Morhardt has been named an assistant coach in the University of Hartford baseball program. It was announced Thursday.

Morhardt was head baseball coach at The Gilbert School in Winsted for 21 years, winning three state titles and compiling a 299-134 record. Morhardt, a University of Connecticut graduate, spent six years in the Chicago Cubs organization, two years in 1961 and '62 with the parent club.

Racquet Club hosts regional playoff

The Manchester Racquet Club will host the Hartford Regional playoff of the Lipton Amateur Mixed Doubles Championship Sunday. This is one of 32 regional playoffs with the winning team advancing to the national championship to be played at Saddlebrook Golf & Tennis Resort near Tampa, Fla., Oct. 8-11.

The four teams entered are: Ken and Norma White of Manchester; Skip South and Pat Cashman; Sheila Kileen and David Nelson; and Scott and Lisa Hadley. Each team won two tournaments previously to reach this round of play.

World Series day game is possible

NEW YORK (AP) — The first World Series day game in three years could be played this year if the series reaches a sixth game, the baseball Commissioner's Office announced Thursday.

Game 6, if necessary, will start at 4 p.m. EDT on Oct. 24, a Saturday, at the American League city. All other games will be televised the playoffs in both leagues.

The National League playoffs begin Oct. 6 in the East Division city. The West Division champs will host the opener of the American League playoffs on Oct. 7.

The World Series starts Oct. 17 at the home of the American League champion.

Wimbledon champ Pat Cash upset

MONTREAL — Unseeded Swede Peter Lundgren shocked Wimbledon champion Pat Cash of Australia 6-4, 7-7, 7-2 (7-2) Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals of the $500,000 World's International tennis tournament.

The surprising triumph by Lundgren, the 112th-ranked player in the world, earned him a berth against either Richey Reneberg or defending tournament champion Boris Becker.

Flyers' Kerr to undergo surgery

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Flyers said Thursday that high-scoring right wing Tim Kerr, 27, will undergo a shoulder operation Friday that will sideline him for nine weeks.

Dr. John Gregg, the Flyers' orthopedic surgeon, will reinsert a screw that has worked loose since he operated on Kerr's left shoulder earlier this year. The shoulder injury, suffered April 30, forced the right wing to miss the Flyers' final 14 games in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Lietzke collects some pockey money

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — While insisting the annual scoring system used at The International Golf tournament has no effect on his game, Bruce Lietzke took advantage of the liberal points awarded for eagle and posted the top score on the second day of first-round play.

Thirty-nine of the 81 golfers who tee off on Thursday advanced to today's second round, joining 39 survivors from Wednesday.

Lietzke had a 6-under-par 66 that was worth 14 points under the modified Stabelford scoring system being employed here. He pocketed $10,000 in "day money" for his efforts.

Dan Forsman was next with 10 points after a 2-under 70 on the 7,550-yard Castle Pines Golf Club course. Among those advancing were Bob Tway, Fuzzy Zoeller, Ben Crenshaw and Corey Pavin. Note: four casualties were Raymond Floyd, 1987's leading money-winner Paul Azinger, Andy Bean and Sammy Nicksajima.

Scores are not cumulative, so Lietzke starts today even with the rest of the field.

Bosworth, Seahawks near contract accord

Brian Bosworth's father says his son is heading for Seattle to sign a contract with the Seahawks that would make him the highest-paid rookie linebacker in National Football League history.

Seattle's Bosworth said in a telephone interview late Thursday night from his home in Irving, Texas, that his son and agent Gary Richard were expected to meet today with Seattle officials.

"Yeah, there's no doubt about it now, they're on their way to Seattle tomorrow," the elder Bosworth said.

The agreement would end negotiations that began June 12 when the Seahawks won the rights to draft the Oklahoma All-American in the Saturday night's exhibition-season opener against the Denver Broncos at Temple, Ariz.

Three-year quarterback Rusty Hilger will debut as the starting quarterback when the Los Angeles Raiders play the San Francisco 49ers on Saturday night.

Rams get passing grade

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams who have seemed just a passing attack away from being one of football's finest teams, appear to be eliminating that one glaring weakness.

After beating one of the NFL's best teams of 1986, the Denver Broncos, 26-27 in London last Sunday, the Rams played a team expected to be one of the league's best in 1987, the Seattle Seahawks.

Despite an overnight flight from England earlier in the week and a lack of practice time, the Rams looked sharp as they picked up their second preseason win with a 23-14 victory over Seattle on Thursday night.

Jim Everett, who became Los Angeles' starting quarterback as a rookie last season, was particularly impressive against the Seahawks.

"There were no bumps out there while playing the first half, including a 46-yard touchdown pass to Ron Brown."

The pass offense has been retooled by new offensive coordinator Darrell Coburn with a 49-yard touchdown pass in the fourth quarter.

Seattle quarterback Dave Krieg is buried under by the Rams' Fred Stokes (left) and Gary Jeter in their exhibition game Thursday in Anaheim. The Rams won, 23-14.
