Liver transplant ends long ordeal

Area woman weak but overjoyed after surgery in Pittsburgh

Kathy Cyr is feeling much better now that she has a new liver. The 24-year-old former Manchester and Coventry resident is in fair condition at Pittsburgh Presbyterian Hospital in Pittsburgh, Pa., after the liver transplant on Thursday, a hospital spokesman said Tuesday. In 1982, doctors told Cyr she had a serious liver deficiency and only five years to live without a transplant. "I can't believe I got a new liver," she said.

Dr. Andrew J. DeVis Herold reported that the surgery was completed without complications Thursday by a team of doctors led by Dr. Andre Sieber, said Christin Shirer, a hospital spokesman. She said Cyr should be at the hospital for six more weeks.

Cyr has already been transferred out of the hospital's intensive care unit and into a regular ward, Shirer said.

"It was starting to affect her bad," she said. "She was getting very, very tired and only a certain part (of her liver) was functioning."

Cyr, her husband, Donald, and their daughter, Lina, now live in Fort Dix, N.J. She was at the hospital for tests because the five-year deadline had passed in July, Belanger said.

With ballot set, directors move to explain bond

By Andrew Yurkovsky Herald Reporter

If they understand the question they're being asked, residents will vote in favor of bonding for improvements to the area around the proposed Mall at Buckland Hill.

That's what some members of the town Board of Directors said after a Superior Court judge ruled in July that bonding for the improvements would have to be approved by voters in a referendum.

Noting anything to chance, the directors on Tuesday night took the first step in an effort to educate the electorate, approving plans to put out a leaflet explaining what the bonds will be used for and how they will be financed.

The action, during the directors' monthly meeting in Lincoln Center, came after the board voted earlier in the night to put the bonding question before the voters in a November referendum. Since the board's Democratic majority endorsed the idea of a referendum two weeks ago, its approval at Tuesday's meeting was little more than a formality.

Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg said after the meeting that the leaflet would stick to the facts about the bond issue and would avoid taking a stand.

The Board of Directors approved issuing $13 million in tax-increment bonds last December. But Hartford Superior Court Judge John P. Maloney ruled in July that the bond issue should have been approved by voters in a referendum.

The Hartford Development Co. of Chicago, the mall developer, has said that building the mall would be too costly without the town-financed improvements.

Last month, Mayor Weinberg issued her own handout in which she argued that the bonds, if financed through improvements within a 386-acre site in Buckland Hill, would be paid off entirely by real-estate taxes on the mall and surrounding development. The town administration and other directors have echoed that position.

Weinberg also argued in her four-page fact sheet that a mall would not require an increase in police, fire or other municipal services.

Tuesday night, she said that the leaflet contemplated by the directors would steer clear of any such claims. "I think you've got to be careful about stating the facts and offering your opinions," she said.

The statement about town services had been based on research by the administration on malls in other communities in the state.

The decision to issue the leaflet was made in response to a letter to the directors from Alfred Weinberger, the chairman of the town's Economic Development Commission.

Weinberger asked the board to join with the commission in putting together some kind of handout on the referendum.

Town Manager Robert B. Weiss said that the leaflet, to be distributed through the mail, would be paid for and printed by the town. Director Geoffrey Naab said information contained in the leaflet should also be printed in local newspapers before the elections.

Costs go up, but directors OK day-care classroom

By Andrew Yurkovsky Herald Reporter

The Board of Directors voted unanimously Tuesday night to approve buying a modular classroom for the day-care center at Robertson School. But the decision was held up for several minutes while some directors criticized the town administration for not informing them ahead of time of the increased cost of the classroom.

The criticism prompted one resident to loudly whisper that the directors were doing nothing more than campaigning. When Director Peter P. DiRosa Jr. tried to answer the charge, the resident, William Oden, shouted him down.

"You're out of order, Mr. DiRosa," Oden said. "If it's not campaigning, I don't know what it is."

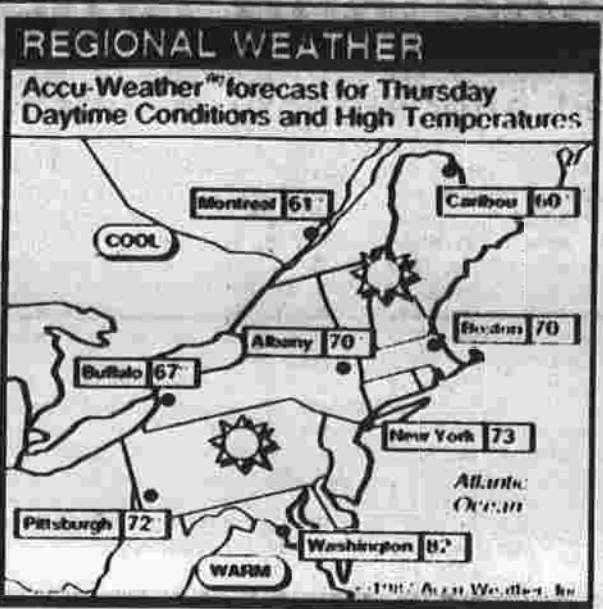

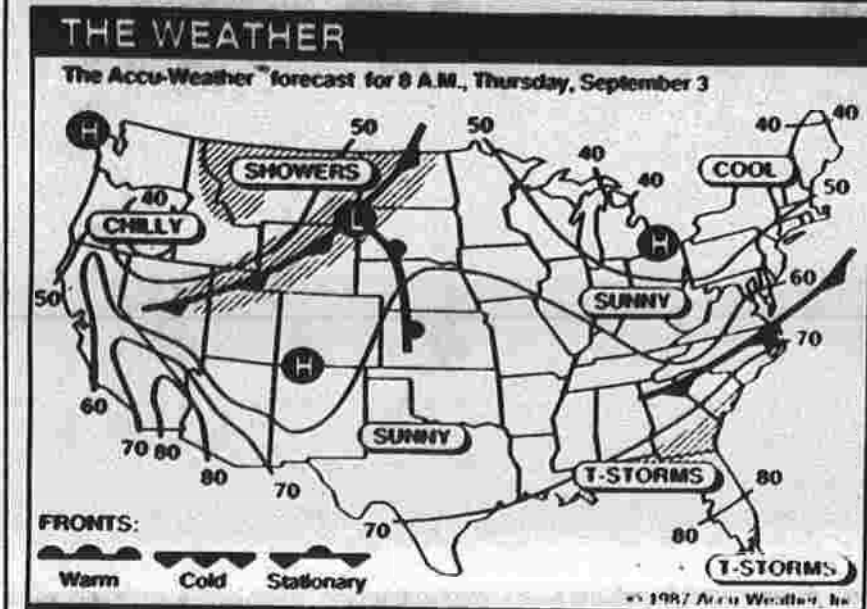

Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg banged the gavel for order. She told Oden he would be asked to leave the meeting in Lincoln Center if he didn't take his seat.

Director Stephen T. Penny criticized the apparent disparity between the estimate and the cost. "I don't feel that it puts the administration in a positive light," he said.

Hanna Marcus, the director of Human Services, said that she had not made the original estimate, which, she said, did not include the cost of utility hookups.

"We know damn well we're going to pass it," Director James M. Giraud said. "I'm not going to let it drag on."

Director James M. Giraud said that the classroom could be in use by the end of December if it is ordered this week. The before-and-after school day-care center, which has enrollment of 30 youngsters, had been housed in a regular classroom in Robertson School until the end of the past school year. Since then, the center's staff and children have

Much of nation fair; Gulf storms continue

By The Associated Press

Much of the nation enjoyed fair skies today, except the Gulf of Mexico region and Florida, where rain and thunderstorms continued after kicking up gusty winds that raked a camping resort.

Rain extended today from northern Georgia to the eastern Gulf Coast and Mississippi Delta, and from the lower Great Lakes across southern lower Michigan and northern Illinois.

Strong winds spawned by late afternoon thunderstorms Tuesday damaged more than 50 recreational vehicles at a tourist camp near Walt Disney World in Florida, injuring three people, authorities said.

Evening thunderstorms caused power outages in Las Vegas, Nev. The National Weather Service forecast for today called for showers and thunderstorms scattered through northern Florida and southern Georgia, from central New York State and widely scattered over Nevada.

Highs were forecast in the 80s and 90s across much of the nation, except 60s and 70s from the upper Mississippi Valley and upper Great Lakes through the Ohio Valley, the mid-Atlantic states and New England.

Highs in the 70s were expected to be scattered along the central Pacific Coast and Pacific Northwest, and temperatures were predicted to reach 100 to around 110 degrees across the desert Southwest and into the California valleys.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 41 degrees at Pellston, Mich., to 94 degrees at Yuma, Ariz.

FOODS

A Chip Off The Block

For many people, nothing is quite as delicious as a warm, homemade chocolate chip cookie. In the 1940s, the Toll House Inn in Massachusetts became famous by serving cookies laced with pieces of chocolate. Noting the popularity of the cookies, the Nestle Company — already a major chocolate producer — soon introduced its first package of semi-sweet chocolate " morsels." In doing so, Nestle quickly cornered a large part of the market on chocolate chips.

Valerie hired?

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Valerie Harper says she didn't walk out on her hit series "Valerie" — she was fired.

Harper, breaking into tears several times as she described a show she called "my baby," said Tuesday she wanted kids to know she isn't "the greedy actress with a lust for money who walked off the show."

"That is patently untrue," she said. "The basic thing you need to know is I was fired. I was forced off the show and told not to come back."

Harper, 47, was dropped from the show last month after a salary dispute with Lorimar Telepictures Productions. She was reportedly being paid $87,000 per show, but wanted $100,000.

The title of the NBC comedy series "Valerie" has been changed to "Valerie's Family" and the character played by Harper will die.

Lorimar spokeswoman Barbara Broglitti on Tuesday said she released later this week that she could not resolve "financial and creative differences."

Lorimar has filed a breach-of-contract lawsuit against Harper, and a lawyer for the actress said she is planning a suit of her own seeking damages and an order against the use of the name Valerie.

Mario's diaries

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Is Gov. Mario Cuomo, whose agonizing over a White House bid earned him a reputation as a political Hamlet, preparing to publish a third installment of his diaries?

"It's not a question of if, it's a question of when," Fryer said. "But there are no plans for anything right now."

The question came up after the governor, in an interview Tuesday with radio station WAMC, said, "I've been going through my diaries because I'm trying to get ready for possible use."

In 1974, Cuomo published "Forest Hills Diary: The Crisis of Low-Income Housing." That involved his thoughts, as recorded in his diary, on mediating a public housing dispute that first brought him to public attention.

Job-share idea gets grudging OK

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herald Reporter

When Diane Wicks returns to work later this month, she will be the guinea pig in the town's first experiment with job sharing.

Wicks, the coordinator of the town's elderly outreach program, will work only half time when she comes back from maternity leave, sharing her duties with another employee.

The Board of Directors grudgingly approved the arrangement during its meeting Tuesday night in Lincoln Center. Some directors criticized Town Manager Robert B. Weiss for agreeing to the setup, which they say goes against the board's policy on job sharing.

Last November, the directors voted against a proposal allowing administrative workers to share the same job.

Weiss said Tuesday his understanding was that the decision did not pertain to non-administrative workers and union members, such as Wicks. He said that the town would lose Wicks if the directors decided to reject the job-sharing arrangement.

"She's been with the town for 10 years now, and the seniors have definitely benefited," he said.

Director Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said he did not recall that the board had approved job sharing for employees at any level.

But Director Geoffrey Naab said the decision to split the position of outreach coordinator between two employees was within the authority of the town manager. He said he would support the idea as long as it does not cost any additional money.

Director Kenneth N. Tedford said he also supported the arrangement in the case of Wicks, but he suggested that Weiss was going beyond his authority in establishing hiring policy.

"I'm damn unhappy with it," said Director James "Dutch" Fogarty.

Fogarty said job sharing could put the town administration in a difficult position if one of two people sharing a job decided to quit. It might be hard to find a qualified applicant willing to take only a part-time position, he said.

Weiss said he believed he had the authority to decide whether to allow Wicks to return to work half time. But he said he brought the matter to the board's attention so that members would not think that he was doing something behind their backs.

He said the benefits for the coordinator's position would be split between Wicks and the person taking over the other half of her job. No one has been hired yet to share Wicks' position, he said.

Naab suggested that Weiss was caught in a dilemma. "We've almost put Mr. Weiss in the position of being fired if he does, he's damned if he doesn't," he said.

Like Tedford, Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg said she would go along with arrangements in Wicks' case. She asked that Weiss report back to the board quarterly on how the arrangement is working.

DIANE WICKS... job shares

Faucher: Rent study panel just a sham?

The chairman of the town's Human Relations Commission told the Board of Directors Tuesday night that the directors should take a stand on the proposal for a fair-rent commission before the November elections.

The chairman, Robert Faucher, said he is concerned that the commission studying the need for a fair-rent commission will not submit its report until November.

Faucher said he couldn't understand why the committee has met so few times since it was formed in April.

Richard Conti, the chairman of the study committee, said last week that the committee hoped to have a report prepared before the November elections.

"I have been fighting back my thoughts that the study committee is a sham merely because I respect many of the people on this board," Faucher told the directors.

He said he has come to believe that the directors do not want to take a stand on the need for a fair-rent panel. "Show me that I am wrong. Show other renters you really care about them," he said.

Faucher said the directors should ask that the report from the committee be submitted to the board in October. But Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg said the directors had not set a deadline for the report when they appointed the panel.

"I have complete confidence in that panel," Weinberg said. "I think they're trying to do their job — and they're trying to do it in a timely fashion."

Faucher, a former real estate agent, wrote a letter last month to the Board of Directors in support of a fair-rent commission. Tuesday he criticized those who say that such a commission would lead to rent control. What would lead to rent control, he contended, is the failure to establish such a commission.

Woman sues the 8th over 1986 accident

A South Windsor woman is seeking more than $15,000 in damages for injuries she received in a 1986 automobile accident in which Eighth District firefighters Thomas O'Marra and Alex Zajac, it says that the town clerk's office was negligent.

The woman, Judy A. Gianantoni, 38, suffered injuries to her head, back and other parts of her body as a result of the Aug. 29, 1986, accident, the complaint says. Gianantoni was traveling east on Interstate 84 when the Eighth District's Engine 3 and Rescue Unit 5 moved from the highway's shoulder into the right lane, pulling in front of Gianantoni's car and three other vehicles.

The complaint says they are in excess of $15,000.

Thomas O'Marra, spokesman for the Eighth District's fire department, could not be reached for comment this morning. Gianantoni's attorney, Albert J. McGrail, also could not be reached for comment.

Directors place accord questions on the ballot

By Alex Girelli
Assistant Editor

Five questions on a tentative agreement between the town and the Eighth Utilities District were approved unanimously by the town Board of Directors Tuesday night for inclusion on the ballot for the town's Nov. 3 election.

Four of them will be for district voters and the fifth for voters outside the district.

The question for voters outside the district is a broad one that simply calls on voters to say whether or not they favor the agreement.

The four district questions, however, ask the district voters to take specific legislative actions which, if passed, would implement points in the agreement reached by negotiators over a seven-month period.

Director Stephen T. Penny, one of the negotiators, said as he has in the past, that he feels it is unfortunate that the district's legal counsel, John D. LaBelle Jr., felt constrained by the district charter to frame four questions.

He said the tendency of the average district voter will be to vote in favor of the items that clearly benefit the district and ignore the fact that the agreement involves exchanges.

Penny said it will be necessary to make it clear that a defeat of any one of the items will mean a defeat of the entire agreement.

Director Geoffrey Naab, another negotiator, agreed. Naab said that it should be made clear that anyone in the district who wants the agreement has to vote yes on all four questions.

He said he understands from newspaper accounts that LaBelle expects that if the agreement is not approved, there will be a great deal of litigation between the town and district.

"It would be a terrible, terrible shame to see it go down," Naab said.

"I think we are on the brink of harmony," Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg said.

The first district question deals with the district's relinquishing its sewer authority; the second with taking over the Buckland Fire Station; the third with relinquishing fire jurisdiction for 28 condominium units; the fourth with taking

Town gets jump on fall leaf pickup

The leaves on the trees are still summer green, but the town is looking ahead to the time when the streets and lawns will be covered with red-yellow fallen foliage. On Sept. 11, bids will be taken for renting vacuum machines and crews to help with the annual leaf pickup.

The bid invitation calls for renting three Vac-All machines with crew of three persons for each machine to pick up leaves. The work is expected to start about Nov. 9 and continue until it is completed, an estimated 300 work hours.

Every year the town hires outside contractors to augment town forces in the annual leaf pickup. The town has two vacuum machines of its own and five leaf loaders.

Public Works Director George A. Kandra said today the amount of work to be contracted varies with the leaf fall.

Blood pressure clinics scheduled

Blood pressure clinics for senior citizens will be held at three locations during September. Deborah Bakulski, director of the local Planned Parenthood office, will be at the clinics to consult with women on health problems and aging.

At the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center, the clinic will be Sept. 8 from 9 to 11 a.m. for people whose last name begin with letters from A to K. Bakulski will be there for consultations from 10 to 11 a.m.

At Westhill Gardens, the clinic will be Sept. 14 from 9 to 10 a.m. At Bennett Apartments, the clinic will be Sept. 14 from 10:45 to 11:30 a.m.

Rain delays road work

Rain last week delayed the start of the resurfacing of four roads in outlying areas of Manchester, and town crews will begin the work today. George Ringstone, work coordinator for the highway division, said Monday.

Crews will start resurfacing Hilltown Road today, then go on in order to Bush Hill Road, Bell Street and Villa Louisa Road. Ringstone said the work is expected to take four days. Drivers are asked to avoid using the roads, if possible, while the work is in progress.

Highland St. to get new pump

The Highland Street water-pumping station will soon be equipped with a new pump and an emergency generator to run the pumps in the event of a power failure.

Electricians were at the station Tuesday preparing for the installation of a 750-gallon-a-minute pump to augment the two pumps there.

A curb on the use of water outdoors is in effect in the eastern fringe of town because the two pumps at the station have not been able to supply the heavy demand for water during the dry spell and still keep storage tanks full enough for fire protection.

The generator to be installed at the station is one that was used at the town's former Cooper Hill Street water treatment plant. It was kept for use at the Highland Street station when the town abandoned the old plant.

The bids to be taken Thursday involve dismantling and moving the generator.

Republicans will survey voters

The town Republican party will be surveying voters of both parties over the next two weeks to find out what issues Manchester residents feel are important. Republican Town Chairman Donald K. Kuehl announced Tuesday.

Kuehl said volunteers will survey a sample of voters from the town's 12 voting districts. The survey questions, which he said are general in nature, were devised by former state Sen. Carl A. Zinsner.

Kuehl said that though the survey is intended to help Republicans after the November elections, it could have an effect on the shaping of the party's platform.

"If, for example, somebody says we don't care about a particular item, I think we're not going to spend too much time on it," Kuehl said.

THE HOME INSPECTION

When you think you've found the perfect home, you're likely to have some questions about the building's structure, the roof, plumbing, central air conditioning and heating systems, and appliances. The best place to get answers to your questions is from a structural inspection.

There are many firms that specialize in going over new and used homes from top to bottom. Most sellers will allow you a reasonable amount of time to have the property inspected by a trained professional before you finalize the purchase agreement. This is a good idea, even if everything appears to be in perfect condition.

The inspector will not only tell you what works and what doesn't, but he can also provide crucial information about the house or condominium. Where are the gas and water shut-off valves? How do the circuit breakers operate? What type of routine maintenance should be done for each system? The inspector's fee is a good investment that can save you money later on.

FBI admits Fargo tape destroyed
 HARTFORD — A third copy of tape recordings of suspects in the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery was destroyed, a fact purposefully withheld from defense attorneys and possibly not divulged to a federal judge in Puerto Rico, a senior FBI agent says.

Agent Jose P. Rodriguez, testifying in U.S. District Court in Hartford on Tuesday, said that in addition to the two recordings usually made in court-authorized wiretaps, FBI agents used a third recorder in Puerto Rico to create working copies of tapes.

The copies were made so that agents could listen to conversations pertinent to their investigation, Rodriguez said. The two original tapes were sealed to prevent tampering and so were unavailable to agents, he said.

Defense lawyer Leonard Weinglass of New York City said it is possible that the third set of tapes may have been used to create doctored tapes — an allegation federal officials denied.

UConn faces shortage of housing

STORRS — A record number of freshmen have begun classes at the University of Connecticut, school officials said.

More than 4,330 freshmen began classes Tuesday at the school's main campus in Storrs and in regional branches in Hartford, Groton, Stamford, Waterbury and Torrington, officials said.

The record enrollment of freshmen and high demand for campus housing by returning students and transfers have resulted in a 240-bed shortage of on-campus student housing, said Carmen Vance, assistant vice president and director of residential life.

Vance said the school was forced to open apartments in a housing complex that had been on the selling block to accommodate more than 200 upperclassmen and transfer students. The sale of the complex had been delayed and the school decided to convert the building into dorms, Vance said.

Aron probable in Danbury fire

DANBURY — Fire officials suspect that a weekend blaze that caused $5 million in damage to a building supply company was the result of arson.

"The way the fire burned and the progression of it, we're saying it was a set fire," Danbury Fire Marshal Alan Schacht said about Sunday's fire at the Danbury Building and Lumber Supply Co.

Schacht said Tuesday that he sent debris samples to the state police forensic laboratory in Meriden for tests. Lab technicians will be looking for traces of an accelerant, he said.

Besides the damage to the company's lumberyard, the neighboring American Family Crafts, manufacturer of crafts kits for retail stores, sustained about $500,000 in damage to its operation.

Troopers probe rest-area holdups

DARIEN — State police today are investigating the holdups of attendants at two rest areas on Interstate 95 in Darien, including one that left a man critically injured.

Trooper E. Allice of the Westport barracks said the first holdup occurred Tuesday about 11:30 p.m. at the gas station in the rest area on the eastbound side of the highway.

About $450 was taken in the robbery, and an attendant was stabbed in the lower back, Allice said. He said the attendant, a male, was listed in critical condition today at Norwalk Hospital.

The trooper said the second robbery occurred shortly after 4 a.m. at the rest area on the westbound side of the highway in Darien. No one was injured and the amount of money stolen hadn't yet been determined.

High court will visit New Haven

HARTFORD — The Connecticut Supreme Court, which normally hears cases in Hartford, will sit in New Haven on Nov. 12, Chief Justice Ellen A. Peters said.

The proceedings will mark the third time that the state's highest court has heard appeals outside Hartford since beginning a pilot program last year. Cases were heard in Norwich last November and in Danbury in April.

"The busy schedules that most people have make it virtually impossible for them to come to Hartford to view Supreme Court proceedings," Peters said Tuesday. "We hope everyone who is interested in the court system, including school groups and civil organizations, will be able to come that day."

O'Neill reviews Suffield jail plan

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill has told Suffield officials that his office would review a consultant's report recommending the town build the site of a new, 800-bed, minimum-security prison.

Suffield First Selectman Fred J. Brockett Jr., in a meeting Tuesday with O'Neill and members of the governor's staff, said the town had been in the vicinity of Bradley International Airport would limit the potential for economic growth for both the state and the town.

Brockett, a member of the state's Bradley International Airport Commission and the commission and the Connecticut Department of Economic Development consider the land proposed for the prison a good site for high-technology industry.

Jon Sandberg, the governor's press secretary, said O'Neill made no commitment to change the decision.

'Call Before You Dig' stronger

NEW BRITAIN — State utility regulators have given preliminary approval to new regulations strengthening the state's "Call Before You Dig" program.

Under the proposal, excavators would have to mark out the areas where they intend to dig. Diggers also would have to notify CBVD if a planned excavation is not completed within 30 days or is expanded.

An excavator also would have to notify an affected utility if there is an underground pipe or cable in the dig site.

Utilities, meanwhile, must attend all preconstruction meetings involving excavation projects affecting their underground facilities, the Department of Public Utility Control said Tuesday. Also, utilities would have to provide on-site assistance to locate facilities not actually found at spots previously marked by utility personnel.

The regulations have several more administrative steps, including a public hearing, to clear before they become effective.

Civil-liability law faces challenge

BRIDGEPORT — A lawyer representing the estate of a man killed in the April collapse of L'Amblance Plaza said he plans to challenge the constitutionality of some of Connecticut's civil-liability laws.

R. Bartley Halloran said he will challenge certain laws that were changed last year as part of controversial "tort reform" legislation.

Although some features of that legislation are scheduled to be revamped Oct. 1 because of strong opposition to the 1986 changes, L'Amblance Plaza suits are still governed by the 1986 statutes that were in effect when the building collapsed.

Halloran represents the estate of Richard S. McGill, who was among 28 workers killed when the partially-completed L'Amblance Plaza apartment complex collapsed April 23. He said he expects to file suit within the next few weeks.

$24.2 million surplus is forecast

O'Neill says it's too early to consider tax cuts for 1988

By Judd Everhart
 The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Two months into the new budget year, the state is anticipating a $24.2 million surplus, according to Gov. William A. O'Neill.

But O'Neill says it's too early for him to decide whether he'll recommend cuts in state taxes in the budget he sends to the General Assembly in February.

O'Neill also said the state closed the books on the 1986-87 fiscal year on June 30 with a near-record $28.2 million surplus, a number he said "reflects our booming economy and the fact that this administration has not frittered away our good fortune."

Over the past four years, the state has rolled up surpluses totaling $1.3 billion.

The surplus for 1986-87 has already been allocated to the University of Connecticut.

• $193 million into the Educational Excellence Fund, used to provide higher salaries for teachers and relieve classroom overcrowding.

• $104 million into the budget reserve, or "rainy day" fund to cushion against potential deficits in the future. That will bring the fund to $12.5 million, or 6 1/2 percent of the state's General Fund budget.

• $62.9 million to pay off state bonds.

• $4.5 million for AIDS research at the University of Connecticut and by the General Assembly.

Before the 1986-87 budget year ended, the legislature also set aside $20 million from the estimated surplus to help pay for local solid waste programs and to set up a $5 million relief fund to be used to pay municipal bills in the event of a disaster, such as the collapse of a building as occurred in Bridgeport this spring.

With that $20 million, the gross surplus was $28.2 million.

The Democratic governor rejected the traditional Republican claim that surpluses generally reflect overtaxation.

"It's anything but overtaxation," O'Neill said, "because the dollars are going back out to relieve taxes at the local level and also to reduce debt, which will save tax dollars in the future, and (into) the budget reserve fund."

O'Neill said it was too early to discuss possible tax cuts for the 1988-89 budget, which he submits to the legislature in February.

He has said that he favors additional state aid to cities and towns to help local officials keep property taxes down. He has also indicated he may suggest a change in the state sales tax. Two years ago, O'Neill proposed a half-percentage point reduction in the 7 1/2 percent sales tax, but that proposal was rejected in favor of other tax cuts.

Senate Minority Leader Reginald J. Smith, R-New Hartford, said the surplus total came as no surprise.

"What is shocking is the Democrats' vehement refusal to return any of the surplus to the source from which it came: Connecticut taxpayers," Smith said.

When Republicans controlled the legislature in 1985 and 1986, taxes were cut by more than $350 million.

Auditors, AG assume inspector duties

HARTFORD (AP) — The state auditors and the attorney general have taken over the responsibilities of the inspector general, a number he said "reflects our booming economy and the fact that this administration has not frittered away our good fortune."

Attorney General Joseph Lieberman, center, makes a point at a news conference in Hartford Tuesday where he announced the formation of a "Citizen Advocacy Team" to carry out investigations of waste and corruption in state government.

HARTFORD (AP) — Officials say they don't expect an 18-year-old honors student and top athlete charged in the rapes of two girls to appear in court today in time to save his parents from paying the $200,000 bond they posted for him.

It has been seven months since Alex Kelly disappeared and officials are still trying to sort out his tangled legal case.

Today, a Superior Court judge in Stamford will decide whether to make the Kelly's parents pay the $200,000 bond they posted for him. The parents used their home as collateral.

"It's not very often that someone will blow a big bond," said Kelly's attorney, Michael Sherman, "but it happens."

Sherman said the last time he heard from Kelly was "several months ago." He does not expect Kelly to attend today's court hearing. If he skips, a state prosecutor says the case will continue.

Kelly, who faces sexual assault, kidnapping and threatening charges in the rapes of two women, failed to appear in court in February. At that time, the court ordered a stay on the bond, which meant nothing could be done to the bond for six months.

"We're dealing with here is the parents' debt to Connecticut and whether or not the state will attempt to foreclose the lien on the house," Sherman said.

Sherman said several things could happen in court, including the Kellys handing over a check for $200,000, the state foreclosing on the house or the court issuing another stay.

"The worst scenario is a foreclosure procedure where the state brings a lawsuit against the parents, the house is sold, the state takes $200,000 and pays off the mortgage, then gives the rest to the Kellys," Sherman said.

Kelly apparently fled to Colorado on Feb. 15, three days before his trial.

Sherman believes Kelly will eventually show up.

"He's scared," Sherman said. "He was afraid and is afraid he won't get a fair trial because they're combining the two cases."

Assistant State's Attorney Bruce Hudock said they had an additional $100,000 bond to allocate because of a clerical error.

But, he said, there's only a limited number of things the state can do. He noted $20,000 reward for Kelly's apprehension has been issued by Gov. William A. O'Neill and the FBI is looking for Kelly.

"My position is that besides what were already doing, we'll keep in touch with the victims who have up to now expressed an interest in pursuing the case and I intend to make sure that interest continues," Hudock said.

Rape suspect disappears in legal tangle

HARTFORD (AP) — Officials say they don't expect an 18-year-old honors student and top athlete charged in the rapes of two girls to appear in court today in time to save his parents from paying the $200,000 bond they posted for him.

It has been seven months since Alex Kelly disappeared and officials are still trying to sort out his tangled legal case.

Today, a Superior Court judge in Stamford will decide whether to make the Kelly's parents pay the $200,000 bond they posted for him. The parents used their home as collateral.

"It's not very often that someone will blow a big bond," said Kelly's attorney, Michael Sherman, "but it happens."

Sherman said the last time he heard from Kelly was "several months ago." He does not expect Kelly to attend today's court hearing. If he skips, a state prosecutor says the case will continue.

Kelly, who faces sexual assault, kidnapping and threatening charges in the rapes of two women, failed to appear in court in February. At that time, the court ordered a stay on the bond, which meant nothing could be done to the bond for six months.

"We're dealing with here is the parents' debt to Connecticut and whether or not the state will attempt to foreclose the lien on the house," Sherman said.

Sherman said several things could happen in court, including the Kellys handing over a check for $200,000, the state foreclosing on the house or the court issuing another stay.

"The worst scenario is a foreclosure procedure where the state brings a lawsuit against the parents, the house is sold, the state takes $200,000 and pays off the mortgage, then gives the rest to the Kellys," Sherman said.

Kelly apparently fled to Colorado on Feb. 15, three days before his trial.

Sherman believes Kelly will eventually show up.

"He's scared," Sherman said. "He was afraid and is afraid he won't get a fair trial because they're combining the two cases."

Assistant State's Attorney Bruce Hudock said they had an additional $100,000 bond to allocate because of a clerical error.

But, he said, there's only a limited number of things the state can do. He noted $20,000 reward for Kelly's apprehension has been issued by Gov. William A. O'Neill and the FBI is looking for Kelly.

"My position is that besides what were already doing, we'll keep in touch with the victims who have up to now expressed an interest in pursuing the case and I intend to make sure that interest continues," Hudock said.

UB faculty on strike; contract talks continue

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Striking University faculty members at the University of Bridgeport are in the middle of a second contract offer after turning down the first.

Members of the American Association of University Professors were scheduled to meet at 9 a.m. today to consider an offer made Tuesday by the university, said university spokesman Ken Best.

"We discovered (the union negotiators) had not presented the offer, but said there was apparently some problem in communicating the offer, to the membership by the leaders."

Union members set up picket lines Tuesday after their contract expired at midnight Monday.

"We are on strike," said Alfred Gertelny, head of the 220-member UB chapter of the association.

Halloran represents the estate of Richard S. McGill, who was among 28 workers killed when the partially-completed L'Amblance Plaza apartment complex collapsed April 23. He said he expects to file suit within the next few weeks.

Members of the union set up picket lines Tuesday in two locations on campus in front of buildings where classes for the UB law school were being conducted.

Norman Douglas, a professor of finance, Law school professors are not part of the union, Best said. Law classes began last week.

Best said non-union faculty members might conduct classes scheduled for 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. today.

Administrators would first determine how many faculty members actually went on strike, he said. A majority of the faculty members belong to the union, he said.

Progress was made Monday in contract negotiations on non-economic matters, Best said. But the pivotal salary issue had not been resolved.

The administration's last offer was a 3.5 percent raise in the first year of the contract, followed by 4 percent and 6 percent annual hikes. The faculty wanted a 7.75 percent first-year raise, and increases of at least 6 percent in each of the remaining two years of the pact.

Coventry schools open with 'firsts'

Few problems are expected as 1,576 students start class

By Bruce Matzkin
 Herald Reporter

COVENTRY — About 1,576 students filed into school in Coventry this morning for the first time this year. And according to School Superintendent Nathan Chesler, things ran smoothly.

"You have some normal things that need to be ironed out, but I don't expect any real problems this year," said Chesler.

Chesler said that Coventry schools have some "firsts" this year.

The George Hersey Robertson School, for instance, will be getting a brand-new principal on Oct. 1 and in the meantime, guidance counselor Bernard Mohan is filling in.

The new principal, William Carpenter, is now a principal in a grammar school in Plainfield. He has been in education for more than 20 years, said Chesler.

"He's a very accomplished person," said Chesler. "I expect a smooth transition."

Another "first" for Coventry schools is the fact that French and Spanish will be taught to seventh- and eighth-graders for the first time at the Capt. Nathan Hale School. To make room for the classes, alien-reading and study-hall periods will be cut out of students' schedules.

Capt. Nathan Hale Principal Edward R. Mahony said that his school had a full day of classes scheduled for today.

At Coventry Grammar School, Principal Mary-Margaret Piazza said that enrollment has grown considerably. She said that 30 new students enrolled over the summer, including 10 in kindergarten, 19 in first through third grades, and one in fourth grade.

Piazza said she scheduled an assembly for today in the school auditorium, but leakage over the summer has caused water damage to the school. She said she was forced to postpone the assembly until a later date.

Aside from the water damage, Piazza saw few problems interfering with the first day of school.

"I think it's going to be a great year, and I'm very optimistic," she said.

Coventry High School has also experienced a growth in enrollment, said Principal Dennis Joy. Joy said that 48 students are enrolled this year, compared to about 400 in the spring.

Joy said that the high school's teachers will place more emphasis on students being on time for school this year. Tardiness has been a minor problem in the past, he said.

Coventry High School is also starting a new vocational and educational program for students with learning handicaps.

"I look for a good year," said Joy. "We have a good staff, and we haven't had a lot of turnover, which makes for a smoother opening."

Today is also the first day of school in Coventry for several teachers. Starting on Capt. Nathan Hale are Sheryl Bodzioch, a special-ed teacher who previously taught for five years at William Bird High School in Roanoke, Va.; Jeanne DuBois, an art teacher who taught for two months at New Britain High School; and Theresa Walsh, a foreign language teacher who taught in the Berlin public school system for seven months before coming to Coventry.

Coventry High School welcomed two new teachers today, Brenda Hucklebee and Mary Ellen Lavalette, will be vocational instructors. Hucklebee has taught and specialized at the Connecticut Valley Hospital in Middletown and the Children's Hospital of Cromwell. Lavalette worked for two years at the retarded in New Britain, and previously taught for three years.

New members of the Coventry faculty include Margaret Alexander, who has five years' experience teaching in Colorado and Nebraska. Including two years in elementary school, she is a teacher for gifted students; Deborah Weiss, a speech teacher with nine years' experience at Hartford Hospital and five years' experience at psychiatric hospitals in Israel; and Susan Schardt, an early education teacher with 14 years' experience, most recently at the Community Child Guidance Clinic in Manchester.

Now that's a pile of garbage
 Trash from the nation's best-known garbage gaffe begins incineration Tuesday in Brooklyn, N.Y., after one-ton bales were broken apart and inspected. The commercial trash from Islip, New York City and Nassau County began traveling by barge in search of a dump March 22 after it was turned away for lack of space. The barge was rejected by six states and three nations. But the ash was buried with little fanfare.

Bristol to get Little League?

BRISTOL (AP) — Bristol has knocked Bridgeport out of the running as the site for the Little League Eastern regional headquarters and Bristol will be named the winner today, a Chamber of commerce official says.

"That's what we're told," said Dick LaMothe, president of the Bristol Chamber of Commerce. "I believe the request for us to set up a meeting and press conference was given to the mayor on Monday."

Little League officials in their Williamsport, Pa., headquarters would not confirm that Bristol had been selected on Tuesday.

"We'll confirm or deny that tomorrow," said Steve Keener, a spokesman for Little League, on Tuesday.

Bristol and Bridgeport were the finalists for the 25-acre site which will serve as the headquarters for an 11-state region. But Williamsport to offer their final proposal because residents who lived near the proposed site vehemently opposed the plan.

LaMothe said a news conference is scheduled for noon today at the Vetrano Corporate Center in the Sophia Room in Bristol. He said he expects the Little League will be good for the city's tourism industry.

"We have hopes it will be a significant plus for the city and it will provide people another incentive to come to our city and participate in all the things we have to offer," LaMothe said.

In Bridgeport, Kevin D. Keeley, president of the Bridgeport Business Council, said he had heard Bristol had been selected.

"I think Bridgeport has missed a tremendous opportunity and certainly I'm disappointed, especially because of my prior relationship with Little League," Keeley said.

Keeley was president of the Williamsport Chamber of Commerce from 1977 to 1983.

Bolton to use $40,000 for salt-storage shed

BOLTON — The Board of Selectmen decided Tuesday to spend most of the $40,000 left over from a federal revenue-sharing program on a new salt-storage shed near the town garage.

The decision was made after a public hearing attended by only one resident, Robert Gorton of 32 Brandy Road. Gorton wanted to use the money for the salt-storage shed.

The $40,000 remains uncommitted from the same funds that financed the building of Bentley Memorial Library and new lighting for ballfields at Herrick Memorial Park, among other projects.

The money comes from a federal program that ended recently. Any uncommitted funds from the program must be allocated by Oct. 1.

Originally, it was thought that the uncommitted funds totaled only about $50,000. But selectmen discovered they had an additional $10,000 to allocate because of a clerical error.

First Selectman Sandra W. Pierog said Tuesday that the Public Building Commission is looking into building the salt-storage shed. The shed, however, was not put out to bid for several months, said Pierog.

Currently, salt and sand are stored out in the open. The State Department of Environmental Protection has said this is unacceptable, because if the salt is rained on, the runoff can seep into the ground, and into two wells, which supply water to the Bolton Elementary and Center schools.

Other possible uses for some of the left over money suggested Tuesday included renovations to the old firehouse on Notch Road, which will be used in the future to house the town's fire truck; a new siren for civil preparedness; and improvements to Community Hall.

A town meeting on the leftover revenue-sharing funds will be held on Sept. 15.

Selectmen adopt rules for use of firehouse

BOLTON — The Board of Selectmen is now requiring groups wishing to use the town firehouse to apply for permission in writing.

The new policy was approved at Tuesday's selectmen's meeting in the Community Hall. The policy was submitted by Fire Commission members Raymond P. Soma and David G. Drew.

Soma told the Board of Selectmen that the Fire Commission was concerned that groups using the firehouse for meetings or functions might tamper with valuable equipment or cause damage. Fire Chief James Pierce recalled an instance several months ago when members of a group using the firehouse scanned computer disks belonging to the fire department.

Soma and Drew were also concerned about being held responsible for any damages done to the building by a group using it. But Selectman Michael A. Ziding explained to them that just because they are the primary users of the firehouse, they would not be held responsible for another group's actions.

The policy, which will be adopted after it is discussed with the Fire Commission, requires that civic groups wishing to use the firehouse must file a written request to the Board of Selectmen, the fire chief or Fire Commission chairman at least two weeks in advance.

This requirement does not apply to municipal commissions, however. Nor does it apply to organizations that are not connected with the fire department.

Four towns get grants

HARTFORD (AP) — The state Department of Economic Development will provide more than $2 million in state grants to fund economic development and urban improvements in four towns, an official said.

The town of New London will receive $1.3 million to design and construct a water filtration plant which will provide drinking water to the towns of New London, Waterford and Montville. John J. Carson, economic development commissioner, said Tuesday.

East Haddam will receive $500,000 for the renovation and restoration of the Brewster Company's Upper Mill. The funds will be used to create expansion space for the town's largest employer.

Salisbury will use a $200,000 grant to rebuild its town hall which was destroyed by fire in 1985. The town hall will be rebuilt to resemble the original building.

The town of Stonington will receive $137,125 to help fund improvements to traffic flow near the Mystic Seaport Museum.

Bolton super says opening quiet, smooth

By Bruce Matzkin
 Herald Reporter

BOLTON — "We had a very quiet, smooth opening" School Superintendent Richard E. Packman said this morning on the first day of school in Bolton.

Busing problems were minimal, according to Gretchen Wiedle, administrative assistant to Packman. She said she had received only three calls about children missing their bus.

"If we get through with no more than half a dozen, it's good," Wiedle said.

At the elementary school, Principal Anne Rash and the teachers met the students outside, where they organized their respective groups before entering the school. For the most part, the children were enthusiastic about being back to school.

Leah Arel and Nicole Vaillancourt, second-graders, cracked when they met, having not seen each other all summer.

A kindergarten teacher, Chris Gimartino, said he was happy to be back to school, especially because today is his fifth birthday.

One first grader, Ben Davies, even brought a bouquet of flowers for his teacher. When asked why, he replied, "I don't know."

Donna O'Leary, a teacher's aide, said she couldn't believe how much the children had grown over the summer. "I can't get over how big they are when they come back," she said.

Rash said that this year's school opening was made a little smoother because for two days last week the kindergarten teachers were in school so that new pupils could come in to visit and meet them. Rash said that at least half of the kindergarteners showed up last week. Also, said Rash, class lists were posted two weeks ago, so children could learn early which rooms they would be in.

But not all high school students have negative feelings about being back to school.

"The summer went by too fast," said Sara Lewis, a junior. But, said Sara, at least school will keep her busy.

Darcey Corneliusson, a senior, said she would rather be lounging around doing nothing. Another senior, Melissa Passariti, said she would rather be working and making money. She also was not happy about the resumption of her daily 40-minute commute to school from Willington.

Other students were even more outspoken. Tom Cavar, a sophomore, said of being back in school, "I think it stinks." David Teifer, another sophomore, agreed. "I hate it, because it was too short of a vacation," he said.

But not all high school students have negative feelings about being back to school.

"I think it's awesome," said Suzanne Russell, a junior. Her friend, Junior Lori Stephenson, was also happy to be back. "You get to see all your friends," she said.

OPINION

Settling differences

It has been understood from the outset that when voters who live outside the Eighth Utilities District cast a ballot Nov. 3 on a tentative agreement between the district and the town they would be dealing with a very broad question. In essence they would be telling the town's Board of Directors whether they think the directors should approve the agreement or not.

The question on voters will see on the machines is indeed broad, and in one respect it is a little presumptuous.

It asks "Should the proposed Agreement dated Aug. 6, 1987, between the Town and the Eighth Utilities District settling their differences be approved?"

Admittedly the whole purpose of negotiating for seven months was to find a way to avoid the recurring conflicts between the two governments and, certainly if the agreement is approved, it will remove many of the causes of friction.

But "settling their differences" holds out a big promise. No one should suppose that if the agreement is reached, there will never be another difference to be resolved. It will merely mean it will be a lot easier to resolve future differences.

Statistical happenstance

The official said it "could be just statistical happenstance." He was commenting on the fact that traffic deaths on New Mexico's interstate highways have more than doubled since the state increased its speed limit to 65 miles an hour.

Deaths on Interstate highways numbered 56 between April 2, when the new speed limit went into effect, and Aug. 15. For the same period last year the fatalities numbered 25.

Robert Kemble, secretary of the state's Public Safety Department, admitted the figures are alarming but he is not convinced that the higher speed limit is the cause. He said police reports on many of the fatal accidents listed driver inattention or alcohol as the primary cause.

Alcohol in a driver is dangerous at any speed, more dangerous at higher speeds. And the faster you drive the more tensely you have to attend to what you are doing. So it is folly to dismiss speed as the obvious first explanation of the dramatic increase in highway slaughter, and look afar for something as subtle as statistical happenstance.

New Mexico was the first of 25 states to increase the speed limit. Maybe it should be the first to go back to a safe 55 miles an hour.

Bright outlook for Democrats in November

Democrats are speaking softly just now as they try to forget their loss downstate last month, but they carry a big stick into election campaigns that traditionally start with the Labor Day weekend. They have a tight grip on most of the population centers of the state and they have the money to help the party retain that control in local elections Nov. 3.

"We are very solvent," says John Droney of West Hartford, the Democratic state chairman. The party has $200,000 plus in the bank and will double that, at least, at a kick-off dinner in Hartford on Sept. 19 for those local campaigns.

Droney's counterpart, GOP State Chairman Bob Poliner of Durham, sees bright spots on the November map but he faces a tough go-around with the Democrats just the same. And his party still has a deficit of $70,000-plus. It's enough to drain much of the euphoria from Chris Shays' victory in the 4th Congressional District special election on Aug. 18.

It hasn't helped Poliner's morale either, though he may have known it was coming, when his second in command, Betsee Osborn of Fairfield, resigned last week.

For Droney, a round of primaries on Sept. 15 could alter the lineup of candidates for November. But either way, his party wins. And the organizational favorites are expected to survive that initial test. They are: state Rep. Carrie Saxon Perry in Hartford, Mayor Tom Bucci in Bridgeport and Mayor Biagio DiIorio in New Haven.

Droney is counting on Mayor Thom Serrano to keep Stamford in the Democratic column. Only in Waterbury, among cities of 100,000 population, are Republicans in reasonably good shape. Mayor Joe Santopietro is a good bet for re-election, though Droney concedes nothing.

Biden, Simon ready to fight for headlines

WASHINGTON — Will White House Fever touch off a feud between two liberal Democratic senators?

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., has been in the headlines because of his chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee, which will hold confirmation hearings on President Reagan's nomination of Robert Bork to the Supreme Court. The pundits haven't decided yet whether Biden's role will be a plus or a minus in his quest for the Democratic presidential nomination, but there's no question that the publicity has already helped his name recognition in the country at large.

Now it appears that Biden has found another use for his committee chairmanship: keeping another presidential contender out of the headlines.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., is a junior member of the Judiciary Committee and chairman of the subcommittee on the Constitution. He proposed his subcommittee hold a hearing as part of the city of Philadelphia's celebration of the Constitution's bicentennial.

But as subcommittee chairman, Simon had to get the Judiciary Committee chairman's permission to hold the hearing. And Biden said "no."

A Biden aide said the chairman refused because the proposed hearing would have been an "intrusion" into the celebration planned in July by the Bicentennial Committee. But Fred Stein, executive director of "We the People — 200," the group that coordinated Philadelphia's celebration, told our reporter Gary Clouser the Simon hearing would have been a welcome complement to the day's events.

Simon's supporters suspect that Biden was less concerned with the intrusion of Simon's committee into Philadelphia's celebration than with the possible intrusion of Simon's mug into the evening news shows and the next day's headlines.

There was a hint in 1986 that Biden and Simon would not always see eye to eye on major issues. Simon sponsored a balanced-budget measure that would have prohibited the government from spending more than it took in. It lost by one vote; Biden voted against it. The Delaware Democrat's version of a balanced-budget law had been soundly defeated two years earlier.

If a feud is indeed in the making, Biden and Simon have a unique stage on which to slug it out. They are the only presidential candidates who serve on the same committee. They share two Senate committee assignments: Judiciary and Foreign Relations. Simon, in fact, is the only non-lawyer on the Judiciary Committee.

Ironically, Simon would not be serving on Foreign Relations, save for a special waiver granted by the Senate leadership guaranteeing he could serve on Foreign Relations, Judiciary and Labor simultaneously. Senate rules forbid simultaneous assignments on more than two major committees.

The Judiciary and Foreign Relations committees have publicity potential that other candidates would envy. The Bork hearings will be just the opening round of a long series of encounters that could make or break either senator's presidential aspirations.

In the months to come, foreign policy will become an issue of overriding importance in the presidential campaign, and the Foreign Relations Committee will be an ideal forum for both Biden and Simon. Since both senators' foreign-policy views are essentially the same, the contest will be more of form than substance, with each man trying to avoid sounding like an echo of the other.

Aides to both senators insist that, while the two men are not close personally, they have great respect for each other's abilities. That rapport will be tested as they share common stages.

Praise for the Pentagon
Defense Department procurement officials are doing something right. General Accounting Office auditors have concluded that the Pentagon is doing a good job of enforcing contractor warranties on major weapons systems. In 1983 and 1984, Congress passed laws requiring the armed services to buy warranties for their expensive weapons so that defense contractors would be held responsible for poor design and shoddy workmanship.

Although the laws left some loopholes for national security considerations and cost-effectiveness, the GAO investigators found that even in those cases the Pentagon usually opted for a negotiated warranty. The auditors found a few flaws in the warranty system, but reported that the military had taken corrective measures.

Kuwait: Waite may be released
KUWAIT — Abducted Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite is expected to be freed by mid-September, the Kuwait News Agency reported.

In a dispatch from Beirut Tuesday night, KUNA quoted unidentified Lebanese security sources as saying that "as a result of recently intensified regional pressures, Waite will be released within 10 days."

"Strong pressures have recently been applied on the kidnappers and Waite should have been freed two days ago, but last-minute hitches developed, blocking the release," KUNA quoted the sources as saying. "However, regional powers are now trying to surmount those obstacles."

U.S./World In Brief

Ex-army chief linked coup attempt

MANILA, Philippines — The government said today that a former army commander was involved in plots leading to last week's coup attempt and that conspirators discussed killing U.S. officials and burning a CIA office.

President Corason Aquino, in the first complete official account of casualties from Friday's coup bid, said 53 people were killed in the fighting. The dead included 12 government troops, 19 rebels and 22 civilians. Hundreds were wounded, including Mrs. Aquino's son, Benigno III.

In a nationally televised speech, Mrs. Aquino said 1,500 troops took part in the mutiny, although it was unclear whether the figure included those who joined in Cebu City, San Fernando and in southeastern Luzon.

Officials in Cebu City, the nation's second largest urban center, said today they bolstered security after hearing of plans for a possible military rebellion there.

Wildfires scorch 110,000 acres

Overwhelmed firefighters let smaller hotspots burn and awaited reinforcements from as far as the Northeast today as they battled hundreds of fires that had blackened more than 111,000 acres in the West.

The fires in tinder-dry Oregon, California and Idaho forced scattered evacuations, destroyed or damaged dozens of homes and threatened rural communities. One fire in Washington forced evacuation of a state park.

Lightning-spawned fires scorched 68,000 acres in Northern California. The biggest fire, in the central Idaho mountains, was a blaze that flared up and doubled in size in one day to 15,000 acres after being left to burn itself out. Arson was believed to be the cause of at least three of the more than 30 fires in Southern California.

Nearly 5,000 firefighters battled major blazes in California's Stanislaus, Klamath, Tahoe and Shasta-Triunty national forests and nearly 300 smaller fires, Mike Milosich of the U.S. Forest Service said Tuesday.

Frogmen retrieve flight recorder

BANGKOK, Thailand — Navy frogmen retrieved the flight data recorder from the debris of a sunken Thai airliner today, and most of the bodies of the 83 crash victims were recovered.

The recorder from the Boeing 737 may yield clues as to why the jet plunged into the Andaman Sea Monday eight miles from its destination, Phuket Island's international airport.

Decha Nokkeew, a deputy director general of the Department of Aviation, said the recorder, in good condition, was to be flown to Bangkok for analysis.

Audiences said up to 67 bodies have been brought to shore in three days of recovery operations. All 83 people aboard Thai Airways Flight TH358 from the commercial city of Hat Yai to the resort island of Phuket in southern Thailand were believed killed.

Vatican, Jews open new chapter

VATICAN CITY — Vatican and Jewish officials are speaking of opening a new chapter in their historically troubled relations following a meeting between John Paul II and Jewish leaders.

Jewish leaders said Tuesday they still opposed the papal audience granted to Austrian President Kurt Waldheim last June, but would not allow the issue to disrupt the pontiff's trip to the United States next week.

The pope and nine leaders of Jewish organizations met for 75 minutes Tuesday at the pontiff's summer residence at Castel Gandolfo south of Rome to discuss the Waldheim audience.

The talks were "an important moment in this process of reconciliation," said the Rev. Pierre Duprey of the Vatican's Commission for Religious Relations with the Jews, speaking at a news conference later at the Vatican.

States compete for super collider

WASHINGTON — Several entries in the super collider sweepstakes believe the winning state may be determined by which offers the most attractive way of life to world-class scientists.

Eleven states submitted proposals on Tuesday, in advance of a Sept. 15 deadline. At least four more were expected today to snare the $4.4 billion atom smasher. Another 10 are believed to have turned in their documents early, and the Energy Department says it won't release a list of contestant states until Thursday.

Whoever wins the right to the massive project will have 3,000 jobs, 500 of them for visiting scientists, practically no added pollution and an annual operating budget of $270 million.

Feds set new rules on benzene

WASHINGTON — The Labor Department is ordering a 90 percent reduction in on-the-job exposure to benzene, saying the action will save hundreds of workers from suffering early deaths from leukemia and other blood-related cancers.

But the new regulations also exempt from coverage some 61,000 workers at bulk gasoline storage facilities, says the Occupational Safety and Health Administration earlier identified as being most at risk, according to government documents.

Ending a decade-long legal battle that had resulted in the Supreme Court greatly restricting the regulatory powers of federal agencies, OSHA on Tuesday gave most industries five months to bring about the tenfold reduction in benzene exposure to about 240,000 workers nationwide.

Cops fingerprint men in rape case

HOMESTEAD, Pa. — Police investigating a series of rapes of elderly women in this small steel town are asking black men for their fingerprints, and so far the only strong objections are from the American Civil Liberties Union.

"The community seems to be not objecting," Marion Damick, associate director of the Greater Pittsburgh ACLU chapter, said Tuesday. "It's depressing that people are doing it."

Police Chief Chris Kelly says a single black man is believed responsible for the attacks, but after four years investigators have no strong evidence pointing to a suspect.

Omaha mayor battles new cancer

OMAHA, Neb. — Mayor Bernie Simon, diagnosed with having brain tumors, is responding with irrational optimism and is promising to battle the disease just as he overcame lung cancer barely two months ago.

"I've worried cancer before and I'm going to whip this one," Simon told a City Hall news conference Tuesday with reporters, council members and city department heads Tuesday. "I'm not afraid of it."

The 60-year-old mayor looked robust as he tried to brighten his spirits.

Munitions train runs over protester

Dozens watch in horror as Vietnam veteran is critically injured

Copyright 1987, The Oakland Tribune

S. Brian Willson and his wife, Holly Raven, conduct a news conference on railroad tracks at the Naval Weapons Center in Concord, Calif., to protest alleged arms shipments to Central America. Moments after the conference, Willson was critically injured when he was run over by a Navy train while he was kneeling on the tracks.

"He lunged for the train, like he was angry," said the Rev. David Duncombe, who was standing next to Willson.

Willson of San Rafael suffered a skull fracture, and one leg was severed below the knee, said Sandra Ryan, spokeswoman for John Muir Hospital. Surgeons amputated the other leg below the knee, she said. He was listed in critical condition early today.

Willson, who was about to start a 46-day fast, was leading 45 demonstrators outside the weapons station, the largest in the West.

After a news conference, he knelt on the track with others trying to stop the three-car train as it left the depot.

The train, operated by a civilian Navy employee, hit him as about 30 people, including a contingent of Marines, demonstrators and his family watched in horror.

"They've killed my dad! They've murdered my dad!" shouted Gabriel Rauen, 14, who had to be restrained.

David Wylie of the San Francisco Nuclear Weapons Free campaign said Willson's wife of two weeks, Holly, and others waved for the train to stop.

"The engineers about their heads at the end," he said.

Margie Wall of Concord said she and a friend were in an automobile about to leave when they noticed the train speeding up and moving toward the protesters.

"We saw the train coming at a very fast clip, but we couldn't see the rest because of traffic," she said.

Willson and five demonstrators had stretched a banner across the tracks, said John Strece, one of the five.

Two nearest Willson managed to jump clear, but Willson didn't, he said.

"He was on his knees, forced backward and then dragged ... about 25 feet," Strece said.

"We thought he would stop," said Duncombe, 58. "Brian was in the middle. I jumped to one side, and Duncan (Murphy) to the other. Brian was caught in the middle."

The crew later was interviewed, and tests may be ordered, said Dan Tikalsky, a weapons center spokesman. "We are cooperating fully with the investigation," he said.

The engineer saw none of the tracks as far as I am aware," Cagle said.

He added that the investigation initially was hampered by the crew refusing to be interviewed and Navy officials some protesters jumped onto the tracks a short distance before the train struck Willson.

Teen admits guilt in Red Square flight

MOSCOW (AP) — The West German teen-ager whose daring flight to Red Square shook up the Soviet defense establishment told a Soviet court today, "I am aware of my guilt," but testified he was on a mission of peace.

Mathias Rust, a 19-year-old amateur pilot, faces up to 10 years in prison on charges of violating Soviet airspace and flight rules and "malicious hooliganism."

An attorney with the Soviet Association of Lawyers in Moscow, who is not connected with the trial, said Rust's statement was tantamount to a guilty plea under Soviet law. The attorney spoke on condition of anonymity.

The youth, wearing a blue suit coat over a blue sweater and light blue shirt, was escorted into the courtroom by two uniformed soldiers as the trial opened.

As he gave his first public account of the May 25 flight, Rust said he did not acknowledge guilt on the charge of "malicious hooliganism" because, he said, he never intended to harm anyone.

Rust said repeatedly that he had acted alone when he took off in a small plane from Helsinki, Finland, and made the audacious, low-level flight through some of the world's most tightly guarded airspace to the seat of Soviet power.

"My flight did not have any aggressive intentions," he said.

Rust, who had not been in the public since his arrest following the surprise flight, looked pale but spoke in a firm voice when he submitted that he did not have any aggressive intentions," he testified.

He said he chose to fly to Moscow because of the impact the publicity would have on world public opinion, but did not think about what he would do upon reaching the Soviet capital.

After he landed his plane between the Kremlin wall and St. Basil's Cathedral, he said, he saw what would happen next. I only thought about landing in Moscow. What would happen after, I practically didn't think about.

Rust's flight in a single-engine Cessna 172B from Helsinki, Finland, to Moscow stretched over 400 miles of heavily guarded Soviet territory.

Most of this morning's session was taken up by a reading of the charges against him in Russian. Rust listened to a German translation of the proceedings through a special earphone as he sat in front of a microphone, looking down.

In answer to a question from Presiding Judge Robert Tikhomirov, a member of the Soviet Supreme Court, Rust said: "I am aware of my guilt."

According to the reading of the charges, he told authorities the goal of his trip to the Soviet Union was to meet with Soviet leaders to discuss disarmament. Rust's parents, from a suburban Hamburg, had said previously their son had hoped to meet with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and plead for world peace.

The youth's flight turned him into a pop hero at home, but it seriously embarrassed Soviet leadership.

Shortly after Rust burst Lenin's tomb and landed his plane at Red Square, next to the Kremlin, air defense chief Marshal Alexander I. Koldunov was fired and Defense Minister Sergei L. Sokolov stepped down.

Mathias Margolis, a 45-year-old dog trainer and president of the National Institute of Dog Training in Monterey Park, volunteered to serve as a hearings officer. His approach to problem dogs is to correct the problem, not eliminate the dog, he said.

"I can ask questions that a judge does not have the knowledge to ask," said Margolis. "I speak 'dog-ese,' and I also speak English. And I like to think of myself as bridging the communication gap between dogs and people."

Margolis said he asked detailed questions about the complaint, usually a barking dog, to get a sense of the dispute and the people involved, the neighborhood and the pet itself.

Margolis also said he would follow up personally to be sure that the problem is remedied.

Six cases, involving huskies, German shepherds and other breeds were scheduled for hearings Tuesday, with complainants and defendants both required to appear.

In four of the cases, Margolis demonstrated how dogs could be trained not to bark, and pledged to work with both sides to resolve the problem.

MPOA's lawsuit does disservice

To the Editor:

It seems likely that Jordan Marsh will join the other four anchor tenants in the Buckland mall — if it is built. If everything goes right, there appear to be three options available to the current developer:

1. Start the Buckland mall construction in 1988.
2. Move back to South Windsor.
3. Abandon the whole idea.

The proposed referendum, if favorable, will further delay construction. If unfavorable, then the town of Manchester will probably lose the mall completely. Wouldn't that be too bad after all the time and effort our people have expended bringing to our town?

I believe the leadership of the Manchester Property Owners Association has done a great disservice by questioning the bond issue. What did they intend to gain? The final result could be the demise of the entire project. This would be a devastating blow to all citizens of Manchester.

If five people are against it, that means that there are still hundreds who are for it. Isn't a "silent" referendum good enough? Nobody seemed to object until the lawsuit was filed. Now, all of a sudden, people don't want it. Where were they two years ago? What's wrong with a large shopping mall in Manchester?

Our town manager and Board of Directors are to be commended for their actions. They did nothing wrong. They acted in the best interest of the town. They "interpreted" the law to allow them the right to arrange the bond issue without a referendum. A Superior Court judge "interpreted" the law otherwise. That is the way our government is run and I support it 100 percent. I can't understand why the MPOA questioned it in the first place. This project is good for the town. Why try to defeat it? If it were bad, I could understand why the MPOA would step in. Only time will tell. I hope we eventually get a mall in Manchester for all the good it will do. There were a lot of people against the J.C. Penney project but this has been a godsend to us. I believe Penney is the No. 1 taxpayer in town. What would our taxes have been without it?

This controversy could have been avoided if common sense were used, rather than challenge in court what would have been a well-planned and implemented maneuver to add something good for everyone East-of-the-River and certainly to all property owners and taxpayers in Manchester.

Game description incomplete at best

To the Editor:

The Herald's characterization of Laserquest is at best incomplete, at the worst misleading. In either case, it's poor reporting. And a disservice to the paper's readers.

The Herald reports that in Laserquest "players would carry an infrared laser beam device and walk down hallways and through hidden rooms where computer-controlled aliens and monsters would be waiting in the wings."

This sounds harmless enough. However, this game description inaccurately portrays Laserquest in the same passive amusement mode as a "funhouse," "laff in the dark," wax museum, etc. It falls to point out that in none of these traditional passive games does the player "carry a laser beam device."

Why carry an infrared laser beam device (as well as wear a light-sensitive jacket) when playing Laserquest? Why indeed? Because Laserquest is the first interactive amusement proposed for our town. A "game" that requires "players" communicate with "targets" via modulated infrared light beams and the "targets" (computer-controlled aliens) respond with the intent of reaction time and skill with a computer controlling the complexity of the "game" and keeping score.

This interactive nature of Laserquest is the description presented by the promoters and separates this amusement game from all others in Manchester. Failure of the Herald to repeatedly fail to mention this unique difference between Laserquest and traditional passive amusements is inexcusable. Your readers deserve accurate and complete factual reporting. Kindly provide them the full story so they may make an informed decision concerning opening Laserquest in their town.

Questions about death of children

To the Editor:

Why did those parents leave their children overnight in the car?

That was a disastrous thing to do. I, myself, can't figure it out and many more women say the same thing. I think they should be charged with murder and get what they deserve.

If a person went and killed a child, even had a car accident and killed a child, he or she would be brought into jail. Why are these parents being left free? Come on, what kind of laws do we have in this country? Arrest them and let's hear why they did what they did.

Capitol Comments

New Britain Mayor Bill McNamara is undergoing his biennial agony over renomination — challenged this time by two Democrats — but the city is expected to stay Democratic. Republicans see hope in Danbury, where Democratic Mayor Jim Dyer is under fire. Sources say, however, that he is taking unfair heat and will win re-election.

The brightest outlook for the GOP is in Norwich where a popular state legislator, Frank Esposito, is in a strong bid to succeed Democratic Mayor Bill Collins, who did not seek a fifth term.

Republicans are seen as likely winners in Middletown with Mayor Sebby Garafalo, in Torrington with Mayor Dee Donne, and in Fairfield with First Selectwoman Jackie Durrell. In East Lyme, GOP First Selectman Dennis Murphy doesn't have a Democratic opponent. Neither does George Guidara, running for the first time in Waterford for first selectman. Barbara Maynard is a strong bid to succeed Democratic Mayor Bill Collins, who did not seek a fifth term.

Former GOP State Chairman Jo McKenzie of Madison is to receive the Prescott Bush Award at her party's dinner in Stamford on Oct. 14. Lucie McKinney, widow of U.S. Rep. Stewart McKinney of Westport, is to receive the Penton Turner Award then as well.

Whatever happens to Fred Merrill, the Somers escapee, he has made the state's prison security system look absurd and begging for the most serious kind of review. This is one that calls for action, not face-saving talk.

Bond-issue education next step

Several residents spoke up during Tuesday's meeting in favor of the proposed millage rate in favor of the proposed bond issue.

"I'd like to tell you that there's a tremendous groundswell in support of the bond issue and the construction of a mall," said Richard Conti of Manchester. Conti is chairman of the town panel studying the creation of a fair-vest commission.

Seymour Kudlow of 81 Millford Road said that the mall would be a worthwhile risk for the town.

"We've got to take it or we'll be beaten to the punch by other towns," he said.

Both Conti and Kudlow said the leaflet was a good idea.

There was some debate Tuesday over whether the Republicans and Democratic parties should be allowed to distribute the leaflet along with their campaign literature.

Town Attorney John J. Cooney agreed to look into whether such action would be legal.

Gulf war escalates

ter Hussein Musavi as vowing today that Iran's policy of "slow flow" will be pursued in a calculated fashion.

The escalation of the so-called tanker war increases the threat to U.S. warships escorting reflagged Kuwaiti tankers through the gulf. Two groups of reflagged tankers were taking on oil in Kuwait today, and one convoy was expected to start its outbound trip through the gulf with U.S. warships shortly.

Gulf-based shipping executives expressed surprise at the unprecedented number of Iranian attacks on neutral shipping, from waters off the northern Saudi Arabian coast to the Strait of Hormuz.

"We have to expect more," said a Dubai-based shipping executive, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Shipping sources reported the attack on the Dajal and Loyd's London-based tanker, the Merinda, which was hit by an Iranian missile. The attack was the first since the Iran-Iraq war.

At dawn, an Iranian gunboat hit the Merinda with a 120-mm shell, causing a cargo ship Leonidas Glory with two rocket-propelled grenades, according to Loyd's and shipping sources operating together in the gulf.

The exact location of the attack on the Leonidas Glory, owned by Merinda Shipping Corp., could not immediately be determined.

Loyd's said two speedboats attacked the 10,416-ton Japanese-chartered tanker Merinda late Tuesday in the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the Persian Gulf, hitting it with two rockets. Shipping sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the attackers were Iranian.

The tanker, chartered by Nippon Yusen of Tokyo and registered in Liberia, headed for Dubai, according to Loyd's and the Japan Shipowners Association.

Earlier, an Iranian speedboat fired a rocket that struck the $2,000-ton South Korean tanker Astro Pegasus 40 miles off Dubai, United Arab Emirates, damaging a boiler, other gulf shipping sources said. The tanker was en route from Jubail to Singapore with Saudi petroleum products, they said.

Radio monitors said the 300-ton Spanish super-tanker Munguia sent a distress signal Tuesday when hit by rockets by one or two Iranian speedboats northeast of Bahrain in the central gulf.

The Iraqi targets are mainly tankers owned by Iran or chartered to shuttle crude oil from the Kharg Island oil terminal, at the head of the gulf, to a makeshift terminal at Larak Island, in the mouth of Hormuz.

Iran claimed it shot down three raiding aircraft Tuesday. It also reported retaliatory raids on military and industrial targets in Iraq.

Iraq denied losing any of its aircraft, but a Pentagon spokesman in Washington said the U.S. assault carrier Guadalcanal rescued an Iraqi pilot Monday from the gulf waters.

The United States agreed to provide U.S. Navy escorts to 11 Kuwaiti tankers in an Iranian-accused Kuwait of aiding Iraq.

Two directors object, but board OKs bigger water-service area

By Alex Girelli
Associate Editor

Despite strong objections from two directors, the Board of Directors Tuesday night approved a proposed service area for the town's water department that includes an expanded area in Glastonbury.

Republican Director Geoffrey Naab and Democratic Directors James F. Fogarty and Stephen T. Penny voted against the proposal after arguing that the town should not think about more service in Glastonbury.

The directors who voted in favor of the service-area designation argued that while the area can be reduced after the initial declaration, that is not being served now, the town's water supply to the regional Water Supply Coordinating Council, it cannot be expanded once the declaration is submitted.

Robert Young, superintendent of the water division, said that while lines from the town's Roaring Brook Reservoir in Glastonbury, which Manchester will have enough water to serve an expanded area in Glastonbury until a study is completed, he feels there will be enough.

Board alters budget procedure on when spending is recorded

A change in the town's budgeting procedures was accepted unanimously by the Board of Directors Monday night, but not before the directors questioned the town administration on whether the change would give department heads more spending authority than they now have.

Both Town Manager Robert Weiss and Boyce Spinelli, finance officer, initiated the procedural change, suggested to improve accounting procedures, would give department heads more control, not less, over spending.

Under the change, an expenditure would be recorded in the year the money is spent even if the commitment to spend it was made in the previous year.

Until now the town has kept the accounting open after the end of a fiscal year and recorded expenditures retroactively in the year of commitment, a practice Spinelli said is not in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

The directors voted to appropriate $42,240 to General Fund appropriations for the current year and $55,810 to water, sewer and fire funds. The money involved is for spending to which the town admin-

Mother jailed in death of son

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A woman whose 2-year-old son was found dead in her apartment has been sentenced to six months in jail, while a public defender said a state agency had abandoned its responsibility toward her.

Wilhelmina Holby, who pleaded guilty to risk of injury to a minor, was sentenced Tuesday by New Haven Superior Court Judge Paul Foti. Holby already had a criminal record for the jail term while awaiting disposition of the case.

"During nine years on the bench, I've read many presentencing reports, and this is one of the most terrible I have read," Foti said.

School bells ring sour notes for students caught smoking

Back-to-school bells rang sour notes for eight Manchester High School students who were suspended Tuesday after violating the Board of Education's new ban on smoking. said Jacob Ludes III, MHS principal.

Most of the high school's 1,800 students did observe the new policy, which went into effect Tuesday, the first day of school, Ludes said.

"It went very well," he said. "By and large, the students are very supportive of it." He said the school mailed out information about the new policy to all students and their parents last week.

Ludes would not release the names of the suspended students, but said all were caught smoking outside the school. The students will serve a one-day, in-school suspension and the school will notify their parents.

This morning, there was even less evidence of students disobeying the new policy. There have not been any new suspensions in the early hours of school this morning, he said.

"I've been around the building for about an hour," Ludes said, "and I didn't see any butts around at all."

The policy does not ban faculty and visitors from smoking, though. School personnel are permitted to smoke in designated areas at certain times, and never in the presence of students, according to the new policy.

Last year students were allowed to smoke outside MHS in designated areas. Students were not permitted to smoke inside the high school.

Elton A. Johnson

Elton A. Johnson, 82, of Meriden, formerly of Manchester, died Tuesday at Meriden-Wallingford Hospital. He was the husband of Beulah (Smith) Johnson.

He was born in Manchester July 10, 1905, and lived in town until moving to Meriden 13 years ago.

Before retiring, he was employed as a manager of various departments at the former J.W. Hale Corp., in Manchester where he worked for 41 years. He was a member of the First United Methodist Church in Meriden, the Manchester Lodge of Masons, Delta Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, and the Adoniram Council of Masons in Ellington. He was a volunteer at the Masonic Home and Hospital in Wallingford for many years.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a son, Lawrence W. Johnson of Stamford, a daughter, Virginia J. Lewis of Trumbull, a sister, Elaine J. Keeney of Talcoville, and four grandchildren.

The funeral is Friday at 10:30 a.m. at the First United Methodist Church in Meriden. Burial services are Friday at 2 p.m. at the family plot in East Cemetery. There are no calling hours. The Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St., is in charge of arrangements.

Memorial donations may be made to the Masonic Home and Hospital, Masonic Avenue, Wallingford 06492, or to a charity of the donor's choice.

Southington man was crash victim

HARTFORD (AP) — A man killed in an accident that stalled traffic on Interstate 91 for 84 hours early Tuesday was identified as Lee C. Curtis, 38, of Southington, State police said today.

State police spokeswoman Mary Stamm said Curtis was driving north at 4 a.m. in a truck that burst into flames after being struck by a southbound van which crossed into its path.

No charges were filed against the van's driver, identified as Ronald Chandler, 33, of Hartford, pending an investigation.

The highway was completely shut down and portions were not reopened until 9:30 a.m.

U.S. world-record hurdler Edwin Moses is just ahead of Harald Schmid of West Germany and Danny Harris of the U.S. (right to left) as they cross the finish line in the final of the 400-meter hurdle event Tuesday in Rome. Moses won the gold and defended his title. Harris was second and Schmid was third.

Moses fights to keep hurdles title

ROME (AP) — It was the most difficult race of Edwin Moses' life, but when it was over, there were no doubts who is the best intermediate hurdler in the world.

Moses, the two-time Olympic champion and the world-record holder, had to fight all the way to successfully defend his 400-meter hurdles title at the World Track and Field Championships Tuesday.

A photo finish separated Moses from fellow American Danny Harris and West German Harald Schmid, two of only three men who had beaten him in the past 11 years.

"It was the toughest race ever in my career and I came out a winner," Moses said. "This win erased all the doubts, questions, disputes of this long season. It proves that I am still on top."

Moses nearly surrendered the lead he had taken at the start, but held on to post the best time in the world this year, 47.46 seconds.

Harris and Schmid were both timed in 47.46, but the photo awarded the silver medal to the American. Schmid equaled his own European record set in 1982, and Harris clocked his personal best.

Later Tuesday, Jackie Joyner-Kersey won the second gold medal for the U.S. team but narrowly missed breaking her own heptathlon world record when she faltered in the last race of the seven-discipline event, the 800 meters.

Joyner-Kersey was on world-record pace after six events but two days of competition in the sweltering heat and high humidity finally took its toll.

By the day belonged to Moses the "old man," as he calls himself.

Moses, who celebrated his 32nd birthday Monday, set a punishing pace but paid the price for it when he was nearly caught by Harris and Schmid at the finish line.

Moses exploded from the blocks and was in the lead at the first hurdle. He was still ahead clearing the last hurdle, but Harris and Schmid were breathing down his neck.

UConn firepower as UConn ties

Soccer opener with Adelphi ends with a frustrating 1-1

By Jim Terrey
Herald Sports Writer

STORRS — Season openers are generally key indicators reflecting on preseason expectations and doubts.

For the 1987 University of Connecticut soccer team Tuesday afternoon's opening game with Adelphi University confirmed one of the team's strengths: an absence of offensive firepower.

Battling it out for 110 minutes, including two 10-minute overtime sessions, UConn tied the match 1-1 before a crowd of 1,956 at the Connecticut Soccer Stadium. It was the first game of the season for both clubs.

"I was pleased with our play overall," said Joe Morrone, UConn head soccer coach for 19 years. "I think that one of our concerns at the beginning of the year was lack of scoring. Certainly, we continued to make good chances for ourselves, but couldn't put the ball in the back of the net and that's frustrating."

The visiting Panthers, who started six foreigners and used mainly the starters throughout the match, proved to be a talented group and actually got on the scoreboard first with a goal at the 31:58 mark of the first half. Treelie, a native of the Dublin, Ireland, led Paul Howarth on the fringe of the penalty area. Howarth's shot was knocked out by UConn sophomore goalie Tom Foley, but freshman Dominic Pascarella gathered the rebound from Foley and deposited it into the back of the net.

"I'm kind of upset that we didn't get the win," Donigan said. "But it's better than a loss. There were flashes in the game where we put a couple of nice passes together where we got some (scoring) opportunities. I guess we have to work on our finish. We only give one goal that was set up good."

Morrone sees the foreign influence a great one. "Adelphi has half a dozen foreign-born players," he said. "Again, we can see the difference in the foreign-born player's skill techniques and his tactical awareness. Fortunately, for us, they tired. Fortunately, for us, we were able to control them and get back in the game."

HUSKY NOTES — UConn's next game is Friday at home at 4 p.m. against Drexel University. UConn and Adelphi each had 18 shots on goal. The Panthers drew the first six corners in the game while they were caught only once. UConn leads the series with Adelphi 2-0-3. Morrone has 548 wins in his career at UConn. Foley made four saves while Mattson recorded eight. Brian Milne, a 1986 graduate of Manchester High School, did not see any action. Diego Borja and Lolo, both star-tying players, were relegated to reserve duty Tuesday.

Players charge NFL tries to break union

WASHINGTON (AP) — The executive director of the NFL Players Association says recent actions by the league's management have violated a promise that a contract agreement between the sides can be reached without a strike.

NFLPA executive director Gene Upshaw charged management Tuesday with "trying to break up the union" after the New England Patriots informed NFLPA vice president Brian Holloway that he could either retire or be traded.

Later Tuesday, the Patriots sent Holloway to the Los Angeles Raiders for an undisclosed draft choice next year.

Holloway, an offensive tackle, had appeared on national television Monday night, where he firmly stated the union's side of the issues hours after the NFLPA executive committee set a strict strike deadline. Tuesday morning the Patriots told the three-time Pro Bowler that his services were no longer available.

Patriots Coach Raymond Berry claimed the move was strictly football-related, saying he was "convinced" he had to "make a change" at the left tackle position.

"I think it is necessary, because of the timing, to make a clear point. This decision has absolutely nothing to do with (Holloway's) union activities," Berry said in a prepared statement released by the Patriots.

Upshaw was furious.

"Four years ago I've certain we could settle on a new contract without a strike," he said. "I still think that's possible, but every time management takes an action like this, my optimism turns more toward pessimism."

Upshaw said he also resented the fact that management is offering $1,000 to players they cut on the condition they will return if there is a strike.

"What type of signal does this send?" Upshaw asked. "First they come up with the 'yellow dog' contracts, paying guys they cut $1,000 to agree to play in case of a strike. Then they do this to Brian. I know things would get rough, but this is worse than I expected."

Despite what Upshaw called "bad blood" between the parties, the first round of negotiations since Aug. 14 was set to resume today or Thursday. John Jones, a spokesman for the NFL Management Council, said only a few people from each side would be involved in the talks, the location of which was not disclosed.

In the wake of the Holloway incident, the union is expected to press its case on its long-standing request that the owners ensure protection for player representatives.

Holloway, an England's player representative, was given an ultimatum even though he had been the Patriots' starting left tackle throughout the preseason.

Upshaw said the Patriots' action "had nothing to do with Brian" and that he had no intention of making a change. He said the NFLPA was considering taking legal action to protect Holloway's rights.

"If this isn't an obvious attempt to break up the union, what is?" Upshaw said. "It's one of the most arrogant acts I've ever seen."

Upshaw said the action against Holloway backs up his contention that the job of a player representative is "a risk to the business."

Upshaw said player representatives Marvin Powell, Carl Weathers and Johnny Lynn have all been affected by their union ties.

Wilkison builds up lead, but Becker storms back

NEW YORK (AP) — Pinned to the ropes by a scrappy court fighter, with most of the crowd rooting against him, Boris Becker showed he can get tough.

"I was going to make him beat me," Becker said.

Tim Wilkison couldn't.

On opening night Tuesday at the U.S. Open, Wilkison built a two-set lead, only to see Becker storm back for a 4-6, 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-2 victory. It was the first time in his career that the fourth seed from West Germany successfully overcame such a deficit.

And he did it against a National Tennis Center crowd favorite. Last year, Wilkison was the only American to make the quarterfinals. His scrambling, diving style is reminiscent of Becker's, and the fans loved the lunging and all-out aggression from both players.

"It is definitely a mental boost," Becker said of the 4-hour, 3-minute victory. "The guys I play in the rounds know they're reading 'I'm not dead yet.'"

Wilkison also knew Becker wasn't out of the match.

Becker's guys could come back, but he knew he had a chance," Wilkison said. "He was just thinking he was out of the match, and I knew it." Barry Moor never was in his match with Ivan Lendl.

Lendl, the two-time defending champion, blanked the South African 6-0, 6-0, 6-0, the first three-set shutout in Open history. Lendl said it was the first time he had done it as a pro.

Martina Navratilova, the women's defending

Boris Becker aprawns on the court after slipping Tuesday night in his marathon opening match in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships in New York. Becker, two-time Wimbledon champion, outlasted Tim Wilkison 4-6, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4, 6-2.

Tim Wilkison of Asheville, N.C., claims a bit to Boris Becker at the start of the third set of their opening match in New York Tuesday night. Wilkison took the first two sets but Becker stormed back to win.

With positive outlook, Conn gridders eager to begin

By Jim Tierney
Herold Sports Writer

STORRS — No longer will the University of Connecticut football program be taken for granted.

Coming off an excellent 8-3 campaign a year ago and a share of the Yankee Conference title with Delaware and Massachusetts, the 1987 UConn gridders are eager for this season to begin. UConn, along with having its first winning season since 1980, was also ranked No. 18 in the final Division I-AA poll, just missing a berth in the 16-team NCAA I-AA playoffs.

UConn was a perfect 5-0 at home last year.

Twenty-two of 24 starters from last year's club return to the Husky lineup. Defensively, all 11 starters from 1986 will be back. They're led by senior middle guard Nate Colton (74 tackles), senior linebacker

Mike Jensen (team-leading 139 tackles in 1986), and senior strong safety Scott Daniels, a first-team UPI All-New England pick.

"Nate's a great football player," fifth-year UConn head coach Tom Jackson said Tuesday at a press luncheon. "He's certainly going to be a contender for postseason honors, not regionally, but nationally."

"Abbot Burrell is probably the most improved player in our program since he came here as a freshman," Jackson said.

The Husky offense is led by the dynamic Antrun brother combination of fullback Terry and split end Glenn. Both are seniors from Ansonia. Glenn Antrun caught 43 passes in 1986 for 840 yards and three touchdowns while Glenn rushed for 351 yards on 62 carries (5.7 yards per carry average).

Senior David Dunn, who had 87 receptions last year (the tied single-season school record) for 864 yards, needs only nine catches to become the all-time leading receiver in Husky history. Joining Dunn at flanker will be junior Mike Adams. Senior Scott Switzer rounds out the UConn receiving corps.

Giving ample aid to Terry Antrun in the backfield will be junior tailback Jeff Gallaher (592 yards, five TD's), sophomore George Boothe and sophomore Mark Landolf.

"With Glenn, Adams, and Dunn, you have as fine a group of wide-outs as we've had," Jackson said. "Scott Switzer is a great player, an overachiever."

Referring to the UConn backs, Jackson was very pleased. "(Jeff) Gallaher has the chance to become as good a tailback as we've ever had," he said. "And you have a pretty solid 1-2 punch in Terry Antrun and Mark Landolf."

Boothe, Dunn, and Adams will return kicks and punts while junior punter Jim Carriere returns along with junior placekicker Mark Carter.

Injuries have beset the Husky offensive line, namely David Franke, Pat Margiotta and John Lawlor. However, UConn still has the services of senior left guard Pat Anglin, who Jackson called "as good a blocker as there is in the

Streaking Giants rout Expos

NL Roundup

They really put the wood to Rick Reuschel in his second start with the San Francisco Giants last Sunday. But Tuesday night he was back on the beam.

"I could tell tonight that Rick had his good stuff again," outfielder Kevin Mitchell said after watching Reuschel pitch the streaking Giants to a 14-4 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Reuschel, 10-7, allowed six hits, struck out seven and walked none, retiring the last 11 batters he faced in his third start since being acquired from Pittsburgh in an Aug. 21 trade. The veteran right-hander has walked only three batters in his last 10 starts.

Reds 7, Cardinals 4

Dave Concepcion broke a tie with an RBI double and Buddy Bell hit a three-run homer one out later in the seventh inning as Cincinnati beat St. Louis and snapped the Cardinals' six-game winning streak.

Phillies 7, Dodgers 5

Lance Parrish hit a two-run homer and Von Hayes singled twice to score twice as Philadelphia defeated Los Angeles.

Cubs 3, Astros 2

Andre Dawson and Shawn Dunston each hit an RBI double as Chicago beat Houston in a game that featured the ejection of Houston's leading hitter Billy Hatcher, for using an illegal bat.

Braves 4, Pirates 0

Zane Smith pitched a four-hitter for his seventh win in his last eight starts and Ted Simmons hit a two-run homer, powering Atlanta over Houston.

Mariners 8, Orioles 0

Scott Bankhead pitched two-hit ball for seven innings and Ken Griffey Jr. hit a two-run homer as Seattle won in Baltimore.

Red Sox 9, Twins 0

Jeff Sellers pitched a five-hitter and Wade Boggs and Mike Greenwell homered leading Boston past Minnesota at the Metrodome.

Rangers 6, White Sox 4

Pete Incaviglia hit a two-run homer, single and an RBI double that broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning, leading Texas over Chicago.

Athletics 8, Yankees 3

Dwayne Murphy, Jose Canseco and Terry Steinbach hit home runs as Oakland won at Yankee Stadium.

FOCUS/Food

Picture-perfect muffins are tender, even-textured and slightly rounded on top. For best results, follow these tips:

- Standard muffin pans have cups that are 2 1/2 inches in diameter. Shiny metal muffin pans are best for browning muffins.
- Measure ingredients accurately. For dry ingredients, use a graduated measuring cup set; for liquids, use a glass or plastic measuring cup with a pouring lip.
- Always stir dry ingredients together for even distribution unless recipe directs otherwise.
- Don't over-mix; stir for just a few strokes until dry ingredients are moistened. Batter should be lumpy, not smooth.
- Grease only the bottoms of muffin-pan cups for nicely shaped muffins.
- After spooning batter into muffin-pan cups, wipe off any spills on pan.
- Half-fill any empty cups with water so that the grease doesn't burn onto the empty muffin-pan cups.
- Turn muffins out of their cups shortly after they are baked, or they will become soggy.
- Muffins are best fresh from the oven. Always serve warm and reheat if necessary. Muffins can be frozen and reheated.
- Be creative: 1/2 cup of dried fruit or cereal can be added to most muffin recipes without changing the size or shape.

Quantity Cheddar Muffins

Fruit, cheese and corn cereal team together for a muffin that's a perfect accompaniment to a hearty soup or crisp salad.

- 1 cup nutri-grain corn cereal
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 3/4 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 1 cup milk
- 1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
- Two-thirds cup dried fruit bits

1. Crush cereal to 1/4 cup. Stir together cereal, flour, baking powder, salt and paprika.
 2. Cut in butter to make a coarse meal. Add egg, milk, cheese and Fruit Bits, stirring only until dry ingredients are moistened.
 3. Portion batter evenly into 12 greased 2 1/2-inch muffin pan cups. Bake at 425 degrees F for 20 minutes or until tests done. Remove from pans. Serve warm.
- Yield: 12 muffins

Quantity Tiger Muffins

Children and adults alike will enjoy this special sweet treat as a change from traditional muffins. They are g-r-r-r-eat!

- 2 cups frosted flakes cereal
- 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 1/2 cup semi-sweet chocolate morsels, melted

1. Crush frosted flakes cereal to 1 cup. Stir together cereal, flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Set aside.
 2. In large mixing bowl stir together egg, milk and oil. Add flour mixture, stirring just until moistened.
 3. Drizzle melted chocolate over batter. With a knife, swirl chocolate through batter. Do not over-mix. Portion batter evenly into 12 greased 2 1/2-inch muffin-pan cups.
 4. Bake at 400 degrees about 20 minutes or until tests done. Remove from pans. Serve warm.
- Yield: 12 muffins

Bran 'N' Fruit Muffins

A fruity, fiber-rich muffin just right to accompany any meal or satisfy a hungry appetite.

- 1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/4 cups bran or bran buds cereal
- 1 1/4 cups milk
- 1 egg
- 1/2 cup vegetable oil
- 1 cup dried fruit bits

1. Stir together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Set aside.
2. Measure bran cereal and milk into large mixing bowl. Stir to combine. Let stand 1 to 2 minutes or until cereal is softened. Add egg and oil. Beat well.
3. Add flour mixture, stirring only until combined. Fold in dried fruit bits portion batter evenly into 12 greased 2 1/2-inch muffin-pan cups.
4. Bake at 400 degrees about 20 minutes or until tests done. Remove from pans. Serve warm.

Yield: 12 muffins.

Variations: 2 1/4 cups bran flakes cereal may be substituted for bran cereal.
To reduce calories, fat, sodium and sugar: Use 2 tablespoons sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons vegetable oil. Use skim milk in place of whole milk.

Sesame Ginger Muffins

Sesame seed and ginger give these fruit and fiber-filled muffins a crunchy, flavorful topping.

- 1 cup bran flakes
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- One-third cup sugar
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ginger
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 cup fruit bits
- 1 egg
- 1 cup milk
- One-third cup melted shortening
- Sesame ginger topping

1. Crush bran flakes cereal to 1/2 cup. Stir together cereal, flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and spices. Add fruit bits.
 2. In large mixing, bowl beat egg slightly. Stir in milk and shortening. Add dry ingredients, stirring only until dry ingredients are moistened.
 3. Portion batter evenly into 12 greased 2 1/2-inch muffin-pan cups. Sprinkle with sesame ginger topping.
 4. Bake at 425 degrees for 20 minutes, or until tests done. Remove from pans. Serve warm.
- Yield: 12 muffins.

Combine 1 tablespoon sesame seed, 1 tablespoon sugar and 1/2 teaspoon ginger.

Confetti Lemon Muffins

Delicately flavored with the zest of lemon, these delightful muffins are an ideal hot bread for a wide variety of luncheon or brunch menus.

- 1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Two-thirds cup dried fruit bits
- 1 egg
- Two-thirds cup milk
- 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- One-third cup shortening, melted
- Lemon Sugar Topping

1. Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Add Fruit Bits.
2. Beat egg slightly. Stir in milk, lemon peel, lemon juice and shortening. Add to dry ingredients stirring only until dry ingredients are moistened.
3. Portion batter evenly into 12 greased 2 1/2-inch muffin-pan cups. Sprinkle with Lemon Sugar Topping.
4. Bake at 400 degrees about 20 minutes or until tests done. Remove from pans. Serve warm.

Yield: 12 muffins

- 1/2 cup flour
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel

Combine flour with sugar. Cut in butter. Stir in lemon peel.

Advice

Don't broadcast your vacation plans

DEAR ABBY: Please think twice before advising your vacation plans to stop their newspaper deliveries when they leave town for vacations. Friends of ours were robbed that way. Someone at the newspaper office passed that information along to a thief who broke into their home and picked them clean during "Do Not Deliver" dates.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Whenever we leave town, we ask a trusted neighbor to pick up our newspapers, and we do the same for them when they go on vacation. BEING CAREFUL

DEAR BEING CAREFUL: Many others wrote to suggest that I warn readers against telling strangers the exact dates of their departure and return.

One reader wrote that several burglaries were traced to a post office employee who had been selling the names of families who had requested that their mail be held during specific dates.

Far better to enlist the cooperation of a friend, relative or trusted neighbor to pick up all newspapers, packages and mail delivered during your absence.

DEAR DIANE: Thanks for a timely item that may save countless toes, feet, and possibly lives.

DEAR DIANE: I am writing in reply to a letter from "Counting by the Now" who spent thousands of dollars and weeks of pain following a tragic accident with a power lawn mower. To address the problem of 60,000 mowing accidents a year, the American Red Cross developed a two-hour lawn mower safety course titled "Knowing Mowing." It includes the safety features of a power lawn mower, maintenance, emergency first aid, and an obstacle course to practice new skills. Too many people who have used a power mower for years think it can never happen to them. "Counting by the Now" pointed out how easily such an accident can happen to an experienced and careful mower.

Abby, please advise men, women and children to contact their local chapter of the American Red Cross to sign up for a class. Or better yet, volunteer to learn how to teach this simple, fun course that can save needless pain and tragedy.

Doc's advice on chest pain is crazy

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had chest pain off and on for two weeks, and then it became permanent. It's quite severe and is centered in the center of my chest and left shoulder, and my left arm is weak and tingling.

I went to the doctor; he told me to go home and rest and down the stairs. My concern is that I might be dead before a diagnosis is made. What do you think?

DEAR READER: Your doctor's response was so bizarre and inappropriate that, when I first read your question, I thought you were putting me on. The symptom you have - chest pain - can indicate a serious condition.

undergo immediate testing, preferably in a hospital, to determine the cause of your pain.

The pain you described also could have a cardiac basis other than angina. For example, it could indicate pericarditis, inflammation of the pericardium, the thin envelope that covers the heart.

Pericarditis is common in young and middle-aged adults. It often produces pain that mimics angina. As the inflammation around the heart increases, fluid may form under the pericardium, causing progressive pressure on the heart, cardiac failure or collapse. Rest is imperative for treatment, so your doctor again missed the mark by telling you to exercise.

lung. This condition is also common in young adults. Tiny holes can form in the membrane covering the lung. Air leaks out of these holes and fills the space outside the lung, inside the chest cavity. Since this air cannot be expelled, it builds up and causes progressive lung collapse, pain and shortness of breath. Exercise is out of the question because it increases the amount of pneumothorax. Hospitalization is necessary; if the rent in the lung covering does not heal quickly and the lung does not re-expand, doctors may have to insert a plastic tube or needle in the chest cavity to remove the air and allow the lung to re-inflate.

Although your chest pain may have a simple and harmless cause, such as strain to the chest-wall muscles, your doctor was doing you no favors by adopting such a cavalier attitude. Chest pain in a patient of any age should be thoroughly and carefully investigated; this is a symptom that should not be disregarded. Don't touch that doctor with a 10-foot pole; he and his patients are going to get into serious trouble sooner or later.

Since you seem to need a new doctor, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report, "Choosing a Good Health. Others who want information on the subject should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91889, Cleveland, OH 44101-3889. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Choosing a Physician.

Frauds play on you daily, just like P.T. Barnum said

Sylvia Porter

Typical material is a: "This health insurance plan covers all hospital costs..."
 My response: Yes, but is maternity or well-baby care covered? Do you have to be sick first? So many times even the fine print only refers to a master policy you never see.

Typical ad: "Checking is free if your balance averages $3,000..."
 My response: Sure, but every canceled check can take three weeks and $10. Explain that to the IRS, MasterCard or your landlord, none of whom has any record of your payments.

Typical ad: "This stereo is fully guaranteed..."
 My response: Granted, but if you want it fixed quickly and easily, please fork over another $100 for an insurance policy on the item you just bought!

New drug lowers cholesterol

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new drug offering hope for millions of Americans who can't — or won't — reduce their cholesterol levels by diet and exercise will be on the market in a few weeks.

Although the drug, lovastatin, was Food and Drug Administration approved Tuesday as a treatment of last resort, the availability of such a treatment offers an alternative to physicians whose patients are at high risk of heart attack and stroke because of too much cholesterol in their blood.

These are examples of frauds played on you daily. They can and do happen to you in variations too numerous to list, underlying once again the old cliche of P.T. Barnum that a sucker is born every minute. The cliche has a new modern ultra-high-tech sound in this, the final 13 years of the 20th century.

What can you do? If you are too tired or too hassled to object, you can just pay what you are told and keep quiet. If you still have the reflex to move even possible extra charge you can imagine before buying so you know the real, not just the nominal

Job-seekers lying about experience

NEW YORK (AP) — A third of applicants lie about their experience in applying for a job, according to a recent study. Researchers say well-designed questionnaires and the use of computers could help prevent such deceit.

The study found that 76 of 221 applicants "claimed to have experience performing a non-existent task," says Ron Pannone, supervisor of personnel research for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey.

July reports issued Tuesday by the Commerce Department showed a 0.5 percent increase in leading indicators, signaling moderate economic growth; a 0.2 percent decline in construction spending, the second consecutive monthly decline; and a 0.2 percent drop in factory orders, the first decline in six months.

Reverse stock split decreases number of shares outstanding

QUESTION: Please explain a "reverse split." How does this come about? Do stockholders vote on it?

ANSWER: As the term indicates, a reverse split is the opposite of a regular stock split. A regular split increases the number of shares of a stock company has outstanding. Do stockholders vote on it?

Reverse stock split decreases number of shares outstanding

QUESTION: A couple of months ago, my broker told me that one of the stocks I have with her brokerage firm in street name was going to have a one-for-two reverse split. I asked if I would receive confirmation of that. She said I would.

ANSWER: You don't get a confirmation statement, such as you receive when you buy or sell securities. But you should have received official notification of the reverse split.

Volcker pinched pennies on and off the job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul A. Volcker Jr., whose tight money policies at the Federal Reserve Board helped tame double-digit inflation, exercised financial austerity at home as well, regularly cutting his laundry list in expenses to his daughter's house, according to a new book.

In a biography of the former Fed chief to be published later this month, journalist William R. Neilnik quotes family members and friends who describe the world's most powerful banker as a dedicated penny-pincher.

Volcker pinched pennies on and off the job

Volcker drove automobiles until they fell apart, railed about the high cost of Washington restaurants, only smoked cheap cigars and lived frugally in an apartment cluttered with newspapers, cigar butts and hand-died fishing flies, Neilnik wrote.

"His clothes are kind of rumpled up. He really doesn't care a lot about his appearance. He's just sort of cheap," Volcker's daughter, Janice, is quoted as saying in "Volcker: Portrait of the Money Man."

Business In Brief

Dollar's drop triggers stock plunge

NEW YORK — A weakening dollar and a slump in the credit markets have shocked Wall Street again, pushing stock prices sharply lower on fears of higher interest rates.

Tuesday's declines occurred chiefly in a late-afternoon slump that saw the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fall 51.98 points to 3,610.97. The drop was the fifth-worst daily point loss ever for the widely watched index.

In the broader market, about two stocks on the New York Stock Exchange declined in price for every one that rose.

After rising moderately for much of Tuesday's session, stocks turned sharply lower in late trading in response to falling bond prices.

Bond prices, which move inversely to interest rates, dropped because of weakness in the dollar. That also raises the possibility that the Federal Reserve Board might attempt to move interest rates higher to help support the currency. Higher interest rates could slow the economy, depressing corporate profits.

Alvord to head merged bank firm

HARTFORD — Manchester native Joel R. Alvord will become president and chief executive officer of a new super-regional bank holding company, Shawmut National Corp., upon consummation of a proposed merger between Hartford National Corp. and Shawmut Corp.

An agreement between Hartford National and Shawmut, announced Aug. 25, calls for a merger of equals, subject to shareholder and regulatory approval.

The new financial services company will maintain co-headquarters in Boston and Hartford, Alvord, currently president and chief executive officer of Hartford National Corp., will hold the same positions in the new company.

Alvord joined Connecticut National Bank in 1963. He became an officer of the bank in 1965, a vice president in 1967, and executive vice president in 1976. In January, 1978, he was elected president of both the bank and Hartford National Corp. In April 1986, he was elected chairman and chief executive officer of the bank; and in October 1986, he became chief executive officer of Hartford National Corp.

A native of Manchester, Alvord was educated at Loomis Chaffee School, Dartmouth College and its Amos Tuck School, where he received a master's degree in business administration. Alvord is married to the former Mrs. Susan Alvord of Manchester. They have two children and now live in Glastonbury.

Dollar falls, gold up in Europe

LONDON — The dollar fell in quiet European trading today, while gold prices rose.

In Asian trading, the dollar continued its fall against the Japanese yen. Despite Japanese central bank intervention, dealers said.

The dollar closed at 141.13 yen in Tokyo, down 0.47 yen from Tuesday's close of 141.60 yen. Its closing was its lowest since 140.93 yen on May 25.

Later, in London, it was quoted at 141.05 yen.

In London, the British pound rose and was quoted at $1,646.00, compared with $1,640.00 Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $455.50 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $453.00. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $458.55.

In Zurich, the bid price was $456.20, up from $454.00 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $3.55 an ounce to close at $454.44, compared to Tuesday's $450.89.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $7.60 a troy ounce, up from Tuesday's $7.415.
