Majority directors back vote on mall bonds

By Andrew Yurkovsky
 Herald Reporter

Democratic town directors this morning came out in favor of a referendum to allow voters to approve or reject bonding for improvements around the proposed Mall at Buckland Hills.

In announcing their support for a referendum, the Democratic directors said that attorneys representing the town have determined that such a referendum would not compromise an appeal of last month's court decision barring the Board of Directors from issuing bonds for the project.

While supporting a referendum, some members of the Board of Directors had said that the court decision could limit the board's ability to make future financial decisions.

"We confirmed our original intent, as most of the Democratic directors had affirmed, to go to a referendum in November," Director Stephen T. Penny said during a news conference this morning in Lincoln Center.

Last week, Republican candidates of the Board of Directors came out in support of a referendum.

The GOP statement came before the town's attorneys had determined the effect of a referendum on the town's appeal of the case.

Two weeks ago, the town announced plans to appeal the July decision of Hartford Superior Court Judge John P. Maloney, who ruled that the Board of Directors could not issue $13 million in tax-increment bonds to pay for road and utilities improvements around the mall. Maloney ruled that the question of approving the bond issue would have to be made by the voters in a referendum. The bond issue had been approved last year by the Board of Directors.

Maloney's decision was made in response to a lawsuit brought by members of the Manchester Property Owners Association, who have charged that the mall and town-financed road improvements would mean higher taxes for residents.

Penny said the referendum would be advisory and would not legally bind the directors to act for or against the bond issue. The directors, however, would follow the will of the people, whatever the outcome of the referendum, Penny said.

Benjamin Penny, Directors Peter P. DiRosa Jr. and Kenneth N. Tedford were present during the news conference. The announcement of Democratic support for the referendum was made in a written statement including the names of all six Democratic directors.

A joint public hearing by the Board of Directors and the Economic Development Commission has been scheduled Aug. 27 to consider putting a referendum question on the ballot for the Nov. 3 municipal election.

Tedford said he is confident voters will approve the bond issue if they understand how the bonds are paid off.

DiRosa said that if voters reject the bond issue in a referendum, the directors would feel obligated to drop the idea of financing improvements around the mall site, even if an appeal proved successful. But, if an appeal is successful, any future decisions to issue tax-increment bonds should be made by the Board of Directors, not the electorate, he said.

"I think subsequent boards, if they had the opportunity, would voters will approve the bond issue if

It looks like pilots didn't set the flaps

By Jim Irwin
 The Associated Press

ROMULUS, Mich. — The pilots of Northwest Flight 255 did not lower the wing flaps and there is no indication a cockpit siren sounded to warn them that the flaps were not in normal takeoff position, federal investigators said.

"At first we didn't believe it because it's just too horrifying," one official with the investigation told The Washington Post in an interview published today. "But it looks like they completely forgot to set them."

Source, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press that the flight data recorder showed the flaps were left in a horizontal position and not extended downward, which gives a plane lift at lower airspeed.

The McDonnell Douglas MD-80 was equipped with a warning horn that should have sounded if any of several critical maneuvers were not done during takeoff, including adjustments to the plane's flaps, spoiler and stabilizer settings.

There was no indication on the cockpit voice recorder that a horn sounded, said John Lauber of the National Transportation Safety Board, the presiding investigator.

"They could hear the verbal checking off of some things," NTSB spokesman Alan Pollock said Wednesday. "So far they have not heard anything that indicates they checked the flaps."

A jetliner's flaps and slats are extended at various angles to boost lift during takeoff and are retracted when cruising.

"The setting of the flaps prior to takeoff is fundamental to flying and considered by pilots as one of three 'killer items' for which the consequences can easily be catastrophic.

"Those were in the zero, or retracted position," Lauber said, adding that "in this aircraft, a zero flap configuration is acceptable under some conditions."

The plane crashed shortly after takeoff Sunday at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, killing up to 158 people. The only survivor, a 4-year-old girl, remained hospitalized in serious condition today.

Workers prepare one of two Pratt & Whitney JT8D-217 engines from the ill-fated Northwest Airlines Flight 255 for removal from the crash site in Romulus, Mich., Wednesday afternoon. The MD-80 jetliner crashed shortly after takeoff Sunday, killing at least 158 people.

Divers bring up satchel of gems and cash from Titanic

By Sydney Rubin
 The Associated Press

PARIS — Divers plucked a battered valise containing a fortune in gems, bank notes and coins from the Titanic today, 75 years after the luxury liner sank, a salvage official said.

The leather valise did not bear a name, said expedition leader Robert Chappaz. He released few details on the satchel's contents.

No estimate has been made for what jewels off the wreck would be worth. But marine salvage experts have said that even a cup of the Titanic would be worth a fortune.

In a statement released in Paris before dawn today, Chappaz said the valise was not in good condition. But its existence indicated that some organic objects remained decades after the ship sank on April 14-15, 1912.

In addition to finding the satchel, divers aboard the high-tech minisub Nautilie retrieved a small safe believed to have been the assistant pursur's strongbox, the statement said.

The leather satchel, which was found during a routine survey of the stern section of the debris field, was opened and examined briefly, revealing the valuables and currency.

Chappaz repeated the expedition's claim that none of the artifacts would be sold to private individuals. He did not say if the expedition would try to sell the objects to institutions, such as museums.

A full account of the satchel's contents was to be made after the object was transferred to a preservation laboratory in Paris run by the national utility, Electricite de France, Chappaz said.

The French Institute for Research and Exploitation of the Sea, owner of the Nautilie and support vessel Nadir, has said any artifacts would be displayed during a world tour. No explanation has been given on how investors in the expedition will recuperate the $2.5 million cost of the adventure. The investors are grouped as the British-registered Ocean Research and Exploration Ltd.

Plans were announced last week by the Hollywood-based Westgate Film Group to open the safe on a live broadcast from Monaco on Oct. 28.

Legend has it that the four strongboxes believed to have been on the Titanic contain jewelry and other valuables. Marine experts, however, say most valuables were recovered by the passengers.

The French Institute was part of a French-American expedition that located the Titanic wreck in September 1985.

The American partner, Woods Hole Oceanographic Laboratory of Cape Cod, Mass., returned to the site last summer to photograph and map the wreck and a 2.5-mile wide debris field around it, about 350 miles southwest of Newfoundland.

The Titanic, advertised as unsinkable, hit an iceberg and went down on its maiden voyage from Southampton, England, to New York on April 14, 1912.

This year's expedition has been controversial, as Titanic survivors and relatives of the 1,513 people who drowned on the White Star Line vessel argued that the site should be left inviolate as a memorial to the disaster.

A number of museums, including the Smithsonian in the United States and the National Maritime Museum in England, have said they would not display the objects nor accept them in their collections.

Workers prepare one of two Pratt & Whitney JT8D-217 engines from the ill-fated Northwest Airlines Flight 255 for removal from the crash site in Romulus, Mich., Wednesday afternoon. The MD-80 jetliner crashed shortly after takeoff Sunday, killing at least 158 people.

Compromise ends threat of eviction

By Andrew Yurkovsky
 Herald Reporter

Sherry Pomerleau got some good news when she appeared in Hartford housing court on Monday.

Pomerleau had been threatened in July with eviction from her home on Tichel Road because of allegations that her brother sold drugs from the building. But Pomerleau, the mother of three young children, reached an agreement with her landlord on Monday, and may remain in her apartment until her lease ends next May.

"I'm assuming that they didn't want the publicity. Or the fact that I had witnesses and they had witnesses, and we would have to drag all these people into court," Pomerleau said Wednesday.

Under the court agreement, Pomerleau is allowed to stay in the apartment as long as her brother and her husband, whom she is divorcing, do not visit. If those stipulations are broken, she could be evicted without a court hearing, said Arthur Boothby, executive director of Housing Services Corp., which manages the federally subsidized Beechwood Apartments.

Besides allegations of drug sales from the apartment, Housing Services had charged that neighbors had complained about fights between Pomerleau and her husband, who no longer lives in the building.

Boothby said that compromises are generally the rule in cases such as Pomerleau's. "I think it's a reasonable settlement from both sides," he said.

Iran attacks Yugoslav ship as tanker group approaches

By Richard Pyle
 The Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — Speedboat-borne Iranian commandos attacked and searched a Yugoslav vessel in the Persian Gulf as a U.S. Navy-escorted convoy of Kuwaiti tankers approached the area, shipping sources said today.

Iran today declared the Gulf of Oman and the Strait of Hormuz, the strategic waterway linking the two gulfs, free of mines after its navy destroyed four underwater explosive devices in a six-day operation.

The shipping sources said the television News correspondent Brent Sadler, tracking the convoy in a chartered ship, said it was "off Bahrain and moving."

The raiders of the Yugoslav ship may have come from one of several small islands that Iranians have used in the past in similar attacks on the shipping sources.

The shipping sources said the Iranian apparently fired on the British tanker, but it was not boarded and searched, it probably to determine if it was carrying cargo for Iraq — Iran's enemy in the year-old Gulf war — or Kuwait, Iraq's ally.

It was the second such incident in the Gulf region in recent days. A Liberian tanker was fired on by gunmen in a boat in the Strait of Hormuz, gateway to the Gulf, on Tuesday.

Iran has indicated it had nothing to do with that attack. But shipping sources say it may have been carried out by irregular Revolutionary Guards acting without official authority.

Congressman-elect Christopher Shays shakes hands with diners at a Westport delatessen Wednesday as he toured the 4th District to thank voters. Shays, a Republican, won Tuesday's special election to fill the seat vacated by the death of Republican Stewart McKinney.

Shays heads to Washington, meets mayors and selectmen

STAMFORD (AP) — Republican U.S. Rep.-elect Christopher Shays was headed for Washington today for some preliminary meetings on staff and other arrangements. 48 hours after his sweeping victory in the 4th congressional district special election.

He also planned a few more meetings with mayors and first selectmen in the nine-town district, a task he began Wednesday. "It's finally beginning to sink in," he said mid-way through a day of thanking voters up and down the coastline district. "It's been a dream, and now the dream is reality."

Shays, a 41-year-old state representative and real estate broker from Stamford, defeated Democrat Christine M. Niedermeier, a Fairfield attorney and former state representative, in Tuesday's special election.

Niedermeier had been the favorite for most of the campaign, chiefly because of the high name recognition resulting from her bid for the same seat 10 months ago.

At that time, she lost by fewer than 10,000 votes to Republican Stewart B. McKinney, who won his ninth term. His death from AIDS complications in May prompted the special election.

Shays will serve the remaining 15 months of McKinney's term. He said Wednesday he expects to run for a full term in November 1988. Niedermeier, meanwhile, spent the day with family and friends at her Fairfield home. She said she had felt like she was running against McKinney again. Shays was close to the late congressman and McKinney's widow and son had active roles in his campaign.

She also said the Democrats weren't unified behind her after she won a three-way primary for the nomination in July. One of the losers in that race, state Sen. Margaret E. Morton of Bridgeport had initially endorsed Shays after the primary, but reversed herself after some arm-twisting from top state Democrats.

"Margaret created unnecessary divisiveness," Niedermeier said. State Democratic Chairman John F. Dronay Jr. said he had watched Niedermeier's support erode after the Morton incident and an off-hand remark Niedermeier made about AIDS during one debate. The remark offended the widow of McKinney.

Further, the chairman said, Shays was perceived as the best candidate to "assume the cloak of Stew McKinney." The district, which runs along the coastline and has long been a GOP stronghold, has been won by a Democrat only four times in the 20th century, Dronay said.

He said he wanted to talk to Niedermeier about her future, but he wouldn't say whether he'd make any suggestions.

Gov. William A. O'Neill, the titular head of the state Democratic organization, said he didn't think the race was decided along traditional Democrat-Republican lines.

"The Democratic Party did everything it could and it should do," O'Neill told reporters at the Capitol. "All people are not electable. You can't win without the right candidate. It's as simple as that."

"I'm not sure it was really a Democrat-Republican issue in the 4th District," the governor said. "I think Christopher Shays creamed Christine Niedermeier. I'm sorry for Christine Niedermeier. She ran a good race."

Shays, sometimes described as a maverick in his party, has his differences with Reagan. For example, he opposes additional U.S. aid to the Nicaraguan contras and opposes a balanced budget amendment to the constitution.

"I feel quite confident we will meet the test," Fabrizio said of the 94 standards the commission set. "This will help the city reverse its image of Bridgeport and the department."

Mayor Thomas W. Bucchi, who said working on the accreditation process cost the city about $8,400, said there is a "trend" in police departments becoming accredited.

Low oxygen level kills Norwalk fish

NORWALK (AP) — Low oxygen levels have left tens of thousands of dead bunker fish in Norwalk Harbor, the Connecticut Coastal Fisherman's Association said.

Association President Terry Backer said his groups' tests before sunrise showed a "state of localized hypoxia" in the city waters which killed "probably millions of fish."

The condition occurs when the dissolved oxygen levels go below 3 parts per million, Backer said, attributing the fish kill at least in part to a "stressed environment."

The reading at Veterans Memorial Park was 1.9 parts per million at 18 inches below the water surface, and down to 1.3 parts per million at about 18 feet below the surface, he said.

In the area of the Yankee Doodle Bridge dissolved oxygen levels were at 0.8 and 0.3 parts per million, although levels at Buoy 19 in Norwalk Harbor and around Norwalk Cove Marina were acceptable.

Some of the worst areas were Pease Island, the South Norwalk Boat Club and Shorefront Park. Frank Montlik, of Norwalk, said that during a canoe ride Wednesday he saw the dead silver-gray fish, with most between 6 to 10 inches long.

"Almost all of them have what looks like green algae coming out of their gill covers," Montlik said. "There's lots of fish oil all over the water surface."

He said a similar fish kill occurred on the eastern side of the harbor earlier this year, although it did not involve as many fish.

Gene English, a veteran fisherman, said there were so many dead bunker on the water that he could here his boat engine's propeller churning them up.

Local fisherman said bluefish were seen chasing bunker up the harbor on Friday and that as early as Tuesday afternoon the bunker were coming up to the top. Backer predicted that if temperatures remained high, many more fish would die.

Backer said that while fish kills were nothing new, it's only in "extremely stressed environments like the Norwalk River" where they become this extreme.

"We warned of this earlier this month at the Shellfish Commission, and our prediction seems to have come true," Backer said.

Rod Macleod, a fisheries biologist with the Waterford office of the state Department of Environmental Protection, said an inspector on Wednesday was to check the cause of the fish kill, the numbers of dead fish and measure the affected area.

Bunker fish kills in Connecticut are commonly caused when schools are chased into a constricted area such as a harbor by bluefish and can't get out, Macleod said. The bunker — also known as menhaden — use up all the dissolved oxygen and eventually suffocate.

The second cause for fish kills is a viral disease known as infectious pancreatic necrosis or spinning disease. The virus causes the fish to hemorrhage and to swim erratically until they eventually die.

Macleod said fish kills are usually "a natural occurrence. People get upset when the fish get up on the surface because they stink."

He added that the state doesn't clean up fish kills and usually no one else does either because of the cost.

"The best thing is usually to let nature take its course. The fish will drop to the bottom and decay, or the tide will take them out," Macleod said, adding that the fish kill probably won't dent the bunker population.

A boater looks down at some of the thousands of dead bunker fish littering Norwalk Harbor on Wednesday. Low oxygen levels in Long Island Sound were blamed for the deaths of schools of fish near the entrance to the Norwalk River.

Study urges rules for nursing homes

HARTFORD (AP) — State health officials could do a better job protecting nursing home residents if they had more information on the homes and stronger laws backing their regulatory efforts, a consulting firm reported Wednesday.

In the 66-page report commissioned by the state Department of Health Services, the consulting firm of Parisky & Daniels detailed a series of recommendations including proposed legal changes to improve regulation of nursing homes. The report said "three critical factors" emerged from the study.

Improved methods must be found to identify nursing homes in danger of failing and a plan must be formed to manage the situation.

Laws and regulations must be strengthened to give the Department of Health Services better tools with which to protect patients.

Methods to improve health surveillance must be found to allow agencies to focus on facilities with the poorest patient care records.

The study was commissioned "as a result of the recent rash of nursing home receiverships Connecticut has experienced," said Stephen A. Harriman, chief of the state health department's Bureau of Public Health System Regulation.

Three nursing homes have suffered "institutional collapse" in recent months, affecting approximately 370 patients. Each time, the state took over the property from private owners. Of the three homes, one has closed, another is in imminent danger of closing and the other has been sold, the report said.

The three nursing homes that have gone into receivership in Connecticut in recent months compares with only 12 receiverships actions taken nationwide in 1985, the latest year for which statistics were available. Several of the homes were in the 21 states with laws similar to those in Connecticut.

The study offers eight recommendations to rectify flaws in Connecticut's laws and policies:

Overhaul state statutes governing receivership to strengthen their use and enable judges to more effectively invoke a receivership to protect patients;

Amend the 1987 law governing fines against nursing homes to allow the Department of health services to order them directly;

Establish a $500,000 Nursing Home Emergency Revolving Fund ($100,000 in the first year) to provide money for receivers to carry out their duties and insure continued operations;

Strengthen a Nursing Home Performance Bond Program to require licensees to post a bond adequate to continue operation for 60 days in case of financial collapse;

Establish an Early Warning Response System administered by the state health department to integrate state agency activities, warn of potential nursing home failure and create a strategy for response;

Establish a Persistent Violators Program to target habitual violators of the Public Health Code and patient care standards;

Computerize all Department of Health Services nursing home inspection reports, violations and records;

Increase the ability of the state health department to make financial reviews by hiring additional personnel specializing in finance and develop a joint program with the Department of Public Health to audit and review nursing home ownership changes.

Harriman said regulators are considering additional actions that include setting time limits on nursing home licenses and developing a program to analyze the finances of potential owners.

The state health department has scheduled a series of public hearings to allow interested parties to comment on the report and other nursing home initiatives.

Harriman said that information from the report and public hearings will be used by the department to develop legislative proposals for the 1988 session of the General Assembly.

No tampering with evidence, Twardy says

HARTFORD (AP) — U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy says accusations that the FBI secretly tampered with crucial wiretap evidence in the Wells Fargo robbery case are "totally without merit."

Twardy responded Wednesday to charges contained in documents filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court containing the allegations based on a 13-page preliminary report prepared by defense attorney Hal Meyerson.

Meyerson, attorney for defendant Jorge A. Farinacci Jr., said that unless the government could explain the conclusions of the experts, the most vital evidence against most of the 16 defendants would have to be thrown out.

Meyerson said the experts, Frank and Michael McDermott of McClean, Va., spent eight months examining the 22 reels of tapes recordings that police and federal agents secretly made of the defendants talking in their homes, offices and cars in Puerto Rico.

The experts' report says that none of the 22 tapes they examined was an original tape as federal prosecutors had said.

In addition the report says that all 22 reels had been altered to omit parts of some conversations and other conversations were "totally erased," according to Meyerson.

Twardy said that Meyerson's claims "are part of a series of unfounded defendants' allegations regarding the wiretap evidence."

"But the defendants have and know they have duplicates. The originals have been kept locked under seal in Puerto Rico," Twardy said.

The 16 defendants are charged in the $7 million robbery of the Wells Fargo depot in West Hartford on September 1983.

Reward offered in murder case

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill has authorized a $20,000 reward to anyone providing information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the death of Pamela Pepper.

The victim, also known as Pamela Jerome, of Bridgeport, state police said Wednesday.

State police said the 45-year-old woman's body was found in Redding on Jan. 13, 1986. It was later determined she was strangled.

State police said anyone with information should contact the state police barracks in Southbury.

Bridgeport police try to meet standards for national accreditation

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — The 151-year-old Bridgeport Police Department is trying to become one of a handful of departments in the nation to be accredited by a national law enforcement agency.

The department — beset by political strife through the years — is trying to become the second department in the state to meet the standards for accreditation, city officials said Wednesday.

The Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies, located in Virginia, has accredited only 51 law enforcement agencies of some 15,000 in the nation, said Beth Denison, a spokeswoman for the Fairfax, Va. accreditation commission.

Glastonbury was accredited last year. "It (accreditation) truly does place the law enforcement agency in the leadership elite because there are so few that have completed it and it's a very difficult thing to do," Denison said in a telephone interview.

The commission is a four-year-old private non-profit corporation, whose goal is to improve or maintain the quality of law enforcement agencies nationwide, she said. Accreditation by the commission means a police department has met certain standards. On Wednesday, Bridgeport city officials said they have nearly completed a 17-month review process of their department to prepare for the examination by accreditation officials. Four team members of the commission are due in Bridgeport on Sept. 19. They will review the department, prepare a report and the commission will decide whether or not Bridgeport is accredited. "Our chances are excellent," said Anthony Fabrizio, an inspector with the Bridgeport Police Department.

Fabrizio pinpointed several areas of the department that he said meet the commission's standards including cellblock procedures, and its policies in pursuing fleeing suspects and using force.

"I feel quite confident we will meet the test," Fabrizio said of the 94 standards the commission set. "This will help the city reverse its image of Bridgeport and the department."

Mayor Thomas W. Bucchi, who said working on the accreditation process cost the city about $8,400, said there is a "trend" in police departments becoming accredited.

Fire spares Life photos

HARTFORD (AP) — Fire extensively damaged the home of Connecticut's chief health department spokeswoman, but the historic photographs shot by her late husband, a Life magazine photographer, were salvaged.

Only a plumber was at the three-story home of Wanda Rickerby, spokeswoman for the state Department of Health Services, when the fire started Wednesday at about 2:45 p.m., authorities said.

Mrs. Rickerby's husband, Arthur B. Rickerby, was a Navy and news photographer for 30 years, working for Life magazine for 10 years until his death in 1972.

In the house when the fire broke out was a print of his shot of the Japanese surrender at the end of World War II aboard the USS Missouri in Tokyo Harbor. Mrs. Rickerby said.

Rickerby was also assigned to the Kennedy White House during his career. Mrs. Rickerby said a collection of his photographs had only recently been returned to her after being exhibited in offices of Hartford-based Aetna Life & Casualty and Duke University.

"All of my husband's pictures are OK," she said, adding that they were stored in an addition to the house that wasn't damaged.

Five firefighters received minor injuries fighting the blaze, said Deputy Fire Chief James Errickson. He said the cause of the blaze was unknown.

The fire was extinguished by 4:30 p.m.

"We won't be living there for a long time," Mrs. Rickerby said of the house, where she lives with her two sons. The family was staying with a neighbor Wednesday night.

Suspect held in holdup try

WATERBURY (AP) — A man who attempted to rob a jewelry store owned by a former state trooper has been charged with attempted murder and robbery in the failed holdup, state police said.

David Sierras, 19, of Bridgeport, was charged Wednesday with criminal attempt to commit murder, first-degree attempted robbery, and possession of a weapon by a convicted felon, police said.

State police Sgt. Daniel Lewis said Sierras tried to rob Country Jewelers in Southbury on Aug. 7 when he walked into the store, pulled out a handgun and demanded money from owner Thomas Pietrini.

Pietrini, a former state trooper, managed to wriggle free after Sierras tied him up, Lewis said. Pietrini then got his own gun and wounded Sierras as the robber fled from the store, Lewis said.

The shootout continued in the parking lot, where Sierras managed to escape in his car. Sierras later collapsed at an athletic field about two miles from the store, Lewis said.

Sierras, who was released from Waterbury Hospital shortly before his arraignment Wednesday, was ordered held on $200,000 bond at the New Haven Correctional Center.

Come in for a mortgage and we'll say

NO!

Once you hear about all of these wonderful NO's, you'll say YES! — the Savings Bank of Manchester has just the kind of mortgages, with all the kinds of extras, that you've been looking for.

NO!
You're not limited to just one kind of mortgage or the other.

We give you options, as you can see by the box at the right. Adjustable Rate (with varying points) or Fixed Rate Mortgages. Whatever you choose, these rates are highly competitive with other banks in the area. But you make the decision. Do you figure rates might drop, so you'd be better off with an adjustable rate? Or do you settle in with a mortgage rate that won't change? There's something to be said for all our options.

NO!
Your mortgage rate can't be raised for 60 days. It's locked in at application time! (But it could be lowered!)

Few other banks offer you a deal like this on a mortgage. The rate in effect upon application will hold for 60 days. If rates go up during that time period, you're protected. If rates go down (up to 5 days prior to closing), we'll give you the lower one.

Mortgage Rates - Effective August 19, 1987

| 1-YEAR ADJUSTABLE RATE MORTGAGES |        |                        |

NO!
SBM does not have excessively high closing costs.

Some banks you'll talk to ask as much as 3 points or more at the closing. Our current maximum is 2 points — and sometimes none. You'll find our other fees and closing costs are as reasonably priced as you'll find anywhere.

NO!
You won't lack for good service, personal attention or good turnaround.

One thing we pride ourselves on is making the mortgage process go as smoothly as possible. We won't overly hassle you with paperwork. And we're not impatient with your questions. We know that buying a house is probably the most important financial transaction you can make, so we want you to feel comfortable about it.

The Savings Bank of Manchester has certainly helped a lot of people with mortgages — some of them probably friends of yours. Ask their opinion of our NO's, and we're sure you'll also come in saying YES.

NO!
Not like most banks, we'll actually pre-qualify you for your mortgage. Even before you go house hunting!

Are you thinking about a new home, but haven't yet started the search? Come to SBM. We'll pre-qualify your mortgage ability and tell you how much you can afford. Then you can look and wheel and deal for the house of your dreams.

NO!
There's no need for an SBM attorney to attend the closing.

All kinds of people seem to attend the closing on a house. If you like, you can have your own lawyer also represent us, the bank, in most cases. A small detail, maybe, but it's one more way that the Savings Bank of Manchester helps cut down on your closing costs.

Where your friends are.

Bees have a field day

It's better to be safe than sorry. Because of the unusually high temperatures, a large number of queen bees were able to survive the usually deadly weeks of early spring. While the warm weather may have pleased outdoorsmen, softball players and many others, Manchester is now paying the price for the warm weather with a high concentration of bees.

According to Richard Vatteroni, co-owner of Budget Pest Control in Manchester, the high volume of bees in the area is the worst he has seen in his 30 years in the business. The bee situation is expected to worsen through the next few weeks.

The bee problem can't be taken lightly. Not only can bees sting people — which would be bad enough — but they can cause property damage, ruining what they touch. To combat the bees, experts suggest people take precautionary measures such as avoiding bright clothing and perfume, spraying insecticides with care, and being on the lookout for nests.

While the precautions will not guarantee a sting-free summer, they do make sense. And a little common sense can go a long way.

It will have to, because there are predictions of an even higher number of bees in Manchester next year.

We can only hope for a cold spring.

No more labeling

How important is it that consumers know the maple syrup they lavish on their pancakes is really from Canada and not Vermont?

Very important, according to some members of Congress who are seeking legislation that would require food labels to carry the names of countries from which product ingredients are imported.

Not so important, say other lawmakers who contend that the food production and distribution process is already so large and complex that one more regulation will just add cost and confusion.

The second group of lawmakers has a point. One has only to look at the back of a can of soup to see just how confusing things have gotten. Simpler labeling, not more of it, is what consumers need in order to make wise decisions in the supermarket.

Whether maple syrup is from north of the border or south of it doesn't matter much.

Questions for Mr. Bush on auto safety

Have you been injured in an auto accident? Do you know anyone who has been killed on the highways since 1981?

If so, I'd like to suggest six questions you might ask Vice President George Bush out on the campaign trail — or other backers of the Reagan Administration's "deregulation" effort that scrapped new safety rules.

1. "Why, Mr. Bush, did you announce on April 6, 1981, that 15 auto safety rules were being rescinded, revised or redrafted? You said the problem was sagging car sales. How many sales equal 4,000 lives a year?"

2. "Why were requirements to improve side impact protection 'terminated' on July 12, 1982 and never revised?"

3. "Mr. Bush, why aren't all motorcycle helmets required to meet safety standards, since motorcycle fatalities doubled from 1970 to 1982?"

4. "Why does the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration insist that only 40 to 46 percent of the helmets sold in the United States are 'certified' by helmet manufacturers. As NHTSA says, 'The agency believes it reasonable to assume that uncertified helmets are not manufactured to the same level of performance as certified helmets.'"

5. "Why does the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration have to be pushed by Congress to propose new highway safety rules?"

6. "For reasons that are obscure, vans and pickup trucks were excluded from many auto safety rules 20 years ago. They don't have the head restraints to prevent whiplash injuries, the crush resistance of cars, the rear-mounted brake lights that reduce rear-end crashes by 50 percent, or the requirement to add automatic front seat protection that was ordered by the Supreme Court in 1976. In 1986, the institute asked that passenger car standards be extended to all vehicles. When there was no NHTSA response, the Senate passed a bill in April requiring this step. A similar bill is in the House.

7. "To close on a personal note, when I bought my Plymouth Voyager, which is a minivan, I was able to get seats with head restraints — but I had to pay several hundred dollars extra. A few months after I bought the car, I was in a 5-mph accident in which I drifted into the car in front of me. Certainly, it was my fault. I looked away at the wrong moment. However, when I surveyed the damage, my bumper and grill work were badly smashed and ultimately cost more than $500 to repair. But the car hit sustained no damage whatsoever, though it was a smaller 1981 car. Why? The 1981 car had shock-absorbing bumpers able to withstand a 5-mph hit without a scratch. My 1985 car with a 'Bush bumper' did not. Why? The 5-mph bumper rule was scrapped by the Bush 'deregulation' initiative, which was supposed to save $20 in purchase cost. As the institute puts it: 'By 1983, the 5-mph bumper rule was a memory. The automatic restraint rule had been rescinded. Work on improving side impact protection had been canceled. Rulmaking to make big trucks safer... had been shelved. The result? Tens of thousands of Americans died needlessly. Why, Mr. Bush? Why?"

Duck-race issue no 'fowl' subject

To the Editor:

Recently I read in the newspaper that the latest form of race is one which includes ducks. This is an issue I can ill afford to duck, inasmuch as it concerns a bird or fowl which certainly isn't a sitting duck.

My association with ducks was usually by way of a culinary nature. Also, I have long been my custom to eat crackers and milk before retiring because my sleep pattern seems to be less impaired as a result. The consumption of food in general has included many items which would be fowl, such as chicken or duck, which is very enjoyable. On one occasion I ordered duck as the main entrée and I also added a glass of milk. As a result I had my "quackers" and milk even though it was earlier than usual.

It isn't possible to bet on this race because it isn't permitted. However, if it were possible, could it be compared to a horse or dog race when a winner may be declared by nose? In duck racing it could be by a bill or a beak or a flick of the beak.

The duck race starts from one end of a pool with suitable music and food at the opposite end. It seems that all duck training is conducted by the same methods, with music and food the main incentives.

The ducks are underfed prior to a race, which establishes food as the ultimate objective. The duck which reaches this source first is declared the winner. Could it be ascertained by some farfetched reasoning that this is a foot race, since feet are the main source of propulsion, even though it takes place in the water? Whatever the outcome it must be admitted that it is far from duck soup. Also, how can a nest egg be established or a nest feathered if no bets are allowed?

I trust this dissertation has clarified to some extent the issue of duck racing so that it would never be classified as a "fowl" subject.

Insofar as the loser is concerned, this duck could take consolation in the fact that it was just like water off a duck's back.

Judgment harsh in doctor's case

To the Editor:

After reading the coverage, and letters to the editor of Aug. 3, I feel compelled to address the recent ruling on Dr. Chang. It seems to me the judgment was extremely harsh.

I have been a patient of Dr. Chang's for over a year with a chronic neck pain. I originally tried acupuncture as a last resort since traditional medicine did not alleviate the constant pain. I have not had a treatment in 11 months, so I would say that acupuncture certainly works.

It is with this experience in mind that I find the charges against Dr. Chang ridiculous, especially since either his wife or nurse is constantly checking on our comfort during the 30 to 45-minute treatment. The chance for sexual advances is nil in that setting. Perhaps the whole thing stemmed from a misunderstanding, since Dr. Chang is fluent in a language barrier and is often difficult to communicate with.

It seems to me that Dr. Chang needs support from those of us who know and need this good and gentle person. If this ruling is allowed to stand, the community and his patients will be the real losers.

Action is prompt on abandoned car

To the Editor:

On Monday, Aug. 17, we wholwe on the horseshoe curve on South Hawthorne Street had welcome company in the street. Surrounding the abandoned car about which I wrote last week were a Manchester police patrol car and a wrecker with a crew of two men, who examined the car quite closely in preparation for towing it away to that portion of the town disposal area reserved for use by the police department.

My neighbor across the street (he had visited our town manager) observed that the action made good sense. He and I say "thank" to our manager, to our police department — and to our newspaper — for prompt action in removing this blight from our neighborhood.

Navy chaplain gets extension through Falwell

WASHINGTON — Praise the Lord and change the disposition! After a middle-of-the-night telephone plea and a follow-up letter from the Rev. Jerry Falwell, then-Navy Secretary John Lehman overturned the decision of a high-level review board and approved a request to extend the active duty of a Navy chaplain affiliated with Falwell's Liberty Baptist Fellowship.

The subject of Falwell's concern was Lt. Gary L. Maxwell, 34. The urgency of Falwell's midnight phone call last Feb. 11 was dictated by the chaplain's scheduled separation from active duty on Feb. 20 — a disposition decided on by the Chaplain Corps 1987 Extension Board of five senior Navy chaplains.

The review panel denied Maxwell's request to extend his active-duty status beyond the three years he had already served. Extensions are highly valued by Navy chaplains, and most requests are granted. But the board informed Maxwell that he was "non-competitive," a judgment call that was not elaborated upon.

Maxwell appealed — to Falwell. "I sent (Dr. Dennis) Fields (Falwell's executive secretary) a copy of the letter the extension board sent me, and I checked on an appeals process, but I was told there was none," Maxwell told our reporter Mike Rosenfelt.

Maxwell's decision to seek Falwell's help was a wise one. Fields told us that he initially tried to solve the lieutenant's problem by going through Chaplain Corps channels. But these attempts were unsuccessful. And Maxwell's release date was drawing near.

So on the night of Feb. 10-11, the big gun himself was bought in. Falwell, whose powers of persuasion are legendary, got on the horn to Lehman and also talked with Lehman's executive assistant, Capt. Joseph Prueher.

No one knows better than a television evangelist the importance of a follow-up letter. Falwell wrote to Prueher that very day, exuding reasonableness and humility.

"Thank you," he wrote, "for allowing our telephone conversation tonight. I apologize for calling you and the secretary at the midnight hour. However, all other avenues have now been explored...."

"I am humbly requesting your intervention on (Maxwell's) behalf, because we believe he was unfairly evaluated by his commanding chaplain. His commanding chaplain was openly critical of Maxwell's denomination and our evangelical doctrine."

"All of his commanders and many of his co-workers have written me stating Chaplain Maxwell's excellent abilities and performance. I am enclosing some of these letters. They all support my conclusion that Lt. Maxwell has been wrongly evaluated and should be given an indefinite extension on active duty...."

"Lt. Maxwell is the only chaplain Liberty Baptist Fellowship presently has in the Navy.... As you well know, I have never asked this office for any favor. However, I sincerely feel that Chaplain Maxwell is being wrongly treated and deserves your intervention...."

"It's not possible to say with any certainty that Falwell's earnest plea did the trick. Lehman did not return repeated calls for comment, and Prueher is apparently now on sea duty and unavailable...."

However, on Feb. 19 — just 24 hours before he was to be released from active duty — Maxwell was informed that Secretary Lehman had overruled the Extension Board's decision and would allow the chaplain to remain on active duty as Maxwell (and Falwell) had requested.

Coke and corruption
How do the drug lords operate with such arrogant license in Colombia? A classified Drug Enforcement Administration report gives the disquieting answer: It estimates that drug traffickers pay more than $100 million a year to corrupt officials to say they'll look the other way when drugs are being processed and shipped out of the country.

At times, the DEA report charges, the payoffs have reached into the Colombian presidential Cabinet. In some cases, when civil servants initially refuse to grant importation, the DEA makes an offer that can't be refused: threats of bodily harm to the targeted official or his family. This usually works, since the cocaine czars are known to have no qualms about murdering those who stand in their way.

All this has made the Colombian public cynical. There's a popular joke that a drug dealer first buys a Mercedes, then a large estate — and then a politician.

U.S./World In Brief

Deception works well for Navy

MANAMA, Bahrain — Since the start of its Kuwait tanker convoy operations in the Persian Gulf, the U.S. Navy has made deception a key part of its tactics. So far, it has worked fairly well.

Where the international news media and gulf-based shipping interests are concerned, the element of surprise has been a stunning success. The Iranians, however, may be another story. Two of the three convoys to sail north through the gulf were well on their way before their departures became public knowledge.

At the latest convoy slipped quietly through the Straits of Hormuz on Wednesday, a shipping expert who monitors gulf activity said, "They (the Americans) have really fooled us all."

U.S. ambassador to return to Syria

WASHINGTON — The next step in improving U.S. relations with Syria will be the return of Ambassador William Eagleton to Damascus, U.S. officials say, but the Reagan administration is trying to prevent the move from being seen as a reward for the freedom of hostage Charles Glass.

Two administration officials, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said Wednesday a decision to send the ambassador back around Sept. 1 was made before Glass gained his freedom in Beirut on Tuesday.

"We don't want Eagleton to be a reward for Glass," one official said. Some U.S. analysts are convinced the Syrians, at U.S. behest, put pressure on Iran, which it is helping in the Persian Gulf war with Iraq, to free Glass and eight other American hostages also believed to be held in the Lebanese capital.

Contras say plan not tough enough

WASHINGTON — Contra leaders plan to meet next week with President Reagan to express their view that the Central American peace plan is not tough enough on Nicaragua's ruling Sandinistas, a contra official says.

Alfredo Cesar says he hopes to obtain administration commitment for a new, conditional Contra aid package — one that could be passed by Congress but would only be used if the Sandinistas did not live up to the peace agreement they signed Aug. 7 along with Costa Rica, Honduras, El Salvador and Guatemala.

Cesar and others of the six-member directorate that heads the contra umbrella group Nicaragua Resistance will travel next week to Santa Barbara, Calif., where Reagan is vacationing. Cesar said in a telephone interview from Costa Rica on Wednesday.

CIA man admits contra-aid talks

WASHINGTON — A ranking CIA official, correcting his previous testimony, says he made a secret trip to South Africa in 1984 in which he was prepared to reject an apparent offer to aid the Nicaraguan contra rebels.

Duane S. Clarridge, who in 1984 was director of the agency's covert support for the contras, in previous closed-door testimony denied having discussed providing aid for the contras with officials of a foreign government and said there was no discussion within the CIA of soliciting funds from other countries.

Clarridge's revised account came in testimony released Wednesday by the congressional Iran-contra committees. The transcript also shows that committee members sharply questioned Clarridge's memory when he insisted he did not know weapons were included in a November 1985 cargo shipment he helped arrange from Israel to Iran.

Laos will account for three MIAs

WASHINGTON — The Laotian government has agreed to account for three Americans who failed to emerge from captivity after the Indochina War, sources familiar with recent negotiations say.

The Laotians also appear to be willing to survey one of a number of sites where U.S. aircraft crashed during the war, to check for remains of some of the 549 Americans still listed as missing in Laos, the sources said, discussing the issue on condition of anonymity.

The two governments announced after an Aug. 10-11 meeting in Vientiane that Laos agreed to resume cooperation with the United States on the issue of the missing Americans, but the announcement Wednesday did not include specifics.

Labor unrest continues in Korea

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korea's chief prosecutor issued a tough new warning today against violence in South Korea's growing labor protests after police detained 126 strikers.

Seven key plants of the country's largest conglomerate, Hyundai, reopened today. But disputes continued at at least 458 workites, and tens of thousands of workers remained idle. News media depicted police as reporting fresh disturbances at 74 companies.

"The prosecution should deal resolutely with anybody who hurts social stability by committing acts of violence," Prosecutor-General Lee Chong-nam told senior prosecution officials called to discuss the four-week wave of labor turmoil. Police detained 126 striking workers on Wednesday for allegedly staging violent protests. Officials said about half of them were released and the others were being questioned.

No motive in British killing rampage

HUNGERFORD, England (AP) — The gunman who killed his mother and 13 others expressed bewilderment before committing suicide that he had shot so many people but felt incapable of turning the gun on himself, police said today.

The rampage on Wednesday was the worst in modern modern British history. It left this market town of about 5,000 people in shock and raised national questions about whether Britain's gun laws were strict enough.

Fourteen of the 15 people who were wounded remained in hospitals today, and two were reported in critical condition.

Michael Ryan, 27, had licenses to own three handguns and two rifles. Colin Smith, chief constable of Thames Valley Police, said at a news conference.

Recounting the end of bloody rampage, Smith said police had cornered Ryan in an upper floor of John O'Grady's School, and he seemed "lucid and reasonable" as they talked to him in the last moments before he killed himself.

"He expressed concern that he had shot his mother," Smith said. "He expressed the view that it was strange he could shoot other people but he could not shoot himself. Shortly after that a shot was heard at the school, and Ryan was found dead with a gun in his hand when police entered the room seven hours after the shooting began."

The gunman was described by neighbors as a loner with a doting mother and a love of guns. Police said he left no note or any explanation for the massacre.

"It is a complete mystery. We genuinely do not know why he did it," Thames Valley Police said in a statement.

There had been reports that Ryan was a former paratrooper, but the Parachute Regiment said in a statement he never had been in that unit or any other in the armed services. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and the archbishop of Canterbury, the most Rev. Robert Runcie, issued statements expressing the nation's shock at the massacre.

About 25 people gathered today at the Anglican parish church of St. Lawrence in this town 60 miles west of London to pray for the dead and injured.

Residents today huddled along the main street, staring at newspaper headlines and talking about Ryan. In the midst of the rampage, he had donned combat clothes, went to the home he shared with his 60-year-old widowed mother, shot her to death and set fire to the house.

"It's such a shock that such a thing can happen in a sleepy town like this," said Michael Moon, who runs a newspaper store. "I was saying to a fellow just now, you hear about these things in America, but you don't expect them on your doorstep."

Headlines on newspapers in his shop screamed: "Massacre on the High Street," and "Rage of Hungerford." The Rev. David Salt, visited victims' relatives. Salt said he didn't know the gunman but was ready to conduct his funeral if asked to do so.

The dead included a policeman and a woman whose body was found in Saverne Forest, eight miles outside of town. Ryan is believed to have killed the woman as she and her two young children were having a picnic.

Man meets siblings lost for decades

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A man separated from his siblings when they were given up by their destitute parents on the eve of the Depression embraced two sisters in a tearful reunion and said the "empty spot inside" is gone.

"It's been a long time," 62-year-old Ed Maddox said as he wrapped his arms around his sister Agnes Durand at an airport gate Wednesday on her arrival from Minneapolis. Another sister, Marie Peterson, arrived from Sacramento.

Except for a reunion with Marie and her twin sister, Lillian, when Maddox was a 17-year-old soldier during World War II, Maddox hadn't seen or spoken to any of his siblings since he was 4.

His parents put their children up for adoption in 1925 rather than see them go hungry, according to newspaper accounts at the time, but Maddox didn't know that until he began looking into his roots this summer.

Being enough like the (Oakland) Tribune, the 62-year-old Christian missionary from Sunland, near Los Angeles, was stunned to find a photograph of himself and two siblings in a front-page 1929 story.

News accounts of his search helped him account for five siblings earlier this month. "All these years, I would visit my wife's relatives," said Maddox, blinking back tears Wednesday. "I would have an empty spot inside. But not any more, not any more."

The reunion at San Jose International Airport joined not only the siblings but about three dozen cousins and aunts and uncles, all meeting for the first time.

"When I was little I always wanted cousins," said Jeannie Noia, of Fremont, Agnes' daughter, who introduced her children to their second reunion. "This is opening up holidays and birthdays and special occasions. Just to be able to pick up the phone and talk is great. We have a lifetime to build on."

... the "empty spot" is gone

Maddox, born Edmund Birdsel Bunan, was adopted by an Oakland streetcar motorman and his wife. He honored the couple's request that he not look into his past until his adopted mother's death. She died in July.

The 1929 article described the plight of his parents, Agnes and Harry Bunan, itinerant farmworkers who arrived broke outside of Oakland and reluctantly gave their children away to strangers.

Marie and Lillian were reunited with Maddox in 1983 just before he went into the Navy, but they lost touch after the war.

Maddox's bitterest search determined that a brother, Ernest, died in an orphanage and that another brother, Henry, died in 1972. Maddox still has no word of five siblings: Viola, Walter, Leonard, Harold and Lloyd.

"I wish all of them had been alive," said Maddox. "But of course I have no control over that. I'm hoping and praying we can find the rest."

A Los Angeles-area detective school has offered to turn loose its students on the case. "One of the students suggested instead of a textbook case, why not work on a real one," said Cheri Rediger, Maddox's daughter.

Maddox and his sisters will go next to Castro Valley, 20 miles east of San Francisco, to visit Lillian, who is in a nursing home in the final stages of Alzheimer's disease.

"Whether she recognizes us or understands is immaterial," said Maddox. "I would rather know what happened to her. We hope she recognizes us, but we just want to be there to pray with her."

The siblings still have heard nothing about their parents, whom they never saw after they were taken in by various families.

Bacteria linked to dolphin deaths in Atlantic

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A common ocean bacteria caused the deaths of more than 200 dolphins that washed ashore in the mid-Atlantic this summer, according to a team of scientists who plan more tests to determine why.

The infections developed because the dolphins' immune systems had been weakened by a virus, the head of a scientific investigative team.

"Our first thrust now is to intensify our search for viruses and other agents," Geraci told a news conference Wednesday. "If we can find a point source of the problem, perhaps we can do something to control it."

Since early July, more than 200 dead and dying dolphins have been stranded on beaches from Virginia to New Jersey. Usually, about 12 dead dolphins wash ashore in that area each year.

A virus is a likely culprit because the outbreak has been limited to bottlenose dolphins and has spread rapidly, said Geraci, a marine pathologist and veterinarian from the University of Guelph in Ontario.

The animals had mouth lesions suggestive of a viral disorder, he said. He said the team found no connection with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, nor evidence the bacteria threatens humans.

New London suspends cop in drug case

NEW LONDON (AP) — A city patrolman was suspended without pay after recording a federal drug case alleged he bought cocaine, jeopardizing a 10-month investigation that led to the arrest of nine people.

Police Chief Donald R. Sloan said Jesus R. Sanchez, who joined the force in November 1985, was suspended Wednesday after admitting he has a drug problem. Sloan said he did not know whether charges would be filed against Sanchez.

The suspension was a result of internal information about Sanchez' alleged narcotics involvement, Sloan said. Sanchez' name surfaced Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Hartford, where nine people arrested Friday were presented before a magistrate.

According to an affidavit from the Drug Enforcement Administration, confidential informants told authorities they saw Sanchez buying cocaine from a suspected drug dealer and learned that Sanchez gave a reputed drug dealer information that would allow the dealer to identify a police undercover detective.

The informant learned that the suspected dealer "paid Sanchez an unknown amount of money for the information he provided." DEA agent John Bryfonski said in the affidavit.

The DEA agent also said two detectives from the Statewide Narcotics Task Force "were being surveilled by (Sanchez) ... who was not operating a police vehicle." Sloan said Sanchez' suspension is indefinite, pending an internal police department investigation and the outcome of the Justice Department investigation. It is the second drug-related suspension in the police department this summer. On July 12, detective John Prida was suspended after being arrested on charges of assault, possession of cocaine, and possession of cocaine with intent to sell. He is free on $20,000 bond.

Worker injured in chemical fire

One worker was injured in a Tuesday morning fire at Hilliard Street printing-supply company. Wholite-Seaboard Corp. of 596 Hilliard St. is open for business despite the fire, said a company secretary.

Robert Follet of Avondale Road was treated and released Tuesday at Manchester Memorial Hospital for second-degree burns on his right leg, said hospital spokesman Andrew A. Beck.

According to Thomas R. O'Marra, a spokesman for the Eighth District fire department, the fire started at the company at 7:48 a.m. after a hose broke off a mixing tank. Chemicals leaking out of the hose leading into a vat of chemicals caught fire after a spark from nearby machinery ignited them.

Follet was standing near the hose when the fire started. Only minor water damage was reported at the site, O'Marra said. The fire has been ruled accidental.

Coventry family is hurt in crash

COVENTRY — A couple were injured Wednesday following an accident at the intersection of Route 31 and Buena Vista Road, police said.

According to police, Frank Alessia, 26, of 12 Englewood Trail, Coventry, attempted a left turn from Route 31 onto Buena Vista Road, and did not see the oncoming car driven by Ellen Lefebvre, 30, of RFD 3, Coventry. Alessia turned into the path of Lefebvre, and was hit broadside, police said.

Lefebvre and her husband Roger, 39, were brought to Windham Community Memorial Hospital, where they were treated for minor injuries and released. Their two children, Dillon, 13, and Lincoln, 4, were not injured.

Alessia was cited for failure to yield right of way.

For the Record

Parents may begin to register their children for Manchester public schools beginning Tuesday, said Allan B. Chesterton, assistant school superintendent. The date was incorrectly stated in Tuesday's Herald.

A man identified as Gary Stollman holds a gun on KNBC-TV reporter David Horowitz Wednesday afternoon during the station's newscast from its studios in Burbank, Calif. The brief incident was broadcast live by the station.

Man with toy pistol seizes TV newscast

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — A man with a history of mental illness seized control of a live newscast by pointing a realistic toy pistol at TV reporter David Horowitz and demanding he read a statement about the CIA and space creatures.

Gary Stollman, 34, of Tallahassee, Fla., was booked for investigation of false imprisonment and disturbing the peace after Wednesday's brief takeover of KNBC-TV, said police Lt. Jay Farrand.

Horowitz and anchors Kiratir Wilde and John Beard were unharmed. Stollman, taken to the jail ward at Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center, was to undergo a mental evaluation, police Sgt. Joseph Latta said.

Almost as soon as Stollman appeared on camera at 4:30 p.m., toy gun in hand, news director Tom Capra ordered a broadcast of Wednesday's newscast.

Horowitz read the man's statement during a nine-minute period in which KNBC broadcast a message asking its viewing audience to stand by.

"The reason we went to black is because we can't let people with guns or weapons of any kind take the station hostage," Capra told reporters at a news conference.

The document Horowitz read was a rambling statement warning of a plot by the CIA and outer space "alien forces" against the U.S. government, and "possibly the human race itself."

Heather Burke was among scores of television viewers who called police and other news media to report what was happening.

"I'm sitting here watching TV, and I'm just freaking out," Ms. Burke said from her home in Hollywood. "You could see the gun, damaged in its left engine, he said. There were no injuries.

proceed along the same lines as this bond issue. The bond issue was challenged, DiRosa said.

Edward F. Hennessey, an attorney with the Hartford law firm Robinson & Cole, told Town Manager Robert Wales in a letter Wednesday that there are no cases in Connecticut in which the Supreme Court has been asked to rule on a question similar to the bond issue. But he said that holding a referendum probably would not invalidate the appeal, and he advised the town to schedule a referendum while proceeding with the appeal.

Bruce S. Beck, the attorney representing the Manchester Property Owners Association, has argued that a referendum would make an appeal moot.

Penny reiterated statements made by the referendum committee that Maloney's decision, if left unchanged, could affect future decisions by the town Board of Directors and other municipalities in the state. Right now the decision puts Manchester at a disadvantage with other towns because it clearly requires Manchester to hold a referendum to issue tax-increment bonds, Penny said.

Whether the decision affects tax-increment bonds issued by other municipalities is a subject of debate. "We're stuck with it and our competing towns are not," Penny said.

In the statement released this morning, the Democrats proposed a referendum question be worded in the following manner: "Shall the resolution appropriating more than $13 million to construct public roads and utilities in 300 acres in Buckland, to permit economic development of a mall and other projects, be approved; the bonds to be paid only by the new taxes from some of the development and not by you?"

Penny said the Democrats proposed wording the question in this manner. She has admitted, however, that the bonds would result in increased property taxes for residents. The directors have said that the bonds would be paid off from property tax levies on the mall site alone. The bond issue, they say, would have no effect on other taxpayers.

Tedford said that any unexpected costs for the bond issue — including the court appeal — are to be borne by the voters. "The Democrats want the question written up in the press release so that there will be no question," he said.

Last week, Republican candidates for the Board of Directors, including incumbent Director Geoffrey Naab, came out in support of holding a referendum. Naab and some of the candidates said their support would probably not be contingent on the possible effect on the appeal.

Asked this morning whether both parties were attempting to make the mall a political issue, Penny mentioned the fact that municipal elections are coming up in November. He added, however, that the Democrats were announcing their support for a referendum apart from the Republicans because as the majority party they had the obligation to play a leadership role.

Pomerleau has maintained all along that her brother, Adams, gave her LSD to a 15-year-old boy, did not deal drugs from the apartment. She has admitted, however, that she regularly visited to see his former girlfriend, who baby-sat for Pomerleau's children.

The agreement reached Monday did touch upon the question of whether Adams had the apartment or sold drugs from it. Pomerleau, expecting a drawn-out court fight, had contacted witnesses and collected documents to support her case.

"I was relieved," Pomerleau said. "I had a friend help me. If it wasn't for him, I don't think I would have made it through this all right."

Pomerleau also had help from Manchester attorney Leo J. Barrett, who read about her plight in the newspaper. While he did not represent her in court, he did tell her how to go about defending herself. He said Wednesday he believes her story.

New York second baseman Bobby Meacham gets the throw off to first base avoiding the sliding John Moses of the Mariners in Wednesday's night game in Seattle. The Yankees won, 8-0.

Hudson 'outstanding' in relief for Yankees

By The Associated Press

SEATTLE — New York Yankee starter Tommie Johnson put the Yankees in a familiar position — trailing after the first inning. Seattle has been outscored 19-1 in the first three innings of the six-game losing skid.

"It limits our offense when we get behind so early," Hudson said. "We got a few runs early and Hudson did the rest." Piniella added.

Mike Pagliarulo led the Yankee attack, scoring two runs and driving in two more, including his second consecutive game-winning RBI. He knocked in the game winner against the Mariners Tuesday night with a home run in the ninth inning of a 4-3 New York win.

"Mike has come up with some big hits for us," Hudson said. "All of us feel like whatever we can do to help the team win, we'll do it."

Seattle starter Mike Morgan, 10-13, suffered the loss, giving up six runs and seven in seven innings. He struck out four and walked two.

Morgan loaded the bases with no outs in the first inning before giving up a two-run double to Pagliarulo. Dan Pasqua scored from third base on a Mike Easler grounder and Pagliarulo tallied the final run of the inning, reaching home as the Mariners turned a double play.

"I looked up at the scoreboard and it was 4-0," Morgan said. "It happened so fast, but it didn't take me out of the game mentally."

"I'm sure Cy Young gave up runs in the first inning, so I'm not that frustrated about it. I'm not saying I can give up this many runs in the first inning all the time, but I still have a chance to pitch this ball club and get things rolling."

Pasqua hit his 13th home run in the seventh inning, Ron Kittle his ninth in the eighth and Jerry Roster his 22nd in the ninth inning.

Being blessed with natural athletic talent is a great gift. Being able to utilize that ability to its fullest is what separates those who will be successful from those who will not.

Clarence "Buddy" Zachery, a 1985 East Catholic High School graduate and All-State selection in football and track in high school, is a perfect example of someone who will be successful both on and off the playing field.

A Manchester resident, Zachery is set to begin his junior year at Yale University and likely will be one of the starting cornerbacks in the Elis' secondary. Based on his fine performance last season when he earned All-Ivy League honorable mention at defensive back, the Yale coaching staff is expecting big things from Zachery this season.

Zachery is one of a list from East to go on to play at the Division I-AA level. Scott Vihberts, a 1986 graduate, is in line for the starting quarterback position at UConn while Jim Mieczkowski is also on the Husky roster. Mike Ferrone is a starting linebacker and Kurt Hovan is on the Princeton roster.

"It's a credit to Coach Kelly and says something about the program," Zachery said. "I'm happy to see guys from East still playing in college."

"Last year I had my ups and downs," the 19-year-old Zachery said. "This year I think they expect me to be a star. One of Zachery's 'ups' last season was during his initial appearance in a Yale varsity game against Army. Zachery was named the defensive player of the game. An Ivy League rule doesn't allow freshmen to play varsity sports."

Zachery also saw some time at the tailback position, but the coaching staff has him slated for the cornerback position in track, a sport Zachery also competes in at Yale, he was Class M state champion during Zachery's junior year in 1983. In that game, Zachery scored a touchdown and a two-point conversion along with rushing for 178 yards on 11 carries.

Chisox Calderon lights up against Red Sox pitching

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Chicago White Sox right fielder Ivan Calderon likes facing Boston Red Sox pitchers, and Chicago manager Jim Fregosi likes what he sees in Calderon.

For the second time this season, Calderon Wednesday tagged Red Sox pitchers for two home runs in a single game. His solo shots led Chicago to an 8-3 win over Boston.

"I've always hit well against Boston," Calderon said. "His other two homers against the Red Sox this season came May 31, when he hit a pair of three-run shots off Boston pitcher Al Nipper."

Fregosi said the homers are just the latest of Calderon's hitting exploits. "I looked all winter for a right handed power hitter," said Fregosi. "He's done the job for us. He's been a bright spot in our lineup."

Calderon has hit 11 of his last 14 games. He started Tuesday's game as the designated hitter. It was his first start since leaving Saturday's game at Toronto with a sore right shoulder.

"I've played three games against the Red Sox and have four home runs," said Calderon. "Tonight's two home runs felt good because my shoulder is still bothering me."

Calderon's first home run Wednesday, his 19th of the season, came in the fourth to give the White Sox a 1-1 tie.

My goal when I started the season was to hit 25 home runs. Now that I have 20 I have a chance of meeting my goal and maybe hitting 30."

Calderon's first home run was hit to right field 382 feet, just making it to the first row seats, out of the reach of Dave Henderson's glove.

The second shot went to left field. Losing pitcher Bruce Hurst could not find an explanation on why he ran into trouble against Chicago, which is last in the American League in hitting.

"I can't characterize my performance," said Hurst, 14-7. "It just happened. I could give you a zillion cliches, because I don't have the answers and I'm not looking for any."

Boston manager John McNamara also offered no excuses. "They got the timely hits and we didn't," McNamara said.

White Sox starting pitcher Jose deLeon, 6-11, earned his first victory of the season over the Red Sox in three starts. He allowed five hits and struck out five.

The win snapped a five-game losing streak for the veteran pitcher.

Chicago broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth inning when Lyons, playing in place of the injured Gary Redus, drove in Donnie Hill with a double. Fred Manrique, who had singled, scored Chicago's third run when Jerry Roster grounded out, and the White Sox made it 4-1 when Harold Baines singled home Lyons.

NL Roundup

San Francisco Manager Roger Craig had this dream that sooner or later his Giants would be in first place in the National League West.

Well, dreams do come true. The Giants beat the New York Mets 10-6 in 10 innings Wednesday night and now lead the division.

San Francisco moved one game ahead of Cincinnati, still tied 10-9 to Pittsburgh. The Giants had not held sole possession of first place since May 21.

"I knew one of these days I'd wake up and discover us in first place," Craig said. "Now I just hope I continue to wake up and still find us on top."

Elsewhere, Houston beat St. Louis 2-1, Los Angeles got past Montreal 10-9, Philadelphia held off San Diego 6-5 and Chicago defeated Atlanta 9-1.

Chili Davis' sacrifice fly put San Francisco ahead 7-6 in the 10th, relief pitcher Scott Garretts followed with an RBI double and Rob Thompson hit a two-run single.

In the bottom of the ninth, Garretts escaped a one-out, first-and-third jam. He struck out Kevin McReynolds and then, with the bases loaded and two outs and a full count, he reached home as Howard Johnson looking at strike three.

"It was situation where I had to come right after him," Garretts said. "I was aggressive. If you give in there, you end up making a mistake."

"If my team lost, I wanted to walk off that mound with the knowledge that I gave it all I had."

Garretts, 10-7, got the victory. Roger McDowell, 7-5, took the loss. The Giants came back from a 5-1 deficit built on a three-run homer by Darryl Strawberry and Johnson's solo shot. Johnson and Strawberry each hit their 30th home runs and became the first Mets teammates to reach that mark in the same season.

While rallying, Craig created some controversy in the second inning after Johnson, off with a home run, Craig immediately went to home plate and requested the umpires impound Johnson's bat. It was the third time a team has suspected Johnson of using an illegal bat and asked for a check. "This thing is a joke," Johnson said. "I don't even want to elaborate. I don't want to go through this anymore."

Craig said he wanted to examine Johnson's bat to be sure.

"Seriously, I know him from my days with Detroit and I realize that he had the potential to do what he's doing. However, when he hits the bat off the scoreboard 400 feet away, I'm not about to take any chances," Craig said.

"Frankly, he's too smart to take a chance during a pennant race. Howard looked at Al Pedrique hit RBI doubles during a five-run eighth inning that made it 10-3. Bonds joined Dave Parker as the only Pirates to hit 20 home runs and steal 20 bases in the same season.

The Reds scored six times in the eighth. Kal Daniels and Paul O'Neill hit two-run singles. Doug Drabek, 5-0, gave up two earned runs on five hits in six innings. Tom Browning, 5-10, lost his fourth straight decision.

Astros 2, Cardinals 1

Ken Caminiti hit a two-run double and Bob Knepper teamed with Larry Anderson on a four-hitner as Houston beat St. Louis for its sixth straight victory.

Knepper, 6-13, gave up three hits in seven innings. Anderson finished his fourth save.

Quinones hit an RBI single and scored on Jody Davis' double for a 3-1 lead. The Cubs scored six times in the ninth, capped by Rafael Palmeiro's three-run homer.

Charlie Puleo, 5-6, took the loss. The Braves have lost six of their last seven.

Phillies 6, Padres 5

Mike Schmidt hit a three-run homer and tied Eddie Mathews for all-time home runs by a third baseman at 462, leading Philadelphia over visiting San Diego.

Schmidt's 26th home run of the season moved him into a tie for ninth place on the all-time home run list with Willie McCovey and Ted Williams.

Schmidt connected in the third inning against Mark Grant, 3-7. Chris James hit a two-run homer, his 15th, for a 4-5 lead in the fifth.

Bruce Ruffin, 10-9, got the victory. Jeff Calhoun worked the final inning for his first save.

Benito Santos singled during the Padres' three-run rally in the seventh and hit an RBI single in the eighth that made it 6-4.

Cubs 9, Braves 1

Scott Sanderson pitched 7 2/3 strong innings and Luis Quinones' single broke a 1-1 tie in the seventh inning as Chicago won at Atlanta.

Sanderson, 7-6, gave up an unearned run, struck out seven and walked two.

Quinones hit an RBI single and scored on Jody Davis' double for a 3-1 lead. The Cubs scored six times in the ninth, capped by Rafael Palmeiro's three-run homer.

Charlie Puleo, 5-6, took the loss. The Braves have lost six of their last seven.

Zachery heads East list of players at I-AA level

By Jim Tierney Herald Sports Writer

Being blessed with natural athletic talent is a great gift. Being able to utilize that ability to its fullest is what separates those who will be successful from those who will not.

Clarence "Buddy" Zachery, a 1985 East Catholic High School graduate and All-State selection in football and track in high school, is a perfect example of someone who will be successful both on and off the playing field.

A Manchester resident, Zachery is set to begin his junior year at Yale University and likely will be one of the starting cornerbacks in the Elis' secondary. Based on his fine performance last season when he earned All-Ivy League honorable mention at defensive back, the Yale coaching staff is expecting big things from Zachery this season.

Zachery is one of a list from East to go on to play at the Division I-AA level. Scott Vihberts, a 1986 graduate, is in line for the starting quarterback position at UConn while Jim Mieczkowski is also on the Husky roster. Mike Ferrone is a starting linebacker and Kurt Hovan is on the Princeton roster.

"It's a credit to Coach Kelly and says something about the program," Zachery said. "I'm happy to see guys from East still playing in college."

"Last year I had my ups and downs," the 19-year-old Zachery said. "This year I think they expect me to be a star. One of Zachery's 'ups' last season was during his initial appearance in a Yale varsity game against Army. Zachery was named the defensive player of the game. An Ivy League rule doesn't allow freshmen to play varsity sports."

Zachery also saw some time at the tailback position, but the coaching staff has him slated for the cornerback position in track, a sport Zachery also competes in at Yale, he was Class M state champion during Zachery's junior year in 1983. In that game, Zachery scored a touchdown and a two-point conversion along with rushing for 178 yards on 11 carries.

During his high school years, Zachery excelled on the football track. As a running back, he scored six touchdowns his sophomore year, 19 TDs his junior year, and

NCAA looking into possible football title game

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — This could be the last year that poll-determine the national college football champion.

A special subcommittee which has been studying various playoff plans will ask the NCAA Council to put a one-game format on the agenda for the January 1988 convention, a source told the Associated Press.

Whether schools would approve a playoff is still unknown. But if it is approved, the first official NCAA football champion could be crowned following the 1988 season. A new conference was scheduled today at Kansas City to make the subcommittee's decision public.

"I'm really not sure what we're going to recommend at this point. We still haven't gotten together with the full Special Events Committee," DeLoos Dadds, the subcommittee chairman, said Wednesday during a break in meetings at Kansas City. "We'll know for sure by tomorrow when we hold the news conference."

However, a source who asked not to be identified said the council would "most likely" be asked to give schools a chance to vote for the first time on one of the most-discussed ideas in sports. Neither the subcommittee nor the council would necessarily recommend adoption of the playoff.

"It's going to be put up or shut up on this issue," the source said. "We've been talking about this for how many years? It's time to let people decide one way or the other, or at least find out what they're thinking."

The policy-making council would automatically follow the recommendation of the committee, an NCAA official said. A playoff plan was on the agenda once before at an NCAA convention, in 1976, but was withdrawn before coming up for vote.

Historically, coaches and administrators have opposed a football playoff. In a show of hands at a special NCAA meeting in 1982, schools voted almost unanimously against even considering a feasibility study. But in the wake of last January's commercially successful Fiesta Bowl showdown between No. 1 Miami and No. 2 Penn State, opinion seems to be shifting.

Estimates on the revenue impact for a football playoff run as high as $40 million. And, in an anonymous survey of Division I-A coaches and athletic directors this summer, Dadds' subcommittee found that a one-game playoff was favored 65-35.

The subcommittee met with representatives of the College Football Association and the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics to hammer out a playoff format and apparently settled on a one-game format as the most acceptable for all concerned. Teams playing the postseason football committee would meet in either a domed or a Sun Belt-area stadium following the Jan. 1 bowl games.

Dadds, athletic director at Texas, said respondents to his poll voted 91-22 in favor of kicking off the championship game at 6 p.m. on the Sunday prior to the National Football League's Super Bowl.

"There would be no easy way of doing it. There just would be no easy way," he said.

Cubans find success against American in boxing

By Fred Goodall
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The United States beat Cuba in the pool, on the field and on the court. Everywhere but in the ring.

On an otherwise successful day against its chief rival, the United States lost two of three bouts against Cuban boxers who moved into the gold medal finals.

America fared much better in team sports Wednesday with victories in women's basketball, men's volleyball and softball, and water polo.

"This was one of the sweetest wins I remember in a long time," Coach Jody Conradt said after the U.S. women rallied for an 85-80 victory that put them in Sunday's gold medal game against Brazil.

In water polo, it was a night of roughhousing at the natatorium.

"For the Cubans, we expected a lot of aggressive play," said U.S. team captain Terry Schroeder following the 5-3 victory. And they got it in a game punctuated by foul whistles.

Michael Carballo in advancing to the finals were Americans Kelic Banks and Kenneth Gould, world champions at 125 pounds and 147 pounds, respectively. Both won decisions against opponents from Puerto Rico.

Cuba is 5-2 in head-to-head competition against the United States.

The United States bettered its record medal total to 336, adding silvers in fencing and women's field hockey and a bronze in men's field hockey. That gives Americans 156 gold, 107 silver and 73 bronze.

Canada is second with 154 medals, including 59 gold, followed by Cuba with 151, 82 of them gold.

Basketball

Cindy Cooper and Jennifer Gilmore came off the bench to score 14 and 13 points, respectively, to lead the U.S. women to their come-from-behind victory. Cuba led 42-40 at halftime and 54-47 with 15:51 to go before the Americans rallied to improve to 3-0.

"It's fun to coach when you can push a lot of buttons, and there were at a lot to push today," Conradt said. "This team is deep and it starts at one end of the bench and goes right to the other."

Katrina McClain and Teresa Edwards scored 10 points apiece for the Americans.

Volleyball

U.S. men were inspired by the all-around play of Karch Kiraly in the 15-10, 10-15, 15-10, 15-6 victory over Cuba.

"We didn't play our best," Kiraly said. "We played to win and I hope we can play our best when we meet for the gold medal. Our team simply doesn't play its best in games like this."

The United States will oppose Argentina in one semifinal. Brazil plays Cuba in the other.

Water polo

The United States and Cuba could play again for the gold medal Saturday.

"Defensively we played well; offensively we missed a lot of opportunities," U.S. Coach Bill Barnett said. "In general, we had good opportunities for good shots and didn't get the ball in the cage."

Cuba's chances were not enhanced by 15 fouls, including nine that sent a player to the foul line for 35 seconds and another that resulted in a game ejection.

"We didn't play bad," said Cuban Coach Juan Almineiro. "We were affected a lot by penalties and expulsions and that hurt. We were playing a lot with one less man."

The refereeing, he said, was fair. "But we had twice the fouls they did. It might be more of our own errors that we have to overcome," he said.

Baseball

The U.S. team clinched the top spot in the medal-round with its 4-0 win over Puerto Rico. Ted Wood broke the scoreless tie with a home run to open the 11th, and Scott Servais added a three-run shot.

"That's OK," Coach Ron Fraser said reassuringly to Servais.

Gymnastics

National champion Kristie Phillips gave the United States a solid lead in the compulsory. The 15-year-old from Baton Rouge, La., led the individual standings with 38.85 points, and Salt Lake City's Melissa Marlowe had 38.75.

Still, Phillips wasn't happy with herself after the competition.

"A few of the performances weren't the best I could do," she said. "I was a little shaky on my balance beam and I took a step on vault."

Phillips, America's surest shot for a gold in Seoul, is expected to win the all-around gold at these games.

Softball

The United States will meet Canada in the finals of the men's tournament after beating Cuba 9-1 behind the combined four-hit pitching of Steve Padilla and Vaughn Alvey. Peter Spoerl had three hits and drove in two runs to provide the offensive spark.

The United States must win two games against Canada to win the gold medal. Canada is the top seed after beating the U.S. team 1-0 in a medal-round game earlier this week.

"Somebody's been doing what has to be done every game," said Coach Rocco Santilli. "But it's not going to be easy."

Against Cuba, he said, "The boys were a little determined to come out early and get something going ..."

Paraplegic asks for greenhouse to help his mom

DEAR MR. ROSS: My mother needs a small greenhouse so please read this letter. I'm a severe paraplegic due to an automobile accident.

Before my accident, mom had a good job. She and dad were divorced and she was helping my brother and me through high school. She loves flowers and growing things. Her big dream was to have her own nursery. She felt that after we graduated, most of her obligations toward us would be over.

Five months after I graduated I was in the accident. All mom's plans changed immediately. From that day on everything was for my care and the bills were enormous.

I was in the hospital for seven months and a year at home. I was virtually bedridden but mom didn't complain. She took part-time work and did baking on the side. When things got really bad, she borrowed money from the bank. She sacrificed everything for me. I was a burden and felt very guilty, but under the circumstances there was nothing I could do.

Things are better now, but the years have taken their toll on her. She still wants the nursery, but just a small one. It would make me happy to see her working at something that I know she loves and would enjoy for the rest of her life.

I'm asking for $300 that would build a small greenhouse.

Gertrude Haven relaxes outside her home in Coventry. The librarian, who is 81, retired in June after 46 1/2 years as librarian at the Porter Library. She's using her free time for literary pursuits.

Coventry librarian takes time

COVENTRY — After nearly half a century as the librarian at the Porter Library, Gertrude Haven has retired. "I wanted to have more time for myself," Haven, 81, said in a recent interview.

Haven has worked at the one-room library on Route 44 for 46 1/2 years, and retired June 30. She spends the four days a week she used to put in at the library writing poetry, short stories, and a history of her family. With two books of poetry already written, Haven is contemplating bringing them to a publisher.

"If I get brave, I'll bring them to someone," she said. Her favorite themes are children, animals, and things that happen every day.

Since Haven left, a librarian from Booth & Dimock Library across town works at the Porter Library, said Monica Reed, a librarian at Booth. Early in September, the Porter Membership Association will vote on letting Booth & Dimock's board of directors assume control of the Porter Library. Reed explained that would mean Porter's board of directors would resign, and Porter would be run as a branch of Booth.

"They had the same librarian for over 40 years and they've been left not really knowing what to do," Reed said.

BORN in West Haven, Haven moved here with her family as a girl, and has lived here most of her life. She graduated from Manchester High School in 1925. Before her marriage in 1945, she worked for Aetna Insurance Co. in Hartford. For a short time in the 1940s, she wrote for the Manchester Evening Herald.

Active in community and civic organizations throughout her life, Haven was honored by the Town Council earlier this year for her service. She has been a member of the Grange, the Order of the Eastern Star, the Coventry Historical Society and the Republican Town Committee.

"Gertrude has been active in the community for many years. She has always served," said Margaret Jacobson, who has worked with Haven in the GOP for 19 years.

THE PORTER LIBRARY was founded in 1886 by Thomas Porter and the widow of Dr. John Porter, and started with just a few bookcases in the chapel hall of the Second Congregational Church. That building was destroyed by fire in 1936, and the library moved to the church community house, where it is today.

When Haven began at Porter Library, it was open only one day a week, on Sunday after church services. After a while, it was open more and for a few years Haven held a weekly children's story hour. Today, the library has 8,000 volumes.

Porter Library's present hours are: Monday 4 to 8 p.m.; Wednesday 2 to 4 p.m.; and Sunday 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.

To Haven, the secret of happiness in old age is keeping active. She is looking forward to her retirement from the library, but admits it will leave a void.

"I will miss seeing the children," Haven said.

Stingers are having a field day

Bees can chew away sheet rock, and they are capable of expanding nests so much that they break through walls, exterminators said.

William Payne, supervisor of AAABon Pest Control in Glastonbury, said his calls are up 40 percent over last year. He said he has seen one type of bee, the European Yellow Jacket, more than the other species this summer.

"The warm weather makes them work harder. They penetrate through the walls," Payne said.

The Vatteronis gave some pointers on controlling bees:

- If regular bee activity is spotted around an area of the house, such as overhangs, shutters, vents, shingles or cracks in ceilings, a nest is likely in the area.
- Don't plug the outside hole, Richard Vatteroni warns, because bees will find a way to get out by pushing through the wall or barrier.
- Commercial insect killers do work, said Gino, but it's best to read the labels carefully. People can have a false security about the distance they can spray. It only takes a second for a bee to sting.
- At picnics, don't keep food out longer than it has to be. Bees can carry bacteria. Also, bees can fly undetected into beer and soda cans and sting people in the throat and on the tongue.
- Wear protective garb when talking on a nest. Gloves, a veil and a parka can prevent bee stings. Make sure pant legs are closed, so bees cannot fly up pantlegs.
- Bees like bright colors and perfume so people should be cautious about what they wear outside.
- The prediction for next season? Richard Vatteroni said this year's record number of queen bees will mean even more bees produced next spring.
- "If we have the right conditions, it will be as bad — if not worse — than this year," he warned.

Sports In Brief

MHS football practice Monday

Manchester High School's football team will begin its week of conditioning Monday at 5 p.m. at the high school. Athletic Director Mike Simmons announced. All candidates for the football team should report to the practice field at this time.

East Catholic, the defending state Class MM champ, will also begin its week of conditioning Monday.

All other sports will begin practice on Monday, Aug. 31.

Criterion bicycle race Labor Day

The fifth annual Coors Light Labor Day Criterion bicycle race will be held on Labor Day in Free Press in the Manchester Industrial Park with racing beginning at 9 a.m. with competition for junior riders 13 and under. The feature race will be at noon with the national class junior men 16-17 years old followed by the 10-mile women's race.

A prize list of $3,000 is expected to attract over 400 athletes including the Manchester Exposition Wheelmen team that is sponsoring this meet. For further information, call 649-BIKE.

Meduski second in water skiing

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Meredith Meduski, 13, of Manchester took runner-up honors in jumping and fourth overall in the U.S. National Water Ski Championships junior girls division last week.

Whalers lose Scot Kleinendorst

HARTFORD — The Hartford Whalers suffered their second casualty from Canada Cup practice as defenseman Scot Kleinendorst, trying out for Team USA in the upcoming six-nation tournament, suffered a broken metatarsal bone on his left foot near his big toe at practice Tuesday when struck by a shot. Kleinendorst is tentatively scheduled to be out 4-to-6 weeks.

Earlier, left wing Sylvain Turgeon suffered a broken arm in a Team Canada practice. He hopes to be ready for the start of the Whalers' training camp Sept. 10.

Ciccarelli, Tanti among cuts

MONTREAL — Right wings Dino Ciccarelli and Tony Tanti, who scored 93 NHL goals between them last season, were among six players dropped Wednesday by Team Canada as it prepares for the Canada Cup tournament.

The cuts reduced Team Canada's roster to 31 players. That number will be pared to 23 before the tournament begins Aug. 21. Steve Zernman of the Detroit Red Wings and Kirk Muller of the New Jersey Devils and defenseman Al MacInnis of the Calgary Flames and Doug Lidster of the Vancouver Canucks also were cut.

Dickerson ordered to pay support

LOS ANGELES — Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams was ordered Wednesday by a Superior Court judge to pay an undisclosed sum to support his pregnant former girlfriend, who has filed a paternity action against the running back.

Frederick Glassman, Dickerson's attorney, said the amount was "far less" than the $7,500 a month that Rea Ann Silva had been seeking in the court action.

The judgment by Judge James G. Kolts came after both Dickerson and Silva testified Wednesday in a closed-door session.

Glassman said the payment by Dickerson is not an admission that he is the child's father.

Pittsburgh bars NFL scouts

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. — University of Pittsburgh football Coach Mike Gottfried Wednesday barred pro scouts from his training camp and the Pitt campus in retaliation for the NFL holding a supplemental draft for ineligible college players.

The NFL said earlier in the day it would conduct the draft for players declared ineligible for college football because of dealings with agents in violation of National College Athletic Association rules.

"This action ... rewards a player for breaking a rule and encourages younger players to leave school early," Gottfried said at the team's training camp in Johnstown. "What this will do is allow every uncouth agent in the country to come out of the woodwork."

Gottfried also said his staff will no longer allow pro scouts to see film of Panthers players.

Groups wants Cubans up on charges

By The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — An anti-Castro group will charge the local prosecutor to file assault charges against the Cuban boxers and four Cuban security agents at the Pan American Games.

But Marion County prosecutor Stephen Goldsmith says he doubts a trial would be held even if he goes along with the group's request.

"I think there ought to be a sanction. There ought to be a kind of definitive statement about what occurred," Goldsmith said.

Wednesday after meeting with members of the Cuba Independent Democratic group.

"But I am not sure the criminal process is necessarily the most constructive thing," he said.

The CID wants the Cubans prosecuted because of a brawl involving Cuban boxers and anti-Castro demonstrators in the stands at the Indiana Convention Center last Friday.

However, Goldsmith said that even if he files charges, it is doubtful the Cubans could be returned to Indianapolis for a trial after they return home from the games.

"The international complications are a factor," Goldsmith said, "and we still have to put on the games."

In a separate matter, the CID filed a $50-million suit in Marion Superior Court against Olympian Alberto Juantorena, vice president of the Cuban Ministry for Sports. The group alleges Juantorena made defamatory statements about members of the anti-Castro organization.

Civil lawsuits also were filed in Superior Court against Cuban boxer Pablo Romero, the 178-pound world amateur champion, and other Cuban athletes.

Romero was one of about a dozen Cuban boxers who charged into the stands and fought with demonstrators who tried to rip up a Cuban flag last Friday during boxing at the Convention Center.

"The TV tape shows fellows in the state being subjected to some pummeling by the boxers," Goldsmith said. "In Indiana, if a sporting person, be it a football player or a basketball player, charges in the stands and hits a citizen, he would be prosecuted. I don't know if we would extradite him from outside the state or country."

Stallings not happy with Cards dealt

By The Associated Press

As far as Coach Gene Stallings is concerned, the St. Louis Cardinals didn't have a very good draft.

Stallings says he has yet to be impressed by any of the NFL team's 15 draft picks.

The Cardinals finished 4-11 last year and won only five games in 1985, and Stallings said Wednesday he was hoping the draft would produce some instant starters.

"Some teams don't expect — or need — a rookie to be a good player right away," he said. "Because they'll be a good football team anyway."

"We've got some spaces where some people can step in and help us right away."

The Cardinals are stalemated in contract talks with No. 1 draft pick Kelly Stouffer, a quarterback from Colorado State. No. 2 pick Tim McDonald, a safety from Southern California, held out for two weeks before signing, and has had adjustment problems.

Becker, Connors struggle

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Boris Becker, a former winner of the Association of Tennis Professionals Championship, and Jimmy Connors, a finalist in the event last year, found the going rough in the second round of the $350,000 tournament.

Third-seeded Becker was forced to come from behind on Wednesday to beat Ben Testerman, of Knoxville, Tenn., 3-6, 6-4, 6-3. Connors, seeded fourth, defeated Paul Chamberlin of Newport Beach, Calif., 6-1, 6-3 in a match which Connors said looked deceptively easy.

"It was a tough match for me because I've never played him before," Connors said. "He eased up in the second set and made it easier on both of us."

Becker said he was preoccupied during his match with Testerman — he was busy thinking about the U.S. Open, which begins Aug. 31.

"I'm working very hard (practicing) at the moment, more than usual during a tournament," Becker said. "I'm still trying during this tournament, but I have an eye on the U.S. Open ..."

"I was thinking (Miloslav) Mecir was out there, and I have to serve and volley. I was thinking about that while playing Testerman."

No. 2-seed Stefan Edberg also had a struggle, edging Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland, 7-6, 7-5.

Veteran quarterback Steve Deberg will share the spotlight with Heisman Trophy winner Vince Testaverde on Saturday when the Tampa Bay Buccaneers play a preseason game against the New York Jets. Coach Ray Perkins said.

Testaverde will play half the game, just as he did in last Saturday's 31-30 loss to Cincinnati, Perkins said.

In that game, DeBerg played the first quarter and completed four of five passes for 21 yards. Testaverde played the second half and was 16 of 29 for 233 yards, three touchdowns and two interceptions.

The Chicago Bears leave their summer training camp on an optimistic note with signs that quarterback Jim McMahon will be back in action by the end of the month.

MS. D.A.
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

McMahon said he's looking forward to playing in the Bears' third preseason game, Aug. 31, and may even see some action Saturday against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The New York Giants, who have gone through the past two seasons with their offensive line intact, said starting right tackle Karl Nelson may have to undergo surgery on his ailing left shoulder.

Nelson, who has started 55 straight games, has been bothered by an arthritic condition in the shoulder that has caused him to lose strength in his arm. Coach Bill Parcells said Nelson was having his shoulder evaluated today and could face surgery.

Oversized sweaters, blue jeans and sweats are 'in' at colleges

By The Associated Press

Oversized sweaters, blue jeans and sweats are "in" for the nation's college campuses this fall, according to a national poll. Wide ties, neon colors, painter's pants and torn-neck T-shirts are "out." Sunglasses were named as the accessory most essential to the collegiate wardrobe, while ties ranked as the least essential in the personal-interview survey of 1,000 students on 25 campuses. The poll, conducted by the Roper Organization for Levi Strauss & Co., also indicated men like to see women in miniskirts and tight blue jeans, while women like to see men in khaki trousers, shorts, baggy blue jeans and business suits. Other results included: More than three-quarters of students say their friends have the strongest influence on the style and type of clothes they wear.

A Vocalist Whitney Houston is the most admired female music star for her taste in fashion, and David Bowie is the most admired male. Blue jeans are worn 56 percent of the time by most students, and a majority prefer their jeans to be faded and worn (73 percent). Students ranked bright colors as the most popular on campus (53 percent), with pastels a distant second (32 percent), followed by black (26 percent) and Hawaiian prints (24 percent). But there were regional differences in color and pattern preferences. Students in the Northeast liked the all-black look, those in the Midwest preferred Hawaiian prints, and paisley patterns were popular in the South. Polka dots were the least popular pattern nationwide. According to the survey, Whitney Houston was the choice of 21 percent as the best-dressed female music star, followed by Belinda Carlisle (16 percent) and Sade (9 percent). Tied with 6 percent each were Susanna Hoffs, Janet Jackson and Madonna. David Bowie drew 15 percent of the vote for the male music star most admired for his taste in fashion, followed by Bruce Springsteen (13 percent), Huey Lewis (11 percent), Sting (9 percent) and Robert Palmer (8 percent). Tied with 6 percent each were Peter Gabriel and Lionel Richie.

Luv, a female Doberman pinscher cross, wants to play rather than pose for a picture with Dog Warden Richard Rand. Luv is up for adoption.

Adopt a pet

Doberman cross needs good home

By Barbara Richmond Special to the Herald

This week's featured pet is a female Doberman pinscher cross, about 4 months old. Dog Warden Richard Rand has named her Luv. Luv is black and rust, and is medium-sized. She was found roaming on Linc St. on Aug. 12. Luv and a female golden retriever, about 10 years old, were the only two dogs up for adoption at the pound Tuesday. Of the seven dogs there, two were quarantined for dog bites and three had known owners. Chip, the neutered male Labrador retriever cross featured last week, was adopted Tuesday by Manchester residents. He went off happily with the two young women who took him. Rand said the two black Labrador retrievers, Ebony, who was featured a few weeks ago, and another that was mentioned in the column, both had to be euthanized. A very kind motorist came to the pound Tuesday with an adorable cat he had picked up when he saw it roaming on Interstate 84. It was clean and well-behaved. But the dog pound is unable to keep cats. The man was given the number for Aid to Helpless Animals Inc. to see if that organization could find it a home. It was found in the Manchester-Bolton area. The dog pound is located on Olcott Street near the town's refuse area. Rand is at the pound weekdays from noon to 1 p.m. The number at the pound is 643-6642. If there is no answer, call the police department at 646-4555. There is also someone on duty at the pound Monday through Friday from 6 to 9 p.m. There is a $5 fee to adopt a dog and the new owner must have the dog licensed. Before being licensed a dog must have its rabies shot. Aid to Helpless Animals needs homes for cats and kittens. Many have been abandoned or are lost. This week's featured cat is a very large black, neutered male. Sammy's owner died and there was no one else to take him. He's neutered and declawed so he'll have to be an indoor cat. He is presently living at an animal hospital in West Hartford. If they're old enough, all of the cats taken in by the organization are given their shots and are neutered before being put out for adoption. # Cockroach not a pest to this lab researcher

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) - Most folks think of cockroaches as pests, but not researcher Mary Ross. She sees the hundreds of thousands of them in her laboratory as the perfect guinea pigs: easy to reproduce, easy to feed, easy to house and not the sort of beast that animal lovers go out of their way to shield from the perils of laboratory work. "I don't mind working with a German cockroach," Ross said in an interview at her Virginia Tech lab stacked high with containers of wriggling roaches. "When you keep it in a jar and keep it clean, it's not bad - a lot better than flies." Ross, a professor of entomology, has studied the German cockroach, the most common roach, for nearly 30 years in the same laboratory. She boasts the world's largest collection of mutant roaches - about 60 different types that can be detected by the naked eye of someone well versed in the anatomy of normal roaches. Laboratory equipment must be used to observe the more subtle mutations of others. Some mutants feature different

Don't declaw cat that goes outside

QUESTION: Our kittens are about 5 months old and will be neutered next month. Our question is whether or not to have him declawed at the same time. We have talked to many people and have received all kinds of advice and we don't know who to believe.

Pet Forum
Edward A. Williams, D.V.M.

ANSWER: There are certainly varying opinions regarding the advisability of declawing kittens, depending on who you talk to. There are even differences of opinion among veterinarians as to whether or not cats should be declawed. There is no one specific answer and your decision will depend on many factors.

The most important factor is whether or not you intend to let your cat outside. If the answer is yes, then the cat should not be declawed. The reason is that a declawed cat has lost some means of defense against other animals. A cat that has been declawed in only the front feet, which generally is what is done, still has the ability to climb. Cats with claws remaining on the rear feet can usually climb a tree quite easily.

The second factor should be consideration of the behavior of the cat in the house. Many cats will not sharpen their claws on furniture or can be trained to use a scratching post. If training is started at an early age, any time the cat is caught scratching the future a loud noise or stern reprimand will frequently stop the unwanted behavior. Keeping the nails trimmed regularly may also help prevent the problem.

Some cats will scratch only on one piece of furniture. If this is not a valuable piece and you do not object to it then there is no reason for the surgery.

Age can also be considered as a factor, but much of the age factor has to do with the lifestyle the cat has been leading rather than years. The procedure itself is performed under anesthesia so it is not painful, and each third phalanx (digit) is individually removed. Usually within two days the cat is walking normally with no more pain than

Researchers hunt an elusive monster

A good many years ago - more years than you'd care to remember - Joyce and I toured Scotland. One of the places that fascinated us was Loch Ness. I'm sure you've heard about the mysterious sightings of Nessie, the elusive Loch Ness monster that many people claim to have seen. The photos have generally turned out to be grainy and indistinct.

People have said the monster resembles everything from the brontosaurus species to a humongous water-snake type more than 75 feet long.

When Joyce and I were there in 1969, there was a group of scientists camped on the shore studying the waters, taking soundings, and trying to find the depths to which the monster, as of this writing, the group has come up with no real factual animal.

This venture is sponsored by the Loch Ness Initiative Centre, Drumnadrochit, Scotland, which maintains a complete museum complex on Loch Ness; Lawrence and Caley Cruisers, Inverness, Scotland, which operate a fleet of holiday boats on Loch Ness. This sounds like it could be a chamber of commerce promotion, but using modern-day electronics, and an armada of boats sweeping the 23-mile length of Loch Ness with a variety of sonar and television cameras, this has the ring of a scientific full shot.

American inventor James Rumsey is not popularly credited with inventing the steamboat. But he designed a water-tube boiler in the 18th century that eventually became the world standard for all steam engines, from power plants to ocean liners, says National Geographic.

South may have been hallucinating when he jumped to four no-trump asking for aces. There was nothing in North's bidding to suggest that he had values that would justify a slam contract. But this time South was lucky since the North cards supported quite a decent play for six hearts. Most will overbid and try to cash a diamond. South will ruff and play the club queen to the A-K. When the club jack does not fall, South can now try another spade finesse. That wins, and the slam is still made.

Follow directions when using mixes
By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY - With pancake mixes, are you supposed to add eggs? It says on the package to add water. Is milk necessary? When mixing corn bread must one use an electric mixer? Which is the correct temperature to bake it at: 375 degrees or 425 degrees? - JUST CURIOUS

DEAR POLLY - Learn to trust the directions! If your package of pancake mix says to add water and does not mention eggs, they don't want you to add eggs. Or milk. These ingredients are probably already in the mix in dehydrated form. If you feel like experimenting, additional eggs or milk may make a richer pancake, but you also may upset the balance of the formula and the batter may be of the wrong consistency for successful pancakes.

The corn breads I have made may be mixed or beaten with a spoon rather than an electric mixer. Many corn breads seem to call for a temperature of 350 degrees or 375 degrees. However, there may certainly be exceptions. Again, the best advice I can give you is to be the recipe directions or the package directions on a mix. Follow directions usually leads to baking success! - POLLY

Send crackers to the non-stop whistler

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "BJ D & B & I" Welches, Ore., who complained of a whistling neighbor, was a little shallow. Rhetorically asking whether she would prefer worse disturbances (neighbors who screamed, fought and threw things, or whose kids played loud rock music) sidesteps the issue of how to deal with a neighbor who's bugging you. You suggested sending him something to wet his whistle. I suggest sending him a box of crackers each week, along with a picture of Whistler's mother, signed, "I love you, son, but you're driving me off my rocker!"

STEAMED IN FRESNO

DEAR ABBY: Constant whistling, even if it's pleasant and in perfect tune, can be as much a form of noise pollution as those wind chimes and office hummers you have discussed in your column. BETTY ALBRIGHT, SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR ABBY: I used to work with a man who walked up and down the halls whistling. How I hated it! I was never so glad to see anyone retire as I was when he did. plained about a neighbor who whistled from morning to night. While I'm sure this happy, cheerful man is totally unaware that he's offending anyone, I think this should be a message to all of us who live within earshot of each other.

As much as I enjoy the beautiful chirping of birds in my yard, if one chirped the same melody every day, all day long, I probably would be ready to gag him with a Band-Aid!

The neighbor was not being unkind, Abby; she was simply saying that the same morning, noon and night, day in and day out, was getting to her.

'Beer belly' can be a dangerous sign

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is a beer belly a sign of cirrhosis of the liver?

DEAR READER: The abdominal protuberance that often appears in people who drink excessive amounts of beer can be due to liver disease. In heavy drinkers, fat is deposited in the liver and will cause it to enlarge. Fluid also can leak out of the abdominal cavity and cause swelling. This is called ascites.

Once fatty infiltration occurs in the liver, inflammation may develop, scarring takes place and the liver shrinks. This is cirrhosis and is the end result of alcoholic liver damage.

Most patients with "beer belly" have simply become overweight, and the fat is distributed in the abdominal wall. Beer supplies a lot of unneeded calories. Nonetheless, when I see a beer drinker with a prominent abdomen, I worry about harder contractions.

This peculiarity is explained by a physiological phenomenon called Starling's law, which stated simply means the strength of a heartbeat is proportional to the amount of blood entering the heart's chambers. When an extra beat occurs, the heart pauses while it waits for the normal beating pattern to be established. Therefore, more filling takes place and the first normal beat will be more vigorous. If extra beats occur regularly, a patient may experience several minutes of normal but stronger beats. This does not necessarily indicate a heart abnormality.

Starling's law also affects people when they change body position from upright to supine, because gravity encourages more blood to enter the heart when we are lying down. Therefore, normal beating can be more vigorous.

Finally, people are often more aware of their heartbeats when they go to bed. The environment is quieter and attention is focused on internal workings, rather than on external events. Palpitations are common soon after they retire to bed.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Sometimes my husband's heart beats so loudly that I think someone's driving by with a flat tire. This only happens at night when he's lying down. Tests reveal nothing. What is the reason for the loud beat?

DEAR READER: Forceful heart contractions are often called palpitations. They occur in a variety of situations.

Extra heartbeats are followed by contractions that are more forceful than normal. Patients may not be aware of the weak extra beats, but they usually sense the succeeding Actor Timothy Dalton poses with actress Maryann d'Abo in "The Living Daylights." James Bond is a new man this summer — literally. And the happy news is that Dalton is an attractive addition to the galaxy of actors who have portrayed Ian Fleming's secret agent.

In 'Living Daylights,' Dalton gives us a different Bond

James Bond is a new man this summer — literally. And the happy news is that Dalton is an attractive addition to the galaxy of actors who have portrayed Ian Fleming's secret agent. Dalton gives us a Bond who is less world weary than Roger Moore and more realistic about life than the doting Sean Connery. He takes risks out of necessity, not just for fun. This may be the first 007 opus in which distinctions between good and evil seem to blur and definitions of good guys and bad guys aren't crystal clear. The girl in the movie — and there's always a girl — debuts as a villain but quickly is revealed as a heroine. And wonder of wonders, James appears to be practicing safe sex: In this film he's a one-woman man. Maryann d'Abo is the beautiful cellist who wins Bond's heart. One wishes she projected a little more fire; she's a bit wimpy as a sidekick in his wild adventures. Many of the gimmicks of the 007 formula for box office success remain alive after 25 years — and they're still fun. Bond's sports car still performs marvelous feats, and that master of spycraft, Q (Desmond Llewelyn), is older but still inventing gadgets such as an exploding keyring with a whistled song as the trigger. There are car chases, airplane chases and a breath-catching race down a ski slope with a $150,000

Cinema Review

Stradivarius cello as a toboggan. James is always good for a few laughs. There are spies, counterespies and spies whose affiliation is doubtful. Jeroen Krabbe, as General Georgi Koskov, a Russian defector (or is he?) is an urbane addition to the Bond bad guys. If Bond is monogamous, Georgi is not. In the end, the story involving international arms and drug dealing seems incidental to the action scenes set in exotic locales including Morocco and Afghanistan. Director John Glen keeps the action moving at a swift pace, and producer Albert Broccoli, who launched the Ian Fleming thrillers 23 years ago, has followed an old maxim — "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." "The Living Daylights" is rated PG for violence, which is a Bond staple. Running time is 130 minutes.

Sunday morning tennis games lead to CBS series for Reid

Atlanta. I said, 'Great. Two weeks later we got a pilot deal with CBS and Hugh asked me, 'Do you remember what we talked about?' Reid says they didn't even get a chance to pitch the idea. CBS programming executive Kim LeMasters. "We walked in and Kim says he had an idea for a college professor who owns a restaurant in New Orleans," he says. "He went on for about 20 minutes. Then he asked us to think it over for a few days. Hugh and I looked at each other and said we didn't have to think it over, this was better than anything we had in mind." Reid says CBS wanted to capture the music and the texture of New Orleans. "They kept saying they wanted the feel of the city. Well, what we ended up with was Hugh Wilson's creation. It's not exactly New Orleans, but it has the feel. "Both Hugh and I went to New Orleans twice to do research. Hugh had recently given up smoking and on one flight he had to have a cigarette. He went to the back of the plane and bummed a cigarette from this man. He got to talking to the man, found out his name was Don Yesso and he was from New Orleans. He ended up hiring him to play Sherry La Roux, the assistant chef."

There's a wide assortment of other characters, including Bubba Weisberger, a Jewish lawyer with a thick Southern accent, played by Robert Harper, and the New Deal, a cleric of dubious reputation, played by Lincoln Kilpatrick. "Hugh had in mind that Frank would also inherit some rental property, including a funeral home," Reid says. "But when he got to New Orleans he found that most of the funeral homes are run by women. We went to one and found it was run by a beautiful young black woman. Hugh looked at me and said, 'Daphne.' He added the character of her mother, who owns the funeral home and is very powerful and is in a wheelchair like Big Daddy. "Reid's wife previously made several guest appearances on "WKRP in Cincinnati." She also had a recurring role on "Simon & Simon" as TV reporter Temple Hill. Reid started on the detective series (with James Parker and Gerald McRaney) as an undercover detective named Downtown Brown. "WKRP in Cincinnati" got me established," he says. "Simon & Simon" gave me legitimacy."

Joffrey prepares Christmas ballet

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — As the Iowa summer heats up, the Joffrey Ballet whirled like snowflakes as they create a new production of Tchaikovsky's Christmas ballet. "The Nutcracker." The Joffrey Ballet and the Joffrey II dancers, an apprentice company, spent a month in Iowa City this summer working on the holiday ballet, which they will add to their repertoire. A mix of artistic and financial concerns brought them to the Midwest. "This is a whole new perspective for the Joffrey to be doing this," said Gerald Arpio, the company's associate artistic director. "This will be a ballet basically produced and conceived here in these elements, in this place."

Iowa's financial contribution played an important role in luring the company to Iowa and in getting the "Nutcracker" produced, according to Wallace Chagnon, director of Hancher Auditorium. "The company is to return to Iowa in November for two weeks of final technical rehearsals. Iowa school children will get a preview Dec. 9 before the company premieres the KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) — Two family counselors here have teamed up to market a game they developed to help families express their feelings. "Feeling Faces," a set of round cards depicting various emotions, invites players to match cards and encourages participants to talk about their feelings. Creators Anna Louise Walker and Kathy McCaughey Wright both have worked with troubled families involved with the Flathead County Juvenile Probation Department. They know that families need to learn communication skills in order to improve home life, but found a critical lack of materials to help them. Ms. Wright said she began developing the Feeling Faces game after she noticed that youths' attention was drawn to a series of smiling and scowling faces in her notebook. Expressions on the Feeling Faces cards are happy, sad, puzzled, determined, scared, excited, lonely, etc. Players can simply match them, as in many simple card games, or they can use them to stimulate discussion about emotions. "Feelings are neither good nor bad," the two counselors say in their company literature. "It's what we do with our feelings that affect us in a positive or negative way." In families where communication skills have not been developed, Ms. Wright said, "People who are angry think that they have to fight. When families talk about anger, they learn that it's okay to be angry, they learn to share those feelings in an appropriate way. They need to learn how to share their positive feelings too. Ms. Wright said that when parents and children discuss what makes them feel scared, for instance, or the last time that were angry, they learn a lot about each other. "Kids are fascinated to learn the things that their parents are afraid of. It brings up stories of the past." Such conversation enables everybody to build vocabulary, learn listening skills and gain the ability to identify feelings, she said. "Every family wants love and understanding," she said, but many don't know how to obtain it. The women believe that the key is to increase communication. Now that the card game has been printed and distributed, the two have developed a board game that works on the same principles. "Self-help groups are growing," said Ms. Wright, "and everybody needs tools and techniques. In any kind of family dysfunction, people are stuffing their feelings and games help them express them."

Game goal is aiding family talk

Social Security

QUESTION: My husband recently died in the hospital. Will this disqualify me from being entitled to the lump-sum death payment? ANSWER: No, the fact that he died in a hospital does not disqualify you from the lump-sum death benefit. If you are receiving benefits on your husband's earnings record, you receive the one-time check automatically. If not, you'll have to file an application. QUESTION: I get SSI checks. My neighbor has asked me to baby-sit once a week and plans to pay me about $15. Will I lose SSI money if I accept? ANSWER: Probably not. The first $65 of your monthly earnings are not counted in figuring your SSI payment. However, you should still tell Social Security. QUESTION: I am scheduled to go into the hospital next month, and I don't understand how the prospective payment system under Medicare works. Does this mean I will have to pay more for my care? Does it have anything to do with how long I stay in the hospital? ANSWER: The prospective payment system does not affect the amounts you pay under Medicare, the length of your stay in the hospital, or the extent of care you receive. Under prospective payment, hospitals are paid fixed amounts based on the principal diagnosis for each Medicare hospital stay. In some cases, the Medicare payment will be more than the hospital's costs; in other cases, it will be less. The law requires hospitals to accept Medicare payments as payment in full and prohibits them from billing you for anything other than the deductible, co-insurance amounts, and any charges for noncovered items such as a TV. QUESTION: I've been called to serve jury duty next month and will be paid $15 for every day I serve. I get SSI payments and was wondering if this money would count as income under SSI? ANSWER: Yes. Jury fees are considered income and should be reported to your Social Security office. QUESTION: My father has a terminal illness and is not expected to live more than a few months. His doctor has suggested that he consider hospice care so that he may be more comfortable. Why will happen to my father's Medicare coverage if he chooses hospice care? ANSWER: Medicare hospital insurance can help pay for hospice care if all of the following three conditions are met: (1) a doctor

New tax law has an impact on decisions made long ago

Sylvia Porter

Among the more shocking aspects of the new tax law is that in many respects it is retroactive — no matter what some officials claim. Not only does the law affect transactions that take place after the law was passed, it also can have a devastating impact on arrangements you made years before. You may be clobbered and much, if not all, of your financial planning for your children may go right down the drain. This is not an exaggeration of the situation.

regularly for the girls in certificates of deposit. Up to 1987, this technique worked fine. The children were building up nest eggs, and while the gifts were not tax-deductible by the parents, there were significant tax savings. Since the earnings on the certificates were taxed at the much lower tax rates of the children, everyone came out a winner — except the tax collector.

WHY FOCUS ATTENTION on taxes now? Primarily because this is mid-year, when many tax-saving techniques for 1987 are being reviewed. And many taxpayers are discovering to their chagrin that matters are much worse — from a tax point of view — than they had anticipated. Consider a fairly typical situation, as told by Elizabeth Warach, child consulting editor at Prentice Hall Information Services. But there is much that can be salvaged. Since Seth and Rachel are going through the equivalent of a mid-year tax check-up, they should: (1) Cash in the CDs for the children. (2) As soon as possible, put money in Double E Savings Bonds and let the money accumulate. The earnings on EE bonds grow tax-deferred. (3) Or, if the money in stocks that pay a rate of dividends in kind — in shares of stock rather than cash. That's a more effective rate of 27.5 percent. So poor little 5-year-old Kate and 9-year-old Sarah would each owe $825 on $3,000 income. That's an effective rate of 27.5 percent. To give you some idea of what that means, a single adult could reach $55,000 of taxable income and still pay an effective rate of that same 27.5 percent in 1987. In short, the tax rates for the children are extremely — and I mean extremely — disproportionate.

BUT NOW COMES retroactive tax affects. The earnings on the certificates, to the extent they exceed $1,000 for each child, now will be taxed at the parents' highest rates. And that's true even though the certificates are grandfathered under the new law took effect. Here's why: The new law states that when children under 14 have unearned income (interest, dividends, and so on) in excess of $1,000, the excess, starting in 1987, is taxed at the parents' highest rate. The Daniels were thinking far ahead because they were serious parents. And they did everything right at the time they did it. BUT NOW COMES retroactive tax affects. ## Auto price increases mysterious

By John Cunniff
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — If you seek economic reasons to explain impending price increases for new automobiles, you'll find yourself frustrated. In fact, you'll find lots of reasons why such increases might not stick.

Among them: Questionable replacement demand, an oversold 1987 market, the ability of buyers to postpone purchases when budgets are pinched, limited wage increases among the buying public, high consumer debt, the new tax law.

True, there are some factors that suggest higher prices for domestic models could stick, chief of them being improved employment figures and the near certainty that foreign cars will cost more later this year and next.

But even this latter factor, forced foreign carmakers by the growth of "transplants" or "implants," the factories of foreign companies now producing in the United States.

Perhaps the biggest question for the automaker is whether the market is out there. Demand has weakened this year, leaving companies with unsold cars at the very time they are preparing to introduce the new models, and forcing them once again to resort to interest rate cuts and rebates.

Many customers who might have been expected to buy cars this year were "inconvinced" into buying last year, forcing sales above the market trend, or the anticipated demand based on factors such as car age and new households.

Judging from credit figures, a hefty percentage of the remaining market is made up of households that are watching pennies after several years of increasing spending at a faster rate than income gains.

Savings rates recently were under 3.5 percent of income, compared with a more normal 5 percent to 6 percent, and installment debt as a percentage of disposable income has run above 18 percent, a very high level, since 1984.

Faced with such pressures in the past, consumers have demonstrated their ability to withdraw from the automobile market. Most used cars that are traded in for new ones have years of life left. Buying, therefore, is postponable.

And then there's the tax law. In prior years, interest on consumer installment credit was fully deductible from federal income tax liability. This year 35 percent will be taxed. And the percentage rises to 60 next year.

Just how much of an impact this will have on purchase decisions is debatable, but one thing is certain: The impact will be negative, especially for those families already under stress from big bills.

There is a bit of mystery, therefore, as to why car prices are expected to rise. Analysts point out that to raise list prices, only to rebate or otherwise cut into those prices, is simply a denial of marketplace reality.

And, finally, the stock market adds another element to the mystery. Auto stocks have been rising, and stock performance is supposedly based on future profits. Investors seem to think there will be solid sales and earnings.

Their expectations could be realized. Profit levels, for example, could improve because of more efficient production, and Detroit has been placing a great deal of emphasis on lowering its unit costs.

But if profits rise because price increases stick, a lot of people who specialize in analyzing the automotive market are going to be surprised.

Business In Brief

Fuss & O'Neill names associates

Fuss & O'Neill Inc., a Manchester civil engineering firm, has announced the appointment of three new associates: Edmund Hellstrom Jr., chief of the drafting department, lives in Glastonbury with his wife, Beverly. He has a daughter, Kimberly, and a son, Keith. Hellstrom has been with Fuss & O'Neill for 15 years. He has 27 years' experience in engineering.

Stanley Alexander lives in Ellington and has been with Fuss & O'Neill for 2 1/2 years. He is now the firm's director of hazardous waste management. He was formerly employed by the state Department of Environmental Protection for five years. Alexander has undergraduate and graduate engineering degrees from the University of Connecticut and is a licensed professional engineer in Connecticut.

Stephen F. Mitchell lives in Enfield with his wife, Vicki. He has been with Fuss & O'Neill for 3 years. He holds a B.C.E. degree from Manhattan College in New York City, and is completing his master's degree in transportation engineering at the Polytechnic Institute of New York. A registered professional engineer in Connecticut and New York, he is the director of Fuss & O'Neill's traffic section.

S&L board gets new member again

WASHINGTON — Roger F. Martin has been sworn in as the newest member of the turnover-ridden Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates 3,200 savings and loan institutions across the nation.

Martin, senior vice president of Mortgage Guaranty Insurance Corp. of Milwaukee, is the 10th person to serve on the three-member board since 1981.

The bank is a new chairman, M. Danny Wall, former director of the Republican staff of the Senate Banking Committee. Wall took over July 1 from Edwin Gray, who had been criticized for accepting travel expenses from an industry trade group, the U.S. League of Savings Institutions.

Lawrence J. White, the most senior member of the board, began serving Nov. 12.

Dollar strengthening, gold mixed

LONDON — The dollar was strengthening against major foreign currencies in Europe this morning, dealers said, but it remained below its closing levels of the previous European session.

Gold prices were mixed.

Currency dealers said the dollar seemed to have found a fairly solid floor at 1.8300 West German marks and was likely to head toward a temporary technical recovery.

The market is waiting for the release of several key U.S. economic indicators on Friday, especially the first revision of second quarter U.S. gross national product.

In Tokyo, the dollar's plunge against the Japanese currency reached 8.65 yen in four days today as it closed at 143.75 yen, down 1.80 yen from Wednesday's close of 145.35 yen.

The closing figure was the lowest since 142.78 on June 12.

But later, in London, the dollar was quoted much higher at 145.05 yen.

The Bank of Japan intervened in support of the dollar on Wednesday and traders said it was checking exchange rates with brokers today, a possible prelude to further intervention.

Volume entitles investor to discounts

QUESTION: I was a client of a very large full-service brokerage firm from 1981 until earlier this year. My account generated several thousand dollars annually in commissions. When I asked my broker for a discount based on the volume of commissions, he said his firm "does not give discounts." I believed him.

Recently, I discovered that the volume of my business would have entitled me to a 35 percent commission discount, if my broker had put in a request. Since other clients doing equal or less business were getting commission discounts, I was being discriminated against.

To whom should I apply for redress?

ANSWER: You can start with the broker who fibbed to you, then take your gripe to the manager of his office and go on up the line through that brokerage's chain of commissions rates. Because of the huge amount of buying and selling they do, those outfits get rock-bottom commissions.

The commission schedule at some brokerage gives automatic discounts to individuals who provide a great deal of business. Although it's impossible to come up with a hard and fast guideline, it's doubtful that your $3,000 in annual commissions qualified you for an automatic discount.

But it's one of Wall Street's less than well-kept secrets that commission rates can be given to all customers. You really can't expect a broker to volunteer that information, however. If you ask for a discount, you might get it.

Whether or not you receive a commission discount at a full-service brokerage firm usually depends on your relationship with your broker plus how badly he and his firm want to keep your account.

You can always take your business to one of the many discount brokerage firms, where posted commission rates are way below those of full-service brokerages.

QUESTION: I became involved in the stock market for the first time this past February. I was doing quite well and was ahead of the game by buying and selling several times a week - sometimes every day. However, about the middle of April, I began to lose money on most of my in-and-out trades.

The careful accounting I keep shows I have lost $7,428.50 to date. The commissions charged by my broker total $6,625.28. Am I correct in assuming I can take those brokerage commissions as a deduction when I file my 1987 income tax return?
