No clues in Coventry after Merrill sighting

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herald Reporter

COVENTRY — Police continue to patrol the area on Route 44 where prison escapee Frederick R. Merrill was reportedly seen early Friday evening, but they have failed to turn up any clues to his whereabouts.

A man fitting Merrill's description came into Allen's Package Store on Route 44 about 5:30 p.m. Friday, bought a can of beer, then left the store, Leonard Giglio, the store owner, said Saturday.

Coventry police, with the help of state police and search dogs, scoured the area around the store for about two and a half hours after the sighting. The search turned up nothing, however.

Coventry police released no details about the sighting over the weekend, saying in a prepared statement that they were unable to confirm that the man was actually Merrill.

Giglio said a man dressed in a bluish-gray hooded jacket entered the store just as the rush for lottery tickets was peaking. The hood covered the man's hair, but Giglio said he could clearly see that the man was Merrill.

"I can tell you that it was him," he said.

Giglio said the man must have recently shaved off a beard because the skin under his nose and below his lower lip was lighter than the rest of the skin on his face.

Merrill, 40, is described as 6 foot 1, with light brown hair and a mustache. He was reported missing Aug. 23 from the Connecticut Correctional Institution in Somers, where he had been waiting trial in connection with the sexual assault of a South Windsor woman in March.

He has also been questioned in connection with the March murder of 88-year-old Bernice Martin in her Mayfair Gardens apartment in Manchester. Police have not ruled him out as a suspect.

Jim McBride, a worker in Allen's Package Store who served the hooded man, said he isn't so sure the man was Merrill.

"I don't swear to nothing. He was just very suspicious. It appeared to be him," he said. Like Giglio, McBride said he couldn't see the man's hair because of the hood.

Witnesses gave varying accounts of where the man fled. Though McBride said he couldn't tell where the man went after he left the store, Giglio said he believed the man went next door, to Fowler's Supermarket.

Curt Fowler, the supermarket owner, said Saturday that a woman who entered the store about 5:30 p.m. said that a man fitting Merrill's description followed her into the store. The woman said hello to Fowler as she entered the store.

but Fowler said he didn't see a hooded man follow her.

The woman, whom Fowler could not identify, said that the man followed her around the store before disappearing into the storage room behind the sales floor.

The written statement released by Coventry police endorsed the woman's account of the incident. "It is believed that the man left the market by a rear door," the statement said.

Fowler said, however, that he is inclined to believe another account. According to that version, the hooded man headed to the right as he left the package store, hiding behind a van parked on the side before fleeing into the corn field behind the store.

Fowler said he would have noticed someone enter the store if he had been dressed as the man was described.

Coventry police arrived just as the woman entered the supermarket, Fowler said. He said he did not know who called police. Giglio and McBride said they did not make the call.

Both stores were evacuated and searched after police arrived, the businessmen said. Coventry police said only that the search turned up nothing and that patrols in the area were continuing.

School vacation is almost over

Last-minute shoppers busy; schools ready to open Tuesday

By Andrew J. Davis
Herald Reporter

It ain't over until it's over but it's almost over.

School bells will ring Tuesday, marking the end of summer for more than 7,000 public school students in Manchester.

And if it seems as though summer was shorter than usual, it was. Even though Labor Day is a week away, the traditional end-of-summer holiday is taking a back seat to the start of school this week.

Another back-to-school tradition was in full force earlier this morning at the Manchester Parade. Stores were teeming with mothers and children looking for clothes and accessories.

"We're getting some last-minute things," said Kathy Stimson of Manchester, who was shopping with her 9-year-old son, Russ. "I tried to drag him out earlier ... but when he realized he would have to go to school without anything on, he decided to come out."

While Russ Stimson will enter the fourth grade at Bowers School, 10-year-old Ryan Olschefske will enter fifth grade at Washington School. And his mother is paying dearly for it.

According to Beth M. Olschefske, she has spent more than $250 to outfit her son with the latest back-to-school items. She was shopping at the Manchester Parade to pick up her final two items: jogging pants and a watch.

"The $250 is everything down to his socks," she said. "I've ordered all of his clothes, I was just waiting for the jogging pants to go on sale."

While parents and students were getting themselves ready for the new year, teachers were, too. More than 400 Manchester public school teachers and administrators attended a welcome breakfast at Manchester High School this morning. School Superintendent James than 400 teachers and administrators were at the school for a welcome breakfast and preschool meeting.

P. Kennedy welcomed the teachers and announced that the school system was set for the opening of school.

"We're all ready," he said. "The schools are gleaming and ready to go."

While the schools may be ready to handle the influx of students, local bus companies are still searching for drivers, said Al J. Spearot, supervisor of the Manchester Bus Co. The company should be able to cover all its runs, though it may be "little rough," he said.

Bus drivers also may find the going rough around Vernon Street. Construction on the road is expected to cause 10- to 15-minute delays in the arrival of buses, Kennedy said.

Buckley School, Illing Junior High School, and Manchester High School students are likely to be affected, he said.

Once Manchester High School students do get to school, they will notice one major change from last year. Students will no longer be able to smoke in school.

The Manchester Board of Education voted last week to ban smoking and the possession of smoking materials, for students. The board voted to ban smoking after two state laws were recently passed by the General Assembly. One prohibits the sale of cigarettes to those under 18 as of Oct. 1, while the other forbids students from smoking in schools or during school functions.

Truck driver braves gunfire to rescue tot from rampage

BOSTON (AP) — A truck driver who pulled a critically wounded 3-year-old girl from the scene of a shooting rampage that left six people dead said he won't soon forget how close he came to being killed himself.

"I know I'm going to have bad nightmares about this," Joe Munroe said after the rescue Sunday.

Munroe, 27, said he was motivated by the thought of his own daughter, who is about the same age as the girl he saved. He also has an 8-year-old son.

"I was a little scared but to me that little girl's life was worth a lot more than my life," he said.

Munroe, who was on an outing with his family, rescued the girl across the street from a house where, according to police, a man with an automatic weapon opened fire on six relatives and his cousin's girlfriend before taking his own life.

When he reached the child, who is Vietnamese, he saw she was crying.

He said he grabbed the child and ran up the street, where his 22-year-old sister, Donna, came up to him and said, "Give me the baby."

His sister carried the child, who had been shot twice in the head and once in the shoulder, to waiting paramedics, said Boston paramedic Jull Nichols.

The wounded girl, identified as Phuong Huynh of Medford, was reported in critical but stable condition Sunday night at New England Medical Center.

Joe Munroe said he returned to a porch across the street from the home the gunman had entered and was checking unsuccessfully for a pulse of a woman who had fallen from a gunshot wound. Munroe said a woman inside the house with the porch stuck her head out and warned him to look out.

He said he turned to see a gun barrel across the street and thought "the man was ready to put a bullet in me."

Munroe jumped off the porch and ran down an alley. A shot was fired but missed.

"When he shot at me on the porch — that was enough," he said.

Jet crashes into sea to avoid second plane

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Thai Airways jet trying to avoid a collision with another airliner crashed into the sea off the resort island of Phuket today with 89 people aboard, the airline's managing director said.

Marine police boats and fishermen retrieved at least 12 bodies from the Andaman Sea, officials said. Airline officials earlier said all aboard were killed, but Air Marshal Narong Dithipeng said there were likely to be many survivors.

"Many were seen wearing life vests," Narong, the airline's managing director, told a news conference. "The plane was seen afloat. It may have suffered cracks but no serious damage."

There was no immediate word that anyone had been rescued. The search continued after dark.

Narong said the Boeing 737 jet carrying 74 passengers, including at least two Americans, and a crew of nine, was trying to avoid hitting a jet of the Hong Kong-based Dragonair when it crashed eight miles from Phuket airport. Phuket is about 540 miles southwest of

Caprilands starts to bring buildings up to fire codes

By Jacqueline Bennett Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — Efforts to bring Caprilands Herb Farm on Silver Street up to fire code have begun, according to Fire Marshal Richard Cooper.

"They (Caprilands) sent a set of proposed modifications to the required changes," Cooper said.

In a routine inspection more than a year ago, Cooper cited many fire violations at Caprilands, a nationally known herb farm, owned by Adeline Greiner Simmons. These include inadequate access to emergency exits, doorways that are too narrow, doors that swing in instead of out for smooth exits. According to Cooper, these conditions, combined with overcrowding of farm buildings, create a safety risk.

Simmons, in her 80s, has operated the farm for nearly 50 years and opposed making changes to the buildings, which were built during the 18th century. She has said she fears it would compromise Caprilands' authenticity. In addition, Simmons has said she does not want

Sun smiles on final day of Feast Fest

By Andrew Yurkovsky Herald Reporter

Despite Friday's bad start, the Feast Fest's third year appears to have been a success.

The sun finally came out in full force Sunday morning, drawing a large crowd to the downtown eating event. For the first time during the weekend, there wasn't an umbrella in sight.

Anne Flint, president of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce, said Sunday's crowd was as big as any in the Fest's three-year history. Flint estimates that about 15,000 people attended this year's Fest.

Mike Orfittelli, the vice president of Royal Ice Cream, said Sunday his business would definitely do as well as last year, when 4,500 cups and cones were served.

"Yesterday was good, today is good," said Alex Santoro, a worker at the ice-cream stand.

A long line stretched from the stand Sunday about noon. Orfittelli said the lines were pretty long on Friday and Saturday, too. At one point in Friday night's rain, 35 customers were waiting in line, he said.

Taking a moment's rest from serving fest-goers, Choi Kwok, the owner of Chang Jiang, reported that things had picked up since Friday.

One restaurateur reported that Saturday's trade, without the benefit of sunshine, was actually brisker.

Loretta Greene, the kitchen manager at the Three Penny Pub, said business on Sunday was probably slower because people went to the beach rather than to the Fest. The Pub served about 750 customers on Saturday, an improvement over last year's showing for the same day, Greene said.

Flint, the chamber president, said 90,000 food tickets had been used as of Saturday night. She said she had never seen a crowd bigger than the one out Sunday.

"After a couple of days of rain, they were ready to get out," she said.

Wanted: town engineer

A revised job description for the post of town engineer, a position the town has been unable to fill in several attempts over the past year, will be considered by the Board of Directors when it meets Tuesday.

The town administration has suggested the directors approve easing the requirements for applicants. Instead of requiring that applicants be state-licensed professional engineers, the administration proposes that the applicant agree to seek state licensing within a reasonable length of time.

The proposal came before the directors Aug. 4, but was taken up late in a long meeting and was tabled.

Public Works Director George A. Kandra said at the time that he had interviewed three applicants for the job. He said he felt after the interview that two of them were possible prospects but a check of their references caused him to change his mind.

Kandra said easing the requirement would make a number of additional applicants eligible, including acting Town Engineer William Mosconi.

In April, Town Manager Robert Weiss proposed a revamping of the Public Works Department that would have involved eliminating the position of assistant town engineer, Camer's permanent position, and creating an assistant director of public works. The directors, however, decided not to act on the plan while a search of a new town engineer was in progress.

The town did fill the post briefly in December, but the new engineer, Thomas Curran, resigned after working only three days, saying he wanted to return to the consulting firm he had left for the town job.

Last October, the salary range for the job was raised after the town advertised the post twice and got only eight applicants in all.

The range is $35,133 to $44,356.

Another change the directors will be asked to approve involves the town's budgeting procedures. Boyce Spinelli, director of finance, has suggested that the town continue to record as expenditures any budget surplus it has committed to spend but has not yet actually spent.

Spinelli has suggested those funds be allowed to lapse into a fund balance and reappropriated by the Board of Directors in the new fiscal year.

While the change would not have any financial impact, Spinelli said in a report to the directors, it would be better accounting practice because expenditures would be recorded in the budget year in which the money actually is spent.

The change would take effect June 30, the last day of the 1986-87 fiscal year. For the current year.

Paris survives

PARIS (AP) — A fastidiously kept suburban park survived a Madonna rock concert that drew a record 130,000 people, an event embraced by French Premier Jacques Chirac to the dismay of other politicians.

Madonna was in Nice today for the next concert on a world tour that has created a sensation in Europe.

Local officials said the attendance at Saturday night's concert at the outdoor Parc de Sceaux southwest of Paris was a record for a rock concert in France.

Claude Chirac, the premier's 24-year-old daughter, took credit for persuading her father to override Sceaux officials who feared the concert could disrupt public order and harm the park.

Chirac's own culture minister joined opposition politicians accusing the premier Sunday of using Madonna's appearance to win over young voters. Chirac invited Madonna to City Hall and praised her as "one of the great artists of all times." The day she arrived, he reduced the tax on records.

"I don't like that politicians permanently take shelter behind stars," said Culture Minister Francois Leotard, a possible rival to Chirac in next year's presidential election.

Former Culture Minister Jack Lang, a Socialist, denounced the "indecent campaign of political recuperation organized by Chirac" while extreme right-wing National Front leader said Chirac's behavior was "grotesque."

O'Neill reappoints college trustees
HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill has reappointed four members of the Board of Trustees of the Regional Community Colleges of Connecticut to six-year terms.
 Appointed to terms expiring in 1993 were: the Rev. David L. Cannon of Norwich, chairman of the board; Yvette Mickenberg of Southbury; Thomas F. Dowd Jr. of Bloomfield, a former member of the state House of Representatives and Senate; and Catherine Jenkins of Manchester.
 Fourteen members of the 16-person board are appointed by the governor. The other two are elected by students of Connecticut's 12 community colleges.

Hearing on Colt strike due today

HARTFORD — A finding that Colt Industries' Firearms Division locked out striking workers a year ago will be the subject of a hearing scheduled for today before a state appeals board.
 The lockout finding allowed about 600 strikers to obtain unemployment benefits. If the decision is overturned, those workers may have to pay back the benefits they received after their offers to return to work unconditionally were spurned by the company.
 If the lockout ruling is overturned by the state Department of Labor's appeals division, which will hold today's hearing, the strikers may have to pay back the benefits they received.
 The strike began on Jan. 24, 1986, when about 1,650 United Auto Workers members walked off their jobs at Colt plants in Hartford and West Hartford.

Man shot during police drug raid

WEST HARTFORD — A man who was shot by police during a search for drugs remained in critical condition today.
 Lance Laffin, 36, was in critical but stable condition at St. Francis Hospital in Hartford, a hospital spokesman said.
 Officer Robert McKewen said Laffin was shot Friday when police, armed with a search warrant for drugs, entered a West Hartford house and ordered Laffin, who was lying on a bed, not to move.
 "Lance Laffin made a rapid motion with his hand, reaching under one of several pillows on the bed," McKewen said, reading from a prepared statement. "The officer, fearing for his safety and that of others in the room, fired one shot, which struck Lance Laffin in the chest area."

Legislators spend more on offices

HARTFORD — Legislative leaders have approved spending an estimated $1.3 million on remodeling the Legislative Office Building before the $52 million project is even completed.
 Legislators defended spending the additional money on the building, which is scheduled to be completed by the time the General Assembly convenes in February.
 "Some of the architectural work was done in a faulty fashion," said House Speaker Irving J. Stolberg, D-New Haven. "It's a little silly. What we should have done is spent another $30 million to $40 million and built a flexible building," he said on Friday.
 A flexible building would allow for walls and ceilings to be moved. Such a building, the legislative leaders said, could be fashioned and refashioned to fit its occupants' needs.

Mianus River Bridge work delayed

GREENWICH — Problems with the concrete foundation of one of the Mianus River bridge's piers has delayed work to widen the bridge, a portion of which collapsed in 1983, killing three people, officials said.
 Deputy commissioner William A. Lazarek said workers improving the foundation of two dozen piers found that the original concrete under one of the piers was badly deteriorated. Lazarek said the problem was minor.
 The problem with the concrete was not related to the collapse of a 100-foot span of the bridge, he said.
 The June 20, 1983 collapse occurred when a pin-hanger assembly holding the span in place failed.

Need for foster parents growing

HARTFORD — The increase in the number of families with both parents working has resulted in a decrease of available foster parents, said a spokeswoman for the state Department of Children and Youth Services.
 Bernie Uluski, a department spokeswoman, said they are seeking more foster parents. She said the need is greater now because the children's problems have become more severe.
 Foster homes are especially needed for black and Hispanic children and children with AIDS, she said.
 In Connecticut as of Aug. 1, there were 1,009 foster homes and 1,822 children in foster care, the department said.

State has high court-reversal rate

HARTFORD — Recent statistics compiled by state prosecutors and state judicial officials indicate that during the past few years about one of every five criminal trials involving felony charges was so flawed that a second trial was required, a figure some say makes Connecticut's reversal rate one of the highest in the country.
 Errors in court mean expensive second trials and hours of time, but prosecutors say there is another consequence: the dimming of witness' memories puts them at a disadvantage that they often let defendants plead guilty to lesser charges rather than take a chance on a second trial.
 Several Connecticut prosecutors say they believe the state's reversal rate may be one of the highest in the country, but they say no one has studied the issues completely so no definitive statistics are available, a story in Sunday's editions of The Hartford Courant said.

GOP wants fees from primary suit

HARTFORD (AP) — Eight months after the U.S. Supreme Court affirmed the right of Connecticut Republicans to open primaries to unaffiliated voters, a judge is trying to decide whether the GOP should have its legal fees paid by taxpayers, as the Democrats had.
 The Republican Party had sued the administration of Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill after O'Neill vetoed a bill that would have allowed the GOP to implement a change in party rules opening some Republican primaries to the state's 600,000 unaffiliated voters.
 The administration's case was argued by the attorney general, who, along with his staff, is paid with taxpayer money.
 The GOP is now arguing before U.S. District Judge Jose A. Cabranes in Hartford that its $130,000 in legal fees from the case should be covered by the state.
 Said state Republican Chairman Robert S. Palmer last week: "I expect the state's going to have to pick up at least some portion of it."
 But Deputy Attorney General Clarine N. Riddle said the Republicans are being "very simplistic" and are missing the point over what was at issue in the original suit.

"This was not a Democratic issue or a Republican issue," she said in an interview at week's end. "What was in dispute here was a statute, the constitutionality of that statute."
 The attorney general, she said, is obligated to defend state statutes, regardless of who brings a lawsuit.
 "It was clearly a legitimate enough constitutional issue for the Supreme Court to take up and decide," Riddle said.
 The Republicans argued in the original suit that it was a question of "freedom of association" with a political party. The O'Neill administration focused on the issue of who should make election law, political parties or the General Assembly.
 Riddle said Cabranes had recently granted motions to extend the time permitted for the filing of documents in the case. She said she could not predict when the matter would be decided.
 She said the Republicans' request for reimbursement of $130,000 in legal fees was "outrageous."
 "We just really did not expect that kind of claim to come in," she said, although she noted that there is a federal act that says the prevailing party in a civil rights action is entitled to attorneys' fees.
 She said, however, that the issue is not cut-and-dried because the administration won on some legal questions and the GOP on others.
 "The question is, who is the prevailing party?" she said.
 The Republicans, long outnumbered by Democrats in Connecticut, moved to broaden their appeal in 1984 by changing party rules to allow independent voters to take part in their primaries for statewide offices and the U.S. House and Senate, but not for legislative or municipal elections.
 O'Neill, when he vetoed that would have implemented the rule change, said that if some primaries were to be open, they all should be open. He also said that opening primaries could hurt the two-party system because it defeats one of the best reasons for joining a party: choosing candidates to run for office.
 Democrats have not moved to open any of their primaries.

Body found at rest area

DARIEN (AP) — Police were trying to identify the body of a man found near the parking lot of a McDonald's restaurant off Interstate 95.
 State Police Sgt. Daniel Lewis said the body was found Sunday by a woman walking her dog at about 12:15 p.m. near the rest area.
 The body, that of a white male, approximately 30 years old, about 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighing 200 pounds, was about 10 feet down an embankment.
 There was no identification on the body, which bore a tattoo of a unicorn surrounded by yellow fire on the right forearm, Lewis said.
 The man was wearing a green New York Jets T-shirt, blue cut-off jeans, white and blue socks and white sneakers, Lewis said.
 Troopers from the Westport barracks and detectives from the State Police Western District Major Crime Squad are investigating the death as a homicide, Lewis said.
 The body of the man was taken to the Farmington medical examiners office, where a preliminary examination revealed no obvious sign of trauma, Lewis said.

State police remove the body of a man discovered by a woman walking her dog along the entrance road to a McDonald's rest area on Interstate 95 in Darien Sunday. The man was described as a white male, blonde, about 6 feet tall, about 30 years old, wearing shorts and a New York Jets shirt.

Rally protests Wells Fargo prosecution

HARTFORD (AP) — Independence for Puerto Rico and unity among activists repressed by the government were the calls issued by the mother of the man who allegedly robbed the Wells Fargo depot in West Hartford $7 million.
 "We must unite and fight back," Gloria Gerena of Hartford told about 2,000 people Sunday at a rally in Hartford marking the second anniversary of the arrests of defendants in the case.
 Mrs. Gerena's son, Victor, is the Wells Fargo guard prosecutors charge carried out the robbery in 1983. Victor Gerena hasn't been captured. Officials say he is probably in Cuba with some of the money from the second largest robbery in the nation's history.
 Many of the 11 people arrested on Aug. 30, 1985 were well-known pro-Puerto Rican independence activists. Since then, five others have also been charged. Authorities allege the defendants are linked to Los Macheteros, a militant, often violent separatist group.

 Also on Sunday, about 3,000 people demonstrated San Juan, Puerto Rico, in support of the Wells Fargo defendants, said Tati Fernex, a leader of the Committee of Friends and Relatives of the Arrestees.
 Preliminary hearings in the Wells Fargo case have been going on since January in U.S. District Court in Hartford. The trial isn't expected to start until next year.
 Mrs. Gerena said the arrests were part of U.S. repression of the Puerto Rican independence movement.
 The demonstrators also protested the con-

Fate of sinking homes remains uncertain

STAMFORD (AP) — Some residents who live on Arlington Road and Fenway Street joke that their homes are going downhill.
 They are — literally.
 Known as the sinking houses on Arlington Road and Fenway Street, they list and they sag and floors slope.
 "When I'm cooking a large meal, especially for the holidays, and I'm running around, I definitely notice walking uphill," said Claire Fishman, a Democrat who represents the 12th District on the Board of Representatives.
 In the 7-foot distance between the sink and refrigerator, the floor slopes downward about 6 inches.
 "You get used to it," Fishman said. "It's like living in a boat."

problem exists in this neighborhood," wrote then Commissioner Stanley J. Pac. The potential for further damage could "lead to collapse of structure, rupture of water, sewer or gas lines and could pose some danger to the inhabitants of the affected homes," he said.
 He said that city officials needed to be alerted, and that immediate steps needed to be taken to evaluate the situation.
 A month later, three families sued the city, claiming it was negligent because the sewer pipes were designed and installed improperly.
 The DEP said the drainage project may be responsible for the accelerated settling and structural damage that is evident among 12 or 15 homes in the area.
 "We have concluded that a serious environmental and safety

Shuttle closer to flight readiness
BRIGHAM CITY, Utah — The space shuttle program reached a milestone in its return to flight readiness with the successful first full-scale test of a redesigned booster rocket that made the ground tumble 45 miles away.
 The 126-foot-long rocket with 1 million pounds of solid propellant apewed orange flame 500 feet and sent a cloud of smoke high into the sky Sunday.
 The test prompted cheers from about 9,500 spectators at Morton Thiokol's Wasatch Operations test site 25 miles west of here.
 "This is a major step on the way to return of the shuttle to flight," said Adm. Richard Truly, two-time shuttle veteran and NASA associate administrator for space flight. "Based on the data, it sure looks good to me."

AIDS carriers burned out of home

ARCADIA, Fla. — Three young brothers who carry the AIDS virus should not be shunned like modern-day lepers, a pastor told residents of this rural community after the family's home was burned.
 "It reminds me of the time of leprosy when they rang bells and told people to stay away," the Rev. Michael Hickey told his 300 parishioners at St. Paul's Catholic Church here Sunday.
 "The ultimate tragedy is to make them feel outcasted and unwanted," Hickey said. "People need to stand by them. They need to look into their own hearts."
 Clifford and Louise Ray and their children — Ricky, 10, Robert, 9, Randy, 8, and Candy, 6 — lost everything in the Friday night fire that officials called suspicious.
 The family, which caused a furor when they won a legal fight to get their hemophilic sons into public school, says it has given up. The Rays say they will find a new home far away from Arcadia when they come out of seclusion.

Abortion rights groups pledge fight

WASHINGTON — Abortion rights groups are promising an all-out battle against a Reagan administration proposal to federally fund clinics from giving out any information on abortion.
 "I'm certain we'll be very vocal and very, very active in opposing this attempt to strangle these clinics in red tape," Sandra Jordan, communications director for the National Abortion Rights Action League, said Sunday.
 Ate Michelman, president of National Abortion Rights Action League, called the proposal "outrageous."

Arms accord can be reached soon

WASHINGTON — The chief U.S. arms negotiator says a U.S.-Soviet agreement on the elimination of intermediate-range nuclear missiles can be completed fairly soon, but a leading Republican warns that Senate ratification is not assured.
 The two superpowers should be able to overcome the remaining obstacles to an agreement on the missiles, such as details of the verification process and reach a pact on ground-launched missiles, U.S. negotiator Max Kampelman said Sunday.
 The verification issue is not minor, but "if they will carry through with their rhetoric, then I should think that we'd be able to in short order, to come up with a verification agreement that's in our interest," Kampelman said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."
 But Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas on Sunday said the verification issue could be a problem during Senate ratification. Dole, appearing on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," gave the administration what he called a "friendly warning."

'Yellow rain' claim never proven

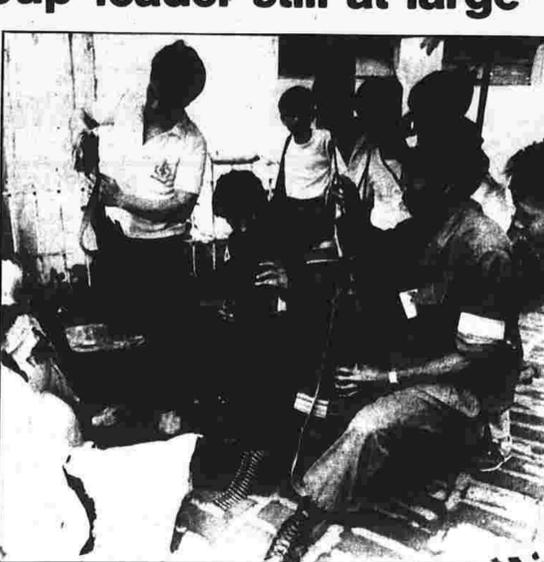

WASHINGTON — Six years after the Reagan administration accused the Soviet bloc of using chemical weapons in Asia, a private report says fresh evidence obtained by government experts shows the allegations were made in error.
 Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. first raised the issue of Soviet use of chemical weapons — "yellow rain" — in a speech in West Berlin in September 1981.
 Haig contended the alleged use of trichothecene mycotoxins against rebel forces and refugees in Laos and Cambodia violated international agreements governing chemical warfare.

Israel stops work on jet fighter

JERUSALEM — The Cabinet narrowly voted to scrap a project to build an Israeli plane of the future in favor of the U.S.-manufactured F-16 jet fighter of today.
 The Cabinet voted 12 to 11 with one abstention Sunday in favor of a proposal by Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, head of the left-wing Labor Party, to stop work on the Lavi jet fighter.
 Israeli and American companies, headed by the government-owned Israel Aircraft Industry, spent seven years and $1.3 billion on research and development on the jet.

Philippine coup leader still at large

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The armed forces' deputy chief of staff rushed to the nation's military academy today to meet with cadets who launched a hunger strike to show sympathy with a bloody coup attempt, news reports said.
 North of the capital, efforts continued to find the coup's leader, Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, and several hundred mutineers also still at large.
 President Corason Aquino claimed Honasan and his family were trying to assassinate her and her family in an attack Friday on the presidential palace. The rebels also assaulted broadcast stations and military garrisons in the failed attempt to seize power.
 At least 25 people were killed and 275 injured in the fighting, which posed the most serious challenge to the government since Mrs. Aquino came to power in a military-civilian uprising that toppled President Ferdinand Marcos 1 1/2 years ago.
 Military officials said more than 1,100 troops were believed involved in the mutiny and more than 800 had been captured or surrendered. The air force announced today that its deputy commander Brig. Gen. Gregorio Pastion Jr., was among those detained for questioning and "unwanted," Hickey said. "People need to stand by them. They need to look into their own hearts."
 Clifford and Louise Ray and their children — Ricky, 10, Robert, 9, Randy, 8, and Candy, 6 — lost everything in the Friday night fire that officials called suspicious.
 The family, which caused a furor when they won a legal fight to get their hemophilic sons into public school, says it has given up. The Rays say they will find a new home far away from Arcadia when they come out of seclusion.

Philippine Marines clean their weapons at a palace checkpoint amid the curious stares of neighborhood youngsters in Manila today. Security remains high in the capital following Friday's coup attempt.

Manila, said troops and police remained on "red alert."
 During a wreath-laying ceremony Sunday, Mrs. Aquino accused the rebels of trying to kill her family.
 Rebels wounded her only son, Benigno III, and killed three of his bodyguards outside the presidential palace early Friday. Neither the president, who was home, nor her four daughters were injured.
 "The aim of the rebels was clearly to kill the president and her family," she said. "The size and ruthlessness of the attack, the treachery that marked it, the brutality of the rebels who fired on civilians, and the timing... proves beyond a doubt their murderous intentions."
 She praised her guards, saying they "fought with courage and ferocity of tigers."

Gulf war ends its mid-summer lull

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said its warplanes pounded a "maritime target" near the Iranian coast this morning in the third day of an offensive that has rocked the Persian Gulf war out of a mid-summer lull.
 In the southern gulf, an Iranian speedboat attacked a Kuwaiti-flag freighter, gulf-based marine salvage executives said. It was the first such strike since Iraq on Saturday broke an informal month-long cease-fire the warring countries had observed on attacking each others' commerce in the Persian Gulf.
 Baghdad said it resumed the attacks to force its war of seven years to embrace a U.N. Security Council cease-fire resolution and to prevent Iran from using increased oil revenues for its war effort.

On Sunday, Iraqi fighter-bombers flew into the northern gulf and attacked the Kharg terminal which accounts for 90 percent of Iran's country's oil exports.
 The latest U.S.-escorted convoy, the fourth rebound and sixth overall since the operation began July 20, includes the 81,283-ton Surf City and the 79,999-ton Chesapeake City.
 The U.S. Navy said the convoy entered the Persian Gulf early Sunday and included the missile cruiser USS Reeves and missile frigate USS Hawes. It said RH-53D helicopters from the USS Guadalcanal searched for mines.

 Kuwait asked the United States to give 11 of its 21 tankers U.S. flags and military escorts to protect them from Iranian attack. Iran accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq and began attacking its tankers a year ago.
 None of the ships reportedly hit by Iraq has been identified by Baghdad. Gulf-based shipping sources said one Iranian supertanker, the Alvand, was hit in a raid in the southern gulf, but Iraq did not confirm that.

Festivals work well together

The Feast Fest conducted by the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce over the weekend and the Peach Festival held by the Eighth District Friday night worked out well together.

The two events may have competed for some appetites, but they probably complemented each other for as many more. A number of people topped off a downtown meal with a North End dessert.

The two events had something in common besides food. They both offered Manchester people a chance to meet acquaintances they hadn't seen for a while.

It was easy to bump — sometimes literally — into people that you had lost track of.

When the chamber of commerce inadvertently scheduled the Feast Fest to begin on the same day as the peach festival, there was a bit of concern over the conflict. As it turned out, Friday's rain had a greater negative effect on both events than they did on each other, and nobody can be held to account for the weather.

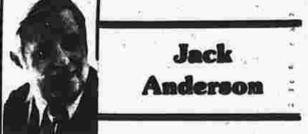

The peach festival was in somewhat better shape because its sponsors were able to move out of the intermittent rain into the shelter of their firehouse.

Future conflicts between the events can be avoided and they should be if the festivals really do suffer from the competition. But it may be there is a way to have our cake and eat it, too. Maybe some kind of schedule can be worked out so that the impetus from one event carries over into the other. Both are good for promoting Manchester's sense of community.

But the experience points out the need for some kind of clearinghouse to avoid similar conflicts between community events.

The chamber itself, or some civic organization, might try to serve as that house by keeping a list of events and making it accessible to anyone who needs it.

Killer avoided prosecution at vets' hospital

WASHINGTON — Hospital worker Donald Harvey's confession of mass murder in Cincinnati raises new questions about the administration of the local Veterans Administration Medical Center, where Harvey worked for 10 years.

We have reported earlier about allegations in congressional testimony that the VA facility's chief of police, Daniel Wilson, beat up black patients and visitors. Yet Harvey, who is white, was let off with a slap on the wrist when Chief Wilson caught him in the hospital with a loaded revolver, hypodermic needles, syringes and three books of pills.

The VA hospital orderly was fined $50 for carrying a firearm on federal property but was allowed to resign rather than face criminal charges or administrative disciplinary proceedings, which would have been entered on his employment record.

That was in July 1985. In February 1986, his work record unmarred by any mention of the charge, Harvey was hired at the Daniel Drake Memorial Hospital, where, according to his own confession, he murdered 21 patients.

The VA hospital's director, Donald Zeigenhorn, has explained that Harvey had not been formally charged with carrying a concealed weapon because the loaded .38-caliber revolver was not "concealed ready at hand" as Ohio law requires for such a charge. The gun was in a zippered case inside a gym bag that Harvey was carrying.

Law enforcement sources in Ohio have questioned that interpretation of the statute. They point out that state courts have upheld charges of concealing a loaded weapon — a third-degree felony — against persons who have hidden a gun in the glove compartment of the car they were driving.

Our associate Stewart Harris asked Wilson if Harvey's race saved him from criminal prosecution. The chief replied, "I'm not going to answer that. That's not a fair question."

Meanwhile, here in Washington, more allegations of brutality by Chief Wilson were aired at a recent Senate hearing on legislation designed to protect whistle blowers. Harold R. Hipple, a former security officer at the VA hospital, testified that Wilson attacked a black man, John R. Shives, who had parked illegally at the medical center.

"Wilson called him a 'dirtball,' 'scumbag' and 'black bastard,' among other names," Hipple testified. He then described what followed: "Finally, Shives raised his arms as if to move past Wilson, but then dropped his arms after Wilson warned Shives not to touch him or else he would charge Shives with assault. When Shives complied, Wilson grabbed him in a bear hug. The chief tried to kick Shives' legs out from under him, but in the process kicked me also, causing a blood vessel to burst in my leg."

After other officers jumped on Shives, Wilson "began choking him and gouging him in the eyes," Hipple testified, adding, "Shives was not hostile by any means until provoked by Wilson."

Last April, we reported on congressional testimony by another officer at the hospital, John Berter, who told about two black men who were beaten by Wilson after being brought to the chief's office for panhandling on the premises.

Wilson has refused to comment on the allegations while they are still under investigation. He did note that the FBI had closed its investigation of the charges and that the Justice Department has declined to prosecute him.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., noted at the recent hearing that the FBI had "found nothing to exonerate" Wilson.

In fact, one of the FBI agents who worked on the case, Mike McDaniels, told Hipple that he had solid evidence of brutality by Wilson, from victims and witnesses. Hipple secretly taped the conversation. McDaniels was not under oath, but Pryor read a transcript of his remarks into the record. The FBI agent said: "I've got 10 people I have interviewed, 10 that I call victims, 10 victims, which is pretty substantial in my opinion." He also said, according to the transcript: "You have got other witnesses saying they saw it. It is still not enough."

Mini-editorial

Juan Ponce Enrile, who turned on his benefactor, Ferdinand Marcos, after years of faithful service, has now turned on Philippine President Corason Aquino, whose ascent to power he aided with ambiguous inaction as Marcos's defense minister. In his first speech as Senate opposition leader, the Harvard-educated Enrile accused Aquino of hypocrisy — for making use of martial law powers that she had denounced when Marcos and Enrile used them. At the same time, he defended his own rigorous enforcement of martial law as perfectly legal. In the art of identifying hypocrites, it clearly takes one to know one.

Not surprisingly, the local reaction was that the increased security was a bit tardy. People thought the air station was secured all along. Roy Dyson, the U.S. representative for the area, said that since the threat of terrorism is ongoing, the base should be reasonably sealed at all times.

Hear! Hear! Dyson's view is obvious. Moulana Shahab was apparently harmless, but that should not be of any comfort. He could well have been an Iranian agent, there is no doubt they are in this country; he might also have had explosives in his knapsack, and in that case this story would have another ending.

Dyson says a terrorist would not have to do great injury to do great harm. He says symbolism would be enough. "They only need to detonate a device," he goes on, "and let that hit the world press. The way it would come across would be that they had knocked out a Navy base in the United States."

I say again, domestic military security should be reconceived. Fort McClellan, for example, still only has part-time guards at its gates. The Iranians and others have repeatedly insisted they are going to strike at the American mainland; we should not wait until they do to become alarmed.

The list of non-candidates

By Sandy Johnson

WASHINGTON — Add these names to the long list of men who flirted with the idea of running for president in 1988: Sam Nunn, Paul Laxalt, Richard Celeste.

They called it off, all of them, last week in a series of announcements that dragged the nation's capital out of its August lethargy.

Nunn, the Democratic senator from Georgia, said he had too much work to do in the Senate. Laxalt, former GOP senator from Nevada and Reagan confidant, said it would cost too much money.

Celeste, Ohio's Democratic governor, said he had too much work to do, and it would cost too much money.

To be sure, there is no shortage of politicians who want to succeed Ronald Reagan. The Democratic field is an ungainly six official candidates and two probables; on the Republican side, it looks like six.

But the list of no-gos for 1988 is equally long. Besides Nunn, Laxalt and Celeste, these men also have said "count me out": New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, Arkansas Sen. Dale Bumpers, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, former Tennessee Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., former Virginia Gov. Charles Robb and former congressman and defense secretary Donald Rumsfeld.

Then there are those like Ted Kennedy and Bill Bradley, both respected senators, whose names are perpetually mentioned as presidential possibilities. And let's not forget Gary Hart, the Democratic front-runner who made an ignominious exit from the race.

That's roughly a dozen in, a dozen out. As he bowed out, Nunn seemed a bit uncertain about the decision he had agonized over for months. "I believe I'll be second-guessing myself for a long time to come," he said. "In the long run, I believe this was the best opportunity I'll ever have in terms of being a successful candidate for president."

Nunn had been urged to run by conservative Democrats who felt the party had to move away from the left in order to win in 1988 and by Southerners who created a regional primary tailor-made for one of their own.

Laxalt, by contrast, appeared almost relieved by his decision to depart the GOP field.

"All my life I've been over-loaded with obligations, since I was a young lad, and for the first time I really feel liberated," he told a reporter.

Laxalt had been urged to run by Republicans who didn't want Rep. Jack Kemp of New York to be the only presidential candidate representing the conservative wing of the party.

Laxalt said it would not have been "honorable" to run in a campaign he likened to "a horse race and waiting for one of the horses to stumble."

But that is exactly what remains. Support for any of the candidates, Republican or Democrat, seems to be a mile wide and an inch thick.

Maybe it's because the campaign is still very young. Or maybe it's because the candidates are uniformly experienced but uniformly dull.

"We as Democrats are going to have to come up with someone with charisma," said Rep. Tommy Robinson of Arkansas, bemoaning the decisions of Nunn and Clinton.

But Cuomo, who still dodges talk of a presidential draft, said it is unfair to judge the candidates

It wasn't the last thing the Navy did about him, however. Commanders at the Patuxent air station ordered a quick "Alpha Alert," which is a measured tightening of security procedures. The commanders, of course, denied the alert was occasioned by the trespassing; they said the reason was "Middle East tensions."

In any event, the base and its outposts were closed tight. The sentries were issued live ammunition, there were increased inspections of vehicles and people entering the reservations, and, as if it should be necessary, everyone was told to report suspicious activity on or around government property.

Not surprisingly, the local reaction was that the increased security was a bit tardy. People thought the air station was secured all along. Roy Dyson, the U.S. representative for the area, said that since the threat of terrorism is ongoing, the base should be reasonably sealed at all times.

Let's tighten security at U.S. military bases

ST. INGOES, Md. — Some time ago, during a fit of editorial indignation, I wrote an article regarding the lack of security at many U.S. military posts. I said the installations were in fact wide open to the kind of terror attacks that have become common in other parts of the world.

To prove it, I pulled a caper of my own at the Fort McClellan Army base in Alabama. I loaded a car with make-believe explosives, dressed and acted suspiciously, and then drove through the gate without inspection, parked illegally at the base headquarters, and "blew up" the entire command.

The Pentagon response was immediate and admulatory. I was accused of journalistic gimmickry. A general officer said the armed forces were making every effort to secure their facilities, consistent with peacetime restraints, and, in fact, the posts were adequately sealed against real trespassing.

I bring the subject up again now because it seems someone else has found a military post vulnerable. The other day a foreign resident walked into a sensitive Navy research facility here in Southern Maryland, about 60 miles southeast of Washington; he wandered about without detection for a time, and he thereby caused a good deal of local wonder.

The foreign person said he was from Tehran, Iran, as it happened. And he was eventually caught trespassing on grounds used for the Naval Electronics Systems Engineering Activity, which is a subdivision of the nearby Patuxent River Naval Air Station. NESEA conducts classified military research.

The intrusion was short-lived and played down by Navy authorities. That is the military's unfortunate way in these circumstances — everything is fine, we are not making any mistakes — and so the story was not widely reported. I will therefore list some of the details as they have become known. The Iranian gave his name as Moulana Shahab. He was described as being between 30 and 40 years old, and "unstable." The NESEA outpost is located on the Potomac River; a Navy spokesman says Shahab gained access from the beach, and it's not known how much time elapsed before he was spotted and apprehended. Shahab was arrested in the early evening while walking near an NESEA building. He is said to have been disoriented, and told officers he was from Persia, the original name for Iran. He carried a knapsack; there was a rumor it contained a rock and a can opener, but the Navy will not say what, if anything, else. The Iranian was held in an area jail for a short while, then transferred to the U.S. attorney in Baltimore. It's not clear how thoroughly he was investigated. The word is he did not have any identification, and a background check was vague, but he was ultimately determined to be of no further concern. He was released after questioning. A government agent says he specifically asked to have the rock in his knapsack returned. He was sent to a Salvation Army shelter where he spent one night, and then left for an unknown destination the next morning. That was the last the Navy heard of him.

Students can 'profit' from studying

By Lee Higgins

The Associated Press

School districts, pressed by reformers to curb high dropout rates, are appealing to students' profit motive to get them to stay in school and study hard.

Students in a growing number of cities are winning stereos, bicycles, cash, college scholarships, free fast food or merchant discounts for doing what was once expected for free: attending school regularly and earning good grades.

Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Endowment for the Advancement of Teaching and a leader in education reform, worries that the trend is an unfortunate byproduct of the pressures reform has placed on schools.

The pressure to judge reform from quantitative outcomes in leading schools to adopt almost emergency strategies to help them look good on some report card, "he said in an interview.

Starting in October, the Kiwanis Club in Milwaukee, where average high school attendance is a poor 85 percent, will offer students movie passes, free rock concerts and fast food coupons for improving attendance.

Since 1983, the Napa (Calif.) Unified School District has given youngsters with good grades and attendance records privately-financed gift certificates to local businesses.

"If you're not going to let kids get away, you're going to have to think of a lot of reasons for them to stay besides the law that says they have to," said Napa Superintendent Bob Hansen.

Local merchants in towns like Richmond, Ind., Opelousas, La., and McGehee, Ark., offer discounts to students with good grades and attendance. In Detroit, elementary and middle-grade students with perfect attendance can win free steak dinners at Ponderosa restaurants.

All Saints School in Indianapolis, a parochial school with about 250 first-through eighth-graders, qualifies students with perfect behavior records to compete for a bicycle at the end of the year, said principal Kathleen Tichenor.

"My theory is unfortunately we are in an immediate feedback society," Tichenor said. "We started allowing these kids to question authority, but we never gave them any guidance about it. When you tell the kids to do something, they think, 'Why should I?'"

"I have found in today's society, kids are not ready to accept anything but a tangible kind of reinforcement," agreed Principal

Dennis Martin of Barker Junior High in Michigan City, Ind., where for the past two years students have earned $50 savings bonds and free trips to an amusement park for good attendance, grades and citizenship.

Such incentives seem to have at least short-term success. At Pittsburgh's Peabody High School, average attendance rose from 85 to 90 percent in two years since local businesses helped start a program of awarding students portable televisions, stereos, clock-radios, gift certificates, T-shirts, hats, and a grand prize of $100 cash for good attendance.

But critics call such measures "gimmicky" and say they miss the complexities of the dropout problem.

"The evidence seems to suggest that in the short term they boost attendance records and performance," said Boyer. "But most of these programs touch only a handful of students, and I doubt that they will become universal and hit the heart of the problem."

In contrast to contests and prizes, for example, Holyoke, Mass., has opened the state's only pregnancy clinic for adolescents to help keep young mothers-to-be in school.

Corpus Christi and Garland, Texas, have started evening classes for students who otherwise would have to quit school to work.

Survey faults schools on teaching humanities

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. schools need to devote more time to history, literature and foreign languages to reverse a trend in which some students don't even know when World War I took place, the chairwoman of the National Endowment for the Humanities says.

Lynne V. Cheney, in a congressional ordered study, "American Memory," criticized American education for emphasizing skills over content so that "we run the danger of unwittingly proscribing our heritage."

She also previewed a forthcoming NEH-sponsored survey that found dramatic gaps in test-takers' knowledge of epochal events, including when the Civil War occurred, when the Constitution was written and when Columbus discovered the New World.

"Most elementary reading books contain little literature," Cheney added. Instead of learning about King Arthur, Joan of Arc or George Washington, children are subjected to dry, contemporary prose aimed at teaching such skills as how to make grocery lists and use the telephone book, she said Sunday.

She laid the blame at the door of textbooks and teachers who "emphasize the process of learning rather than its content."

The Scholastic Aptitude Test is "staunchly indifferent" to "whether test-takers have studied the Civil War, learned about the Magna Carta or read Macbeth," she said.

She also said foreign language courses emphasize oral proficiency at the expense of the culture of other lands. But she welcomed the rebound in language enrollments in high schools — 29 percent of students studied a foreign language in 1985-86, up from 21 percent in 1978 — and said grade school is the time to start.

that it would be built in time for the opening of school.

Delays plague Bolton High media center

By Bruce Matzkin Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Bolton High School students expecting to be able to use the new library media center upon their return to school this year will have to wait about a month.

John Hough, vice president of D M C Construction Co. of Manchester, said that there was a slight delay when drivers of concrete trucks went on strike for two weeks early in the summer.

Hough said that interior renovations to the existing building have been completed, and will not interfere with the opening of school.

He said the old library will be returned to two classrooms. One will be used as an English classroom and the other will be used as the special-ed classroom.

Shredding party raises cash for North defense

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A Connecticut fund-raiser for the defense of Lt. Col. Oliver North took in about $3,000 for the embattled Marine and included a shredding party.

For a $15 ticket, patrons nibbled on crackers and cheese and sipped cocktails from a cash bar. For souvenirs, guests could have their invitations cut up by a paper shredder.

Millions of households will get AIDS booklet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 7 million U.S. households from Connecticut to California will soon receive a detailed government booklet on AIDS following a dispute between the Reagan administration and Congress over whether the pamphlets should be mass mailed.

Jet crashes into sea to avoid second plane

Bangkok. The Dragonair jet, which landed safely at the Phuket airport, reported the crash to the control tower, Narong said.

It was the third fatal crash of a Thai Airways jet since April 1980. Eleven people were killed on April 15, 1985, when a Boeing 737 smashed into a hill in the southern province of Phangnga. The jet also was bound for Phuket, about 40 miles away.

Members of Congress, however, can request copies of the report for each household in their districts and mail it free to constituents with their congressional mailing privileges. The report costs the government 12.5 cents a copy to produce.

Canadian sprinter shaves 100-meter record to 9.83 seconds

ROME (AP) — It took Ben Johnson exactly 9.83 seconds to achieve exactly goals.

Canadian Ben Johnson, right, is ahead of Carl Lewis of the U.S., winning the 100-meter event of the World Track and Field Championships Sunday in Rome.

Johnson shattered the history books as the fastest 100-meter sprinter ever and proved beyond any doubt that he is the fastest human in history.

Dineen player of game that lacked excitement

HAMILTON, Ontario (AP) — Kevin Dineen dropped onto the ice the green velvet box containing the Olympic coins he was awarded as player of the game.

"I tried to concentrate on our defensive play," Dineen said. "We weren't giving them the good scoring chances we gave up in our first game."

The Hartford Whalers' right winger scored a goal and set up Dale Hawerchuk of the Winnipeg Jets for another.

"I'm feeling great now," said Dineen, who has been excused from workouts temporarily last week after coming down with a cold.

Dawson at $700,000 is bargain of year

Dawson averaged 28 home runs and 84 RBI per season in Montreal with a .288 average. He was a star, but not as big a one as some expected.

Andre Dawson is no fool. Sometime last winter he looked at the yearly numbers he compiled over 12 seasons in Montreal.

Green set the numbers at $500,000 guaranteed with $200,000 in possible bonuses. Dawson took that instead of the two-year, $2.2 million offer made by Montreal.

Dawson led the major leagues with 43 home runs and 115 runs batted in. He has seven multi-homer games and is on a pace to become the second National League player in 22 years to hit 50 or more homers.

Advice

Picture for a tattoo wearer is neither bright nor pretty

DEAR ABBY: Please print this immediately for the 17-year-old girl who wants a tattoo, but her father refused to sign the consent form.

Dear Girl: Like you, I do not drink, smoke or do drugs, but I wasn't 17, I was a 28-year-old mother of two when I decided to be tattooed. I had a good excuse: When I was 14, I tried to "punish" my boyfriend for hurting me, so I cut his initials into my forearm and poured ink into the cut. His initials didn't really take, but I was left with a stupid-looking scar. In order to cover up this mess, I went to a tattoo artist. He suggested a "tiny" dragon. He said, "Let me draw you something, and if you don't like it, we won't do it." And so, on the spur of the moment, his beautiful artwork — all six inches of it — was imbedded into my forearm. It was my birthday present to myself, at the cost of only $45. And don't let anybody tell you it's painless. It was like getting a "shot" — non-stop for 90 minutes.

Five months later, I met the man who was to be my second husband. He was rather old-fashioned and never liked my dragon, but he accepted it as a part of me. In time, my dragon became an embarrassment. Your father's opinion of tattooed people is widely held by the majority of the population, and even though most people don't realize their prejudice toward you, you will find yourself answering a multitude of rude, obnoxious questions: (1) How old were you when you did it? (Assumes that you were very young, immature and stupid.) (2) Were you drunk? Stoned? (Meaning only someone who was not in his or her right mind would perform such an idiotic mutilation to their own body.) (3) Did it hurt? (Duh!) (4) How long did it take? (Too long; more than you'll ever know.) (5) Are you sorry you did it? (Yes, mainly because of the moronic questions like these and others I've had to answer for years.)

And lastly, in business (and at 17, you'll never know what you'll be doing later in life), my tattoo caused such a distraction, I've made a conscious effort to keep it covered. Tattooed people are judged before they have a chance to open their mouths.

As for getting the problem solved: One plastic surgeon told me to cut it out and graft some skin from another part of the body over it. This will result in two large scars and the cost is $2,000 and up! Second option: Laser surgery — one scar that will look like a burn; the cost is around $700. I opted for this.

I have my arm bandaged now, and must go for the third — and last — section in a few weeks. It's a rather gruesome thing to do to one's self. But then so was the tattoo.

I'm 33 now, and I will always have something on my arm for people to stare at. But the questions have improved already. "What happened to your arm?" Answer: "I burned it."

So, kiss your dad and thank him for loving you enough not to sign that consent paper, or you might be like me in time. An adult who did a foolish thing when she was young, and now...

SORRY, SORRY, SORRY

P.S. Abby, I know this is too long for your column, but please, get my message across, no matter how much you have to cut.

DEAR SORRY: I'm printing your letter as is — no editing. It's long, but well worth the space.

To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long stamped (30 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.
