LOYALISTS CRUSH COUP

Philippine rebels appeared to have little support

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Loyal troops backed by helicopter gunships and low-level bombing seized strongholds of mutineers Friday to crush the bloodiest coup attempt yet against President Corazon Aquino. Her only son was wounded.

On Saturday morning, 500 rebel troops surrendered at Camp Aguinaldo, the military headquarters that was the scene of the heaviest fighting, the military said. On Friday night, it said other 462 rebels had been captured.

Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, the military chief of staff, had told his subordinates Friday morning that only about 800 troops had taken part in the mutiny. It was not known how many still might be holding out.

Ramos had said "mopping up operations" were under way and he expected full order to be restored in Manila by Saturday.

The uprising centered in Manila but the commander of paramilitary national police in Cebu City, 350 miles southeast, backed the rebels, putting the mayor and provincial governor under house arrest.

Military and hospital sources said at least 25 people had been killed and 275 wounded, including Benigno Aquino III. Mrs. Aquino, 54, said her 27-year-old son was seriously hurt and three companions were killed when gunfire riddled their car near the presidential palace early Friday.

The mutiny began at 1 a.m. Friday with attacks on the Malacanang presidential palace compound and other targets.

The rebels did not appear to have widespread, popular support. When one group was chased away from the tall transmitter tower of government-run Channel 4 television station, hundreds of people poured into the streets, cheering the loyal defenders and shouting, "Cory! Cory!" the nickname of the popular president.

Still, when three frightened rebels appeared from hiding in shrubbery near the tower, a few in the crowd shielded them and helped them escape, and no one tried to stop them.

Those killed during the uprising included two news photographers — a New Zealander and a Filipino — and numerous civilians caught in cross-fire.

Police say Merrill was seen outside Fowler's in Coventry

COVENTRY — Somers prison escapee Frederick R. Merrill was spotted outside Fowler's Market on Route 44 Friday afternoon, police said.

Merrill, 40, who was reported missing from the Connecticut Correctional Institution, had been awaiting trial on several charges in connection with the beating and sexual assault of a South Windsor woman in March.

He had also been questioned in connection with the March murder of 88-year-old Manchester resident Bernice Martin, but Manchester police have been unable to link him to that crime.

Coventry police said that officers are keeping an eye the area around Fowler's Market. Residents are also being advised to lock their doors.

No details of the Coventry incident were available late Friday night.

Meanwhile, Gov. William A. O'Neill said Friday he was as frustrated as anyone else that Merrill had not yet been captured.

But, he told reporters, "when you look at the number of persons who are confined versus those that escape, the percentage is insignificant."

"If they find the individual, and I certainly hope they do, I hope they would find how he got out," the governor said.

Merrill, described by O'Neill as "apparently a very clever individual," has escaped from three other correctional facilities before.

Asked if the incident would aggravate matters as the state tries to answer protests from residents of Suffield and Newtown, where new correctional facilities are planned, O'Neill said: "It certainly doesn't help the situation."

"However, I still think it's safe to (live) around one of those facilities," the governor said.

He said security at Somers was being improved at the time of Merrill's escape "and that is going to continue."

Murder victims dead a week

HAMDEN (AP) — Two men may have been dead for almost a week before their bound, decomposed bodies, stabbed in the chest and their throats slashed, were discovered in a condominium in Hamden on Friday, authorities said.

Police said the victims were the owner of the unit, Fred Harris, 59, and his son, Greg Harris, 23.

"At this time, the indication we have is the possible cause of death could be... a stab wound to the chest area and laceration of the throat of both victims," said police Cmdr. Robert Nolan.

The bodies of both men were positively identified by the state medical examiner's office in Farmington, police said.

Police Chief John Ambrogio said the elder Harris also had a daughter, but her whereabouts were unknown.

He declined to comment when asked if the murders were drug-related.

Philip Koontz of Hamden, who said he was a friend of Greg Harris, said the younger Harris recently was released from a drug rehabilitation unit.

Ambrogio said the bodies were discovered in a condominium at 655 Fitch St., near the campus of Southern Connecticut State University, about 12:20 a.m. Friday.

"Our officers forced entry to the apartment on the request of relatives. They (the victims) hadn't been seen or heard from in about a week," Ambrogio said.

He said both victims were last seen alive last weekend.

Nolan said the victims were found in a second-floor bedroom of the two-story unit. Police said the bodies were "bound," but they declined to be more specific.

A stolen car was one of two vehicles found in the Harris' driveway, Ambrogio said. He said police didn't know if the stolen car was connected to the murder.

Officers were still trying to learn if there was any sign of forced entry to the condominium or if anything was missing from the unit, Nolan said.

Girl linked to mother's murder

GLASTONBURY (AP) — Three teen-agers, including the 16-year-old daughter of the victim, were arrested Friday and charged in connection with the murder of 47-year-old Joyce Aparo earlier this month.

Police have now arrested four people in the case, including the boyfriend of the victim's daughter and two of the daughter's friends.

The victim's body was found under a highway overpass in Bernardston, Mass., on Aug. 5, and her car was found abandoned a short distance away. An autopsy determined the Glastonbury woman had been strangled.

Aparo's only child, Karin Aparo, was arrested late Friday and charged with conspiracy to commit murder and accessory to commit murder, said state police spokeswoman Marcy Stamm.

She was being held on $100,000 bond at the city jail in Glastonbury, a suburb of Hartford. Stamm said if the teen failed to post bond, she would be transferred to the state prison in Niantic to await arraignment in Manchester Superior Court Monday.

Stamm refused to discuss details in the girl's case, because the arrest warrant in her case was ordered sealed by Judge Thomas V. O'Keefe.

On Aug. 13, police arrested the teen-age girl's boyfriend, Dennis Coleman, 19, of Glastonbury was charged with felony murder.

Also arrested on Friday were Kira Lintner, 16, and her boyfriend, Christopher E. Wheatley, 19, both of Glastonbury. Stamm said. They were charged with first-degree hindering prosecution after their 2 p.m. arrest, the spokeswoman said.

They were released on $20,000 surety bonds each, pending arraignment in Manchester Superior Court Oct. 2, state police said.

"They are friends of Dennis Coleman and Karin Aparo. They were aware of what was going on, and hindering prosecution also includes assistance after the fact," Stamm said. "They were involved but we're not going to make the specifics on that available."

Stamm said documents supporting Lintner and Wheatley's arrest would be filed in court Monday.

Loyal Philippine troops thwart attempt at coup

U.S. support for Mrs. Aquino in the gravest crisis of her 18 months in office.

She ordered Ramos, who has put down several other coup attempts against her, to "terminate this mutiny immediately" and said no concessions would be given "these traitors."

Helicopter gunships and small propeller-driven bombers attacked the rebel-held Camp Aguinaldo and the assault was led by elite army units.

Military officials said the rebel leader, Col. Gregorio Honasan, fled in a helicopter.

Honasan was security chief for Gen. Juan Ponce Enrile, now a senator, until Mrs. Aquino fired Enrile as defense minister last November after an earlier attempted coup.

Enrile and Honasan played leading roles in the civilian-military uprising that drove President Ferdinand E. Marcos into exile Feb. 26, 1986. Enrile also was defense minister under Marcos, but changed sides.

Marcos, who was president for 20 years, said he had nothing to do with Friday's rebellion. He and his wife Imelda now live in Hawaii.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in Washington that the White House had no evidence of any Marcos involvement in the attempted coup.

After a long day of fighting, government forces regained control of the half-dozen installations seized by the rebels. They included four television stations, part of an air base and the headquarters of the armed forces general staff at Camp Aguinaldo in suburban Quezon City.

Ramos said "mopping up operations" were under way and he expected full order to be restored in Manila by Saturday. Ramos has put down several other coup attempts against Mrs. Aquino.

He said loyal troops were sent to San Fernando, 40 miles north of Manila, to retake a national police camp seized by mutineers.

Ramos called on Honasan to surrender because "the cause he espoused is a lost cause." Military officials said the colonel fled Camp Aguinaldo before government forces attacked.

The military said 462 rebels were captured. Ramos told subordinate commanders earlier that about 800 troops took part in the mutiny, which would mean hundreds still were at large.

Troops commanded by Brig. Gen. Edgardo Abenina in Cebu City flew the Philippine flag upside down at their garrisons, a sign of sympathy for the mutineers. They took over government offices in the nation's second-largest metropolitan area and confiscated weapons from private security guards.

Ramos announced late Friday that he would fire Abenina. In Cebu City, Abenina expressed sympathy for some rebel goals and frustration over what he called callousness toward soldiers by civilian officials of the Aquino government.

Whenever troops kill Communist guerrillas "soldiers and policemen are accused of violating human rights," he said, adding that more than 40 of his men were killed by Communist rebels this year but "no one raised a finger." The Communist rebellion began in 1969 and continues.

Maj. Gen. Donald Snyder, U.S. commander at Clark Air Base, urged the 40,000-member U.S. military community to use caution until conditions are normal. He temporarily banned travel by U.S. military personnel and dependents to and from Manila and between the six American bases here.

The State Department advised American civilians living in Manila to stay at home.

The heaviest fighting occurred around Camp Aguinaldo military headquarters, which was damaged by fire during an assault by marines and men of the elite Scout Ranger corps.

Hundreds cheer as loyalists bomb rebels

Editor's note: Associated Press correspondent James W. Hatton was an eyewitness to a stream of actions Friday in a military-rebel attempt to overthrow President Corazon Aquino of the Philippines. Here is his account of a day of rebellion in Manila.

By James W. Hatton
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — For me, the day began at about 2 a.m. A telephone call from the office Friday told me another coup attempt was being made against the government of President Corazon Aquino, and this time it appeared "serious."

Soon afterward, I was standing beside the highway near the tall transmitter for Channel 4, the government television station.

The popping rattle of M-16 rifle fire and slower stutter of heavier automatic weapons sounded in the gentle hills around the walled compound that houses the tower.

I started downhill, crouching slightly, trying to keep trees and bushes between me and the shooting. It took only a couple minutes to reach the compound and I edged along the wall toward several photographers.

Just as I reached them, they picked up Robert McDonald of New Zealand, who had been wounded. He was pronounced dead at a hospital.

For three or four hours there was sporadic firing from and into the tower compound. I saw several groups of three or four rebels, wearing green fatigue uniforms with no insignia, moving along the 9-foot-high wall.

Soon after dawn I saw about a dozen rebels crouched along the far end of the wall. Minutes later they began running, one at a time, across the asphalt road and diving into the safety of shrubbery around homes facing the compound.

Those who had crossed poured heavy fire at the compound to cover their running comrades. When all were across they disappeared, into the shrubbery or the crowds of residents who had jammed an adjacent access road.

Firing stopped. Hundreds of Filipinos raced up to the compound gates and began cheering "Cory! Cory!" the president's nickname.

A man ran up with four large loaves of bread and tossed them over a side gate. Soldiers inside cheered him.

Minutes later, three rebels rose from the shrubbery and, their eyes darting nervously, moved slowly toward the access road.

Some in the crowd spotted the rebels before the young men had taken more than a few steps.

Five or six men ran up to the rebel troopers and grabbed their arms, using their own bodies as shelter. They hustled the youths along the sidewalk to a house halfway down the block, where several other rebels were changing into their regular uniforms as a prelude to escape.

About half an hour later I reached sprawling Camp Aguinaldo in suburban Quezon City, where the rebels were said to be regrouping.

Everything was quiet.

A couple of hundred people lined the street.

Dozens of journalists pressed against the massive iron gate, shouting questions at soldiers in the concrete pillbox that elicited no answers.

Scattered shooting began shortly before 11:30 a.m. Shutters started coming down on shops that had done a brisk business in sandwiches, tiny cakes and soft drinks.

Firing intensified at about 1:20 p.m. and dozens of residents moved away to safety. For the next four hours, the pop of rifles and boom of heavy weapons told the progress of the battle across the base.

Residents took cover at first, but by late afternoon had become accustomed to the shooting and edged forward again. Before long, 300-400 had gathered across the intersection.

They watched intently as the first of three civilian firetrucks entered the post at about 4:20 p.m., then left a short time later in a convoy with other fire vehicles.

The three-story headquarters building could be seen burning. Plumes of gray-black smoke spewed into the air.

Then, just after 5 p.m., the air force arrived and the crowd fled again.

The pilot dipped the left wing of his propeller-driven trainer and began a sharp turn, his wingmate close behind. Seconds later they dived toward the rebel-held military headquarters.

The lead aircraft dropped a single bomb. It exploded behind the already burning building at Camp Aguinaldo, but it helped the pilots line up their target.

They returned at least three more times, dropping a total of about 10 bombs from the T-28s, aircraft from World War II known locally as "tora toras" because of their resemblance to the famed Japanese Zero fighter.

Then the pilots made two strafing runs, raking the area with fire from wing-mounted machine guns.

Hundreds of residents of Quezon City had gathered outside the camp's main gate to watch the loyalist assault on the mutinous troops who had seized the headquarters in their attempt to overthrow the Aquino government.

When the planes attacked at about 5 p.m., only about 200 yards away, the predominantly young crowd fled in panic for the uncertain shelter of nearby shanties made of wood and sheet metal.

Bad weather kept some people away from the Feast Fest on Friday. Participating restaurants are hoping for better weather today, but for others like these, the food was too good to resist.

Rain steals crowds from the Feast Fest

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herald Reporter

Restaurants participating in the third annual Feast Fest are praying that today will bring sunshine and a larger crowd than turned out on Friday.

Mary Beaulieu, working at the Main Pub's booth Friday night, said business came in spurts during the day.

"But it's still a lot of fun," Beaulieu added. "You're promoting your restaurant, so you've got to take the good with the bad."

As Beaulieu spoke, her son, Keith, wiped rain water off the counter with a cloth.

Restaurateurs agreed that it was the rain that kept the crowds away from the festival's first day.

"It's got all the components to make it happen," said Ted Vetter, the owner of Vernon's Tapas restaurant. "It's just that Mother Nature took the day off."

Vetter said his restaurant had served about 35 customers by 5 p.m.

Dave Bannerman, a cook for Mansfield's Homestead Restaurant, said business had been slow. He said about 75 customers had been served at the Homestead booth.

"What are you going to do? It's the weather," Bannerman said.

Anne Flint, president of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce, said Friday the turnout was not bad, considering the rain.

"The crowd's not as good. But the weather's not as good. We're hoping for good weather tomorrow," she said.

If the weather does not improve, the chamber, which is the Feast Fest's main sponsor, may set up tents today to provide a dry place to eat, Flint said.

Flint said she hoped that the turnout for the entire weekend will equal last year's of about 10,000. She said organizers had expected that this year's Fest would bring in a larger crowd.

One of the few bright moments Friday came just as the Eighth District's Peach Festival began. Officials from the district rode up in a fire truck and delivered a peach shortcake to Flint as a gesture of good will.

"Everyone was concerned that the two would conflict, and we thought that it would show that Manchester can work two events in one day," said Eighth District spokesman Thomas O'Marra. It was O'Marra's idea to deliver the shortcake.

While this year's fest may not turn a profit, Flint said, making money was never the chamber's goal. "All we're hoping is that we can come out of it in the black so that we can justify giving it a good shot next year," she said. Tables set up for the Feast Fest were largely empty Friday evening, but after 6 o'clock, the crowd began to grow. Some restaurateurs said that business had peaked during the lunch hour.

Pam Gowdy, a worker at Antonio's booth, said the restaurant had gone through about 30 pizzas and two dozen spinach pies by the time it became dark outside. Given the weather, Gowdy said, "it's a little better than we anticipated."

Friday's rain forces peach festival inside but crowds still come

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herald Reporter

Rain may have thinned the crowd at the Eighth District's 28th annual Peach Festival Friday night. But organizers were satisfied with the turnout, all things considered.

At 6:30, a long line of people waited outside the district's firehouse on Main Street to buy tickets for the heaping portions of peach shortcake topped with fresh whipped cream.

A firefighter taking tickets said the weather had a minimal effect on the festivities.

"It seems to be moving right along," he said.

Thomas R. O'Marra, the spokesman for the district fire department, said the crowd on Friday was probably about 20 percent smaller than last year, when 2,800 servings of peach shortcake were served. "Excellent" was the word he used to describe the turnout.

This year's festival coincided with the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce's Feast Fest, but O'Marra didn't think one detracted from the other. In fact, the Chamber of Commerce agreed to sell tickets for the district festival, encouraging Feast Fest patrons to head to the other end of town for dessert.

Friday's festival was the first in many years that was forced indoors. The festival is usually held in the parking lot across the street from the firehouse, but this year tables were set up inside the firehouse itself.

The bad weather didn't keep the politicians indoors, however.

John Garside, J. Winthrop Porter and Theunis Werkhoven — all three of whom are on the Republican slate for the town Board of Directors — shook hands and said hello to residents waiting outside the firehouse.

As the drizzle came to a stop, a small number of festival-goers ventured to the parking lot across the street to dance to the music of Johnny Prytko's band.

O'Marra said that 75 bushels of peaches and 40 gallons of cream went into making this year's batch of peach shortcake.

Judy Eschmann, a ladies' auxiliary member who has been involved in the festival for 17 years, said she and other volunteers began work early Friday morning, peeling the peaches. She said she would probably leave the firehouse at midnight, after the volunteers had their own celebration.

But peaches probably won't be on the menu.

"We don't want to look at another peach," Eschmann said.

Homart hires ad agency

A Glastonbury advertising firm has reached an oral agreement with the Homart Development Co. of Chicago to take over public relations for the developer of the proposed Mall at Buckland Hills, a writer for the firm said Wednesday.

Bob Gagne, a public relations writer for Adams, Rickard and Mason, said the oral agreement was reached late Tuesday. He expects a formal contract will be signed next week.

Gagne said that the company would also evaluate whether Homart should take a position on a referendum on bonding for improvements to the area around the Mall. The mall project has been on hold since a Hartford Superior Court judge ruled that the $13 million in improvements would have to be approved by voters in a referendum.

Directors consider water plan that includes Avery, Redwood

By Alex Grell
Associate Editor

Boundaries of a proposed service area for the town's water department have been outlined by the department for consideration by the town's Board of Directors, and they include the area served by the L&M Water Co. in the Redwood subdivision as well as Avery Heights Water Co. in South Windsor.

In a report to be considered by the directors Tuesday, Robert Young, water superintendent, said that the department has no desire to take over the two water companies but that it is proper planning to prepare for the possibility that the town might have to do so.

He said the state Department of Public Utilities Control could require the town to take over the companies under the statutes.

The L&M Company service area is within Manchester and the Manchester water system has an interconnection with Avery Heights.

The proposed service area is the area the water department must delineate in a report it must submit to the Upper Connecticut Planning Agency by Sept. 14.

Ultimately, the boundaries of the areas to be served by water utilities will be set by a Water Supply Coordinating Council which is charged with formulating a coordinated water supply plan for this region.

But the town has to submit its suggested boundaries and the Board of Directors must approve them. The board will take up the report when it meets at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the hearing room of Lincoln Center.

The proposed service area suggested by Young includes the present franchise areas, which includes all of Manchester and a few customers in Vernon and South Windsor.

Besides the L&M service area there are two others in which the town does not supply water. The Metropolitan District Commission supplies water to the Beacon Hill and Fountain Village apartment areas west of Interstate 84.

Young said Friday the MDC may include in its proposed area some of the same territory Manchester includes. Young said the town plans to build a water storage tank on Hillstown Road and would have to go around the territory now served by L&M to do so.

Young has recommended that the town also include in its declaration a part of Glastonbury. It now provides water in a part of Glastonbury, and Glastonbury officials have asked Manchester to expand its water service area in that town.

Board returns $5,000 to town

When the Manchester Board of Education returned more than $5,000 to the town Monday, it marked the continuance of a yearly practice, said Raymond E. Demers, the school system's business manager.

Dr. James P. Kennedy, school superintendent, announced at the Monday board meeting that the board was returning $5,400.42 of the $28 million budget from last school year. He said it was money that the board was unable to spend from the last fiscal year.

According to Demers, such practice is common. He said it is against state law for the board to go over budget, so the town receives a payback every year.

"There's always returned money," he said. "You cannot go over budget. It's against the law, so there's a return every year."

In some instances, the board has returned less than $100 to the town, while in others, it has handed back about $90,000, Demers said.

"You can always use more, but you can't spend down to the last nickel," he said. "You have to leave a little leeway ... even though sometimes you get a little closer than you want."

The return of more than $5,000 came as no surprise to town officials, said Boyce Spinelli, town finance director. He said the money will automatically increase the amount in the town general fund, which stands at about $1.6 million as of Oct. 1, 1986.

Spinelli said any money returned to the town by the school board, or by another town department, will be deposited into the town's general fund.

"Not only for school board, but any town department," he said. "It's money not spent. It's money that's not available to the school board any more."

Bolton panel studies coaches

BOLTON — The coaches evaluation subcommittee of the Bolton Town and School Athletics Study Committee will examine salaries of coaches at other schools, said subcommittee co-chairman Greg Fortin.

The subcommittee met Thursday night at Herrick Memorial Park.

Fortin said that his subcommittee wants to evaluate the coaching situation in the Bolton school system by comparing it to other schools systems.

The three subcommittees, the coaches subcommittee, the town teams subcommittee, and the facilities subcommittee, will all meet Thursday at Herrick Park at 7:30 p.m.

Voter registration will be held today from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Super Stop & Shop at the Parkade. If it rains, it will be held in the Marshall's mini-mall at the Parkade. The date was incorrect in Monday's Manchester Herald.

Huston's career was the stuff of movie legend

... dead at age 81

MIDDLETOWN, R.I. (AP) — John Huston, a restless talent who bucked Hollywood, drank hard and directed classic films including "The Maltese Falcon," "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre" and "The African Queen," died in his sleep Friday.

At 81, he was on the location of yet another movie.

In a long and adventurous career, the stuff of movie legend, Huston caroused with Humphrey Bogart and Ernest Hemingway, broke his nose in a fistfight with Errol Flynn, directed Clark Gable in his last film and unwittingly led Katharine Hepburn into an elephant stampede.

Huston won Academy Awards for writing and directing "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre," in which his father, Walter, also won an Oscar for best supporting actor. His daughter, Anjelica, won an Oscar for "Prizzi's Honor," which Huston also directed.

His 40 films encompassed the Tennessee Williams play "Night of the Iguana" and the elaborate musical "Annie."

"If there's a pattern to my work it's that I haven't made any two pictures alike. I get bored too quickly," he once said.

His battered good looks and rumbling voice led to a second career as an actor in films and commercials.

Huston, a longtime smoker who in later years was tethered to an oxygen tank, died in his sleep at a home he was renting here during the filming of "Mr. North," said Patty Raya, production coordinator for the movie.

Huston's longtime companion, Marcella Hernandez, was at the director's side.

"John Huston was one of the true greats in the motion picture business," said first lady Nancy Reagan, who had known him and his father. "Literally millions of people the world over were entertained by John's films, and he leaves a rich heritage of excellence in entertainment."

Tom Shaw, production manager on "Mr. North" and a colleague of Huston's for 33 years, said he didn't think Huston's last year was a happy one.

Lightning kills teen in Virginia storm

VIENNA, Va. (AP) — Lightning killed one teen-ager and critically injured a second Friday as the youths ran under a tree during a severe thunderstorm, police said.

Steven Black, 14, and Evelyn Laouikas, 15, both of Vienna, a suburb of Washington, D.C., were running under a tree in front of Black's home when lightning hit the tree and then struck the teen-agers in their chests, said Fairfax County police spokesman Warren Carmichael.

Black died about 45 minutes later at Fairfax Hospital, Carmichael said.

Miss Laouikas was listed in critical condition.

The accident occurred about 2:45 p.m. EDT at the height of a storm that swept through the Washington metropolitan area.

Colombian is denied bail

NEW HAVEN — A Colombian accused of laundering millions of dollars for cocaine traffickers is a suspect in a Miami deal in which FBI undercover agents were to buy 800 kilograms of cocaine, a prosecutor says.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Palmer revealed details about the Miami case on Thursday during a hearing in U.S. District Court in which the defendant, Carlos Restrepo, was denied bail.

Palmer was arguing that Restrepo should be held without bond while awaiting trial on the laundering charges.

He said Restrepo may be indicted in the Miami deal, which involved almost $14 million worth of cocaine. It was near completion when Restrepo was arrested in June in Miami on the laundering charges, Palmer said.

Work to begin on I-84, I-91

HARTFORD — A contractor is readying to start work on the long-awaited interchange of Interstate 84 and Interstate 91 in Hartford.

The $88.5 million project will get under way Monday at 11 p.m. when construction workers begin replacing metal highway dividers in the I-84 median from the Bulkeley Bridge to Hartford's Main Street, said Thomas E. Cressey, the state's special coordinator for the project.

"There's still an element of doubt, but the contractor is trying to start Monday night," Cressey said Thursday.

The project will provide direct highway access in all directions between I-91 and I-84 when it is completed in 1991.

State officials warn that until the work is completed, motorists can count on traffic snarls.

Hartford teachers lack licenses

HARTFORD — Twenty-one Hartford teachers face a Monday deadline for filing paperwork with the state Department of Education if they want to retain their licenses this year.

The 21 are among 36 public school teachers in Hartford who have failed to renew their state teaching licenses, placing their jobs in jeopardy.

"This caught us completely off guard," said Daniel R. Seals, president of the Hartford Federation of Teachers. "Some of the teachers are nervous."

Those who are not certified will lose their jobs, said John Keaveny, the Hartford school system's administrator for personnel and labor relations. The 36 make up about 2 percent of Hartford's 1,940 teachers.

Bridgeport can apply for aid

BRIDGEPORT — This city has gotten approval to apply for state emergency aid to help pay for rescue operations after the collapse of L'Ambiance Plaza.

The advisory committee overseeing a $5 million state emergency relief fund gave Bridgeport permission to apply for aid, said James Crispino, the city's comptroller.

Crispino said Thursday that the city plans to request about $1 million toward the estimated $7 million in costs related to the April 23 building collapse and subsequent nine-day rescue effort.

Twenty-eight workers died in the collapse of the partially completed, high-rise apartment building.

The city has also submitted an informal list of expenses to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, which has said it would make $1 million available to help the city pay disaster costs.

Tirozzi: Our rich, white state can't ignore children 'at risk'

HARTFORD (AP) — State Education Commissioner Gerald N. Tirozzi said Friday that rich, white Connecticut can't ignore the schooling of children he says are "at risk" — those from poor, inner-city homes.

At his annual back-to-school news conference, Tirozzi said more money should be spent on the schools poor children attend to ensure that they are getting the best education possible.

"This is not an issue that affluent Connecticut can't walk away from, or that white Connecticut can walk away from," the commissioner said. "We need money driven into those districts."

He has submitted a proposed education budget for next year of $1.25 billion, representing a 25 percent increase over this year's spending level.

Because the needs of students in affluent Greenwich are worlds apart from those in poor cities such as Bridgeport, Tirozzi said, "we have to be very unequal to be equal" in spending from one school district to the next.

"If we do not address the needs of those students with the greatest needs, the children at risk, then Connecticut's future will be at risk," the commissioner said.

He said that in Connecticut, 81 percent of white students complete high school, compared with 64 percent of the black students and 69 percent of Hispanic students. Some 600,000 Connecticut adults do not have high school diplomas, he said.

For the first time, the state is providing drop-out prevention grants to the 25 school districts with the greatest needs, he said.

Tirozzi also noted that the state is beginning the second year of a three-year, phase-in of higher teacher salaries, which has a goal of having the minimum starting teacher pay at $20,000. The average minimum salary will be $20,690 this fall, he said.

The commissioner also said he applauded the city of Bridgeport, which recently set up a task force to deal with violence in its schools, particularly the carrying of guns by students.

"The first thing we must do is provide a safe environment" for learning, Tirozzi said. Students bringing guns to school must be dealt with harshly, including with expulsion and arrest, he added.

He said violence in schools is "not a statewide problem" and is found "where you find large pockets of poverty."

On another topic, Tirozzi said his department stands behind its policy of allowing children with AIDS to attend public schools. He said he did not know how many such students, if any, would be attending class this fall.

"We don't keep those kinds of statistics," he said.

Many job-seekers nearly illiterate

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Nearly 50 percent of the New Haven-area residents seeking jobs or training through two government-funded programs were marginally literate or worse, a community Task Force on Illiteracy said in a recent report.

The report said that of 730 people who applied for job training or placement with the Private Industry Council from July 1985 to June 1988, 47.3 percent scored below the eighth-grade level on math and reading tests, according to Judith Baldwin, a task force member.

The report said 24.3 percent scored below the sixth-grade level on those two tests.

The council administers federal- and state-funded job programs. The report said of 60 people who applied for training or placement with the similar Opportunities Industrial Center from January to June 1987, 85 percent had sixth- to eighth-grade reading skills, which is considered marginally literate. Less than sixth-grade reading skill was considered "functionally illiterate" by the task force.

"I consider it very serious," Baldwin said of the results. "And I'm not convinced that there is any real seriousness attached to doing something about the problem."

The task force noted several problems in teaching people to read and write, including a lack of communication between training agencies, an absence of standardized progress reporting and no follow-up of adults students in remedial programs. The result of those problems caused duplication of services and poor record-keeping on dropouts.

"Insufficient communication takes place among literacy providers," the report said.

There are at least 14 such agencies in the New Haven area.

The task force indicated that one of the problems in studying illiteracy was trying to gather information on existing data was very difficult.

The task force is a group formed a year ago and sponsored by Mayors Biagio DiLieto of New Haven, Azelio Guerra of West Haven, Bob Norman of East Haven and John DeNicola of Hamden.

Insurers unhappy with new car-claim system

HARTFORD (AP) — In what's being called a major blow to Connecticut insurance companies, state Insurance Commissioner Peter W. Gillies ordered a new system Friday for settling claims for destroyed or stolen cars, replacing the current system of computer-set appraisals.

The new claims system will require insurers to settle claims for vehicles beyond repair or recovery by averaging the values in two widely-circulated used-car guides, Gillies said.

State Rep. John J. Woodcock, D-South Windsor, said complaints about computerized estimates inspired him to author legislation this year that led to Gillies' decision.

In settling vehicle claims, Woodcock's bill requires insurance companies to use the average values of a guide published by the National Automobile Dealers Association and another source designated by Gillies.

Gillies said he chose only one other source, a guide published by National Market Reports Inc. of Chicago, commonly known as the "Red Book," to average values.

But Gillies' decision is being termed "inflexible" by some insurance companies.

Thereas Twigg, an attorney with the Insurance Association of Connecticut, predicted some car owners would suffer when the new system takes effect Oct. 1. She said under the averaging system, "a well-kept older car that gets totalled will not get extra value."

"That car's going to get the same value as a car that sat out in the rain and snow for seven years," Twigg said.

The IAC and some of its member companies had lobbied Gillies to designate more than one source beside the NADA "Red Book," suggesting Certified Collateral Corp. of Chicago, a leading computerized evaluation service used by about a dozen Connecticut firms, Twigg said.

Certified Collateral officials said their appraisals are based on prices for equivalent vehicles in particular regions of the state at the time the car was totalled or stolen.

But Gillies said he decided against the Chicago corporation for fear of introducing "an element of uncertainty into the claims process."

Gillies suggested his department was unable to ensure that Certified Collateral employs the method it describes.

Only two other states, New York and Pennsylvania, require averaging systems similar to the new one in Connecticut, officials said.

Gejdenson would hunt for POWs

NORWICH — U.S. Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., says he would go to North Korea to try to learn the fate of a Connecticut man and other American servicemen missing since the Korean War only if he has some hope that the trip would be worthwhile.

"If North Korean officials on a high level can indicate that bodies of possible POWs and MIAs are there and they can give us any kind of assurance at all that we can have some success with such a meeting, sure, we would go," Gejdenson said.

Gejdenson met Thursday with Robert Dumas, 57, of Canterbury, who has spent 37 years trying to track down his missing brother, Roger.

Manfredi gets a public defender

HARTFORD — Russell F. Manfredi, a West Hartford cardiologist convicted of manslaughter in the slaying of his wife, Friday was granted his request for a public defender to handle his appeal.

Superior Court Judge Thomas H. Corrigan granted the request after hearing Chief Public Defender Joseph M. Shortall explain that Manfredi earns almost $22,000 annually working at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center in Paterson, N.J., but that the cost of hiring a private lawyer to make the appeal would be about $25,000.

Shortall said prior to the start of the hearing that Manfredi's debts resulting from his trial were $120,000. Also Friday, Kathleen B. Martin, an attorney representing Manfredi's three sons, said she is considering appealing Corrigan's decision last week not to close a hearing involving the testimony of Dr. James Black, a psychiatrist who has interviewed the boys.

WVIT's Harrigan gets state post

NEWINGTON — Edward J. Harrigan, a former news anchor and reporter with WVIT-TV, Channel 30, has been appointed executive assistant to the director of the state Division of Special Revenue.

Orlando P. Ragazzi, executive director of the division, earlier this week announced that Harrigan's appointment was effective August 21.

Harrigan spent 29 years in commercial broadcasting, including 17 years with Channel 30.

Lawyer seeks death-penalty block

MILFORD — The public defender for a Bridgeport man charged in the shooting death of a Milford police officer has filed a motion in court seeking to block consideration of the death penalty in his client's case.

The attorney for Thomas A. Hoyesen argues in his motion that the state should not be allowed to seek the death penalty against Hoyesen, if he is convicted in the killing.

Public defender David Egan contends that Connecticut's capital punishment law violates both the state and U.S. constitutions by permitting cruel and unusual punishment.

The motion, submitted Thursday in Superior Court, changes an earlier motion that asked the court to dismiss a capital felony charge against Hoyesen.

Dioxin rule 'more than adequate'

HARTFORD (AP) — The state on Friday recommended a lower standard than previously proposed for emissions of dioxin, a deadly chemical compound, from trash-to-energy plants, but officials said it would still be more than adequate to protect the public.

State Environmental Protection Commissioner Leslie Carothers said the proposal, which will be the subject of public hearings in October, is the first of its kind in the country.

Dioxin is a highly toxic compound formed during the process of burning trash in resource recovery plants, and also comes from auto emissions, smoke from cigarettes and wood stoves and pesticides. Dioxin has been linked to cancer in laboratory animals.

The standard recommended by Carothers and Health Commissioner Dr. Frederick G. Adams is for "ambient" dioxin that would take into account dioxin from all sources around a resource-recovery plant.

The permitted level would be 1 picogram, or one trillionth of a gram, per cubic meter of air.

She said current testing methods cannot measure amounts less than that and said the proposed standard "should be more than adequate to protect public health and the environment."

She also said that the proposal was one two-thousandth of the concentration that caused any "observed effect" in the most sensitive animal tested in the laboratory.

Earlier this year, the DEP had proposed a range for the standard of between 0.01 and 0.1 picograms per cubic meter of air.

Critics, such as the Connecticut Fund for the Environment, had called the new proposal a step backward. CFE had said even the earlier proposed standards were too weak.

But Carothers said Friday that a standard beyond 1 picogram would be next to impossible to measure, much less maintain.

Asked what would happen if the standard were exceeded at a given plant, Carothers said the plant could be forced to shut down, or that standards for other sources, such as cars and other factories, could be tightened.

Montreal passed from French to British control in 1760.

Airlines agree to changes

WASHINGTON — Under government pressure, six major airlines signed a consent agreement Friday requiring them to shift schedules to eliminate the number of chronically late flights at four of the nation's busiest airports.

"We were presented with a fait accompli," said a spokesman for Eastern Airlines, one of the six carriers.

Industry sources said the Transportation Department, in a campaign to reduce the soaring number of delays, has threatened the carriers with stiff civil penalties for flights that are repeatedly late.

Under the agreement announced by the department, the airlines promise to adjust schedules at four airports at Hartsfield Atlanta, Chicago O'Hare, Dallas-Fort Worth and Boston Logan airports.

Iranian president calls for war

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran does not want war with the United States but will attack U.S. warships if they threaten Iran's vital exports, Iranian news media quoted President Ali Khamenei as saying Friday.

Prime Minister Hussein Musavi reportedly called for an all-out war effort to defeat Iraq in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war and crush the "military expeditions of the U.S.A. and the agents of global arrogance."

Shipping sources said meanwhile that earlier reports that another convoy of U.S. warships and reflagged Kuwaiti tankers was headed up the gulf to Kuwait may have been erroneous. They said the ship sightings actually may have been U.S. warships deploying in the U.S. naval buildup in the region.

Khamenei and Musavi both spoke Friday at the weekly prayer session at Tehran University, and their remarks were quoted by Tehran Radio, monitored in Nicosia.

Secord says Iran wanted to help

WASHINGTON — The Iranians dislike the radical Lebanese who took American hostages and they offered to provide information for a U.S. raid to free the men, Richard V. Secord said in a magazine interview released Friday.

Secord, a retired Air Force major general who played a central role in the Iran-Contra case, said the Iranians told him they did not completely control Hezbollah, the Lebanese Shiite umbrella group.

Although the Iranians succeeded in securing freedom for some hostages, they said "they had to pay off the Hezbollah" to achieve results, he said.

U.S. officials have said they believe the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime has leverage over the pro-Iranian groups holding the hostages.

Secord, in an interview in the October edition of Playboy magazine, said Iranian officials also realized they would have benefited from a U.S. armed raid to free the hostages.

Libya says desert outpost seized

TRIPOLI, Libya — Libya said it recaptured the fiercely contested and strategic desert outpost of Aouzou on Friday after killing or routing Chadian troops, Chad denied the claim.

"After all political and diplomatic solutions failed, Libyan troops were ordered to occupy Aouzou," the Libyan news agency JANA reported from the Libyan capital. "The Libyan army now controls Aouzou completely after having destroyed and expelled the enemy."

It did not say how many were involved in the fighting. The Chadian Embassy in Paris said Aouzou and other towns were coming under intensive air attacks, but said the situation as to any ground action was calm. The Chad government denied Aouzou had fallen.

The embassy, however, said Chad expects a large-scale offensive from Libya "at any moment."

Some say Gipper is a dipper

WASHINGTON — The National Taxpayers Union said Friday that President Reagan may have violated the Constitution by accepting $178,000 in pension payments from California over the past seven years.

A White House lawyer, however, already has rejected the complaint and denied that the Constitution bars Reagan from collecting a $29,188-a-year pension from his days as governor of California.

"The Gipper is a dipper," said Sid Taylor, the research director of the NTU, a watchdog group.

Anti-government protesters step backward after firebombs flared up in front of them during a Friday demonstration in Seoul, South Korea. Thousands of

Clashes violent in South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of protesters battled riot police in Seoul and in at least four other cities Friday after the government banned memorial rallies for a striking worker killed in an earlier clash.

"Down with the military dictatorship of murder and violence!" shouted students, workers and dissidents as they hurled rocks, bricks and firebombs at police in the worst political violence since massive anti-government riots in June. Police fired tear gas.

Thousands of people ran for cover as fighting erupted in streets packed with rush-hour traffic in the Korean capital. Scores of people were injured and hundreds were arrested, but authorities declined to release total figures.

In the southern port city of Kwangju, about 1,000 workers began a sit-down protest at the big Daewoo shipyard Friday after police intercepted their funeral procession for Lee Suk-kyu, killed Aug. 22 in a clash between police and strikers.

The Labor Ministry reported 97 new strikes, increasing the total to 635. South Korea has been hit by 2,490 strikes since June as workers demand higher wages and greater rights after years of government-enforced labor discipline that effectively banned strikes.

Prime Minister Kim Chung-yul and Roh Tae-woo, head of the governing Democratic Justice Party, agreed Friday on the need to maintain law and order at all cost.

The main opposition Reunification Democratic Party said in a statement, "It is intolerable and foolish that the government intends to take strong action instead of apologizing for labor unrest for which it is responsible."

Police officials said 1,618 people were being investigated for allegedly inciting labor unrest and leftist agitation, but were not detained as yet.

Protesters in Seoul's working class district of Yongsongpo clashed with police as soon as the dissidents began yelling anti-government slogans.

"We want revenge!" yelled masked protesters bearing wooden sticks and iron bars as they blocked streets and fought police.

Black armored cars and at least 5,000 riot police in green combat fatigues and black, visored helmets broke up the crowds with tear gas.

Police plainclothes martial arts squads charged into the crowds, hitting out with fists and feet. Hundreds of people were arrested. Police dragged protesters away, and detainees were seen being beaten by officers.

Study: Pot use dims memory

NEW YORK (AP) — A study of long-term, heavy users of marijuana found very slight decreases in concentration and short-term memory, problems that may have shunted users toward less mentally demanding jobs, researchers say.

The decreases were too small to cause obvious problems, but "it's still cause for concern," said study co-author Bryan Page of the University of Miami Medical School. "It puts you at a competitive disadvantage."

Other drug researchers cautioned that the effect may have come simply from the users' most recent marijuana dose, and that men in the study smoked far more than most American users.

"I think it's a good set of studies, but I don't think it settles the whole matter," said Ken Adams, chief psychologist at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Ann Arbor, Mich., and professor of psychology and psychiatry at the University of Michigan.

The new research, financed by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, was being presented Friday at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association. The researchers described it in recent telephone interviews.

Some 18.2 million Americans smoke marijuana regularly, according to federal figures. Other estimates are closer to 40 million or 50 million.

The study compared the performance of 27 users and 30 non-users in Costa Rica on sophisticated mental tests, said Page, research associate professor in the Miami school's psychiatry department.

The all-male group averaged 6.4 marijuana cigarettes a day for an average of more than 30 years, said study co-author Jack M. Fletcher, an associate professor of psychology at the University of Houston in University Park.

The users were asked to abstain from marijuana about two days before taking the tests, which included memorization of word lists and a computer procedure that measured speed of information processing, he said.

As a group, the users scored lower than the non-users did in tests measuring short-term memory and concentration. It is not clear which of those abilities was more diminished, Fletcher said.

The findings showed "very, very subtle differences," he said.

"These aren't people who need treatment. ... These are all productive individuals. There's no evidence of anything like amotivational syndrome," in which people become passive and uninterested in their surroundings, he said.

Reagan renews Bork battle

LOS ANGELES — President Reagan renewed his battle for Senate confirmation of Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork and said Friday that "the fundamental purpose of our justice system is to find the truth, not to coddle criminals."

Reagan pictured Bork, a judge on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington, as a strong law-and-order judge during a meeting here with administration and law enforcement officials.

Illinois Gov. James Thompson, a former U.S. attorney, said the group, representing sheriffs, chiefs of police, state troopers and other law officers, unstintingly supported Bork.

"Nearly one-third of the Supreme Court's time is taken up with criminal justice, yet there has been little focus ... on Judge Bork's views in this area," Thompson said.

12,000 fired in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The nation's largest gold producer met with representatives of the black mineworkers union after firing 12,000 more strikers Friday in an attempt to end the 19-day-old walkout.

One working miner was stabbed to death and burned, another company reported Friday, bringing to seven the number of black miners killed in the nation's longest and costliest strike against its major gold and coal mines.

National Union of Mineworkers officials met in a hotel room Friday evening with representatives of Anglo American Corp., which now has fired 37,600 miners and threatened 19,000 more with dismissal if they don't return to work.

Another company, Johannesburg Consolidated Investments, has fired 4,600 strikers.

Three executed in one day

Three convicted killers went quietly to their deaths Friday while a fourth got a last-minute stay on the busiest day for the death penalty since the Supreme Court allowed states to resume executions in 1976.

Wayne Eugene Ritter, 33, convicted in the murder of a pawnbroker, died in Alabama's electric chair.

Pierre Dale Selby, 34, convicted in the "Hi-Fi" torture-murders of three people and the maiming of two others, was executed by lethal injection in Utah.

Beauford White, 41, who stood guard while six people were shot to death in a robbery at a suburban Miami home, was electrocuted at Florida State Prison near Starke.

Rail workers scuffle with cops

OTTAWA — Railway workers scuffled with police outside Parliament and rallied in other cities Friday to protest mandatory back-to-work legislation ending a five-day national rail strike.

"We won't go! We won't go!" workers shouted at a mass meeting in Winnipeg, Manitoba, when a union leader told them to obey the law and return to their jobs once the emergency bill was passed.

The walkout by 48,000 members of nine unions has paralyzed all passenger and freight traffic and cost the railways $20 million ($15 million U.S.) a day.

When contract talks broke down Thursday, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's Conservative government introduced the back-to-work measure, including compulsory arbitration.

Shuttle faces even more delays

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah A critical first full-scale test of the redesigned space shuttle rocket will be postponed still further while engineers sort out problems that caused the firing to be aborted three times, officials said Friday.

Roland Raab, spokesman for Morton Thiokol Inc., manufacturer of the rocket, said the firing would be no earlier than Sunday and could be delayed beyond that while engineering tests are conducted.

On Thursday, when the test was aborted, officials had said they hoped to go ahead with it on Saturday.

Thiokol engineers conducted three countdowns toward ignition of the test rocket on Thursday and were forced to stop short of the firing each time. Twice the countdown was carried to within seconds before it was halted.

Rescuers gather around the scene of a school bus-truck collision which left six people dead Friday in Bronson, Fla. The flatbed truck apparently ran a stop sign and ran into the bus broadside.

Crash kills bus driver, five kids

BRONSON, Fla. (AP) — A school bus carrying handicapped children home from school was hit broadside by a truck Friday at a rural intersection, killing six people and injuring 17, at least three critically.

The dead, all from the bus, were the driver, four boys and a girl, said Levy County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman Ola Crews.

The flatbed truck, loaded with large tires for logging vehicles and traveling at 40 mph, apparently ran a stop sign, said Florida Highway Patrol trooper Theresa Allen.

The school bus carried 19 handicapped children from the Williston Middle and Bronson Elementary schools, along with two adult aides and the driver, said Janice Zipperer, Levy County School Board secretary. The children ranged from pre-school age to 18.

William Franco was driving about 100 yards behind the bus when the accident occurred.

"I saw the impact — the truck never slowed down," said Franco. For about an hour after the accident rescue teams worked feverishly to extract children from the crumpled bus, which ended up in a ditch with the truck embedded in its side, said neighbor Troy Reid.

"They were using hacksaws around the windows to cut some of the people out," Reid said. "Also they were hooking up chains to the side of the bus and trying to pull it off."

"The bus was shoved over into the ditch and a lot of the the students couldn't get out," said another neighbor, Harrell Hemingway.

Decades-old plane wreck yields bones

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A pilot looking for radio-collared grizzly bears in a rugged valley of the Alaska Peninsula instead spotted the weathered wreckage of a twin-engine plane that crashed decades ago.

Crews who reached the site by helicopter found a forearm bone in the arm of a flight suit, and a finger in a glove, said Ron Hood, manager of the Alaska Peninsula Wildlife Refuge. Pieces of human skull were discovered beneath one of the engines and about 100 yards above the wreckage.

"We speculate that there were at least two people, but there could have been as many as four at the crash site," Hood said, adding that there was no indication anyone survived the crash.

Identification numbers on the engines contain the date April 28, 1943, he said, adding the flight suits appeared to be military issue.

The Beechcraft RU-18, a light aircraft used as light transport aircraft and for mapping and survey work, crashed just inside the federal refuge on a steep slope, Hood said.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service radio-tracking plane found the wreckage about 40 miles northeast of Port Heiden on Wednesday.

Another bad report on trade

NEW YORK (AP) — The Reagan administration got another bad report card on the nation's trade deficit this past week, pressuring the already flagging dollar and bond prices, and providing more ammunition to proponents of protectionist trade legislation in Congress.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that the gap between what the United States sells and purchases abroad widened to an all-time high of $39.5 billion in the April-to-June quarter, reflecting a hefty increase in imports that overtook a smaller rise in exports.

The discouraging trade report confirmed parallel figures released a few weeks earlier which put the second-quarter merchandise trade deficit at $42.7 billion. The latest deficit figure is lower because it reflects trade on a "balance-of-payments" basis, omitting such factors as the cost of shipping and insurance and military sales.

News of the swelling trade gap pulled the dollar down against all major currencies except the British pound. Bond prices, which have been closely tracking the dollar's movements for several months, tumbled in turn — forcing interest rates higher.

The trade figures showed that, despite a substantial long-term decline in the value of the dollar, the more competitive dollar has not yet produced a big reduction in the trade deficit.

The data prompted foreign-exchange investors to sell dollars, by arousing concern that the administration could allow the U.S. currency to fall still further in an attempt to cut the trade shortfall.

Dollar, interest rates cool down the market

By Chet Currier
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A weak dollar in foreign exchange and rising interest rates have once again cast a shadow over the stock market.

In recent days, the dollar has slumped against leading foreign currencies to around the lows it hit last spring, touching off new inflation concerns and talk of credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve.

And that, in turn, has helped push interest rates higher in the credit markets to the point where yields on long-term Treasury bonds surpassed 9 percent.

All this has made stock traders uneasy. But the way some analysts see it, the situation may actually be healthy for the market.

First of all, they argue, stock prices got overextended as they climbed to record highs as recently as last Tuesday. They say nervousness about the dollar and interest rates helps keep enthusiasm from getting dangerously out of hand.

In the optimistic view, the doubts raised by the dollar may have restored the proverbial "wall of worry" that bull markets climb.

"The market has its minor setbacks on pieces of bad news, but that's not the way a major top materializes," maintained Justin Mamin, an analyst at the investment firm of Cowen & Co.

"Tops of consequence come when so much GOOD news and seemingly robust market activity lull everyone into believing there is a lot more to come."

As upbeat as they may be, few analysts believe the rest of 1987 is going to provide easy pickings for stock investors.

At their current levels, interest rates have made bonds and other interest-bearing investments increasingly attractive in competition with stocks for investors' favor.

"Should bond rates move to around 9.5 percent, the interest outlook will create some uneasiness about the longevity of the earnings story that is now widely acknowledged as the stock market's engine," said Greg Smith at Prudential-Bache Securities.

Indeed, hardly anybody on Wall Street would be surprised if the market averages took a short- to intermediate-term drop of 10 percent or so — something that hasn't happened in more than three years.

"The danger or caveat in continuing to be an aggressive near-term buyer is the increasing possibility of a 10 percent type correction," asserted Edward Nicoski, analyst at Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood Inc. in Minneapolis.

Against that background, the stock market gave ground in the past week, breaking a four-week string of gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials tumbled 70.15 to 2,639.35, for its largest weekly loss since it dropped a record 141.03 points Sept. 8-12 of last year.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 4.31 to 182.99, and the market value index at the American Stock Exchange was down 3.72 at $59.75.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 175.79 million shares a day.

"This is a market that has moved sharply, in both directions, throughout this cycle," said Abby Joseph Cohen and Burton Siegel, analysts at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., in a recent appraisal.

UI ranks high in efficiency

NEW HAVEN — An industry publication has ranked United Illuminating among the most efficient electric utilities in the country for the sixth successive year.

In 1986, UI improved from 11th to 8th place among the country's 100 largest, investor-owned utilities in the efficiency of its generating system, according to the August edition of Electric Light & Power magazine.

In five of the past six years, the New Haven-based utility has been among the top 10 utilities in ratings done by the industry publication.

United Illuminating serves some 300 companies in 17 communities near New Haven and Bridgeport.

Bank official wants to join suit

HARTFORD — Connecticut should join a federal lawsuit brought against Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. by investors who allegedly were defrauded of $2.6 million, the state's banking commissioner says.

State Banking Commissioner Howard B. Brown said Thursday he had written Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman, urging the state to join a lawsuit filed by the investors against Shearson in connection with alleged violations by Herbert Kirschner and HMK Management Corp.

Brown charged Shearson with failing to properly supervise its Greenwich office, where Kirschner operated.

Investors are attempting to recoup their losses in a $25 million federal suit against Shearson. The lawsuit is pending in U.S. District Court in Bridgeport. No trial date has been set.

Monsanto clear in dioxin case

CHARLESTON, W. Va. — A federal appeals court on Friday absolved Monsanto Co. of knowingly exposing seven workers to dioxin, but found the chemical giant guilty of risking a worker's health with a second chemical.

The opinion by a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a Charleston jury's 1985 findings in the test case.

The jury rejected workers' claims that Monsanto knew the dangers of dioxin when employees at its Nitro plant were exposed to the chemical in the 1950s and 1960s.

Get out of disappointing mutuals, but watch for deferred charges

QUESTION: We are a retired couple and did quite well with diversified investments in industrial, insurance, bank and utility stocks until 1984. At that time, our broker said utility companies were headed for bankruptcy and advised us to sell those stocks. We sold some but kept others. Since then, the utilities we kept and those we sold have performed well.

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

Between 1984 and 1986, that broker and others sold us shares in five mutual funds at a total cost of $53,206.08. Those fund shares are now worth $50,259.

My question to you is quite simple: What to do with these dogs?

ANSWER: Since it's obvious you are very disappointed with those mutual funds, the answer is also simple — with one caveat: Redeem your shares and get your money out of those funds.

Here's the caveat: If any of those funds have sliding-scale contingent deferred sales charges, you might want to hang on until those rear-end loads disappear.

An increasing number of mutual funds have those rear-end loads. In the typical arrangement, an investor who redeems shares within a year after purchasing them pays a 5 percent charge; that bite declines by 1 percent each succeeding year and is eliminated after five years.

Check each fund's prospectus to see if you would be hit with that rear-end load when you cash in. Then you will have to make your own decision about whether you want to redeem and take your loss now.

Considering the poor investment results you have obtained with those five funds, your unhappiness is understandable and redeeming the fund shares at this time seems to be a logical move.

You were sold five clunkers. The vast majority of mutual funds have done quite well over the time since you made those fund investments.

Statistics from Lipper Analytical Services Inc. show that on a "total performance" basis — assuming reinvestment of dividends and capital gains distributions — the average mutual fund had percentage gains of 1.15 in 1984, 24.95 in 1985, 15.07 in 1986 and 18.78 in the first seven months of this year.

QUESTION: I invested $30,000 in a mutual fund on Jan. 30, 1987 and have reinvested my dividends to purchase more shares. I now have 3,248.465 shares. Net asset value is $9.90 per share.

There was no sales load when I made my investment, but this fund does have a contingent deferred sales charge of 5 percent the first year.

If I cash in now, what would that contingent deferred sales charge amount to and how much money would I receive?

ANSWER: At $9.90 each, your 3,248.465 shares have a total value of $32,159.80. The 5 percent rear-end commission from the management of each fund.

QUESTION: On April 20, 1986, I invested $15,000 to buy $30,000 face value of EE bonds in my name. On the same date, a like number of EEs were purchased in my husband's name "or" my name as co-owners.

I am aware of the annual limits on savings bond purchases. More than a year has passed and I have not bought any additional EEs. Due to a change in circumstances, I would like to have the bonds now in co-ownership form put into my name alone. In doing so, would I then be in violation of the limit?

ANSWER: No. You'll be OK. The EE bond purchase in your name did not exceed the annual limit. Nor did the purchase in co-ownership, because that amount could be applied to either co-owner — your husband, in this case.

Changing the bonds from co-ownership to single ownership form, by having them reissued, will not be a purchase. That can be done, without tax consequence, because one of the original co-owner's names — yours — will be on the reissued bonds.

However, you will need your husband's signature on Form PD 1938 to accomplish what you have in mind. Considering your veiled reference to a "change in circumstances" you might have problems getting him to sign away his bond co-ownership.

OPINION

Debt game big in D.C.

It doesn't compare with board games like Monopoly or backgammon, but lawmakers play an on-going game of their own on Capitol Hill.

Two, three and sometimes even four times in just a few months, lawmakers line up to play "raising the national debt" — a game to prevent the U.S. Treasury from being pushed into "default."

Our elected officials aren't lone rangers — dressed in white — riding out to save humanity in rural America. They're more like junkies needing a "fix."

Lawmakers are addicted to debt bills like junkies hooked on drugs.

They could easily dispose of the treasury's debt needs for years by approving the credit they know the government will need.

But no, not the U.S. Congress.

Instead, members just keep approving short-term debt bills, good for a year or two at the very most, but usually valid for only a day or two.

Why?

The answer is simple. Amendments.

Lawmakers are famous for loading up debt bills with amendments that often have nothing to do with the national debt. They know, if the debt extension measure is left to the last minute, usually hours before a scheduled recess or long weekend — whatever amendments are attached to it usually are on a fast track to being passed and signed into law.

But an old-fashioned debt crisis is good for raising the pulse and getting legislative juices flowing.

In the 1970s, annual Social Security cost-of-living increases were the usual dressing on the debt bill. But then Congress made the increases automatic.

The House then decided to make the debt measure itself automatic when the budget was approved, but that left the Senate alone to devise amendments, and senators were quick to take advantage.

The fuss over a debt bill is nothing more than a charade, since lawmakers never would allow the Treasury to default. They've often gone to the brink, but never beyond.

Debt bills can be viewed as therapy for a Congress that has done little over the years to reduce red ink. Spending is more fun and the $2.3 trillion debt is a legacy of government mismanagement for which future generations will pay.

Giveaways by Eighth and town

To the Editor:

To the Board of Directors of the Eighth District and the Board of Directors of the town of Manchester:

Eighth District: When I fought for the Eighth District it was for the district as a whole. It was the sewer department and the fire department.

Now you people want to give away a multi-million-dollar sewer system for a firehouse at a highly inflated price.

The firehouse was built in spite of a court order making it illegal, to say the least.

When the town took over the water works, you know what happened to our water bills? They just about doubled, right? You can expect the same thing, pp. our sewer bills.

If you people are so intent on giving things away, why not the fire department? Make it a clean sweep, then it will all be theirs. Why postpone it any longer?

Town of Manchester: You have been trying to steal the Eighth District for years. I hope you never succeed.

You want to give away $14,000,000 to the Buckland shopping plaza. It is plain that you do not want it to go before the public on a referendum. They will turn it down. The shopping mall will be built. It will not lower our tax rate.

What gives you the right to give our money away without asking the voters?

A takeover of the Eighth District will give you what you want: the power of dictatorship. This cannot be allowed to happen.

Voters beware. Stand up and be counted.

A letter to Manchester Mayor Barbara Weinberg:

A community event which substantially benefits Manchester Memorial Hospital was successfully run at the Manchester Country Club last month. The seventh annual Manchester Memorial Hospital Golf Tournament was an outstanding success thanks to the efforts of the country club staff — with a little help from the weather.

Everything — from registration through dinner and the raffle — progressed smoothly, demonstrating the good service of the country club staff. The quality of food was also exemplary.

A major annual event for the hospital, the tournament attracts golfers from all over the state, as well as a number from outside the state. Since its inception in 1980, the tournament has grown significantly, raising a cumulative total in excess of $40,000 for the Hospital Development Fund Inc. The proceeds are used to support the work of the hospital in our community.

Again, our appreciation goes to the country club for the quality service and fine facilities as well as to local businessmen and members of the community for their continued vital support of the Manchester Memorial Hospital Golf Tournament.

Corporate raiders damage the economy

WASHINGTON — Corporate raiders have acquired the kind of heroic glamour that once attached to entrepreneurs like Henry Ford and Thomas Edison. But unlike these earlier capitalist wizards, today's takeover titans produce neither new products nor improvements on existing ones.

Their multi-billion-dollar manipulations have no purpose beyond enriching the raiders and a few big stockholders.

Their schemes don't add a single nut or bolt to the gross national product.

Federal Reserve Board economists have been studying the raiders, hoping to learn what the takeover epidemic's effect on the economy will be. Their preliminary conclusions are unnerving, to say the least.

These financial experts told our associate Michael Binstein that the national economy is in great danger from the massive manipulation of stock prices in hostile takeover attempts. Indeed, some experts are afraid the situation could lead to another 1929-style crash.

It would be bad enough if the takeover attempts — both the successful ones and the failures — were merely unproductive. But they have caused enormous damage to many once-healthy companies. Last year alone, American corporations threatened by hostile takeovers went $263 billion in debt to buy their own stock as a defensive measure. That was double the 1985 amount of defensive debt and five times the expenditure in 1982.

These gigantic debt loads require huge interest payments — money that could far better be plowed into capital investments. American industry as a whole spent $177 billion last year on hostile takeover games — more than the entire amount spent for improvements in plants and equipment.

To crawl out from under their crushing debts, companies close down operations and lay off employees. It's estimated that 800,000 jobs have been lost in recent years in the aftermath of takeover attempts.

A few of the more notorious insiders are trading in their Wall Street wingtips for prison work boots, and federal prosecutors say these headlines are just the vanguard of many more white-collar defendants. An inkling of what's coming can be gleaned from some astonishing statistics: In the 50 years before 1984, only 12 cases of insider trading were prosecuted; from 1984 through 1986, 40 individuals were jailed or fined for such activities, and 12 more have been prosecuted so far this year.

Companies with undervalued stock are the raiders' favorite targets, and they're easy to find, since the value of an average company's outstanding stock is about 75 percent of its assets. And with the wild fluctuations in stock prices that have become normal these days, a targeted company's stock can usually be bought at bargain prices.

The law requires anyone who acquires 5 percent of a company's stock to disclose this to the Securities and Exchange Commission within 10 days. But it's simple to get around the intent of the law by continuing to buy stock quietly until the last day of the deadline period. By the time raiders file with the SEC, they may have acquired as much as 15 percent of their target's stock.

Even if the takeover bid fails, the raider is usually assured of a fat profit when word of the attempt sends the company's stock price soaring. This is often the actual goal of the raider, whose announced intention of a takeover is pure bluff, designed to extract "greenmail" in the form of a premium on the stock for relinquishing it to the threatened company.

The inevitable result is a substantial increase in corporate debt — and a consequent decrease in the amount of money the banks have to lend out for more useful purposes. That's what makes the 1929 parallel so ominous. Recession, tight money and high interest rates will bring a flood of defaults and bankruptcies.

Watch on the economy

The Senate overwhelmingly approved Alan Greenspan as the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, but Washington's financial community is withholding judgment for the time being. In conversations with us, banking regulators have suggested that Greenspan's close relationships with some of his former corporate clients create conflicts of interest for him.

For example, a couple of years ago, Greenspan's financial consulting firm did work for Lincoln Savings and Loan of California, which is owned by a politically well-connected Republican named Charles Keating. This powerful financier wants the government to give thrift institutions such as his unlimited power to invest in whatever they want — gambles that would involve federally insured dollars — and Greenspan actively lobbied for Keating's proposals.

Former Fed chairman Paul Volcker, our sources say, was aghast over Greenspan's involvement with Keating.

Debunking a Democratic myth

By Chuck Stone

seph Biden, D-Del.

"For the last three years," the story read, "since their crushing defeat in 1984, when Walter F. Mondale is thought to have been hurt by his close ties to many interest groups, the Democrats have been trying to concentrate on mainstream issues like the economy and foreign policy."

How ironic that Mondale's election chances were ruined by concentrating too much on the economy. He even raised the heretical idea of a possible tax increase.

But myths tend to have a life of their own.

One myth that constantly cripples the Democrats is their alleged "close ties to many interest groups."

Freely translated: blacks, women, Hispanics, labor leaders, liberals, the handicapped, senior citizens and the poor.

Supposedly this myth doesn't affect Republicans because they don't have "close ties." But Republicans are dominated by special interest groups — corporate executives, wealthy professionals, industrial associations, conservatives and what Eisenhower called the "military-industrial complex."

Perhaps the mythical perception that Republican special interest groups are somehow more respectable may explain why Democratic special interest groups are regarded as invidious.

Today's average American is more inclined to identify with those economic forces that can accelerate his or her upward mobility than with those groups whose most fortuitous claim to fame is the intensity of the tsaouris (Yiddish for pains and troubles) they bring to political dialogue.

But Democrats must never forget that Mondale didn't get crushed because of his "close ties to interest groups," but because he came across as a wimp who caved in to these groups and let them decide his agenda, which did not excite a majority of voters.

The wondrous myth that Ronald Reagan palmed off on the American people was that he was not the Pinocchio of Republican special interest groups.

He was indeed. And that is precisely why his administration has become the most scandal-ridden in presidential history.

Priestless parish gets high marks from its ranks

By George W. Cornell
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Summoned to the bishop's office, the nun was told she was needed in a parish as a "pastoral administrator."

"What is that?" she asked.

"It means you'll be pastor in everything except the sacraments," the bishop said. "The church needs you for it."

"I'll try," she said.

That, in essence, began five years running Queen of Peace parish in Ewing, Mo., which Sister Carol Kopff left this month in an emotional farewell liturgy and hugs and kisses from the 125 families she had served.

"We had lived together, worked together and grown together, both spiritually and socially," she says.

Sister Kopff, now starting advanced studies at the Jesuit School of Theology in Berkeley, Calif., is among a vanguard of nuns, deacons or theologically trained lay people put in charge of priestless parishes.

The scattered yet growing deployment of these non-clerical "resident ministers," with about 125 now serving around the country, has resulted mainly from shortages in priests.

That trend is expected to intensify, further expanding the new kind of parish leadership.

"It's pioneering work, and it can be tough at the start," Sister Kopff says, recalling that when she first arrived, the rural, vacant church building was locked, the key left with a Baptist neighbor living nearby.

"But so many people came back to church," she says and tells of their increasing parish involvement and activities, taking on new duties and roles in worship, the formation of a parish council to review decisions.

Member evaluations of her leadership, and that of another nun, Sister Carol Lang, who leads two rural parishes in northern Wisconsin, have been overwhelmingly favorable.

"It's working," a parishioner concluded in a survey about Sister Lang's performance after five years of her leadership. Another said, "Sister is truly a minister to us in every sense of the word."

Other comments:

"The parish is being rejuvenated."

"I've never felt closer bonds in a parish before."

Sister Lang, whose two Wisconsin parishes are St. Augustine at Harrison and St. John the Baptist at Bloomville, 17 miles apart, says the new role was hard at first, but she has gained the trust and acceptance of the community.

"Quietly, unassumingly, people get use to having a woman minister," says Sister Kopff, replaced at Ewing in August by Sister Margaret Buscher. "They open up to us because sisters aren't seen in the same stereotypes as priests."

"We're used to mixing with people."

She tells of initiating the first joint Catholic-Protestant activities in the rural, mainly Protestant area, including running a food pantry for the needy, and a shared sunrise service.

Although the women ministers lead worship services of prayers, sermons and Scriptures, they can't consecrate the bread and wine for Holy Communion — a role confined to the priesthood.

Thus for Communion, either the consecrated elements must be reserved for distribution to the congregation, or a visiting priest must be present on weekends to celebrate the service.

Although Pope John Paul II has firmly rejected women's ordination and ordered no more talk of it, Sister Lang says that consequently "people talk about it all the more."

"People are getting used to the idea. More and more women and men are working together in leadership, and Rome will come around to it. A lot of beautiful things are happening."

Sister Kopff, although not interested in being ordained herself, says some women are called to that function. She adds, "It's the Spirit that calls a variety of people, and sex doesn't make any difference."

Falwell backs Bork nomination

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — TV minister Jerry Falwell says the nomination of Judge Robert H. Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court "has come under the most bigoted, biased and hateful criticism" ever unleashed by leftists.

In the monthly magazine of Liberty Federation which he heads, Falwell says liberal groups are spending millions to block Senate confirmation of Bork only because he believes in "strict interpretation" of the Constitution.

However, Falwell says the nomination offers a chance to overturn legalized abortion because the Constitution provides no rights "to kill the unborn, commit homosexual acts ... or exploit women and children" through pornography.

Come early for fresh corn

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
Executive Director

The early birds at the farmers' market get not the worm but the green beans, cantaloupe, and fresh-off-the-stalk corn. By the time I reached the market at 11 last Saturday, two of our farmers had already sold out and gone home.

One brought in his peaches, which sold out right away, and there was Rina Dailey from Wassuc Farms, who makes such wonderful jellies and jams from her produce. This Saturday Rina had cherry, rhubarb and strawberry and the vegetables from her garden disappear quickly.

However, there were still some good buys for us latecomers. Mary Laippa from Wintonbury Farms, always stationed at the top of the market, was still offering plump purple-black eggplants, broccoli, yellow squash, zucchini, peppers, carrots, beets, basil, tomatoes, and sweet Utah onions, along with gorgeous stalks of gladiolus. Mary's farm, by the way, is the very small land farmed originally by the first settlers moving out from Windsor, and they still occasionally turn up artifacts as they garden.

Bad marriage? Risk of disease rises for men

NEW YORK (AP) — Men in unhappy marriages have weakened immune systems, suggesting they may be more susceptible to disease, researchers said Friday.

Janice Kiecolt-Glaser and her husband, Ronald Glaser, both of Ohio State University in Columbus, also reported that volunteers who rid themselves of an emotional burden by describing it to a researcher strengthened their immune systems and were less likely than others to get sick.

These studies, presented Friday at the American Psychological Association's annual meeting, were among several which argued that mental health can affect physical health by altering the immune system, which provides the body's defenses against illness.

One of the other studies suggested that such emotional influences on physical health can persist for a long time after the emotional problem has been resolved.

The study, by Christopher Coe of the University of Wisconsin in Madison, found that infant monkeys separated from their mothers for 24 hours had a weakened ability to fight disease for up to two months after the separation.

"This is a type of immune change which could lead to long-term disease," such as cancer, Coe said in an interview. He stressed, however, that the study merely shows impairment in the immune system; he has not yet shown that those changes do indeed lead to more illness.

"The part that is surprising is that the change lasts for one or two months after the event," he said.

Coe's study would seem to suggest that human infants separated from their mothers in day care would face increased risk of immune system damage and possibly disease. But Coe said that was not so.

A favored poem for eulogy

DEAR ABBY: I have tried without success to track down the author of this lovely poem. Can you help me?

Do not stand at my grave and weep; I am not there. I do not sleep.

I am a thousand winds that blow; I am the diamond glints on snow. I am the sunlight on ripened grain;

I am the gentle autumn's rain. When you awaken in the morning's hush, I am the swift uplifting rush Of quiet birds in circled flight. I am the soft star that shines at night.

Do not stand at my grave and cry. I am not there; I did not die.

GOING CRAZY IN RENO

DEAR GOING: The identity of the author is unknown, but in the NBC-TV world premier movie "Better Later Than Never," presented Oct. 17, 1978, Harold Gould portrayed an elderly man who delivered a graveside eulogy for an old friend. This poem was the eulogy.

John Carpenter, who wrote the television script, reports that he had heard this poem in December of 1977, when the late John Wayne delivered it as the eulogy at the Little change in treatment of cystic fibrosis patients

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 14 and have cystic fibrosis. I would like to know what my life expectancy is in this day and age. Are the scientists close to discovering the cure for this disease?

DEAR READER: Cystic fibrosis, an inherited disorder that causes particularly thick secretions from mucus glands, has been termed the most lethal genetic disease of white Americans. In older children and adults, cystic fibrosis causes plugging of the bronchial passageways, resulting in chronic lung infections, emphysema and respiratory insufficiency. The condition also causes intestinal disturbances because of pancreatic disease and deficient digestion.

In previous years, more than 50 percent of cystic fibrosis patients died of pulmonary complications before age 20. Today, thanks in part to the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and the National Institute of Health, special hospital units are available and more patients are living longer.

There has been little recent change in the medical treatment of funeral of film director Howard Hawks.

DEAR ABBY: My very dear friend, "Clara," is driving my husband and our two sons (ages 12 and 14) up a wall. Clara has a habit of constantly scratching her head. She does this while preparing food, and at the table while eating. My husband and our boys hate to eat at the same table with her. When I'm preparing food in my kitchen, Clara offers to help, and I always say, "No thanks," but she persists. Last evening when she was here for dinner, she scratched her head, then picked up a slice of bread from the dish and passed it to my son. He left the table!

How can I politely convince Clara to please quit scratching her head while eating at my table and also hers when we are at her home for dinner?

Any advice would be appreciated. Thank you.

SCRATCHER'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Be a very good friend and tell Clara (privately, of course) that she needs to see a dermatologist who will get to the root of her problem and cure her itchy scalp.

DEAR ABBY: I chuckled when I read the letter from "Greta's Guy in Gardena." Tell him not to worry about Greta's height. It's attitude—not altitude—that makes a marriage.

I'm several inches taller than my wonderful husband and several years older, too. We've been married for 20 years and raised three beautiful children.

We've been through good times and bad times, but height or age was never an issue because our love is based on love for God and each other. And by the way, I wore heels at our wedding.

BIG MAMA IN CHARLOTTE, N.C.

DEAR ABBY: Two of my relatives moved in with me and my family while they looked for a place of their own. Well, it's been a year and they're still here. This has caused a tremendous burden on us. They are in no hurry to find a place. They're not even looking.

My wife, our children and I have been terribly frustrated living like this. Our two sons had to give up their bedroom.

How can people be so inconsiderate of others? What should I do? I hate to hurt their feelings.

CROWDED IN CORONA

DEAR CROWDED: What feelings? These relatives have the hides of rhinoceroses, and unless you give them a time limit, they will be with you indefinitely. A solution to hasten their departure: Help them to find a place of their own.

The U.S. Food and Drug Admin. found that the coloring might cause birth defects. Other additives are suspect as cancer causatives. Good old-fashioned cooked corn meal, oatmeal, whole wheat and buckwheat cereals are most nutritious, safe, and least expensive per serving.

The story behind the story

By Josie

Christopher Walken

Q. I want to know about Christopher Walken. I enjoy his performances but I know very little about him. P.W., Somerset, N.J.

A. Ronald Christopher Walken is 44, from the New York City borough of Queens, one of three sons of a German-born baker and his wife, a once-aspiring actress. His mother's show-business designs were transferred to her sons, who all got work in the 1950s doing live TV drama and commercials. Christopher, for some reason, didn't get as many roles as his brothers, so his mother pushed him toward tap dancing instead and in this field he got a lot of work onstage. (He was a tall dancer and there aren't many around.)

He left the stage briefly to attend Hofstra University, but when he couldn't figure out why he was in college, he decided to return to show business, which he did in a road company production of "West Side Story." After returning to New York, he got a job in the chorus of the musical "Best Foot Forward" (notable for introducing a new talent by the name of Liza Minnelli), followed by chorus jobs in the musicals "Baker Street" and "High Spirits," in which his character's main purpose onstage was to be hit by a chair.

Things changed for him in his next show, "The Lion in Winter," in which he acted, not danced, and wasn't hit by anything. He made his film debut soon afterward in "The Anderson Tapes" and has barely had a breather since. Among his movies: "Next Stop, Greenwich Village," "Roseland," "Annie Hall," "The Dogs of War," "Pennies From Heaven," "The Dead Zone," "Brainstorm" (during the filming his co-star Natalie Wood died; he was onboard the yacht when she drowned and he still will not discuss it), "Heaven's Gate," "A View to a Kill," "At Close Range" and "The Deer Hunter," for which he won an Academy Award.

He's been busy in the last year as well; upcoming films include "Deadline," "Puss N' Boots," "The Milagro Beanfield War" and "Biloxi Blues."

Anything you'd like to know about prominent personalities? Write to: Josie, King Features Syndicate, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Q. Since "Hill Street Blues" isn't coming back next year, I was wondering what Dennis Franz is going to do. I liked him a lot. Amy Carter, Mishawaka, Ind.

A. Don't worry; he's spinning his "Hill Street" character off into his own show called "Beverly Hills Buntz" and scheduled on NBC as a midseason replacement. Co-star Bruce Weitz is also set to return in his own show (although as a different character) called "Mama's Boy" for NBC as well as in a TV movie version of "If It's Tuesday, It Must Be Belgium." Their captain, Daniel J. Travanti, meanwhile, went off into the movies, working with Faye Dunaway in the film "Midnight Crossing" now in production.

Dennis Franz

Q. Where is Stephanie Kramer of "Hunter" from and what has she been in? Lita, Scranton, Pa.

A. She's from Los Angeles, the daughter of a violinist and a radio talk-show host. Before "Hunter," she put in some time on a soap "Days of Our Lives" and did a lot of episodic TV, on shows such as "The A-Team," "Eight Is Enough," "Bosom Buddies" and "Dynasty." She also sang in clubs around Los Angeles with a group — she's a trained mezzo soprano — did some theater and had a recurring role in a series "We Got It Made" which was on a couple of seasons ago. Now, her time seems pretty much taken up by "Hunter."

Jurgen Prochnow

Q. I'd like to know a little about the fine actor Jurgen Prochnow. I saw him on cable in "The Boat" and thought he was wonderful. Will he be in any American movies? D.H., East Moline, Ill.

A. He was born June 10, 1941 in Berlin but was raised in the city of Pommern, now in Poland, where the family moved after their home was bombed. The war intruded on his family life deeply: His father, an engineer, was captured by the Russians and sent to prison in that country; he didn't return to the family until two years after the war ended and was so weak that he spent months in a hospital. Finally, he was able to work again and got a job in Dusseldorf but it was another couple of years before the family joined him.

Perhaps because of those experiences, he was adamant that his son train for a profession and have some security. He, then, wasn't too receptive when Jurgen, at 14, started to hang out with a theater group and several years later announced his intention to go to drama school. Jurgen was persuaded to join a bank apprentice program instead, which he did for three years, but after completing it, he went to drama school anyway with his parents' reluctant consent.

After graduation, he went into the repertory system, made his TV debut in 1970 and his film debut in 1971. He then worked steadily in European films until "The Boat" ("Das Boot") brought him international recognition. He's followed it with a couple of American films, "Dune," "The Keep," "Beverly Hills Cop II" and "The Boarder" which he just finished filming, with Demi Moore and Michael Biehn.

A top-drawer actress maintains longtime fame in changing art

By Fred Robbins

Green-eyed, auburn-haired Jacqueline Bisset, British-born and as perennially fresh as a Tudor rose, is, in Hollywood parlance, "in demand." But that has been the case for two decades now. With a new movie in release, "High Season," a romantic drama filmed in Greece, she has been in production on an upcoming opulent, multimillion-dollar miniseries for ABC, "Napoleon and Josephine."

Hard on the heels of this, she is scheduled to play the title role in a television remake of "Laura," the long-ago film classic that made a star of Gene Tierney. And other movie scripts are under consideration to follow it.

It may safely be said that no other modern-day actress puzzles Hollywood's femme stars quite so much as Jacqueline Bisset.

Eying the lissome, 42-year-old beauty as she settles into a booth at Ma Maison, a chic movieland restaurant that's a favorite of hers, one can't help but enviously marvel, "How does she do it? What's her secret for staying so successful for so long?"

There are legitimate reasons for that curiosity.

Jacqueline Bisset, as she says herself, is "not a flashy person." Her private life is not lived in headlines. She is not a daily fixture in gossip columns. She is a star but not a superstar.

She has never won an Academy Award or even been nominated for one. Not once has she ranked among the Box-Office Top 10. And with rare exceptions, like "Murder on the Orient Express," "Under the Volcano" and Truffaut's "Day for Night," most of the films

"I'm extremely able to survive, I think," she volunteers. "If I put my head to it, I'm a survivor. Sometimes, though, this requires effort and a period of withdrawal. I can get very down for a while, when I'm feeling low in energy and a bit sorry for myself. When this happens, when a fallow time sets in, I don't fight it. Instead I surrender to it and sort of retire within myself. A degree of silence, a degree of accepting who are you and where you're at, helps you cure yourself, I think."

Her most recent "down" period, she says, was several months ago when, for the first time, she seriously considered giving up her career. And it was provoked not by any inner feeling, but by something outside herself.

"For a whole year," she explains, "I was extremely disenchanted with moviemaking, with the state of cinema in general. So few good films were getting made — I just thought it was a whole load of rubbish. And I didn't want to be a part of it any longer. But lately, it's all changed for the better. Now I've seen a lot of good movies, a lot of wonderful performances, a lot of original ideas. So I'm loving my work once more. I'm hot to trot again. And I think that's reflected in the number of roles I've taken on recently."

Besides a renewed enthusiasm for her profession, Bisset attributes much of her present enjoyment of life to the love of an "adorable, highly emotional and volatile, sometimes difficult, outrageously humorous, and macho, but in the most positive way, man" — who is also five years her junior.

This is Russian dancer Alexander Gudonov, of the wild blond mane and powerful physique, who in 1979 was the first and only star to defect from the Soviet Union's prestigious Bolshoi Ballet. And, as of this past March, he is also a brand-new American citizen. Besides having legions of ballet fans, Gudonov is now also well known to moviegoers as a formidable actor. He made his acting debut in "Witness," as the muscular Amish farmer who was Harrison Ford's rival for the affections of Kelly McGillis. And he has since followed this with a comic starring role in Steven Spielberg's "The Money Pit."

For almost six years now she and Alexander — or Sasha, as she usually calls him — have lived together in her Beverly Hills home. Their time there, of course, has been limited by the demands of their separate careers. But this glamorous couple has made every effort to share those areas of their lives as well.

He has made surprise visits to her on film locations in Budapest and Mexico, and she often accompanies him to the cities where he dances. But each is careful not to encroach on the other's professional turf. "When I go on tour with Sasha," says Bisset, "I watch him rehearse, but I know when to withdraw to the hotel and read a book." At times when it's impossible for them to be together, they run up staggering telephone bills.

"When we're both in Los Angeles," Bisset says, "we either go out to dinner and a film — we're both movie freaks — or we stay home and cook. That is, one or the other of us cooks. Not together. We're far too bossy to be in the kitchen at the same time. Sasha, an excellent chef, cooks what I call 'sort of' Russian dishes. Sometimes he'll serve up something especially tasty and when I ask if it's Russian, he exclaims, 'You must be kidding. You'd never find all these ingredients in Russia.' I'm quite an eclectic cook, though I do have a particular fondness for French food."

Any mention of marriage elicits an eloquent shrug from Jacqueline Bisset that implies a total lack of interest. "I haven't seen a great number of happy marriages," says the actress who has never married, never even been engaged. "I don't believe marriage is a working system. Not for me. Not yet anyway."

She speaks of the home in England where she grew up, the daughter of a successful British physician, now deceased, and a French-English mother who was once a barrister in Paris. "My own parents," she says, "were married for 30 years and their life together was not at all happy. Individually they were fine persons. But there was a lot more that they could have been giving each other, or to other people. When they finally admitted this, they divorced. And then they were much happier."

Jacqueline Bisset is still in demand.

Medicine

Fakery hurts your health

False medicines are still a big business

By Bruce Patterson

The old-time medicine wagon with the accompanying charlatan hawking his snake oil is a thing of the past, but the business of quackery still booms. The definition of quackery can be found in the origin of the term. Quack is an abbreviation of the word "quacksalver," one who "quacks" like a duck about his "salves" and remedies. When these claims for a remedy lack the evidence of both safety and effectiveness, the remedy is labeled as quackery.

Offer us an effortless weight-loss method, a bust developer, and a cure for baldness, arthritis or the other woes and we can't wait to pull out our checkbooks. In fact, we are so eager to spend our money, Americans spend $25 billion annually on quack products. This amount represents an incredible $100 spent on fraudulent products for every man, woman and child in the United States. Compare that to the $4 per person spent on cancer research in the U.S.

The quack is so successful because of his ability to influence his audience. To people in pain, he promises relief. To the chronically ill, he offers hope. To the overweight, he guarantees that pounds will melt away. To everyone, he pledges better health and a longer life.

Elderly people, especially those with few remaining family members, are particularly vulnerable to the cruelly manipulative quack. The quack spends time with them, listens to their stories and appears to care about their problems. Too often then, the quack acquires their trust and then their life savings. Not just elderly fall prey. Victims can be found in all economic and social classes. According to Dr. John H. Renner, M.D. and chairman of the Kansas City Council Against Health and Nutrition Fraud and Abuse. "There is no stereotype of the typical victim of quackery." Adds Dr. Renner, "Doctors, nurses, virtually anyone can become a victim of health fraud."

But what kinds of quackery are there? The Food and Drug Administration identifies three types:

1) False claims for drugs and cosmetics. This includes cures for baldness among men, which is incurable. Drugs cannot "melt away" fat. Parts of the body cannot be enlarged or reduced by rubbing on creams or lotions. Most dangerous of all are unproven treatments for cancer, which rob the patient of the one element that can save life — valuable time during which effective treatment could still be given. It has been estimated that $3 billion is wasted each year in the U.S. on quack remedies for cancer.

2) Fake medical devices. There is no machine which can be simply turning a knob or flipping a switch diagnose and treat a multitude of human ailments. No glove or bracelet can prevent or cure arthritis. Americans spend more than $3 billion each year on worthless quack remedies for arthritis. Also, excess body weight cannot be removed with special clothing or by vibration.

3) Unnecessary food supplements and irrational food fads. Contrary to what many "nutrition experts" say, our food supply has not been depleted of its nutritional quality because of modern farming practices and food processing methods. Diseases caused by dietary deficiencies are no longer common in the United States. The decision to go on a diet or to take supplemental vitamins and minerals should be made only after a careful and complete medical examination.

Understanding the myths that have developed about health fraud may help you from falling victim to the different types of quackery. Here is an examination of some of these myths:

Myth: These quacks are merely capitalizing on scientific "breakthroughs" that are being made constantly.

Fact: "Breakthroughs" are few and far between and, when they do occur, the medical community is eager to take advantage of them.

Myth: Some products are being withheld by the medical profession because they make consulting doctors unnecessary.

Fact: This is the conspiracy theory. Doctors practice medicine; they can't keep products off the market. Our free-enterprise system encourages new product development; unfortunately, it also encourages quacks.

Myth: The testimonials of people who have had success with a product prove that the product works.

Fact: Testimonials are substitutes for scientific proof. Be suspicious of them. The symptoms of some diseases, such as arthritis, come and go, so a person may think for a time that he or she is cured.

Myth: The advertising claims must be true because the government checks all advertisements.

Fact: There is no government agency — federal, state or local — that is responsible for verifying advertisements before they appear. Some government agencies can take action after an ad has appeared.

Myth: It is possible for a product to cure a number of serious illnesses, as promoters claim.

Fact: There are legitimate medicines that can treat more than one condition; however, there are no all-purpose cure-alls for serious illnesses.

Myth: Quackery is harmless.

Fact: It is dangerous. Ignoring proper treatment while trying a quack product can worsen a condition, even to life-threatening status.

In order to protect yourself from the worthless products offered by quacks, being aware of those myths and being able to recognize the following characteristics that are common to quacks and their products is extremely important. If you answer yes to any of the following questions, it is likely that quackery is involved.

- Is the product claimed to involve a secret principle or formula that no one else has?
- Does it promise a quick cure?

- Is it advertised by case histories or testimonials?
- Does the sponsor claim medical men are persecuting him or fear his competition?
- Does the sponsor clamor for medical investigation or recognition?

- Are recognized treatments belittled?
- Is it sold by "specialists" or door-to-door peddlers?
- Is the product or service effective for a wide variety of ailments? Remember, if the answer to any of these questions is yes, be skeptical, investigate before you invest.

The consequences of being a victim of health fraud can be varied. It is the lucky person who loses only money to quackery. There are more serious consequences. An individual who surrenders to the claims of a quack often delays seeking proper treatment for the illness or quits medically prescribed therapy that probably requires effort and patience.

Sexuality

Young man has difficulty with sex

Teen who can't maintain erection should see doctor

By Dr. June Reinisch

The Kins Report

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am a 19-year-old male and have normal sexual desires, but I have never been able to have intercourse because of trouble getting and maintaining an erection. I have symptoms of something called chordee (downward curve of erection), but information about this is difficult to obtain.

This has caused a lot of problems with self-esteem and worry. I find myself lying to my friends about why I don't pursue relationships with girls. Could chordee be causing my problem? Can it be corrected with surgery?

you to find an experienced counselor who can help you to become more confident about your ability to function sexually.

Trauma of rape

DEAR READER: Because you signed your letter "Wary of Physicians," I suspect that you have not had a thorough medical evaluation of your genitals. I hope you can overcome your wariness, because your questions can be answered only after a careful medical examination by a specialist called a urologist.

You may or may not have chordee (curved, often painful, erection of the penis). Many normal, healthy men have slight penile curves up, down or to one side during erection. If some malformation of the penis does explain this curve, it might affect the interior areas that must become engorged with blood so that you can get and keep an erection. These conditions usually can be corrected by surgery.

Your erectile difficulties may be caused by your concern about the appearance of your penis and the effect you think this has on its functioning. These thoughts are likely to disrupt the process of arousal, making it difficult to get or to keep an erection when having sex with a partner. (You do not say how your penis works when you are alone.)

Look for a urologist who specializes in treating male sexual dysfunctions. You can often find such experts by calling the department of urology at a medical school or large hospital. This physician can evaluate your physical situation, arrange for any necessary surgery and help

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I have been living with a nice girl for two-and-a-half years. We get along fine and are happy except for one problem: She's not very sexual. We have sex about three times a month, but I need sex more often.

We've talked about this. She blames her past (she was raped by four guys when she was young). Also, before we met, she lived with a man who forced her to have sex without even getting her ready (no foreplay). She says if this had happened to me, I would dislike sex, too.

I love her and wouldn't leave her over sex, but find myself getting uptight and frustrated. I don't want to just go on masturbating by myself. I've also begun to think about what it would be like with another woman, but I will not cheat on her.

What can I do?

DEAR READER: Help her find a therapist or counselor who has experience in working with women who have been raped. It is not unusual for women who have been raped, or who have had a sexually abusive relationship, to have difficulty with intimate relationships later in their lives. These problems can persist for many years, affecting sexual functioning and non-sexual behavior; for example, by causing a woman to doubt her own self-worth.

Specific problems reported by researchers include an inability to trust other people, shutting down feelings of affection, fear of men, an avoidance of sex, lack of sexual arousal and a pervasive anxiety about anything sexual. Various types of treatment have successfully corrected these and other related problems. Therapy for most other sexual dysfunctions focuses on treating a couple together; however, some research had found greater improvement when rape victims are treated in a group setting with other rape victims.

Apparently, a rape victim may begin to feel better about herself by sharing her feelings with other women who have had similar experiences.

Conflicts over how often a couple will have sex are not uncommon and are usually solved by having the couple consult a sex therapist or counselor together. This way, the therapist can help the partners work toward an agreement. In your case, however, your friend should seek help for herself first, perhaps by meeting in a group with other rape victims. If she gets help in dealing with the effects of her earlier life, this may remove her negative feelings about sexual activity. If not, she can ask the therapist to help both of you, as a couple, to negotiate an agreement about sexual frequency.

Different techniques can be tried. For example, the partner who does not want to have sex as often can help the other partner have sexual satisfaction without coitus. This is one way to preserve the intimacy and love of the relationship without forcing either partner to have coitus or to forgo sexual release or closeness.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I had always been taught that sexual acts between close relatives would breed deformed monsters. I know of one girl who had her brother's baby and another who had her father's baby. Both babies seem to be just fine and are developing quite normally. What is the truth concerning inbreeding?

DEAR READER: The risk of genetic birth defects is higher among blood relatives, but is generally not as high as most people believe.

The risk of having a physically malformed child in any pregnancy is about 1 percent (this does not include mental or psychological handicaps). This risk is doubled for first cousins, to two in every 100 births. For brothers and sisters, the risk is estimated to be 10 percent. No risk estimate has been projected for father-daughter offspring, but it should be close to the 10 percent estimated for siblings.

However, all of these projections are based on broad averages of genetic makeup. Hundreds of genetically carried traits have been identified. Some are more visible than others, some are more likely to appear in each generation, and some lie dormant until they are paired with a similar gene from the other parent.

If both blood relatives appear to be normal, and if their ancestors on both sides have no record of physical defects, there is a low risk of having a deformed baby.

Confesses ignorance

DEAR DR. REINISCH: A 35-year-old friend has just had surgery for ovarian cancer. I would like to be supportive to her and her family, but I know very little about this disease. I'm afraid I'll inadvertently say something upsetting to her, rather than being helpful.

Could you give me some basic information about ovarian cancer, treatments and outcome?

DEAR READER: Approximately 18,000 cases of ovarian cancer are diagnosed annually in the United States. The average age at diagnosis is 62; it is rare before age 30. The outcome of each case depends on the stage (the extent of the disease's spread) found during surgery and on the type of cancer involved.

Unfortunately, early stages of ovarian cancer have few symptoms or early warning signals. By the time that common symptoms (such as abdominal swelling, abdominal discomfort or vague digestive complaints) occur, the cancer has usually spread beyond the ovaries.

This is one reason that any enlargement of an ovary discovered during an annual pelvic examination must be followed closely. The vast majority of these masses are ovarian cysts or other non-cancerous conditions, but even the few cancers that are detected make these yearly visits to a gynecologist well worthwhile, especially for women 40 and older.

Treatment consists of surgical removal of the affected organs, which often include both ovaries, the uterus, Fallopian tubes and nearby tissues. In a few cases of younger women with an early stage of cancer in one ovary, only the affected ovary is removed.

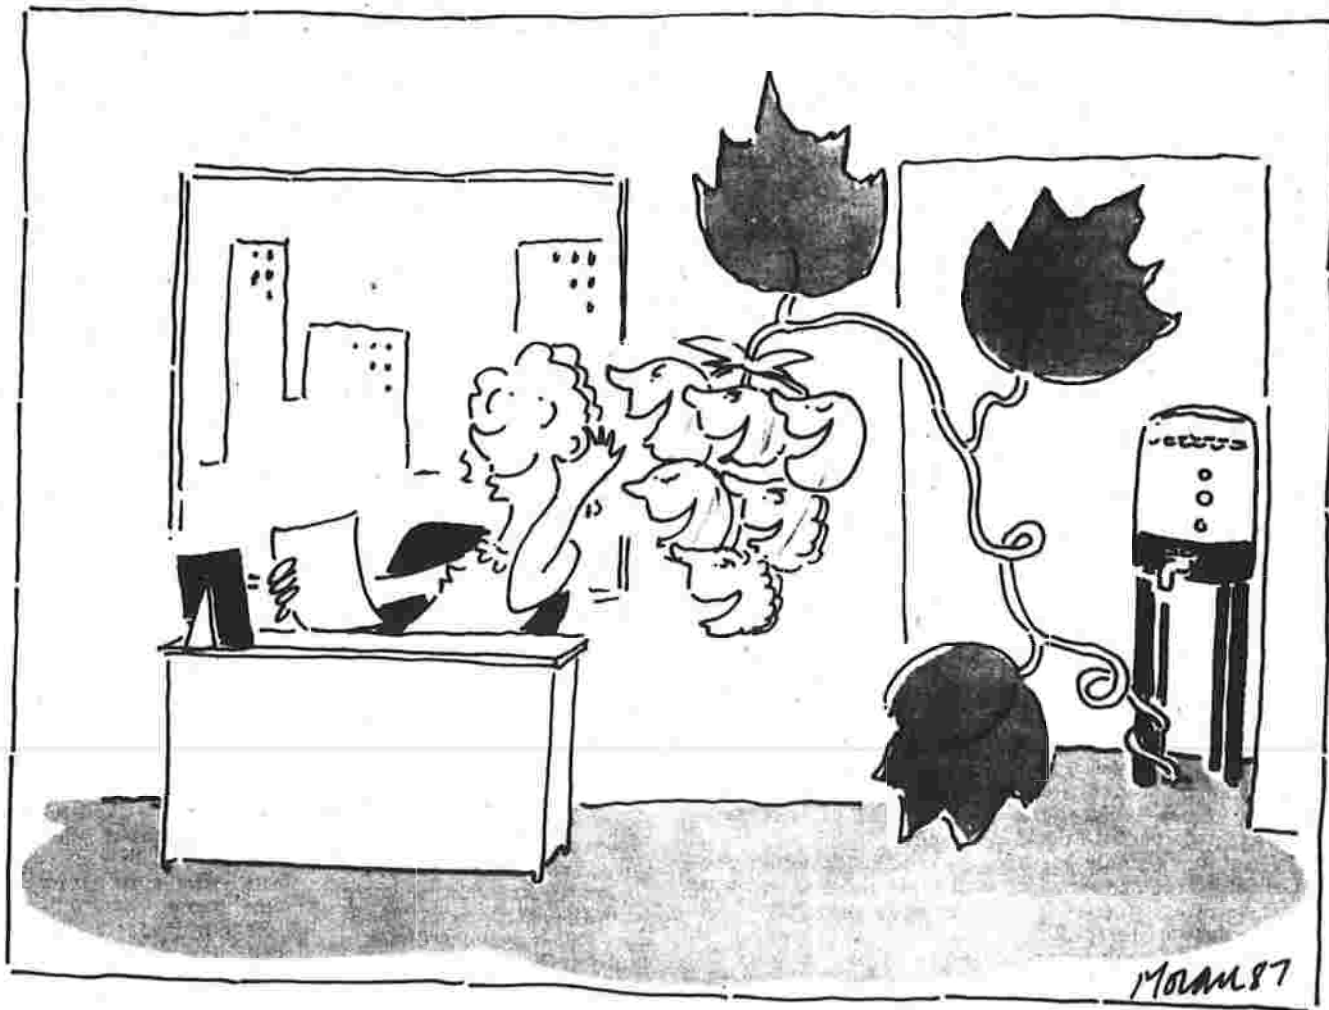

Radiotherapy (treatment with X-rays) and/or chemotherapy usually follow surgery. Several chemotherapy drugs have had good results, and combination therapy using three or more chemotherapy agents appears even more promising in terms of long-term survival rates. These treatments may be needed for many months, and some physicians then do a second abdominal surgery to ensure that the cancer has been eradicated.

Long-term survival depends on the stage of disease spread and the type of cancer involved, with an average five-year survival rate of 15 percent to 45 percent for the most common type of cancer. However, even some more advanced cancers, if treated with combination chemotherapy after extensive surgery, now show a five-year survival rate of more than 60 percent in some studies.

Encourage your friend to consult with the best gynecological oncologist (women's cancer specialist) she can find. Because most cancer research takes place at medical schools or large hospitals, she could locate such a specialist by calling the department of oncology or gynecology at the center nearest to her. She might also consider participating in a research project using experimental chemotherapy drugs or experimental combinations. If this is offered by the center she contacts.

It is not unusual for women who have been raped, or who have had a sexually abusive relationship, to have difficulty with intimate relationships later in their lives.

It pays to listen to the grapevine

Office gossip can help you get ahead

By Robert Brody

Tim Scerba, a communications specialist at Teachers Insurance, heard through the grapevine that a colleague was quietly pursuing a project originally entrusted to him — in effect, an invasion of turf. Fueled with new ambition, Scerba worked harder and faster and eventually won all the credit.

Sabrina Haskell, an advertising sales representative at the publishing company Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, picked up scuttlebutt that a disgruntled advertiser wanted a new ad agency. She arranged for the news to reach the agency that was about to lose the account, inspiring gratitude and heavier business.

Ted Klein, president of a public relations firm bearing his name, learned at a casual business lunch that a Fortune 500 company might be interested in retaining his services. In calling the firm to check out the rumor, he landed the account.

Every company operates a highly visible network of official, authorized information. It consists largely of memos, letters, minutes, status reports, house organs, timetables, statistical analyses and policy statements.

But there is also an invisible network, all its wires humming with unofficial, mostly spoken information. It's made up of leaks, rumors, trial balloons, hearsay, innuendo and gossip.

The savvy executive realizes that information never written or taped or delivered at formal gatherings is just as prized as any other, and that plugging into this underground network could be essential to job survival, even to career success.

The bigger and more competitive your company, the more important it is for you to keep clued into how events just past or still to come will affect your individual responsibilities and what actions you should take in response or in anticipation.

Since the invisible network will broadcast its messages with or without your participation, you might as well tune in as closely and as often as possible, the better to find out the latest word on what could get you ahead or leave you behind.

Office gossip has long suffered a bum rap as petty and unprofessional, calling forth an image of slanders whispered in shadowy stairwells, suspicions aroused and reputations broken.

But in truth, gossip is simply unverified information. The invisible network thrives on the practice of reading between the lines. Most rumors are coming attractions, speculation decked out in pinstripes, news hot off the loading docks, something about to become fact.

According to Dr. Alfred Freedman, psychiatry professor at New York Medical College, "Gossip provides people with an opportunity to know what's really going on in a company."

A gift for gossip gave President Franklin Delano Roosevelt added power, prestige and influence. He would routinely put out feelers for behind-the-scenes information, then send certain trusted staff members reconnoitering through the federal government. On the strength of tidbits gleaned through this underground system, he often made crucial policy decisions.

Going on-line with the invisible network executives can get the scoop on why the director of marketing was fired — and how you can avoid making a similar mistake — or job openings in the making. If you happen to overhear that your boss is sweating bullets about going over budget this year, you might wait until next Tuesday to ask for that big raise.

By listening to casual conversation, you can determine unwritten policies about corporate conduct, the party line on how to get along with colleagues, what pleases the boss and whether the conglomerate about to purchase your company intends to fire half the staff. You discover underlying priorities and secret agendas.

On the most basic level, the invisible network reveals not only what your fellow professionals say and do behind closed doors, but also what they really think about, say, the decline in profit sharing or the new campaign to diversify. With gossip, you can uncover the hidden hierarchy within an organization, see who travels on the inside track, spot alliances a-borning and boardroom strategies still in the offing.

A recent experiment at the University of California at San Diego showed that gossip could even make for better employee relations, shaping loyalty and a sense of unity. Psychologists found that sharing secrets made teller and listener feel more favorably toward one another, and that swapping confidences can form a bond that leads to trust.

Tapping into the invisible network takes a combination of discretion and gamesmanship. Herewith, some tips:

- Keep your ears wide open and your mouth pretty much closed. Not to worry — your cronies around the water cooler will yammer away unbidden.
- When listening to office gossip, stick to neutral comments ("Is that so? Really? No kidding?") or hum in just the right key to register curiosity or surprise.

- Gossip is traditionally a two-way deal. Give away only innocuous tidbits; keep the best material for yourself.
- Cultivate connections at every level. The more folks you know — including secretaries and mail-room clerks — the more you can find out for personal advantage.

- If you doubt the veracity of gossip you've heard, immediately make your skepticism plain in public.

Barbecuing can take you through fall

By Sandra Scott Klink

Most of us have probably spent a good part of the summer hovering over the good old backyard barbecue grill, conjuring up the same things we did last year, and the year before, and the year before that. Maybe some chicken with glutinous bottled barbecue sauce burned onto its skin. Maybe stringy blackened ribs. Or the familiar charred steak or hamburgers.

Hang on! It's not too late in the season to add some variety to this repetitious litany. Barbecuing in fact is a cooking method that affords magnificent variety in tastes, methods, different foods cooked. Skeptical? Just ask people from eight or 10 parts of the country what barbecuing is and you'll receive as many answers — impassioned answers.

One of the earliest barbecue recipes originated with Jamaican slaves who escaped to the mountains during the British invasion there in 1655. It uses Jamaican pepper (allspice), chopped scallions or onions, garlic and hot peppers. This mixture is added to water and vinegar and is used to marinate pork or chicken overnight, then the meat is barbecued slowly at 200 degrees for several hours.

Colonial Americans roasted whole pigs and basted them with salt water and butter; East Coast settlers brought English "ketchups" along with them. Bearing no resemblance to what we think of as ketchup, they consisted of a vinegar solution mixed with walnuts or oysters.

Carolynians added hot spices to the vinegar, and this has evolved into what we know now as "North Carolina style" barbecue sauce. You'll never convince an Eastern Carolinian that barbecue sauce contains tomatoes. Rumor has it, however, that tomato-based sauces have been seen in the western part of the state.

Their neighbors the Virginians like their sauce thick and sweet (ketchup, honey, sugar and molasses) but never cook it with the meat. It's used as a condiment and the meat — usually pork — is basted with vinegar, oil and spices.

Heading inland, across the Appalachian mountains, ketchup and mustard are added to the vinegar and spices, and on into the deep South and Southwest, tomatoes make an appearance. These sauces are the ones that most of us know today — it is certainly the most popular style of barbecue sauce in America.

Kansas City has been claimed to be the "barbecue capital of the universe" by Mayor Richard L. Berkley. In fact, it is a melting pot of regional styles from all over the country. Kansas Citians will barbecue pork, beef brisket, lamb, ribs, chicken and aren't picky about their sauces — they'll use everything from tomato-based sauces to vinegary marinades to dry rubs. And they love it all!

Rich Davis, a Kansas City psychiatrist, is such a barbecue fanatic he gave up his practice to market a sauce he developed.

Colorado is more specific — it's lamb country and the favorite there is spit-roasted whole baby lamb or butterflied leg of lamb, loin chops or rack of lamb.

In Texas, barbecue is synonymous with beef. Brisket and ribs are preferred, please, but "hot guts" (spicy sausage) and "cabrito" (baby goat) are favorites with some. As for sauces, ketchup-and-brown-sugar-based seem to prevail, although there are some purists who disdain all of them. Mesquite is the favored wood.

And moving along to the Pacific Northwest, barbecue most often means salmon. It is cooked over alder wood, which gives a delicate flavor to the fish. Sturgeon, halibut, Olympia oysters and Manila clams and mussels are popular, too, as are this area's abundant wild mushrooms, which are simply brushed with olive oil and grilled, whole or skewered.

California has probably the broadest definition of barbecue. If it can be grilled, someone has grilled it. The grilled vegetable is the state's latest instant classic — garlic, onions, leeks, eggplants, peppers, radicchio and on and on. Emphasis here is on freshness and lightness. Heavy sauces are out.

Not surprisingly, barbecuing has become America's No. 1 favorite form of at-home entertaining, according to a recent Food and Wine magazine poll. Seventy-five percent of those surveyed said they hosted a cookout at least once the past year.

But grilled food is not only found at home. Restaurants all over the country are grilling up a storm — and they are the restaurants that everyone is talking about: Arizona 206 in

New York, Spago in Los Angeles, the Rattlesnake Club in Denver, Mustards in the Napa Valley, Routh Street Cafe and Baby Routh in Dallas.

Many of the chefs in these restaurants use aromatic woods to impart extra flavor: hickory, mesquite, apple, peach, cherry, alder, even grape vine cuttings. Smokers, too, are becoming increasingly popular.

So with this range of possibilities available to you, don't waste another minute of the ever-waning summer. Try something different: grill a vegetable, try a new barbecue sauce, compare North Carolina barbecue to Texas Brisket.

Here's the recipe that started it all.

JAMAICAN BARBECUE ("JERK")

Take a 6-pound boneless pork shoulder or 3-pound broiler chicken split in half. Do not trim excess fat from the pork because it is needed for natural basting during the barbecue process. The fat may be trimmed off after cooking and may be discarded.

Chop 1 small onion in pieces, add 3 whole cloves of garlic, chopped, and a medium hot fresh green chili pepper. Add 1 ounce of ground allspice and 3 tablespoons of fresh ground black pepper. Add 1 tablespoon of salt and mix all of this with 1 cup of water and 1 cup of vinegar.

Place all ingredients together and rub over meat, refrigerate and marinate, covered, overnight. Turn occasionally.

Prepare barbecue fire, place meat at some distance from the charcoal and put your favorite water-soaked wood chunks on the fire. Close the lid and smoke for at least 4 hours for the pork, 2½ hours for the chicken. Remove and serve.

Jeff Bridges plays it cool in 'Nadine'

JEFF BRIDGES
... tough Texan

By Bob Thomas
The Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — For a fellow who was Los Angeles-born and raised amid the hurly and the burly of Hollywood, Jeff Bridges has had an amazing career of playing down-home, good old boys on the screen.

It all started with his role as the small-town Texas tough in "The Last Picture Show." That earned him a 1971 Academy nomination as best supporting actor (Ben Johnson won the Oscar for the same film) as well as other clod-kicker roles: "Lolly Madonna," "Bad Company," "Hearts of the West," "Rancho Deluxe" and "Heaven's Gate."

Now he's once more in the heart of Texas with Tri-Star's "Nadine." He plays Vernon Hightower, owner of a failed bar, the Bluebonnet Lounge, and estranged husband of the erratic beautician Nadine, who is played by Kim Basinger. They get thrown back together after she witnesses a murder and is menaced by the bad guys, headed by Rip Torn.

"Nadine," which was filmed in Austin and San Antonio, also marks a return to Texas for the Waxahachie-born Robert Benton. The writer-director immortalized his home in "Places in the Heart." Benton, who had directed Bridges in "Bad Company," wrote "Nadine" with the actor in mind.

"I guess it all started with "The Last Picture Show," the 37-year-old Bridges reflected of the southwest direction of his career. "After that, the other parts started coming.

"The accent? It came easy. During "The Last Picture Show," I got a friendship going with one of the young locals in Wichita Falls, a fellow named Lloyd Catlett, who is now my stand-in. He's still got his accent, and he's around a lot. So when I hear him, it keeps me going in the right direction."

Jeff Bridges hasn't been limited in his career. He has also portrayed an adventurer ("King Kong"), a pro-footballer ("Against All Odds") and an extra-terrestrial ("Star Man"). He received an Oscar nomination for best actor for his portrayal of the alien in "Star Man."

With the exception of Michael Caine, he is probably Hollywood's busiest star.

"I've been away from my family 10 months out of the past year," he said. "That's not good. I've got to figure out some way to take them along on location — or else find pictures to make in Hollywood."

Bridges knows what it's like to grow up in a family with a traveling father. His, Lloyd Bridges, was busy with a far-flung career that included the TV series "Sea Hunt" when sons Beau and Jeff were young.

"But the good thing about our work," Jeff said, "is that we can also have two or three months to devote entirely to our wife and children."

The Bridges boys seem to defy the legend that stars' kids become troubled adults. Jeff gave his first performance at six months, then retired until he appeared at eight in his father's TV series. After high school, he studied acting at New York's Berghof Studios and made his feature debut in the 1969 "Halls of Anger."

Bridges' rugged good looks and take-charge manner have made him much sought-after by filmmakers.

Bridges just finished what may be his best role so far — the automobile innovator in Francis Coppola's "Tucker."

"I didn't audition for that one at all," the actor said. "I got a call on a Friday to report for work on Monday."

Halftime's music has its arrangers in Nashville, Tenn.

By Joe Edwards
The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A company is selling new music arrangements — from "Bye Bye Blues" to "The Tennessee Waltz" — to marching bands to help add sparkle to halftime at football games.

Arrangers' Publishing Co. has sold arrangements to 10,000 high school and college bands covering every state and Canada, promoting the music as an intriguing interlude before the second-half kickoff.

"You hit the audience in the face," Jay Dawson says about some of his arrangements.

"You pin 'em to the wall," says W.C. Gore, president of the company.

The 4-year-old firm has done updated arrangements of 125 songs, most of them standards.

"We breathe new life into them by being up-to-date," says Gore, who was a high school band director in Nashville for 15 years. "The band directors recognize this and buy the arrangement."

One of the top-selling arrangements is the 1948 classic "Tennessee Waltz." A new version of "The Star-Spangled Banner" also has sold well.

"We kept the majesty of it and did chord substitutions and did more than the usual content," Gore said.

His firm offers these descriptions of the arrangements of other well-known songs:

"The Stars and Stripes Forever": "Rearranging Sousa's greatest march is kind of like spray painting a Stradivarius: You better be able to pull it off. We think this 'Stars and Stripes' IS forever."

"Waitin' for the Robert E. Lee": "This is one clever arrangement, as sophisticated as it is outrageous. A Dixieland combo is briefly spotlighted."

"Rockin' Robin": "This clever chart takes us back to the sock hop. Nostalgia is not a thing of the past."

"Give My Regards to Broadway": "If you're low on trombones and can't scare up a French horn to save your life, you need this arrangement."

Dawson is past assistant conductor of the Nashville Symphony. He is a former high school band director and is now a partner in the company. One of his goals is stimulating a distracted crowd while the football players listen to their coaches' halftime pep talk.

"The audience often is running to the bathroom or talking or going to the concession stand," he said. "You don't have their undivided attention and you have to get it."

"Band directors are aware of this and they are looking for something to get the crowd excited."

Murders movie features Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Donald Sutherland and Charles Durning have unveiled a new film produced and written by Detroit natives and shot on location in the Motor City.

"The Rosary Murders" premiered Thursday night at the Fisher Theatre here with a turnout of about 1,400 people dressed in tuxedos and evening gowns.

The movie was produced by Detroit native Bobby Laurel and the screenplay was written by mystery author Elmore "Dutch" Leonard of Birmingham, Mich., based on a book by Detroit novelist William X. Kienzle.

Durning was joined at the premiere by Detroit Tigers veteran Darrell Evans, who said the film was suspenseful.

"I hadn't read the book and didn't know what to expect," Evans said. "It kept me on the edge of my seat."

The film tracks a person who kills several priests and nuns in the Detroit area. After each murder, a rosary is found wrapped around the victim's hand.

Bridge

The right time to win the ace

By James Jacoby

It's hard to know when to violate the bridge habits of a lifetime. Back in college we would chant at each other, "Aces are meant to take kings" — a good rule to follow in promoting smaller cards to winning status. But correct defensive strategy can call for ignoring this principle on occasion.

Today's auction ended up with South playing five hearts doubled. West led the spade king. Declarer won dummy's ace and immediately played a diamond back to his king. West took the ace and continued spades. Declarer ruffed, cashed the ace of hearts (dropping East's queen), cashed the queen of diamonds and ruffed a low diamond with dummy's nine of hearts. He now played a second heart to force out the king. The only tricks that came to the defenders were the diamond ace and the heart king, and South made his doubled contract.

Needless to say, West can do better. The key to defeating the contract is simply to allow the king of diamonds to hold the trick when that suit is first led. If a second diamond is led, West will take the ace and give his partner a ruff with the heart queen. If declarer plays the ace of hearts before the second round of diamonds, West will win the diamond ace and play king and another heart, preventing a little diamond from being ruffed in dummy.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

The Dark Ages began with the sacking of Rome and ended with the early Renaissance (from A.D. 476 to about 1450).

KEEPING YOUR CAR ALIVE

Peter Bohr

Keeping your car insured

By Peter Bohr
Contributing Editor, Road & Track

In a recent column I explained how some drivers are denied auto insurance coverage because of their age, marital status, ethnic background or occupation.

Even if you're an auto insurance company's dream — Anglo-Saxon, married (to someone about your own age), have an acceptable occupation (say, banking), in excellent health; own a home and have lived in it for at least two years; own an ordinary family sedan or station wagon and have no teenagers who might drive — don't be too smug.

Each time you or your spouse receive a traffic ticket or become involved in an accident, no matter how minor or who's at fault, an "occurence" is noted on your insurance record. Insurance companies have different guidelines, but typically two occurrences within a three-year period will put your policy in jeopardy. If you carry a "preferred" or "standard" policy, it might be bumped into the "non-standard" category, which will cost you about 20 percent more in premiums. Or your policy might be cancelled altogether.

A case history: One independent worth of damage or the accident occurs on public property. (For example, a fender bender in a shopping mall parking lot — a common place for an accident — is usually on private property.)

Whether or not you are at fault, a police-reported accident will go on your driving record, and you can be sure your insurance company will learn about it. If you need witnesses to a minor accident, ask on-lookers, not the police.

amounts with your insurance company. When you put a $350 dent in your fender backing out of your garage, probably less than the client's premiums for the period. Even so, the insurance company cancelled the client's policy when it came up for renewal.
The agent was able to place the client with another company, but only because he didn't mention the previously cancelled policy. Why? Because many companies won't accept a car owner whose policy has been cancelled by another company within a three-year period, even if it was for something trivial like cracked windshields.

To keep your policy and your premiums low, make sure those nasty "occurrences" stay off your record.
If you receive a moving violation and it's possible in your state to have the ticket removed from your record by attending traffic school, go and consider it time well spent.

When you become involved in a minor accident, don't rush to call the police unless it's required by state laws.
In my state, California, you must report an accident if someone is injured or if there seems to be more than $500

GENUINE PARTS & AUTHORIZED SERVICE GUIDE...

SARAH OVERSTREET

A car for middle age

by Sarah Overstreet

You've heard about mid-life babies.
I think I just had a mid-life car, and I'm wondering how it happened.
Just like a mid-life baby, this car was completely unexpected. I thought I was happily on my way to 40, fully expecting to keep my 5-year-old practical sedan for another five years. I gured that, when I hit 40 and entered my ill-fated mid-life crisis, then I'd "principle": Conserve energy. Waste
like isn't important, it's what's inside that counts.

need changing again. And when I began to think about what kind of car I'd like, I realized that not only did I not want the same kind I'd had, I didn't want anything that remotely resembled a second cousin to it. Just what kind of image did I want to project through this car, anyway?

Image? I'd never thought of a car as projecting an "image" before; I'd been giving all my lip service to "principle": Conserve energy. Waste not, want not. What something looks like isn't important, it's what's inside
that counts.

But, of course, I had been projecting an image through my cars. When I bought an early, small, gas-saving foreign car, I was saying that I cared enough about dwindling resources to pay an outrageous price for a piece of tin that developed a door nick if I so much as looked cross at it. I was saying I was happy to drive with the pedal jammed to the floor, leaning forward and praying; my entire life whizzing by my eyes before the four little cylinders gained enough speed to get around another car. I was saying that anyone could buy a powerful car, but it takes guts to stare down a semi in a tin can.

By this point I'd figured out just what kind of image I didn't want to project. Whatever a car said about me, I wanted it to be more than,
"There goes someone who knows the value of a buck." That's what mid-life crisis is, realizing that there's only so much time left to have things that make us happy and say things about us that we'd like to have said. But that doesn't necessarily mean we know more about what we want than when we were 20. Just when we mid-lifers realize it's time to fish or cut bait, we can't figure out what kind of fish we want to catch. Then when we do, we turn around and jam our fishhooks into our thumbs.

So to figure out what kind of car I'd like to have at this crucial juncture of my life, I tried free association: If I could have any car I wanted, what would it be? I have the feeling it's the same question newly single people ask themselves, the process where they start out with Tom Selleck and work their way down to the computer programmer in the next apartment who still lives with his mother. I was shocked at what my unfettered mind came up with: a 1983 Corvette. Yet I also understood. Simply, I wanted a little class in my wheels.

I'm happy to report I didn't undergo a complete personality change; the first few expensive window stickers I looked at made me sick to my stomach. I'd been out of debt just long enough to appreciate the superiority of restaurant lunch over home-brought, and couldn't face the prospect of a round of payments that would last past my first set of dentures. Whatever I bought would have to be cheap enough for me to pay cash. And it would have to be American-made.

Unable to settle on one "dream car," I decided to look until I found one that hit me right. Then driving home one night under a full moon, I saw it gleaming with a "for sale" sign in its window: the car of my mid-life crisis, a black 1980 Camaro Z-28 with a T-top. The body was virtually perfect; it had low mileage, and my mechanic said it was still one heck of a car.

Oh, and the image I'm projecting this time around? That's easy: She may be getting a little wear on her butt, but she's still a class act. And she can still run with the best of them.

Hayden Fry, right, Iowa head football coach, and Johnny Majors, Tennessee head coach, hold the Kickoff Classic trophy during a Friday news conference in East Rutherford, N.J. The two teams will meet Sunday at Giants Stadium in the first college football game of the season.

Iowa and Tennessee worry about kickoff

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Iowa and Tennessee, which open the college football season Sunday in the fifth annual Kickoff Classic, are violating the old adage that there's no sense worrying about something you have no control over.

Fifteenth-ranked Iowa is worried about Tennessee's speed; 16th-ranked Tennessee is worried about Iowa's size. "I could talk about Tennessee's speed, but I don't want to get sick here," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said Friday. "We truly feel that they're one of the fastest football teams in America, if not the fastest."

"If we're lacking something at Iowa and in the Big Ten, the biggest difference we see when we go to the West Coast (i.e., the Rose Bowl) is the speed factor. Tennessee is like a West Coast team."

Iowa, on the other hand, resembles an NFL team with an offensive line that averages 270 pounds from tackle to tackle.

"They say football games are won up front and my biggest concern is how we match up with Iowa's physical people," Tennessee's Johnny Majors said. "We won't match them there, and I don't know if our speed will offset that."

Tennessee's speed includes whippet wideouts Anthony Miller, who runs a 4.3 forty, and Terence Cleveland and T.D. Woods, who clock in at 4.4. Miller, running back Vando Davis and defensive backs Terry McDaniel and Victor Peppers all are sprinters on Tennessee's track team.

The Vols had even more speed,

Majors said, when they lost their only previous meeting with Iowa 28-22 in the 1982 Peach Bowl, a game in which the teams combined for 789 yards of offense and 19 Peach Bowl records.

"That year, we had three world-class sprinters in Willie Gault, Clyde Duncan and Mike Miller," he said.

Fry surprised the media and upset the game's sponsors when he put quarterbacks Dan McGwire, Tom Poholsky and Chuck Hartlieb off-limits until after the game.

"I don't feel it will help our team at all to let these guys be interviewed," Fry said. "I'm trying to protect all our quarterbacks from additional pressure."

McGwire, a 6-8 sophomore who Fry says can throw the ball 90 yards, will start, but all three will see action.

"The thing that concerns me about Dan McGwire making his first start (he was 6-of-12 for 174 yards a year ago) is how he'll react to all the different defenses. Can he take a snap without falling down?"

"I once had a quarterback I let be interviewed by TV on the sidelines before his first start. Then he went out and lined up under right guard. The center was unaware of it and snapped the ball 15 yards in the air."

"I don't know how long McGwire, or any of them, will play. If one of them gets a hot hand, that guy will play longer than the others."

McGwire is the younger brother of Oakland A's rookie slugger Mark McGwire.

Mowatt brings issue to Giants-Jets game

By The Associated Press

Unlike the old days, when the New York Giants and Jets played for the bragging rights to the Big Apple, their preseason meeting now tends to be just another exhibition game.

So a new issue has been trotted out for Saturday night's game at Giants Stadium, which will be nationally televised by NBC.

Zeke Mowatt's conduct on the basketball court.

The problem stems from the Giants-Jets basketball games last winter, which ended with a 3-3 split. Mowatt, who with Mark Bavaro gives the Giants the best tight end tandem in football, did not endear himself to the Jets with his flying elbows on the boards.

"I have nothing against the Giants," says tight end Rocky Kiever of the Jets. "The only guy I have any problems with is Zeke Mowatt. He's a fine football player and a fine athlete but he's a jerk."

"Zeke knows we're going to be coming after him," says linebacker Kevin McArthur.

The NFL's third full exhibition game began Thursday night with San Francisco beating San Diego 17-3.

Detroit was at Seattle Friday night.

New England is at Minnesota Saturday afternoon in a game to be nationally televised by CBS. The other Saturday night games are Washington at Tampa Bay; Miami at Philadelphia; Pittsburgh at New Orleans; Cincinnati at Green Bay; Cleveland at Atlanta; Buffalo at Kansas City; Houston at Indianapolis, and Denver is at the Los Angeles Rams.

The Los Angeles Raiders are at Dallas Sunday night in ESPN's game of the week and St. Louis is at Chicago in an ABC Monday night game.

The Giants-Jets game is the 19th between the two and the ardor has cooled considerably since the first game, when the Jets were upholding the honor of the American Football League.

The Giants lead the exhibition series 10-7-1 and the two teams, who meet again in December, are 2-2 in regular-season meetings.

The 2-0 Giants enter the game with Coach Bill Parcells grumpy about the progress of his Super Bowl champs. He is particularly concerned with depth at cornerback and on the offensive line, where starting right tackle Karl Nelson is out with Hodgkin's disease, a form of lymph cancer.

"There are a lot of questions in my mind," Parcells said. "This is the time when you're putting the roster in shape. There are a lot of areas I'm not sure of."

Like the Giants, the 1-1 Jets will continue to be looking at people. One interesting duel is at punter, where 14-year veteran Dave Jennings, picked up from the Giants two years ago, is being challenged by free agent Tom O'Connor.

Jennings still seems to have the edge. Coming off a career-low 39.4-yard average last year, he has punted three times for an average 51.5 yards in the two exhibitions while O'Connor was also performing well — a 51-yard average on two kicks.

"He came to camp in the best shape I've ever seen him in," special teams coach Larry Pasquale says of Jennings. "His stomach, arms, legs are tight. You can see it when he runs. And he's very professional and knowledgeable about his craft. He can correct problems instantly through the combination of discipline and years of experience."

New England, which lost its first two exhibition games, goes to Minnesota in an upbeat mood despite injuries that will keep five starters, including quarterback Tony Eason and Pro Bowl linebacker Andre Tippett out of the game. Steve Grogan and Tom Ramsey will fill in for Eason.

"I think our football team is capable of winning the world's championship this year. It's what I really believe," Raymond Berry, the usually low-key coach, predicted this week.

In addition to Eason and Tippett, offensive tackle Steve Moore, center Steve Brock and strong safety Roland James will also miss Saturday's game.

But kicker Tony Franklin, who signed two weeks ago, will probably see his first action of the season and so will tight end Lin Dawson, who missed all of last year with a knee injury sustained in the 1986 Super Bowl loss to Chicago.

Minnesota will be without starting defensive tackle Keith Millard, out with a rib injury. Running back Alfred Anderson and defensive end Mark Mullaney will also miss the game because of injuries.

OSU writes off Carter

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State University athletic director Rick Bay said Friday he will not appeal the ineligibility of All-American wide receiver Cris Carter, who lost his college eligibility for dealing with agents.

Bay's decision ends Carter's hopes of playing his senior season at Ohio State.

"We chose not to appeal, not because we couldn't win but because we just didn't feel good about it," Bay said. "I'm not heartless. If there was some way to logically justify (an appeal), I would. But I couldn't see clear to do it."

Carter and Charles Gladman, a Pittsburgh running back declared ineligible for refusing to cooperate with an investigation of agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom, were withdrawn from Friday's supplemental NFL draft on the chance they would have their eligibility restored.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Thursday night the league would wait a week, and if the players were not reinstated, make them available in another supplemental draft. Rozelle, in explaining the move, cited the reinstatement of Pitt defensive back Teryl Austin by the NCAA after he agreed to repay $2,500 in loans to Walters and Bloom.

The draft was held without Carter and Gladman but none of the four little-known players was taken by any of the NFL's 28 teams.

Carter was declared ineligible by Ohio State on July 16 after admitting that he accepted a $5,000 interest-free loan and monthly payments totaling $1,800 to sign with Walters and Bloom in May 1986.

Strange in lead with 12 one-putts

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Curtis Strange one-putted 12 times in a misty, drizzly rain Friday and shot a 4-under-par 66 to move into a two-stroke lead after the second round of the $800,000 World Series of Golf. "Miserable conditions. It was nasty out there," Strange said after completing two trips over the long, tough Firestone Country Club course in 136, four under par.

"Any time I shoot 66 at Firestone, I've got to be putting good," said Strange, a two-time winner this season.

Strange took the lead with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole and preserved it with a 15-footer to save par after driving into the trees on the 18th.

Bobby Wadkins, three shots ahead of the field after a 64 in the first round, slipped 10 shots higher and did not make a birdie in a 74 that dropped him into a three-way tie for second at 138.

Wadkins, playing well behind Strange, surrendered a share of the lead with bogeys on two of the last four holes.

"Under the conditions out there today, I would have considered 70 a very good round today," Wadkins said. "I just didn't play nearly as well as I did yesterday and I made no putts."

Greg Norman of Australia got into position with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 17th and was tied at 139 with Jay Haas and defending champion Dan Pohl. Haas also shot a 66, while Pohl shot 67 and Norman had a 69 in the chilly, steady drizzle that left the elite field of 43 soaked.

Strange holed a pair of birdie putts from about 15 feet on the front side, made another from 4-5 feet and capped a 31 on that side with a 35-foot putt on the ninth.

He also used only 11 putts on the back nine. He one-putted for par four times, including the long one on the 18th and made another for bogey.

"Hey," he said, "don't look so surprised. If I shoot 66 at Firestone, I've got to make a lot of putts."

Okamoto builds three-shot lead

BUFORD, Ga. (AP) — Ayako Okamoto of Japan shot a 4-under-par 68 to build a three-shot lead Friday at the halfway mark of the $250,000 World Championship of Women's Golf.

Okamoto, winner of 11 events in her seven years on the LPGA Tour, had a 36-hole total of 6-under-par 138 on the 6,073-yard Pineisle Resort golf course.

The Japanese star, fighting a summer cold, held her three-shot advantage over the season's leading money-winner, Betsy King, who shot a 70 for a 141 total in the battle for the richest first prize in LPGA history, $81,500.

"I was much more relaxed today," Okamoto said, adding that her cold was improving day-by-day.

Okamoto had six birdies and two bogeys, scoring three of her birdies on putts in the 10-15-foot range.

Sigel, Gump in quarterfinals

JUPITER, Fla. (AP) — Two-time champion Jay Sigel and qualifying medalist Scott Gump won second- and third-round matches Friday to reach the quarterfinals of the 87th U.S. Amateur Championship at Jupiter Hills Club.

Sigel, winner of this six-day tournament in 1982 and 1983, defeated U.S. Public Links champion Kevin Johnson 3 and 2 in the morning. He came back in the afternoon to eliminate David White of Conroe, Texas, 2-up on the par 72, 6,915-yard Hills course.

Mediate makes pair of eagles

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Rocco Mediate made a pair of eagles Friday on his way to a 7-under-par 63 and a 1-stroke lead over Joey Sindelar after the second round of the $450,000 Provident Classic.

Mediate, who played his second straight bogey-free round on the 6,641-yard, par-70 Valleybrook Golf and Country Club course, finished with a 36-hole total of 11-under-par 129.

Sindelar, who matched the course's competitive record with a first-round 62, was 11-under after 15 holes but slid into second place as he sandwiched two bogeys around a birdie on his final three holes for a 68 and a 130 total.

Soviet hoop team edges China

BEIJING — The Soviet Union edged China 80-74 Friday to capture the championship of an 11-team invitational basketball tournament here.

The Soviets, fielding their second-string national team, trailed at halftime by one, 41-40.

The Soviets finished the tournament with a 7-0 record. China ended at 5-2, with both losses to the Soviets. The Soviet Union was playing in a Chinese tournament for the first time since 1950.

Czechoslovakia took third place after coming from behind to defeat an American collegiate team 84-78. The Americans, from the Big Eight Conference, led 48-42 at the half.

Top scorers for the Americans were Charles Bledsoe of Kansas State with 19 points and Gary Thompson of Iowa State with 18. Kansas State guard Steve Henson was chosen to the tournament all-star team.

The Americans finished at 3-3 with victories over Czechoslovakia, Malaysia and a Chinese regional team, and losses to Poland, China's national team and the Czechs in their rematch Friday.

Schmidt turns down Nets offer

NAPLES, Italy Basketball star Oscar Schmidt, who led Brazil to a sensational victory against the United States in the finals of the Pan American Games, said Friday he will keep playing in Italy with major league Sneidero of Caserta, thus effectively rejecting transfer bids made him by the New Jersey Nets of the NBA and by Spain's Real Madrid.

He has been playing in Caserta, near Naples, for three years.

Eight arrested after soccer riots

CESENA, Italy — Police in this central Italian town reported Friday that eight fans were taken into custody and charged following Wednesday night's riots which marred the Cup of Italy soccer match between the local team and visiting Bologna.

The youths, fans of Bologna, face charges of causing damages and resisting police. Twenty-five people, including five policemen, were injured during the riots which erupted during and after the match.

Krishnan makes NYNEX semifinals

RYE, N.Y. — Third-seeded Ramesh Krishnan of India breezed past Javier Sanchez of Spain 6-0, 6-1 Friday night at the Rye Racquet Club to reach the semifinals of the NYNEX Open.

Krishnan will meet Peter Lundgren of Sweden, who eliminated Marty Davis of Harbor Isle, Calif., 6-2, 6-3. The matches were moved indoors from the Rye Town Hilton Hotel because of rain.

"Sanchez seemed totally uncomfortable indoors, so I was able to dominate the match."
 "Lundgren, 22, beat Wimbledon champ Pat Cash in Montreal recently and has drawn Cash as his first-round opponent in next week's U.S. Open.
 "I will beat Cash again," predicted the Swede, who preferred to look ahead. "I'm playing with great intensity."
 In earlier matches, Richard Matuszewski defeated Martin Flur 7-5, 6-1, and John Ross of Gainesville, Fla., upset fourth-seeded Tom Muster, the second-ranked player in Austria, 7-6 (7-4), 4-6, 7-5, to set up the other semifinal.

Coody, Crampton share lead

JEREMY RANCH, Utah — Senior Tour rookie Charles Coody and Bruce Crampton shot 3-under-par 69s Friday to tie for the first-round lead of the $300,000 PGA Senior St. Louis Open.

Coody, competing in his sixth senior event since turning 50 in July, covered the back nine in 3-under-par 33, despite a stiff afternoon wind on the par-72, 6,947-yard Jeremy Ranch course in the mountains east of Salt Lake City.

Coody had an eagle-3 and two birdies on his final seven holes after playing the first 11 at even-par.

Crampton, 51, winner of four Senior Tour tournaments this year and seven events in 1986 when he joined the over-50 circuit, was 3-under after five holes and matched par the rest of the way.

Al Chandler, Bill Collins and Don Massengale were one stroke back at 70, with six players at 71.

Sampson's wife wants a divorce

HOUSTON — Celebrity attorney Marvin Mitchelson has been hired by the pregnant wife of Houston Rockets forward Ralph Sampson to handle her possible divorce from the athlete.

Mitchelson was hired by Alizee Dial, who married Sampson about eight months ago and is now five months pregnant, The Houston Post reported. Mitchelson said he has met with Sampson's representatives and will explore reconciliation efforts over the next few days.

"The possibility of reconciliation is still open," he said. "In any potential divorce case, I always explore reconciliation first. I prefer to go in stressing the positive."

Sampson's agent, Gene Perry, said he hopes the troubles can "be settled quietly and quickly." Sampson has been working out this summer on the University of Virginia campus.

Sampson and Dial were secretly married in Houston by a justice of the peace last Dec. 3, 1986. Sampson failed to show for a formal wedding ceremony last month in Anniston, Ala.

Maleeva sisters to meet on court

MAHWAH, N.J. — Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria upset top-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia Friday night, and will face her older sister, Maneula, in a semifinal match at the $150,000 United Jersey Bank Classic women's tennis tournament at Ramapo College.

Katerina Maleeva, who is unseeded, scored two service breaks in each set to beat Sukova, 6-2, 6-3, in a quarterfinal at an indoor court in Upper Saddle River, where two of Friday's matches were held because of rain.

Sukova, ranked sixth in the world compared to Katerina Maleeva's No. 19, double-faulted at match point.

"It was a very close match, closer than the scores," said the 18-year-old Maleeva. "Helena depends on her serve and it was off tonight."

Manuela Maleeva, the third seed, broke away from a 4-4 tie in the first set and went on to beat eighth-seeded Raffaella Reggi, of Italy, 6-4, 6-3. Manuela Maleeva, 20, is ranked 10th in the world and has not dropped a set in five meetings with her sister.

Wang Chih-Kwou, Taiwan Little League pitcher, is congratulated by a teammate after hitting a solo home run in Friday's sixth game of the Little League World Series. Taiwan beat the Dominican Republic, 4-0.

Taiwan vs. U.S. in Little League

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Wang Chih-Kwou hit an eighth-inning home run to break a scoreless tie and threw a two-hitter as Hua Lian, Taiwan, defeated Moca, Dominican Republic 4-0 Friday to earn a spot in the Little League World Series against a team from California.

Fu Wei-Yuan added a run-scoring double in the eighth, and Chu Shi-Chag followed with a two-run homer in a game postponed Thursday evening after seven innings because of darkness.

Hua Lian was scheduled to play Irvine, Calif., representing the United States, Saturday at 4 p.m. EDT in a nationally televised championship game.

Taiwanese teams have a 38-2 record in World Series play and have won six of the last 10 Little League championships.

Dominican pitcher Nelson Baez struck out six and walked two in his attempt to become the first pitcher to shut out a Taiwanese team in the Little League World Series since Cody Webster of Kirkland, Wash., blanked Chia-Yi-Hsien, Taiwan, 6-0 to win the 1982 championship.

Chih-Kwou held a no-hitter through five innings and finished with 14 strikeouts and no walks.

On Thursday, Hua Lian threatened to score in the fifth inning, loading the bases with one out. But a strong throw from Juan Delos Santos caught Pang Yu-Long trying to tag from third to end the inning.

Baez broke the no-hitter with no outs in the bottom of the sixth when he grounded deep in the hole at short. Pinch-runner Richard Burdick advanced to second on a bunt by Henri Espalliot, but Chih-Kwou got out of the jam with a ground ball back to the mound and a grounder to third.

Phillies' Gross awaits decision

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Kevin Gross of the Philadelphia Phillies will have to wait until next week to learn the outcome of his appeal of a 10-day suspension imposed by the National League.

Gross, backed by the players union, met with NL President Bart Giamatti for four hours Thursday at an appeals hearing.

Cincinnati Reds baserunner Dave Concepcion jumps in the air at second base to miss a throw taken between his legs by Chicago Cubs shortstop Shawon Dunston from the outfield during the first inning of their National League game at Riverfront Stadium Friday night. Concepcion had gone to second on a hit by teammate Eric Davis.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ryne Sandberg's run-scoring single with two outs in the 10th inning Friday night scored Bob Dernier from second base, lifting the Chicago Cubs to a 6-5 victory over Cincinnati, the Reds' season-high seventh straight loss.

Smith walked Bo Diaz with the bases loaded in the ninth to tie the score 5-5. Eric Davis singled, Paul O'Neill walked and Buddy Bell was intentionally walked after a double steal to load the bases with one out. After Diaz walked on a 3-1 pitch, Nick Esasky grounded into a fielder's choice and Kurt Stillwell struck out.

Chicago took a 5-4 lead in the top of the ninth on Andre Dawson's two-run, two-out single.

Cincinnati tied the score in the bottom half of the inning when Stillwell doubled

Bosio's two-hitter lifts Brewers over Twins

Brewers 1, Twins 0

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Chris Bosio pitched a two-hitter for his first victory in a month and Greg Brock drove in the game's only run with a double Friday night as the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the Minnesota Twins 1-0.

Greg Gagne's one-out single in the first and Kent Hrbek's single in the seventh were the only hits allowed by Bosio and both runners were erased by two of three double plays turned by the Brewers. Bosio, 8-5, walked three and struck out eight en route to his first victory since July 28.

The Twins entered the game with a one-game lead over Oakland in the American League West.

Earlier Friday, Bosio's attorney entered an innocent plea on an assault and battery charge against the pitcher. The charge stemmed from a July 19 incident in which a parking lot attendant said Bosio punched him in the nose after the pitcher refused to pay to park.

Minnesota starter Les Straker, 6-9, allowed only six hits over seven innings and blanked the Brewers on three hits through the first five innings.

Rangers 5, Tigers 3

DETROIT (AP) — Ruben Sierra's two-run homer keyed a four-run eighth inning as the Texas Rangers rallied to beat the Detroit Tigers 5-3 Friday night.

The Rangers trailed 3-1 when Oddibe McDowell, leading off the eighth, reached on an error by Detroit first baseman Dave Bergman and scored on Sierra's 27th home run, a shot into the left field seats on a 2-1 pitch from Jack Morris, 15-7.

Pete Incaviglia followed with a single and scored on a go-ahead double to the center field fence by Pete O'Brien. O'Brien moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Larry Parrish.

Morris, failing in a bid for his fourth consecutive win, gave up five runs on eight hits in 7 1-3 innings. Despite the loss, the Tigers maintained a narrow lead over Toronto in the American League East.

Mitch Williams, 7-3, who relieved Jeff Russell in the sixth, picked up the win with two innings of relief. Dale Mohorcic pitched two hitless innings for his 16th save.

Russell, making only his second start for the Rangers, gave up three runs on six hits in five-plus innings. Russell struck out six of the first 10 batters he faced.

and scored on Ron Robinson's single.

Bell hit his 10th homer, a solo shot, in the third to give the Reds a 2-1 lead.

The Cubs' Dave Martinez, who earlier broke a 0-for-19 hitless streak, scored Dunston with an RBI single in the seventh. Dunston walked and took second on Sutcliffe's sacrifice.

Cardinals 4, Braves 3

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tommy Herr hit a pinch single with two outs in the ninth inning Friday night, scoring Ozzie Smith from second base and lifting St. Louis over the Atlanta Braves 4-3, the Cardinals' third straight victory.

Herr, scratched from the starting line-up because of an inflamed foot, hit a 1-2 pitch from Gene Garber, 8-10.

Left fielder Ken Griffey's throw arrived at the same time as the runner, but Smith's rolling block slide prohibited catcher Ozzie Virgil from fielding it cleanly.

The Braves forced a 3-3 tie in the top of the ninth when Griffey hit his 14th homer of the season off Worrell, 7-8, leading off the inning.

Athletics 3, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO (AP) — Dave Stewart allowed six hits in 7 2-3 innings to become the major leagues' first 18-game winner Friday night as the Oakland Athletics defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2.

Stewart, 18-9, struck out five and walked four for his 11th victory in his last 13 decisions. He is 4-0 against Toronto this season.

Dennis Eckersley got the last four outs for his 10th save, giving Oakland a narrow lead in the American League West over Minnesota, which lost to Milwaukee.

With the score tied 2-2 in the sixth, Carney Lansford led off with a double against Dave Stieb, moved to third on a long fly to right and scored on Dwayne Murphy's shallow sacrifice fly to center.

Stieb, 13-7, was the loser despite pitching his third complete and allowing only five hits, three of them by Lansford.

AL Roundup

Oakland took a 2-1 lead in the fifth when Alfredo Griffin doubled and scored on Luis Polonia's single. Tony Fernandez had an RBI single for Toronto in the bottom of the inning to tie the score.

Lansford hit Stieb's first pitch of the second inning for his 16th homer of the season and third in the last three games.

Fred McGriff doubled off the right field wall in the third inning, moved to third on a sacrifice bunt and scored on a wild pitch by Stewart.

Royals 9, White Sox 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Danny Tartabull homered in the first inning for his league-leading 15th game-winning hit and Charlie Leibrandt scattered 10 hits in eight innings, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 9-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox Friday night.

Leibrandt, 13-9, struck out six and walked two, retiring 11 consecutive batters during one stretch. The victory was Kansas City's third straight, the last two under interim Manager John Wathan.

With two outs in the first, George Brett singled off Dave LaPoint, 2-2, and Tartabull hit his 23rd homer to put the Royals ahead 2-0.

Willie Wilson's RBI single made it 3-0 in the first and Lonnie Smith added another run-scoring single in the fifth.

The Royals turned the game into a rout with four runs in the seventh. Frank White doubled in a pair and Ross Jones and Larry Owen each had RBI singles.

In the bottom of the seventh, Gary Redus singled home Chicago's first run off Leibrandt. The White Sox added two more in the eighth with the help of doubles by Carlton Fisk and Fred Manrique.

Orioles 6, Angels 5

BALTIMORE (AP) — Fred Lynn, who did not start because of a thigh injury, hit a pinch-hit home run with one out in the ninth inning Friday night, giving the Baltimore Orioles a 6-5 victory over the California Angels.

Lynn, the first batter after an 18-minute rain delay, hit a 3-1 pitch from reliever Chuck Finley, 2-6, who had pitched 5 1-3 scoreless innings of relief.

Finley had pitched 17 1-3 scoreless innings against the Orioles in his career before Lynn's homer, his 21st of the season.

Mark Williamson, 8-8, the fourth Baltimore pitcher, was the winner, pitching one-third of an inning.

Baltimore took a 5-0 lead, but California tied it with two runs in the fifth inning and three in the sixth.

Doug DeCinces led off the fifth with a double for California's first hit and scored on Jack Fimple's single. Brian Downing's RBI single cut Baltimore's lead to 5-2.

Wally Joyner hit his 26th homer to open the sixth, knocking out starter John Habyan. Devon White hit a two-out single off reliever Mike Griffin and scored when Dick Schofield hit his ninth homer, tying it 5-5.

Baltimore had taken a 5-0 lead off California starter Mike Witt after three innings.

ROME (AP) — Ben Johnson and Carl Lewis begin their quest for the title of "World's Fastest Human" Saturday as the second World Track and Field Championships begin.

Johnson, the powerful Canadian with the lightning-fast start, was ranked No. 1 in the world in the 100-meter dash in 1985 — a rating that generally qualifies a sprinter for the revered title.

Lewis held that honor a record five consecutive years, from 1981-85, but last year slipped to third, behind Johnson and Chidi Imoh of Nigeria.

Johnson has beaten Lewis four consecutive times over the last two years and feels he has nothing to prove.

Lewis, a slow starter with magnificent mid-race acceleration, has tried to minimize his confrontation with Johnson, saying, "I don't envy anything Ben Johnson has. I will just try and run the best I can."

"Ben is just trying to be the best in the world in the 100 and that's what I'm trying to do," Lewis said. "There's nothing wrong with that."

LaFontaine leads Team USA over Finland in Canada Cup

By Jim Tierney
Herald Sports Writer

HARTFORD — The man Team USA Coach Bob Johnson had been heavily counting on for offensive production in the six-team Canada Cup, Pat LaFontaine, responded in fine fashion Friday night at the Civic Center.

LaFontaine, who has spent his three-year National Hockey League career with the New York Islanders, scored Team USA's first two goals and sparked the Americans to a 4-1 victory over Team Finland in the opening round of the Canada Cup before a crowd of 8,508.

Goaltending had been a vital issue in the survival of Team USA in the Canada Cup, but the New York Rangers' John Vanbiesbrouck performed admirably against the Finns. Vanbiesbrouck turned away 22 shots and the goal he allowed came with 1:31 left in the game.

"There was a lot of spirit out there," Johnson said. "We needed goaltending and we got that and LaFontaine got a couple of goals."

To say that the first period was uneventful would probably be an overstatement. The Americans outshot the Finns, 11-4, in the opening 20 minutes, but they appeared disorganized. Team Finland's goalie Kari Takko, who was named the player of the game for his club, stopped 11 shots in the first period.

Midway through the second period, Aaron Broten centered the puck to LaFontaine, who fought off Jari Gronstrand, and whirled around and sent a low wrist shot from 15 feet out past Takko to forge Team USA into the lead, 1-0.

The third period belonged to the Americans. At the 4:57 mark, Phil Housley passed the puck to the point where Gary Suter rifled a slapshot at Takko. LaFontaine came sweeping in from the left side and stuffed the rebound through Takko's pads for a 2-0 lead.

"The second goal really helped," Johnson said. "We needed that (goal) badly."

A member of the 1984 U.S. Olympic team, LaFontaine knows the Canada Cup road doesn't get any smoother. "Every team we play is very talented," the 22-year-old said. "We'll have our work cut out for us. We are a good defensive team. You have to use what you have. It's such a key when you have a hot goaltender. John made some key saves for us."

A few minutes later, Team USA's third goal came, and it was a thing of beauty. Suter carried the puck down the right side and forced Takko to come out. In the process, Suter managed to backhand the puck through Takko's legs to Wayne Presley, who deposited it into the empty left side of the net.

A goal by Joel Otto was disallowed at the 15:47 mark because the referees ruled that Otto pushed the puck in with his hands. The final USA tally came with 2:21 left in the game when Joe Mullen nailed a

"We played well defensively in the neutral zone," Johnson said. "We didn't give them many scoring opportunities." Team Finland went 6-for-6 on the power play while Team USA was 0-for-5.

LaFontaine was named the player of the game for Team USA. "Pat LaFontaine got us going on the board," Vanbiesbrouck said. "I think we all pitched in."

"In the third period, we started to come together," LaFontaine said. "All the guys on the team are from different teams in the NHL. Nine months out of the year we're enemies. Every guy here is proud to wear the jersey. We want to make America proud."

Team USA outshot Finland, 40-23. The Americans' next game in the Cup is Monday against Sweden in Hamilton, Ontario. After that they will face Canada on Wednesday and will host the Soviet Union next Friday at the Civic Center.
