Hart supporters are shocked he may be considering a run

By David Espo
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Gary Hart's former campaign manager on Friday fueled speculation that the one-time Democratic front-runner would re-enter the race for the 1988 presidential nomination, even though Hart relayed word through another aide that "I don't have any intention of becoming a candidate."

Hart was quoted by a radio reporter in Ireland as saying on Thursday night that he had no intention of running, and then saying on Friday morning that he "will neither confirm nor deny" the claim.

Hart was the front-runner for the nomination until May 8 when he abandoned the race amid reports that he had been involved with Miami actress Donna Rice.

The suggestion that Hart might re-enter the campaign — as a long shot with a low-budget campaign — came from former campaign manager Bill Dixon, who offered his prediction Thursday in a radio interview in Madison, Wis., and repeated it in an interview with The Associated Press the following morning.

"I think it's clearly, perhaps even probable" he will be a candidate, said Dixon.

"Yes, I believe his candidacy is likely," said Dixon.

... "no intention"

But another aide, Bill Shore, said that Hart told him in a trans-Atlantic telephone conversation late Thursday night that he was "very comfortable with my decision to withdraw."

Shore quoted Hart as saying, "Oh, no, no, no. You should be unambiguous with people who ask. I'm not a candidate and I don't have any intention of becoming a candidate."

Shore said Dixon spoke without having first talked with the former senator from Colorado, who was vacationing in Ireland with his son John.

Shore denied a report the former senator was cutting short his Irish vacation to return home because of the reports. Asked about Irish radio reports that Hart had left Europe, he said Hart had merely moved out of his vacation cottage to get away from the disturbance of the telephone.

Hart's swift political downfall last spring, barely a month after he formally entered the campaign, stunned the political community. His re-entry undoubtedly would generate comparable shockwaves.

Already, there were expressions of skepticism and disbelief.

"I find it very difficult to imagine anyone looking square in the eyes of a voter in Iowa and saying, 'You'd vote for Gary Hart because this Donna Rice thing doesn't mean anything, wouldn't you,'" said Art Davis, a former Iowa state Democratic chairman.

In New Hampshire, former Hart aide Susan Calegari said the former senator's once-potent political organization has disintegrated, with officials joining other presidential campaigns. "If there were plans in the works, I think I'd be one of the first people to get a call and I haven't heard anything," she added.

Appeal or referendum — not both

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herald Reporter

The attorney representing the Manchester Property Owners Association said Friday that the town cannot hold a referendum on the bonding issue for improvements to the Mall at Buckland Hills without invalidating its appeal.

The Democrats, who hold a majority on the Board of Directors, said Thursday that they plan to put the bonding question to a vote in a November referendum. At the same time, they said that the town should go forward with an appeal of last month's Superior Court decision barring the Board of Directors from issuing the $13 million in tax-increment bonds.

Hartford Superior Court Judge John P. Maloney ruled in July that the bond issue, approved last year by the Board of Directors, should instead have been approved by town voters in a referendum.

Though they support a referendum, the Democrats have said that Maloney's decision should be appealed to the state Supreme Court because it could limit the traditional powers of the Board of Directors.

Manchester attorney Bruce S. Beck, who represents MPOA, said that the Board of Directors cannot have it both ways. A referendum — whatever the outcome — would invalidate an appeal, Beck contends.

"Since a favorable vote on the bond issue would negate the very reason for having the court decide the case, I am sure you would agree that the Supreme Court would dismiss the appeal as moot," Beck said in a letter to Town Attorney John W. Cooney.

"If the town pursues the appeal despite the citizens' rejection of the subsidy, it would mislead the voters into believing that their vote is meaningful. This would not only be hypocritical but an abuse of the democratic, electoral process as well," Beck wrote.

Since the question of the bond issue would be resolved by the referendum, the Supreme Court would have no reason to act on the appeal, Beck said in an interview Friday. He said the court does not issue advisory opinions, such as the one he believes the town is seeking.

"The general rule is, a court won't do that unless it's a case in controversy," Beck said.

Homart may hire area ad agency

The developer of the proposed Mall at Buckland Hills is looking into hiring a local advertising firm to handle public relations for the project, a spokeswoman for the Homart Development Co. of Chicago said Friday.

The spokeswoman, Jayne Majzan, said the local firm would handle news releases and the preparation of press packets concerning the mall development. She said that Homart frequently hires local firms to handle public relations for its projects once they get under way.

Majzan said that Homart has had discussions with a number of firms in the Hartford area, including Adams Rickard & Mason of Glastonbury. She said no decision has been made on whether the Glastonbury firm will be selected for the job.

Bob Gagne, a public relations writer for Adams Rickard & Mason, confirmed Friday that the firm has been in contact with Homart about providing advice on public relations.

"Homart is dealing with at least three daily newspapers, and, if we're hired, we will help reporters at those newspapers get the facts and the quotes they need for their stories," Gagne said. He said he expects to learn next week whether the firm is hired to represent Homart.

Gagne's firm might be asked to help work out Homart's position should a referendum be held in November on the question of bonding for improvements around the mall site.

"One role we may play is to determine whether or not Homart should take any public stance on the referendum, and that public stance could include advertising and it may not," Gagne said.

Military jury agrees: Marine 'sold out'

Defense pledges fight to the end

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, the first Marine ever court-martialed for spying, was convicted Friday of passing secrets to the KGB after he fell in love with a Soviet woman while a guard at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Lonetree faces life in prison on the 13 counts, but defense lawyers said they would appeal.

After nearly four hours of deliberation, the eight officers on the jury agreed by at least a two-thirds vote on the charges of espionage, conspiracy to commit espionage, failure to report contacts and disclosing identities of CIA agents.

Lonetree was said to have become involved in spying after falling in love with a Soviet translator, Violetta Sanni.

The defense contended that he disclosed nothing of value to the Soviets but gave them non-vital secrets so he could string them along as a free-lance double agent.

The jury got the case after the defense rested without calling a witness and after the prosecutor, Marine Maj. David L. Beck, said Lonetree sold out "to a nation that has since the 1950s declared our nation to be public enemy No. 1."

"We shall appeal and we shall fight this to the end and we hope in the end justice will prevail," said defense attorney William Kunstler.

Kunstler had argued that the case against the 25-year-old Indian from Saint Paul, Minn., was not that cut and dried.

"It's a very complex case," Kunstler said. He had predicted conviction on four charges of failing to report contacts with the Soviets.

Kunstler said Lonetree took the verdict better than he and Stuhff did.

"I just put my arms around him and he was shaking but he was like a Marine. He took it and he took it well." Lonetree was silent as he was led out of the military courtroom to a van that took him back to the Quantico Marine Base brig.

Before the jury got the case, the judge, Navy Capt. Philip F. Roberts, turned down a motion for a mistrial as well as requests to have the 13 charges against Lonetree reduced.

Kunstler and fellow defense lawyer Michael Stuhff have said Lonetree disclosed nothing of value. They contend he gave Soviet agent Aleksei Yefimov non-vital secrets so he could string the KGB along as a free-lance double agent.

"To become a double agent, you must first have become a spy," Beck told the Marine officers sitting as jurors.

Kunstler attacked two sworn confessions by Lonetree, saying the prosecution referred only to the parts that benefited the government's case.

In addition to describing Lonetree's contacts with Yefimov and a Soviet woman, Violetta Sanni, the confessions say, for example, that Lonetree tried to blackmail Yefimov by hiring a woman to seduce him in Austria.

Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, right, the first Marine ever court-martialed for spying, is escorted after being convicted Friday of passing secrets to the KGB after he fell in love with a Soviet woman while he was a guard at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow. The military jury is scheduled to pass sentence Monday.

Lonetree also resisted Yefimov's suggestion that he provide the names of Marines that could be exploited because of alcohol, drug problems or homosexuality, and instead gave the name of a Marine who was a born-again Christian and a recovering alcoholic.

Lonetree allegedly turned over CIA identities and Moscow and Vienna embassy floor plans. But the defense said that was information the Soviets probably had already.

Two sworn confessions Lonetree made last December in London to agents of the Naval Investigative Service showed Lonetree knew what he was doing when he allegedly became involved in spying through his love affair with Ms. Sanni, Beck said.

Beck also said a high school notebook in which Lonetree drew swastikas and wrote "Hitler lives," as well as testimony from witnesses who said Lonetree was obsessed with the Soviets and collected Soviet paraphernalia in his room, showed the Marine held anti-American views.

Midair mystery: Pilots see chutists and balloons

CHICAGO (AP) — It's a mystery at 6,000 feet over the Windy City: In separate reports, one commercial airline pilot said he nearly clipped a flock of parachutists and another reported helium balloons near his plane.

But no one else saw the objects, on radar or on the ground.

"We don't have any substantiation of skydivers or helium balloons over Chicago, but we're still working on it because two pilots said they saw them," spokeswoman Marjorie Kriz of the Federal Aviation Administration said Friday.

The pilot of a Northwest Airlines Boeing 747 en route from Chicago to Tokyo told the tower at O'Hare International Airport shortly after noon

Thursday that he passed "four or five parachutists and that he almost hit one," Ms. Kriz said.

The jet was flying at about 6,000 feet at the time, officials said.

About five minutes later, Ms. Kriz said, the pilot of a United Airlines Jet reported "that he thought he saw helium balloons."

But air traffic controllers at O'Hare and other airports in the area saw nothing on their radar and had no other reports of skydivers or a release of helium balloons, she said.

FAA investigators have contacted airports from Kankakee to South Bend, Ind., and turned up no reports of authorized parachute jumps, Ms. Kriz said.

"We haven't found anyone who had anyone dropping parachutists near the Loop or who saw anything on radar or who heard any similar reports," she said.

"That doesn't mean it didn't occur. But nobody on the ground saw it. So it's a big mystery."

Northwest spokesman Bob Gibbons in St. Paul, Minn., confirmed that the pilot of Flight 3 reported to the tower that he had passed parachutists, and said he had "absolutely" no reason to doubt the report.

Ms. Kriz said FAA investigators planned to interview the pilots of both planes.

United spokesman Joe Hopkins confirmed that the pilot of Flight 854, enroute from Chicago to Newark, N.J., reported seeing the balloons.

"The captain reported spotting several red balloons over Lake Michigan at 5,000 to 6,000 feet," Hopkins said. "He just observed them and reported it to the control tower at O'Hare."

Chicago police spokeswoman Tina Vicini said the department's communications center "did not receive a single call of anyone saying they saw parachute jumpers coming down in Chicago" and knew of no helium balloon release.

"I'm sure that if some people saw five parachutists jump out of the sky we would've been inundated with calls," Ms. Vicini said.

MMH workers try to live with AIDS fears

By Andrew J. Davis
Herald Reporter

Manchester Memorial Hospital is no different from any other hospital in the United States. There is a fear of AIDS among its workers.

And hospital officials say there is not much they can do about those fears except to relieve them by educating their staff about the realities of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

Case in point: an anonymous phone caller to the Manchester Herald last week claimed that some members of the hospital nursing staff are terrified of the disease, and that hospital officials are not taking the proper precautions to ensure the safety of employees.

Hospital officials disputed the caller's claims and contended the hospital is doing everything in its power to prevent the spread of AIDS to its staff.

"You don't expect everyone to understand everything all the time," said Dr. Alejandro Murcia, director of epidemiology at the hospital, referring to the caller. "It's a deadly disease and it wouldn't be normal if there was not some kind of anxiety (among those treating it). But the more you understand, the better you feel."

"You don't choose who you will and won't take care of. Period."

— Sue Jane Cavaliere,
Infection-control nurse

The caller claimed that the hospital's doctors are not always straight with nurses on whether a patient has AIDS. She also said disposable valve bags are not used on patients requiring mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. Nor, she charged, do medical personnel routinely use gloves, something town firefighters have been doing since June.

AIDS, which destroys the body's immune system and is transmitted mainly through sexual conduct and intravenous drug use, is thought to be spread through the exchange of blood and other body fluids.

MURCIA AND Sue Jane Cavaliere, infection-control nurse at the hospital, denied all the woman's claims, except the lack of disposable valve bags.

Cavaliere said the hospital uses sterilized resuscitation devices called ambu bags. She said the disposable valve bags are only used by emergency services workers who cannot sterilize their equipment like the hospital does.

The hospital does use gloves, masks, and does identify AIDS patients to staff when the diagnosis is clear, she said.

Though the hospital does its best to educate its staff, obviously not everyone has gotten the message, she said.

"I spend morning, noon and night in service," she said of her department's role in educating staff on the dangers of AIDS. "The nurses feel comfortable with AIDS and patients have gotten wonderful care. I don't feel the anxiety is real. It's not a nice disease to get, so I'm sure we'll always be careful and prudent when dealing with it."

ACCORDING TO the National Centers for Disease Control, over the last three years, 460 AIDS cases have been diagnosed in the state. The town's odds of doing so are minute, Cavaliere said.

"I know it can happen, but if you take the precautions, you're covered," she said.

director of health, Ronald Kraatz, recently said the town has had nine diagnosed AIDS cases.

About two years ago, a nurse at Manchester Memorial Hospital was suspended after she refused to treat an AIDS patient, said Andrew A. Beck, a hospital spokesman. The nurse filed a complaint but finally relented and was reinstated.

"One nurse did refuse to treat an AIDS patient," Beck said. "The staff did try to work with her. But our policy is clear. The policy is 'You will treat an AIDS patient.'"

"You don't choose who you will and won't take care of. Period," said Cavaliere.

Gloria T. Philbert, president of the nurses' union, and Dr. Edward J. Sulick, president of the hospital medical staff, both said they have had no complaints from staff members over AIDS.

"I haven't heard of any problems," she said. "That nurse hasn't come up to me about this."

Even if there is concern among staff about catching AIDS from a patient, the Neighbor of ice co.: no problems!

A neighbor of the Manchester Ice & Fuel Co. said Friday that she has never had any problems with the company, which is located virtually in her back yard.

"They're good neighbors," said Kathy Winnegar of 96 1/2 Foster St. "I don't think there's any problem there at all."

Other neighbors of the 51 Bissell St. company have complained about noise and fumes from the diesel trucks that frequently come and go from the site. They are also concerned about ammonia leaking from the building, which has happened twice in the past three months.

Winnegar, who was the person who called the fire department on Memorial Day Weekend to alert fire officials of the first leak, said that the diesel trucks do not bother her at all.

"It's not as if they're out there revving the trucks all the time," she said.

Winnegar said that she has asthma, and yet is not bothered by truck fumes.

Last week's ammonia leak prompted company owners to seek an alarm system that would alert residents to any future ammonia leaks. Both the Memorial Day Weekend leak and last Sunday's leak were caused by equipment failure, and the leaks were unrelated. Company owners said the equipment is old, and is being replaced gradually.

Biker sends Express mail

The pastor of the Manchester Mission Church of Bikers has sent the remains of his American Express card to the company.

Rev. Robert W. "Kaiser" Hershberger cut up the card last week to protest a television commercial in which a couple is ripped off by a motorcyclist. Hershberger said the commercial, which American Express refused to take off the air, perpetuates stereotypes about bikers.

In a letter sent this week to the company's advertising director, Hershberger said he is "putting the finishing touches" on an "I left home without it" T-shirt.

Hershberger said he is taking orders for the shirt, but charges on the American Express card will not be accepted.

Strano is found guilty on gambling charge

HARTFORD (AP) — Three men were convicted Friday of federal extortion charges stemming from their collection of illegal gambling debts owed to one of the defendants.

A U.S. District Court jury convicted Frank Zimmitti, 46, of New Britain and James Strano, 47, of Manchester of two counts of collection of extensions of credit through extortion and two counts of conspiracy to do the same.

Victor "Chip" Galati, 33, of Newington was convicted of one count of collection of extensions of credit through extortion and two counts of conspiracy to do the same.

The men were accused by prosecutors of using threats and violence to collect illegal gambling debts owed to Galati.

Strano and Zimmitti were arrested on March 30, 1987 in a Hartford bar after they split $1,300 in marked money that a gambler who was a government informant had given Strano earlier in the day, authorities said. Galati was arrested three months later.

Zimmitti and Strano each could be sentenced to up to 60 years in prison and fined $40,000. Galati could be sentenced to up to 60 years in prison and fined up to $30,000.

U.S. District Judge M. Joseph Blumenfeld ordered that Strano and Zimmitti be held without bond pending sentencing on Sept. 28. The judge ordered Galati's bail raised from $25,000 to $150,000 and gave him until Monday to post the 10 percent surety.

Laser promoters say new plans aren't a dodge

By Bruce Matzkin
Herald Reporter

The seemingly well-timed revisions of Laser Games' building permit application aren't meant to circumvent the town, a company spokesman said Friday.

According to Sherman Tarr, spokesman for Laser Games of Hartford Inc., the revisions were made to keep the company moving ahead with its plans.

The new application was submitted Aug. 12, and a decision on it is due within 30 days of that date, or Sept. 11. The hearing to decide if the ordinance prohibiting Laserquest is enforceable is scheduled Sept. 14.

This means a building permit may be issued before the town has a chance to argue for overturning a court injunction that blocks it from enforcing the ordinance.

THE REVISION reduces parking spaces at the East Middle Turnpike building from 122 to 57. The old application included plans to increase parking spaces from 99 to 122.

Zoning regulations require any business changing the use of a building and increasing the number of parking spaces to obtain a special exception if there are more than 60 spaces.

This technicality was the basis for Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas R. O'Marra's Aug. 7 decision to deny a building permit. A public hearing would have had to be scheduled before special exception approval could be granted by the Planning and Zoning Commission.

"We didn't say 'Hey — Let's get out of the PZC hearing,'" said Tarr. "We felt it was a good time to submit new plans."

TARR WAS not even sure whether the 30-day limit for O'Marra's decision on the new application meant 30 calendar days or 30 working days. If it meant 30 working days, the decision would not be due until Sept. 23, nine days after the injunction hearing.

The hearing will be held to decide whether to make permanent an injunction that commands the town to refrain from enforcing the ordinance it adopted in July.

The ordinance appears to have been carefully drafted to keep Laserquest from opening, while not affecting businesses in town that already exist. The ordinance prohibits an amusement center measuring more than 5,000 square feet from operating within 1,000 feet of senior citizens housing, convalescent homes, schools, hospitals and churches. The Laserquest building is within 1,000 feet of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

The temporary injunction was signed Aug. 7 by Rockville Superior Court Judge Harry N. Jackaway. According to Laser Games of Hartford Inc. attorney Richard Rittenband, the injunction was "quite a major achievement."

TARR SAID that the fact the injunction was issued so quickly is an indication that a permanent injunction will probably be imposed. If this happens, and if O'Marra approves the new building permit application, the way would be cleared for Laserquest to be built.

O'Marra has already ruled that the stadium is a permitted use of the building under zoning regulations, finding fault only with the parking technicality.

Tarr said he doesn't think Laser Games of Hartford has to wait until the injunction decision to work on the stadium if a building permit is issued beforehand.

If the permit came quickly, said Tarr, "I assume they would allow us to resume refurbishing the building."

State police target risky Route 6 for increased patrols, spot checks

By Bruce Matzkin
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Warning to travelers along Route 6: You are the subject of a State Police project to stringently enforce traffic laws on this road all the way to Rhode Island.

Question: "Why are they picking on us?"

Answer: Because Route 6 has one of the worst injury-producing accident rates among secondary roads.

The State Police's Eastern District Traffic Section has embarked on a mission to reduce injury-producing accidents on such roads, said Sgt. Richard Wheeler, the supervisor of the Eastern District's traffic unit.

According to Wheeler, the Eastern District Traffic Section picked out the major secondary roads with the worst accident rates in the eastern district. Among them are Routes 6, 66, 44, and 32. Wheeler said that these roads will be subject to greater police presence and more stringent enforcement of traffic laws for periods up to six months.

"We're concentrating on speeding, following too closely, and drunken driving," said Wheeler.

THE FIRST ROAD to undergo the program was Route 66, which runs from Middletown to Columbia. The highway was monitored from February until the end of July. Wheeler said that during that time, the number of injury-producing accidents went down 46 percent from the same six-month period in 1986. Furthermore, the number of fatal accidents went down from four during that period in 1986 to one this year.

During the Route 66 program, Wheeler said that changes were made on the road. Dangerous intersections were improved and speed limits were made more consistent.

"Before, speed limits were very inconsistent," said Wheeler. "Now, the speed limit throughout 66 is 45 mph, and 35 mph in town centers."

Also during the Route 66 project, spot checks were conducted for drunk drivers on two holiday weekends. One crackdown in Columbia and Portland during Memorial Day weekend resulted in eight DWI arrests. Another crackdown in Windham during the July Fourth weekend resulted in seven arrests, said Wheeler.

WHEELER SAID that the number of arrests made for traffic violations steadily declined throughout the Route 66 project, and the numbers of injury-producing accidents have stayed down since the program switched its emphasis to Route 6.

"Signs saying 'Traffic laws strictly enforced' helped a lot psychologically," said Wheeler.

The Route 66 program was so successful, it is being continued, Wheeler said.

Monitoring on Route 6 began on Aug. 1, and will continue until January. The road is being patrolled by unmarked cars and motorcycles, as well as regular state police cars from Troop K in Colchester and Troop D in Danielson.

Wheeler said that 11 arrests were made last Saturday during a DWI spot check on Route 6 in Andover and Chaplin.

He said state police hope people are getting the message.

"Right now on Route 6, if you are in an accident, you have a 38 percent chance of being injured," said Wheeler. "We're trying to get that number down."

No verdict yet on program for early probation

STAMFORD (AP) — Criminal justice authorities say the verdict is still out on the effectiveness of a new state probation program designed to ease prison overcrowding by placing non-violent criminals in the community.

"No type of probation has a 100 percent success rate, but with close supervision, I think there's potential here for this to be successful," Chief State's Attorney John Kelly said.

"We'll just have to wait and see," Kelly said in an interview with The Advocate of Stamford.

So far, 174 inmates have been released early from prison into the 3-year-old program. The program is designed for inmates sentenced to two to five years. Inmates become eligible for it only after serving half of their sentence.

Once accepted into the program, they must see a probation officer three times a week, maintain a full-time job or attend school, submit to frequent urine tests and attend drug and alcohol programs if needed, said Kathleen Flynn, a senior probation officer with the state Department of Adult Probation.

Department figures show that so far, 69 percent of the 174 inmates have successfully completed the program or are still in it. The other 31 percent violated probation and were returned to prison. About six or seven of those committed new crimes while most of the others failed drug tests.

Regular probation has a failure rate of 22 percent. There are 42,620 people in the regular probation program.

"We are well in the ball park of what we set out to do," said Terry Capshaw, director of the state Department of Adult Probation. "When the program was set up, we had expected the failure rate to be 40 percent."

He said the failure rate is a little higher than regular probation because "in any program where you are monitoring people's behavior very closely there is going to be a high revocation rate."

One difference between the new program and regular probation is the individual attention each person receives. Each of the eight statewide probation officers handle a maximum of 20 cases. Regular probation officers have caseloads of about 300, Flynn said.

The program receives mixed reviews from victims and victims' advocate groups. They are concerned about having the criminal in the community, but are encouraged that the program could rehabilitate them.

"Most victims of any kind of personal crime really want the guy behind bars because they want to feel safe and they can't feel safe if he is in the community," said Joyce Kowalewski, director of the Women's Center of Southeast Connecticut in New London.

John C. Ford, administrator of the state Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, said the board would like to see the General Assembly pass an amendment that would require a victim be notified of an application by the inmate and be allowed to testify at the inmate's hearing.

One former inmate, Kevin Crooks, 27 of Norwalk, said the new program helped him change his life.

DOT needs road-survey help

WETHERSFIELD (AP) — The state Department of Transportation, hoping to overcome the constraints of a legislatively mandated deadline, is enlisting the aid of municipal officials in preparing a survey of 15,700 miles of local roads and 1,200 local bridges.

In a letter to municipal officials, Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns called on the communities to contribute information to the $5 million survey so that a report can be completed by a January 1988 deadline set by the General Assembly.

The legislature said the report must include the age and physical condition of the roads and bridges, details on the current and future use of the structures, and estimates of the costs for repairs and maintenance.

The DOT also must recommend a priority list of repair and reconstruction projects.

"It is unrealistic to expect this department to field review each of these miles, collect and analyze the data, and establish a priority list of these improvements within the specified time limit," Burns said in his letter.

"In my opinion, the determination of such priorities, logically and correctly, should include the participation of each and every town government since the local road-way system is better understood and appreciated at the local level."

The DOT said it will conduct four workshops beginning Aug. 31 in Torrington to provide local officials with a list of roads under their jurisdiction and manuals for rating roads and bridges. The workshops also will offer training to local officials so that they will be able to use and understand the manuals and fill out ratings forms.

"I am requesting that your staff field review your local system and those roadway sections on rating forms to be provided," Burns said in his letter. The commissioner said the ratings would be filed in a computer and analyzed by the DOT.

Mickey Bonasera, Torrington's street superintendent, said Friday that he would have no problem complying with the DOT's request to survey and rate his city's roads. But he said he had not yet seen Burns' letter requesting his help and announcing the workshop.

State Rep. Moira K. Lyons, D-Stamford, co-chairwoman of the legislature's Transportation Committee, said the study was necessary to determine where state funds should be directed. But she agreed with Burns that local cooperation was essential to making the study successful.

"I'm also a little concerned by the time frame," she said. "I don't know if it can be done."

In addition to the workshop in Torrington, the other workshops are: Sept. 1 in Norwich, Sept. 2 in New Haven and Sept. 4 in Manchester.

Shootings common on I-95

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A stretch of Interstate 95 in Connecticut has been plagued by 29 incidents involving firearms since February 1986, according to state police.

The reports have come from I-95 from Stratford to the New York border, the most heavily traveled stretch of highway in the state, state police say.

Gun complaints along the rest of Connecticut's interstates are very infrequent, though no statistics are available, Sgt. Daniel Lewis said Thursday.

The California Highway Patrol has reported 26 roadway shootings in Los Angeles County that have killed three people during the past two months.

The most recent incident in Connecticut occurred last month in Norwalk, where a motorist fired a shot that struck the hood of another motorist's car. That incident followed a case in April in Westport, where a sniper shot at three vehicles and injured one person.

Increased news media attention in California has caused more shootings to be reported than usual, making the problem seem larger than it probably is, said George F. Cole, a University of Connecticut political science professor who specializes in criminal justice.

"These are not totally unusual," he said. "I think we need an awful lot more evidence before we get excited about it."

Of the 29 reported incidents in Connecticut, 18 were reports of people pointing guns, three were reports of people hearing shots fired and eight were vehicles that actually were shot, with two passengers injured, said state police Sgt. Robert Slattery.

Greenwich probes herbicide sale

GREENWICH — A Greenwich supplier of horticultural products is under investigation for the sale of the restricted herbicide Roundup to the town Department of Public Works, a state official said.

Michael Dezzani, senior environmental analyst with the state Department of Environmental Protection, said both the supplier, Shemin Nurseries Inc., and the town could be subject to penalties because of the unlicensed sale.

Under state law, licenses are needed to purchase and use restricted herbicides such as Roundup. Sale of restricted pesticides is permitted only to people with supervisory licenses.

Penalties range up to $5,000 and one year in jail. Ted Tucker, pesticides manager for Shemin, has said the company sold Roundup to the town last year using the supervisory license number of a parks department employee.

Bethel kids set up traffic patrol

BETHEL — Motorists hurrying down Juniper Road faster than the 20 mph speed limit may evade the police, but they won't get by some miniature Smokies who say they're staking out the road because "that's our job."

A group of children, prohibited from riding their bicycles on the road with no sidewalk, has staked out a patrol to get motorists to slow down.

"The cars come down that really long hill and they go really, really fast and they don't watch out for children," said Karen Gies, 7, one of the leaders of the patrol. "All they do is fly down."

The children have painted signs reading "Watch Slow Children" and "Speed Limit 15" and planted them beside the road.

Pipe fitters allowed to return

BRIDGEPORT — Seventy-five pipe fitters and welders passed tests for Connecticut licenses and will be allowed to work on the garbage-to-energy project under construction in Bridgeport, said a spokesman for the state Department of Consumer Protection.

Consumer Protection Commissioner Mary Heslin had ordered 113 workers off the job at the $288 million facility because they weren't properly licensed.

Joseph Lembo, the department's legal counsel, said 138 workers took the tests this week in Bridgeport. The 55 percent success rate is normal, he said.

The licensing exams will, however, still leave contractors Signal Environmental Systems and Rust Engineering with fewer tradesmen than they had previously on the project being built by the quasi-public Connecticut Resources Recovery Authority.

State woman captured in Georgia

LILBURN, Ga. — A 21-year-old woman who escaped from a Connecticut prison in 1985 while serving a sentence for manslaughter has been captured at a home in Lilburn, authorities reported.

Diana Hamilton of Norfolk, Conn., was charged with interstate flight and being a fugitive from justice, Gwinnett County sheriff's officials said.

Authorities said Ms. Hamilton was located on Thursday after she had some money wired to the Lilburn home of her boyfriend's father.

Ms. Hamilton was convicted of first-degree manslaughter in Litchfield, Conn., in 1984 after a sailor was stabbed to death during an attempted robbery in the Falls Village section of Canaan, Conn., authorities said.

On Sept. 2, 1985, she escaped from the Connecticut Correctional Institution at Niantic, where she was serving a 20-year sentence.

New Haven to raise cops' pay

NEW HAVEN — In a bid to fill 32 police vacancies, the city plans to raise the starting pay for patrol officers and shorten the time it takes to be admitted to the training academy, officials say.

"The goal will be to fill every position," John DeStefano, the city's chief administrative officer, said Thursday. "Both these efforts will help us do that."

Police Chief William Farrell said Mayor Biagio DiLieto has indicated that, if there were more good recruits than available positions, he would push to enlarge the strength of the department above the 400 slots now authorized.

A plainclothes policeman picks up a card from the grave where Nazi prisoner Rudolf Hess will be buried. Several ultra-right-wing supporters visited the site in Wunsiedel, West Germany, and some placed flowers with cards on the grave.

Kin still not convinced that Hess killed himself

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A second autopsy on former Nazi Deputy Fuehrer Rudolf Hess failed to convince relatives he killed himself, the Hess family lawyer said Friday.

Lawyer Alfred Seidl also criticized a Bavarian mayor for ordering the 93-year-old war criminal's body out of town.

The Allies, who had held Hess prisoner since 1941, say he left a suicide note. The British doctor who performed the first autopsy ruled Hess died of asphyxiation after strangling himself with an electrical cord.

The family requested another autopsy, but "the doubts about the suicide assertion have not been removed in any way," Seidl told The Associated Press in a telephone interview late Friday.

He said forensic medicine specialist Dr. Wolfgang Spann conducted the autopsy in Munich and full details of this autopsy would be released Monday.

Seidl said imprints found on Hess' neck show the "influence of an outside, violent force," but he did not elaborate. Seidl previously indicated he believes someone else may have killed Hess.

"Whether the outside pressure came from a cord or not is not known," the lawyer said.

Hess, former deputy to Adolf Hitler, died Monday at the British Military Hospital in West Berlin after being taken there from nearby Spandau prison. For 21 years, he was the only inmate at Spandau, held under guard of the victorious Allies of World War II — the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union. Seidl complained that Mayor Uwe Lichtenberg of Fuerth ordered Hess' body removed from that Bavarian city Thursday night.

Seidl said that after Allied authorities handed over Hess' body, the family took it to a funeral home in Fuerth, about 100 miles northwest of Munich.

But the lawyer said Lichtenberg, a member of the left-leaning Social Democratic Party, ordered the body taken from the city by 7 p.m. Thursday without giving a reason.

Seidl said the body was then taken to Munich University clinic. He called Lichtenberg's order "shabby and unfitting."

A police spokesman in Fuerth, who insisted on anonymity, said Lichtenberg was on vacation and was in Fuerth only on Thursday to issue the order on Hess.

The newspaper Bild said Friday that Hess would be buried Tuesday at his family's cemetery plot in Wunsiedel, a remote Bavarian village 11 miles from the Czechoslovak border.

Throughout Friday, dozens of visitors stopped at the family plot. Many were elderly, including one who wore the now-outlawed swastika that once was the symbol of Nazi Germany.

Four or five fresh bouquets had been laid on the gravesite, including one with a card with the "Deutschland Lied" (Germany Song) printed in full.

The song, with the phrase "Deutschland, Deutschland ueber alles," (Germany, Germany over all) was closely identified with Nazi Germany.

Obituaries

George W. Gunther

George W. Gunther, 72, of 63 Thomas Drive, died Thursday at Manchester Memorial Hospital. He was the husband of Laura P. Gunther.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1915, he lived in Manchester for 27 years. Before retiring in 1980, he was employed by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford, in the purchasing department for 26 years.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a son, Dr. William Gunther of Coventry; two sisters, Margaret O'Connor of Lakehurst, N.J., and Clara Johnson of Kirkwood, Mo.; a brother, Robert Gunther of Tequesta, Fla.; a grandchild, Grant W. Gunther; and several nieces and nephews.

A private memorial mass will be held Monday at 11 a.m. at the Church of the Assumption. There are no calling hours.

Memorial donations may be made to the Visiting Nurse and Home Care of Manchester Inc., 397 Porter St., 06040.

PARIS (AP) — Jean-Louis Cavalier, a producer of France Culture radio, died Friday following a long illness. He was 42.

Cavalier, who joined the Office of French Radio and Television in 1969, produced radio programs broadcast ranging from opera to popular American singers such as Judy Garland, according to the national Radio France.

Cardinal Bueno Monreal

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — Cardinal Jose Maria Bueno Monreal, who served for 25 years as archbishop of Seville, has died of heart failure at the age of 83.

Bueno Monreal, who died in Pamplona University Clinic on Thursday, became archbishop of Seville in 1957 and was named cardinal the next year by Pope John XXIII.

He participated in three conclaves for the elections of the Popes Paul VI, John Paul I and John Paul II. He was vice president of the Spanish Bishops Conference from 1972-75.

Cocaine killed Broadway actor

NEW YORK (AP) — The chief city coroner said Friday that cocaine poisoning caused the death of actor Kevin Marcum, who played a lead role in the Broadway hit "Cats" and was about to take over a lead role in "Les Miserables."

Marcum's death last month was caused by "acute cocaine intoxication," said Ellen Borakove, a spokeswoman for the city's chief medical examiner, Dr. Elliot Gross. She declined to say how much cocaine was found in Marcum's body.

Painted yellow stripes and a fiberglass statue of Big Louie are Vic Davis' revenge against the government.

Minnesota monument marks fight for land

VOYAGEURS NATIONAL PARK, Minn. (AP) — Nature lovers at Saturday's dedication of a new Voyageurs National Park visitors center will find themselves staring at garishly painted rocks, a 25-foot fiberglass statue and an acre of stumps.

Call it Vic Davis' revenge. Davis owns 122 acres of land, one of the last private parcels in the park, which the government refused to buy after a land acquisition battle that ended with a jury setting its value at $1.37 million.

Davis got mad, and now he's getting even. It's the principle of the thing.

He spent $16,000 to set up a fiberglass statue of Big Louie, a black-bearded Voyageur, across a finger of Rainy Lake from the visitors center, and began felling trees along 20 acres of shoreline.

"I'm doing this to prove my point. Those who wanted the park vastly undervalued the land so Congress didn't appropriate enough money" to buy out the landowners, Davis said. "You've got to put a price tag on what you're buying."

Davis wants every visitor who stops at the visitors center at the northwest end of the park near International Falls to look across the bay and ask, "What happened over there?"

Voyageurs Park was created in 1975, and in 1982, the U.S. Park Service decided to acquire privately-owned land in the 217,892-acre area of northern Minnesota.

Davis bought the disputed 122 acres in 1982 for $200,000, five times what the government offered the previous owner. He's subdivided it into 39 lots which he is developing with luxury log cabins designed to fit in with the area's natural beauty.

"I knew it was a great piece of property on Rainy Lake even though it was in the park," Davis said.

But the government wanted the land, and when Davis refused to sell for what the government offered, condemnation proceedings began. Davis said he decided to fight for what he felt were his legal rights.

"I wanted to prove once and for all that there's another market out there except for the government," he said. He says he can sell each lot for $40,000 to $50,000, and expects to charge $50,000 and up for houses.

Overgrown century-old cemetery puzzles officials

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — Officials are trying to piece together the puzzling discovery of an overgrown, century-old cemetery where, they believe, 1,000 indigents and Chinese were buried.

"The thing that's hard to believe is you could bury 1,000 people on a site and then forget it ever existed," said Sonoma County architect Rene Cardinaux.

Some of the graves are marked only by small cans filled with cement and stamped with numbers.

At least one resident wasn't surprised by the cemetery. Song Bourbeau said her father, Tom Wing Wong, was buried at the two-acre site in 1918. She said the existing burial ground in the area, the Odd Fellows Cemetery, didn't permit Chinese graves in the early part of the century.

Members of Cardinaux's staff and county crew discovered the cemetery, now nearly hidden in weeds, evergreens and poison oak, on July 28 when they began clearing a portion of the site to build a 48-car parking lot for the adjoining Family Practice Clinic.

Records indicate the cemetery, located about 30 miles north of San Francisco, probably was founded in 1876 and was part of the county's poor farm.

However, Cardinaux complained Thursday that no one seems to know how many people were buried there or why the site was never given any border demarcation besides a barbed-wire fence to keep out cattle.

Cardinaux said he will suggest to county supervisors that the site be cleaned up and possibly posted with a small memorial. The planned parking lot will take up only a small part of the cemetery, officials said.

"We're really groping around," he said.

Cardinaux's staff this week got a list from Community Hospital in Santa Rosa of 450 people who apparently were buried at the cemetery from 1920 to 1940, when for unknown reasons it was no longer used.

Bus strike confuses Korea

SEOUL, South Korea — Nearly one-fifth of Seoul's 18,000 bus drivers went on strike Saturday, defying a government-brokered settlement. Tens of thousands of morning rush-hour riders were stranded.

The surprise walkout caused confusion in many areas, sending commuters rushing to nearby subways and calling taxis to share rides. The city lifted a shift system for taxis and mobilized 870 school and other public buses.

The Korean work week is at least 5½ days.

In the nearby port of Incheon, a bus strike shut down service for a second straight day. And two five-star tourist hotels in Seoul were paralyzed Saturday as service workers pressing for higher wages stayed off the job.

A month into the nation's worst-ever wave of labor unrest, strikes were under way Friday night at 514 workplaces, the Labor Ministry said. Disputes ended at 84 companies but new protests erupted at about 100 firms.

Hundreds protest in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Hundreds of people demonstrated Friday against Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the nation's military leader, setting trash and two automobiles ablaze, erecting barricades and blocking traffic.

Riot police did not interfere and there were no reports of arrests or injuries.

The protest was organized by the Civic Crusade, a coalition opposed to President Eric Arturo Delvalle's military-dominated government, which has been calling demonstrations almost daily since June to press for Noriega's ouster.

Civic Crusade leaders accuse Noriega, the Defense Forces chief, of corruption and using strongarm tactics to silence opponents.

Tankers reach home safely

MANAMA, Bahrain — Three reflagged Kuwaiti tankers escorted by U.S. warships reached their home waters safely Friday, surprising shipping experts who thought high winds had stalled the convoy in the Persian Gulf.

"The voyage from the central Persian Gulf waters was quiet and without incident," the U.S. Defense Department said in a statement in Washington.

"They pulled the wool over everyone's eyes again," said one shipping source. "They used the bad weather and thick dust storms to slip away unnoticed."

Iran admitted for the first time that it sowed mines in the gulf and threatened to wage "all-embracing" war if its forces were provoked by the United States.

Pentagon officials said the amphibious landing ship USS Raleigh cleared the Suez Canal and would arrive in the gulf next week bearing a cargo of four small mine-sweeping boats.

'Fatal Vision' sues a mistrial

LOS ANGELES — An angrily divided jury deadlocked Friday, forcing a mistrial in a $15 million lawsuit filed against "Fatal Vision" author Joe McGinniss by his subject, convicted murderer Jeffrey MacDonald.

Five of six jurors in the federal civil trial favored giving the former Army Green Beret doctor his contractual share of royalties from the book, which told of his conviction in the bloody 1970 slayings of his pregnant wife and two small daughters, the jurors said later.

But they never voted on any of the complicated issues in the breach of contract suit after one juror declared at the outset that McGinniss should win on all counts and refused to deliberate, they said.

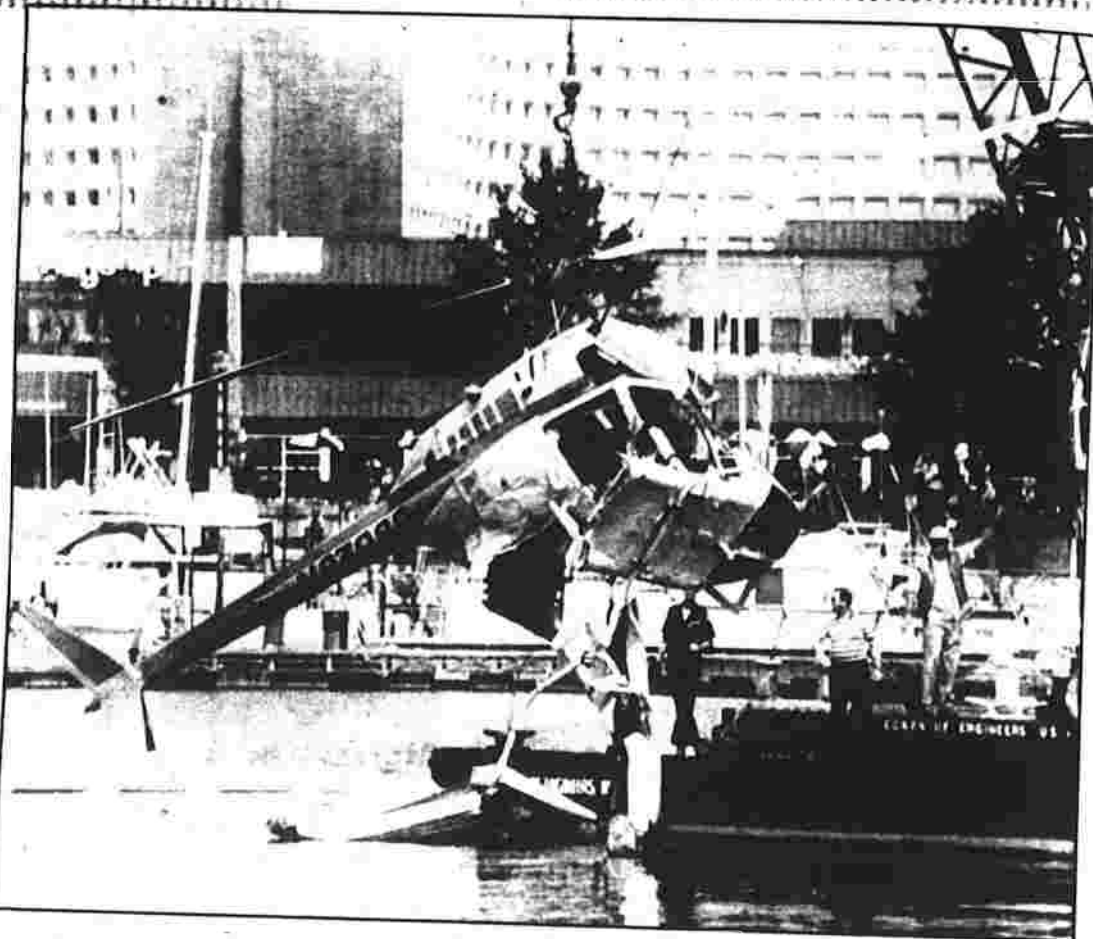

"It was five for MacDonald and one for McGinniss. I was for McGinniss ...," said Lucille Dillon, 58, a housewife from Agoura.

Blind sailor calls off crossing

HAMILTON, Bermuda — A blind yachtsman said Friday that bad weather is forcing him to postpone until next year his quest to become the first sightless sailor to try to cross the Atlantic.

Jim Dickson says, however, his money problems for the trip have been solved.

Dickson, 41, sailed on Aug. 4 from Portsmouth, R.I., for Plymouth, England, but had to make a 200-mile detour to Bermuda when the autopilot and satellite navigation system aboard his 36-foot sloop, Eye Opener, broke down a few days after he put to sea.

A helicopter that plunged into the Potomac River in Washington Friday is pulled from the water. The crash killed three people and seriously injured the pilot.

Three die in helicopter crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — A helicopter being used on a photography assignment crashed into the Potomac River on Friday, fatally injuring three passengers. The pilot escaped by apparently leaping from the plunging craft.

Dozens of people at a nearby marina saw the Bell Jet Ranger hover about 15 feet above the water and then suddenly plunge into the Washington Channel section of the river around 7:30 a.m.

Assistant Police Chief Isaac Fulwood Jr. said unspecified "mechanical difficulties" apparently caused the helicopter to crash.

"It started to go in nose first, then the pilot was able to level it slightly — and then it splattered," said

Jet crash victims identified

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) — Lingering uncertainty for some families of 155 victims in the nation's second-worst air disaster ended Friday with release of a coroner's list of identified victims, but theories about the cause of the crash remained in dispute.

The Wayne County Medical Examiner's office said its list included 147 passengers and crew members aboard Northwest Airlines Flight 255 and two victims on the ground.

Names of other victims confirmed by family members raised the total to 155, all but two of them aboard Northwest Airlines Flight 255. Authorities have said they believe up to 158 people were killed in Sunday's crash at Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Marilyn Sharkey, 63, who lives on a boat in the marina. "It went straight down on its belly... It broke up into nothing."

"The pontoons came up, and about three or four seconds later, an arm," she said. "Quite a few of the boats went out to see if they could help."

One of the men killed, William Weems, 44, a freelance photographer, had leased the helicopter from Stewart Aircraft Corp. to take pictures for a brochure for the Arlington, Va.-based Sumner Realty Corp., said Turner.

The other two victims were identified by hospital officials as Robert Arthur Joy, 45, of Washington, and Victoria Hinckley, 24, of Rockville, Md.

Weems died of cardiac arrest due to drowning. Hinckley succumbed to chest injuries, and Joy died of multiple injuries and cardiopulmonary arrest, hospital officials said.

The lone survivor, pilot Jack Turley, 37, of Baltimore, "apparently was able to jump from a helicopter as it hit the water," Fulwood said. Turley was listed in serious but stable condition at George Washington University Medical Center with head and spinal injuries, said spokeswoman Katharine Baker.

Civilians already were bringing Turley to shore in their boat when rescue workers arrived on the scene, said Police Chief Maurice Turner.

Northwest has said that 155 people were aboard the flight, and authorities do not know how many other people were killed due to number of unidentified body parts they have. Northwest has said it will not release a list of the passengers.

A 4-year-old girl was the lone survivor. She remained hospitalized in Ann Arbor in serious but improving condition Friday.

Meanwhile, the National Transportation Safety Board began winding down its on-site investigation with the cause of the crash undetermined. The investigation team planned to stay in Detroit for three to four more days, a spokesman said.

Friday, a 50-member contingent of the Michigan Youth Corps and an 18-member Dental Disaster Team were combing the last remains of the wreckage.

Roberts apologizes to Swaggart

TULSA, Okla. — Evangelist Oral Roberts has publicly apologized to the Assemblies of God and evangelist Jimmy Swaggart for remarks Roberts made early in the scandal that toppled Jim and Tammy Bakker from the PTL television ministry.

"I said critical words. I did not know about the finances. I blamed Jimmy Swaggart for things he said at the time that I did not understand," Roberts said Thursday on Cable News Network's "Larry King Live." "I feel a deep regard for Mr. Swaggart."

Roberts came to the Bakkers' defense when allegations against them were revealed, saying on March 24 that a "very prominent and beloved minister" and "one of the nation's great religious denominations" had formed an "unholy alliance" to destroy Bakker.

Mother Teresa in Moscow

MOSCOW — Mother Teresa argued amiably with her Soviet hosts Friday about whether God or nature was responsible for her good works.

She is visiting this officially atheist country in hopes of establishing a mission.

Friday's exchange was a sign of the difficulties the 77-year-old Roman Catholic nun may encounter with official Soviets if she is able to add the Soviet Union to the 77 countries where her missionaries do charity work.

She won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979 for a lifetime of caring for India's indigent.

During her six days in the Soviet Union, Mother Teresa is to visit a village in the Ukraine where Soviets were resettled after the April 1986 nuclear accident in Chernobyl.

Soviets say U.S. broke test ban

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union lodged a complaint Friday with the U.S. State Department, claiming an underground nuclear explosion in Nevada violated an agreement limiting the force of such blasts, Tass said. The official Soviet news agency said the Aug. 13 test exceeded the threshold of 150 kilotons agreed upon in a 1974 treaty between the two countries.

The Soviets demanded that Washington explain the violation and, at the same time, repeated a call for a total ban on nuclear testing, Tass said.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev unilaterally imposed an 18-month ban on nuclear tests until Feb. 28. But the United States refused to go along with a halt in such testing, arguing that it needed to keep up with advances in Soviet technology.

Hurricane, storm pose no threat

MIAMI — Hurricane Arlene and Tropical Storm Bret do-si-doed past each other in the Atlantic on Friday, and forecasters said neither one seemed likely to threaten land.

Arlene, a minimal hurricane with 75 mph winds, drifted east past longitude 42 degrees Friday while Bret headed westward over the same meridian 800 miles to the south.

"They can't get much closer than they are now," said National Hurricane Center forecaster Gil Clark. "There's no way they can touch each other."

Arlene's proximity may be responsible for the instability of Bret, which has strengthened, then weakened several times in the past week.

"The upper level winds from Arlene extend outward far enough to be hindering Bret's development," Clark said.

Iranian kidnappers renew threat

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Pro-Iranian kidnappers claimed Friday that 17 fellow Shiite Moslems convicted of bombings in Kuwait are being tortured, and threatened to give American and French hostages the same treatment.

Islamic Jihad, which holds two Americans and three Frenchmen, said one French captive was "gravely ill," but did not identify him. The organization's name means Islamic Holy War.

A typewritten statement in Arabic accused Kuwait of "severe psychological and physical torture" of the 17 Shiites, who were convicted of bombing the U.S. and French embassies in the Persian Gulf emirate Dec. 3, 1983. Their release has been a longstanding demand of Islamic Jihad.

Seven people were killed in the bombings.

"But my baby was hungry. We didn't get dinner."

Death toll and outrage rising after massacre

HUNGERFORD, England (AP) — Two more people shot down in Britain's worst mass murder died of their wounds, bringing the death toll Friday to 17. That included the gunman, who killed himself at the end of the bloody day.

Arrangements began for the funerals in this normally peaceful market town, 60 miles west of London, where the massacre took place Wednesday.

Growing public outrage in Britain meanwhile chose television violence and "Rambo" movies as its first targets.

The British Broadcasting Corp. said it put off showing a violent television drama about gangsters in deference to Hungerford's 5,000 residents.

An inquest began on 33-year-old Susan Godfrey, who was shot dead while picnicking with her children in a forest near Hungerford. Her death is believed to have been the prelude to Michael Ryan's shooting spree in the town itself.

After formalities, the inquest was adjourned until October.

Bulls see stock market on solid ground

By Chef Currier
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The higher it goes, the more Wall Street's bull market seems to take on an air of unreality.

Many market-watchers, both professional and amateur, believe the runaway rise to record highs is now operating on the legendary "greater fool" theory, with investors buying on the hope that someone will be reckless enough to pay even more for the same stocks in the future.

But some analysts argue that the advance has been built on a solid economic foundation: a significant strengthening in corporate earnings that may be only in its early stages.

"We don't find the market's performance that perplexing," said Jeffrey Applegate, investment strategist at E.F. Hutton & Co., in a recent commentary.

"The propulsion behind stock prices is coming from very good earnings reports for the second quarter, fueling expectations of continued earnings momentum into 1988."

Robert S. Salomon Jr. at Salomon Brothers Inc. argues that the extent of the improvement in profit trends is not yet fully appreciated.

"Although consensus profit figures have been moving up slowly in the past few months, we believe that most estimates remain too low," he said.

"We expect that earnings momentum will accelerate and that further favorable profit surprises are in store. Earnings growth in 1988 should benefit from continued growth in the economy, higher inflation, the ongoing benefits of tax reform, and better oil company results."

As good as earnings may be, there are plenty of skeptics who believe investors are paying a dangerously high price for them.

"Second-quarter earnings were for the most part better than expected," acknowledge analysts at Wright Investors' Service, a money management firm in Bridgeport, Conn. "But they have to be extrapolated far into the future in order to justify the current level of stock prices."

However, the optimists argue that the bottom-line numbers alone do not tell the full story. They say operating results are even stronger than they look, because the final figures are still being depressed by the costs of one-time events such as writeoffs associated with corporate restructurings.

Furthermore, they contend, today's earnings are worth more because they are not being distorted by inflationary windfalls.

"Quality of profits is extremely good, and is not being artificially boosted by inflation gains or underdepreciation," said Applegate. "Our studies strongly suggest that the market does pay up for higher-quarterly profits because, over time, they correlate better with stock prices than do reported earnings."

Investors were paying up again in the past week, as the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 24.67 to a record 2,709.50.

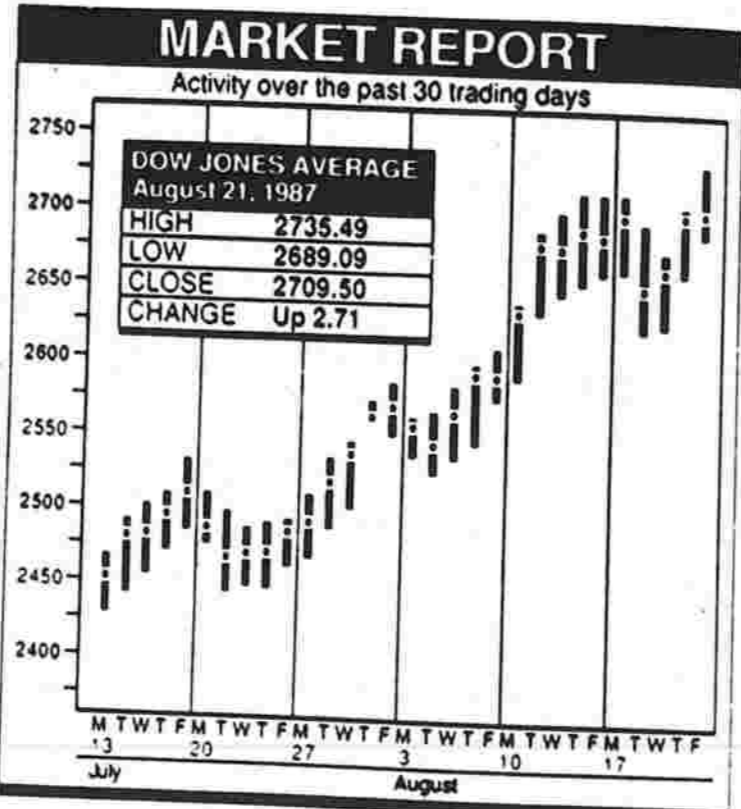

The New York Stock Exchange composite index gained .82 to 187.56 while the American Stock Exchange market value index slipped .14 to 363.47.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 186.31 million shares a day, down from the previous week's record of 222.84 million.

By most measures, price-earnings ratios are indeed near historic highs right now. Standard & Poor's Corp. says the P-E on its 500-stock composite index, which recently pushed above 20-to-1, is at its highest level since 1961.

To many observers, any further increase in P-Es would be a venture into perilously speculative territory.

"We do not look for significant expansion in price-earnings multiples in coming months," said Salomon. "Support for stock prices will come instead from impressive earnings results, similar to those reported in the second quarter."

Market report shows trading for the past 30 trading days. Stock prices crept higher Friday, with the Dow Jones industrial average edging to a record high as traders moved cautiously following Thursday's torrid rally. The Dow average of 30 industrials rose 2.71 points to 2,709.50.

July inflation of 0.2% is best this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dip in food costs and moderating energy prices held inflation at the retail level to a tame 0.2 percent increase in July, its best performance this year, the government reported Friday.

The rise in the Labor Department's consumer price index was half the 0.4 percent increase posted in June. Analysts cited the report as further evidence that inflation is calming again, at least temporarily, after a spurt in the first half of the year.

It was the lowest one-month rate since a similar 0.2 percent increase last December.

Food and beverage prices, which had increased 0.7 percent in June, did a turnaround and fell 0.2 percent in July, paced by a 0.5 percent drop in grocery prices. Energy prices were up a moderate 0.5 percent after rising 1.5 percent in June.

In another report, the Commerce Department said that the nation's economy grew at a modest annual rate of 2.3 percent from April to June.

That represents a downward revision from the 2.6 percent increase in the gross national product for the same quarter reported initially. The revision was almost entirely due to an unanticipated worsening of the U.S. trade deficit in June.

Economists said the reports demonstrate that inflation is low and the economy weak, making it unlikely that the Federal Reserve will act at this time to tighten credit, such as raising key interest rates, in an effort to prevent further declines in the value of the dollar.

"The outlook for the economy is for slow growth, not fast growth and not no-growth, not a recession," said

Donald Straszheim, chief economist for Merrill Lynch.

Straszheim said the July inflation figure was "good news, but I don't think it is time to do much celebrating." He said a further weakening of the dollar on foreign exchange markets will inevitably contribute to higher import prices and more inflation in the months to come.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., deputy White House press secretary Leslye Arshat said about the inflation figures, "The increases in consumer and producer prices in July provide further evidence that inflation is returning to the 4 percent pace reported during the first three years of the expansion."

In other economic news Friday: The Labor Department said that Americans' average weekly earnings, after discounting for inflation, fell 0.3 percent in July as a small rise in hourly earnings was offset by a drop in the amount of time worked and an increase in inflation. It was the second consecutive monthly decline and left Americans' inflation-adjusted earnings 1.2 percent below what they were a year ago.

The Treasury Department said that the budget deficit for July swelled to $22.3 billion, compared to a modest $420 million deficit in June, a month when government revenues were bolstered by quarterly individual and corporate tax payments. For the first 10 months of the budget year, the federal deficit totaled $141.7 billion, 25.0 percent below the deficit for the same period a year ago. The administration is forecasting the deficit for the entire year will fall to $158.4 billion, down from a record $220.7 billion, with much of the improvement coming from one-time effects of the new tax law.

Bigger fund may not be better

QUESTION: I fail to understand your adamant opposition to mutual fund 12b-1 plans. When a fund has such a plan, its management can use a very small part of the fund's assets for "distribution purposes" — to sell more fund shares.

The sale of more shares makes a mutual fund bigger and better. What's wrong with that?

ANSWER: First off, you're ignoring the fact that a mutual fund is owned by its shareholders — not its management. The fund's assets belong to the shareholders and should be used only for purposes that benefit shareholders.

Your big mistake is in equating "bigger" with "better," where mutual fund shareholders are concerned. There is absolutely no evidence that investors fare better with bigger funds than with smaller funds. The records show that smaller funds often turn in much better investment performance than the big ones.

There's no doubt that the people managing a mutual fund benefit as the fund becomes larger. That's because management collects an annual fee, usually called an "advisory" or "management" fee, based on the size of the fund's assets. The larger the fund's assets, the bigger the fee management collects. Shareholders — the owners of the fund — get no part of that fee.

Also, what you call a "very small part" can be an annual charge of as much as 1.25 percent of the assets of some funds with 12b-1 plans.

Summed up, when a fund has a 12b-1 plan, its management can use shareholders' money to promote the sale of new shares and increase management's profits.

Fortunately, the investing public has a wide choice of many mutual funds which do not have 12b-1 plans.

QUESTION: You recommend "true no-load" mutual funds — those with no commission charge at the time of purchase, no redempexpenses, you're very wrong. All mutual funds — load and no-load — have management fees and other operating expenses.

Those annual expenses, referred to as "expense ratios," vary from one fund to another. Generally, the expense ratios of true no-load funds are no higher than those of load funds.

QUESTION: I want to check the expense ratio of a certain mutual fund, before I decide whether or not to invest in its shares. Where can I get that information?

ANSWER: In every mutual fund's prospectus and annual report, you will find a table headed "Per Share Income and Capital Changes," or similar words. Look for the line reading "Ratio of Expenses to Average Net Assets." That will tell you exactly what percentage of the fund's assets went to pay operating expenses.

If you would like to check the expense ratios of virtually all mutual funds, locate a public library with the Wiesenberger Investment Company Service manual in its reference section.

The Labor Department reported that consumer prices rose at a modest 0.2 percent last month, posting their best performance this year.

The Commerce Department said the U.S. economy grew at a moderate annual rate of 2.3 percent in the second quarter, a slight downward revision from its first estimate.

After-tax corporate profits increased 4.2 percent in the second quarter, a sharp turn-around from the previous quarter, the government said.

America's factories, mines and utilities operated at 80.5 percent of capacity in July, the fastest pace in 18 months, the Federal Reserve said.

Housing construction edged up 0.9 percent in July, the first monthly increase since February, the Commerce Department said.

Regions of the United States have been growing apart economically since 1979 as income growth in booming coastal states outstripped the rest of the country, the Commerce Department said.

The nation's July petroleum imports soared to 7.63 million barrels a day in July, the highest level in seven years, the American Petroleum Institute said.

The federal budget deficit will ease to $158.4 billion this year but grow to nearly $200 billion unless lawmakers take action, the Congressional Budget Office said.

Britain's Hawley Group Ltd. offered $635 million in cash to acquire ADT Inc., one of the world's largest suppliers of fire and security alarm systems.

Dutch electronics giant NV Philips offered $611 million in cash for the 42 percent of North American Philips Corp. it does not already own.

Revlon Group Inc. offered to buy Gillette Co. for about $5.4 billion in cash and securities. Separately, Revlon sold its Vision Care contact lens and eyeglass business to Britain's Pilkington PLC for about $574 million.

New World Entertainment Ltd. sweetened its hostile bid for Kenner Parker Toys Inc. to $461 million. On Friday, a Massachusetts state court judge issued a temporary order blocking New World's bid.

Consolidated Gold Fields PLC, the biggest shareholder of Newmont Mining Corp., said it supported Newmont management in the face of a possible takeover fight against an investor group led by corporate raider T. Boone Pickens Jr.

A second appeal to Manville Corp.'s reorganization plan was filed in the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York challenging more than $700 million in settlements the U.S. Bankruptcy Court approved.

A federal court jury convicted lawyer Israel G. Grossman on all 38 counts in the first insider-trading case to go to trial since a wave of scandals rocked Wall Street last year.

The Securities and Exchange Commission reversed an earlier decision and said it could be guilty of insider trading if it sold about $50 million in shares obtained as part of its record settlement with speculator Ivan F. Boesky.

Massachusetts officials charged that E.F. Hutton & Co. misrepresented the value of a stock offering and threatened to close the firm's offices in the state unless the firm refunds investors' money in a mining company stock.

The Labor Department extended "right-to-know" regulations requiring companies to tell workers about hazardous substances to virtually every major workplace in the country.

The AFL-CIO ended its 10-year boycott of Coors beer with a company promise to allow "timely" union elections and use union construction forces in building a new brewery in Virginia.

The Food and Drug Administration selected Microgenesys Inc. of West Haven, Conn., with only 30 employees, to be the first to test an experimental AIDS vaccine on people.

Boston Edison Co. said it will study laying the world's longest underwater transmission cable to import electricity from Nova Scotia.

OPINION

Answer lies with Bolton's young people

It's unfortunate that it took the cancellation of Bolton High School's varsity baseball program last spring to bring about a study committee. The problems with the school athletic program had been brewing for years. But it's not too late to do something, even if it will take a lot of hustling, as 22 members of the Bolton Town and School Athletics Study Committee were told when they met for the first time last week.

The formation of three subcommittees seems to cover all the bases. One group is looking at facilities, another at programs and town-school coordination, and the third at coaches and direction.

Two of those subcommittees probably will have little to do.

It won't take long to add up the number of ball fields and gymnasiums in Bolton. Nor will it be difficult to conclude that improvements are needed. Improvements have been sought and delayed for years in many areas.

It also won't take much study to determine that Bolton has trouble attracting and keeping coaches for its school athletic programs. The shortage of coaches is a problem throughout Connecticut, and it's an increase in salaries that's needed to solve the problem.

It's the other part of the study — the programs and their coordination — that will need a lot of attention.

For Bolton High School varsity teams to be successful, there must be well-developed and well-skilled athletes to begin with.

If the committee members are looking for a fix, they won't find a quick one. What's needed is a comprehensive athletic program in the formative years, and a coordinated effort to make sports more attractive.

Little League, youth soccer, and youth basketball are the areas where improvement appears to be needed the most. It is in these programs that athletes can be developed, not when they've reached Bolton High School.

By then, it's too late.

The roots of rock and roll

Elvis Presley, who died 10 years ago this month, he will always be remembered as the king of rock and roll. I admire the late Mr. Presley's talents, but there are many other white and non-white musicians and singers who have contributed much to rock music, too. The aforementioned title is subjective because Chuck Berry, Bill Haley and others would not be remembered in this manner.

Col. Tom Parker, Elvis' manager, mentioned in a 1979 TV movie that in the mid-1950s the music industry was looking for a young energetic white youth who sounded like a black person on stage. Mr. Presley was in the right place at the right time. Many songs that were recorded in an upbeat tempo by black singers were sung at a slower pace (known as a cover-over) by whites. One example was "Tutti-Frutti" by Pat Boone. Black rock and roll music was called devilish, corruptive and seductive by some white conservatives in the nation.

Black musical artist Bo Diddley said that Elvis allegedly borrowed some of his stage movements. Afro-American Mama Thornton had sung a slower version of "Hound Dog" in the early 1950s, as reported in Aug. 13 edition of the New York Daily News. Otis Blackwell, another black songwriter, penned several hit songs for Elvis, among them "Don't Be Cruel" and "All Shook Up." Blackwell didn't receive recognition until December 1986 and he never became as wealthy as Mr. Presley.

Black people were crucial innovators of rock and roll, which made it possible for other ethnic artists to overcome social barriers and to experiment with various musical beats. All people should be given credit for their endeavors in order for the truth to be known. I thank the late Messrs. Allan Freed and Ed Sullivan and the ageless Dick Clark for giving black performers a chance to be heard.

I agree with the song by James Brown entitled "Say It Loud I'm Black and I'm Proud."

Thanks to those who aided cyclist

To the Editor:

I read the story about the bicycle accident on Tolland Turnpike and the girls who took the seriously injured man to the hospital. It brought back a time when my son was sideswiped where Lake Street comes into Middle Turnpike and the car took off while he was still on the ground.

Bicyclists are vulnerable to busy streets and traffic but being daytime riders they would be favored with more safety if drivers showed more concern about seeing them. I have heard some stories about drivers who deliberately try to drive bicycle riders off the road.

The girls who helped the bicyclist on Tolland Turnpike should be publicly thanked on behalf of all bicyclists. It might help make others aware that a bicyclist in distress should not be feared.

Savings & loans' deposits underinsured

WASHINGTON —

Even with the recently passed congressional bailout of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., disaster still looms for the industry in which millions of Americans have invested their savings. The dimensions of the coming S&L collapses, unless stronger action is taken to prevent it, will make the financial scandals in Ohio and Maryland of the last couple of years seem like a day at the beach.

Congress agreed to let FSLIC float enough bonds to pump $10 billion into the insurance fund over the next five years. It currently has less than $1 billion in the kitty. But the bailout has one flaw, and it's a beaut: $10 billion won't be nearly enough.

The cold, hard truth, which government and industry officials have been trying to keep from the public, is that the FSLIC can't possibly guarantee individual deposits across the nation.

How much might be needed? Well, early this year Treasury Secretary James Baker was informed at a closed-door briefing that the insurance fund faced a shortfall of $50 billion. And that was in the good old days before interest rates began rising, putting already-beleaguered savings and loan institutions in even greater peril as they try to attract new deposits to cover the many loans that have gone sour in recent years.

If interest rates continue to rise, the S&Ls will sink ever deeper into trouble. Already near 40 percent of the nation's thrifts have resources that range from merely inadequate to zelsch. But the FSLIC itself is so close to broke that it can't shut down the S&Ls that are technically bankrupt. So it lets these financial cripples limp along and try to stay alive by beating the bushes for new deposits.

This, of course, means that when the inevitable day comes that these terminally ill savings and loans finally give up the ghost, it will cost the FSLIC much more to pay off the insured deposits. Confidential estimates our associate Michael Binstein has seen put the nationwide total by which the FSLIC's commitments grow for these sick S&Ls at more than $10 billion a day.

It's mostly the greed and incompetence of some high-flying S&L managements that have brought the entire industry face to face with Armageddon. But it's the American taxpayers that the industry is counting on to rescue it from its own members' folly.

S&L wheeler-dealers have been investing their depositors' money in all sorts of exotic schemes, far removed from the industry's original function of providing mortgages for home buyers. When the unwise investments have collapsed, the wheeler-dealers have in effect dared the feds to shut them down — knowing the FSLIC doesn't have the money to do it.

Exasperating as it is to reward the crooks and incompetents by bailing them out along with the majority of honest S&Ls, our sources are convinced that a taxpayer bailout is inevitable. And it will be the biggest in history, making the Chrysler, Lockheed and New York City bailouts seem like dropping pennies in a beggar's tin cup.

In the long run, the S&L industry is probably doomed. Some experts predict its demise within a few years. Ironically, the industry's travail comes at the very time opportunities are better than ever for well-managed savings and loans.

Blowup in Billings

With truly judicial understatement, chief administrative law judge Edward Reidy describes the Social Security hearings and appeals office in Billings, Mont., as "far from a happy or organized workplace."

Reidy came to this conclusion after reviewing the case against the Billings office's administrative law judge, Don Edgar Burriss, for the Merit Systems Protection Board. Burriss's supervisors wanted him fired for insubordination and disruptive behavior, and Reidy agreed that Burriss should go.

He acknowledged that Burriss has been a "productive administrative law judge whose work product is wholly satisfactory." But it's his personal relationships with Social Security colleagues that make him unacceptable, Reidy indicated.

In his recommendation for dismissal, Reidy noted that Burriss doesn't speak to his bosses and files too many grievances against them. Burriss, he wrote, refers to his supervisors in such disparaging terms as "sneak thief, moron and goons," while his "virtual avalanche of complaints has nearly buried those responsible for processing the grievances." Reidy noted that "there is obvious jealousy and pique among senior support staff."

Burriss gave his view of the situation in Billings to our reporter Gary Clouser. He claims his troubles arise from the fact that he is a "whistleblower" and a "high reverser," who overturns unjust decisions that deny benefits of Social Security claimants. He complained that he had been the victim of false charges of taking bribes and kickbacks, and was cleared twice by a grand jury. He has received letters of support from Sens. Carl Levin, D-Mich., and John Melcher, D-Mont.

Burriss has until Sept. 8 to appeal Reidy's dismissal recommendation to the full Merit Systems Protection Board.

Private NSC?

Evidence that came to light during the Iran-contra hearings indicates that former national security adviser Robert McFarlane discussed with his one-time National Security Council aide, Oliver North, the possibility that North run the secret Iran-contra operation out of the Center for Strategic and International Studies. McFarlane joined the tank after leaving the White House. A founder and director of CSIS is David Abshire, named by President Reagan to handle the White House investigation of the affair. There is nothing to suggest that Abshire knew of the McFarlane-North discussion.

Road worriers in California

By Chuck Stone

LOS ANGELES — A Canadian tourist walked up to the airport car-rental desk, carrying a sign that he planned to install in the back of his rented car:

"I'm from out of town. Please don't shoot."

The car-rental clerk chuckled. "He wasn't kidding. He was dead serious."

But the long lines at all the airport car-rental counters belied such apprehension, while reaffirming an immutable reality governing all Californian drivers — permanent or temporary (such as myself).

There is absolutely no alternative.

I drove my rented car very carefully along the San Diego Freeway to my Sunset Boulevard hotel. At one point, I happily crawled alongside a California Highway Patrol car at only 35 miles an hour, knowing I was "safe and secure from all alarms."

Amid the macabre humor and late-night-TV-host jokes, we may have forgotten four facts of life: 1. Cyclical eruptions of violence are an American tradition.

Between 1979 and 1981, there were 28 murders of black children in Atlanta. In the '60s, race riots scarred major cities.

2. Freeway shootings will run their course as inexorably as Ollie's Bargain Basement. Sociological spasms are doomed to short life spans.

While I was in LA last week, newspapers had already begun relegating the latest freeway shooting to the inside pages. By de-emphasizing the newsworthiness of this frightening trend, the papers were also devaluing the self-esteem of the nuts who resort to vehicular violence. "They're copycats," a West Hollywood black policeman, Charles Ingram, disgustingly told me.

But the freeway shootings are also a neurotic response to the smoldering frustration of endless traffic jams and system breakdowns that other big-city drivers serenely accept as normal. LA drivers angrily reject immobilization.

3. There is absolutely no alternative to the freeway system.

Los Angeles is a mobile residential culture joined by ribbons of interlocking freeways that fan out from sprawling business clusters to downtown LA, West

Hollywood, Beverly Hills, Century City (a favorite of President Reagan's) and Johnny Carson's "beautiful downtown Burbank."

"There is no 'there' there," as Gertrude Stein said of another California city.

4. The LA freeway system is permanently doomed to vehicular viscosity.

"In the Los Angeles area, we cannot, in our wildest dreams, solve the traffic problem," Dale Ratzliff, a senior transportation official for the state, told Philadelphia Inquirer reporter Murray Dubin last year.

During rush hours, the current average freeway speed decreases, on average, from 37 miles per hour to 17 miles an hour.

A new planned freeway "will be jammed the second it opens," warned a federal transportation official.

But in a true display of the unquenchable American frontier spirit, people continue to migrate to Los Angeles.

I don't blame them. This sun-bathed oasis is still a comfortable and exciting place to live.

Andover church plans reception for Rev. Taylor

ANDOVER — A reception to honor the Rev. Richard H. Taylor, who has resigned as pastor of the First Congregational Church of Andover, will be held at the church on Sunday from 3 to 5 p.m.

Taylor has accepted the pastorate of the First Congregational Church (United Church of Christ) in Benton Harbor, Mich., where he will begin service in September.

The Benton Harbor pastorate is a challenging one, in a downtown church in a city with 28 percent unemployment.

"Since I left the city, I have had a rather privileged life, with a good education and many years in the Berkshires and in Andover. I really feel I want to give part of my life to helping some of our nation's neediest places," Taylor said.

Taylor's last two services in the Andover pulpit will be Sunday and Aug. 30 at 9 a.m. His sermon for Sunday will be "Dreams and Visions." On Aug. 30, his last message to the congregation will be titled "Benediction."

The community is welcome to the reception and the services.

Taylor was called to the Andover Church in December 1979, and began service in February 1980. His tenure is the third longest of the 29 pastors who have served the Andover church since the end of the Civil War. The church has had 36 pastors since it was organized in February 1749.

Rev. Richard Taylor

THESE YEARS have been banner years for the local congregation. Since Taylor became pastor, 109 new members have joined the church. More than 48 percent of the church's active membership has joined during the present pastorate.

Giving to the local church has increased significantly. Mission giving has more than tripled, increasing from about $4,000 in 1979 to more than $14,000 in 1986. Improvements to the church have included the purchase and restoration of an historic pipe organ, the purchase of a Steinway piano, installation of a handicapped-access ramp, a new speaker system, a new roof, and carpeting and painting almost all church properties.

A new junior high youth group has been started, the women's fellowship revived, and a Boy Scout troop and a Cub Scout pack begun. The church now houses an Alcoholics Anonymous group, and a vacation church school. The senior high youth group expanded its ministries in worship and service, and the senior choir was rejuvenated and returned to a regular program of the church. The summer Hop River Chamber Music series was begun.

TAYLOR WAS awarded the Community Service Award in 1985 by the Andover Grange as the Andover citizen of the year.

A church-sponsored project that resulted in the ground breaking of Hop River Homes, which is elderly housing, took place in 1980. Taylor has served as the president of the Hop River board since 1981.

He also served the community of Andover as its representative to the regional mental health catchment-area board.

Taylor has served the wider church as national vice president of the Congregational Christian Historical Society. He has also served as a member of the board of the American Congregational Association, and as a delegate to the United Church of Christ General Synod in Cleveland, Ohio, this summer.

He has served the Connecticut Conference of the United Church of Christ as a member of its Department of Mission and Stewardship, Ministry Coordinating Team, and History Committee.

Beat summer's heat & win points from heaven — kneel and pray!

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
MACC Executive Director

We already count on summer for a lull in activities so that we can catch up on all the work that gets pushed back during the fall and winter months (and spring when people in trouble get their shut-off notices). Somehow the summer lull just didn't happen though summer vacations did. (We ask our staff to take their vacations between May and October because of the crunch of the rest of the year.)

So thank you to the volunteers who helped out over the summer: Hazel Aronson, Germaine Bretton and Martha Johansson are new volunteers in the Soup Kitchen. Martha is the wife of the recently installed new minister at Emanuel Lutheran. Warm welcome to them both.

The shortage of hands in the clothing bank has been partially filled by new volunteers Elsie Wray and Germaine Bretton. We can still use helpers on Mondays and Wednesdays from 1 to 3 p.m. If you would like more information, please call Joanne Coykendall at 646-4114.

Several good folks answered our last-minute pleas for help with the last-day cookout at day camp. Harry Reinhorn, bless him, showed up with his chef's hat and apron (the kids loved it) and Teresa LaBelle called on friends and family. Barbara Sullivan, Ronald LaBelle, Special thanks to ex-neighbors Janet and Joey Mayer and our own office manager, Maresa Easton, who shut down the computer and went to sling hamburgers with the best of them.

Beth tells me Susan Bell acted as water-safety instructor on field trips. Anna Marie Dionne and Sue and Steve Hodge also helped with the hikes. From all the children to all of you who helped make those two weeks possible, including benefactors Israel and Shirley Snyder, thank you.

Nun knocks church sexism

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A ranking nun told heads of Roman Catholic men's orders that "sexism in the systemic life of the church is sin — moral evil — which does violence to both men and women."

Speaking to about 300 Major Superiors of Men at their annual meeting, Sister Patricia McAnn, vice president of the Sisters of Mercy of Pittsburgh, noted she had taught for years at an all-male seminary.

New Orleans conference spirited

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Contingents from about 30 denominations were among the 35,000 charismatic Christians participating in the recent North American Conference on the Holy Spirit, about half of them Roman Catholics.

At times, their singing-in-tongues filled the Louisiana Superdome

MACC News

And to those who have been writing MACC columns that I'm getting credit for — Joanie O'Loughlin wrote the article on the Manchester Interracial Council. (Be sure and send your membership dues to Marie.) Jane Sherman wrote the Day Camp Round-up and Maresa Easton edited the column on the Soup Kitchen.

Thank you to: Howard and Carol Kovogno and Stan and Jan Gambala for their support of the Human Needs Fund; Eleanor Cole, St. James Christian Involvement Committee for donations to the shelter; Herman and Mildred Johnson in memory of Marietta Phares; the McNeill family in memory of Gertrude Duncan from Irene Hadden.

Thank you also to those who have shared food and personal-care items with our soup kitchen and shelter guests: John and Bernice Rieg, Cathy Peek, Cecile Bassett, Jack Holden, Jackie Campioui, Joan Schiller, Linda and Henne Brooks, Bernard Johnson, Ed Bushnell, Lee Hoffman, Theresa Nass, The Whole Donut, Manchester Rotary Club, North United Methodist Church, Catherine Byron, Mary Leslie, Emily Miller, Caroline Ryder, Barbara Phillip, Emily Smith, Florence Parker, Rita Lombardi, Lily Krob, Mary Kuznickas, Renee Potter, Debbie Cherrone, Kay Kendall, Helen's Bakery, Little Caesar's Pizza, International Fuel Cells of South Windsor, Delta Chapter 51, Royal Arch Masons, Widows and Widowers.

And here's a delightful summer tip from the Rev. Drew Smith I found in the St. Mary's "Happenings" that I would like to share with you.

"Beat the heat — July was one hot month! People everywhere desperately sought relief from soaring temperatures and humidity. But there was one way to beat the heat and that very few thought of. And I want to tell you about it just in case it gets hot again in August. Or in 1988 or 1994.

"Pray. That's right: Pray. 'Most people in the heat sit around or lie down, but that means that a good third to half of your body is pressed against whatever you're sitting or lying on, and evaporation from your skin — which is what cools you (few of us pant) — reduced by that amount. 'But when you kneel, a classic posture for prayer, only your kneecaps and your toes (and your elbows too if you're a leaner) are pressing against anything, and all the rest of you is open to the cooling evaporative relief of the air around you. 'While you're kneeling, you might pray to the Lord about whatever things are causing concern or anxiety in your life. It's well known that anxiousness causes perspiration, and if you can let go and turn some of those things that cause your anxiousness over to God, then you'll feel calmer, cooler, or at peace.

"What wonder! What joy! To think that when the next heat waves hit, people everywhere will be on their knees, and prayers will be ascending to heaven, and we'll all be cooler and better for it. There it is: the sure way to beat the heat. Spread the word!"

Thanks, Drew. Any suggestions for warm up during the winter? Notice — The monthly MACC "cease Vigil is scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday at Second Congregational Church, 385 N. Main St. You are warmly invited to join in an hour of prayer for peace.

Surely God has revealed to us all that "we need for life and goodness" (2Pet. 1:3). It is for us to studiously seek it out. It is also incumbent on us to be content therewith. To be otherwise is to imply that God has withheld needed information.

To comprehend and implement in life the teachings of the Scriptures is sufficient challenge for the smartest and most dedicated person on this earth. When one seeks to peer behind the veil of divine secrecy by occultic means he seeks to be equal with God. And he succeeds only in duplicating the tragic sin of his first forebears.

When Moses reviewed God's law for Israel, he sounded a note of caution we would do well to heed today. The secret things belong to God while the revealed things belong to men (Deut. 29:29).

How-to course takes aim at marriage

NEW YORK (AP) — When it comes to marriage, Margaret Kent means business. In fact, it is her business.

Kent is a Miami lawyer who specializes in taxation, international law and divorce law. She also teaches a course for women on how to get married.

Since 1969, more than 400 clients have completed her course and, she says, every single one of them has gotten married — most within two years.

Her clients come in all shapes and sizes, and from all kinds of social and economic backgrounds. Many are in their early 30s, Kent said in an interview here.

But she doesn't let everyone into her course. There's a waiting period for those newly divorced or widowed, to allow for an emotional transition from marriage to being single.

And Kent says she'll accept only those women who are willing to "deal in reality."

And what is that reality?

• That love and marriage are too important to be left to happenstance.

• That competition is fierce.

• That women shouldn't expect magic.

She says, "If you want anything else in life, you know you have to work for it, not wait for Santa Claus. The same is true when seeking a husband.

"The odds were greatly in your favor during your teen-age years, but if you are past 25, the odds are increasingly against you. You cannot sit around like a beached whale, waiting for the tides to come in. All you'll get is dead fish and seaweed."

Kent says mental attitudes are important. To women who want to get married, but who don't believe it could happen to them, she says: "Look around you. Is every married woman you see 18 years old, thin and beautiful? Of course not. So, what do they know that you don't?"

She says the answer lies in self-awareness, male-awareness and the application of some basic psychology.

Kent says choosing a man for marriage requires considerable effort.

"To marry well, you need to make good use of your time and abilities. Since you cannot sift men through giant colanders, you must sift them through your life by learning about them. Then you can pick and choose the best," she says.

Kent is the daughter of an American father and Cuban mother. Her dreams of a diplomatic career ended when Castro seized power in Cuba in 1959 and her mother's large family arrived in Miami from Cuba needing assistance.

It wasn't until 1967 — after finishing graduate school in Mexico and working as a language teacher in Miami — that her thoughts and plans zeroed in on getting married.

Entrants must be Connecticut residents for at least six months, between 15 and 19 years of age, and have never been married.

Entrants should send photo, name, address and phone number to 1988 Miss Connecticut Teen U.S.A., Dept. 3, 40 Central Park South, Suite 2H, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Winners receive more than $150,000 in cash and prizes.

BLOOMFIELD — Hartford Easter Seal Rehabilitation Center is sponsoring a road rally on Sept. 26 at St. Thomas Seminary starting at 10 a.m. Drivers will travel 110 miles in western Connecticut — no dirt roads — and finish with a picnic. The $50 registration fee applies to a team of two drivers and a navigator. Extra drivers are $10 each.

For more information, call 243-9741, extension 211.

Group helps bereaved

HARTFORD — The Aid in Infant Death support group will meet at 8 p.m. on Sept. 1 in the 7-2 conference room of St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center. The group is for parents who have lost a baby through miscarriage, stillbirth, congenital defects or other causes.

The group is sponsored by Manchester Memorial Hospital and St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center. For more information, call 646-6989 or 872-0326.

Aerobics group meets

TALCOTTVILLE — Talcottville Congregational Church will hold aerobics classes and body-conditioning classes at the church on Elm Street Sept. 1 and 3 from 6 to 7:15 p.m. The eight-week session costs $25. For more information, call 649-0815.

Paint gives new life to the senior center

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

Senior Citizens

By Jeonette Cove
Senior Center Director

The Senior Citizens' Center is in the process of a face lift. Upon the reopening of the building you will find many areas given new life by a new paint job. How far we can go will depend on the amount of help that we receive from the community. All levels of experience will be accepted. If you can't paint, maybe you can tape base boards or trim. If you can't bend, help take the switchplates off the wall. All and any help would be appreciated. Call the center for more details at 647-3211. Ladies are also welcome to help.

Applications for the Medical Courtesy Card and the Prescription Drug Program "ConnPACE" are available at the center. Do not confuse the two programs; they are separate with different eligibility requirements and administered by two different organizations. The ConnPACE program requires that you be at least 65 and have an income limit of $13,000 for a single person and $16,000 for a couple. The state Department of Aging assists individuals with payment toward the purchase of prescription drugs, insulin and insulin syringes and needles.

The Medical Courtesy Card program identifies Medicare seniors whose income is $19,950 for a single person and $24,000 for a married couple. For these individuals, participating doctors will accept Medicare assignment and not charge any more than Medicare allows. This means that one only has to pay first the deductible, and the 20 percent as required by Medicare.

You may also use your card at ophthalmologists and dental surgeons, who also have a medical degree. The program is administered by the Hartford County Medical Association.

Trips are as follows:
Aug. 26 — Ocean Beach. Filled. Leave senior center 9:30 a.m.

Aug. 27 — Northfield Mountain. Filled. Leave senior center 9:15 a.m.

Sept. 15 — Rockingham Race Track. Filled. Leave senior center 9 a.m.

Sept. 24-26 — Lake George, N.Y. Fall foliage. $179.50 per person (double occupancy). Includes transportation, accommodations, meals, admission Saratoga Raceway, boat cruise, Fort Ticonderoga, sightseeing. Call Daniels, 646-3012.

Oct. 5 — Bear Mountain Inn — $32 per person. Includes transportation, full-course luncheon Bear Mountain Inn, visit Boscobel Mansion overlooking the Hudson River, sightseeing. Flies available at center. Signup Sept. 4 at 9:30.

Oct. 7-9 — Rocking Horse Resort. $164 per person (double occupancy). Includes transportation, accommodations and six meals, cocktail party, live entertainment and dancing, indoor and outdoor recreational activities including horseback, buggy and hay rides.

Flyers available at center. Call Senior Travel of Connecticut, 875-0538.

Nov. 19 — Thanksgiving time gala party — $29 per person. Includes transportation, full course luncheon, Cindy Lynne and her Cornerstone Band featured entertainment, dancing, singing, line dancing. Signup Oct. 2 at 9:30 a.m.

The senior center in conjunction with AARP will be sponsoring a driver's education program on Sept. 29 and 30 from 12:30 to 4 p.m. Individuals completing both days of the course will receive a minimum of 5 percent reduction on their insurance premiums as mandated by state law. The class is limited to 28 and applications can be picked up at the center. The fee for the course is $7 per person, payable by check only, made out to AARP and dated the first day of class, required at registration.

Bowlers: There will be an organizational meeting at the Parkade Lanes. The Senior Center Bowling League will meet Tuesday, Aug. 25, at 1 p.m. The AARP Bowling Team will meet Monday, Aug. 24, at 1 p.m.

Men golfers are reminded that the Arizona scramble is this Monday, Aug. 24, at the Twin Hills Golf Course.

The senior center is closed for activities until Sept. 1 for cleanup.

Meals will resume Sept. 9.

There are no on-going activities except for grocery shopping and non-grocery shopping (Bradlees) on Tuesday. Call the center for a ride before noon Monday.

Thoughtful guests on vacation mind manners and use heads

DEAR ABBY: Since we moved from our home state to an adjacent state 17 years ago, we have had plenty of visitors every summer. With summer here and people traveling for vacations, we have

Dear Abby

tips to offer guests who plan to visit friends or relatives at their homes:

1. Don't talk all the time. Your host or hostess needs time to plan meals, what to do with you today, tomorrow, etc. Step outside by yourselves once in a while. Go for a walk or take a snooze.
2. Do allow your host or hostess to read the newspaper without interruption. Some visitors tend to talk whenever they see our noses in the newspaper. It's very rude.
3. If your host or hostess goes to work during your visit, find out what time he or she has to leave for work, and leave the bathroom free for his or her use if you do not have your own guest bathroom.
4. Build a little extra money into your vacation fund so you can treat your host and hostess out for at least one meal.

5. It would be very considerate if you would offer to fill the gasoline tank if they are taking you sightseeing a lot.

6. If you are a smoker, smoke outdoors. Do not put people on the spot by asking if they "mind" if you smoke. Neither of us smokes, and it takes a week to air out our house after smoking guests have been here.

7. Before you make the trip, have it clearly understood how long you plan to stay. We stay three or four days maximum. After that, we run out of things to talk about. We think it's far better to leave people wanting more of your company than less.

NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: Thanks for a helpful item. May I add another tip for the ideal guest: Please don't leave any of your belongings behind for your hosts to pack and return to you.

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for years, but don't recall ever seeing a situation like this before. My brother is 24, and "Evie" is 22. They are getting married in November.

Evie is very beautiful and nice, but her fingernails look like something off the cover of a science fiction paperback. Each of her fingernails is about four inches long. They are very well cared for and exotic looking. I don't know what her goal is, but whenever anyone admires her nails, she says they're not as long as she wants them to be. I couldn't function if my nails were half that long, but she seems to get along fine.

My parents haven't met Evie as yet because they live halfway across the country, but they will meet her for the first time when they come here for the wedding.

Should I warn them beforehand? If so, what should I say? Or am I making too much of this, as my brother says?

BARBARA IN SAN ANTONIO

DEAR BARBARA: You know your parents better than I do, so if you think a "warning" is in order, say, "I'm sure you'll like Evie. She's beautiful and nice, and has the longest fingernails I've ever seen."

Paternity is determined by comparing the genes

DEAR DR. GOTT: How can paternity be determined? I can understand how it could be disproved, but what tests are acceptable for a judge in a paternity suit?

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: At the time of conception, the embryo receives two sets of protein instructions, one from each parent. These instructions are called genes and they determine the characteristics of the child. They include characteristics such as blood type.

Therefore, in determining paternity, scientists analyze the baby's genes and compare them with the supposed parents. Although the system is not foolproof, genetic analysis — including blood type and other genetic markers — will usually indicate whether the putative father could be the biological father.

As far as I know, judges vary in their interpretation of these data. Each case is individualized, depending on circumstance and the strength of the evidence.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is it true that chemical preservatives, when sprayed on fresh apples, pears and other fruits, can cause cancer? Can these substances be washed off or should all fruits be peeled?

DEAR READER: Many chemical preservatives and insecticides are carcinogenic. Although the spraying of foods is closely supervised and regulated by government agencies, the prudent consumer should either peel or wash fruit before eating it. This is particularly true of fruits and vegetables imported to the United States from other countries. The health risk is small, but an ounce of prevention never hurt.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there a surgical procedure to reduce stomach acid?

DEAR READER: Yes, there is, but it is seldom used anymore. The nerves to the stomach can be cut, reducing the nerve impulses that govern acid secretion. New medicines, including the H2 blockers — such as Tagamet — have made stomach-acid surgery a rarity. The drugs are far more effective in lowering stomach acidity than surgery is — and are far safer. Ulcer surgery is almost never performed today; Tagamet and a similar medicine called Zantac are the most widely prescribed medicines in the world for peptic disease.

Elizabeth I, the daughter of Henry VIII and Anne Boleyn, was born in 1533.

INFANT FOOT CARE

During an infant's first 12 months, rapid growth and softness of his feet provide a chance for foot ailments to develop. In bed, do not tuck the covers in, binding the baby's feet. Allow the child some time every day to kick without any sheets or covers on in order to exercise and strengthen his legs and feet. By changing the baby's position during the day, excessive strain on his legs is eliminated.

Between the Lines

The story behind the story

By Josie

Q. I'd like to know more about Armand Assante. He plays very interesting roles. Jennifer Bonny, Crestwood, Ill.

A. He's 37, from the Washington Heights section of New York City, the son of an Italian-American painter who supported himself by working as a copywriter in an ad agency, and his Irish-American wife, a music teacher. His parents loved the theater and one of his early outings — to "Peter Pan" starring Mary Martin — inspired him to try acting.

First, though, he got involved in music — playing the guitar and composing, and drumming in a jazz band while in high school in Cornwall, N.Y., where the family had moved when he was 7. After high school he decided to return to New York where he studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and after graduation, made his off-Broadway debut.

He then went off to do regional theater for five years and when he returned, got his first movie role in "The Lords of Flatbush" in 1974. (It's a good movie for spotting early performances: It also launched the careers of Sylvester Stallone and Henry Winkler.) He then put in some time on two soaps — "How To Survive in Marriage" and "The Doctors" — before deciding to move to Hollywood in 1977. He hasn't stopped working since.

To recap briefly: He's appeared in the TV movies and miniseries "Lady of the House," "Sophia Loren: Her Own Story," "Rage of Angels," "Evergreen," "Stranger in My Red" and the recent "Hands of a Stranger"; and the movies "Paradise Alley," "Prophecy," "Little Darlings," "Private Benjamin," "Unfaithfully Yours," "Days of Heaven," "I, the Jury" and the due-to-be-released "The Penitente," co-starring Raul Julia. He's currently in Paris shooting the ABC miniseries "Napoleon and Josephine: A Love Story" co-starring Jacqueline Bisset. It's due to air next season.

After a much-publicized romance with Dyan Cannon in the '70s, he's now married to actress Karen McCormick, they have a 3-year-old daughter, Anya, and live on a farm in upstate New York.

Armand Assante

Christopher Plummer

he's 57, from Toronto and an interesting family: His great grandfather was Sir John Abbott, Canada's first native-born prime minister and his father's cousin was Nigel Bruce, Dr. Watson of the Basil Rathbone "Sherlock Holmes" films. He was primarily raised by his mother and her family, however, in Montreal after his parents split up when he was 1 year old.

His mother loved the arts and instilled in him a deep appreciation of the theater; it was, then, no surprise when he decided to try acting while he was in high school. After graduation, he worked in local repertory companies and a year later moved to New York where his family had influential friends in the theater. He got a few roles and five years later made his Broadway debut. He has had many theatrical triumphs since, notably in "The Royal Hunt of the Sun," "Othello," "Becket" and "Macbeth."

He's also starred in a wide variety of movies: "The Fall of the Roman Empire" (in which he made his movie debut in 1963), "The Sound of Music," "The Return of the Pink Panther," "Eyewitness," "Lily in Love" and the current "Dragnet" among them. TV projects include "The Thom Birds" and "Little Gloria: Happy At Last."

He's married to British actress Elaine Taylor, his third wife, and they live in Connecticut. He and first wife Tammy Grimes have a daughter, the actress Amanda Plummer.

Woody Harrelson

Q. I think Woody Harrelson of "Cheers" is just adorable. Can you tell me what he's been in and what he'll be in next? Leslie L. Bobik, Trenton, N.J.

A. Woody, 25, is a relative newcomer to show business, so his credits don't comprise a long list. He starred in a number of stage productions while at Hanover College, served as an understudy in Broadway's "Biloxi Blues" for six months, and made his film debut in Goldie Hawn's "Wildcats." "Cheers" was next. Apart from the series, he just finished shooting a TV movie called "Bay Cove" that's scheduled to air on NBC next season; co-stars are Tim Matheson and Pamela Sue Martin.

Q. Can you tell me whatever happened to Dwayne Hickman, who was in the old "Dobie Gillis" show? Mr. Louis Majorino, Scranton, Pa.

A. He left acting about 10 years ago to become a program executive at CBS. "I really wanted to learn about production," he explained on the phone from his office in Los Angeles. "And I did; I've been involved with shows from 'Designing Women' to 'The Dukes of Hazzard' to 'Maude.'"

He will return to acting soon, however, in a "Dobie Gillis" update for CBS called "Bring Me the Head of Dobie Gillis" which he'll also produce. "We're going after all the original actors to re-create their roles," he said. "So far Bob Denver (Maynard G. Krebs) and Sheila James (Zelda) have said yes and Tuesday Weld (Thalia) is thinking about it. We've thought about asking Warren (Beatty, who as fans remember, played his trademark smooth, handsome role), but to be honest, after 'Ishtar,' I'm not sure he can do comedy... although he might need the work."

Olivia Hussey: 'Juliet' grows up

From the lead in 'Romeo and Juliet' at 15 to mothering at 35

By Jane Ardmore

You remember her as the heroine of Zeffirelli's film masterpiece, "Romeo and Juliet." You also may remember her as the Virgin Mary in his epic, "Jesus of Nazareth." Hers was a remarkable youth, attended by the kind of public acclaim that can prove dangerous.

At the age of 4, she knew exactly what she wanted to become. At 8, having traveled with her mother and brother from Buenos Aires to a new home in London, she entered drama school. At 12, she made her film debut in "The Battle of the Villa Fiorita" and immediately landed the part of Jenny on stage with Vanessa Redgrave for a two-year London run in "The Prime of Miss Jean Brody."

She remembers the night Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip and the whole royal family attended the performance to celebrate the Queen Mother's birthday. She remembers the night director Franco Zeffirelli was in the audience and came backstage afterwards. He had been searching the world for a girl to play Juliet in his forthcoming film. He'd found her.

"Romeo and Juliet" started out to be a three-week television special for the BBC," explains today's Olivia Hussey. "Then Paramount got hold of it, and within a month it became the talk of the world. That was hard. We were so young." She was 15 when she went to Italy for the six-month shoot.

"The actual acting wasn't that hard," she says. "It was a pleasure. But there were always 10 or more Paramount men on the set watching everything, every detail. That was pressure. And the people waiting in line for autographs when we went on tour, waiting in line for tickets, the theaters sold out weeks in advance."

For two years following the film's release, Hussey, who won the Golden Globe and two successive Most Promising and Best Acting Donatello Awards (Italy's Oscar equivalent), was sent on an international tour, with mass audiences battling to catch a glimpse of her.

"So much responsibility for a child. Frightening. At a time when I was the hottest actress in the world, I didn't want to work anymore. The studio kept sending me scripts. I just stayed home with my mother in London — Wimbledon. "It was good just to be with her. I think I'd missed parenting. My father had left home when I was 1½ years old. He was an opera singer; I had little contact with him. But my mother was a mother. Not a stage mother. She hadn't been with me on location in Italy. I had a professional chaperone. But for two years after the tour, I was with Mother, and she is a nice lady. She always encouraged me. I feel very close to her now that I am a mother myself. I realize so much I didn't realize when I was a girl. "It was a privilege to have that young work experience, but that was a whole separate me; and I think it good that I didn't work so much afterwards. People have more or less forgotten." You have to smile when she says that. Forgotten... Juliet? Mary? That would be difficult to believe. "And the way I am today is not the way I was." That you do believe.

Exquisite Olivia Hussey, at 35, is dainty, youthful, but spiritually rich, such a vital woman. She sits in the half-dark of the restaurant, her face radiant above the big red turtleneck of her red sweater, looking like a young Audrey Hepburn.

She has bloomed in her eight-year marriage to Akira Fuse, Japan's leading male vocalist; she loves motherhood. Her sons: Alexander (just 14), child of her youthful marriage to Dino Martin, and Maximilian (4), beautiful baby, gift of Akira. She brings out a picture: the tall blond youth with his arm about the dark-haired toddler.

"I was never ambitious," she reminds you. "It was never career first. It was always my marriage, my children. I think you have to get to 35 before you have really good sense and feel so wonderfully about everything. I never felt better than I do now starting a new career. I have never so enjoyed filming as I did making 'Distortions.'"

"It's a psychological thriller about a young woman who is terrorized. Her auntie (Piper Laurie) is trying to make her feel she is insane, and maybe she is; we don't know until the end. I first saw the script a year and a half ago, and my instant reaction was that it would be a great film because of all the unexpected twists and turns. The girl is quiet. Vulnerable. Sensitive, but with inner strength. She has a history of mental disorder. She's madly in love with her husband. That's all

Olivia Hussey returns to films

I can tell you without giving away the plot. But I can tell you that part was written for me, and I was delighted with the prospect of it."

Audiences will now, for the first time, see Hussey as a serious, adult actress, capable of playing a modern woman. "Distortions" is a Hitchcock-type thriller. On her desk are six comedy scripts; "The Eye of Katmandu," a script from India; and several projects from Italy.

"And I am ready. In years gone by, I was so afraid of failing. I had no career guidance. I made mistakes, professionally and personally. I had all these fears. Actually, without knowing it, I was agoraphobic from childhood; I still am."

Agoraphobia: the morbid fear of being in open or public places. "My brother has it, too. When other children went out to play, we chose to stay inside. I didn't go out unless I had to. Some days even now I don't want to go out. I just force myself. As you grow and mature you realize that everyone has fears, you're not the only person going through these things. It doesn't do any good for people to tell you, you have to realize for yourself. And I am so much

She had been asked to do a commercial for a cosmetic company; then she was to do a three-week tour. "I walked out onto a stage where Akira was singing the song for our commercials. He has one of the most beautiful voices I've ever heard. And my brain stopped."

"It was love at first sight. There were 10,000 people in the audience, and everyone was aware something had happened, one of those karmic things. I was to talk about beauty. The minute I finished, I banged on his dressing-room door to ask him if he wanted to take me to dinner. Well, there was no time, he had to record. 'Oh,' I said. 'I like recording studios. Where are you recording?' You understand I am very shy; but on this occasion, I lost my shyness quickly. I had only three weeks in Japan. And I knew he was the one!"

"He knew too. He spoke almost no English then, but he proposed to me the next day. In fact, I started to propose first. Akira said, 'Wait, Olivia. It's the man's place.' Then, very beautifully, he proposed. 'But,' he said, 'we will wait one year.' He had to inform his family. He had to inform his fans. 'Why can't we get married tomorrow?' I asked. But we waited a year.

"We never did have dinner that first night. But before we parted we sneaked away to Guam for four days; then I returned to Los Angeles, he went on tour and we didn't see each other for four months. ■

Getting your garage in order isn't that hard.

Your garage deserves its due

By Frances Sheridan Goulart

According to a recent home-products survey, the four chores we dread the most are cleaning the oven, washing windows, washing walls and ironing clothes.

Dread not. Any man or woman with a clean-sweep frame of mind should be able to take a long look at a less-than-tidy garage and make short work of it.

1. Want to center your car dead center every time you park? Paint luminous stripes on the rear garage wall.

3. How can you avoid scratching your car when pulling in and out? Make yourself a padded garage. Attach sections of inner tube to both sides of the entranceway, if that's your problem, or anywhere else there's the danger of scratching.

4. Need to maximize garage floor space? Put those space-gobbling rakes and shovels on the walls or give yourself extra room by adding shelves or cabinets to the top half of the garage rear wall.

5. To maximize garage floor space, paint white lines on the floor outlining parking areas for bicycles, lawn mowers, etc.

6. To save even more space, stash those windows and screens overhead in a storage rack attached to existing ceiling joists.

7. Keeping garage floors free of grease and oil spots is simple if you place a drip pan (i.e., a cookie sheet filled with cat litter or gravel or corrugated cardboard fitted inside a baking sheet) under the cars.

8. To clean up oil and grease spots on the garage floor, apply paint thinner, cover with litter or sand and leave on overnight. Sweep up the following day. Repeat if necessary.

9. To camouflage garage floor drippings, apply a black paint stripe the width of the space between car tires. The stripe also doubles as a parking guide.

10. To avoid damaging your car doors after you've driven in, staple inner-tube sections, foam rubber, carpet scraps or rubber mats to garage walls where doors could brush when opened.

11. Got a wooden garage door that's hard to open? It could be it's not completely painted or sealed and has swollen. An unpainted door can also bind at the edges and offer resistance.

SOME FINAL TIPS

- Mildew anywhere can be washed off with plain vinegar.
● To get rid of garage odors, leave a pie pan of ammonia or strong vinegar on the floor overnight.

● Use old nylon stockings to clean rough-textured walls. (Sponges disintegrate and lodge in hard-to-get-at cracks and crevices.)

● Keep those space-taking trash cans outside the garage. To prevent stray dogs from up-ending, drive two stakes or broom handles into the ground and slip trash-can handles over them.

For additional tips on maintenance of your garage and car, call the National Highway Safety Administration hotline at 1-800-424-9393.

Astrograph

Your Birthday

Sunday, Aug. 23, 1987

In the year ahead, there will be some unexpected but welcome changes in your chosen field of endeavor. Each of these shifting conditions will prove to be for your ultimate benefit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Hunches you get today pertaining to the outcome of events are likely to be rather accurate. Operate along lines you perceive as beneficial to you. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LIBRA (Sept. 22-Oct. 23) If your thoughts tend to focus on a particular friend today, it could be because you're on his or her mind as well. Check it out and see.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A condition that could benefit you either financially or in your career, or perhaps both, has an excellent chance of developing for you today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Seek a creative outlet today. You're apt to be restless and irritable if you aren't involved in something that challenges your imagination.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you are involved in a commercial arrangement today, don't expose all of your cards at one time. Hang onto your aces until you're ready to close.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Should you have a problem making an important decision today, sound it out on a respected friend whose suggestions have been helpful before.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't be hesitant to try new methods and fresh thoughts to solve an old problem today. It can be resolved if you are resourceful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something you have learned recently will be used to your benefit today. It will help improve a relationship that has faltered a bit.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll have some unexpected interruptions in your routines today, but they won't be the type you'll find disturbing. In fact, they will turn out to be fun.

Sexuality

Teen has embarrassing problem

Spontaneous erections can happen in non-sexual situations

By Dr. June Reinisch

The Kinsey Report

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 17. I have an erection every time I take a shower. This is very embarrassing, especially after gym class, when we take showers. Is this a physical or psychological problem? How can I stop this?

DEAR READER: Spontaneous erections (erections without touching the genitals or having sexual thoughts) can occur among men of all ages, but occur most frequently during the teen years and puberty. Even boy babies have erections from time to time, starting from before birth.

This can happen in non-sexual situations, such as being called to the front of a class, and can cause anxiety, embarrassment and guilt. Any type of anxiety or nervousness may trigger an erection, as can non-sexual physical sensations, such as being in warm water in a bath or shower.

During puberty, young men also have many erections due to the increase in adult male hormones, which stimulate sexual feelings, thoughts and fantasies. Some young men feel guilty about these normal sexual responses and fear that there is something wrong with them, especially when they have erections in non-sexual situations.

Attempts to completely repress sexual feelings and to control both sexually related and spontaneous non-sexual erections may cause difficulty with later sexual functioning. It is impossible for most young men to control spontaneous erections; those who try to probably will fail, causing even more guilt, fear and anxiety.

Spontaneous erections usually begin to decline in frequency a few years after puberty, presumably because a man's hormonal levels become more stable and because he has established outlets for his sexual feelings — either from masturbation or from contact with partners. The rate of spontaneous erections after age 20 is usually much lower than it was during adolescence.

There is little that you can do to prevent spontaneous erections. You should know, however, that they are more noticeable to you than they are to other people. They usually will go away within minutes if you can stop worrying about them. The erection may last longer if you become anxious when it appears; the penis will not get soft until the muscles at the base of the penis relax and the extra blood flows back into the bloodstream.

Talking with an older man may help to reassure you that many men had similar experience during their youth. In fact, you can be certain that some of your friends are going through the same experience, although it may be difficult to talk about it with them.

Unfortunately, many young men fear that having an erection around other males, such as when showering after a gym class, means that they are homosexual. This is not the case.

Many men avoid looking directly at another man's genitals (also out of fear that they will be thought to be homosexual), so you may not have noticed that some of your peers also have erections while showering.

It's normal to have erections in such situations, but it's just as normal not to have them. Each young man reacts in his own way to the physical, hormonal and psychological changes of puberty.

Is tall better?

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Is it true that women prefer tall men?

DEAR READER: This may be true to some extent; women do seem to prefer partners who are taller than they are.

When all other physical factors are equal, most women will choose the tallest male among several equal rivals. However, research has shown that when given a choice among all physical factors, most college women would choose handsomeness over tallness in their male partners.

However, these studies did not include non-physical factors, such as personality and intelligence, which have been found to be the most highly valued attributes of a partner.

Shy about sex

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 25 and have a small penis; it's 5 and one-half inches. This is making me shy about making love.

Is there anything that can be done to help me?

DEAR READER: Five and one-half inches is not small at all. In fact, that is an average penis length; about half of all men have somewhat shorter lengths.

If concern about this is making it difficult for you to form relationships that might lead to sexual intimacy, talk with a counselor or therapist. Fears that one's body is not normal are common and can be corrected.

Men are much more concerned about penis size than are women. Research shows that the vast majority of women do not care one way or the other about penis size, but most do care about lovemaking techniques. A counselor could also explain how important adequate foreplay and touching during and after coitus are to a woman's arousal and sexual satisfaction.

Period worries

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I have not had a period for two years. I have told several doctors about this and they have all said that this is common among women who take the Pill (I've taken oral contraceptives for four years with no other side effects).

Is this true or is this dangerous to my health?

DEAR READER: It is true that the newer low-dose hormonal-contraceptive pills can result in either very scanty bleeding or a total absence of bleeding (amenorrhea) during the menstrual phase of the monthly Pill cycle. However, some contraceptive experts recommended that a woman have a medical evaluation if she had regular periods, but then does not menstruate for two to six months.

During puberty, young men also have many erections due to the increase in adult male hormones, which stimulate sexual feelings, thoughts and fantasies.

The first evaluative step is to determine whether a woman has become pregnant. The next step is often to try different formulations of the Pill (for example, one with higher progestin content, to produce more endometrial buildup) to see if menstrual bleeding returns.

If amenorrhea persists, it is then necessary to test for hormonal levels and chronic disorders, such as diabetes. Depending on test results, the next stage of evaluation may be for functioning of the ovaries, hypothalamus and pituitary.

Many different conditions can produce amenorrhea and each requires a specific treatment. For example, some female athletes become amenorrheic; this is often easily reversed by reducing the level of training and by gaining weight.

Once an explanation for the lack of menstruation has been determined, treatment may also depend on a woman's own preferences. For example, a woman may be amenorrheic because she is not releasing eggs and lacks the hormonal messages to build a monthly uterine lining to be shed; she may decide to postpone treatment until she wishes to become pregnant.

If a low level of estrogen is found, then a woman should be evaluated for risks of osteoporosis and should immediately alter her diet and begin to exercise to promote bone mass, regardless of whether she decides to take hormonal supplements.

It's worth finding out why you do not menstruate. Even if no serious health problems are found, you should find out if there are any future fertility or health risks so that you can make informed choices about your life. For example, a woman who plans to start a family at age 30 should know in advance if she may need six to 12 months of hormonal treatment to regularize her cycles before a pregnancy is possible.

An endocrinologist or gynecologist can do such an evaluation, although part of your tests may involve outpatient services at a hospital or clinic that has facilities not available at most physicians' offices. Look for someone who will do a good job of explaining and listening so that you know your options and understand the effects of any decisions you may need to make.

Vaginal odor

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 65 and long past menopause, but have an offensive odor from the vagina. I don't think it is an infection, because there is no discharge, irritation or discomfort, other than an occasional itch. What can I do about this odor? Would douching prevent this?

DEAR READER: Not all vaginal infections have the same symptoms, and infections can be present without discharge, irritation or discomfort.

Make an appointment to see your gynecologist if your next scheduled pelvic examination is more than a month or so away. The physician can determine if infectious organisms are present and whether douching should be part of your treatment.

Many postmenopausal women have an increased risk of vaginal and urinary-tract infections, because their low level of estrogen allows vaginal and genital tissues to atrophy (to shrink and thin).

Ask your physician if this condition is part of your problem. If it is, ask whether your health status permits you to take replacement hormones. Taking estrogen and progestin in a monthly cyclical pattern will reverse atrophy.

Send questions to Dr. Reinisch in care of The Kinsey Report, P.O. Box 48, Bloomington, IN 47402. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest may be discussed in future columns.

Calorie counters

Try gobbling turkey to help fight the fat

By Irene Ruth Wilkenfeld

Make no mistake about it, fat traps are everywhere. Repeated exposure to these hidden hurdles can strain your willpower, cloud your judgment and sabotage the most earnest commitment to diet. So how can you assertively cope with all this temptation? Become a Dindonophile, affectionately known as a turkey lover.

The verdict is unanimous when it comes to the nutritional value of turkey. According to the National Turkey Foundation in Arlington, Va., Americans spend approximately $3 billion annually on turkeys. The largest of our thoroughly domestic birds not only tastes great but is a preferred source of animal protein. Likewise, it is a good supplier of B-vitamins and iron.

Because this nutrient-dense food is mildly flavored and easily digestible, it is likely to appeal to even the fussiest eater. And because it is protein-powered without the sluggish calories and heavy fat content of most red meats, turkey is ideal for the active life — an energy food for sports-minded fitness fans of all ages.

The dieter must be ever vigilant of hidden fat, which comprises 45 percent of our daily caloric intake. A beef steak, for example, may yield more than 44 percent fat. By contrast, a turkey tenderloin supplies less than 4 percent of this dietary culprit.

Because turkey is low in fat, it follows that it is comparably low in calories. You save calories whenever choosing white meat over dark meat and whenever you pass up the skin. Did you know that one ounce of skin has more calories than four ounces of turkey meat? And avoid those self-basted birds, injected with added fat or oil. They cost you an additional 2,400 useless calories per bird!

When roasting your bird, elevate it on a rack. This will make fat drainage and disposal infinitely easier. Treat your bird to a low-cal basting liquid such as turkey broth, chicken broth, soy sauce, champagne, sherry, dry vermouth, brandy, dry white wine, unsweetened apple cider, tomato juice, unsweetened orange or pineapple juice or any combination thereof. (The alcoholic calories evaporate during cooking.)

Herbs and spices should be the backbone of your calorie-conscious kitchen repertoire, because they'll banish the bland out of every dish.

Turkey is safe to eat when it reaches an internal temperature of 160 degrees, but this is too rare for most consumers' tastes. Most of us seem to prefer 170 to 175 degrees for white meat and 175 degrees to 180 degrees for dark. A whole stuffed turkey should be thermometer tested to 185 degrees before cooking is discontinued.

Consider some of the following diversionary tactics to modify behavior:

1. If you have a tendency to nibble and taste in the kitchen, chew sugarless gum while cooking.
2. Physical activity can put the reins in a runaway appetite. Try to arrange for at least a half-hour of exercise before you sit down to eat.
3. Similarly, plan on taking an after-dinner walk after a meal will considerably reduce the impact of the calories you've consumed.
4. Eating too many consecutive bites of the same food can dull your taste buds. So to outsmart this potential for flavor burn-out, which leads to overeating, alternate bites of the different foods on your plate.
5. Color can curb hunger. A passive, bubble-gum shade of pink in a room is thought to work as an appetite suppressant and anti-hypertensive.
6. Become aware of your texture preferences. Do you crave the cold, creamy sensation of ice cream? Would some low-fat, frozen yogurt make a satisfactory substitute? Totally ignoring your taste for texture will predictably leave you feeling unfulfilled an encourage rampant eating.

7. Favorite smells trigger diet-busting cravings, too. The pancreas responds to smell by secreting more insulin, decreasing blood sugar levels and stimulating eating. Some of the universal favorite smells that can spark this false appetite include chocolate, cinnamon, vanilla, peanut butter, popcorn and garlic. What can you do to ward off these sniffable suggestions? Walk past these aromas. Smell sensations are strong but gratefully, have a limited geographic sphere of influence.

8. Conversely, your nose can be a built-in calorie controller. As you sit down to eat, take the time to savor the smells of the meal the way a wine connoisseur enjoys the aroma of her wine. This nose know-how is time-consuming. And the longer you linger, the less likely you are to overeat.

9. Eat slowly. It takes 20 minutes for your stomach to signal your brain that it's satisfied. Use this fact to your advantage. Start by eating the least fattening foods, like vegetables and salads, first. By the time you get to dessert, you'll be less apt to think of seconds.

10. To prevent a passion for post-prandial gorging, put leftovers out of sight immediately after the meal.

11. You may benefit from weighing yourself daily. It's easier to get back on track when you see that you've gained two pounds instead of amassing 20.

12. People often respond to fatigue by eating. They think they will have more energy if they eat more. The appropriate response to fatigue is a nap or exercise, not a fat-packed snack.

13. Indulge in a "dieter's cocktail" before you begin feasting. Unsweetened coffee, tea, grapefruit, lime or lemon juice can stimulate the secretion of CCK, a hormone that tells your brain when you are full.

14. Drink a glass of water before every alcoholic drink.

Alcohol dehydrates you, making you want another drink promptly. The water will quench your thirst and dilute the impact of the alcohol.

Perhaps turkey lovers can help Benjamin Franklin realize one of his dreams — posthumously. He had proposed that the turkey, not the bald eagle, be our national emblem. So Dindonophiles, become Big Bird banner wavers today. ■

Colorful carrots, a perfect blend of nutrition and sweetness

By Shirley E. Sump

Scrumptious carrots? I know you are thinking that the carrot is only an orange vegetable loved by rabbits and quite often disliked by kids.

But, there's a lot more to it. The Irish refer to this common vegetable as "underground honey." And it does contain quite a bit of natural sugar, along with calcium, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and, of course, vitamin A.

Prehistoric man learned early that the roots of wild carrots were edible and it soon became a staple in his diet.

Carrots were cultivated before the Christian era in the Mediterranean region. The Greeks enjoyed them in soups, stews or just cooked as a vegetable. The tamed carrot traveled from this area to Germany and France, then on to England.

Carrots are not a native to America. The English brought seeds of the cultivated plant with them when they came to the New World. It grew so well that it escaped from the gardens and reverted to the wild state. Today the wild carrot is the common weed known as Queen Anne's Lace.

PORK-CARROT STEW

- 1 tablespoon margarine
- 2 pounds ground pork
- 1 pound carrots, pared and cubed
- 4 medium onions, quartered water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon dried parsley leaves
- 1/4 teaspoon allspice

Melt margarine in Dutch oven. Add pork and cook over medium heat until meat is well browned. Drain off excess fat. Add carrots and onions and enough water to cover meat and vegetables.

necessary.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

The carrots add a different texture to this delicious meat loaf. Serve with noodles tossed with cheese, broccoli, sliced tomatoes and butterscotch pie.

CARROT MEAT LOAF

- 2 pounds ground beef
- 2 cups shredded carrots
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 1 small green pepper, chopped
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1/4 cup ketchup
- 1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

Combine ground beef, carrots, onion, green pepper, eggs, ketchup, nutmeg, salt and pepper in large bowl. Mix lightly but thoroughly.

Shape mixture into 10 x 4" loaf in a 9 x 12 x 2" pan. Bake in a 350F oven 1 hour or until done. Let stand 5 minutes before slicing. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

GREEK-STYLE SLOPPY JOES

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
- 1 cup water
- 1 cup diced carrots
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 tablespoon dried onion flakes
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon hamburger buns

Cook ground beef in skillet until browned. Drain off excess fat. Stir in tomato sauce, water, carrots, salt, garlic powder, onion flakes and cinnamon. Cook until mixture comes to a boil.

Makes 6 servings.

Carrots play an important part in this savory aromatic meat dish. Serve with potatoes, buttered lima beans, cucumber salad and angel food cake with strawberries.

AUSTRIAN-STYLE STEAK

- 2 pounds beef round steak, 1" thick

foil. Bake in 350F oven 1 1/2 hours or until meat is tender. Remove meat to serving platter and keep warm.

Pour vegetable mixture into a saucepan. You should have about 4 cups; if not, add extra water.

Combine 2 tablespoons flour with 1/4 cup water, stir to blend. Stir into hot vegetable mixture. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. You can either spoon sauce over meat or use for mashed potatoes.

Makes 6 servings.

Zippy horseradish is the secret flavor ingredient in this hearty salad. Serve with chips, rolls and lime sherbet.

TURKEY-CARROT SALAD

- 2 cups diced cooked turkey
- 2 1/2 cups diced cooked carrots
- 1/4 cup chopped celery
- 1 small onion, minced
- 1 cup frozen peas, thawed
- 1/2 cup chopped dill pickle, well drained
- 1/4 cup salad dressing or mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons prepared horseradish
- 3 tablespoons dill pickle juice
- shredded lettuce

Combine turkey, carrots, celery, onion, peas and pickles in a large bowl.

Blend together salad dressing, horseradish and pickle juice.

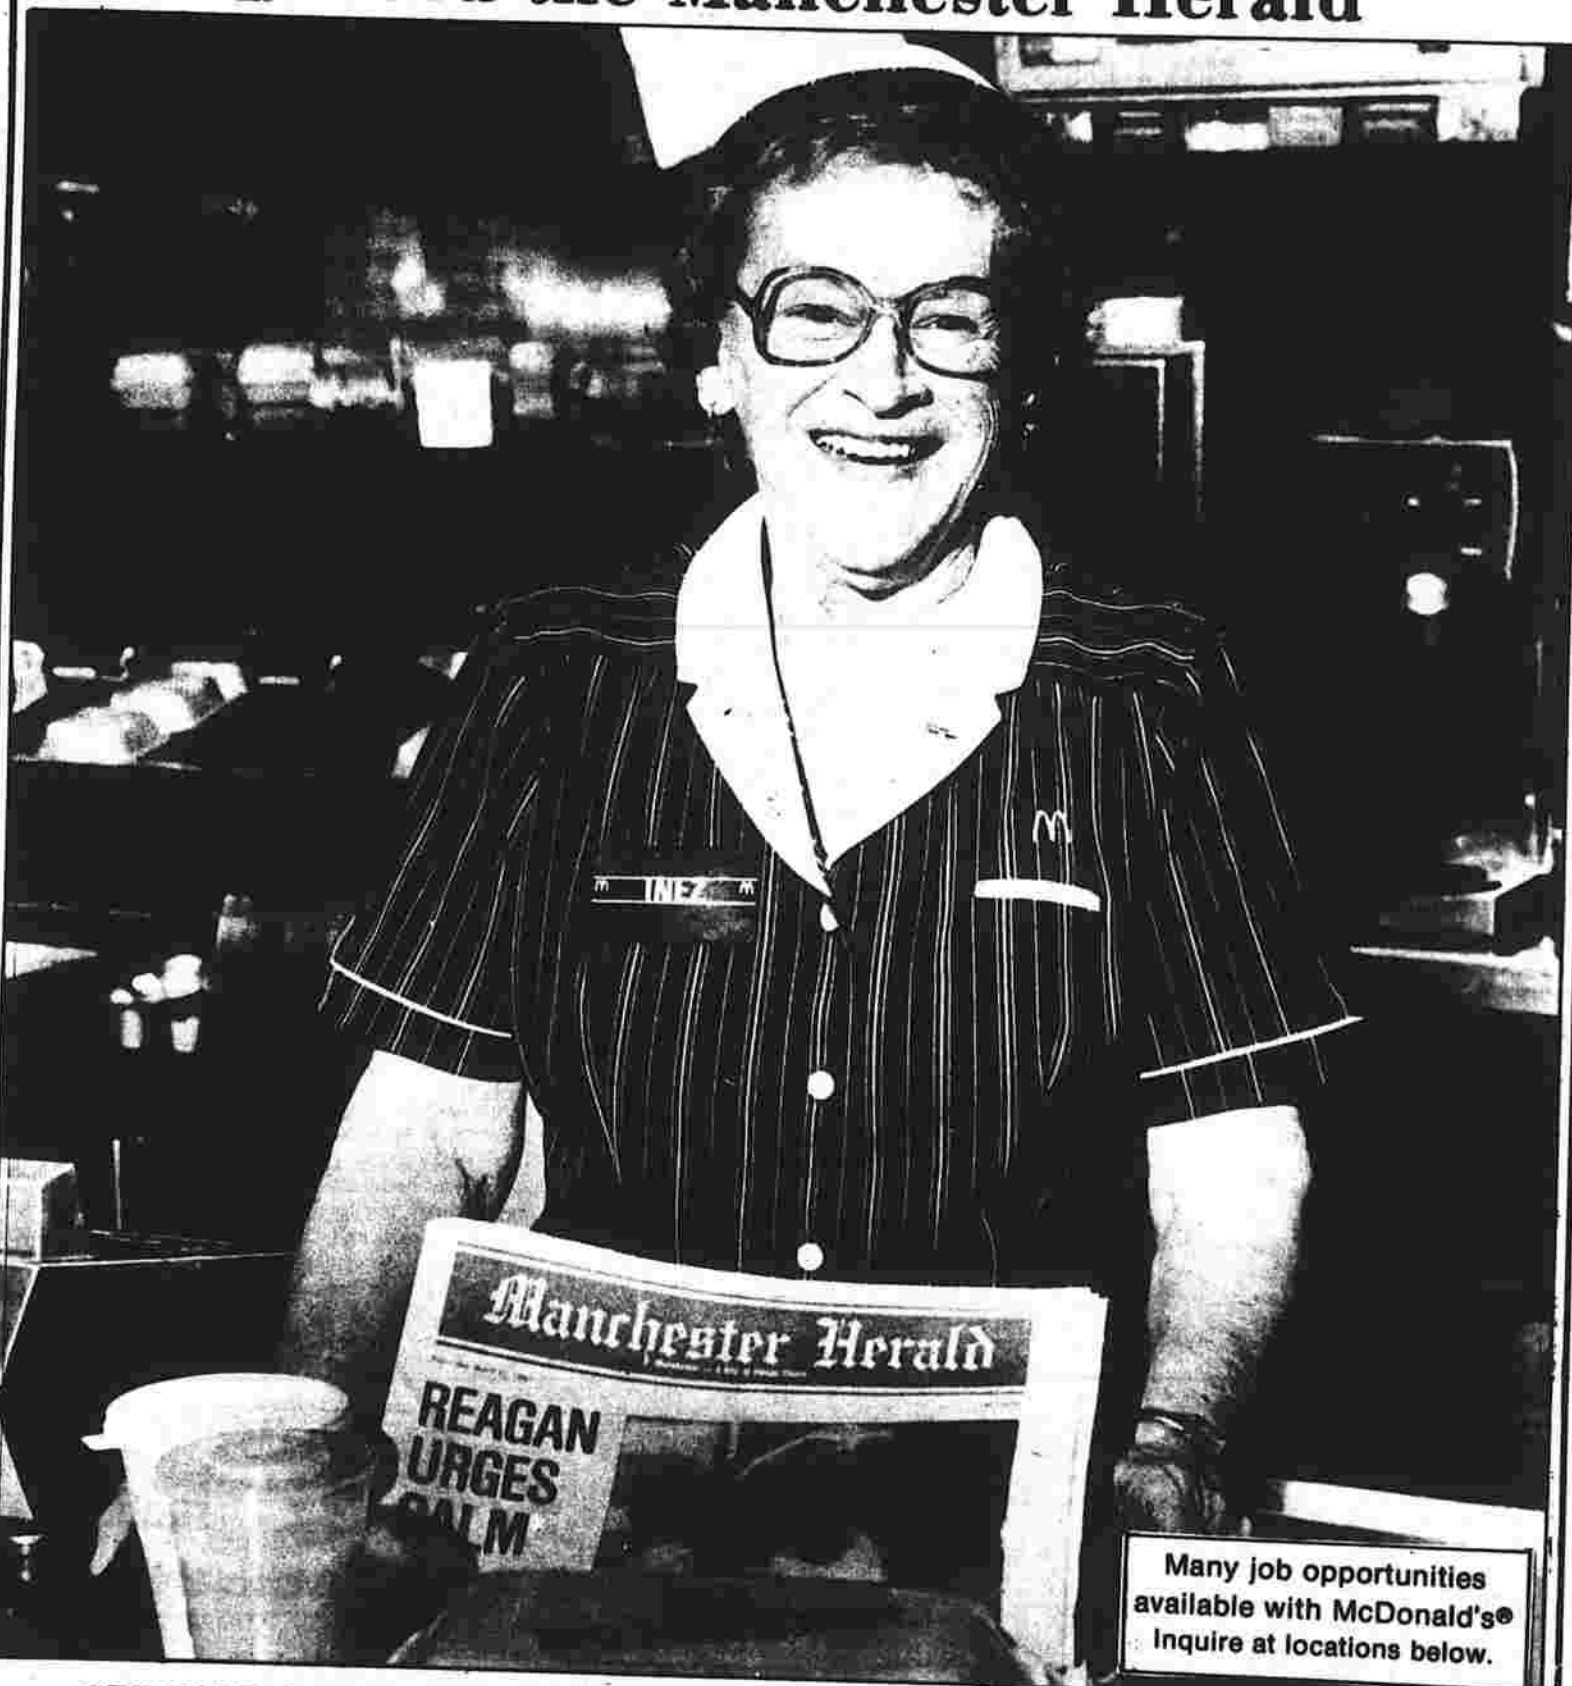

Add to turkey mixture, toss gently. Chill at least 4 hours. To serve, mound salad on shredded lettuce on salad plates.

Makes 6 servings. ■

Who's That Girl (PG) Classic Hollywood genres, like the screwball comedy and film noir, are being reworked a lot these days — but seldom revitalized. The one new screwball comedy that seemed really new was Jonathan Demme's 1986 "Something Wild," in which the romantic and farcical conventions of the genre exploded in a powerful denouement.

On the other hand, the new Madonna vehicle, "Who's That Girl," borrows liberally from the lighter parts of "Something Wild," from the great 1938 Katharine Hepburn/Cary Grant film "Bringing Up Baby" and from dozens of other films. It ends up seemingly only a slavish imitation.

The film makers have erred in trying to transplant intact to the '80s a comedy style and attitudes that made unique sense in '30s America. This should not prevent the picture from appealing to younger members of Madonna's fan club (who are not likely to know or care about screwball comedy conventions to begin with).

Playing a prison parolee who's searching for the person who framed her on a murder rap, Madonna is a sexy scamp with the look of a Marilyn imitator and itty-bitty, squeaky voice. (She sounds like Cindy Lauper aspiring to Judy Holiday.) The performance is charming in very small doses. In the obligatory and complementary strait-laced role, chipmunk-cheeked Griffin Dunne essentially reprises his nonplussed yuppie from "After Hours": Here he's stiff lawyer who's saved from a dull marriage to a stuffy debutante when he gets tangled up in Madonna's life. Grade: ★½

No Way Out (R) The first half of this crackling Washington melodrama has a wonderful sexual bravado. Kevin Costner (star of "The Untouchables") really blooms as a leading man in the role of a naval hero assigned as a liaison between the secretary of defense (Gene Hackman) and the CIA. The heat is generated by Costner's affair with a Washington party girl (played by a gifted beauty named Sean Young, who has some of Jessica Lange's erotic challenge and taunting humor).

Those who know Roger Donaldson's earlier film "Smash Palace" will not be surprised by his effectiveness at putting lovers' passions on the screen; here, Costner and Young have the kind of physical chemistry that makes viewers feel like they're eavesdropping.

The baroque plot, adapted by Robert Garland from the novel "The Big Clock," puts Costner in the center of a deadly scheme to protect the secretary of defense. To tell any more would be to detract from the film noir suggestiveness.

The movie stalls a bit after a trite slam-bang chase sequence. The plot gets screwier, and the setting is eventually confined to the Pentagon. And the trick ending is screwier still. This movie's setup is better than its wrapup, but what a setup! Along the way, you can have fun imagining the Costner character as a liberal Ollie North, or the defense secretary's crisply efficient assistant (played with chilling unctuousness by Will Patton) as a psychotic John Dean. Grade: ★★★

Back to the Beach (PG) What sounded like a blatant attempt to cash in on '80s nostalgia turns out to be featherweight musical fun. Frankie "The Big Kahuna" Avalon and Annette "Squeaky Clean" Funicello have had the good sense to make fun of their former "Beach Party" images, playing themselves as a settle-down Ohio couple badly in need of a surfside vacation — and a reminder of the frivolous good times they used to have. A visit to their daughter on the southern California coast rekindles the old magic.

Former Avalon flame Connie Stevens, looking as yummy as ever, turns up to provoke Annette's jealousy, and Pee Wee Herman swoops in on a surfboard to sing "Surfin' Bird." Throughout, the images have a candied iridescence. Grade: ★★★

(Film grading: ★★★★★ excellent, ★★★ good, ★★ fair, ★ poor)

Judge says Penn got stiff sentence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sean Penn got a much longer jail sentence than many people who commit similar crimes, a judge testified in defending himself against charges that he handled the pugnacious actor with kid gloves.

"I can't see how anyone can say Mr. Penn received preferential treatment when my colleagues typically give 30 days or less jail time for similar crimes," Presiding Municipal Court Judge George Trammell said Thursday at a hearing of the Mono County Board of Supervisors.

Penn was sentenced in June to 60 days behind bars for violating probation earlier this year by punching a movie extra on a film set and reckless driving.

The actor paid $80 a day to serve his term in Mono County's jail in Bridgeport, a small resort town. He was given court permission to break his sentence into segments so he could work on a film and was to return to jail Saturday.

On Aug. 6, the county Board of Supervisors ordered the investigation into allegations that Penn received preferential treatment.

Jillian prepares for papal pageant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress-singer Ann Jillian says she's rehearsing religiously for her role as a headliner at the Sept. 16 pageant that will precede a stadium-sized mass by Pope John Paul II.

"I'm not just a blond actress doing an entertainment event," Jillian said Thursday during a news briefing at the Los Angeles Archdiocese. "I've been a Roman Catholic all my life. I sing at my church every Sunday at 5 p.m. with the rest of the congregation."

Jillian, who starred in the TV series "It's a Living" and "Jennifer Slept Here," will join master of ceremonies Ricardo Montalban and others in the 90-minute extravaganza at Dodger Stadium.

The pageant will not detract from the solemnity of the occasion, said the Rev. Joseph Battaglia, a spokesman for the archdiocese. "They are not using their talent in a glib fashion. They are using their talent in a prayerful way."

Avoiding the pitfalls
By James Jacoby

Here is another deal in which our friend Careful Charlie demonstrates his fine declarer play. But first, a note about the bidding. Although South had a decent five-card heart suit, it would have been dangerous for him to overcall at the two-level. If the opponents had the balance of power and had the heart suit locked up, the penalty could be quite severe. Of course it would be different if the opposing opening bid were one heart and South's K-Q-7-5-3 were in spades. Then a one-spade overcall would be correct.

After North's two-spade cue-bid response to South's takeout double, South was delighted to bid three hearts, which was raised to four.

The opening lead went to dummy's spade ace. Since the bidding marked East with the outstanding key cards, it was easy for Careful Charlie to figure out that the right play in trumps was to lead the jack first. Only East could hold the heart ace, so only East might have all four trumps. East grabbed the ace, cashed a spade and returned a club. Charlie won in dummy and played a low heart. East put in the eight and Charlie won the queen. Now Charlie had to return to dummy to play another heart. Place card-pusher Willy Nilly in that spot and he would surely try another club. Not Charlie! He played the king of diamonds. When East ducked, Charlie played the jack of diamonds. He knew East had the ace of diamonds for his opening, and he knew that when East took the ace he would have to furnish declarer with an entry to dummy to make the final play in the trump suit.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

KEEPING YOUR CAR ALIVE

Peter Bohr

In cars, style isn't everything

By Peter Bohr
Contributing Editor, Road & Track

So you're not a car buff. You don't read automotive magazines each month and you don't have any idea which models are state-of-the-art or state-of-the-artless. When it comes time to buy a new car, you find yourself slightly terrified by the prospect of selecting one car from among the couple of hundred new models currently sold in the United States.

Well, you have plenty of company. Too many people simply wander into a showroom, find a pretty car, and if the car's sticker price doesn't give them a coronary on the spot, they buy it. Certainly styling is important, but if you're going to fork out thousands of dollars it's not a bad idea to consider other aspects of your investment.

For instance, does the car seem to have a reasonably good chance of holding together until you've made your final monthly payment? Will it still feel as comfy after a five-hour trip as it does in the showroom? Will it handle safely and predictably when you're driving on wet roads? Will the trunk accept your matched set of Gucci luggage?

These are important questions, and they're worth a little research. To bring yourself up to speed on the new models, purchase an annual buyer's guide published by one of the automotive magazines. Naturally, I'm partial to Road & Track's "Buyer's Guide '87." It gives brief profiles — with facts, figures and opinions — on 160 new cars and trucks. It's available from Road & Track, P.O. Box 1757, Newport Beach, CA 92663 for $5.95, including postage.

Ask friends, relatives and anyone with a bit of savvy who's bought a new car fairly recently about their experiences. Of course your own experiences with previous cars are relevant. However, keep an open mind. The pace of progress in the auto industry has been dizzying in recent years. So even though your 1972 Ford Pinto was a dud, you may love a 1987 Ford Tempo.

Once you've whittled down your list of possibilities, you're ready for the most important step in your car search, the test drive.

Chances are that a beaming salesman will pounce when you enter the showroom. Hold him at bay for a few minutes while you contemplate the car alone. Look for indications of high-quality construction. Are the gaps between the hood and fenders even? Is the paint truly smooth, or is it thick and crinkly, like orange peel? Pop open the hood and the trunk. Run your hand around the inside edges. You won't find spurs or jagged edges on a well-made car. Is the engine a rat's maze, or do the various components seem accessible for service?

Slide behind the wheel, and make sure the seat gives you support at the small of the back and under the thighs. Don't be put off if the seat feels firm; it will actually be less fatiguing after several hours of driving than one that's too soft. Make sure you can reach all the controls. Look out all the windows and notice if there are any large blind spots that might make lane changes dicey.

The salesman will probably want to ride with you on the test drive. But once again, ask him to can the sales chatter. Concentrate on the car. Try a variety of roads and speeds: some cars ride fine on smooth roads but lose their aplomb on rougher ones. Note the car's noise level with the windows and sunroof open, or if it's a convertible, with the top down, a noisy car is tiring. And if the car has a manual transmission, be sure you're comfortable with both the position and the operation of the gearshift. Front-wheel-drive cars in particular often have balky transmissions that can make manual shifting a chore.

GENUINE PARTS & AUTHORIZED SERVICE GUIDE...

CONSUMER REPORTS

Cars stress performance

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

The Nissan Pulsar NX and the Renault GTA are small, sporty cars that stress performance more than comfort.

The low, lean styling of the Pulsar NX is the product of Nissan's California design center. The Renault GTA — the performance version of the Renault Alliance — is built in American Motors' plant in Wisconsin.

Both the Pulsar NX and the Renault GTA were tested recently by Consumer Reports' auto engineers along with two other sporty cars.

The newly designed Pulsar NX is very sports-carlike, and what you see is not all you get. Remove its T-roof panels and you have a convertible. Remove its rear hatch and you have a from

mini-pickup. (All tools are provided, and instructions in the owner's manual are easy to follow; you do need another person to help you lift and remove the 55-pound hatch.)

The Pulsar NX comes with a 1.6-liter, 16-valve four-cylinder engine as standard equipment. A five-speed manual transmission, power steering and brakes, power outside mirrors, interval wipers, tinted glass, rear-window defroster, tilt steering column and stereo radio are standard, too.

Adding air conditioning raised the price to more than $13,200, including destination charge.

The Pulsar's responsive acceleration lived up to its sporty looks. Its braking was excellent. Fuel economy, at about 28 miles per gallon overall, was respectable for a sporty car.

In routine driving, the car's handling was sure and steady; in emergency tests, its handling was outstanding. The Pulsar's jittery ride was typical of sporty cars. With a full load, the jiggles become disconcertingly sharp jerks.

The front bucket seats are firm and deeply contoured for good support, but a bit too confining for large occupants. The low driver's seat compromises the view over the hood. Access to the rear seat is next to impossible, and the rear seat itself is little more than a place to store cargo.

The Pulsar NX's reliability should be a strong point. Previous Nissan models have been much better than average.

The Renault GTA is basically an Alliance sedan with airdams, spoilers, big tires and wheels, and hot-orange GTA lettering on the exterior. It comes with a two-liter four cylinder with fuel injection — plus five-speed manual transmission, power steering and brakes, aluminum-alloy wheels and performance tires.

Adding air conditioning, tinted glass, fog lamps, rear-window defroster, cruise control, light group, clock and stereo radio with cassette player upped the price to more than $11,100, including destination charge.

The GTA was a disappointing performer. The engine started quickly, but stumbled and sometimes died during warm-up driving.

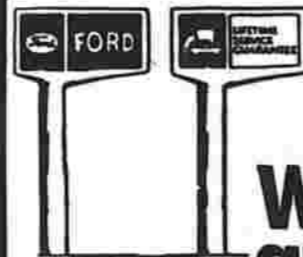

The car idled roughly when hot. At low engine speeds, its acceleration was peppy; less so when the engine was revved up. Expect about 29 mpg overall.

The GTA's ride was harsh, its steering response almost too quick, and its emergency handling tricky. The driving position of the GTA was awkward; the non-adjustable steering wheel is too far away and too high, and the pedals are too close for tall drivers.

Because the GTA is new this model year, no reliability data is yet available. Previous Renault Alliances have had relentlessly poor reliability records over the past four years. Also, with Chrysler's takeover of American Motors, the future of the Alliance — and the GTA — is questionable.

Providence names Chiesa basketball coach

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Gordon Chiesa, an associate basketball coach at Providence College, has replaced Rick Pitino as head coach, the school announced Friday.

Chiesa takes over a program that Pitino turned around in two years and took to the Final Four of the NCAA basketball tournament this year. Pitino resigned last month to become head coach of the NBA's New York Knicks.

Chiesa, 37, is a 1973 graduate of St. Thomas Aquinas College in Sparkill, N.Y., and served as his alma mater's basketball coach and athletic director for five seasons beginning in 1974.

At St. Thomas Aquinas, Chiesa compiled a 93-68 record, including three straight 20-win seasons, and took the team to three NAIA playoffs.

He later served as an assistant at Dartmouth for two years, and became head coach of Manhattan College in 1981. His 1982-83 team at Manhattan turned in the school's first winning season in eight years with a 15-13 record, and Chiesa was named Coach of the Year in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference.

Chiesa joined Pitino's staff in 1985 and is known to favor the same team-oriented, fast-paced style that was his predecessor's trademark. He said Friday he plans no major changes in the program.

Chiesa said he signed a multi-year contract, but would not divulge the amount he will be paid.

The appointment ended several months of turmoil at the small Dominican school that began April 30, when athletic director Lou Lamoriello resigned to become president of the NHL's New Jersey Devils.

Bo on offensive against the NFL

By Harry Atkins
The Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler accused the NFL on Friday of undermining the integrity of pro and college football by agreeing to a supplemental draft for two college players declared ineligible for involvement in players agents scandal.

Schembechler, speaking at the Wolverines' annual media day — heralding the beginning of fall practice — deplored the Aug. 28 draft that would include Ohio State's Chris Carter, ruled ineligible for his senior season because he accepted money from an agent.

It represents the first time the league has agreed to draft players made ineligible because of dealing with agents.

"So what the NFL has done, in essence, is say that anybody in college football who robs, steals, cheats, commits murder, rape or whatever it is, the National Football League will have a supplemental draft so that they can take them into the professional league," Schembechler said. "So they've kind of damaged their integrity a little bit, as well."

"It comes at a bad time," said Schembechler, who is starting his 19th season at Michigan. "College football, as you know, has been under the microscope by administrators the past year or so. I think all of us are trying to do all we can to establish the integrity of college athletics."

"We think it's important. We think academic integrity's important as well."

NFL spokesman Joe Browne called Schembechler's remarks a "cheap shot."

"NCAA rules say a college player becomes a professional when he signs with an agent," Browne said. "That's their rule, not ours."

Browne said the NFL understands that college coaches are "caught in the middle of a very emotional issue." Instead of criticizing the NFL, however, he said the coaches should "speak to the NCAA and get them to change some very unrealistic rules regarding their definition of a professional."

Browne said NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle discussed the problem last month with three prominent college coaches — Joe Paterno of Penn State, Jackie Sherrill of Texas A&M and Tom Osborne of Nebraska.

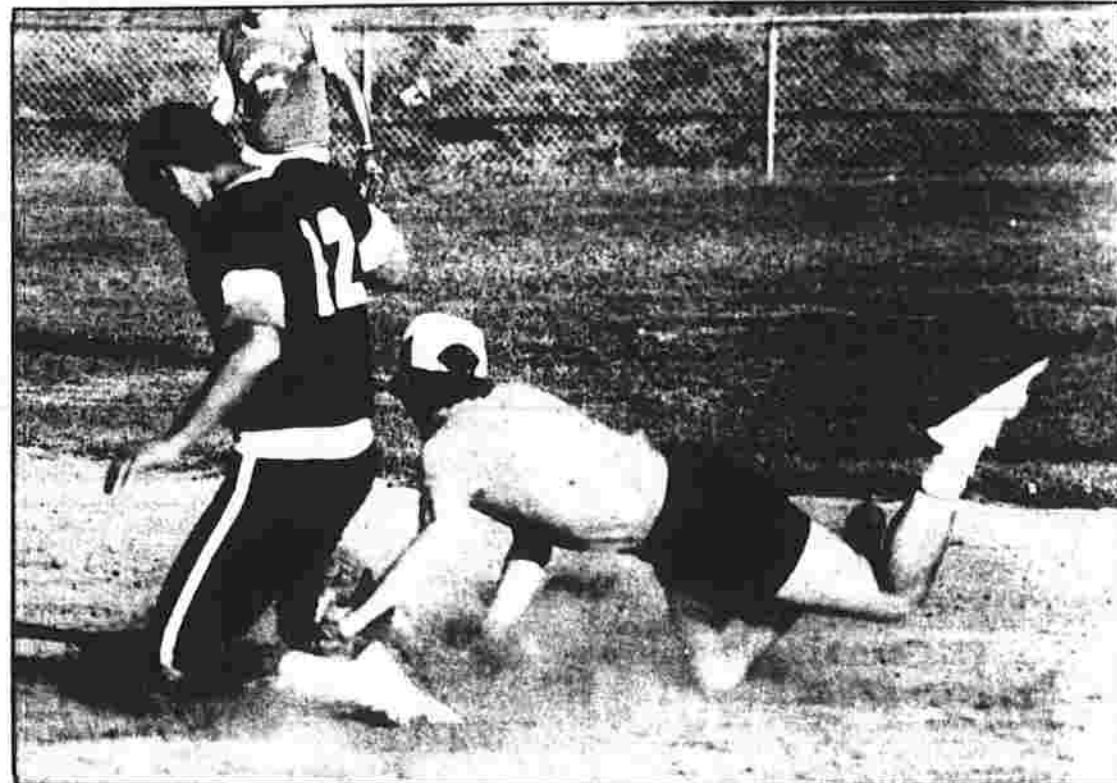

Other coaches have criticized the NFL decision, and on Friday, the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics joined in.

Carter, an All-American wide receiver, petitioned the NFL for admission after admitting to school officials that he had accepted a $5,000 loan from Norby Waters and Lloyd Bloom in May 1986, and subsequently accepting $1,800 more from them.

The draft also will include Pitt running back Charles Gladman, ruled ineligible for refusing to cooperate in an investigation of agents.

Schembechler laid the blame squarely on Rozelle, saying the commissioner doesn't understand the problems the NFL creates for college coaches by taking athletes who have been ruled ineligible.

"The real problem, in my judgment, is that there is no communication between the hierarchy in the NFL and the NCAA and the American Football Coaches Association," Schembechler said. "I would suggest that Pete Rozelle get the hell out of his ivory tower and come down and talk with the coaches and the NCAA and find out what kind of solution we can work out."

Travers matchup the main theme

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
The Associated Press

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. — Alysheba vs. Bet Twice is the main theme of the $1,123,000 Travers Stakes Saturday at Saratoga.

Their rousing rivalry stands at two victories each — Alysheba scored close wins over Bet Twice in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, while Bet Twice easily won the Belmont Stakes, then held off Alysheba by a neck in the 1 1/4-mile Haskell Invitational Handicap Aug. 1 at Monmouth Park.

While attention has been focused on these two colts, another 3-year-old could be the story of the 118th Travers by 6 p.m. Saturday.

The race, which is scheduled to start at 5:48 p.m. EDT and will be televised by ABC, has enough subplots to satisfy any novelist.

— There is Temperate Sil, who would have been one of the Kentucky Derby favorites. He got sick a week before the Derby and missed all three Triple Crown races.

Temperate Sil is trained by 75-year-old Charlie Whittingham and ridden by 56-year-old Bill Shoemaker, who has appeared in four Travers and won three of them.

— There is Fortunate Moment, who was 15-1 in the early line, although he is unbeaten in six starts, all of them this year at Arlington Park.

"He's paid his way, he's earned it," owner Jerry Pinkley said of Fortunate Moment, who won the Grade I American Derby at the Travers distance of 1 1/4-miles in his last start Aug. 1.

"After the American Derby we decided to come here for the big bucks and the prestige," said trainer Harvey Vanier, who won the American Derby and the Travers with Play Fellow in 1983. "I know we have to be lucky, but so do the others."

— There are Java Gold and Polish Navy, who won important Saratoga stakes in their last starts.

Java Gold won the 1 1/4-mile Whitney Handicap Aug. 8 and could join his sire, Key To The Mint, and Alydar, who is Alysheba's sire, as the only winners of both the Whitney and Travers in the same season in 25 years. Polish Navy won the 1 1/4-mile Jim Dandy Aug. 9.

— There are Gulch and Cryptoclearance, both of whom challenged Alysheba and Bet Twice in the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes. Gulch will run as an entry with Gorky, who has not won a stakes.

"It's the best race all year," said Whittingham, a Hall of Fame trainer.

"This is the epitome of racing," said Mack Miller, the Hall of Fame trainer of Java Gold.

Gibbs wants to see improvement

By The Associated Press

Washington Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs doesn't ask for much.

"We'd like to step up a notch from last week and play better on offense, defense and special teams," Gibbs said. "We're looking at improvement by the team as a whole, then at the play of the individuals."

The Redskins are in Madison, Wis., Saturday to play the Green Bay Packers, who are looking for a quarterback, as the second weekend of the exhibition season begins.

Packers Coach Forrest Gregg said he would start 15-day holdout Randy Wright "unless his arm falls off," but also seeing action will be Chuck Fusinus, Don Majkowski and David Woodley.

The Redskins-Packers play at 76,000-seat Camp Randall Stadium, home of the Wisconsin Badgers with whom Wright played from 1981-83.

Saturday's night games have Cincinnati at Detroit, Houston at New Orleans, Cleveland at the New York Giants, Atlanta at Kansas City, the New York Jets at Tampa Bay, Indianapolis at Minnesota, Pittsburgh at Chicago, Seattle at St. Louis, Dallas at San Francisco and Buffalo at the Los Angeles Raiders.

On Sunday, Philadelphia's at New England, and San Diego plays host to the Los Angeles Rams. Miami is at Denver Monday night.

Gibbs said he would start Jay Schroeder at quarterback, followed by Doug Williams and Mark Rypien.

Washington beat Pittsburgh 23-17 in its exhibition opener but will be without linebacker Neil Olkewicz and defensive end Dexter Manley, who are nursing knee injuries.

Gregg plans to get running back Kenneth Davis back in action. Davis missed the opener with a bruised sternum and hasn't even scrimmaged since early in training camp.

NFL Roundup

"I asked him what he thought his limitations are and he said, 'I probably can't carry it 30 times,'" Gregg said.

Bengals at Lions

Cincinnati's No. 1 draft choice, defensive end Jason Buck, remains unsigned, but their next three selections are scheduled to start at Pontiac. They are cornerback Eric Thomas, free safety Leonard Bell and defensive end Skip McClendon. Coach Sam Wyche also said he planned to use starting quarterback Boomer Esiason in the first and fourth quarters.

Lions Coach Darryl Rogers said he planned to start Chuck Long at quarterback and leave him in at least three quarters. "I plan to go with him as long as I feel like it, and I won't change that," Rogers said.

Oilers at Saints

Houston quarterback Warren Moon played only about two series in a 32-20 loss last week to Kansas City, but the Saints expect to see much more of him this week. Moon hit 8-of-12 passes for 165 yards and two touchdowns in his brief appearances.

Browns at Giants

Cleveland defeated St. Louis 31-16 in its exhibition opener, and Browns Coach Marty Schottenheimer is glad to be continuing his club's preseason preparation against tough opponents.

"We're playing the champions and we need that type of challenge. The better the competition, the better you can assess your own players," Schottenheimer said.

The Giants will go without ailing right tackle Karl Nelson on the offensive line. William Roberts will replace him.

Eagles at Patriots

New England quarterback Tony Eason gets his first preseason start. In their loss to the Giants last week, the Pats used Steve Grogan and Tom Ramsey at quarterback, but Coach Raymond Berry said he may let Eason play the entire game.

The Eagles also lost their playoff opener, 13-10 to the New York Jets. "We have a fine group of young football players," Eagles Coach Buddy Ryan said. "The main thing is we just don't have very many experienced hands."

Falcons at Chiefs

First-year Coach Frank Gansz will use this game to pick between Todd Blackledge and Bill Kenney as the starting Kansas City quarterback. Blackledge had the job at the beginning of last year, but lost it seven games into the season. Kenney will start, and Blackledge will play the second half.

Last week, Falcons placekicker Mick Luckhurst returned from back surgery to kick four field goals and help Atlanta beat Buffalo 19-14. Luckhurst missed the last six games of last season.

Jets at Buccaneers

Jets Coach Joe Walton was encouraged by the return of left tackle Jim Sweeney and left guard Ted Banker in last week's victory over Philadelphia. Walton said that he felt the key to his club's success was getting the injured players back and "a contribution from our young people."

Both Sweeney and Banker had off-season shoulder surgery.

Tampa Bay rallied from a 31-10 deficit early in the fourth quarter before losing to Cincinnati by one point, and new Coach Ray Perkins wants to build on that momentum. Buc rookie quarterback Vinny Testaverde threw three touchdown passes in the final six minutes.

Jarryd advances at ATP tourney

By Joe Kay
The Associated Press

MASON, Ohio — Peter Lundgren wasted a 4-1 lead following a second-set rain delay Friday and lost to fellow Swede Anders Jarryd 6-4, 6-4, sending the eighth-seeded Jarryd into the semifinals of the $375,000 Association of Tennis Professionals Championship.

Jarryd will play Saturday against West Germany's Boris Becker, the tournament's third seed. Becker had little trouble advancing Friday against the hobbled Mikael Pernfors of Sweden, who was forced to retire in the second set because of a groin pull and lost 6-3, 2-1.

In another quarterfinal match Friday, second-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden needed just 63 minutes to beat seventh-seeded Brad Gilbert of Piedmont, Calif., 6-1, 6-3. The other quarterfinal Friday night matched Ndaka Odizar of Houston against fourth-seed Jimmy Connors of Sanibel Harbour, Fla.

Lundgren was knocked from the southwest Ohio tournament one day after the biggest upset of his four-year professional career.

Lundgren, ranked 79th in the world, topped defending champion and top seed Mats Wilander in two sets Thursday. He fought Jarryd, the tournament's eighth seed, on near-even terms in the first set Friday, then broke him to roll up a 4-1 lead in the second.

A light sprinkle held up play for 14 minutes, and Lundgren lacked his spark when he returned. Jarryd broke his serve twice, as Lundgren made numerous unforced errors.

Edberg had no trouble with Gilbert, breaking his serve twice to win the first set and easing through the second.

"I got off to a very good start," Edberg said. "I both returned and moved well. I'm very pleased with my game."

Pernfors suffered his groin pull a few weeks ago and aggravated it Thursday, when he tumbled over the net in a singles match and cut his face. The cut required two stitches, and the groin pull prevented him from moving around the court Friday.

"I just wanted to feel if I could play and win (despite the injury). I probably should've quit earlier than I did," Pernfors said.

Becker was disappointed he didn't have a tougher match.

"I wanted to play him because he always gives me a good match; I have to fight for it," Becker said. "I was looking forward to a good match."

Evert an easy winner

TORONTO (AP) — Top-seeded Chris Evert allowed Helen Kelesi only two points in the first three games Friday night, easily beating the Canadian 6-2, 6-0 in the quarterfinals of the Player's Challenge tennis tournament.

Evert now faces No. 3 Pam Shriver of the United States in the semifinals Saturday. Shriver handled No. 6 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina easily 6-2, 6-1.

The other semifinal will have No. 5 Zina Garrison of the United States against No. 8 Bettina Bunge of Monaco.

Garrison avenged a loss last week to Anne Minter by edging the unseeded Australian 6-1, 2-6, 6-4. Bunge defeated No. 9 Barbara Potter of the United States.

Evert, a four-time winner of this event, ran her 17-year-old opponent around the court, causing Kelesi to laugh at the end of the hour-long match about the futility of her effort.

"I don't think I can play any better than I did tonight," said Evert. "I just didn't want her to get into the match. She's tough enough, let alone with a little encouragement from the crowd."

Evert's baseline attack was merciless as she broke in the second game on a drop shot. Kelesi's jitters prevented her from forcing the play on a couple of opportunities early in the match.

After falling behind 3-0, Kelesi found her rhythm and held her next two service games that left Evert in front 4-2.

But Evert started hitting the corners of the court again and Kelesi never won another game in the match.

Shriver, continuing her recent domination of Sabatini, hasn't lost a set to the 17-year-old baseline whiz in the last four matches stretching over two years. Sabatini had won their first two encounters back in 1985.

Graf's reign expected to be a lengthy one

By Rick Warner
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Now that Steffi Graf has moved into the penthouse of women's tennis, one question remains: Does she have a long-term lease?

With a victory over Chris Evert last Sunday in Los Angeles, the 18-year-old West German took over the No. 1 ranking in a sport that Evert and Martina Navratilova have dominated for more than a decade.

Evert and Navratilova are nearing the end of their careers, and Graf has beaten her highest-ranked contemporary, Gabriela Sabatini, 10 times in a row. At this rate, boredom may become her biggest opponent.

"She'll stay No. 1 as long as she wants to," Evert said. "She works hard. She's the best of all the newcomers."

While she's enjoying her penthouse view, Graf knows an eviction notice could arrive at any moment — possibly at the U.S. Open, which begins Sept. 1 at the National Tennis Center in New York.

"In two or three weeks, there can be a change, and I can be No. 2 again," she said. "Who knows? As of now, I am very happy to be where I am."

GRAF HAS LOST ONLY one match this year — to Navratilova in the Wimbledon final — but she didn't replace Martina at the top of the computer rankings until she won the Virginia Slims of Los Angeles tournament.

The last time anyone but Evert or Navratilova was No. 1, Graf was 11 years old.

"I always remember Chris and Martina being No. 1," she said. "It's funny because once, when I was younger, I remember reading that Tracy Austin had won a tournament and she was No. 1 (for two months in 1980). I was really frustrated. I said, 'God, who is coming up now?' I was thinking about the future already, that it was going to be tough later on."

Graf's success is built on a booming forehead, cat-like court coverage and steady determination. "You can see it in her eyes," Evert said. "When she's out on the court, she's in a hurry to win."

THE CAREERS OF OTHER teen-age wonders like Austin and Andrea Jaeger have fizzled after fast starts, but Evert doesn't think that will happen to Graf.

"Every five or ten years, a young player comes along who's really special, really unique," she said. "Steffi is one of those players.... She's obviously a better player than I was at her age, but I can see in her the same intensity, the hunger, the concentration I have had in my career."

Graf will need all those qualities to win the U.S. Open, where Evert and Navratilova have captured nine of the last 12 singles titles. Last year, Graf lost a thrilling three-set match to Navratilova in the semifinals.

"It was the most exciting match I ever played," Graf said. "Every time I won a point, people were going wild. It was a great feeling on the court."

Graf was the underdog then. This year, she enters the Open as the top female player in the world. Will that mean more pressure?

"Actually, it makes it easier for me to play," she said. "I can be more relaxed because I don't have to worry about getting to No. 1."

ANOTHER THING GRAF DOESN'T have to worry about is money. She's earned $718,219 in prize money this year, and passed up an opportunity to make $400,000 more — the amount she was offered to pose nude for the German edition of Penthouse magazine.

For now, Graf is more concerned about lobs than layouts. "Everyone wants to be No. 1," she said. "I want to stay there as long as I can."

Breland says Starling taking him too lightly

By Rick Scopes
The Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — World Boxing Association welterweight champion Mark Breland feels top-ranked contender Marlon Starling is taking him lightly for their title fight Saturday.

But Breland says once the fight starts, Starling will find out just what kind of fighter the 24-year-old champion is.

"My advantage is my height and my reach — and my smarts," Breland said. "He's an experienced fighter. But I think he's underestimating me by a lot of things they've been saying."

Starling said Breland is wrong. "I don't take nobody lightly," the challenger said. "People die in that ring. People get killed. This is a serious sport. You can't take nobody lightly."

Their scheduled 15-round bout in Township Auditorium is Breland's first defense of the title he won earlier this year and the first world title fight in South Carolina. It will be televised by ABC-TV.

BRELAND WAS BORN AND raised in New York but considers Columbia his adopted hometown because his parents live about 60 miles south of the city in Denmark.

Breland, 18-0 with 12 knockouts, figures to use his 6-foot-2 frame and his 77-inch reach to try to keep Starling, who is 5-8 and has a 74-inch reach, from getting inside.

"He's a very awkward fighter," Breland said. "I've fought guys who are very awkward. He has very good defense. He's the most defensive fighter I've seen."

Starling, considered one of the top defensive fighters around, is expected to try to work inside and use his strength and experience to wrest the title from Breland.

"Mark can't show me nothing that I haven't seen," Starling said. "He might start at 6-2, but I guarantee you in the trenches he'll be my size for sure."

Starling, 41-4 as a pro, has more knockouts (25) than Breland has fights. The Hartford, Conn., native is ranked the No. 1 contender in the 147-pound division by all three boxing organizations.

"I've never been off my feet, and I won't go off my feet. I have fought the best," Starling said. "and I'll introduce Breland to the pros. Guaranteed."

Breland, a gold medal winner at the 1984 Olympics, has never gone 15 rounds. Starling has, having lost to Donald Curry for the WBA welterweight crown on Feb. 14, 1984.

STARLING HAS ALSO HAD 14 other bouts that have lasted at least 10 rounds. He won 12 of those 14.

Breland has just two fights go 10 rounds, but he said he is ready for as many rounds as it takes to beat Starling.

Starling's style is nothing if not direct. He comes right at an opponent. Nothing fancy, just effective.

"I like for him to come right at me," Breland said. "I'll use my jab."

"The biggest concern with Starling is he's very good defensively and he's hard to get a good clean shot at," trainer Joe Fariello said. "And the longer he stays in a fight, the more difficult he becomes because of the distance factor."

"We've got to wait until he gets away from that defensive posture of his and starts opening up. Once he does that, then we'll get a shot at him."

Starling's trainer, George Cruz, has declined to discuss strategy.

STARLING WAS IN THE audience when Breland won the title Feb. 6 by knocking out Harold Volbrecht in the seventh round.

"I watched a few films of Mark, but it seems Mark deteriorates every time I watch him," Starling said. "When I first looked at the films, he looked good. I came back the next day, he looked worse."

Starling, who will celebrate his 29th birthday Aug. 29, said he has never felt better for a fight.

"I'm not worried about a lot of things I used to get involved in. I just want to fight," he said. "I used to argue about what kind of trunks I was going to wear, who was being introduced first."

"I don't care. I'll get in the ring first. I'll get in the ring last. I'll go under the ring. It doesn't matter to me."

Giants bolster staff in deal for Reuschel

By Peter Moflone
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Right-hander Rick Reuschel, who came back from shoulder surgery and injuries, was traded from the last-place Pittsburgh Pirates to the contending San Francisco Giants Friday for reliever Jeff Robinson and a minor-league pitcher.

Reuschel, 38, who is 8-6 with a 2.75 ERA, second-best in the National League, figures to help the Giants as they battle the Cincinnati Reds and the Houston Astros for the National League West title.

"Hopefully, he will help us win a lot more games down the stretch," Giants catcher Bob Brenly said. "It will eliminate any doubts that we are serious about winning the division race."

Reuschel has had elbow problems in his last three outings and Pirates General Manager Syd Thrift tried to trade him to the Reds during the Pirates' three-game visit this week, according to The Pittsburgh Press.

Reuschel, who broke in with the Chicago Cubs in 1972, and was traded to the New York Yankees in 1981, started in two World Series games.

But Reuschel's career went into a tailspin in 1982, when he underwent rotator cuff surgery and missed the season. In 1983, he was released by the Yankees and returned to the Cubs' Class A Quad Cities farm club, finally pitching in the majors in September.

In 1984, he suffered two serious shoulder injuries during a 5-5, 5.17 ERA season and was a free agent when he walked into the Pirates' spring training camp in 1985.

Impressing former Manager Chuck Tanner, Reuschel was sent to the Pirates' Class AAA farm club, but he returned to the majors on May 21 and pitched the fourth-lowest ERA in the National League. Last season, he was 9-16 with a 3.96 ERA in 216 innings.

Reuschel said he was grateful to the Pirates for giving him a chance and stated he wanted to finish his career with the team despite its dismal record in the NL East.

"I want to stay here and give something back to this franchise," Reuschel said recently.

"It's really difficult to give up a quality pitcher like Rick Reuschel, who has been a real professional," Thrift said. "He is a winning player." Brenly said Reuschel's acquisition gives the Giants a big boost.

"It's nice to know you can send a pitcher out there who can keep you in the ballgame until the sixth, seventh and eighth innings and give you an opportunity to get your offense going. That's a good feeling — a lot better than the situation we've had in past," Brenly told ABC Radio Sports.

Reuschel leads the league in complete games and is tied for first in shutouts with three. Lifetime, he is 170-161 with a 3.39 ERA in 461 games and is ninth in career wins among active pitchers.

Thrift said the Pirates picked up a "quality reliever" in Robinson, 26, who is 6-8 with a 2.79 ERA and 10 saves in 63 games, fourth-best in the league in games pitched.

"We have outstanding reports on Jeff Robinson and we've been moulding our team with players of his character and personality," Thrift said.

Robinson was the Giants' second pick in the June 1983 draft. He joined the Giants in 1984, going 7-15 with a 4.56 ERA in 34 games as a rookie. He spent the 1985 season in the minors and was recalled in September.

He was converted to a reliever in 1986, going 6-3 with a 3.65 ERA and eight saves in 64 games.

The Pirates also acquired Scott Medvin, 25, who went to Giants in a six-player deal on Oct. 7, 1985. He was originally signed by the Detroit Tigers as a non-drafted free agent in September 1983.

Medvin, who will be assigned to the Pirates' Class AAA farm club at Vancouver, was 7-1 with a 1.72 ERA and four saves in 37 relief appearances with Shreveport in the Class AA Texas League and 0-1 with a 5.14 ERA in 12 games with the Giants' Class AAA Phoenix club.

Clemens gains win for Bosox

AL Roundup

BOSTON (AP) — Roger Clemens scattered six hits and struck out nine before being bailed out of a seventh-inning jam by Wes Gardner Friday night as the Boston Red Sox beat Minnesota 11-3, the Twins' fourth straight loss.

Clemens, 13-7, won for the ninth time in his last 10 decisions. Frank Viola, 14-8, lost for the second time in 10 decisions.

Rookie Mike Greenwell drove in three runs with a triple and two singles as the Red Sox took a 5-0 lead in the fourth inning.

Minnesota scored with two outs in the sixth on a single by Kirby Puckett, a ground-rule double by Kent Hrbek and Gary Gaetti's RBI single.

Clemens left the game in the seventh after two walks loaded the bases with two outs, and Gardner retired Puckett on a grounder to end the inning. Gardner went on to his fifth save of the season and Boston's first since June 30.

Tom Brunansky hit a two-run homer, his 26th, in the Minnesota eighth. Ellis Burks hit a solo home run, his 19th, and Don Baylor and Dwight Evans had RBI singles in the Boston eighth.

Greenwell and Evans hit RBI singles in the first inning. Evans lined another single to start a three-run fourth, and had reached base 10 consecutive times before being called out on strikes in a three-run seventh.

Dave Henderson and Spike Owen hit run-scoring singles and Burks had a sacrifice fly in the fourth.

The Red Sox scored three times in the seventh for an 8-1 lead. One run scored on a wild pitch by Dan Schatzeder and Greenwell hit a two-run triple off Keith Atherton.

Indians 12, Tigers 4

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mel Hall drove in three runs with three hits and Cory Snyder and Andy Allanson hit two-run homers Friday as the Cleveland Indians beat Detroit 12-4 in the first game of a double-header, ending the Tigers' five-game winning streak.

Hall hit a two-run single during a four-run first inning against Dan Petry, 7-6. Allanson homered in the sixth for a 6-1 lead and Snyder hit his 29th home run in the eighth.

Jamie Easterly, 1-0, the second of four Cleveland pitchers, got his first major league victory since Sept. 5, 1985. Don Gordon went 3 1-3 innings of three-hit relief for up his first save.

White Sox 5, Rangers 1

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Greg Walker's two-run double highlighted a four-run sixth inning Friday night and Chicago White Sox beat the Texas Rangers 5-1.

Bill Long, 7-6, gave up eight hits and struck out a career-high nine with only one walk. Rookie Paul Kilgus, 2-5, took the loss.

Hit streak alive

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Paul Molitor extended his hitting streak to 36 games and Len Barker combined with Chuck Crim on a six-hit Friday night as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Kansas City Royals 3-0.

Molitor lined a double to right-center field leading off the fourth inning, giving him the sixth longest streak in major-league history. It was Milwaukee's first hit of the game off Danny Jackson, 6-15, and the crowd of 37,141, which dodged several rain showers throughout the night, stood and applauded for two minutes.

Molitor went 1-for-3 with a walk. He trails Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves, who hit in 37 straight games in 1945, for the fifth longest streak.

Molitor's streak is the longest since Pete Rose hit in 44 straight in 1978. Joe DiMaggio holds the major-league record of 56 straight games in 1941.

Mets lose ground to Cards

Lindeman's seventh homer of the season was almost caught by Reds center fielder Eric Davis, Davis, who has made four over-the-wall catches this season, got a glove on the ball, but lost both the ball and his glove over the left-center field wall. The Reds said that when Davis' glove was retrieved from behind the wall, the ball was in the glove.

The Cardinals scored the eventual winning run in the sixth on Terry Pendleton's double and a run-scoring single by Willie McGee.

Cincinnati closed to 2-1 in the seventh on consecutive doubles by Dave Concepcion and Dave Collins. St. Louis outfielder Vince Coleman did not play. He left for Jacksonville, Fla., before the game because of a death in the family.

Giants 6, Expos 3

MONTREAL (AP) — Jeffrey Leonard hit a three-run homer and pitcher Dave Dravecky had two hits and scored twice as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Montreal Expos 6-3 Friday night.

Dravecky, 7-9, went 5 2-3 innings, allowing 10 hits as he won for the fourth time in six decisions since coming to the Giants on July 4 from San Diego. Don Robinson finished for his 15th save.

Dennis Martinez, 7-2, was tagged for 10 hits in his 6 2-3 innings, and took Montreal's third straight loss.

The Giants took a 3-0 lead on Leonard's home run in the first inning. Robbie Thompson and Mike Aldrete opened the game with consecutive singles, setting the stage for Leonard's towering 440-foot homer, his 17th of the year but his first since July 6.

The Giants added a run in the second on Dave Dravecky's ground-rule double and another double by Thompson. Mitch Webster hit his 11th homer and Andres Galarraga lined an RBI single as Montreal scored twice in the fourth.

San Francisco added two runs in the sixth. Dravecky blooped a two-out single and Thompson was hit by a pitch. Aldrete's single scored Dravecky and Thompson came around to score on the play as left fielder Tim Lincecum throw home hit Dravecky in the back and bounced back to the screen.

Vance Law's RBI single gave the Expos their third run in the sixth.

Braves 5, Pirates 4

ATLANTA (AP) — Dale Murphy hit his 300th career home run and Gerald Perry singled in the winning run in the seventh inning as the Atlanta Braves edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4 Friday night.

Murphy's 34th homer of the year came off starter Brian Fisher in the sixth and gave the Braves a 4-2 lead.

The Pirates pulled into a 4-4 tie in the seventh on Barry Bonds' two-run homer, his 22nd of the year. It was Bonds' fifth homer in his last four games and also scored Junior Ortiz, who had singled.

Perry broke the tie in the seventh with his single over short off John Smiley, 3-4. The hit followed a single by pinch-hitter Albert Hall and a walk to Ken Oberkfell.

The victory went to Zane Smith, 13-7, who allowed seven hits, walked three and fanned three in seven innings. Ed Olwine got the final two outs for his first save.

Ted Simmons singled in two runs and started a double steal that allowed Ken Griffey to swipe home as the Braves took a 3-0 lead in the first inning. Perry started the two-out rally in the first with a single and stole second before walked to load the bases.

Murphy walked. Griffey also

Simmons lined a two-run single to right, sending Griffey to third. Simmons then broke for second and stopped half way, drawing a throw that allowed Griffey to score.

The Pirates cut the lead to 3-2 in the second when Terry Harper walked and scored on Darnell Coles' first homer of the year, a shot over the center field fence.

Phillies 2, Dodgers 1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Milt Thompson's high-bouncing infield single, his fourth hit of the game, scored Ron Roenicke from third base with none out in the bottom of the 11th inning to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 2-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers in the first game of a two-night doubleheader.

Roenicke opened the inning with an infield single off reliever Matt Young, 5-7, and went to third on Juan Samuel's double to right. Thompson then chopped a 1-2 pitch high in front of home plate as Roenicke slid past catcher Mike Scioscia's for the winning run. It was Thompson's ninth game-winning hit of the season and his third in the last three games.

Cubs 7, Astros 5

CHICAGO (AP) — Andre Dawson hit two home runs, giving him the major league lead with 40, as the Chicago Cubs beat Houston 7-5 Friday and ended the Astros' seven-game winning streak.

Dawson drove in three runs and became the first Cubs player to hit 40 homers since Dave Kingman had 48 in 1979. It was the seventh time this season Dawson hit two or more homers in one game and the 25th time in his career.

Lee Smith went two innings for his 30th save.

Molitor enjoying streak

By Rick Gano
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — In the streakiest of seasons for the Milwaukee Brewers, Paul Molitor has revealed in a 13-game winning streak, suffered through a 12-game losing skid and now, more improbably, is aiming at baseball history with a 35-game hitting streak.

"Just like the 13-game winning streak. I want to ride it out as long as I can and just enjoy it," Molitor said earlier when his streak began. "When it ends, it ends."

Two stints on the disabled list and a sore elbow have forced the 30-year-old Molitor to move from third base to designated hitter and focused his abilities on one area — hitting.

And once he became the permanent DH on July 16, Molitor's bat has not been silenced. During the tear he has a .423 batting average (63 of 149) with seven homers, 32 RBI and 38 runs scored.

Only three times during the streak has Molitor had to come up with a hit in his last at-bat to keep it going — the most dramatic coming on Aug. 13 in Baltimore when he hit a two-out homer in the ninth inning.

Molitor's streak is the sixth-longest in major league history, tying Ty Cobb, Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves, who hit in 37 games in 1945, is next in Molitor's sights.

METS LOSE, CARDS WIN

NL Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — John Kruk's two-run homer helped the San Diego Padres defeat the New York Mets 6-2 Friday night.

Rookie Jimmy Jones, 6-4, won his fifth straight decision as he struck out two and walked two before being relieved by Lance McCullers in the seventh inning. The 23-year-old right-hander allowed the Mets' leadoff batters to reach first in six of the seven innings he worked.

McCullers gave up both of the Mets runs in the ninth inning before Mark Davis came on to get the final three outs and post his third save.

Gary Carter led off the Mets' ninth with a single, and Howard Johnson and pinch-hitter Tim Teufel followed with run-scoring doubles, bringing on Davis.

Padres Manager Larry Bowa was ejected from the game in the fifth inning after arguing with home plate umpire Steve Rippley when Ron Darling, the Mets' starter and loser, threw inside to Kruk. Bowa wanted Darling, who had a six-game win streak snapped, charged with a warning for throwing at Kruk in his next at-bat following his home run.

Darling, 10-8, allowed six runs, four of them earned, on nine hits through six innings. He struck out six and walked one.

Tony Gwynn singled with one out in the first inning, stole second and eventually scored on Benito Santiago's single.

Martinez hit a one-out single to center in the third and Kruk followed with his 16th home run to give the Padres a 3-0 lead.

Gwynn and Tim Flannery each had RBI singles in the three-run sixth inning. Wally Backman's error on Stan Jefferson's ground ball accounted for the other run.

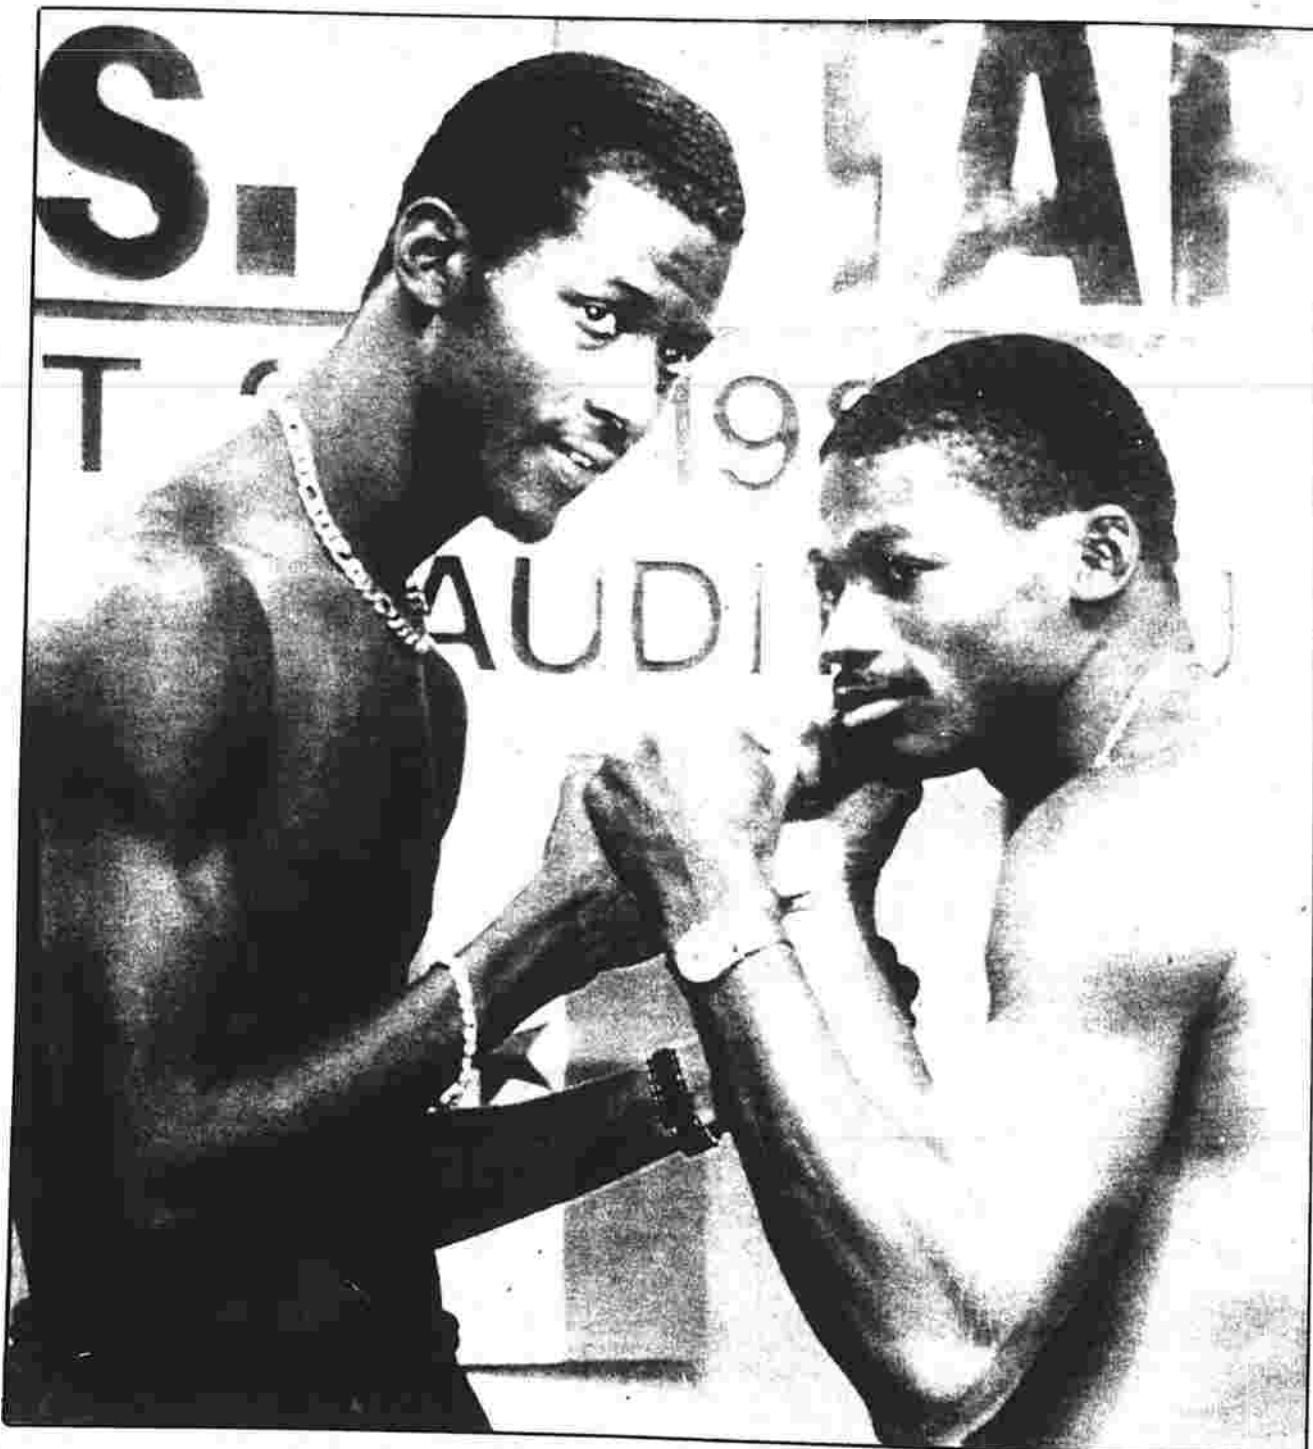

Cardinals 2, Reds 1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jim Lindeman's fifth-inning home run backed a combined six-hitter by John Tudor and Todd Worrell as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Cincinnati Reds 2-1 Friday night.

Tudor, 4-2, pitched 6 2-3 innings for the victory, giving up five hits. Worrell hurled the final 2 1-3 innings for his 20th save.

Guy Hoffman, 8-9, took the loss in the first of a three-game series between the National League's division leaders.
