Feds check whether fire led to crash

By Geoffrey Haynes The Associated Press

ROMULUS, Mich. - Investigators were checking reports today that a jetliner was on fire before it plunged into the ground and 'crumbled like a piece of paper' as it smashed through freeway bridges, killing 154 people in the nation's second-worst crash.

There were conflicting reports on whether a 4-year-old girl hospitalized Sunday night after the crash of Northwest Airlines Flight 255 might have been a passenger. The girl was found in the wreckage under the body of a woman, which had apparently cushioned her.

The McDonnell Douglas MD-80, an updated version of the DC-9, had arrived from Saginaw and was en route to Phoenix and suburban Los Angeles. It crashed in clear weather at 8:46 p.m., moments after taking off from Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Aboard the plane were 147 passengers, including two infants bailed hald on large and six crew being held on laps, and six crew members, said Bob Gibbons, a Northwest spokesman in Minneapolis. At least 152 people died on the plane and two more died on the ground, and at least six people on the ground were injured, authorities said.

It was the first major commercial plane crash in the United States in almost a year, and the first involving a domestic carrier in almost two years.

Authorities said there was some looting at the site shortly after the plane crashed, with some people carrying away debris. Six people were arrested.

The area was cordoned off today and National Transportation Safety Board investigators were on the scene. Interstate 94, the main artery between Detroit and Chi-cago, was still closed late this morning because of the debris.

Michael Moore, 14, who was standing near an Avis car rental building off the end of the airport's runway, said today he saw an 'orange glow, like on fire behind the building. And the glare is what made me look.

Moore told ABC's "Good Morning America" that the orange glow was 'around the engines, in the back, covering the engines.

FBI agents were sent to the scene based on a report that there might have been an explosion before the crash, said John Anthony, an FBI spokesman in Detroit. The agents would check for any sign of a bomb, but there was "no indication" there was a bomb on the plane, he said.

In January, the FBI said it was investigating alleged tampering ith Northwest planes at the Minneapolis airport. Last month, the Detroit Free Press said the airline had brought in security guards to combat minor acts of vandalism on ground equipment.

Gibbons said FBI investigation of a possible bomb is routine. "I wouldn't jump to any conclusions about the FBI involvement."

He said there's no evidence of possible sabotage in the crash, and would not comment on Northwest's recent union problems in Detroit.

Eyewitnesses to Sunday night's crash said the jet rocked from side to side and plunged to the ground trailing fire before skidding beneath an Interstate 94 overpass and breaking into dozens of burning pieces on Middlebelt Road, bordering the airport, witnesses said.

'It looks like a large bomb fell on Middlebelt Road," said Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara.

When it hit the ground it just crumbled like a piece of paper, Joel Taylor, a motorist, told Cable News Network

The plane, he said, exploded as soon as it hit the ground.

"If there was any survivor, I don't know how," he said. "There was a ball of fire under the bridge." "The entire Northwest family of

WKHT moving to Hartford though its heart stays here

By Andrew Yurkovsky Herald Reporter

WKHT-AM radio plans to move its offices from East Center Street to Hartford next Monday, but the station's heart will remain in Manchester.

The relocation is part of an effort to merge the operations of the country music station and a Spanish-language station, WLVH-FM. already headquartered in the capital city.

Despite the move, the station will continue to broadcast from its transmitter in Manchester, Ken Borden, WKHT's program director, said today. "We're not going to forget Manchester exists. The only reason we're moving is not to leave Manchester, but to consolidate forces," Borden said. WKHT was bought earlier this year by WLVH's owner, Sage Broadcasting Corp. of Stamford.

Sage also runs another country-music station, WNAQ-AM, in Waterbury. WNAQ and WKHT are promoting themselves as 'Connecticut's Country" and share the same Coinciding with the move to Hartford, WKHT will expand its schedule and begin operating around the clock, Borden said. From midnight to 5:30 a.m., the station will broadcast a nationally syndicated country music and news program transmitted by satellite from Nashville, Tenn.

Because of cutbacks by the former owner Broadcast Management of Stamford, WKHT had signed off at midnight for the past year and a half, Borden said.

Borden said the move to Hartford will not mean any changes in format or personnel at WKHT. If anything, it will bring about an improvement in service because more money can be devoted to programming rather than to station upkeep, he said.

"We'll be able to do more for Manchester because we have more money and a more efficient operation," he said.

WKHT's relocation is made possible by a recent FCC ruling which permits stations to operate in one community while serving another. Previously, a station's headquarters had to be in the city in which it was licensed, Borden said.

Despite the new location, Borden said, WKHT plans to maintain its involvement in the community. The station will be on hand for the Hebron Harvest Fair in September and may take part again in Manchester's Feast Fest on Aug. 28, 29 and 30. Last month's Chili Festival was the first Manchester event the station has been involved in since its takeover by Sage Broadcasting.

Neighbors cite need for alarm in emergencies

Residents living near Manchester Ice & Fuel Inc. say they are concerned about the possibility of future accidents

'We're concerned that there's no alarm system to warn us," said Kerry Robinson of 46 Bissell St. "How do we know it's not going to happen again?' "They should have some kind of forewarning," said

Bobby Scables of 48 Bissell St. Scables said the company is a hazard. "I'd like to see an alarm system put in, or to be reassured that it won't happen again.' Stan Gazdzicki of 58 Bissell St. said that ammonia leaks aren't the only problem neighbors have to put up with. He said that noise and furnes from diesel trucks that often park in front of the building are a nuisance.

"We're getting treated pretty rough here," said Gazdzicki. He said that he and his wife were unable to evacuate, because she has a heart condition and had just returned from the hospital earlier in the day.

Last time, we went up to the corner and sat on concrete steps for three hours. We weren't about to be treated like that again," said Gazdzicki.

NU urges limits on power

BERLIN, Conn. (AP) - Customers were urged to cut all unnecessary use of electricity today as New England raced toward a power consumption record under wilting temperatures.

Louis Keezing, a spokesman for Northeast Utilities, said his company was requesting more than "general energy conservation" because several generating stations were out of service today.

In Connecticut, for example, the Milistone I and Connecticut Yankee nuclear power plants were down today for servicing. Vermont Yankee, Maine Yankee and the Pligam nuclear power plants also were shut down today.

Northeast Utilities serves more than 1 million customers in Connecticut and Western Massachusetts.

The record for power consumption in New England is 17,500 megwatts. Keezing said it was projected consumers in the region would use 18,200 megawatts today.

The single-day record for consumption in Connecticut is 5,750 megwatts. Keezing said demand would likely exceed that today.

Ambulance services need help

Greenwich turned to part-time paid staff to ease the shortage, a problem that officials of ambulance services around Connecticut say they are encountering.

"It's difficult to get people,"
Marie Wilson, chief of field services for the state Office of Emergency Medical Services, said last week.
"It's a combination of economics and the tenor of volunteerism." she sald. "Every volunteer organization is having problems these days. not just ambulances."

Local ambulance officials say rising costs for insurance and equipment and the aggravation of dealing with the state bureacracy add to their woes. Salisbury ambu-lance pays $23,000 a year for liability insurance alone, more than its entire budget in years past.

There are 143 ambulance services in the state that are now staffed totally or in part by volunteers, according to the state Office of Emergency Medical Services. The other 48 are either commercial services or are run by police or fire

During last spring's crisis in Greenwich, ambulance crews from other parts of town responded to calls while a station in the back country section was unstaffed for up to 21 hours at a stretch. But some people complained that the closing dangered the welfare of backcountry residents because crews had to travel farther to reach them

"I think it's dangerous, espe cially when it was represented to the town that the station would be manned at all times," Jame Russell, an emergency medical technician himself and vice chairman of disaster services for the local Red Cross chapter, told the Greenwich Times.

Greenwich reorganized its ambulance service last year because of the chronic shortage of volunteers consolidating six ambulance servi-ces into three stations staffed mostly with paid personnel during the day and volunteers at night. The number of volunteers in one district had dropped from 30 to 10.

"We have plenty of volunteers," said Stephen J. Nardozzi, second in-command of Greenwich Emergency Services Inc. "The probler ... is that the volunteers find it difficult to donate a lot of their

Treasury still needs an overhaul

Connecticut's state auditors, in their annual review of problems in the state treasurer's office, have given Treasurer Francisco Borges a reminder that he'd better fix things quickly.

For years, Auditors Henry Becker and Leo Donohue have been highly critical of the treasurer's operations. This year's report, which covered the 1986-87 fiscal year, was issued last week and repeated many of the suggestions made in earlier critiques.

As usual, the auditors are recommending better administrative controls, timely handling of accounts, and stricter procedures on receipts and disbursements.

What's different this time is the treasurer's response to the auditors' report of problems in the office. The auditors say Borges, who took office in January, takes the report very seriously and intends to take action.

"I not only fully share the concerns of the auditors about this department, but I also greatly appreciate the fact that their report provides me with a comprehensive blueprint for action to improve upon treasury operations," Borges said.

Borges' response is a welcome change from that of a former treasurer, Henry Parker, who dismissed the annual criticism as "picayune" and apparently ignored the recommendations for years.

It took Parker's resignation to begin the much-needed overhaul. An interim appointee, Joan Kemler, began laying the foundation for improvements, and the auditors recognized her efforts as "the most progress we have

Borges, who took office in January, said he is implementing an automation program and using an outside consulting firm to help improve practices and procedures.

Time will tell if Borges' openness to criticism is a sincere effort to improve or merely the statement of a bureaucrat skilled in diplomacy.

Playing 'Name the Issues'

By Jonathan Wolman The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A popular parlor game in "off-year" Wa- few rich people at the top and the shington is to predict what will happen in the on year - the presidential election year to come. It's a short and simple challenge: guess who'll be nominated and guess who'll win.

To drag out the contest, you might predict who the next vice president will be and how many funerals he'll be asked to attend. Pick That President isn't thoughtful enough for everyone, though. Some of us are barely interested in the approaching horse race and our parlor game has to be something more thoughtful, more profound - we'll try to Name The Issues that will influence the campaign.

Here's a look at some of the most conspicuous possiblities, issues already being debated on the campaign trail (if only so the candidates can avoid questions about AIDS, superpower relations in the Gorbachev era, teen-age immorality and the fate of free world economies if the stock market should crash):

ISSUE: THE DEFICIT REASON: Economists and phiophers think it's a bad thing for the government to continuously spend more (about $175 billion more this year) than it takes in. The fear is that the government's thirst for money will suck up available capital and send the economy into a tailspin

BEATING THE DRUM: Noone for a big deficit, but Sen. Bob Dole has played Cassandra on the issue and isn't likely to stop. However, unless the economy goes into recession, the deficit won't be much of an issue.

A related concern: international deficits and the constant fear that a large default by one of the major debtor nations — Brazil or Mexico come to mind - could start a run on Western banks.

ISSUE: CONTRA AID.

Prison team misses the playoffs

ENFIELD - Inmates at Somers State Prison, who coasted to a 22-4 record in their first season in the Enfield Slo-Pitch League, missed the playoffs because they can't play away games. Other teams agreed to play all their regular-season games against the inmates on the prison's diamond but were unwilling to cede a home advantage in the playoffs.

Among other problems, the families and fans of the visiting teams aren't allowed inside the prison gates to watch games. "The prisoners may not understand that there are problems on the outside, too," said league President Tony Romano. "We can't give them all the advantages."

The prison team, which has not been in an organized league since the early '70s, joined this year after Ronald C. Rook, a recreation supervisor at the prison, suggested the idea to

Documents note L'Ambiance problem

HARTFORD - The subcontractor who warned workers to closely monitor the lift-slab operation at the ill-fated L'Ambiance Plaza apartment building because of possible design problems encountered at other construction sites is downplaying the letter's significance.

Chris A. Geckler, a vice president of Texstar Construction Corp., told The Hartford Courant late last week that none of the problems were out of the ordinary and his letter was merely meant to remind people to follow proper procedures.

"There had been no problems at other sites, I just felt we had to remind everybody," said Geckler, whose company was responsible for lifting the concrete floor slabs into place at the ouilding in Bridgeport.

The Courant obtained Geckler's letter and other documents, ncluding Texstar's daily construction logs, indicating that L'Ambiance Plaza was beset with problems related to its lift-slab construction method in the weeks before it collapsed and killed 28

In the April 1985 letter to field personnel, Geckler said problems had been found at other projects and re-emphasized the importance of keeping slabs level during the lifting process. "Unless we monitor these conditions and all conditions closely we run the risk of cracking or breaking a slab," Geckler said in WALLINGFORD - Town officials are considering recommendations to close a one-mile road whose railroad crossing has been the site of four fatal accidents in two years.

Mine-sweeping helicopters in gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain - Newly arrived American mine weeping helicopters maneuvered over the Persian Gulf today as three tankers and their U.S. Navy escorts prepared for their return trip through the perilous waterway.

After the RH-53D helicopters flew several drills, they alighted on the helicopter carrier USS Guadalcanal, which weighed anchor at about 11:15 a.m. local time and appeared to move south, in the direction from which it arrived last weekend, said an eyewitness. Its destination was not known.

Correspondent Brent Sadler of Britain's ITN network said he could not confirm reports that a Soviet warship was "shadowing" the Guadalcanal. He said he had not seen any such ship from his chartered vessel about 30 miles off Bahrain.

The arrival of the eight mine-sweeping helicopters coincided with a warning from Iran that it could produce mines "like seeds" and sow them in the gulf, where an explosion damaged the first U.S.-escorted Kuwaiti convoy last month. But in a surprise announcement, Iran's foreign minister said Tehran would welcome a visit by the U.N. secretary-general to discuss security in the gulf.

Police watch strikers in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama — The government ordered thousands of extra police and soldiers to patrol the capital today during a nationwide general strike demanding the ouster of the country's top military commander.

It was the fourth work stoppage in two months aimed at strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, considered the power behind President Eric Arturo Delvalle's administration. The one-day strike was called by the National Civic Crusade, a coalition of more than 100 business, professional, student and political groups that has led the anti-Norlega movement since

Jackson, Robertson mum on funds

WASHINGTON - Jesse Jackson and Pat Robertson are raising large sums of money as they head toward the 1988 presidential race, but unlike other White House hopefuls, they aren't making public any financial details.

The two say their secrecy is legal under the "testing the waters" provisions of election law, which requires disclosure of finances only when a person is an actual candidate for president, but not while the person is exploring whether to run.

Robertson claims to have raised more than $8 million during his exploratory phase, far more than all but one of the acknowledged candidates who have filed disclosure reports with the Federal Election Commission. Jackson says he has raised and spent nearly $600,000 and expects two large fund-raising events to bring his total to $1 million by September.

EDINBURGH, Scotland — The Fringe, the freewheeling sideshow to Edinburgh's staid theater festival, has drawn 1,000 plays to Scotland, from speeded-up Shakespeare to a work set in one of the city's laundry rooms. Theater troupes from Malibu to Mexico, from New Zealand to

Witness knocks Demjanjuk evidence

JERUSALEM - A defense expert who testified today at the Nazi war crimes trial of John Demjanjuk disputed as "not scientific" a technique used by a prosecution witness to verify a controversial photograph of the defendant. Swedish-born Anita Pritchard, 40, a doctoral student in psychology at the University of the Pacific in Stockton, Calif., was the second witness to take the stand for the defense. Ms. Pritchard disputed the accuracy of photo montages put together to prove the authenticity of a photograph alleged to be of Demjanjuk which appears on a key piece of prosecution evidence, a Nazi SS document.

The technique, she said, "is vulnerable to misinterpretation." The document, known as the Trawniki card, was supplied to Israel by the Soviet Union last year. Trawniki was a Nazi training camp in World War II Poland.

The card allegedly proves Demjanjuk was trained as a Nazi guard. The defense claims it is a fake.

Chicago suburbs get more rain

CHICAGO — Thunderstorms dumped nearly 3 inches of new rain overnight in the already flooded Chicago area, and high winds were blamed for 57 injuries, mostly minor, at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield.

The additional 21/4 inches of rain measured at O'Hare International Airport added to the record 9.3 inches that drenched the area Friday. Red Cross teams estimated that about 5,700 homes were damaged by flooding and heavy rains, 2,200 of them with severe damage. "Actually, most of the new rain was from O'Hare on south, so it

Officials want lobster laws changed

BOSTON - Northern Atlantic lobsters are being overfished and the Reagan administration should increase the legal catch size to protect the shellfish and thousands of jobs, say New England officials and lobstermen.

Coastal pollution is blamed for some of the problem, but fisheries officials say the multimillion dollar industry's biggest problem is the harvest of female lobsters which reach legal size before they reproduce. "There'e no imminent disaster looming or anything but it seems wise from the view of being cautious that we increase the catch size," said Douglas Marshall, executive director of the New England Fishery Management Council.

Believers hum in a new cosmic age

Thousands celebrate 'harmonic convergence' to cleanse Earth

By Howard Goldberg The Associated Press

More than 20,000 believers in a new cosmic age gathered at mountains, parks and ancient religious sites to celebrate a "harmon convergence" with humming and hugging peace activists, spiritualists and latter-day flower children

All brought their own expecta-tions to the two-day event, which continued today and was conceived as the launching of a period of cleansing to prepare the Earth for contact with alien intelligence in the 21st century.

A few claimed to be communicating with extraterrestrials or spirits, but many seemed satisfied just to enjoy some down-to-earth

How often do you get to stand on a lawn holding hands with a stranger on a Sunday morning?" asked Tim Young, 24, one of about 100 believers who turned out at Tom McCall Waterfront Park in Portland, Ore.

Roman J. Lexton. 70, retired judge

NEW BRITAIN (AP) - Retired Superior Court Judge Roman J. Lexton, whose grand jury investigation of the nursing home industry in Connecticut led to sweeping reforms, is dead at the age of 70. Lexton, who retired in 1983 after 24 years on the bench, died around 2 a.m. Saturday, said Raymond Brzenczek of the New Britain Memorial Funeral Home. He said Lexton had been ill for about a year. Until two months ago he served as a state trial referee. Lexton was the one-man juror who in 1979 investigated the conduct of nursing homes in Connecticut, a probe that resulted in three guilty pleas and the rewriting of nursing home safety regulations. Lexton's judicial career started in 1959 in New Britain city and police court. Eight years later he was made a Circuit Court judge Josephine Odell Josephine (Rombola) Odell, 65, while a senior partner in the New of 61C Charles Drive, the wife of Britain law firm of Lexton, Janus Elmer L. Mets unload on the Cubs
