Dust haze obscures gulf ships

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) - A dust haze settled over the Persian Gulf today, reducing visibility to a half-mile and cloaking a convoy of U.S.-escorted Kuwaiti tankers reported to have entered the waterway, shipping executives said.

Officials of the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co., which operates the tankers sailing under the American flag, have denied reports by shipping sources that a new convoy of three tankers entered the gulf on Monday, including the Bridgeton, a 401,382-ton supertanker that was damaged by a mine on its voyage north through the gulf July 24. It was the second convoy to return from Kuwait loaded with oil under a Reagan administration plan to shield Kuwaiti tankers from Iranian attack.

The shipping executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the inbound three-tanker convoy had passed through the 110-mile-long Strait of Hormuz and was off the United Arab Emirates at nightfall Monday.

The convoy included the 290,085-ton supertanker Middleton, the 81,285-ton Surf City and the 79,999-ton Chesapeake City, they said.

The high winds that frequently whip desert sand and dust over the gulf during the summer months appears to be aiding the convoy effort, a Dubai-based shipping executive said.

"Whether we have a new convoy moving or not, and with the weather as it is, it's all helping the U.S. Navy spread confusion and it's the way it now wants the escort operations to continue," the shipping executive said.

Shipping sources said the three tankers are the last of the 11 scheduled to be refueled with the Stars and Stripes.

In the past Iran has attacked Kuwait's ships, charging that the Emirates aid Iraq, an enemy in the 7-year-old gulf war.

A U.S. destroyer and frigate warned off two small boats Monday after they approached the convoy led by the mine-damaged supertanker Bridgeton, the Pentagon said.

The Pentagon said Navy warships fired flares and sent verbal warnings to the boats, but they did not veer away. When they came within eight miles of the convoy, the destroyer Kidd and frigate Crommelin sailed up to confront them.

"Our staff people have been over there to talk to them, and to remind them to keep their doors locked," Shanley said today.

Residents expressed concern after hearing of the Sunday morning escape of Frederick R. Merrill from the Connecticut Correctional Institution in Somers, Merrill, who was awaiting trial on charges stemming from the beating and sexual assault of a South Windsor woman, has also been questioned in connection with the March murder of 88-year-old Bertha Martin. Martin was strangled in her Mayfair Gardens apartment.

The search for Merrill by state and local police is continuing today in Enfield and Somers, as well as Longmeadow, Mass., which is just north of the two Connecticut towns. Police say Merrill should be considered armed and dangerous.

Shanley said that he contacted the Manchester Police Dept. Monday to ask that they frequently patrol the area around Mayfair Gardens.

Police spokesman Gary Wood said today that officers are patrolling the area around Mayfair Gardens and other elderly housing complexes more often.

Improved lighting recently installed at the complex has made residents more comfortable, rest day to ask that they frequently patrol the area around Mayfair Gardens.

Elderly residents are told to lock doors
By Bruce Morzkin Herald Reporter and the Associated Press
Mayfair Gardens residents have been reminded to take extra safety precautions since the prison escape of a man considered to be a suspect in the murder of a resident at the elderly housing complex in March. Say Carol Shanley, executive director of the Manchester Housing Authority.

"Our staff people have been over there to talk to them, and to remind them to keep their doors locked," Shanley said today.

MCC dean isn't moving up
By Andrew J. Davis Herald Reporter
Their offices are right next to each other on the second floor of the Lowe Building at Manchester Community College. However, only one of them will be occupying the office of the president.

Dr. Luene H. Corwin, dean of administrative affairs at MCC, will continue to occupy office CL-202, the office farthest from the stairwell. She was passed over for the opportunity to move over one office when the college's board of trustees chose Dr. Jonathan M. Daube as MCC's next president.

Daube, president of Berkshire College, said he would not comment on whether she felt slighted by the hiring of Daube.

Other faculty members have publicly stated they thought Corwin deserved to be hired.

"I'm one of the persons who felt we should have had a woman president," Mary Ann Bianchi, director of Women in Transition, an office that helps women returning to college, said last week. "She has done more for this college than anyone else since she came here. She's already a proven leader."

Bianchi said Corwin may have been passed over because she was a woman.

Corwin would not comment.

Reagan tells rebels support will continue
SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) - President Reagan gave a speech on the contra's clandestine radio station assuring the rebels their struggle against Nicaragua's leftist government "is and always will have our support."

Reagan's unusual message, broadcast three days before he is to meet with contra rebels in Los Angeles, was heard in parts of Nicaragua despite the Sandinista government's jamming of the rebels' "Radio Liberation." It was also heard faintly in neighboring Costa Rica.

The 3-minute taped address was scheduled to be broadcast three times Monday night and two times today. Listeners heard Reagan speak in English first, followed by a Spanish translation.

The talk addressed a peace plan signed by five Central American presidents and heard in parts of Nicaragua on Aug. 7. One of the plan's provisions is an end to foreign support for insurgent movements in the region.

Reagan did not reject the accord, but questioned the Sandinistas' commitment to it.

"We will be helping the democratic leaders of Central America and your countrymen inside Nicaragua as they seek a diplomatic solution to the war that has befallen your country," Reagan told his listeners. "But we will remain firm in our policy. Our objective remains the same: peace and democracy in Central America."

"Your struggle has and always will have our support, because our goal is the same," Reagan told his listeners.

The president said that in signing the accord, "The Sandinistas have agreed that the repression must stop at the same time the fighting stops."

"The Sandinistas have told us that before, but no one believed the U.S. proposal won't soften arms demand

GENEVA (AP) - The United States today submitted new proposals at the superpower arms control talks, but a U.S. spokesman rejected reports that the Reagan administration was softening its demands for strict verification measures.

Terry Schroeder, a spokesman for the U.S. arms control delegation, said the U.S. proposals were put forth at a meeting today of negotiators on intermediate-range nuclear forces, headed by American Maynard Giltman and Soviet Gen. Vladimir Medvedev.

Schroeder, reading a prepared statement, said the United States had always maintained that verification measures could be simplified under a so-called double zero option. That means elimination of shorter-range missiles and medium-range missiles worldwide, which have ranges between 300 and 3,000 miles.

"Today we are laying out how this simplification could be achieved," Schroeder said. He said the U.S. proposal "although simplified, will still be the most stringent ever proposed in any U.S.-Soviet negotiations and will include on-site inspections."

However, he declined to provide details of the proposal.

Schroeder said the U.S. delegation "sharply rejected suggestions in U.S. media reports that we are backing off or softening our proposals."

A U.S. official in Washington on Monday told The Associated Press that the new American proposals would soften demands for on-site inspection of nuclear missile facilities, in a move designed to keep Soviet observers out of sensitive areas in the United States. The official demanded anonymity.

U.S.-Soviet negotiators are working to resolve remaining differences before the scheduled meeting of their foreign ministers next month in Washington. One area of difficulty has been agreeing on anti-cheating measures for an eventual accord.

The two sides overcame one hurdle last month when the Soviets agreed to a U.S. suggestion to eliminate all intermediate-range missiles in Europe and Asia. Previously the Soviets had insisted on keeping a force in Asia, and the United States had planned to keep a similar force on its own territory.

The United States had said verification would be simplified if both sides agreed to eliminate the missiles completely. "It is easier to detect cheating if there are no missiles around," said Schroeder.

The Geneva arms control talks, which began in March 1985, also cover negotiations on strategic, or intercontinental, nuclear weapons and on space and defense systems. Attention recently has been focused on the INF talks as the most likely to lead to a quick treaty, especially since the Soviets agreed earlier this year to separate agreement in that area from the other two subjects.

Agreement in the other areas has been blocked by Soviet insistence on strict limitations on the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, which the United States refuses to accept.

In Washington, the U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity said the new U.S. proposals were designed to fence off sensitive American weapons production areas from Soviet observers. The official said the Reagan administration had told negotiators to ease American demands for on-site and surprise inspections of nuclear MIDDLETOWN — The father of a 14-year-old Clinton boy killed when a state police cruiser struck the car in which he was a passenger is suing the state and three troopers who were responding to a call when the accident occurred.

Travelers to begin drug testing

HARTFORD — Travelers Corp. said it will begin testing all prospective employees for evidence of illegal drug use, beginning Sept. 1.

Parents charged with firing at cops

NORWICH — A 13-year-old boy has been arrested for allegedly firing a gun at police officers in a wooded area of the city, Norwich police say.

Left, an unidentified man holds a woman identified as Carleen Edmond as they watch police investigators in Canterbury Monday. Mrs. Edmond's daughters were found dead in the back seat of the family car outside their home Monday morning. Right, one of the bodies is removed from the scene. The two children, age 6 and 3, were found by their father.

Sisters found dead in family car

Authorities await autopsy reports to determine cause of deaths

CANTERBURY — Autopsy reports today were expected to reveal what caused the deaths of two young sisters whose bodies were found in a family car in which they were left to sleep overnight.

An 8-year-old sister who also spent the night in the beat-up old car and an 8-month-old infant girl who was apparently taken inside when the parents arrived home early Monday morning, were hospitalized in good condition, authorities said.

State police declined comment on reasons the parents may have given for leaving their children unguarded in the car overnight as temperatures dipped into the mid-40s.

Sgt. Daniel Lewis, a state police spokesman, said there were "no obvious signs of violence." No charges were filed pending further investigation, state police said.

The children's bodies were taken to the Chief State Medical Examiner's office in Farmington for autopsies.

Leonard and Carleen Edmond arrived home early Monday morning after attending a wake in Norwich with their four children, state police said.

The Edmonds, who live in the 1971 Dodge Dart and went inside their house with their 8-month-old infant daughter, Faye, to spend the night.

Crystal Edmond the 8-year-old, walked into her family home at about 7 a.m. Monday, complaining to her parents about pains and difficulty walking, state police said.

About four hours later, Leonard Edmond checked the car and called an ambulance, state police said. Crystine, 6, and Hope, 3, were pronounced dead at the scene, police said.

Crystal Edmond was listed in good condition at Backus Hospital in Norwich, a hospital spokeswoman reported. Faye, the 8-month-old, also was listed in good condition at the hospital.

The car was sitting outside the Edmonds' small ranch-style home, which lies on a remote dirt road in the rural northeastern Connecticut town. Several other junk cars and toys were strewn over their property.

GOP chief sees boost from Shays

By Judd Everhart

Shays meets with governor

HARTFORD (AP) — After a half-hour meeting between Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill and Republican U.S. Rep-elect Christopher Shays, the governor's spokesman said O'Neill expects to work well with Shays.

Last week, Shays, a state representative, won a special election for the 4th District congressional seat left vacant by the death of Republican Stewart B. McKinney in May.

Jon L. Sandberg, the governor's press secretary, described Monday's meeting as "very friendly, very cordial."

Sandberg said a special election for Shays' legislative seat would likely be held Nov. 3, the date of this year's municipal elections. Shays must first resign that seat.

He will resign effective midnight Sept. 8, according to a spokesman for the state House Republican caucus. He will take the congressional oath of office the next day.

Poliner said he knows of no one considering challenging Weicker for the GOP nomination and said it would be a bad idea. He also said it would be money wasted, recalling that the Weicker-Bush contest cost more than $2 million.

"If we fight this thing out on an intraparty basis, we'll have a weakened party and we'll have used a lot of resources."

"I don't think it makes a lot of sense to challenge the incumbent senator. As a party, I think we do much better, have a much stronger ticket, if we renominate Senator Weicker. We'll also have a presidential candidate to run with, and three of six congressmen."

"We'll be in a much better position to register in the legislature," Poliner said.

Poliner, who became chairman in March, said Shays' victory also makes his job a little more secure.

"It would've been tough had we not won there," he said. "There would've been a lot of pressure. I feel secure."

Poliner was one of a dozen men and women who sought to fill the remainder of Thomas J. D'Amore Jr.'s term in March.

Back-to-school means stay-at-home

Deep River parents say home schooling takes some adjustment

DEEP RIVER (AP) — Back-to-school has a different meaning for three of the eight children of Joanne and John Malcarne — they won't leave home next month to learn reading, writing and arithmetic.

The Malcarne children are among a small minority of Connecticut children who are educated at home. State Department of Education statistics show 159 students were registered during the last school year for home learning in Connecticut.

"It's making learning much more interesting and a part of your life," said Mrs. Malcarne about the effect of home schooling on her children. "You don't get bored out because it's part of your life."

The Malcarnes pulled all of their children out of school seven years ago. Four are now in college and one has returned to high school, where she is ranked in the top 10 of her class.

Mrs. Malcarne says she has learned a lot in the past seven years, and not just about chemistry, algebra and literature.

"It's a philosophy of teaching," she said. "It took me years to understand it. This didn't happen overnight."

because they don't want interference, said some parents interviewed by the New Haven Register.

The National Education Association, a teacher's union, is "somewhat skeptical" of home schooling, said NEA spokesman Howard Carroll.

Home education tends to "narrow a child's perspective," he said. "Through open schools, we learn that life is complex. We learn to deal with problems day to day," he said.

West Haven Schools Superintendent John Onofrio said he has worries about how home-schooled children will accept the array of different views and lifestyles in society.

"A big concern we have is what happens to the child socially," he said. "The youngster at some time has to be an integrated, socially functioning person."

Some parents say their home-schooled children learn to get along with their peers through belonging to clubs and similar activities.

Parents say hostages free in Kenya

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. — The parents of a missionary being held hostage by Sudanese kidnappers said they received word from the State Department today that their daughter has been freed in Kenya.

The bells of First Presbyterian Church, where the family worships, were rung to mark the release of Ms. Taylor, 32, and three other people abducted with her July 7 by members of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army.

Former Nazi leader buried secretly

BERLIN — Relatives of Rudolf Hess said the former deputy Nazi leader was buried secretly to avoid demonstrations by right-wing extremists.

Family members declined to say where or when Hess, 93, was buried or give other details.

Hess, a convicted war criminal who had been in Allied-controlled Spandau prison since 1946, was found unconscious Aug. 17 with an electric cord twisted around his neck. He was taken to a British military hospital and British officials issued a statement Monday saying he had committed suicide by hanging himself.

A statement released by Hess' relatives said they had buried the former Hitler aide secretly "as a result of the recent developments (in Wiesbaden) over which the family has had no influence."

Mediator enters Canada rail strike

TORONTO — The federal government ordered its top mediator to intervene today in a strike by 48,000 railway workers that has stranded commuters and vacationers and halted 30 percent of Canada's freight.

The walkout, which began early Monday, centers on job security.

From grain shipments in the western prairies to Ontario's automobile exports, industries across the country are hurt by the strike, which is costing the railways $15 million a day.

Aide insists Hart will run again

DES MOINES, Iowa — Although several of Gary Hart's former aides have denied it, his former campaign manager said he still believes Hart will re-enter the Democratic presidential race, according to an interview published today.

William Dixon told The Des Moines Register he believes the former Colorado senator will rejoin the campaign after he returns from a vacation in Ireland.

"Obviously, he would first have to make a statement about his intolerable behavior," said Dixon. E. J. O'Shea, Dixon said, Hart would be "torn apart" by the media if he stays back in.

Another former Hart adviser, Bill Shore, told The Register he talked with Hart on the telephone last week and Hart was unequivocal about not returning to the race.

NOW tired of being kicked around

WASHINGTON — The National Organization for Women played a major role in putting together the 1984 Democratic presidential ticket, but NOW leaders say they're tired of being kicked around and will sit out the 1988 White House race unless someone like Rep. Patricia Schroeder runs.

"At a luncheon with reporters Monday, NOW President Molly Yard and outgoing president Eleanor Smeal dismissed virtually the entire Democratic field out of hand. But they said a candidacy by Schroeder, D-Colo., or a bid by someone like her would galvanize their members to campaign and run for delegate slots.

"If we have a candidate like that, we will certainly be very active in presidential politics," Yard said.

"They're receiving real-world socialization," he said.

The parents' reasons for keeping their children home vary — some take the action based on religious belief, or because of conflicts with teachers or because of their conviction that education begins at home.

But several agree that children can learn at their own speed at home.

"When I was a child, I was not taught how to learn," said David Peterson of New Haven. "If I teach my children, that, they can learn anything they want. The sky's the limit."

Lonetree gets 30-year sentence

Defense concedes Marine sergeant made a dumb mistake

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — A military jury sentenced Sgt. Clayton Lonetree to 30 years in prison rather than life, after attorneys for the first Marine accused of spying conceded he made a dumb mistake for revealing secrets to the Soviets.

Lonetree showed little emotion when the jury announced the sentence Monday after four days of deliberations, said defense attorney William Kunstler, who promised to file an appeal.

The eight Marine jurors also ordered a $5,000 fine, a dishonorable discharge with no pay or benefits, and a reduction in rank to the lowest pay scale.

Lonetree, 25, of St. Paul, Minn., would be eligible for parole in 10 years.

Before being sentenced, Lonetree made a brief, unsworn statement in which he told the jurors he would accept whatever penalty they imposed. He refused to say his problems were anyone else's fault.

"I'm not going to blame anybody," Lonetree said softly.

He said he was "a devoted anti-communist."

Lonetree said he was born in Chicago and lived with his Navajo mother, but he started grade school in St. Paul when he lived with his father.

"Every time I do anything, he criticized me," Lonetree said. "The only time he spoke to me, he was drunk."

He was later taken to an orphanage in Farmington, N.M., and spent several years with little contact with his parents.

Kunstler and defense attorney Michael Stuhff had predicted the jurors would impose the maximum life sentence after convicting him of all 13 espionage counts, the most serious alleging he provided the Soviet KGB the names of CIA agents and the floor plans of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and Vienna.

"We weren't far off," Stuhff said. "I think the 30 years is certainly a very substantial, just a substantial sentence."

"I think they wanted to do less than life, but still sock it to him," Kunstler added.

Lonetree was accused of becoming a spy after falling in love with a Soviet translator, Violetta Stann, while he was stationed as a guard at the Moscow embassy.

The prosecution said he was a cold-hearted traitor.

"A message needs to be sent out, a punishment needs to be made, that crimes like this will not be tolerated," said the chief military prosecutor, Marine Maj. David L. Beck.

"This accused has disgraced the uniform he wears."

"This accused traded, like so many pawns, the people he betrayed by putting them on a KGB target list, for reasons of his own lust and his own selfishness," said another prosecutor, Marine Maj. Frank R. Short.

But Stuhff said a life sentence would serve no purpose, and conceded that Lonetree made a big mistake.

"What do you achieve by being unduly harsh on Sergeant Lonetree?" Stuhff asserted.

"I think it's fair to say he screwed up. ... He should have recognized what Violetta was doing should have recognized what she was doing and why she was doing it."

Kunstler said Lonetree showed little emotion when he learned his punishment during the hearing, which was monitored by reporters by closed-circuit television. He had broken into tears once during the month-long court-martial, when testimony convinced him he had been used by his Soviet girlfriend.

"I think he's relieved it's over," Kunstler said. "For the first time, he loosened up a bit."

Lonetree's lawyers, who presented no witnesses during the trial, promised an appeal, saying the military judge, Navy Capt. Phillip F. Roberts, railroaded Lonetree.

The chief spokesman for Quantico, Lt. Col. Bobbi Weinberger, said the judge would not make a statement.

Methodists suspend lesbian minister

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — A lesbian minister who demanded a church trial to test a United Methodist Church ban on homosexual clergy says she is suing the denomination and its members.

"I do not feel guilty. I believe that, in God's eyes, I am not guilty," she said.

"This whole trial is about preserving the patriarchal structure of our society," she said.

Denman, a divorced mother of one child, testified that until a few years ago she was "a right-wing fundamentalist" who vehemently opposed homosexuality.

She said her view changed when she was recovering from surgery and invited a friend, the divorced wife of another United Methodist minister, to move in with her to help with the chores.

"Toward the end of the summer, she took me she loved me," Denman said. "That scared me, and I told her I was straight."

Later, after doing "mental and emotional gymnastics" to deny her homosexuality, she accepted it and took the first of two years leaves in June 1985. Last May, she acknowledged her homosexuality before the church's New Hampshire annual conference.

She testified that she resisted urging to resign from the church before the trial because it would have been "admitting culpability ... I do not feel guilty. I believe that, in God's eyes, I am not guilty."

The trial, held in a meeting room, had the trappings of a courtroom, with Denman and Bashore sitting at tables with their lawyers facing presiding Bishop Neil L. Irons.

The church lawyer and Irons stressed that the focus of the trial was not the role itself, but whether Denman had violated it. Denman's counsel, the Rev. John McDougall, countered that a church trial is different from a secular one and the rule should be debated.

"She comes to us with the claim of a Christian to be heard by her own church," McDougall said.

Burton Throckmorton, a professor at the Bangor (Maine) Theological Seminary, from which Denman graduated in 1981, said prejudice against homosexuals was the real issue.

"It appears to me like a whole lot of Methodist ministers and bishops (are) swarming over Rose Mary Denman because her sexual preference is not that of the majority," he said.

"This whole trial is about preserving the patriarchal structure of our society."

Denman had said she expected to be found in violation of the rule and would register her ministry to the Unitarian Universalist denomination, which accepts homosexuals.

Bishop George Bashore of Boston, who filed the complaint against Denman, said he believed in the church's view that homosexuals are "individuals of sacred worth" and entitled to the church's guidance.

Throughout the trial, Denman, her lover and a group of allies wore small pink triangles, a symbol the Nazis required homosexuals to wear in concentration camps.

Denman has been on leave from her two parishes in Conway, N.H.

OPINION

Don't judge MCC prexy too quickly

Most of the members of the Manchester Community College staff appear very willing to accept the new college president, Dr. Jonathan M. Daube, on his merits as they perceive them, despite the knowledge that he got something of a rebuff last October at Berkshire Community College, where he was president.

They are quite right not to make judgments on the basis of two votes of no confidence cast against Dr. Daube for taking an action that was in accord with the advice of legal counsel for the college board to which he was responsible.

Among the many concerns of a college president, one is the legal protection of the institution that pays his salary.

If Daube, as president of Manchester Community College, ignored legal advice and there was some unfortunate result, he would come in for criticism.

The committee that picked Daube for the post from among 115 applicants checked the circumstances surrounding Daube's suspension of two faculty members at Berkshire Community College and concluded he was justified.

Some MCC faculty members probably have unpleasant memories of a former president who was considered somewhat capricious in his dealings with faculty, but that is not a good reason to get edgy.

Daube deserves to have his new associates at the college assume he is as capable of good leadership as the first impressions he made on them suggest.

The healthiest sign of a good start is that Dr. Luene H. Corwin, dean of academic affairs at the college and one of those who was passed up in favor of Daube, is ready to work with him for the betterment of the college.

So is Mary Ann Bianchi, a college staff member who was a champion of Dr. Corwin.

Others should follow their example.

No answers yet on bond question

The truth of the matter is that if the $13,000,000 bond which has been estimated to run $24 million to $27 million to cover principal and interest over 10 years is an accurate statement published and confirmed to me in writing, then this equals an average payback of $2.4 million per year to cover the $13 million bond.

Since one mill in 1987-88 is estimated to generate $783,901, then $2.4 million divided by $783,901 equals approximately 3.25 mills per year which the taxpayers of Manchester will be contributing toward the mall if the bond is approved.

If the mall was paying its share of taxes and to the General Fund, then we could anticipate our taxes to be 3.25 mills less per year over the 10-year period. It's as simple as that.

Now, Mr. Tedford, please show the senior citizens how this project will help them.

'Game' is wrong for Business II

I cannot accept as final the opinion of Tom O'Marra that the proposed Laserset amusement center is a permitted use in a Business II zone. Laserset is the first interactive amusement game proposed for our town. It is a game that requires "players" communicate with "targets" via infrared beams and the "jets" respond with the intent to immobilize each other in a contest of reaction time and skill. There can be no doubt that zoning regulation II, 11.01.04, expressly excludes "carnous, shooting galleries, freck shows and similar amusement devices." Laserset is not a permitted use in a Business II zone.

Business II zones are intended to provide services to local neighborhoods. I.e., a market area of 2 to 3 miles, a market area of 3 to 4 miles, a market area of 4 to 5 miles, etc. Laserset promoters have stated this business venture demands a 20- to 30-mile, probably 50-mile, market base.

Drugs, money and offer for frequent fliers

WASHINGTON — In a drug company running its own "frequent flier program" to reward doctors who prescribe its hypertension medication? One irate physician thinks it is, and the company's marketing tactic has aroused concern on Capitol Hill.

Referring to the free airline tickets and other gifts offered to physicians who prescribe the drug and answer a questionnaire on Ayerst Laboratories' drug Inderal LA, Dr. John Graves wrote: "I am very concerned about this form of marketing in medicine as I feel it creates a clear conflict of interest for the physician in their prescribing habits. The marketing ploy, he told us, 'gives the appearance of impropriety.'"

The company denied that its gift program was a marketing device. Ayerst spokesman Joseph M. Mahady said the program is a "research tool," designed to help the company develop a "patient profile." Participating doctors are asked to fill out a seven-question survey form classifying the patients for whom they prescribe Inderal LA, according to age, sex, race, dosage and other medications.

According to Graves, an assistant professor at Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, N.C., an Ayerst representative told him that doctors who submit questionnaires on 50 Inderal LA patients are given a free airline ticket. "Anywhere in the United States, he said he was told there are other, more valuable prizes for filling out up to 200 survey forms.

Graves first raised his objections to the Ayerst free-gift program in a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine. Noting that the market for hypertension medication is clearly a competitive one, and aggressive promotion can be expected, Graves said he thought Ayerst's technique reflected "questionable ethical standards."

The company spokesman implied that the free gifts were needed as an inducement for doctors to fill out the survey questionnaires. "Completion of survey forms and processing of paperwork is required of participating physicians," he wrote, "and professional honoraria commensurate with these efforts are offered."

Selections include diagnostic equipment, medical textbooks, or air travel to attend medical meetings. The program is designed to enable physicians to attend the meeting of their selection rather than the meeting of the drug company. The honorarium is modest when one considers it is offered in return for a full year of program participation and the completion of survey forms on at least 50 patients.

The company's written statement did not say whether it monitored the physicians' choice of airline tickets to make sure they were used to attend medical meetings. The company spokesman declined to comment beyond the written statement.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., told our reporter Gary Clouser he is concerned over such marketing practices, and suggested that they are linked to the drug companies' campaign to promote their profitable brand-name prescriptions over generic drugs.

The incentives offered to doctors to prescribe certain drugs "cloud their judgment," Waxman said. He also pointed out that the cost of the gifts to physicians is ultimately passed on to the drug company's customers. Waxman is chairman of the House subcommittee on health and the environment.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, chairman of the antitrust and business subcommittee, said: "I am aware of numerous objections raised in connection with the marketing practices of some firms who are experiencing generic competition. These include charges of unfair and anti-competitive behavior."

Ken Feather, acting director of the Food and Drug Administration's division of drug advertising and labeling, said his office has reviewed Inderal LA promotional material and found nothing that violates FDA regulations. The ethical issue is not within FDA's purview, he said.

Crash probe turns to report that alarms were disconnected

DETROIT (AP) — An injured, orphaned little girl's cry of "That's my doll!" brought a glimmer of joy to the aftermath of the nation's second-worst air disaster, as investigators tried to determine if a cockpit alarm system had been disconnected.

The alarm aboard Flight 255 sounded when the crew shut down one engine to conserve fuel while taxiing after the plane arrived in Detroit from Saginaw, WJBK-TV quoted an unidentified investigator as saying. The crew disabled the alarm system, which also monitors the wing flaps, by disconnecting a circuit breaker, the station reported.

The circuit breaker was pulled," the investigator told WJBK. "We know that for a fact." "Nothing has been said by the NTSB about the circuit breaker being pulled or not pulled," Anderson reiterated Monday.

'Scopes II' heads for top court

Tennessee suit targets 'godless' books like 'The Wizard of Oz'

By Bill Rowlands
The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Seven families whose award of more than $50,000 was overturned in a suit dubbed "Scopes II" pleads with the U.S. Supreme Court battle to shield their children from "godless" books like "The Wizard of Oz."

"We didn't start it to lose," said Robert L. Mozart, one of the fundamentalist Christian parents whose lawsuit was rejected Monday by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. "A temporary delay will not spoil the victory in the end."

The appeals court reversed a decision by U.S. District Judge Thomas G. Hull, who ruled last October that the Hawkins County school board violated the families' rights by ignoring their religious beliefs and requiring their children to read the assigned texts or leave public school.

Hull, who heard the case in Greenville, awarded the families damages of more than $50,000. He also ruled that children could be taught reading at home and go to

Reagan pushing adoption

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan is being billed as part of his anti-abortion drive, is calling for a task force report before Thanksgiving on ways to help American couples adopt children.

"Americans are a warm-hearted, caring people, and for years, American couples have reached out to embrace children who otherwise would grow up without a stable family life," Reagan said Monday in establishing the interagency task force. "We must expand and broaden our efforts to make sure that America's family-less children are adopted," the president said in a statement issued in Santa Barbara as he vacationed at his nearby ranch. "We must do all we can to remove obstacles that prevent qualified adoptive parents from accepting these children into their home."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, asked whether a task force is part of Reagan's campaign against abortion, replied that "it's fair to say that is in that area."

An abortion rights leader said the approach being taken by the president could lead to intimidation of pregnant women seeking to cope with unplanned pregnancies. Kate Sletten, executive director of the national Abortion Rights Action League, said the government should not be spending money, time and energy promoting one reproductive option over another.

"Adoption is a viable and important option for women facing an unplanned pregnancy, but it is only one," she said. "Women should not be intimidated or pressured into adoption or abortion or foster care or any of the options. They have to be supported to come to the decision that is best for them and their family."

Early this month, speaking to anti-abortion activists in Washington, Reagan announced a series of regulations denying use of federal dollars for abortion counseling and referrals services by about 4,500 family planning centers. At the same time he pledged that he would take other steps to aid the anti-abortion cause.

"It is true that adoption is an alternative to abortion, and one that we would like to help and make sure that there aren't rules and laws and regulations which are hindering the adoption process," Fitzwater said.

Reagan is himself an adoptive father. He and his first wife, actress Jane Wyman, adopted a son, Michael.

Fitzwater said the task force is being asked to report by Nov. 22 on ways to overcome "barriers to adoption."

"Up until now, the federal government has not really taken a good and comprehensive look at this problem," he said.

"What a shame! But the Miami Dolphins are having their problems, too!"

Dishonor on the federal bench in Biloxi

BILOXI, Miss. — Judge Walter L. Nixon Jr. still regularly uses the somber, wood-paneled chambers reserved for the chief judge of the U.S. District Court in the squat federal building here on Mississippi's Gulf Coast.

But Nixon no longer presides over any litigation. Indeed, he has been on an indefinite self-imposed leave of absence from his official duties since a federal grand jury indicted him two years ago on bribery and perjury charges.

Until late 1981, no sitting federal judge had never been indicted in this country. Since then, however, three have been formally accused of engaging in criminal activities. Two have been convicted.

Are those recent developments evidence of unprecedented corruption within the federal judiciary, a branch of government long renowned for its probity and integrity?

Probably not. Since federal judges are fallible mortals, it's likely that some of them have always succumbed to illegal temptations but have been insulated from prosecution because of their special status.

Thus, the recent spate of indictments and trials could well indicate a salutary shift away from the traditional belief that federal judges somehow are above the law.

The first of the three indicted — and the only one acquitted — was Judge Alice L. Hastings of Miami, found innocent after a 1983 trial on charges of obstruction of justice and conspiring to solicit a bribe.

Robert Walters

Despite that acquittal, the Judicial Conference of the United States, a panel of 27 appellate judges charged with setting policy for the federal judiciary, has recommended to Congress that "consideration of impeachment may be warranted." An impeachment resolution was introduced in the House five months ago but the Judiciary Committee has shown no inclination to act upon it.

Judge Harry E. Claiborne of Las Vegas was convicted in 1984 of attempting to evade federal taxes by failing to report approximately $100,000 in income. He was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $10,000.

Because Claiborne refused to relinquish his judgeship and salary, Congress last year was forced to take the extraordinary step of impeaching him.

When Nixon was indicted in 1985, the accusations tarnished the reputation of a prominent political family with a tradition of public service. Nixon's father was a longtime county commissioner here.

When local residents discuss the case, the one word they repeatedly use is "tragedy." Nixon's critics say it's a tragedy that he brought shame to the community and the judiciary, while his defenders say it's a tragedy that a brilliant legal career has been truncated by specious allegations.

Nixon was accused of accepting royalty interests in three oil and gas wells in 1981 from Wiley Fairchild, a wealthy Hattiesburg, Miss., businessman. In return, Nixon allegedly promised to aid Fairchild if his help was ever needed. Nixon paid Fairchild $9,500 for the well leases but they produced more than $80,000 in income.

According to the government, Nixon had an opportunity to return the favor in 1982 when Fairchild's son, Drew, was accused of participating in a drug-smuggling conspiracy at the Hattiesburg airport. Although state rather than federal charges were involved, Nixon was accused of interceding with the prosecutor in the case on behalf of Drew Fairchild.

Last year, Nixon was acquitted of the bribery charge and one perjury count — but he was convicted on two other charges of lying to a grand jury, then sentenced to five years in prison.

That conviction was upheld four months ago by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit. If subsequent appeals fail and Nixon persists in holding onto his lifetime appointment and $81,000 annual salary, he also could face impeachment proceedings.

Compounded errors

By James Jacoby

When West had made a pre-emptive bid of four spades, he committed a bridge sin. When the opponents bid five diamonds, he bid again. Not only did he ignore the fact that he had a partner, but he also gave the opposition more bidding room. North could now pass five spades, saying to partner, "If you have a fairly good hand, we might even have a slam." So South did bid six clubs, corrected to diamonds by North. It certainly seems OK for East to double that contract, but that too was questionable, since it provided declarer with the information he needed in order to bring in a touch-and-go contract. Here's how.

After winning dummy's spade ace, declarer took a club finesse. Then he led the 10 of diamonds from dummy, following the Battle of the Plains of Abraham.

DEAR POLLY - In the event of a power failure, how long will my freezer full of food stay safely frozen? - G.C.V.

DEAR G.C.V. - If your freezer is fully packed, it should remain cold, and the food should stay frozen, for about two days. A half-loaded freezer will stay cold for only one day. If your freezer is not full and you anticipate a power outage of more than a day, you can place dry ice (handle with extreme caution) in the freezer, which will help to keep the food frozen for an extra day or two. The dry ice can be replenished as needed. - POLLY

Oil prices tumble, then recover

NEW YORK (AP) - The oil futures market hasn't lost a drop of volatility as prices fell to their lowest level since spring.

After tumbling early in response to reports of overproduction by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, prices rebounded later in the session Monday following reports of a minor incident in the Persian Gulf.

Overall, prices settled lower. At the end of trading on New York Mercantile Exchange, October contracts for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark crude, stood at $18.80 per 42-gallon barrel, down 30 cents from Friday when the contract broke below $19 for the first time since May.

Prices for refined products also finished lower. September contracts for wholesale unleaded gasoline closed at 49.17 cents per gallon, down slightly more than half a cent from Friday, while wholesale heating oil contracts for September dipped to 49 cents per gallon, down about 0.8 cent.

Analysts said the market's mercurial move indicated traders may be looking for a floor after more than a week of heavy losses.

As the session opened, analysts said traders were shaken by the report estimating current OPEC output at about 18.7 million barrels a day, or more than 3 million barrels above its official daily quota of 16.6 million barrels.

The Middle East Economic Survey, a respected weekly published in Nicosia, Cyprus, also said several OPEC members had officially complained to the president of the 13-member organization that other members had been cheating on their quotas.

The OPEC president, Nigerian Oil Minister Rilwanu Lukman, has ruled out an emergency conference to discuss falling oil prices, said an official in his office who spoke on condition of anonymity.

After dropping to $18.15 a barrel Monday, buying picked up on word that U.S. Navy ships had encountered an Iranian warship in the Persian Gulf, said Stephen J. McKiernan, of the McKiernan & Co. commodities firm.

Traders increased buying in expectation that a serious confrontation could lead to reduced oil shipments, which would drive prices higher.

While oil prices rebounded, the assault carrier Guadalupe said there was no overt threat by the Iranian vessel, the market's reaction reflected the view that the worst may be over in the market's latest slide.

"A lot of people are coming in, putting different buy levels as the market moves lower. They don't want to get caught missing the bottom," McKiernan said.

Monday's overall loss followed a week-long decline that saw near-term crude dropping below $20 a barrel on Aug. 17, then to $18.90 Friday for a five-day loss of $1.87 a barrel.

Since July 17, when it hit its most recent peak of $22.39 per barrel, the contract has lost $3.70 per barrel.

Federal Reserve Banks differ on policy for interest coupons

QUESTION: I have a number of U.S. Treasury notes and bonds in my bank account. The form, with semi-annual interest coupons attached, will not accept an interest coupon before its due date and hold it for deposit on the due date. When I am out of town on an interest date, I lose the interest until I return and can present the coupon to the bank.

What can I do about this?

ANSWER: The quick and easy solution to your problem is to change banks. Find one that's more accommodating and take your business there.

When you present a Treasury note or bond interest coupon to your bank, that bank sends the coupon to the Federal Reserve Bank serving your area. The Fed redeems the coupon on its due date and sends the money to your bank.

There are 12 district Federal Reserve Banks and things vary a bit from one to another. Some accept Treasury note and bond interest coupons for up to 10 days before the due dates; others for 10 days prior to the due dates.

Local banks, of course, can set their own policies. Since the bank with which you now do business won't accept your Treasury note and bond interest coupons and send them in for redemption in advance of the due dates, check other banks in your area.

You're certain to find a bank anxious to land your business and willing to handle the redemption of your interest coupons as you want.

No U.S. Treasury notes and bonds have been issued in bearer form since 1982. And, beginning in August 1986, new Treasury note and bond issues have come only in "book-entry" form - recorded on computers - in the new Treasury Direct program. Certificates for both bearer and registered bonds are becoming things of the past.

QUESTION: I would like to turn in my U.S. Treasury bearer notes and bonds to the district Federal Reserve Bank, so that my notes and bonds are in the Treasury Direct program and interest is automatically deposited in my bank account. Can that be done?

ANSWER: Not yet. The U.S. Treasury Department is working up a plan through which holders of Treasury note and bond certificates - in both bearer and registered form - will be able to surrender those certificates and participate in

Business In Brief
Interest rates up slightly on T-bills

WASHINGTON - Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities inched up in the latest auction, with rates on both three-month and six-month bills rising.

The Treasury Department on Monday sold $6.6 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 6.12 percent, up from 5.97 percent last week. Another $6.6 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 6.16 percent, up from 6.12 percent last week.

The rates on the three-month bills were the highest since July 30, when they sold for 6.14 percent. The rates on the six-month bills were the highest since July 31, when they sold for 6.18 percent.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors - 6.32 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,843.60 and 6.46 percent for six-month bills selling for $9,688.60.

In a separate report Monday, the Federal Reserve said the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable rate home mortgages, rose to 7.01 percent last week after averaging 6.93 percent the week before.

UPS to take over its air fleet

GREENWICH - United Parcel Service has announced it will assume direct control and responsibility for flight operations and maintenance of its jet aircraft.

At present, other airlines operate UPS aircraft, the world's largest all cargo fleet.

Richard Oehme, UPS Vice President of Air Operations, said in a prepared statement Monday that the rapid growth of the delivery company demands a level of control and flexibility that can only be achieved by assuming direct control over the fleet.

UPS officials said they have devised a transition plan that would allow the company to continue uninterrupted service while integrating aircraft into UPS operations over the next 15 months. UPS expects to be operating all its planes by November 1988, officials said.

Boeing wins Stinger contract

WASHINGTON - Boeing Co. outbid LTV Corp. and won an Army contract to produce a new truck-mounted version of the Stinger missile to help defend soldiers and tanks from aerial attack.

The Army announced Monday that it had awarded an initial contract to Boeing totaling $14.2 million for the first 20 pedestal-mounted Stinger units. That is the first installment on an $189.76 million contract for 273 units.

The Stinger units will be built atop small, four-wheel-drive Army trucks. Each truck will carry a moveable "pedestal" in its cargo bed with eight Stingers in launch position, plus a .50-caliber machine gun.

UPS ultimately would like to acquire up to 1,200 of the new systems.

Indians pray to rain god

MEHSANA, India (AP) — When evil dominates the land, a Hindu legend says, the god-king Indra blurs the vision of the rain god Varun, and sinners are punished with nine afflictions. The first is drought.

In an India where faith and superstition often supersede logic, many believe this is what is happening today, as more than 250 million of the nation's 780 million people suffer from the century's worst drought.

Families are hungry and migrating. Cattle and sacred cows, thirsty and unfed, are being released with prayers into deserts of certain death. There isn't enough water for both man and beast.

The life-sustaining rains of the monsoon, poor in recent years, failed completely this year. The subcontinent that became a model for the "Green Revolution," with granaries overflowing, is suddenly brown and dry.

At least 14 of India's 25 states are affected by drought. Every day newspapers report drought-related deaths — some from hunger and malnutrition, some from contaminated water, some from eating poisonous roots.

Even New Delhi, home of 6 million, is thirsty. Drinking water is rationed in many neighborhoods of the capital.

Against a daily demand of 572,000 gallons of milk, the supply has fallen to half. Dairy farmers from nearby states, lacking fodder for their cows, cannot maintain the supply.

Electricity also is being rationed in New Delhi, to divert power for irrigation.

"It is hell. I have money to buy milk for my kids, but I just can't. I have an air conditioner, but I can't run it," said Mangla Kohli, a housewife in New Delhi, which is sweltering in the mid-90s.

In the western state of Rajasthan, one of the hardest-hit areas, officials estimate 93.5 percent of the 34 million people are affected. More than 75 percent of the crops — wheat, corn, mustard, and cotton — have been damaged.

Some people will walk six miles a day to fetch drinking water in clay urns they carry on their heads and hips.

"Every day there is a rush and a fight to get drinking water. We stand in queue for hours," Rani Devi, of Rajasthan's Nokli village, told a reporter.

"What bigger punishment can a Hindu face than seeing his Mother Cow dying in front of him of hunger or thirst?" asked Bhika Ram, a priest in a temple here in west India's Gujarat state.

As he spoke, a man gave drops of water to a dying cow in the nearby road. Hindus revere cows as mother figures and providers.

During a 300-mile drive through Gujarat, an Associated Press reporter saw miles of parched land, dead or dying animals, gaunt villagers lining up for water and priests praying for rain.

At one state-run operation for drought-stricken animals, most of the 400 cows were dying.

Garbage pile yields Hitler photos

NEW YORK (AP) — A photo album found in a garbage heap contains 13 photographs of Nazi-occupied areas of the Soviet Union, and includes hangings and a meeting between Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

The 21-year-old college student who said he found the photographs near his Paterson, N.J., home, sold them to the New York Post, which published them Monday.

The Post said circumstantial evidence indicated the photographs had belonged to Tschering Soobzokov, an accused SS member killed in 1985 by a bomb that exploded on the porch of his Paterson home.

The newspaper said it bought the photos for an undisclosed sum from Keith Moore, who lives about three blocks from the Soobzokov home.

Experts who examined the photographs said they were taken by an amateur.

One picture shows three partisans hanging from a tree with signs in Russian and German saying, "Stupid attacks against German soldiers will be treated like this."

Others show Nazi leader Hermann Goering and other officers; a group of civilians being led away; corpses of Russian soldiers or prisoners of war stacked in the snow; German soldiers inspecting bodies and civilians digging in the soil, some with their bare hands.

Hitler biographer John Toland told the Post the picture of Hitler greeting the Italian dictator probably is of a meeting that took place in Uman in the Ukraine in the fall of 1941. No pictures of the meeting ever surfaced before, and "it was the only time the two of them got together on the Russian front," Toland said.

"I have seen a lot of photographs but I've never seen these before. They are really entirely new images," he said.

Holocaust historian Judd Newborn said the photographs are not unusual and probably would not reveal anything new to experts. What is peculiar, he said, is that the owner would save them rather than burn them as evidence.

missile production facilities.

The U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency maintains the U.S. must insist on unrestricted inspection of the plants where the Soviets produce their SS-20 rockets and other missiles in the 300-to-3,000-mile range that would be banned by the treaty.

Since Soviet monitors would have a matching right to check out U.S. installations in this country, intelligence experts objected.

The Washington official said the revised U.S. position on on-site inspections still would leave the two sides with wide-ranging authority to check out missile plants and other facilities on each other's territory. But highly sensitive areas would be off-limits.

U.S. intelligence agencies argued that since the treaty would totally ban, instead of simply reducing, two types of intermediate-range missiles, there was hardly any need to watch the Soviet production facilities all that closely, the Washington official said.

On the surprise inspections, the official said the U.S. proposal would retain the privilege of sending U.S. monitors to Soviet sites with little advance notice, but it would be a more acceptable stand to "the Soviets than a system of checks that would come totally as a surprise."

Either way, the U.S. objective was to make sure that the Soviets would not be able to disguise missiles by hiding them in forests and under protective coverings in advance of a scheduled American inspection.

Still unresolved is the pace for reducing U.S. and Soviet arsenals to zero. The Soviets now have 683 such medium-range missiles, while the United States has 332. Since the Soviets begin with more rockets, the United States wants them to reduce at a faster clip so that the two sides reach zero at approximately the same time.

President Reagan, in reports to Congress, has accused the Soviets of flouting past arms control agreements with the United States. He has insisted on strict verification procedures for the treaty, nearing completion in Geneva.

firing machine-gun blasts across their bows, the Pentagon said.

It was unclear whether the dhows were sail-powered or motorized, said the Pentagon, which did not disclose the incident's location.

Arab dhows and ships or helicopters chartered by foreign reporters several times have approached convoys and been warned away.

In a separate incident Monday involving the same convoy, U.S. helicopters and warships chased away an Iranian warship that had shadowed them.

indicated a softening of Iran's opposition to a Security Council cease-fire resolution passed July 20.

However, the envoy, Mohammad Jawad Larjani, accused Iraq and the United States of violating the resolution. He was to meet with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar today for a second day of talks.

Arab foreign ministers meeting in Tunis on Monday urged Iraq to abide by the resolution, which Iraq has accepted.

Walking is newest trend in exercise

Officers aboard the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal said the Iranian vessel presented no overt threat as it neared the convoy at the point where the Strait of Hormuz meets the Persian Gulf. The American surveillance aircraft, which did not fire, followed the Iranian ship.

Earlier this month, U.S. planes fired two missiles at an Iranian plane that approached a U.S. surveillance aircraft. The missiles missed.

In New York, Iran's deputy foreign minister said Monday that his nation would cooperate fully with United Nations efforts to end the Iran-Iraq war. The statement was hailed as a sign of progress.

NEW YORK (AP) — Walking may have replaced jogging as the "newest exercising trend," according to Health Magazine.

Evidence claims that walking burns as many calories as running, with little risk of injury; that it burns fat, lowers blood pressure, increases bone density and lowers cholesterol levels.

For those who remain skeptical, it says, consider that walking for 30 minutes at 3 mph will burn between 125 and 150 calories, while running the same distance burns only 120 calories. But note, the magazine says, that the normal walking pace is 3 mph.

Throw away the diet — Feast Fest is here

Don't plan to diet this weekend! Feast Fest '87 is going to tempt you with Philadelphia steak and Cajun chicken, Sicilian sausage soup and Belgian waffles with strawberries, fruit parfaits, brownies and much more.

The three-day event in the parking lot at the corner of Forest and Main streets will be a final summer fling before school starts. Food will be served from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and from noon to 6 p.m. on Sunday.

But the fun actually begins Thursday, when Main Street will be closed from 3 to 3:30 p.m. so that waiters from participating restaurants can complete an obstacle course and compete for prizes, in a Waiters' Race sponsored by the Manchester Herald.

The athletic waiters and waitresses will leave from the Herald building on Brainard Place, with their serving trays in hand. They will have seven obstacles to overcome, including making a peanut-butter sandwich, dressing in a tuxedo jacket, and completing a bit of carpentry work.

As each obstacle is conquered, participants will receive part of a place setting — fork, knife, napkin, etc. The first contestant to set a table at the Feast Fest site will be declared the winner. First- and second-place winners will receive $100 and $50 gift certificates, respectively, but all participants will receive prizes.

The racers may work up a big hunger, but they won't get the chance to dine at Feast Fest until the following day. Five new restaurants are joining the 10 returning from last year's festival.

Jean Paul Sartre: the workaholic loved to flirt

By Marilyn August The Associated Press

PARIS — Existentialist philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre emerges in a new and richly documented biography as a workaholic and Don Juan who would rather make small talk with beautiful women than have philosophical debates.

"Sartre: A Life" (Pantheon, $24.95) is the first definitive biography written in France of the walled writer-philosopher and political activist whose death in 1980 sent more than 50,000 mourners into the streets of Paris.

Acclaimed as one of the great symbols of French culture, like Voltaire and Victor Hugo, the Sartre presented in the 591-page biography by Anne Cohen-Solal is the man behind the monument.

"My goal was to combine serious scholarship, investigative reporting and good writing. Who said serious books have to be poorly written and boring?"

— Anne Cohen-Solal French biographer giving when others would have gone to bed."

And then there was the lesser-known Sartre, the insatiable womanizer with a passion for impressionable women he could take under his wing, the seducer who said he preferred talking trivialities to a pretty face than discussing philosophy with his friends and associates.

From his passionate relationship with his mother, widowed at 24 when Jean-Paul was only 15 months old, to the debilitating blindness of old age, the book relies on previously unknown letters and other documents.

MS. COHEN-SOLAL, 39, crisscrossed the globe, interviewing hundreds of Sartre's friends and acquaintances who could shed light on his life.

She chronicles his childhood in Sola suggests that their relationship became platonic and that de Beauvoir struggled to control her jealousy of the newcomers.

IN THE 1930s, Sartre established a complex, almost scrabatic system of juggling women which he maintained until his death. There were Tuesday lunches with one, Wednesday dinners with another and August vacations in Italy with de Beauvoir.

"Sartre would write de Beauvoir long letters with graphic descriptions of his encounters," Ms. Cohen-Solal said. "Frankly, I think that was Sartre telling de Beauvoir what she wanted to hear, which tells you more about de Beauvoir than Sartre."

The biography also describes Sartre's boundless generosity. While he dressed sloppily and lived in spartan hotel rooms or small apartments, he set up his mistresses in comfortable lodgings and supported up to 10 people a month.

The biography also reveals much previously unknown information about Sartre's last years, his physical decline and his dependence on Pierre Victor, his young secretary and would-be philosopher whose vitality and intellectual curiosity regenerated Sartre and kept him alive.

"I'm sure they had reservations about having a woman as president," she said. "The good-old-boy system keeps going on and on. I'll tell you, some of the faculty is disappointed."

Corwin, as well as Bianchi, said the best thing, though, would be to give Daube a chance to prove himself as president.

"I only had a chance to meet him once," Corwin said. "We all need the chance to talk to him (more)."

Daube was hired to replace William E. Vincent as president of MCC. Vincent left MCC in June to take the presidency of Bucks County Community College in Newton, Pa.

McConachie takes playoff to triumph in Annulli Classic

By Jim Tierney Herald Sports Writer

He finished in a tie for second place when the inaugural Annulli Manchester Classic took place a year ago. After Monday's renewal of the one-day pro-am golf tournament at the Manchester Country Club ended, he moved one notch above his effort last year. And he found himself at the top of the list...

Manchester Country Club head professional Ralph DeNicolo follows through on his drive on the fourth hole during Monday's Annulli Classic.

Jack McConachie, the nine-year golf professional from the Pine Valley Country Club in Southington and a former Connecticut Open and PGA section winner, won the second Annulli Classic during a playoff with Mike Bailey of the Wethersfield Country Club...

Masse has successful summer in Cape League

Like old wine, Bill Masse improved his batting average with each of his three eligible seasons in the Cape Cod Summer Baseball League.

The former East Catholic High School and American Legion standout claimed the third best batting mark in the 1987 Cape circuit, which features standout college players from coast to coast.

Masse, who will enroll at Wake Forest next month after transferring from Davidson College after three years, didn't set the world on fire in 1985 with Cotuit in the Cape League with a .282 average.

A year ago, the outfielder tacked 45 points on his hitting mark to .327 and added 30 more points this season for a .357 figure.

Masse played in all 42 games as Cotuit wound up fourth in the final standings among the eight entries to grab the last playoff spot.

Just what kind of a year did Masse have in his final on the Cape? He led his club in seven offensive departments: home runs, average, hits, walks, runs batted in, stolen bases and runs scored.

Since the mid-season All-Star game was started in 1970 against the Atlantic Collegiate League, Masse is the only player to enter in that game or make the final All-Star team for three seasons.

Herald Angle Earl Yost Sports Editor Emeritus

These credentials should prove to be a good bargaining point in seeking the type of bonus money Masse figures he should get for signing a professional contract.

Future plans

Jim Balcome, who successfully directed the 1987 New England Relays and will be back in 1988, hopes to have at least four or five featured events to help keep the crowd on hand.

Next year's Relays will be staged June 18 and 19 with the track and field events at Manchester High School's Wigren Track and a four-mile road race starting and finishing at the MCC campus.

Balcome noted that 431 men and women took part in the track and field events this year. The breakdown showed the athletes came from seven states. A total of 358 campaigners had Connecticut addresses, while 22 were from Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, and three each from New Hampshire and Vermont.

Johnson realizes his club is an underdog in the Canada Cup, but he expects big things from LaFontaine. "I don't know if we've got those players who are going to come out in the forefront and be a world-class player," Johnson said.

Midway through the first period, "It is another Pearl Harbor for the Americans," said a trainer with the Peruvian team.

'Oscar' performance was memorable

The most memorable performance in the Pan American Games was Brazil's Oscar-winner in the basketball final.

It's not important that the loser was the favored United States, although to the badly overmatched South Americans that had to make it especially sweet.

Upsets are the spice of sports, and this one was peppered by the emotion-charged performance of Oscar Schmidt, who kept hitting on shots from south of the border.

Remember the U.S. hockey team's upset of the Soviet Union in 1980 Winter Olympics? How about Ecuador beating the United States in Davis Cup tennis back in the 1950s?

An upset victory is a tribute to human determination, a reminder of the importance of a will to win and the human frailties it can sometimes overcome.

The younger American team led by 15 points early in the second half and appeared en route to a third consecutive Pan Am gold medal that would extend the U.S. winning streak to 35 consecutive games in the competition.

Anyone who treats it as a shade out of touch with reality. An upset loss is nothing but a loss. Sure it hurts, but the pain is just a reminder that competition is supposed to be a double-edged sword.

Team USA dumps Olympians

By Jim Tierney Herald Sports Writer

HARTFORD — "Preparation" was the operative word surrounding Monday night's encounter between the United States Olympic hockey team and Team USA at the Civic Center.

While the young Olympians and potential National Hockey League stars showed signs of promise, Team USA's experience and rugged style of play prevailed in a 5-2 exhibition game victory before a crowd of 8,843.

Team USA, the Olympic team, which leaves for Europe later this week, will play 60 more games before the Winter Olympics begin.

"It's our last dress rehearsal before the Canada Cup," Team USA and former Calgary Flames' Coach Bob Johnson said.

The tournament is a world-class tournament. It's three notches above the NHL.

New York Islanders' Pat LaFontaine, a member of the 1984 U.S. Olympic team, tallied at the 1:09 mark of the opening period to give Team USA a quick 1-0 lead.

LaFontaine, who later added an assist, is honored to be a part of Team USA.

Johnson realizes his club is an underdog in the Canada Cup, but he expects big things from LaFontaine.

"Pat LaFontaine, we're counting on."

Midway through the first period, "It is another Pearl Harbor for the Americans," said a trainer with the Peruvian team.

Scott Young (14) of the U.S. Olympic team looks to control the puck during Monday night's action with Team USA. Todd Richards of the Olympic team, Bob Brooke and Dave Ellett of Team USA are in on the play.

Buffalo Sabres' defenseman Phil Housley, who had two goals and an assist and was named the outstanding player of the game for Team USA, scored to give Team USA a 2-0 lead.

At the 11:43 mark, the Olympians elicited the deficit to 2-1 when Scott Fusco slipped the puck past Team USA's goalie John Vanbiesbroeck of the New York Islanders.

Another memorable moment of the competition at Indianapolis came in baseball when the United States snapped Cuba's Pan Am Games winning streak at 37 games.

The early-round game appeared headed for extra innings, which would have favored the more experienced Cubans.

Earlier this year, Louganis, who has a won more national and international competitions than most divers have entered, including the world championships and Olympics, failed to win a gold medal in the U.S. indoor championship.

He came back to win two golds in the outdoor championships and then completed his third Pan Am double by winning the three-meter springboard and the platform at Indianapolis.

Diving aficionados are more likely to remember Louganis' losses in the indoor championships.

Winning is not always really is the spice of sport's competition — although the taste can be bitter, especially to the fan who lives vicariously.

Hrbek's single lifts Twins past Tigers

By The Associated Press

Steve Lombarozzi says none of the Minnesota Twins is Superman. They just seem more powerful than a locomotive and faster than a speeding bullet when playing at the Metrodome.

Kent Hrbek's bases-loaded single with one out in the ninth inning Monday night scored Lombarozzi and gave Minnesota a 5-4 victory over Detroit, snapping the Twins' six-game losing streak.

The Twins, first in the American League West by two games over Oakland, had lost their last six games on the road in Detroit and Boston. They are now 43-18 at the Metrodome and 24-42 on the road.

"It's a big night just to put an end to the skid," Lombarozzi said. "We had a talk before the game and nobody was going to try to be Superman. We are all in this together."

Reliever Eric King, 6-6, gave up a leadoff single to Lombarozzi. King was relieved by Willie Hernandez, and Randy Bush advanced Lombarozzi to second with a sacrifice.

Al Newman followed with a single sending Lombarozzi to third and Kirby Puckett was intentionally walked. Hrbek then lined Hernandez's first pitch to center field to score the winning run.

Jeff Reardon, 6-6, pitched the final inning for the victory. "The key is to stay within your limitations and knowing what you can and can't do," Twins Manager Tom Kelly said.

Reliever Eric King, 6-6, gave up a leadoff single to Lombarozzi. King was relieved by Willie Hernandez, and Randy Bush advanced Lombarozzi to second with a sacrifice.

Elsewhere, Toronto defeated Seattle 7-3, New York edged California 4-3 in 11 innings, Oakland beat Baltimore 7-3, Texas tripped Kansas City 4-2 and Chicago defeated Boston 6-3.

The Twins tied the score 4-4 in the seventh on Lombarozzi's run-scoring single. "We played with pretty good heart. I think we have a lot of toughness. (Team USA) got a little more experience, a little more mood."

After misfiring on three solid power play opportunities at the beginning of the second period, the Olympians later in the period were more successful.

San Francisco beat Philadelphia 6-1 as Reuschel allowed five hits in seven innings in his first appearance for the Giants after they traded with Pittsburgh last Friday.

The Giants remained a half-game ahead of Houston in the West as the Astros defeated St. Louis 5-2 behind Knepper's seventh inning and first complete game of the season.

Knepper has a 4-1 record and an earned run average of 3.29 in his last six appearances after a 3-12 start.

The New York Mets moved within 3 1/2 games of the first-place Cardinals in the East with a 1-0 victory over Los Angeles.

Aguilera, 5-2, who sprained a ligament in his right elbow and was placed on the disabled list on May 21, retired 15 consecutive batters from the third inning until the eighth, when Glenn Hoffman singled with two outs.

"My goal was to give seven strong innings, and hope that I was effective," Aguilera said.

Randy Myers got the last out in the eighth and Roger McDowell pitched the ninth for his 19th save as the Dodgers were shut out for the 14th time this season.

Len Dykstra led off the fourth with a double off rookie Shawn Hillegas, 2-1, and went to third on a sacrifice before Hernandez singled Pirates 5, Reds 4.

Pittsburgh snapped a four-game losing streak and extended Cincinnati's string of losses to five as Bobby Bonilla hit a three-run homer and Doug Drabek allowed seven hits in seven innings.

Drabek, 6-10, won for the fourth time in his last five decisions as the Pirates won at home against the Reds for the first time in 10 games since Aug. 22, 1985.

Bonilla's third-inning homer off Tom Browning, 5-11, gave the Pirates a 3-0 lead.

Knepper, 7-13, who beat the Cardinals for the second time in five days, had a 6.35 ERA before his turnaround.

Tackling dummies made by Gilman firm go international

By Chris Dahl
The Associated Press

BOZRAH — NFL players weren't alone in introducing American-style football to London. For three days prior to an exhibition game between the Los Angeles Rams and Denver Broncos at Wembley Stadium in London, curious fans could also take a peek at the latest in football equipment.

"We consider Europe a growing market for our products," said Neil Gilman, the son of the man who invented tackling dummies and several other practice devices in the 1920s.

"There are hundreds of teams playing American-style football over there. It represents potential market and we want to get after it," he said. "We want people to realize we have the premier equipment."

Marty Gilman Inc. was one of 26 companies, including big names such as Champion, MacGregor, Rawlings and Wilson, that showed products at the American Football Equipment Exhibition at the U.S. Embassy on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Football, with little more than a cult following in Britain 10 years ago, has taken a quantum leap in popularity. Last year's capacity crowd of 80,000 fans were expected at Wembley Stadium for a glimpse of the American professionals. It is the second straight year of the NFL showcase and of the equipment exhibition.

Gilman, a former defensive back for Harvard, said it was important to get a start in Europe but that he doesn't expect large sales for years to come. He brought no equipment to the exhibition, just a video presentation, some catalogs and a fistful of business cards.

"The clubs are different over there," he said in an interview several days before leaving for London. "They're used to the equipment. They're all volunteer. Most of the clubs can't afford practice equipment. They're lucky to afford uniforms."

Gilman's company designs and manufactures tackling dummies and other equipment for the entire NFL on down to the Pee-Wee League, making a complete range of equipment from blocking shields to seven-man sleds, from goal posts to yard markers. An average dummy costs about $400 while an elaborate, seven-man sled approaches $3,000. Plus shipping costs, they're an expensive proposition for England's club-style teams.

Neil Gilman's father, Marty Gilman, who died in 1979, started building tackling dummies with scraps from his father's cotton mill in the rural Gilman section of Bozrah. His coach at Norwich Free Academy was so impressed he advised Gilman to start a business.

"Ninety percent of all football is played on the practice field and what could be more tedious than to be engaged in a 'tackler practice,'" he once said. "So I felt the equipment could make practice (seem like) play and protect people from injury."

After leaving Connecticut Agricultural College, where he was the 128-pound guard, Gilman spent most of the next 30 years visiting football camps across the country in a big old car pulling an open trailer full of tackling dummies, many with arms and legs. He was a friendly, familiar face to people like Amos Alonzo Stagg and Fielding Yost.

"He was a bachelor who always said his dummies were his family," remembered his wife, Shirley Gilman, who maintained a strong hand running the company. After a courtship of football games, she ended the bachelor days in 1948, joining him of the road.

"We used to travel the country in a big old car with the tackling dummies in the back, going from coaching clinic to coaching clinic," she said. "People used to call them Marty's rag dolls."

Shirley Gilman, whose late husband invented the tackling dummy, maintains a strong hand in the operation of Marty Gilman Inc. in the Gilman section of Bozrah. Mrs. Gilman stands in front of a football mural signed by famous coaches including Fielding Yost and Amos Alonzo Stagg.
