Lottery winner pledges aid to North, contras

NEWINGTON (AP) — A Cuban immigrant who embraced the United States and all its opportunities is prepared to share his one-quarter share of a $7.2 million lottery prize with opponents of communism, including Lt. Col. Oliver North.

"Being from Cuba, I think I know what he tried to do," Manuel Periu, 56, said of North on Thursday after he and his family brought their winning ticket to lottery headquarters in Newington.

"Olie for senator," Periu said. He was wearing a shirt with the message: "God Bless America. God Bless Oliver North."

The West Hartford man also said he planned to give money to the U.S.-backed contra rebels fighting the Sandinista government of Nicaragua.

Asked if he would support any anti-Castro rebels in Cuba, Periu's face glowed as he said: "That's my dream. Oh boy, I wish I could."

Periu emigrated from Cuba in 1958. He said his father's drug store in Cuba was confiscated by the government.

Periu spent four years in the U.S. Air Force. He now works as a repairman for the Corp. New England Telecommunications and South, and owns a Hartford bridal shop managed by his wife, Olga.

Periu said he hasn't decided how much to donate to North and to the contras.

"I have to fight for this country, you know, as much as I can. I do believe if Nicaragua falls, eventually we will," Periu said.

Periu split his prize with his wife, daughter, Frances, and her fiancé. They will share annual payments of $360,000 before taxes. Each received a check for $72,240.67 on Thursday. Periu has said he will set up a trust fund for his other child, 13-year-old Manuel Jr. Ann Evans, a spokeswoman for the lottery unit of the Division of Special Revenue, said the four pooled their money to buy tickets for the twice weekly "Lotto" game. Periu said they spend about $150 a week on lottery tickets.

Their six winning numbers were picked on Aug. 14, but Periu said he waited to collect the money so he could consult a lawyer and an accountant, and because he wanted to avoid publicity.

Teens vandalize home, trash family's security

WOLCOTT (AP) — When some 30 marauding youths invaded a home to destroy furniture, clothing and other valuables, they wrecked more than the Manning family's goods. They trashed the family's hard-won security.

Twenty teen-agers have been accused in the break-in and vandalism, which the home's owner, Everett Manning, estimated caused $30,000 in damage to the ranch-style home where he lives with his wife and seven daughters.

Manning's attorney, Barry Muller of Waterbury, said Thursday that the family believes the break-in may have resulted from the jealousy of a girl whose boyfriend gave one of the Manning daughters an "unsolicited" kiss.

"I'm a family man. I'm a Vietnam veteran. The violence is over. All we want to do is live alone in peace," said Manning, the director of a small computer company whose home was broken into while his family was on vacation over the July Fourth weekend.

"I worked nights for six years, worked weekends as a bartender and went to school during the day so that my family could have a better life. Now we're being threatened and we have to move out because I don't think the police or anyone else can protect us."

The bizarre case includes another twist: charges of police negligence.

Muller has charged that Wolcott police failed to respond to a call by a neighbor who heard firecrackers being set off inside the house and other noise late on July 3.

Police said that they were tied up at the time with a motorcycle accident.

Muller said investigators he hired also have turned up evidence disputing police accounts of how long the youths were inside the home and whether the neighbor said the family was out of town when he reported the disturbance.

Manning said the scene inside his home when the family was called back from their vacation in New York state on July 4, the day after the break-in, made his wife, Ellen, physically ill.

"There was human feces on the carpets. They urinated everywhere, including on a computer that I have from work," Manning said on Wednesday. "There was also a lot of vomit. They mixed cat litter with mayonnaise and threw it all over the walls."

Court orders woman to accept transfusion

HARTFORD (AP) — Federal authorities have won a temporary restraining order that would allow doctors to give a member of Jehovah's Witnesses a blood transfusion if she should need it during the birth of her baby in a Navy hospital.

The woman's refusal to accept a potential transfusion would interfere with U.S. Navy medical staff and possibly make the government liable if medical problems develop, contends Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeremiah F. Donovan.

The woman, who is listed under the pseudonym Marion Doe in court papers, says she does not want a blood transfusion because the Bible's book of Acts forbids it.

Doe is the 25-year-old wife of a U.S. Navy petty officer assigned to the USS Tennessee, a submarine stationed in Groton.

The government filed a motion in Hartford federal court on Tuesday that if granted would allow Navy doctors to perform whatever procedures that might be necessary, including a blood transfusion, to preserve the woman's life.

U.S. District Judge M. Joseph Blumenfeld issued a temporary restraining order the same day, granting the motion until a full hearing on Sept. 4.

The due date for the baby is Sept. 7. A court official said the restraining order would allow a blood transfusion if the baby is born before next Thursday.

Doe's Navy physician, Dr. Samuel O. Grimm, would honor her request to refuse a transfusion unless a court ordered otherwise, Donovan said.

Donovan said doctors are obligated to honor their patients' wishes in such cases or face possible battery charges.

A memorandum by Donovan said that "even during a normal delivery, an individual may continue to bleed heavily, which would necessitate a blood transfusion."

Between 1 and 2 percent of women giving birth need transfusions, according to Dr. Brian Rigney, head of obstetrics and gynecology at the Hospital of St. Raphael in New Haven.

The Navy has offered Doe medical care by a civilian physician who would agree not to administer a transfusion, but she has refused the offer, according to court papers.

It is "the right of the Naval Hospital and its staff to practice medicine in a way they think appropriate," Donovan said.

Doe's husband told the New Haven Register that church elders have suggested that she not discuss the case.

Pratt & Whitney JT8D-200 engines that powered the Northwest Airlines jet that crashed in Michigan arrive at P&W's East Hartford plant Thursday for inspection.

Flight 255 engines arrive

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board are concentrating on the possibility of pilot error or mechanical malfunction as the reason why wing flaps had not been extended.

Extended flaps give extra lift needed for takeoff, and investigators said Wednesday in Washington, D.C., that the flaps were in the wrong position.

Work set Monday on city interchange

HARTFORD (AP) — Work on the much talked-about interchange of Interstate 84 and Interstate-91 in Hartford is finally to begin, maybe, a state official says.

The $88.5 million project will get under way Monday at 11 a.m. when construction workers begin replacing metal highway dividers in the I-84 median from the Bulkeley Bridge to Hartford's Main Street, Thomas E. Cressey, the state's special coordinator for the project said Thursday.

"There's still an element of doubt, but the contractor is trying to start Monday night," Cressey said.

The project will provide direct highway access in all directions between I-91 and I-84 when it is completed in 1991.

State officials warn that until the work is completed, motorists can count on traffic snarls.

"The start of work on this highway improvement project will undoubtedly have some impact on the movement of traffic on I-84, even though we will maintain traffic on the existing two lanes during peak commuting hours," state Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns said Thursday.

"We strongly urge motorists to be patient and tolerant as we go ahead with this important project," he said.

While the existing metal rail is being replaced with a permanent concrete barrier, the width of the road will be reduced to a single lane in each direction between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m., officials said.

Normal traffic flow will be restored by 6 a.m. each day.

The I-84-91 project is the fourth segment of the I-91 reconstruction project. Three projects already under way are: a $68 million project to widen I-91 from Windsor to the North Meadows area of Hartford; a $38.5 million project to widen the Dexter Coffin Bridge in East Windsor; and a $35 million project to widen I-91 from East Windsor to the Massachusetts border.

Since investment decisions should always be made with the intention of meeting your specific needs, you must first carefully analyze what you are after and decide on a program to obtain it. While risks of certain investments can't be denied, a surprising number of Americans are market participants. My photographic style integrates years of experience working in our family studio, with a solid background in art. At the age of eight, I was accompanying my father on wedding, carrying the huge old-fashioned bulbs, and, because of my small hands, assisting the bride in looping all those buttons on her dress, prior to zippers.

After receiving my Bachelor's degree in art, I once again turned my energies to photography, receiving degrees from the Nord Color Printing School in South Carolina, and the New England Institute of Professional Photography, University of New Hampshire. Having studied with nationally known portraitist John Fran, and most recently in June with William S. McIntosh of Dallas, renowned for home environmental portraits, I am continually updating the educational process through seminars and courses.

There have been many showings of my art; I have won ribbons from the Conn. Professional Photographers Assoc., and have lectured on photography. And, not surprisingly, my best assistant is my daughter Anessa.

Give credit to candidate

Anne Gauvin deserves credit for dropping out of the race as a Republican candidate for re-election to the Board of Education, something most political observers would probably agree she did not have to do.

Gauvin has withdrawn as a candidate because she is recuperating from surgery and does not feel she will have the stamina during that recuperation to conduct the kind of campaign she feels the party deserves from her.

The likelihood of that Gauvin would be an effective candidate even with a limited campaign, and it is no secret that the Republican Party is not having to turn away eager candidates.

But Gauvin is apparently unwilling to give the candidacy less effort than she thinks it merits, which is an indication of how seriously she takes the responsibilities.

The loss of Gauvin is a blow in itself to the party, and it is more so in light of the fact that another Republican candidate for the Board of Education, David Dampier, has had to withdraw because of a change in his work schedule.

While Dampier is not an incumbent he has served on the board before, and that would have given him some edge in the election.

The Republican Party may be pressed to find people to fill the important slots on the ballot.

Mind made up much too early

William Belfiore's early rejection of a fair-rent commission for Manchester is unfortunate and impolitic.

Belfiore, a real estate broker and a landlord, is a member of a committee studying the need for a fair-rent commission. The committee has not yet made its report to the Board of Directors and its members have not deliberated the question. So far, members have been hearing testimony.

Belfiore has said he is already convinced that a fair-rent commission is not needed and he bases his opinion on the fact that only 12 tenants from 7,848 rental units in town spoke during a hearing by the study group.

He contends that does not constitute a mandate, and he says study-committee members should make their views known before deliberating together.

Belfiore's reasoning about the lack of a mandate may have some merit, but he should be reserving his final judgment until committee members have exchanged views with each other.

If all members took firm stands in advance of any deliberation, the credibility of the committee's work would certainly be open to question.

After six years, presidents begin to stink

Four of the eight presidents to hold office after Franklin Roosevelt left the White House, their administrations paralyzed by their own unpopularity. Ronald Reagan will be the fifth.

Let's not make too much of it. My sainted mother used to say that after three days fish and guests begin to stink; after about six years the same could be said of most presidents. The most amazing part of Roosevelt's career is that he actually could get elected four times and that when he died people were weeping in the streets. Any one of his successors would have been shot in broad daylight if he'd tried to run for a third term.

Truman went home discredited for having taken the United States into an "undeclared" war which was less unpopular than the Vietnam war.

By the time he packed up and headed back to Missouri, people had begun to think of the Democrats as the war party, and it was Eisenhower's promise to end the Korean war, not win it, which won the presidency for him. Of the eight post-Roosevelt presidents, Ike is the only one who served out his term listening to the cheers of his fellow citizens. Even he, however, had his difficulties in his last months in office when an American spy plane was shot down over Russia, setting in motion a chain of events which ruined hopes for important agreements with the Soviets.

If he cared more for his place in history than for his life, then Kennedy was lucky Lee Harvey Oswald gained him down because the hellfire young president was heading straight for the war which engulfed Lyndon Johnson and ruined him. The same war destroyed Richard Nixon, for the core causes of what is called Watergate lie in the Bill Proxmire: three decades as a maverick in the Senate

By Lawrence L. Knutson

WASHINGTON — To Bill Proxmire, being a United States senator is the country's best job, bar none.

"Where else can you not only dream of the direction the country is going in but play a significant part in getting it there?" the Wisconsin Democrat said last March in a speech on the Senate floor.

"There was no hint in that speech that Proxmire, 71, would soon announce — as he did on Thursday — that he would not seek re-election to the Senate seat he has held for three decades.

If anything, the speech gave the strong impression that Proxmire at the Senate's third most senior member, chairman of its Banking Committee, bestower of the monthly Golden Fleece award, long-distance runner — intended to stay with the job for the duration, however long that might be.

With scorn for those who remain mere observers of politics and life, he even composed a bit of doggerel which he said might well serve as his epitaph: "Here under the rocks lies Bill Proxmire. For him life had its terrors. For him death was a relief, a reward. For him life had its terrors. For him death was a relief, a reward."

"Two scratch hits, one lucky run — a coffin full of errors." There were few clues Proxmire would choose not to run.

He spent nine days this summer at the Wisconsin State Fair, immediately before his announcement — doing the thing for which Wisconsin voters know him best: shaking thousands of hands.

In Washington, Proxmire's retirement will break the longest consecutive string of roll call votes of any senator in history. He has not missed a vote since 1965 and is likely to boost his record well over the 10,000 mark in the nearly two years remaining on his present term.

It wasn't just the votes. It was also the speeches. Lots of speeches. In fact, it was a rare day when Proxmire did not speak. He once spoke for 18 hours, holding the Senate in session until the dawn's early light.

He gave more than 3,000 speeches — one for every day the Senate was in session — until Congress agreed to adopt an international convention branding genocide as a crime.

One of his first speeches, denouncing the strong-arm tactics of the Senate majority leader of the time, future President Lyndon B. Johnson, won Proxmire the adjective most often used to describe him — "maverick."

He crafted an image as a dignified Scrooge, guarding tax dollars with a flinty-eyed persistence. And, with something close to public relations genius, he invented the Golden Fleece — the monthly award, coveted by almost no one, for ridiculous abuse of the government purse.

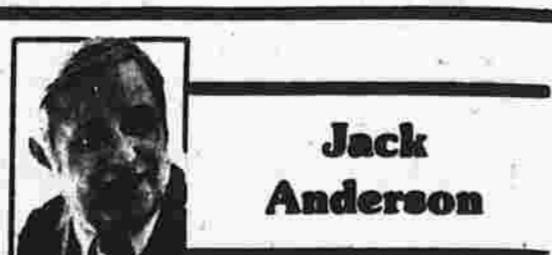

The Fleece, each heralded by a news release laced with puns and sarcasm, included a recent one to the Air Force for "decking the taxpayers" by spending $59,000 over a six-year period for playing cards given to guests on Air Force One, the presidential jetliner.

"I think the executive office has drawn a bum card on this one," Proxmire said. There were scores of Fleecees. Among them: A $46,000 study of how to break an egg, a $27,000 study of why prisoners want to escape from jail, a $57,900 study of the body measurements of airline stewardesses, a $3,000 study on whether Air Force men should carry umbrellas and a $97,000 study of the morals of the inhabitants of a Peruvian brothel.

One Fleece backfired. A researcher successfully sued Proxmire for libel when the senator ridiculed his federally financed study of why monkeys clench their jaws.

The senator also has campaigned to get high U.S. officials out of the chauffeur-driven limousines many of them use to commute to and from the office.

Proxmire, a campaigner for fitness, runs to work most mornings, a distance of nearly five miles. Proxmire's biggest legislative triumph came in 1970 when he persuaded the Senate to scrap a

Tribes that hunted heads now take yen

WASHINGTON — The head-hunting tribes of the island of Brunei have finally been subdued. It is a unique irony of this country that their indirect conquerors are the Japanese — whose heads they last hunted a little over four decades ago.

Young Iban tribesmen, weaned on heroic tales of yesteryear, now go off to work on offshore rigs, drilling oil that goes mostly to Japan. They buy Japanese cars, televisions and stereos — even as the blackened, smoked skulls of the invading Japanese of World War II still hang in rattan nets in their tribal villages, swaying in the breeze.

The story of the evolution of the fierce Ibans unfolded as Dale Van Atta recently took a trip back in time, traveling up the brown, jungled Beilait River of the tiny nation of Brunei to the Iban villages of today — and a house of skulls hidden along the edge of the river.

The Ibans, also known as the Sea Dayaks, are a brown-skinned people of medium build who were relative latecomers to the Moslem sultanate of Brunei, following the likes of Sihanok the Sailor and Marco Polo, and did what Kubla Khan could not: They vanquished the indigenous tribes of the islands.

In the process, it became apparent that the Ibans began a grisly practice of collecting heads based on their belief that the immortal spirit of the enemy resided in the head. To own skulls was to possess great power — for the individual warrior or the village.

The ritual became a rite of passage. Each young Iban male was required to acquire an enemy skull to prove his manhood. The more he acquired, the more he became the envy of his companions and the more he was feared by his enemies.

It degenerated over the centuries to even uglier deaths. Instead of taking heads in battles, Iban men soon considered any pate fair game. Children who strayed too far from their villages ran a great risk of being eaten by their parents.

If live heads proved too difficult to collect, Ibans were not above grave robbery. One British governor of a nearby island was forced to secretly bury his wife for fear her corpse would be beheaded by a plundering Iban.

Proxmire even turned those previous losses to advantage, calling for the support of "all those who have ever lost in business, love, sports or politics."

He urged those lucky enough never to have lost anything to vote for his opponent.

Proxmire won some of his subsequent races with more than 70 percent of the vote, winning by such a substantial margin in 1970 that he flirted with the idea of running for president.

He has spent virtually nothing on recent campaigns and coasted to victory. Proxmire makes clear he loves the Senate.

"For anyone looking for a career that offers the greatest prospect for a fulfilling life — how can you beat it? — he said last spring. "How lucky can you get?"

Lawrence L. Knutson of The Associated Press first met William Proxmire when he was still from political action committees and has covered his Senate career off and on since 1968.

Today, half of Brunei's crude oil is sold to Tokyo, while the Japanese have the exclusive contract for Brunei's natural gas. The oil riches have made Brunei's subjects, including the Ibans, quite comfortable. Villages along the coast of the interior are festooned with televisions and other modern conveniences. Bare-breasted beauties no longer wander unashamedly about; Malaysian style or Western dress prevails.

Though the older Ibans continue to farm and hunt, the young men prefer working for the national oil company in the oil town of Seria, or for the government, which is primarily funded through Japanese contracts. Few of them seem to grasp the historical irony the modern-day Tokyo has had such a direct hand in civilizing and subduing a once-fierce tribe, which the mighty Imperial Japan had so feared.

Mini-editorial: It's never too late for enlightenment. Former Chief Justice Warren Burger solemnly averred the other day that it is proper for the Senate to judge a Supreme Court nominee's ideology and its impact on the balance of the court. "Then they shouldn't have confirmed me." You're getting the picture, Mr. Chief Justice; Joe Biden couldn't have put it better.

Poindexter to resign from Navy

WASHINGTON — Former national security adviser John M. Poindexter, the pivotal witness in the Iran-contra investigation, plans to resign from the Navy this fall to avoid having the service sources and a suspected indictment, according to Pentagon officials.

As he requested the resignation, however, Poindexter injected what is bound to be an element of controversy by asking that he be retired at the three-star vice admiral rank he held while at the White House, instead of the two-star rear admiral title he reverted to after leaving as the affair unraveled last November.

Such a request would put President Reagan on knowledge of the diversion of Iran arms sale money to the Nicaraguan contra rebels.

'Nuisances' delay test of booster

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah — A rocket booster test considered critical to the space shuttle's future has been reset for Saturday after "nuisances," including a broken water main and cranky ground control equipment, delayed the firing.

Thirteen engineers twice carried the countdown to ignition, but the booster failed to fire because ground equipment failed. Another attempt was halted just three minutes from ignition.

The booster was redesigned to eliminate the flaws that caused the Challenger to explode last year, but the new system must pass a series of ground tests before shuttle flights can resume.

Pilots rap FAA for safety lapses

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Some of the chief pilots from the nation's airlines at an FAA conference on how to maintain "that razor's edge" in the cockpit threw at least part of the blame for safety lapses back on the agency itself.

The session Thursday was called after a string of flight crew mistakes and amid growing evidence that pilot error caused the Northwest jet crash Aug. 16 in Detroit that killed 156 people in the nation's second-worst air disaster.

FAA Administrator Allan M. Aronoff told the 250 pilots at the meeting that they and the airline industry must recapture the public's confidence with better training and insistence on professionalism. He later told reporters he was referring to concern that Congress may impose safety-related requirements on the industry.

Henry Duffy, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, accused the FAA of not pushing hard enough for innovations in training and cockpit procedure.

Nunn isn't ready to back anybody

ATLANTA — Sen. Sam Nunn says he's not ready to endorse any of the Democratic presidential candidates now that he's out of the race, but urged all contenders to pay more attention to Southern voters.

"It is not just a question of people in the South," Nunn told a news conference Thursday. "The Democratic Party in the South is a profile of the general-election type of voter we will have in 1988."

The 46-year-old Senate Armed Services Committee chairman dashed the hopes of some conservative Democrats by announcing that he would not run for president in 1988 although "I felt the chances of winning were really there."

Proxmire's decision pleases GOP

MADISON, Wis. — Sen. William Proxmire's decision to retire raised GOP hopes and saddened Democratic admirers of the five-term legislator who handed out Golden Fleece Awards for wasteful spending and once was re-elected on $178.

The 71-year-old senator, a longtime physical fitness enthusiast, said Thursday he will not seek re-election in 1988 because "I'd be almost 80 years old when I retired in 1984. That's too old."

The announcement, which startled many politicians, came 30 years to the day after Proxmire was first elected to the U.S. Senate to fill the seat vacated by the death of Republican Joseph R. McCarthy.

Soviet near-collision not prevented

WASHINGTON — Federal aviation officials say they have found no evidence to verify a Soviet airline pilot's report that his plane was nearly hit by a U.S. jet fighter over the New York area.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar on Thursday declined to rule out that the incident actually occurred. But he said air traffic controllers noticed no aircraft near the Soviet jetliner on their radar screens, and a replay of the radar tape showed the same thing.

Soviet officials say the Aeroflot airliner was approaching New York's Kennedy Airport on Sunday when a near-collision occurred. The Soviet Embassy in Washington has demanded an explanation.

Defense PACs' aid follows pattern

WASHINGTON — Members of congressional committees that deal with defense spending and policy received nearly $3 million in Pentagon contracts in 1986. Boeing, General Dynamics, General Electric, General Motors, Hughes Aircraft, Grumman, Lockheed, McDonnell Douglas, Raytheon, Rockwell International and United Technologies.

Earliest summit date: late November

LOS ANGELES (AP) — White House officials, responding to a spate of reports of a possible summit meeting between Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and President Reagan, said today the likelihood of such a meeting this year would be late November.

However, they said no plans for such a meeting have been set in motion.

"In our minds, we will say to ourselves that if all this happens, it will probably happen in November, but that doesn't mean we are talking to the Soviets about it," said an official with the vacationing President Reagan in California.

The official spoke on condition he not be identified.

The Washington Post, quoting diplomatic sources in Moscow, said in a report published today that Gorbachev has reserved the last week in October and, as an alternative, the second half of November, for a possible summit.

But it also said, in a separate story from Los Angeles, that the administration is operating on the "working assumption" that a U.S.-Soviet summit will be held in the United States late in November.

Dates for a summit are tentative and won't be set until Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze meet in September, the Post said.

Unidentified diplomats in Moscow told the Post that Moscow tentatively favors late October for the summit, and Soviet diplomats have postponed trips to the Soviet Union by Australian and Portuguese leaders that were to have taken place then.

The alternate time preferred is the second half of November, the Post's sources said. The first half of November will be occupied with a major celebration of the 70th anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

Soviet officials have said West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's offer to scrap the 72 obsolescent Pershing 1A nuclear missiles based in his country has helped clear obstacles to a U.S.-Soviet arms agreement, which both sides have described as a prerequisite for a summit.

"Of course, after Kohl's statement, the situation has changed for the better," Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi Gerasimov told reporters Thursday.

U.S. and Soviet diplomats are meeting in Moscow and further sessions are scheduled for other European capitals in preparation for a summit, the Post said.

Flery pileup kills six on N.J. turnpike

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — A tractor-trailer went out of control in a New Jersey Turnpike construction area, triggering a fiery, nine-vehicle pileup that killed six people and injured at least 13, police said.

"The people that weren't burned were laying all over the side of the road and the highway," said fire photographer James Bonner, one of the first rescuers to arrive. "We saw the cars all on fire. It was just unbelievable."

Bonner said one of the injured Thursday was a young girl who told him: "I just saw my parents burn to death in our car."

The 2:48 p.m. accident closed southbound lanes for three hours, and northbound lanes for nearly eight, said state police spokesman Capt. Joe Kobus.

Police were presented today for the six fatalities, some of whom were burned beyond recognition. At least one of the 13 injured was hospitalized in critical condition, hospital authorities said.

A tractor-trailer burns in the back-ground as rescue workers help people involved in Thursday's multi-vehicle accident on the New Jersey Turnpike at Cherry Hill. The pileup killed six people and injured at least 13.

White House likes contra-aid proposal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With President Reagan pleading not to let the Contra movement die, the White House is reacting favorably to a proposal that military aid for the Nicaraguan rebels be placed in escrow while peace is sought.

Six rebel leaders presented the plan to Reagan in a 40-minute meeting Thursday as the president continued a series of meetings on public issues during a five-day break in his vacation.

He delivered an address on East-West relations Wednesday and was meeting today with a delegation headed by Illinois Gov. James Thompson. His presentation of the federal appeals court Judge Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court.

Asked about Bork's prospects for confirmation, presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said, "We're very optimistic, think his chances are very good. He's winning solid support with his meetings and sessions with congressional leaders."

Bork faces strong opposition from some Senate liberals, however, when confirmation hearings begin Sept. 15 before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The aid plan presented by the Nicaraguan rebel leaders calls for Congress to approve an unspecified amount of aid, divided into humanitarian and military funds.

The humanitarian aid would be available immediately after the new fiscal year begins Oct. 1, but the military funds could not be spent unless it is determined that Nicaragua's leftist government is failing to live up to commitments in the peace plan it signed Aug. 7 in Guatemala City.

Alfredo Cesar Acuirre, one of the rebel leaders, said it would be up to the administration and Congress to decide how to make such a determination. Fitzwater said that was among details that remained to be worked out.

Iran tests own plane; convoy hides in storm

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran scoffed at the threat of a United Nations arms embargo, saying it has flight-tested its first home-produced plane and vowing to press its 7-year-old war with Iraq to victory.

Meanwhile, sandstorms blowing across the Persian Gulf on Thursday reduced visibility and made it difficult to determine the location of the latest northbound convoy of reflagged Kuwaiti oil tankers and U.S. Navy warships.

Iran has spent billions of dollars since the war began in September 1980, buying weapons on the international black market despite a U.S.-imposed arms embargo that the United States itself violated in an arms-for-hostages deal.

Team USA's goaltending key in Canada Cup

By Ken Rappoport
The Associated Press

HARTFORD - Expected to rise or fall on its goaltending, injury-riddled Team USA hopes Finland tonight in an opening game of Canada Cup '87.

"We'll go as far as our goaltending will take us," Team USA Coach Bob Johnson said Thursday.

"If we don't get good goaltending," added defenseman Rod Langway of the Washington Capitals, "we could lose every game. Otherwise, we could do as well as anybody."

John Vanbiesbroek of the New York Rangers appeared to have the inside track on the starting goaltending assignment over Buffalo's Tom Barraso.

"Bob Mason is not a consideration for the first game," assistant coach Ted Sator said of the former Washington goaltender now with Chicago.

Vanbiesbroek has looked especially sharp in exhibition play. Another factor in Vanbiesbroek's favor: Barraso was the goat in the '84 Canada Cup semifinals when Team USA lost to Sweden 9-2. Johnson coached the team.

"Our goaltending and our defense are better than it was in 1984," Sator said. "But I don't think we can be considered the odds-on favorite in this tournament. Obviously, the Soviet Union and Canada are the favorites. We'll have to play very well in all facets of the game to be competitive."

Concedes Vanbiesbroek: "Sure, we're improved. But while we've taken one step forward, everyone else has taken two."

If Team USA is considered stronger defensively and in the goaltending department than it was in 1984, when it finished a surprising second in the round-robin competition, it is most certainly weaker offensively.

Four of the top six scorers from the 1984 team are missing this year because of injury: Bryan Trottier, Neal Broten, Brian Lawton and Bryan Erickson.

In addition, Mark Johnson has suffered a pulled flexor muscle in his upper left leg and is questionable for tonight's game.

Johnson, a former captain of the Hartford Whalers who is now with the New Jersey Devils, had two goals in the 1984 Canada Cup and also played in 1981.

The center-left wing practiced Wednesday for the first time and took moderately hard shots in Team USA's 90-minute practice.

"The leg feels pretty good," Johnson said. "I was skating at half-to-three-quarter speed for over an hour without pain. I have to be pleased with that. The resting I've done was the best thing for it. I guess rest heals just about everything eventually."

Johnson, son of the USA coach, suffered the injury two weeks ago in an exhibition game against Team Canada. He played through practice last Saturday, but Sunday the muscle tightened considerably and Johnson could no longer play.

In hopes of beefing up the Team USA scoring, center Corey Millen was plucked from the U.S. Olympic team. With many of the top veterans out, the U.S. team will be counting heavily on Pat LaFontaine of the New York Islanders for scoring production.

"We've always been a top defensive team," said Calgary's Joey Mullen. "Therefore, scoring will be very important for this team to succeed."

Sator said Team USA was "itching" to get started after two victories against the U.S. Olympians and four losses to Team Canada in the exhibition games.

The Finnish team was a little more tentative, according to Reijo Routsalainen.

"We're not sure about our team," Routsalainen said. "We've been doing a lot of traveling and we're pretty tired now."

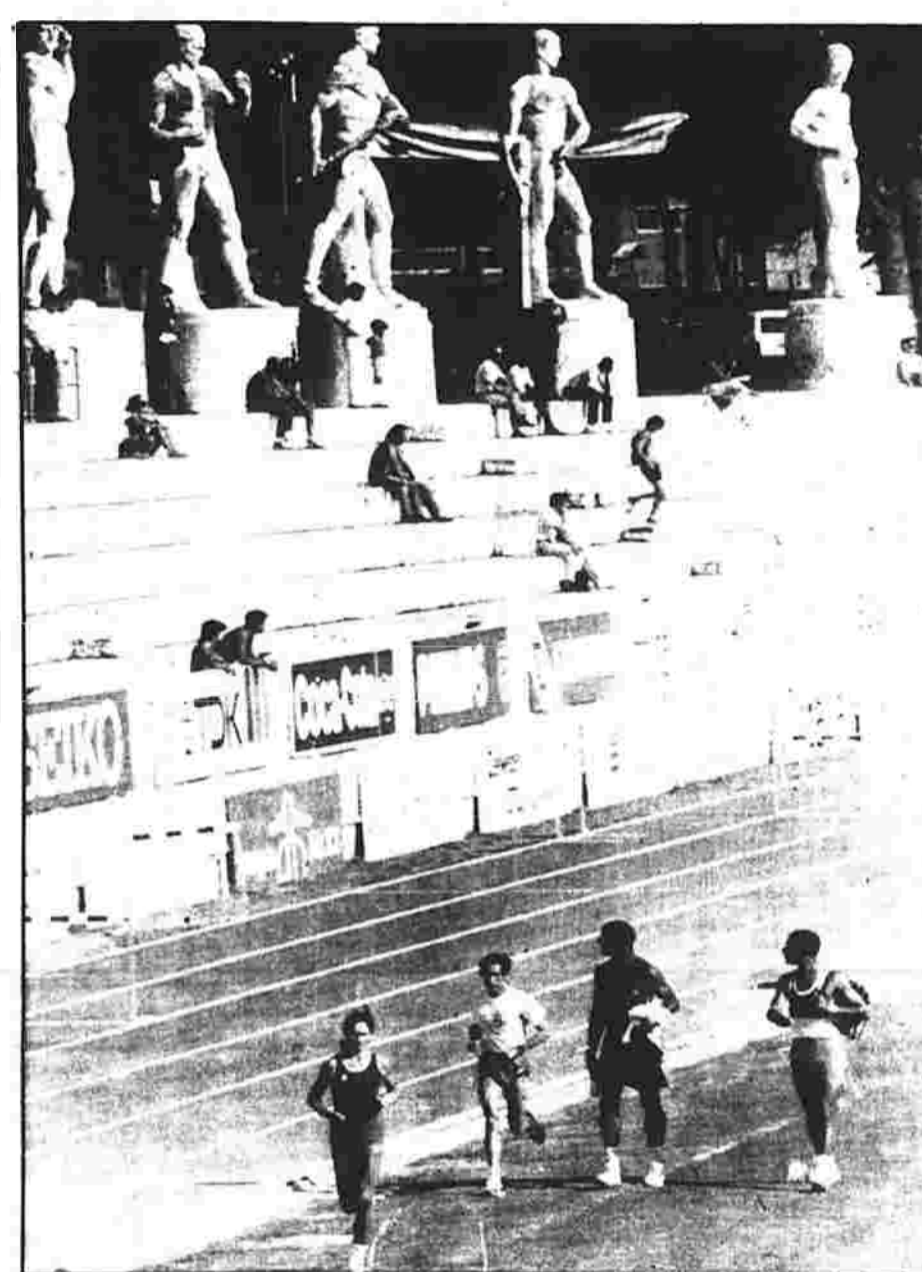

Not much has been going right of late logistically for the travel-weary Finns.

They were originally scheduled to be in Hartford on Tuesday. But the team had transportation problems from Calgary and did not arrive in Hartford until Thursday night.

They were scheduled to practice at the Civic Center Thursday night, but had to cancel when their equipment didn't show up.

Johnson plans to prove himself in Rome

ROME (AP) - When Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson ponders past performances in major world events, neither his own nor those of American rival Carl Lewis offer much reassurance for this week's World Track and Field Championships.

Despite being the top 100-meter sprinter over the last two seasons, Johnson's medal box looks relatively empty, with only two bronze medals from the 1984 Olympic Games compared with Lewis' four gold medals from the 1984 Olympics and three from the 1983 world championships.

"That's the past," Johnson said when asked of his comparative failures in big meets.

As athletes continued to congregate for the nine-day championships, which opens Saturday, organizers announced that the 10,000-meter run would be contested as a final with no preliminaries and also setough standards for qualifying in the field events.

Nevertheless, talk centered on the clash in the 100.

The lack of gold medals doesn't worry Johnson, who says it counts more that he has beaten Lewis in their last four meetings, including one this year.

"I don't feel any pressure," Johnson said. "I'm ready to go."

In the earlier meetings with Johnson, "I definitely haven't been in best shape," Lewis said. "I wasn't as focused mentally so they (the losses) have no bearing whatsoever" on Sunday's final.

The clash also has reignited rumors of animosity between the two.

"I really don't think it's a big deal," Lewis said. "Ben is trying to be the best in the world and so am I... Whatever he feels he has to do to attain that is his business; whatever I have to do to attain that is my business."

Johnson's business is to get a fast start, while Lewis will look to come back in the second 50 meters. Explaining his explosive start, Johnson was philosophical.

"When it comes, it comes," he said. "When it doesn't, there is nothing I can do about it."

Lewis is more methodical and deliberate in his approach, hoping for "a more smooth, a more accelerating race. I have a strong finish."

Johnson, a 25-year-old Canadian, has threatened Calvin Smith's 1983 world record of 9.93 seconds several times, missing it twice by only .02 seconds.

Lewis, 28, has taken a low-key approach to his main test of the year.

"The ultimate goal is to see how many gold medals I can win," he said.

Lewis also is going in the long jump and the 400-meter race. While a world record is the only thing that has eluded Lewis in his six-year-international career, Johnson is still looking to make a mark with either a record or a world title. His only golds came in last year's Commonwealth Games, which were hit hard by a boycott, and the 1985 World Cup competition.

While the Johnson-Lewis duel dominates the pre-race hoopla, an outsider might well run off with the laurels.

"You cannot rule out anyone," Lewis said, mentioning fellow American Mark Witherspoon as a possible winner.

Other outsiders include Ray Stewart, who ran a wind-aided 9.89 in the Pan Am Games earlier this month, and Nigerian Chidi Imoh, who ran 9.92, again with too much wind, at Nairobi.

Titles, not times, will be important on Sunday, Lewis said.

The 10,000 final, originally scheduled for Monday, will be held Saturday night, in the same time slot that had been allotted for the qualifying heats, organizers said Thursday.

The qualifying heats were eliminated because of an insufficient number of competitors. The final will be held with 28 runners.

The tough automatic qualifying standards for field events were established by the meet's technical committee.

Java Gold 'muddies' the three-year-old picture

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. - As thoroughbred racing nears the start of the fall championship season in New York, the 3-year-old picture is anything but clear.

Before last Saturday's $1 million Travers Stakes for 3-year-olds at Saratoga, two horses reigned head and shoulders above the rest of the 3-year-old equine crowd - Alysheba and Bet Twice. Alysheba (winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness Stakes), and Bet Twice (winner of the Belmont and Haskell Stakes), have staged a classic rivalry reminiscent of two peerless adversaries in 1978 - Affirmed and Alydar.

To add to the rivalry, Bet Twice was runner-up to Alysheba in both the Derby and Preakness while Alysheba was second best to Bet Twice in the Haskell. Billed as the "Midsummer Derby," the Travers was as appealing a 3-year-old race as has been assembled this decade. Besides Alysheba and Bet Twice, there was Gulch (winner of the Metropolitan Mile), Polish Navy (winner of the Jim Dandy Stakes), Temperate Bill (winner of the Swaps Stakes), Cryptoclearance, and the horse whose training had centered around the Travers - Java Gold, winner of the Whitney Handicap against older horses on Aug. 8.

Jim Tierney
Herald Sports Writer

ALL OF THE HORSES entered came into the race in prime form. There was only one thing which could spoil this enviable array of 3-year-old colts, and it did - the weather.

If you have ever been to a race track, you realize that when it rains, the track is the worst place to be for everyone, including the horses. The Travers was the supposed rubber match between Alysheba and Bet Twice, each having beaten the other twice, and one of them would have a leg up on the 3-year-old championship. It wasn't to be.

When the rains came last Saturday, there was speculation about which horses could handle an "off" track. However, Alysheba was still made the 5-2 betting favorite and Java Gold was the second choice at 3-1. To intensify the already muddy Saratoga track, torrential rains came six minutes before post time.

As the 1 1/4-mile race unfolded, it was clear that Alysheba couldn't handle the sloppy going. Alysheba was never closer than fifth and finished sixth. Bet Twice made one strong move on the far turn but faded in the stretch and placed fifth. Java Gold, in last place and 15 lengths off the lead on the backstretch, made up all of that ground in the final 5/16 of a mile and caught Cryptoclearance in the deep stretch to win the Travers. Java Gold was the first horse since Alydar in 1978 to both the Whitney and the Travers.

Java Gold was the first horse since Alydar in 1978 to both the Whitney and the Travers.

HOW COULD TWO HORSES, Alysheba and Bet Twice, dominate the 3-year-old picture and finish fifth and sixth, respectively, in such a key race as the Travers?

Chris McCarron, the jockey of Alysheba said it best: "I think this race should be thrown out. The mud altered the true performance of a lot of horses. I think the stop takes a whole lot of validity out of this race, as far as the 3-year-old title goes. However, it does thrust Java Gold into the picture. I don't want to downplay his achievements. I don't want it to be a shame that a star-studded group of 3-year-olds, called by many as the finest field ever in the 118-year history of the prestigious Travers, had to contest the race over a sloppy track."

Granted, Java Gold is a legitimate champion, having won four of five races as a 2-year-old and four of five as a 3-year-old, however, Alysheba and Bet Twice would give him a few difficulties on a fast track.

"I think things would've been different on a fast track," Craig Perret, the jockey of Bet Twice, said. "Maybe Java Gold is the best of all, as of now. Two or three weeks from now, we'll see."

Pat Day, the jockey of Java Gold, believes in his colt. "The race track may not have worked to the others' benefit," Day said. "Java Gold beat all the top 3-year-olds in the country."

WITH 3-YEAR-OLD RACES few and far between now, Alysheba, Bet Twice and Java Gold may not meet again until the Breeders' Cup Classic Nov. 21 at Hollywood Park. The Travers' owners may run him on the turf, thus preventing another meeting with Alysheba. These three may meet each other against older horses during the fall championship series at Belmont Park.

It would be pleasurable to see these three horses go at it just one more time on an dry track.

Trainer who won Travers tries for Saratoga's Hopeful

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Trainer Mack Miller will try to win another of Saratoga's most famous stakes on Saturday when he sends Crusader Sword for the $150,000-added Hopeful.

Miller, who won the Travers for 3-year-olds with Paul Mellon's Java Gold last Saturday, also owns Crusader Sword, who will try for a second stakes victory and his third win in four starts when he contends the event for 2-year-olds.

The son of Damascus won the six-furlong Saratoga Special on Aug. 7 by a neck over Tejano. There also will be a grass stakes on Saturday's card, with Talenko heading an 11-horse field for the 1-16-mile Saratoga Budweiser Breeders' Cup. It will be the first start for Talenko since he upset America by a length in the 1-16-mile Bernard Baruch Handicap on the turf on Aug. 16 at Saratoga.

Talenko will carry top weight of 117 pounds in the race, which has a $50,000-added purse and a $100,000 award from the Breeders' Cup Fund. Weighted at 114 pounds is Duluth, who finished third in the event for 2-year-olds.

Another contender is Double headed on Saturday's card, with Talenko heading an 11-horse field for the 1-16-mile Saratoga Budweiser Breeders' Cup. It will be the first start for Talenko since he upset America by a length in the 1-16-mile Bernard Baruch Handicap on the turf on Aug. 16 at Saratoga.

Feint, 115. Crusader Sword will meet rivals in the Hopeful, including the D. Wayne Lukas-trained entry of endurance and Success Express. Endurance finished third behind Crusader Sword and Tejano in the Saratoga Special, then finished fourth in the six-furlong Saratoga on Aug. 19 at Saratoga.

Also entered in the Hopeful are Velvet Fog, True And Blue, Kunjar and Bill E. Shears. Velvet Fog finished third in the Saratoga Special. The field will carry 87- to 122 pounds. If seven start, the Hopeful will be worth $174,300.

Derby winner, drew the top weight of 126 pounds for the Cabrillo, Super Diamond, assigned 124, and Nestor's Star, 116, finished 2d, respectively, in Del Mar's 1-16-mile San Diego Handicap on Aug. 19. Hopeful World, 117, rounds out the field for the Cabrillo.

Connecticut In Brief

Book alleges Courant is unethical

HARTFORD — A former reporter for The Hartford Courant says the newspaper, the state's largest, has bungled some stories and misled the public on others.

Andrew Kreig also claimed Thursday that Courant reporters have been subjected to sexual harassment and that the paper "needlessly inflamed" Hartford's Puerto Rican community in its coverage of a fatal hit-and-run accident.

Kreig, who spent 14 years at the newspaper before leaving in 1984, has written a book on the Courant, entitled "Spiked: How Chain Management Corrupted America's Oldest Newspaper." He believes that Courant management deteriorated after the Times Mirror Co. bought the paper in 1979.

He pointed to a planned series about health hazards in the workplace that he said was ultimately watered down on the orders of Michael J. Davies, who became the Courant's publisher after the Times Mirror takeover. Kreig said Davies was worried about how the series would be received in the business community.

McNamara to leave gaming board

HARTFORD — William J. McNamara resigned Thursday from the state's Gaming Policy Board after six years as a member of the panel that sets policy for legalized gambling in the state.

McNamara, of Brookfield, said he wanted to devote more time to his law office. A successor will be named soon by Gov. William O'Neill, according to Roland Lange, chairman of the board.

Hartford teachers without licenses

HARTFORD — Thirty-six public school teachers in Hartford have failed to renew their state teaching licenses, placing their jobs in jeopardy.

"This caught us completely off guard," said Daniel R. Seals, president of the Hartford Federation of Teachers. "Some of the teachers are nervous."

Those who are not certified will lose their jobs, said John Keaveny, the Hartford school system's administrator for personnel and labor relations. The 36 make up about 2 percent of Hartford's 1,940 teachers.

Fourteen Hartford teachers already have missed a deadline for renewing their licenses, and 21 more must file transcripts, a $15 application fee and other paperwork by Monday, state officials said Thursday. One other license is due to expire in November.

Some teachers in other towns are in the same predicament, but state officials did not have an exact count.

Teamsters plan project for disabled

EAST HAVEN — The Teamsters union has proposed building 24 apartments for the disabled, according to the town's economic development director.

Plans to build the project in New Haven fell through four months ago after neighbors opposed the project.

Teamsters Local 443 has asked the town Urban Renewal and Housing Agency to consider a plan to build the two-story apartment building on 1.3 acres of town-owned redevelopment land. Arthur L. DeSorbio, town economic development director, said Thursday. No cost estimate was released.

He said the economic development office will call a meeting with neighbors and the Teamsters when a plan is submitted. DeSorbio said Mayor Bob Norman is committed to the project, but not if residents oppose it.

City seeks aid for rescue effort

BRIDGEPORT — The City of Bridgeport has given approval to apply for state emergency aid to help pay for rescue operations after the collapse of L'Ambiance Plaza.

The state advisory committee overseeing a $8 million emergency relief fund gave the city permission to apply for aid, James Crispino, the city's comptroller said Thursday.

Crispino said the city plans to request about $1 million toward the estimated $7 million in costs related to the April 23 building collapse.

The city has also submitted an informal list of expenses to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development which has said it would make $1 million available to help the city pay disaster costs. The building collapse killed 28 people.

Appeal filed in tandem-truck suit

HARTFORD — Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman has moved to appeal a federal Department of Transportation ruling that rejected Connecticut's request to keep double-trailer trucks off Interstate 95 between Greenwich and New Haven during rush hours.

"Interstate 95 was not built to accommodate these monster rigs," Lieberman said Thursday. He filed the appeal in U.S. District Court in Hartford. "Tandem trucks are more dangerous than other vehicles on the road, particularly during rush hours."

In the suit, Lieberman states that the 48-mile stretch of highway from Greenwich to New Haven has one of the highest accident rates in the state and notes that there is, on average, only one mile between each exit.

Judge denies bail in drug-cash case

NEW HAVEN — A Colombian accused of laundering millions of dollars for cocaine traffickers has been denied bail by a federal judge and linked to a deal in Miami in which FBI undercover agents were to buy 800 kilograms of cocaine.

Carlos Restrepo has not been charged in connection with the Miami deal, which Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Palmer said Thursday was near completion when Restrepo was arrested in June in Miami on the laundering charges.

Palmer revealed details of the Miami deal while arguing that Restrepo should be held without bond pending trial on the laundering charges. Restrepo faces a maximum 1,065-year prison sentence and $42 million fine in the laundering case.

Palmer said Restrepo may be indicted in the Miami deal, which involved almost $14 million worth of cocaine.

Crash spills toxic chemicals on I-84

WATERBURY — An accident involving two tractor trailers caused more than 20 barrels of toxic chemicals to spill onto Interstate 84 in Waterbury Thursday, state police said.

A tractor-trailer carrying steel and driven by Lawrence Campbell, 43, of Dillon, S.C., went out of control, striking a guardrail and sliding across the highway around 12:20 p.m., police said.

Authorities said a second truck carrying chemicals and driven by Merland Purdy of Magnolia, Ark., tried to avoid the first rig but jack-knifed, spilling four 2,000-pound barrels of phenyl sulfonic acid and six 3,600-pound barrels of methylene chloride onto the roadway, police said.

CL&P proposes customer refunds

HARTFORD — The Connecticut Light & Power Co. has proposed refunding $26 million to its customers.

The monthly bill of a CL&P customer using 500 kilowatt-hours per month would be reduced by 73 cents to reflect the refund, the company said Thursday in a prepared statement.

The refunds would be credited from September 1987 to July 1988 if the plan receives Department of Public Utility Control approval, CL&P said.

CL&P said the $26 million credit is the third consecutive refund to customers and the largest to date.

Appeal must go on, EDC attorney says

The town has no choice but to continue its appeal of the Superior Court ruling that bars it from issuing bonds for improvements in the Buckland Hills area, the lawyer representing the town's Economic Development Commission said today.

EDC attorney Kevin O'Brien said it appears from remarks made by an attorney for the Manchester Property Owners Association that the appeal is not moot, as the MPOA claims.

Attorney Kathleen Eldergill, who represents the MPOA, said Wednesday that the position of her client is that all tax-increment bonds issued by the town are subject to the Town Charter provision that requires a referendum.

O'Brien said Thursday that since all such tax-increment bonds, not just the currently proposed $13 million bond for road and utility improvements in the Buckland Hills area, are involved, the town has to act on with the appeal to protect itself in the future.

The appeal is of a Superior Court decision in favor of MPOA. The court agreed with the group's contention that the town could not issue the bonds without holding a townwide referendum on the question.

The town has contended that the bonds were to be issued under a general statute that made the charter provisions for a referendum inapplicable.

When the town's Board of Directors decided to hold a referendum anyway, despite the fact that it is appealing the Superior Court decision, Bruce Beck, an attorney for Elizabeth Sadoiski and other citizens who brought the suit, called on the town to drop the appeal. Beck said in a letter to Town Attorney John W. Cooney that if the voters approve the bond issue, the court will dismiss the case as moot. If the voters turn down the bond issue and the town pursues the appeal, Beck said in the letter, "it would mislead the voters into thinking their vote was meaningless."

In response, O'Brien proposed that Beck agree with all parties to the suit to have Superior Court Judge John P. Maloney set aside his decision and withdraw the suit. O'Brien said he would then advise his client, the EDC, to drop the appeal, and the town would continue with its plan to hold a referendum on the $13 million bond issue at the Nov. 3 town election.

Since the decision was handed down, the town had contended that it has far-reaching implications for the kind of representative government under which the town operates. But Beck has contended the issue is a narrow one.

The next step will be for the directors to vote to put the question on the voting machines in the November election.

The bonds will pay for road and utility improvements in a 386-acre area in Buckland, which includes the site of the Mall at Buckland Hills. The bonds would be paid off from increases in the tax revenue from real estate in the area of about 183 acres within the 386-acre site.

Film director John Huston dies at 81

MIDDLETOWN, R.I. (AP) — Director John Huston, who lived as hard and at times as dangerously as the characters in "The Maltese Falcon," "Pitt's Honor" and other films which he created in a long and honored career, died today. He was 81.

Huston died in his sleep at a home he was renting here during the filming of "Mr. North," said Patty Raya, production coordinator for the movie.

Huston had been released from a hospital in Fall River, Mass., after he was hospitalized for three weeks for emergency treatment of pneumonia complicated by his long-time emphysema. At the time of his release it was said he would be forced to continue physical therapy and medication.

When he collapsed and was hospitalized Wednesday, he had been on his way to start filming of a role in "Mr. North," a movie directed by his son, Danny, and co-starring his daughter Angelica. He was forced to turn over the role to Robert Mitchum, but planned to remain as executive producer.

During his half-century in film, Huston ventured deep into a jungle for "The African Queen," pulled together misfits and outcasts for "Under the Volcano," drank, cranked, befriended such mavericks as Ernest Hemingway and flourished in a Hollywood that cut most rebels down to size. A half-dozen of his 40 feature films were considered classics.

Orson Welles once said Huston was "playing Mephistopheles to his own Faust." For his part, Huston, in his rich, deep voice, repeated his father's advice: "Don't work at anything simply for money. Choose your profession as you would choose your wife: for love — and for money."

Two men found dead in condo

HAMDEN (AP) — The bodies of two men were found in a condominium here early today, and police said they were investigating the deaths as homicides.

Police Chief John P. Ambrogio said the victims hadn't been positively identified and their cause of the death was undetermined. Police suspect the two men were related, possibly father and son, Ambrogio said.

He said the bodies were discovered in a condominium near the campus of Southern Connecticut State University about 12:20 a.m. "Our officers forced entry to the apartment on the request of relatives. They (the victims) hadn't been seen or heard from in about a week," Ambrogio said.

He said officers were still trying to learn if there was any sign of forced entry to the condominium or if anything was missing from the unit.

Asked why the victims hadn't been positively identified by this morning, Ambrogio said, "Only because we're unable to get a relative to the scene."

The chief said police planned to release more details about the crime at a 1 p.m. news conference.

Escapee may have had help

SOMERS (AP) — An inmate who escaped from the Somers state prison may have been helped by a fellow inmate who slept in the escapee's bed to prevent detection by prison officials, according to a published report.

The participation of a second inmate could explain why correction officers touring D-Block Saturday and Sunday didn't immediately discover the escape, the Journal Inquirer newspaper of Manchester reported Thursday. The newspaper quoted two unnamed sources, including a Somers inmate.

State police spokesman Sgt. Daniel Lewis said investigators were exploring the theory as they continued to search for the escaped inmate, Frederick R. Merrill, 46, of Tolland.

D-Block is a high-security section of the Somers prison, where high-risk inmates, some of whom have escaped or attempted escape, are housed to await trial.

The inmate quoted by the newspaper earlier this week told the Journal Inquirer that Merrill remained in a prison's recreation yard when other prisoners returned to their cells Saturday night. Merrill then used hooks fashioned from bedprings to scale a sanitized fence surrounding the facility and was able to elude correction officers answering the tripped alarm.

course in a floor-length brocade gown, but lost his white felt hat near the peanut-butter sandwiches. To get up speed, he raised his skirt at times, revealing stockings and an old-fashioned garter belt.

His teammates, Robyn Reilly and Gina Lylik, were dolled up in blue face cream, hair curlers and rhinestone earrings. "Don't blame this on us," Reilly said. "It's all the fault of Lorretta Greene, our kitchen manager."

The obstacles, designed by Bernard Apter of Regal Men's Shops and Denise Roberts, advertising director of the Herald, required dexterity and a good bit of patience. This was particularly true in the downpour. As one waitress tried to spread the peanut butter on the rapidly disintegrating bread, she wailed, "I can't do this! I'm not even a mommy!"

Along the way to winning the grand prize — $100 worth of merchandise from any Main Street merchant — contestants had to paint a board, screw down a piece of wood, put on a tuxedo and then a tie.

At one table, they cut a balloon string with an emery board, then tied the helium-filled balloon to their tuxedo button.

After completing each of their tasks, the contestants were given a piece of a place setting. Those who got the balloon successfully tied to their jacket buttons received a fork.

When the screw was firmly turned down into the wood, the participant received a knife.

Winning meant arriving at the Feast Fest site, at the corner of Main and Forest streets, and laying out a complete place setting, from the shredding blue paper placemat to the orange soda that passed for wine.

Teammates cheered each other, and offered encouragement. The largest contingent was from Adams Mill Restaurant. Though 12 restaurant employees planned to race, six actually showed up in the rain, including general manager Debbie Kernode.

Kernode had planned to race with her 6-month-old daughter, Kelsey, riding in a backpack. Because the weather was so wet, Kernode had pressed one of the Adams Mill waitresses into service as a baby sitter.

Managers and staff members from Antonio's could have won an award for cheering the loudest. And their lung power seemed to pay off, judging by Corrigan's winning effort.

Second prize went to Jacqueline Gotka, a waitress from Hartford Road Cafe. She looked surprised as organizers told her that a shopping spree was in store for her. Looking down at her wet clothes, she muttered, "I could use some new things."

Others disagreed. Michael Dworkin of the Manchester Environmental Coalition, which has opposed the mall on environmental grounds, said that the mall would cost the average taxpayer $400 in the first year of operation because of the need for town services. "In actuality, this is a tax abatement for Homart," he said. "We're a bunch of suckers."

But Richard Meduski of 48 McDivitt Drive said that improvements to the area around the mall would not cost taxpayers any money. He said he supported the bond issue and a referendum on the abatement for Homart. "We're a bunch of suckers," he said.

Elizabeth Sadoiski, whose lawsuit prompted Judge Maloney's decision, questioned the employment opportunities that would be offered by the mall. Most jobs would be low-wage service positions that few people would want to take, she contended.

Board hears what it wanted

Superior Court ruling last month by Judge John P. Maloney. Maloney said that the directors acted improperly when they voted in December to issue $13 million in tax-increment bonds to pay for improvements around the site of the proposed mall.

The Board of Directors is expected to vote Tuesday to put the referendum question on November's ballot.

William Hooker of 77 Erie St. said that the mall issue is among many of the things residents want more of a say. "We the people want more of a voice," he said.

Before Thursday's hearing began, Town Manager Robert B. Weiss outlined the administration's position on the mall and the financing for the road and utilities improvements.

"Make no mistake," he said. "There will be a shopping center, a mall, East of the River. There is such a pent-up demand for a shopping center in the Manchester-Vernon area that it will come."

The developers of the mall, the Homart Development Co. of Chicago, have said that without improvements financed by the bonds, building the mall on the Buckland Hills site would be too costly. Without that incentive, the developer may turn to South Windsor, Weiss said.

Bonds for the road improvements, affecting a 386-acre area in Buckland Hills, would be paid off over a 15-year period from property taxes on the mall site and an additional 189 acres surrounding the mall.

Weiss emphasized that, unlike ordinary municipal bonds, the tax-increment bonds would not be paid off by residents.

It's a grazer's heaven!

Feast Fest & Peach Fest mean munchies galore

By Nancy Pappas Herald Reporter

Have you heard about the latest food craze?

It's called grazing. Although it sounds like something that involves cows and sheep, it's actually an eating pattern currently embraced by trendy types. It means eating bits and pieces — a snack here, an appetizer there — instead of a complete meal at any one time.

This is a great weekend to join the trend. With Manchester's Feast Fest, the Eighth District Peach Festival, and food available at various other locations, you'd have to work hard to remain hungry.

Start with dinner at Feast Fest. At the corner of Main and Forest streets, you'll have a hard time choosing among the entrees, which include lobster rolls and shrimp salad, fried calamari and fried dumplings, ribs and pizzas.

Then head for the Eighth District Peach Festival, where you'll pay $1.50 for a generous portion of peach shortcake. The serving begins at 6 tonight and continues until the peaches run out.

If you're still not satisfied, you could go back to the Feast Fest, where food will be available until 10 p.m. Desserts include ice cream, fried dough, Belgian waffles, brownies and nutter-butter pie. On a diet?

Then try the fresh fruit parfait.

On Saturday, you could head back to the Feast Fest, if you wish. It will be open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. With so many items available, you'll probably need a second day to try them all.

For a change of pace, why not try a country fair? There's always food galore at these events, and the Brooklyn Fair is no exception. It's open until 9:30 this evening, from 8 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Saturday, and from 8 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. on Sunday. You'll find fried dough and cotton candy, corn dogs and chili dogs, fried vegetables, ice cream waffles, and much more.

If food isn't your only concern, you'll also find a midway, animal shows, live country entertainment, a chain-saw competition and horse racing. Admission is $3 tonight, $4 per person on Saturday or Sunday. The fair is at the intersection of Route 169 and Fairgrounds Road in Brooklyn.

When Sunday dawns and you're hungry once again, you've got a number of options. The Brooklyn Fair reopens at 8 a.m., and Feast Fest reopens at noon. But perhaps you're ready for small tastes of some rather unusual items.

At the Welles-Shipman-Ward House, 972 Main St., South Glastonbury, you'll have the chance to sample chicken-vegetable soup, apple cake, nutmeg cookies and anadama bread, prepared in a huge open hearth fireplace and several beehive ovens.

Cooking will be done as it was when the Welles family owned the property in the late 1700s. Admission is $1 for adults, free for children 12 and under. The fee includes a guided tour of the house. The Glastonbury Weavers will demonstrate their craft, and tours will be offered of an 18th century herb garden.

While you're in that part of the county — in case you're still hungry — you're going to find plenty of orchards where you can pick your own fruit. The state's Department of Agriculture lists Mountain View Farm on Marlborough Road, Belltown Hill Orchards and D. Scaglia Fruit Farm on Matson Hill Road, Cavanna Farm and Sozoda's Farm on Woodland Street, all in the southern part of Glastonbury.

In case all of this doesn't satisfy your craving for unusual foods, Luisa Parreira — the new owner of Johnnie's Brass Key Restaurant on Main Street — is having her grand reopening on Monday.

Throughout the day you can try stewed rabbit with rice, colish with potatoes, pork loin sandwiches, linguica sandwiches, and Portuguese broccolo soup.

Best-loved polka turns 60 this year

By Iva Drolapova
The Associated Press

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — It was the No. 1 jukebox song of 1939, a jaunty ditty about unrequited love known as "The Beer Barrel Polka."

It's been 60 years since Czech bandleader Jaromir Vejvoda wrote the song, whose original Czech title, "Skoda Lasky," means "lost love."

"The Beer Barrel Polka" is one of the most popular polka tunes in the United States, where the folk dance is enjoying a renaissance of sorts. The fast dance is done in double time with a hop and three quick steps originated in Bohemia, a former province of Czechoslovakia, sometime in the early 19th century.

The world-famous tune was Vejvoda's first composition, and the most well-known of more than 70 songs he wrote before 1981 when old age and frailty forced him to give up his professional musical life.

THE FAME OF "The Beer Barrel Polka" turned Vejvoda's 65th birthday last March into quite an event, with congratulations arriving from his New York publisher, Shapiro Bernstein, and special editions of his works appearing in Austria and West Germany.

Interviewed at his spacious home in Zbraslav, a historic town some six miles up the Vitava River from Prague, Vejvoda recalled how his international hit came into being.

"I wrote it just for fun in 1927 for my own band," he said. "But other bandleaders liked it and asked for it in music shops, so the Hoffman and Widow publishing house in Prague approached me and printed it."

An instant success at home as a lover's lament, "Skoda Lasky" made a victorious advance to the United States after it was published in 1939 by Shapiro Bernstein.

WILL GLAHE and his orchestra recorded the English version in Germany in 1938, and it sold 1 million copies within five years. Sammy Kaye and his orchestra continued the popularity of the tune with their subsequent recording. The Andrews Sisters also had a hit record of the song.

"The Beer Barrel Polka," a reputed favorite with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, sounded across Allied battlefields during World War II. Its fame extended to Germany, Holland and Switzerland under the name "Rosamunde," and to Scandinavia as "Hvor er Min Kone."

Its fame as "Rosamunde" is reputed to have started with a German accordion player who played in a Prague variety show in the 1930s and later took the song with him on travels around Western Europe.

Everywhere it went, and under its various titles, "Skoda Lasky" gained the rare honor of belonging to the nation where it was played.

In Vejvoda's hometown of Zbraslav, popular legend has it that a boy from the town who was sent to Norway to do forced labor in World War II could not convince Norwegianians the tune was a Czech and not a Norwegian song.

IN THE 1960s, a British municipal transport worker brought a double-decker red London bus to Zbraslav as the price of losing a bet that "The Beer Barrel Polka" was an English song.

Although Vejvoda's song brought him fame, he remained a brass bandleader throughout his professional life, following a family tradition that goes back several generations.

His Vejvodova Kapela, or Vejvoda band, played at home and abroad, particularly in Austria and West Germany. In 1981, in what the composer says was the highlight of his career, he won a golden plaque from Radio Luxembourg and gave a concert heard by an estimated 230,000 listeners.

Interviewed at his spacious home in Zbraslav, a historic town some six miles up the Vitava River from Prague, Vejvoda recalled how his international hit came into being.

Everywhere it went, and under its various titles, "Skoda Lasky" gained the rare honor of belonging to the nation where it was played.

Store is lottery lucky

ROBINSON, Ill. (AP) — Lady Luck does more than smile on Gene Wilkin's liquor store. She practically grins ear to ear.

Wilkin's store, The Liquor Rack, this week sold its fourth multimillion-dollar state lottery ticket.

"We're doing our best to let people know we'll have five," Wilkin said Thursday. "If you don't think that way, you shouldn't be playing."

On Wednesday, Richard Lawrence, a 27-year-old laborer, won a $10 million jackpot with a ticket bought at The Liquor Rack, which sold a $1.6 million ticket in 1984, a $2.3 million one in 1986 and an $8 million one a month ago.

Advice

Any words are OK words to bereaved

DEAR ABBY: A year ago our daughter was raped and stabbed to death. Words cannot express our horror and pain. It was bad enough to lose our daughter, but it seems we also lost our friends. Friends we had known for years didn't call or come to see us. We were stunned as though we had some kind of terrible disease — and just when we needed their friendship most. Now, when we run into former friends, they act embarrassed and say, "We would have called or come over, but we didn't know what to say."

DEAR MOM: My heart goes out to you and to every other parent who has lost a child. The message in your letter is not news to me. I have read it many times from many grieving parents. So, let me send this very important message to my readers: If you have friends who have lost a loved one in death — please don't abandon them. They don't need to lose you, too.

DEAR ABBY: You said: "A pox on those folks who dial a number and their party doesn't answer after the fourth or fifth ring, they hang up. Many people (especially those who are in years) cannot spring to the telephone in 10 seconds, so give them a break and let the phone ring at least 10 or 12 times." Do you know that MCI charges for calls over five rings whether or not the party answers the phone? I have paid twice before I realized that this is their policy. I thought you would like to know.

DEAR ABBY: I recently received a wedding invitation to be held in a neighboring state. On the bottom corner was stated: "Reception: Covered dish dinner immediately following ceremony." Surely that doesn't mean that they expect us to drive that distance and bring a covered dish, does it? I've never heard of such a thing. I always thought the bride's family gave the reception, and it could be either very lavish or simple punch and wedding cake if they couldn't afford much.

DEAR ABBY: My staff checked with MCI and was told it is not MCI's policy to charge for calls whether the party answers or not. A spokesperson said: "Some tone difference (static in the background, picked up while dialing) could record as 'completed' on our equipment — even when a call was not completed. So check your phone bill, and if you are charged for an uncompleted call, ask for credit and you will receive it." And have a nice day!

Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (30 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm male, 17, with an embarrassing problem. When I was 14 all the secondary sexual characteristics appeared. Her height is 5'10" and I still sound like a little kid. Is there anything I can do?

DEAR READER: The lowering of the voice in male adolescents is due to genetic influences and hormone levels. You have little control over your genes. However, your voice might be improved by the judicious use of male hormone to supplement the amount already manufactured by your body.

I suggest that you seek a consultation with an endocrinologist, a doctor who specializes in disorders of the glandular system. Such a specialist will be able to advise you whether hormone treatment would be appropriate and effective in your case.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report on weight loss tells you how to lose weight wisely — and keep it off. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to ask for Winning the Battle Of the Bulge.

Those with Marfan's syndrome are tall

DEAR DR. GOTT: My niece has Marfan's syndrome. Her height is 6'10" and she's still growing. What can you tell us about this disease?

DEAR READER: Marfan's syndrome is an inherited abnormality of connective tissue, the material that holds organs together. Patients with this disorder are tall and thin and have long extremities. The syndrome is marked by a high, arched palate, crowding of the teeth, poorly developed muscles, asymmetry of the chest cage and spine, inguinal hernias, emphysema, eye abnormalities (especially displacement of the lenses) and degeneration of the aorta (causing aneurysm).

Virtually any organ can be affected, depending on the severity of the disease, because connective tissue is widely distributed in the body. The most serious consequence of Marfan's syndrome is the aortic involvement.

This major blood vessel may balloon out, cause heart strain or burst. Aortic disease is the leading cause of death in Marfan's patients, most of whom succumb to cardiovascular complications at an average age of 32.

Modern surgical techniques make repair of the weakened aorta a lifesaving procedure. However, not all patients require surgery; a considerable amount of variability occurs among people with this ailment. In milder forms of the disease, simple restrictions — such as prohibition from strenuous activity and contact sports — may enable Marfan's patients to lead relatively normal lives.

Other medical treatment includes addressing problems that arise: hormone therapy (to speed up maturation of bones in children), braces to prevent spinal curvature and prophylactic antibiotics to prevent heart-valve infection.

Some experts have suggested that Abraham Lincoln had Marfan's syndrome. Surely, there are many patients with the syndrome who lead long, productive lives. Although the cause of Marfan's is unknown, much can now be done to correct the abnormalities seen in the disease. For people with the condition, regular medical examination enables doctors to identify early abnormalities and treat them as needed.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Tall weeds and road signs aren't the only thing along rural U.S. 127 this week.
