Ex-principal better known as a farmer

By Jacqueline Bennett
Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — For years, Clarence Edmondson has been well-known as Coventry's resident pumpkin farmer. Each October, the Edmondson farm on Route 44 becomes a celebration of Halloween and autumn, with pumpkins in every shape and size.

For just as many years, however, Edmondson, 54, has been moonlighting as the principal of George Hersey Robertson School. He retired this summer.

"I grew up on this farm, this house was the barn," said Edmondson during a recent interview at his home.

Soon after he was born in 1932, his family moved from Manchester to Coventry. "My four brothers and I worked our way through college milking cows — we were poor," he said.

He and his wife, Nancy, have been married for 30 years, and have three children: Paul, 27, Peter, 26, and Bonnie, 23.

In the spring of 1954, "Coy" as he is called by his friends, graduated from Willimantic State Teachers College, now Eastern Connecticut State University. That fall he began as a fourth-grade teacher at Robertson School.

"I taught the afternoon session. I had 36 students and shared a room," said Edmondson. "We've come a long way since then."

Edmondson served two years in the U.S. Army, then returned to the Coventry school system. He has been principal of George Hersey Robertson School for 31 years.

Though he pursued a career in education, Edmondson farmed so he would have money to send his children to college. In addition to the pumpkins, the Edmondsons also raise strawberries and raspberries.

He admits he fell into teaching and farming, but ended up enjoying both. "The last three to five years as principal have been the most exciting," he said, his eyes lighting up. "We brought in a new language program to help children with learning disabilities. We also began new math and writing programs."

There have been some frustrations, he acknowledged, including the public opposition to building new schools and long overdue raises for educators.

It is apparent the decision to retire was a difficult one for him. Edmondson said he will most miss his "dedicated and talented staff, and the children."

"I have worked with him since my arrival in 1984," said Nathan Chesler, school superin-endent. "He brought in a lot of programs, language, math, and reading. He is liked by a large number of staff and parents, and he will be missed."

Edmondson plans to use his retirement to get some things done that he couldn't get done before, and continue farming. "I'd have been starting back to work today

— instead I'm painting the house," he said this week.

"The kids are all grown now, so we'll probably cut back on the raspberries and strawberries," said Edmondson, as he admired a hummingbird in his garden outside. "But the pumpkins will still be there in the fall."

Fed gets tough against inflation

Increase in discount rate will push interest rates up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve, signaling a tough stance against inflation under new Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan, announced today it was increasing its discount rate, the interest it charges on loans to U.S. financial institutions, from 5.5 percent to 6 percent.

The increase, the first in more than three years, is effective immediately.

In a brief statement, the Fed said its decision "reflects the intent of the Federal Reserve to deal effectively and in a timely way with potential inflationary pressures."

The last increase in the discount rate came on April 9, 1984, when it moved from 5.5 percent to 9 percent. Since then the rate has been cut seven successive times, with the last reduction occurring a year ago on Aug. 20, 1986, when it dropped from 6 percent to 5.5 percent.

The boost in the discount rate was likely to push a variety of interest rates, including mortgage rates, higher in the weeks ahead.

The announcement by the Fed on the discount rate was followed almost immediately by announcements by two large New York banks, Chase Manhattan Bank and Chemical Bank, that they were raising their prime business lending rates one-half percentage point to 8.75 percent from 8.25 percent.

The increase in the discount rate came after a three-week slide in the value of the dollar on foreign currency exchanges. Many analysts had expected the Fed would be forced to act to stabilize the falling dollar by pushing up interest rates in the United States.

Higher rates in this country make dollar-denominated investments more popular with foreigners, who now hold a sizable percentage of U.S. debt.

This interest rate scenario is similar to what happened last spring when investor worries about inflation caused the dollar to decline on foreign exchange markets. This led to a slump in bond markets that pushed interest rates sharply higher.

The Fed's decision to raise the discount rate was approved on a 4-0 vote with two board members, Martha Seeger and Robert Heller, absent.

The action was the first significant move the central bank has made since Greenspan replaced Paul Volcker as chairman on Aug. 11.

An increase in the discount rate is the most dramatic move the central bank can make to signal its intentions to push rates higher as a way of keeping a curb on inflationary pressures in the economy.

One of the major forces that has been pushing up prices this year has been the falling dollar, which boosts the cost Americans must pay for foreign products.

The Reagan administration, beginning in September 1985, pursued a policy of pushing the dollar lower as a way of reducing the huge U.S. foreign trade deficits. Administration officials hoped that higher costs for imports would reduce Americans' appetite for foreign products while at the same time making U.S. products more competitive on overseas markets.

While this strategy appears to be working, the turnaround took much longer than expected and has a downside of increasing inflationary pressures in the United States.

Economists had said that one of the key problems Greenspan would face in his early months as Fed chairman was what to do to defend the dollar if it began falling again.

Economists said the financial markets would be closely watching to see whether Greenspan acted to tighten credit conditions to dispel any fears that he might not be as independent of political pressures from a Republican White House as Volcker was.

More work but jobless rate steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans working swelled by more than a third of a million last month to a record 113 million, but the unemployment rate held steady at 6 percent due to a nearly identical rise in the labor force, the government said today.

Some 384,000 more Americans took home a paycheck in August than in July, but the civilian labor force — those either working or actively looking for jobs — grew by 350,000, the Labor Department said.

The number of jobless workers fell last month to 7,221,000, a decrease of 3,000 from July, when it had reached the lowest level it had been since April 1986, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

Over the past 15 months, the jobless rate has gradually edged its way down from 7.2 percent without a single blip upwards. The last time the unemployment rate was lower was in November 1979, when it stood at 5.9 percent.

An alternate rate that includes 1.7 million uniformed members of the armed forces stationed in the United States in the calculations also remained unchanged at 5.9 percent.

In the last year, the economy has created nearly 2.5 million new jobs, 155,000 in August alone.

Iranian missile falls near tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A Silksworm missile fired from Iranian-held territory landed just two miles from U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers today, hours after a Saudi vessel was attacked in the Persian Gulf and two of its crewmen killed, sources said.

A senior official of a gulf nation government said the Silksworm was fired from Iranian-occupied territory in southern Iraq and that it fell harmlessly in waters off the coast of Kuwait.

The missile hit just two miles from where two reflagged Kuwaiti tankers were anchored for loading, said Kuwait-based shipping officials.

There was no official confirmation of the reported attack on the Saudi Arabian ship. The shipping sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said seven crewmen were wounded in the attack Thursday night.

The reported attack came as another convoy of U.S. warships and Kuwaiti tankers steamed south through the gulf. It was the latest incident in fighting between Iran and Iraq that has damaged at least 20 ships since Saturday.

Italy's state-run RAI television reported that the Italian Cabinet decided today to send a naval task force to the gulf, including minesweepers and escort ships.

In Baghdad, a military communique said Iraqi warplanes blasted three Iranian oil installations simultaneously in southern Khuzestan province.

The missile attack at the northern extreme of the gulf was the first reported use of the Chinese-built Silksworm, which Iran also has deployed at the Strait of Hormuz at the extreme southern end of the waterway. The weapon, which carries a 1,000-pound warhead, is considered one of the most serious threats to gulf shipping in Iran's arsenal.

Shipping sources said the missile hit two miles from the Al Ahmadi oil loading terminal, where the two reflagged Kuwaiti tankers were anchored, and one mile from Mina al-Abdullah, Kuwait's main shipping port just south of the oil terminal.

The official, who refused to have his name used or his country identified, said the missile was fired about 4 a.m. from the vicinity of Faw peninsula, in the southern end of the Shatt al-Arab waterway.

Zoners hear heated arguments about quarry permit in Bolton

By Bruce Matzkin
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — In a five-hour hearing Thursday that became heated at times, the Zoning Board of Appeals heard two sides argue over whether quarrying should be allowed in a part of the Bolton Notch quarry that is zoned residential.

Much of the argument centered on the Zoning Commission's 1986 denial of a permit to the owner of the Bolton Notch quarry.

Mark Branse, the attorney representing the quarry's present owner, Dr. Peter J. Lawler of American Heritage Stone Inc., told the ZBA that the Zoning Commission acted improperly on May 21, 1986, when it denied the yearly permit.

Lawler bought the quarry several weeks ago from David C. Buck of Box Mountain Quarries, Inc., the owner since October 1982.

Buck's 1986 permit application for the first time included a map showing the areas that were quarried on the 10.2-acre parcel. Buck's first three applications, from 1983 to 1985, did not include a map. Buck said one was included in 1986 because the Zoning Commission had requested that he supply a detailed plan.

The 1986 permit was denied, according to Zoning Commission Chairman Philip G. Dooley, because the map showed that quarrying activities had moved into a residential zone.

BUCK SAID that a permit issued in 1983 never made mention of residential areas. Attorney Mitchell Kallet, representing Dooley and the Zoning Commission, contended that the permit was granted in 1983 because the Zoning Commission thought the quarrying was taking place only in the industrial zone.

Branse said this was not the case. "If you can buy that, I've got some land in Florida for sale," he told commission members.

Branse argued that Dooley and the Zoning Commission simply changed their minds in midstream "for reasons we don't understand and probably never will."

Branse recalled an April 11, 1983, letter in which Dooley told Buck that it was the formal opinion of the town attorney that the right to quarry in the residential zone had

Dirty Money

Between 1912 and 1918, the U.S. Treasury employed workers to wash, dry and iron paper money. In an effort to save on the expense of printing new bills, the Treasury tried to clean and recycle about 30 percent of the bills banks turned in as unfit. "Paper" money then was actually made with linen, and a special machine could wash and rinse up to 40,000 notes per day. But in World War I, linen was dumped in favor of cotton, and the money-washing machines were scrapped.

Rambo in Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — Sylvester Stallone has arrived in Israel to film "Rambo III" in the Dead Sea's rocky surroundings.
In best Rambo tradition, the actor was whisked to his hotel Thursday from Ben Gurion International Airport near Tel Aviv in a special armored jeep, Israeli radio said.
"Rambo III" is about the one-man commando squad's adventures in Soviet-occupied Afghanistan.
Stallone has taken over an entire floor of the Moriah Dead Sea Spa Hotel 70 miles south of Jerusalem for his personal use, and booked 30 rooms for his crew, said Ian Gayer, the hotel's sales manager.
Weight-lifting equipment in the hotel was removed to make way for Stallone's personal 12-piece gym, flown in from Los Angeles, Gayer said.
Twelve to 14 bodyguards accompanied Stallone, Gayer said. However, a production official who spoke on condition of anonymity said the actor would have only four guards.

WHOOPI GOLDBERG sues for $5.1 million

Whoopi files suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian-actress Whoopi Goldberg says the producer and director of her new movie, "The Telephone," reneged on an agreement to let her take part in the editing, and she's suing for $5.1 million.
The suit was filed Wednesday in Superior Court against director Rip Torn and New World Pictures.
Goldberg contends that her contract allowed her to take part in cutting the movie, but that she was instead given a version to edit on her own while Torn did another version.
In keeping with the decision of an arbitrator who ruled on the dispute Aug. 11, Torn's version is being distributed.
The suit alleges Torn's version is artistically inferior and will damage Goldberg's career.

Just a good job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jackie Robinson's widow says she and Robinson, the first black to play in baseball's major leagues, didn't immediately realize they were headed for the history books when he signed with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1945.
"It was more or less just the chance for a good job," Rachel Robinson said during a recent visit to open a museum exhibit on her husband, who made it to the majors in 1947 and played for 10 years. He died in 1972.
Mrs. Robinson said she hopes the traveling exhibit "Jackie Robinson: An American Journey" will keep Robinson's memory alive as an inspiration for minority youngsters.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says the best person to hold his job in recent memory was Pierre Salinger of the Kennedy administration, but that the work was easier back then.

"Since Watergate, the press has assumed a very adversarial role that changed the whole dynamic of press relations in the White House."
Nowadays, personal relationships with reporters are almost out of the question, said Fitzwater, who holds court in a hotel here while President Reagan is on vacation.
"Salinger had to deal with 15 to 20 reporters," he said. "When we go on a trip I have to deal with 300."

Sadloski: mail leaflet 'typical'

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herald Reporter

The Board of Directors' decision to publish a leaflet in advance of the referendum on the proposed $13 million bond issue for the Buckland Hills mall and surrounding developments is in keeping with the directors' previous actions, said mail opponent Elizabeth Sadloski.

"I don't think they've been acting appropriately on anything. They've been working on behalf of the developer all along," Sadloski said this morning.

The directors voted at their meeting Tuesday to ask voters in a November referendum whether the town should issue $13 million in tax-increment bonds to pay for road and utility improvements around the proposed mall. They also decided to publish a leaflet outlining how the bonds will be used and how they'll be paid off.

Sadloski said today she would begin her own information campaign after Labor Day. She and the Manchester Property Owners Association, which challenged the directors' decision last year to issue the bonds, have argued that the mall would cost the town more in services than the income it is expected to generate.

Sadloski said the specifics of the campaign against the bond issue have not been worked out, but she expects that advertising and mailings will be involved.

Sadloski would not predict the outcome of the referendum. "I would hope that the people realize that they can't trust the administration to necessarily work on their behalf," she said.

Residents should have realized that when the directors voted last year in favor of the bond issue without giving them a say, Sadloski said.

Asked what motivation the directors would have to work against the people, she answered, "I don't know, but money and power always seem to have a stronger effect than the average taxpayer."

The directors and the town administration have said that the bonds would be paid off over a 15-year period from property taxes on the 75,000-square-foot mall and surrounding development. The Home Development Co. of Chicago, the mall developer, has said that without road and utilities improvements financed by the bonds, building the mall would not be profitable.

Sadloski said a mall won't be the economic boon to the town that some have contended it will be.

Bush Hill Road gets a new coat of chip seal, work on outlying roads, moves today to Villa Louisa Road. The town is resurfacing about 15 miles of road this summer.

Patriot's Park in Coventry gets $15,000 for an overhaul

By Jacqueline Bennett
Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — The town will receive about $15,000 from the state for improvements to Patriot's Park, said town recreation director Rick Young.

"These things were going to be done, but now the money is available. It will help," Young said after the Parks and Recreation Commission meeting Wednesday night at the Town Office Building.

The funds will help pay for new bathrooms, hookup to the new sewer system, a gravel parking lot and electricity at the new band shell. In total, the work will cost $30,000.

According to Young, the state approved the money for the park, though it rejected the rest of the town's request for a feasibility study for improvements to the town's playing fields.

Some improvements have already been completed at the park. The entire project is likely to be finished by next summer, Young said.

In other matters, Ken Donnelly, coach for the University of Connecticut crew club, said the club will begin practice sessions on Coventry Lake in two weeks.

Connelly said he is trying to get an OK from the university to hold a regatta on the lake in late October or early November.

The club has been using Coventry Lake over the last two years for rowing practice. Last spring, the club notified the town that it would like to hold a regatta on the lake.

"The commission would like to see the races, and it's glad to let the club use the property," said Young.

"They will have to get a permit from the town to hold the regatta."

According to Young, the club would like to lease property in order to build a clubhouse near the lake at Patriot's Park. That is unlikely, however, Young said. The land was bought in 1979 from the Salvation Army with the stipulation that it be used for recreation, not profit; so leasing may not be possible, Young said.

The commission would be willing to let the club use a building at the park, Young said. The club now stores its boats outdoors at the park.

State rep to explain disaster fund

State Rep. James McCavanagh of Manchester's 12th Assembly District plans to meet soon with Manchester officials to discuss guidelines under which the town can get emergency relief funds from the state.

McCavanagh is a member of the Local Emergency Relief Advisory Committee, established this year by the General Assembly to help communities facing a hardship endangering the public health or safety.

Last week, the advisory committee approved aid guidelines and reviewed its first request, one from Bridgeport for expenses incurred in the collapse of the L'Ambiance Plaza earlier this year.

The committee oversees a $5 million fund allocated from the state's surplus.

McCavanagh said he'll let Manchester officials know what the fund is for and how it can be tapped in case of an emergency.

Rules governing the fund require that municipalities pay back what they can if they receive additional funding from a third party, such as an insurance company.

T. Clark Hull is nominated to Supreme Court

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — T. Clark Hull, an Appellate Court judge and former Republican lieutenant governor and state senator, says his nomination to the Supreme Court is "the perfect cap" to his quarter-century in state service.

Hull was nominated to the high court on Thursday by Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill.

O'Neill also nominated three Superior Court judges to the Appellate Court, the state's second-highest tribunal: Flemming L. Norcott Jr., 48, of New Haven; Edward V. O'Connell, 57, of Waterbury; and George D. Stoughton, 67, of West Hartford.

Norcott and O'Connell are Democrats. Stoughton is a Republican.

"I am very thrilled that Governor O'Neill has given me this opportunity to serve on the state's highest court," Hull said. "It's a perfect cap to my 25-year career in all three branches of state government."

But O'Neill: "I know these men well and I feel all four will make outstanding contributions in their new posts." All four nominations are subject to legislative confirmation.

The nomination of Hull, a jovial 65-year-old lawyer from Danbury, had been expected for weeks. He said his wife had been pleased with the appointment but had told him: "It doesn't make any difference. You'll still have to take out the garbage."

He said he hoped the Supreme Court would be his "next-to-final resting place."

Rep. Richard D. Tulliano, D-Rocky Hill, co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee, called Hull "a very bright, lucid individual."

"I love him," Tulliano said. "He's going to be a great judge" on the Supreme Court.

Hull said the complaint had been filed by a New Britain man who had accused him of "saying something I didn't say." He said that earlier this year the Judicial Review Council had concluded it was "an unfounded complaint" and dismissed the matter.

The nominations now go to Tulliano's committee for interim approval and the full legislature will vote on them early in 1988. He said he expected all four nominees to be approved.

Hull was elected to the state Senate in 1982 and elected lieutenant governor in 1970.

Auditors gripe about gripe setup
HARTFORD — The state auditors have charged that Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman had improperly set up a telephone line to handle complaints about state government operations that had been handled by the defendant inspector general's office.
Auditors Leo V. Donohue and Henry J. Becker said Thursday the law abolishing the inspector general's office and transferring its duties to the auditors and the attorney general required that complaints initially be handled by the auditors.
On Tuesday, Lieberman had announced that the toll-free phone line for so-called whistleblowing complaints was being transferred to his office from the inspector general's office.
The auditors reminded Lieberman in a letter released Thursday that the General Assembly had wanted the auditors to handle the initial complaints, rather than an elected official.

Man admits laundering drug money

NEW HAVEN — A Queens, N.Y., man has pleaded guilty to delivering approximately $600,000 from drug sales to an undercover FBI agent, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy said.
Edgar Diaz, 35, pleaded guilty Thursday in U.S. District Court to illegal money laundering charges. He faces a maximum sentence of 30 years imprisonment and a fine of $999,500 or both, Twardy said. He will be sentenced Oct. 14, Twardy said.
Diaz is charged with delivering the proceeds from illegal narcotics sales to the agent in Greenwich on Apr. 7, 1987.
Justice officials said Diaz was indicted in June for laundering millions of dollars to Colombian cocaine cartels.
Diaz is one of 27 defendants charged in a 216-count indictment alleging violations of federal money laundering, narcotics, and anti-racketeering statutes, Twardy said.

Two men plead guilty in fatal fire

DANBURY — Two Danbury men have pleaded guilty to first-degree arson in an April 4 fire in Danbury that killed a 71-year-old man.
Leonard Morey and Benjamin Hope, both 22, could get 10 years in prison when sentenced Oct. 13 in Danbury Superior Court.
Both guilty pleas were made Thursday in a plea-bargain arrangement in which the defendants did not admit to setting the fire, but agreed that evidence could weigh heavily against them in a jury trial.
In exchange for the pleas, the state dropped charges of conspiracy to commit arson and arson-murder, a charge that carries a mandatory sentence of life without parole.
Killed in the fire was Edward J. McNamara.

Report clears guards in jail suicide

NEW LONDON — Officials at the John R. Manson Youth Institution in Cheshire weren't alerted that a 14-year-old inmate planned to hang himself, contrary to the claims of another inmate, a state Department of Correction investigation has concluded.
A report, released Thursday to The Day of New London under the state's Freedom of Information Act, also termed as "unfounded" a claim by another inmate that guards on duty did not check cells before George Gault was found hanging from a bedsheet tied to a shelf in his cell.
Toth, of Groton, was found dead on June 13. At the time, he was the only 14-year-old among 400 inmates over the age of 16 at the Cheshire facility.
The teen had a long record of offenses and had been transferred to the adult court system in May. He was awaiting trial on larceny and assault charges when he died.

Used-car salesmen pay to settle suit

HARTFORD — Two used-car salesmen accused of odometer tampering in a lawsuit filed against them by the state have agreed to pay the state $17,400 to settle the suit, officials said.
From that total, the settlement calls for a $1,000 payment to each of nine people who bought cars from Park Automotive of Hartford, owned by Robert Fastiggi of Newington and Richard Regina of Ellington, the two men named in the suit.
They were accused of rolling back the odometers on the cars and then selling them for more than they would have been worth.
In addition to the $9,000 in payments to buyers, Park Automotive is paying $4,200 in civil penalties and $4,200 in attorneys' fees and court costs, officials said Thursday.
Under terms of the settlement, they were not required to admit wrongdoing.

Ex-official denies embezzlement

NEW HAVEN — A former redevelopment agency director has pleaded innocent to the latest of seven larceny charges alleging he embezzled more than $138,000 in city funds.
William T. Donahue, 52, entered his plea Wednesday before New Haven Superior Court Judge John J. Ronan. He remained free without bond and was scheduled for a pretrial conference on Wednesday.
In its newest charge of first-degree larceny, the state alleges that Donahue stole $50,130 from a Connecticut National Bank account for the Long Wharf Redevelopment Program in March 1985.
Donahue has already pleaded innocent to three counts of first-degree larceny, two of second-degree larceny and one of third-degree larceny in the alleged theft of about $88,000 in city funds.

Jury looks at Danbury corruption

DANBURY — A federal grand jury has convened in New Haven to review information collected by investigators looking into allegations of political corruption in Danbury, according to a published report.
The News-Times of Danbury reported today that federal investigators have reviewed Mayor James E. Dyer's 1982 purchase of his home for $160,000, his financial records and financial records of political contributions made to the mayor's campaign.
The newspaper quoted sources, but didn't identify the sources.
The FBI has confirmed that it is conducting an investigation in Danbury, but refused to report the nature of the inquiry.
The News-Times reported on July 30 that seven informational subpoenas were issued by U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr.'s office to city Clerk Michael Sert, Comptroller Dominic Setaro and Connecticut Bank and Trust officials, and four to Danbury Savings & Loan officials.

Overload shuts Millstone 1 plant

WATERFORD — Millstone 1 nuclear power plant automatically shut down when a compressor that provides air pressure for instruments used and valves opened and its backup failed to function properly, Northeast Utilities reported.
No radioactivity was released and no danger was posed to the public or the environment from the shutdown Thursday, said Clifford Hill, spokesman for the utility company.
The plant will be inspected and compressors brought back into operation in time to have the plant back on line Friday morning, Hill said. He said the incident is the least serious of five types of events that must be reported to the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

A ship to set sail for Australia

Coast Guard Eagle prepares for dream 35,000-mile voyage

By Susan Okubo
The Associated Press

GROTON — It was a rough summer for some U.S. Coast Guard Academy cadets, but they kept one thing in mind — the four months this fall they'd be sailing to Australia on the Coast Guard tall ship Eagle.

"It was an incentive to keep going," said Brett Bowden, 18, of Tacoma, Wash.

The 220-foot barque Eagle sets sail next week on a 35,000-mile round-trip goodwill voyage, culminating in Australia for its Jan. 26, 1988, bicentennial celebration in Sydney.

"It's a dream of every sailor, every yachtsman, or every would-be Horatio Hornblower or John Paul Jones to make a voyage like this," said Capt. Ernie Cummings, the Eagle's commanding officer.

The ship will travel twice through the Panama Canal and make stops in South America and the islands of the South Pacific. It will make the journey one sail power, resorting to engines only when the doldrums hit or contrary winds blow.

Ahead will be about 140 Coast Guard Academy cadets, 50 enlisted personnel and 14 officers. Extra crew members include two Australians, two members of the Boy Scouts' Sea Explorers, and a member of the Girl Scouts.

"I can't believe that I'm really here," Caroline Crowe, the 19-year-old Girl Scouts representative from Neenah, Wis., said Thursday. "I'm midway and see how the Eagle really works."

Many of those aboard, like the Eagle itself, have never crossed the equator. There will be a bicentennial ceremony marking the occasion for those newcomers, said two members of the crew, Petty Officer Kenneth Dupod of Waterbury and Seaman Jim Paul of Portsmouth, Ohio.

On Thursday, the Eagle was docked at the U.S. Navy's submarine base in Groton undergoing some last week. It was to cross the Thames River to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in New London for final trip preparations.

A send-off ceremony for the training ship is planned for Sept. 10. Speeches by "Roots" author Alex Haley, newspaperman Walter Cronkite, U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and Rowland Dalrymple, the Australian ambassador to the United States, were scheduled. The ship will sail at noon.

Midway through the trip, when the Eagle reaches Australia, the 140 academy cadet contingent will be flown back to the United States and will be replaced by 140 classmates for the trip back. The ship is expected back in New London on May 3, 1988.

The academy's entire third class, made up of sophomores, as well as about 48 members of the first, or senior, class, will have sailed, one of the two legs of the trip.

The academy will attend classes in oceanography and organizational behavior aboard. They will also be living a rugged schedule, expecting to sail at least four hours daily in the 24-hour workday of a ship.

Bowden and classmate Mike Woolard said their previous one week's training on the Eagle left them with no illusions about the work schedule of the next four months. But they look forward to the trip.

"It's like a once-in-a-lifetime experience," said Woolard, 19, of Memphis, Tenn. "Sailing a tall ship — it's kind of like living in the past," said Bowden.

Capt. Cummings acknowledged the hardships of the voyage, which include a long separation from family.

"There may be lonely days and nights out there," he said. "Only God really respects some rough seas and stormy weather."

The Eagle will be sailing in hurricane season in the Atlantic and the Pacific, said Cummings, who is 48 and beginning his fifth year as skipper of the vessel.

The Eagle's crew already is learning about its destination in the United States and the Pacific, said Cummings, who is 48 and beginning his fifth year as skipper of the vessel.

Missy Markenka, national boatswain of the Sea Scouts, left, Christine O'Keefe of Melbourne, Australia, center, and Caroline Crowe, a member of the Girl Scouts, pose on the deck of the Eagle. The three will be among the crew when the ship sails for Australia next week.

Four Marines die in copter crash

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — Four Marines were killed when a military helicopter crashed during night training, said military officials at the Camp Pendleton Marine Corps Base.
The helicopter crashed into the Pacific Ocean on Thursday. The Marine Corps CH-46E Echo helicopter, called a Sea Knight, crashed about 9:15 p.m. in a remote inland area of the base called Case Springs training area, he said.
"The helicopter was participating in routine night training at the time of the mishap," Mitchell said. The cause of the crash was under investigation, he said.

Riot police storm two major plants

SEOUL, South Korea — Thousands of riot police stormed the nation's largest shipyard and a major auto assembly plant today, arresting hundreds of striking workers in the first government crackdown on recent labor unrest.

Police raided the Daewoo Co. car plant, site of a weeklong occupation, and the Hyundai Heavy Industries Co. shipyard, occupied by workers after they damaged company buildings and set fire to vehicles on Wednesday and Thursday.

The government also said it had arrested a North Korean spy and an opposition official and charged them with fomenting strikes.

About 3,000 riot police moved in before dawn to remove strikers holding the Daewoo assembly plant at Puyong outside Seoul and arrested 135 workers. Two workers were injured when they jumped from a second-floor window and police overpowered several others who threatened to set themselves afire, police said.

Suspect jailed in rape cases

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — A black man was jailed today on charges he raped five elderly women in his small steel town where police had asked blacks for their fingerprints to help a stalled four-year investigation.

Dennis Foy, 22, was arrested on a stolen property charge late Thursday and his fingerprints matched those of the suspect in six rapes of women ages 64 to 85, police said.

Police Chief Christopher Kelly today said Foy was charged with five rapes and one attempted rape. Kelly said Foy lived on the same street as a 68-year-old victim and Foy's girlfriend lived near a 76-year-old victim.

"It's over," Kelly said. Foy was held today at the Aliegheny County Jail on $500,000 bail.

Jets missed each other by 30 feet

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration said today it is working on new navigation procedures in the wake of a July incident in which a Delta Air Lines jetliner came within 30 feet of colliding with another jet.

Investigators say the Delta airliner, flying 60 miles off course, came much closer to colliding with another jet than was previously thought.

The Delta plane was within Canadian air traffic control when the near-collision occurred, and the Canadian Aviation Safety Board said Thursday it wants immediate changes in that nation's airline safety rules to reduce the chance of additional incidents.

However, the FAA said today it already has a program under way to improve navigation procedures used by American aircraft on transatlantic and transpacific routes.

Panel favors private aid to vets

WASHINGTON — A medical team dispatched to Vietnam by the Reagan administration is recommending a "positive" response by American groups to a Vietnamese request for limited humanitarian assistance, a member of the panel says.

The team, whose report is to be submitted to the administration in the next few days, favors a modest program in which private Americans — not the U.S. government — would provide some of the help. Hand is seeking for the rehabilitation of amputees, said Fred Downs, a Vietnam War veteran's administration executive.

Downs, who heads the VA's prosthetics and sensory aids service, joined two other rehabilitation experts on a four-day trip to Vietnam last month. In addition to holding talks with foreign ministry and health officials, they toured a center, near Son Tay, Vietnam, where artificial limbs, orthopedic devices and other rehabilitation equipment are produced and fitted.

AIDS children die without a home

WORCESTER, Mass. — About a third of the children born with AIDS are abandoned or orphaned, and many die without leaving the hospital because few adults want to act as foster or adoptive parents, social workers say.

Obstacles range from fear of the disease to inability to face the thought of losing a loved child.

"These children are born in the hospital, they suffer in the hospital, and then they die," said Penny Ferrer, special assistant to the deputy commissioner of New York City's Department of Human Resources.

Of children with AIDS, many are born with the disease, acquiring it from the mother, and "about 25 to 35 percent ... will not be cared for by their biological parents," according to a June survey of 25 states by Phyllis Tourse, executive director of the Massachusetts Adoption Resource Exchange.

The problem of finding homes for AIDS children is expected to grow.

Protein may cause fatal malaria

WASHINGTON — The side effect of malaria that kills half of those who die from the disease may be caused, in large part, by one of the body's own immune system proteins, scientists say.

Researchers said Thursday that animal studies indicate a protein made by certain defensive cells is an essential component of highly fatal cerebral malaria, which kills a half-million people a year.

The findings suggest that blocking the protein's action with special antibodies or other agents might be a new way to prevent or treat the most fatal complication of malaria, says a report published today in the Sept. 4 issue of the journal Science.

Researchers with the World Health Organization and the University of Geneva in Switzerland said studies with mice, which must be confirmed in humans, indicate the protein called tumor necrosis factor or cachectin plays a major role in cerebral malaria.

Burundi army mutinies while president's away

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Burundi President Jean-Baptiste Bagaza arrived here today en route to his central African nation, where mutinous soldiers said they had ousted him and installed a military junta in his place.

Bagaza was in Canada on Thursday when Radio Burundi broadcast a communique from the Burundi army supreme office declaring army Maj. Pierre Buyoya the new leader of a junta called the Military Committee for National Redemption.

"Bagaza is relieved of his duties as head of state, army and air force," the radio said. The statement gave no reason for the coup, except to say the actions were taken by "your soldiers, together with Burundi's gallant people, conducting the state of the Bagaza leadership."

There were no reports of damage or injuries in the coup, which could not be independently confirmed.

When rumors of the takeover began to circulate at a summit of French-speaking nations in Quebec, Bagaza left the meeting and flew to Paris where he boarded an Air France jet that arrived today in Nairobi.

The 41-year-old socialist leader who had ruled Burundi for 11 years left his foreign minister, Isidore Hakizimana, behind at the Canadian conference.

Word of the coup was first broadcast at 3:45 p.m. Thursday (12:40 p.m. EDT) in Kirundi. French and Kirundi are the official languages of Burundi, which is wedged between Tanzania and Zaire in central Africa. The communists and Zaire in central Africa. The communists and Zaire in central Africa. The communists and Zaire in central Africa.

Buyoya was believed to be a member of Bagaza's Tutsi tribe, to which all Burundi's army officers and most government officials belong.

Bagaza took power in a bloodless coup in November 1976, when he was an army colonel. He had been trying to lead his country slowly to civilian rule and to defuse tensions between the predominant Hutu and the ruling minority Tutsi.

Bagaza was receiving technical and financial aid from the Soviet Union and China and was strengthening ties with Libya.

Family impact aim of Reagan policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, applying a new yardstick for evaluating welfare, housing and education programs, says federal policies must be judged in terms of how they will affect families and parents' supervision of their children.

Reagan, at his vacation home in California, signed an executive order Thursday that will require a review of existing and proposed regulations and policies in terms of their impact on families.

"If we would have had this in place a number of years ago, we could have stopped the unintended consequences of some of these well-meaning efforts to help poor families," Gary Bauer, the president's assistant for policy development, said in an interview in Washington.

It was the latest in a series of steps intended to help promote the agenda of conservatism.

The new order empowers Bauer's office to assess the way in which policies "strengthen or erode the stability of the family and, especially, the marital commitment."

It also said policies should be judged on whether they "strengthen or erode the authority and rights of parents in the education, nurture and supervision of their children."

Bauer said that if a policy is judged harmful from a family standpoint, how they don't want to get new grounds to stop things.

Bauer, a leader of conservative forces in the White House, said the order was the equivalent of the environmental impact statements required of federal building projects.

"I think maybe the major influence of this will be that those agencies and departments that haven't been thinking about the family will now be forced to do so, and a lot of stuff that may have found its way over here in the waning months of an administration, when sometimes things get a little flabby just won't come over the hump any more," Bauer said.

He said research shows that a girl who remains poor after leaving school will apply chiefly to welfare, education and housing programs but actually covers all policies, Bauer said.

Discussing the potential impact, Bauer said "there are a lot of welfare programs that were put in '60s and '70s that clearly at this point — no expert will say — have hurt the poor family or the minority family, if they had been examined a little more closely at the time, they might have been modified in order to avoid that."

For example, he said, teen-age girls who have children out of wedlock now get benefits under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program, and also might qualify for subsidized housing.

Panel suggests revamp of vets' home

HARTFORD (AP) — The management of the state Veterans Home and Hospital is to be reorganized, a governor's panel has recommended despite opposition by some veterans' representatives.

The proposal would mean the independent hospital in Rocky Hill would be overseen by a board of trustees and placed under the state Department of Veterans Affairs.

The panel's meeting Thursday disintegrated into arguing and name-calling over the proposed reorganization.

State Rep. Eugene A. Migliaro Jr., R-Wolcott and a long-time veterans' advocate, accused the panel's co-chairman, Rep. Paul Gionfriddo, D-Middletown, of being anti-veteran and making a bold grab for power and veterans' funds.

"Bye, bye Rocky Hill," Migliaro said as he left the meeting, but a later interview, he said "Gionfriddo voted in the last session for a bill protecting homosexuals from discrimination."

Gionfriddo voted in the last session for a bill protecting homosexuals from discrimination. Migliaro predicted politicians next will try to grab control of the $40 million in the Soldiers' Sailors' and Marines' Fund, now administered by the American Legion.

Two other panel members, representing the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, also voted against the proposed reorganization.

Gionfriddo and others on the panel defended the reorganization, which would make the institution's management structure like that of other health care institutions. The recommendation stemmed from a report by Coopers & Lybrand, a consulting firm, which was hired to study the management structure.

Gionfriddo said if services at the home and hospital are to be expanded and improved, the board of trustees and those it hires must have expertise in health care.

That does not necessarily mean they won't be veterans, Gionfriddo added.

The institution now is overseen by an eight-member volunteer commission composed mostly of veterans. Changing to a board of trustees would require legislation by the General Assembly.

The commission's report says not all patients in the hospital need intensive care. Many could be cared for in a nursing home or other intermediate-care setting, the report says.

The proposals also call for "an array of residential and supportive living programs as well as skilled nursing, intermediate care and rehabilitative services."

Added area might create more woes

Manchester is about to claim a section of Glastonbury as territory it should probably serve with water in the future as a result of a vote by the Board of Directors.

More specifically, the town's water division is going to make a preliminary declaration that the area of Glastonbury involved should be part of the division's exclusive service area. That does not in itself constitute a commitment to provide the service. The state agency that will make the final decision may determine that the area should be the responsibility of some other utility.

If that happens, Manchester will probably be better off.

The two directors who cast "no" votes Tuesday night, Geoffrey Naab and James F. Fogarty, argued essentially that there are enough areas within Manchester where the town does not supply water to worry about without taking on more problems.

Their reasoning was sound. One argument on the other side is that the town, when it was forced to serve a limited number of Glastonbury customers, spent about a half a million dollars more in the process than it could recoup in assessments against those customers.

Figures provided by the water division indicate that with the expenditure of $800,000 more, the town could put itself in a position to collect about $475,000 a year in revenues from Glastonbury customers.

The thing that seemed to persuade the majority of directors, however, was the fact that the service area the town declares can be reduced later but it cannot be expanded by the town later.

The town may be forced by regionalization of water resources to serve areas outside of Manchester, but Naab is right when he says the water division has no business being entrepreneurial.

It would probably be better to swallow the half-million-dollar loss and not voluntarily take on added service outside town, even if future studies indicate the town has a big enough water supply to do so.

"Hey, it could be worse. I could be tryin' to manage the Yankees for George Steinbrenner."

Case sounds OK without the facts

To the Editor:

Some of the recent letters and public statements regarding the Manchester Country Club may appear to be accurate, but when the whole story is told they are little short of ridiculous.

For example, one individual professes willingness to pay the town $50,000 a year for a concession to rent golf carts. So would a lot of people who knew the facts, and could find a golf course stupid enough to make such a deal.

The Manchester Country Club probably makes a profit nearly twice that, and every penny of it goes right back into paying club expenses. Why should anyone take the profit and walk away with it, leaving the club or the taxpayers to pay the bills?

The clubhouse, with its rentals, banquets, receptions, etc., is also profitable, as are the restaurant and bar to a lesser degree. The profits from these operations also go back into paying other expenses, so why lease the facilities and let a contractor put the money in his pocket? All of these so-called profits help support other activities at the club which cannot pay their own way.

It is easy to set up a good case when you only give part of the story, but not so easy when all the facts are presented. The town directors are not likely to be fooled, for they have the facts and will surely consider them all before making a decision on the lease. However, some of your readers who are getting only one side of the story are going to form some very wrong opinions if they do not wait until all the facts are presented.

Seeking info on Case family

To the Editor:

Zenas Case was born in Hebron Sept. 10, 1781. He married Margaret Peters of Hebron about 1790; they then moved to Piermont, N.H., where Margaret bore eight children. One son, William, was the progenitor of our Canadian Case family.

Zenas Case's parents, Eliphalet and Martha Owen, were married Dec. 10, 1756, in New London. They lived and raised 12 children in Hebron. Beyond that I know nothing.

I would like to find out who Eliphalet's parents and grandparents were, where they lived, and relevant dates. Perhaps your readers could help me in tracing my American ancestry. I will welcome and answer all correspondence.

No delays for smugglers

Jack Anderson

Drug Enforcement Administration officials have noticed a sharp increase in the use of aircraft to import illicit substances from South America. A classified DEA report explains why:

"Air transportation has many advantages for the marijuana smuggler. The private aircraft can move bulk quantities and at minimal risk, as the pilot will be airborne for only a matter of a few hours. The logistics of air smuggling are certainly less complex. The traffickers have direct control of the load from the time it departs... Deliveries are quick and, generally, to a single organization."

Delays are minimal, the report continues, and scheduling is simple. There is no need to coordinate between "mother ships" and delivery vessels, and "off-load crews are kept to a minimum."

Finally, the report notes, "frequently, the entire load can be delivered directly to the ultimate retail market."

Start with a clean slate

Equal Employment Opportunity Commission investigators in Birmingham, Ala., had numerous discrimination cases pending when the 1985 fiscal year ended. So they came up with a neat idea for closing the file: They just swept their desks clean, put everything away and started the new year with a clean slate.

This device, the Birmingham managers told auditors for the General Accounting Office, was entirely consonant with a decade-old policy dictated by their superiors in Washington. In the interest of reducing case backlogs, the Alabama officials said, the EEOC around 1978 ruled that sometimes it may be necessary to conduct less-than-thorough investigations.

A commission spokeswoman in Washington flatly denied that the agency had ever condoned taking shortcuts to meet numerical goals. All quotas were eliminated this year, she said, and measures have been taken to ensure that every charge of discrimination is completely investigated.

Incidentally, two of the managers in Birmingham were given performance bonuses in 1985.

On 'books by crooks'

New York's "Son of Sam" law — which prevents those convicted of a crime from profiting by the sale of their memoirs and movie rights — poses a tough problem of pragmatism as well as principle. Much as it disgusts us that "books by crooks" have enriched so many loathsome characters in recent years, we can't help feeling that, on balance, it's probably better to encourage such efforts in the interest of informing the public. Watergate memoirs, self-serving as they were, provided insight and information that probably would not have been forthcoming without the lure of royalties. We say, Let them publish.

Bank for senators only

Members of the Senate have long enjoyed their own exclusive, cut-rate barber shop, stationery store and members-only dining room. Now they're about to have their own private bank, with free checking service.

Actually, the Senate is playing catch up on this matter with the House, which has had its own members-only bank for almost 100 years. The House bank was immersed in controversy in the late 1970s, when snooping reporters revealed that it was, in effect, giving the representatives interest-free advances on their salaries.

Secretary of the Senate Walter "Doc" Steward said the Senate bank will not make loans or salary advances to members as long as he's in charge. He said the bank has been approved by about 50 senators, and when a few more OK the idea he'll start issuing checks.

Steward insisted the Senate banking service won't cost the taxpayers anything, because it will require little more than a new personal computer program. But critics question the wisdom of opening another bank that, like the House's, will not be subject to federal bank regulations. This means, among other things, that deposits will not be insured by the government, and that transactions of more than $10,000 will not have to be reported to the feds.

"Let Reagan be Reagan" For years the battle cry of Ronald Reagan's far-right supporters, when confronted with the pragmatic political compromises that every president must make, was "Let Reagan be Reagan." But the old refrain has been noticeably absent during the Iran-contra scandal and the Nicaragua peace plan. Is it possible the ultra-conservative ideologues have finally awoken to the fact that Reagan is, after all, being Reagan?

Mayor Koch has answer for homeless

NEW YORK — Mayor Ed Koch has finally taken a step every mayor should have taken a decade ago — hospitalizing mentally ill homeless people involuntarily if they are deemed "incapable of taking care of themselves."

In the past, concerned that it would be infringing upon the rights of the person sleeping on the street, the city took this step only if a person was believed to be in "imminent" danger to himself or others. Under Koch's new definition, homeless people "in danger of serious harm within the reasonably foreseeable future" will be taken to Bellevue Hospital for a 15-day examination.

"Both morally and legally we have an obligation to help those who can't or won't help themselves," Koch said.

Of course, the American Civil Liberties Union objected. The policy "appeared unconstitutional," said its New York director, Norman Siegel. "It has the potential for great harm."

That comment represents American individualism taken to its ultimate fanatical extreme. How can the ACLU believe that the civil liberties of a mentally disturbed person are more important than life-saving care?

For many years, it was apparently not too difficult for a family to order even slightly disturbed members of their families to state mental institutions. By 1955 there were 558,822 state and county mental patients.

Three groups pressured for change from such "warehousing" of patients.

First, mental health advocates noted that new drugs were invented that eliminated hallucinations so patients could live more easily outside hospitals. They argued that it was better for patients to receive care "in the community" where many could return to family and work.

Northern Perspective

Michael J. McManus

lives outside the dreary state facilities. Fiscal conservatives anxious to cut state budgets happily agreed. Medicare and Medicaid paid for some community care facilities.

Three decades later, the population of state and county mental hospitals plunged 80 percent, to 116,136 by 1984.

However, it is clear that the pendulum has swung too far.

A fifth of the people living on the streets of American cities are clearly psychotic, unable to care for themselves. Why should a humane society permit deranged people to suffer and die on the streets?

The fact is, there have never been enough community mental health facilities built. And the ones that exist are often ignored by street people who don't understand that they need regular medicine.

New York State now has 5,500 beds in local facilities, of which 2,200 have been added recently. But there once were 80,000 patients in mental health hospitals that now have 15,400. And they will drop to 13,000 over eight years while the state hopes to add 7,000 more community beds.

Why not keep present beds open and/or expand state mental hospitals? "That is the most costly and restrictive form of care," says Bruce Feig, deputy executive commissioner of the state Office of Mental Health.

"While 15 to 20 percent of homeless people have mental health problems, it is another decision on what kind of care they need."

Koch's policy will be forcing the state to decide where to put them.

In what the mayor calls "Project Help," homeless people will be interviewed on the streets by a psychiatrist and a social worker who will decide whether the person should be taken to Bellevue Hospital for an examination. The hospital's psychiatric staff must then concur on the need, before the patient can be put on a special 28-bed ward for 15 days.

At that point, state mental health officials can determine whether long-term care should be in a state hospital or in a community facility.

How does the state react to Mayor Koch's initiative? "We are interested in it," said Feig diplomatically. "We are interested in what the profiles of the patients will be. We are trying to be cooperative. In fact, we provided the first funding for Project Help."

Clearly, however, New York City's action is challenging New York State's basic assumption that it can simply close down a costly mental health hospital bed by opening a cheaper community care facility bed.

Many more beds are needed. By creating process to aid the most helpless and vulnerable mentally ill patients forced to live on the streets, the mayor is challenging state bureaucracy in a healthy way while giving humane treatment to the most needy segment of the homeless population.

Other communities and states can learn from New York City's initiative.

Marino returns tonight

By The Associated Press

Dan Marino's plan to sit out the rest of the preseason waiting for his swollen knee to heal has been scrapped.

Instead, the Dolphins' quarterback will return tonight as Miami plays host to the Buffalo Bills on the first weekend of exhibition play.

At Philadelphia, Chuck Long threw two touchdown passes while the Eagles lost 35-3 last Saturday to Miami.

At Denver, third-string quarterback Rich Gannon led Minnesota to 17 points in the fourth quarter as the injury-plagued Vikings rallied to defeat the Broncos.

Minnesota's 2-2 playing without quarterback Tommy Kramer and five other starters overcame a 17-10 third-quarter deficit behind Gannon, a rookie who replaced Wade Wilson at quarterback late in the first half.

Denver quarterback John Elway fumbled a snap moments later and linebacker Walker Lee Ashley recovered at the Denver 16. Chuck Robinson's 35-yard field goal broke the tie with 30 left, Gannon went the final yard of a 13-yard drive after an Elway pass was intercepted at the Broncos 13 with 1:55 remaining.

Marino's ring-finger knuckle on his passing hand swelled after an injury against the Chicago Bears in the preseason opener and it was thought that he would sit out until the regular season began.

He thought he needed some practice first. I need to get the feel for the game situation, for dropping back and looking over the defense," Marino said.

Coach Don Shula said Marino will play for at least a quarter but in the men's 200, Calvin Smith of the United States rallied from a poor start to win a photo finish over Gilles Queneherve of France.

Carl Lewis of the United States raises the sand as he lands, after soaring 8.36 meters (27 feet, 5 1/4 inches) in his first attempt in the qualifying round of the long jump at the World Track and Field Championships today in Rome.

ROME (AP) — Silke Gladisch blames others rather than credit herself as why she is the only double gold-medal winner of the World Track and Field Championships.

"It's not my mistake that the others are not so quick," the East German said after winning the women's 200 meters Thursday in near world-record time.

Gladisch was clocked in 21.74 seconds, just three-hundredths of a second off the world record shared by Helke Drechsler and retired Marita Koch, both fellow East Germans.

With her victory in the 100, Gladisch has established herself as the queen of women's sprinting and has a chance to win a third gold in the 400 relay.

She is the only athlete left in the championships with a chance to win three gold medals.

Florence Griffith of the United States was second in the 200 in 21.96. In the men's 200, Calvin Smith of the United States rallied from a poor start to win a photo finish over Gilles Queneherve of France.

Sabine Buech, also of East Germany, with a meet record of 53.62 in the women's 400 hurdles.

Their victories brought to six the number of East German gold medals and the overall medal total to 16. The Soviet Union and the United States each have 11 medals.

Meanwhile, world record-holder and two-time Olympic decathlon champion Daily Thompson of Britain struggled in third place after five events and was possibly headed for his first defeat in seven years.

Foster, his confidence shaken by falls at the World Indoor Championships and the Pan American Games earlier this year, clipped the ninth hurdle but cruised home in 13.21.

Thompson had dropped back to eighth after four events, but rallied to third even though his 400 time of 48.81 was below his standard.

The 400 was held during a thunderstorm that flooded the track.

Thompson, who has been struggling with a groin injury this season, had the fastest time of 10.67 in the opening 100, out loded in the other events and was trailing leader Thorsten Voss of East Germany by nearly 200 points.

Voss, who took the long jump at 25 feet, 10 1/2 inches, collected a first-day total of 4,556 points. Christian Pilz of France was second with 4,405, followed by Thompson at 4,363.

Speed is key as Americans face Soviets

By Ken Rappoport The Associated Press

HARTFORD — The accent was on stamina when Team USA played Canada last Wednesday night and it's expected to be on speed tonight when the Americans face the Soviet Union in the Canada Cup.

"Without question, this will be the fastest of any games we'll play in the tournament," observed Ted Sator, assistant coach of Team USA.

The heeled Soviets, along with Canada the co-favorites of this prestigious international hockey tournament, went through a light-hearted, but precision, workout at the Hartford Civic Center Thursday in preparation for the Americans.

The Soviets featured work on their breakouts and power-play patterns, while an impressed Sator looked on from the stands.

"No question this is a world-class team," Sator said. "The Soviets have no weaknesses. They have the best technical skills in the world."

Not that the Soviets are unbeatable in Sator's estimation.

"Some of the mystique of playing the Soviets has disappeared with the higher level of international play these days," Sator said.

"If we had been playing under regular NHL rules," Johnson said, "we would have a brawl out there."

Johnson gave his team a day off Thursday to rest.

"It was swimming, sauna and hot tub for the players today," said Sator, who coaches the NHL's Buffalo Sabres. "The guys needed a day off after Wednesday night's game."

Canada Cup

Both Sator and Team USA Coach Bob Johnson were upset with the officiating by Finnish referee Karl-Gustav Kaala. Both felt that Kaala was intimidated by Team Canada.

"He was in over his head," Sator said. "Team Canada got away with a lot of things they shouldn't have."

"It was a Stanley Cup game, but we didn't have Stanley Cup officiating," Johnson said.

"Because of strict Canada Cup rules against fighting which penalize the guilty party with a suspension for the remainder of the game plus an additional game, Johnson felt that fighting in the hard-hitting contest was held to a minimum.

Whalers feeling nothing but pain

HARTFORD (AP) — The Hartford Whalers felt honored to have three of their players in the Canada Cup series, but are feeling nothing but pain now with each player down with an injury.

Team USA, which play host to the Soviet national team Friday night at the Hartford Civic Center, lost for the first time in three games Wednesday — a 3-2 decision to Team Canada in Hamilton, Ontario.

The other decathlon event winners were American Rob Muzio in the shot put, 54.74; East German Christian Schenk in the high jump, 7.45; and France's Alain Blondel in the 400, 47.91.

The last five events — the 110 hurdles, discus, pole vault, javelin and 1,500 meters — were to be held today.

World record-holder Sergey Bubka of the Soviet Union and 13 other pole vaulters qualified for Saturday's final.

Team USA must again rely on its defensive style to have any success against the Soviets, who have an identical 2-1 record. The Soviets, however, have rebounded from a 5-3 loss to Sweden in their opener to outscore Finland and Czechoslovakia, 11 goals to four in two games.

In Wednesday's loss to Canada, defenseman Mike Ramey, who plays for the Buffalo Sabres, left Team USA had played a sound game except for special teams.

"We played well enough to win and so did they," said Ramey. "It was like a playoff game out there."

Despite the injuries, Francis, who is part of the Team USA executive staff, said that the games are a bonus for his players.

"I'm not pleased with our players getting hurt but the experience of that competition can't be measured," said Francis. "They'll be ready for training camp."

Steffi Graf of West Germany gestures as she returns a shot to Petra Huber of Austria during their Thursday night match in the U.S. Open. Graf advanced, beating Huber 6-2, 6-3.

Mellow McEnroe moves into third round at U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Has John McEnroe really mellowed? Or is his mind so preoccupied with personal matters that he can't be bothered with on-court confrontations?

McEnroe, who already has had more success in any Grand Slam tournament since 1985, moved into the third round Thursday night with a 7-5, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2 victory over Richey Reneberg.

After the eighth-seeded McEnroe double-faulted, a fan at courtide applauded. McEnroe went over and smashed his racket against the railing in front of the stands.

McEnroe said something to the fan, who then tossed an object at McEnroe.

"I'm not sure what he threw at me," McEnroe said. "It was something he sat on. It's happened to me before. It's just the way it goes. It's not beneficial for me to talk about it."

But McEnroe used that incident to raise the level of his game. He served out the set, then eased to the win in the fourth set.

McEnroe admitted he is letting too many things get to him when he is on the court.

"It's impossible to say anything about winning the tournament if I let those things bother me," said McEnroe, who hasn't won a tournament this year.

"I'm trying to focus in on the match as much as I can. I did it better as I went on."

McEnroe's wife, actress Tatum O'Neal, is expected to arrive in New York this week.

East Catholic opens classes with slight enrollment decline

By Andrew Yurkivsky
Herald Reporter

Students at East Catholic High School began their first day of classes today, just in time for the weekend. As usual, three days of orientation, beginning on Tuesday, preceded the first full day of the school year. Principal Peg Siegmund said this morning, about 1,000 students have enrolled, just slightly below figures for last year. Freshmen will be the first to go through a newly expanded reading and study skills program, she said. In past years, only about half the first-year students were required to participate in the twice-weekly classes. "That seems to be working really well from all the plans I've seen,"

Siegmund said, she said the program is intended to help freshmen improve their reading speed and comprehension. Along with the expanded program will come a new mandatory study hall for freshmen. The first day of school also marks the beginning of the annual magazine drive to help offset tuition at the parochial school. And it means classes began there on Tuesday, but Siegmund doesn't expect the same thing to happen at East Catholic. "Students are quite good about it, partly because we've had the policy for such a long time," she said. "So it's really the exception to have a student caught smoking." A student who is caught smoking is given an hour's detention for the first offense and a day's detention for the second. For the third offense, the student is suspended, Siegmund said.

schools, as well as doing private career counseling. While most public schools have been working on new rules banning smoking, East Catholic will continue its longtime smoking ban. Manchester High School suspended eight students for smoking when classes began there on Tuesday, but Siegmund doesn't expect the same thing to happen at East Catholic. "Students are quite good about it, partly because we've had the policy for such a long time," she said. "So it's really the exception to have a student caught smoking." # Zoners hear heated arguments about quarry permit in Bolton

Since established. The previous owners of the quarry had sent letters asking the quarry be permitted to be a permitted use. As backing for the first point, Branse referred to a section in the zoning regulations. The section, according to Branse, speaks of conditions under which removal of sand and gravel are permitted. Branse said it has never been argued by the Zoning Commission that the Bolton Notch quarry did not meet the regulations in this section. Kallet argued that the section in question has a list of circumstances under which activities can take place, but that quarrying doesn't fit into any of the circumstances. Another section in the zoning regulations lists uses for which land can be changed, but quarrying is not mentioned, he argued.

must be shown that quarrying has been done regularly in the residential zone since it became a non-permitted use. Kallet and Branse disagreed over when this occurred. Branse said it occurred in 1976, when zoning regulations were amended to regulate commercial quarries. Testimony by Henry Gonder, who owned the quarry from 1974 to 1992, supports Branse's claim that quarrying has been done regularly in the residential zone since it became non-permitted in 1976. But Kallet said that quarrying became non-permitted in 1982. The 1982 zoning regulations did not include quarrying as a permitted use. Kallet said Connecticut zoning laws exclude quarrying in a residential zone. If so, Branse would have to show that quarrying has been done regularly in the residential zone since 1982.

DOOLEY TESTIFIED that the Zoning Commission has always said quarrying would be allowed only in the industrial zone. A cease-and-desist order was issued May 22 after Dooley discovered that quarrying was being done in the residential zone. Branse based his appeal on two

Just the facts, lawyer tells ZBA

BOLTON — The attorney for American Heritage Stone Inc., which is appealing the 1986 denial of a permit to operate the Bolton Notch quarry, warned the Zoning Board of Appeals Thursday not to bow to public pressure. "It makes no difference if every man, woman, and child doesn't want a quarry on this site," Branse told the ZBA. "The only thing being decided is if this quarry is permitted under the facts of this case and the laws of this town."

"We would never deny that there is noise," said Branse. "But as the quarry moves more deeply into its own acre, the noise will become less and less. By confining the quarry to the area closest to the road, the Zoning Commission would be doing more damage to the neighbors." One resident complained that blasting in the quarry sometimes shook his house. But Fire Marshal Peter Massolini defended the quarry, saying the firm has spent a lot of money to bring in machines to measure the force of the blasts. Massolini said that every reading from the machines has shown blasts to be far below the levels allowed by state law. "I don't blame people for not wanting to live next to a quarry," said Branse. "I wouldn't want to either. Nor would I want to live next to a hospital, with sirens all the time. But I am sure glad that the hospital is there when I need it." Branse told the ZBA that no one has the right to take away someone's job. "If you say there can't be a quarry, you'll be taking away someone's livelihood. If that happens, then I have to ask, 'Who's next?'" Branse pointed out that the town of Bolton itself makes use of some of the products from the Bolton Notch quarry.

Auditors critical of ag agency

HARTFORD (AP) — In a highly critical report being released today, the state auditors say they found "numerous problems and matters of concern" primarily in record-keeping by the Department of Agriculture and its Connecticut Marketing Authority. Auditors Henry J. Becker Jr. and Leo V. Donohue said agency books and records were sometimes several years behind, checks from permits and licenses were not being promptly deposited and that, in some cases, inventories of agency property "were generally incomplete or non-existent."

"They found weak controls over petty cash and said employee attendance and leave records were poorly maintained. They said the 107-person, $4 million-a-year agency needs more operations manual spelling out practices and policies and containing "a clear statement of agency mission and goals." Agriculture Commissioner Kenneth B. Andersen said most of the auditors' recommendations pertained to "housekeeping chores" and said they were being addressed.

He noted that the audit covered the three years ending June 30, 1986, and said that in the past year he has made numerous personnel changes and upgraded operations to address some of the auditors' complaints. "We have taken the (audit) and really put it to work," Andersen said, adding that he had visited the auditors recently and had gone over the report point by point. Although he said he was proud of his agency's operations, "obviously, I've got to do more."

Fires in West rage on 682 square miles

By The Associated Press

Wildfires raged on 682 square miles in seven Western states today, threatening valuable timberlands, closing campgrounds to Labor Day vacationers and scorching giant California redwoods in one of the worst forest fire outbreaks in decades. The fires in Northern California, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Wyoming, Arizona and Washington have destroyed at least 42 homes and injured more than 50 people while consuming nearly 480,000 acres of tinder-dry brush and timber. Nearly 18,000 people in California and Oregon have been evacuated, authorities said, and the fires are costing the government $3 million to $5 million a day to fight. "This is perhaps the worst fire situation we have ever had at one time," said George Dunlop, assistant U.S. secretary of agriculture, at the Boise (Idaho) Interagency Fire Center, which coordinates federal firefighting nationwide. Most of the blazes are believed to have been touched off by lightning. More than 18,000 firefighters, some from as far away as the Northeast and Deep South, battled countless hotspots but were so overwhelmed that some blazes were allowed to burn unchecked. "We don't have as many firefighters as we need for what we're not going to get them, we're told," said Ron DeHart of the Oregon Unified Coordination Group, which is overseeing the fire fighting in that state. "It just means we'll have to be very careful with the people we have," he said. Forecasts of stronger east winds today could cause trouble on fire lines in the state's southwest corner, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

Lightning over California on Thursday touched off still more fires, and scorching summer temperatures and steady winds fueled the flames. "They will be fighting some of them until the snow flies," said George Leonard, associate chief of the U.S. Forest Service, said in Boise. Smoke hung heavy over parts of the West. At Yosemite National Park, motorists were advised to drive with their headlights on in daylight. Oregon officials issued an air pollution health alert for the state's southwest valley. In California, where 22 counties were under a state of emergency today, forestry officials said the outbreak of lightning-caused fires was the worst since the summer of 1977, when blazes blackened more than 500,000 acres. By late Thursday, nearly 13,000 firefighters battled more than 1,300 fires in California, covering 378,000 acres from the Oregon line to the Mojave Desert. About 15,000 people were evacuated. At least 52 people were injured and 32 homes lost. Fire covered 67,000 acres in Oregon, and at least 2,800 people were evacuated. At least 10 homes were destroyed and seven firefighters hurt. The number of firefighters reached 3,900. More than 31,000 acres were burning in Idaho; only 13,000 acres were being fought. An 18,000-acre blaze 29 miles east of Cascade was being allowed to burn because of the high cost of fighting it. Firefighters in Washington mopped up a 355-acre fire north of Spokane, and controlled an 80-acre blaze that forced the evacuation to campers in the Cascade Mountains. Three fires totaling nearly 3,900 acres burned in Arizona.

Teens bring noise, traffic to Parkade

Profanity, blaring radios, and loitering annoy merchants, shoppers

By Anita M. Caldwell
Herald Reporter

David Kay of Manchester said he wants the Parkade management to "clean it up." Margaret Laliberte of Manchester said, "Younger kids shouldn't be allowed to hang around." A woman who didn't want to be identified said, "I'm going elsewhere to do my shopping." What these shoppers are concerned with is the influx of teen-agers who have designated the Parkade's parking lot as their home away from home. On any night of the week at the Broad Street side of the Manchester Parkade, young people ranging from 14 to 23 parade up and down the sidewalk as if it's their beat. A stream of cars weaves through the parking lot, with young people inside the cars shouting and hooting to their peers on the sidewalk. Someone standing on the curb who's trying to cross to the parking lot might as well be waiting for a bus.

Teen-agers form a cavalcade of cars on the Broad Street side of the Manchester Parkade. The scene is a nightly one.

THE TEEN SCENE creates traffic jams and noisy disturbances. It also hurls business, some retailers say. "It's a very tough situation," said Steve Sufrin, manager of Bernie's, Newark, and an appliance store. "There's a lot of noise, a lot of city to city traffic," he said. "I don't know how many times a car comes around the parking lot. Sufrin said kids who hang around in front of the stores deter shoppers as well. The management of the Super Stop & Shop agreed. A spokesman for the store said more young people seem to hang out outside his store because it's open 24 hours. John Ortielli, manager of Ortielli's Scoop & Deli, said the parking lot activity keeps some families away. "It's crazy — like a circus," he said. The action starts around 6 p.m. and continues until 1 a.m., he said. Many retailers, however, contend the teens at the Parkade are not violent. Craig Drake of Record Breaker said, "It's the tour here. Kids drive in to be seen. Where else are they going to go?" He added that he's had no problems. Ortielli agreed. "They're not violent," he said. "It's a lot of driving around. We did the same things when we were kids." HEAVY PATROLS and security keep the potential violence and vandalism in check. The Manchester Police Department plays artful dodger between 8 p.m. and midnight each night of the week. Manchester police are on duty at the Parkade until 1 a.m., said Gary J. Wood, a police department spokesman. Officers control traffic, issue public disturbance infractions and arrest offenders for breach of peace. SOMETIMES POLICE patrols aren't enough. For $21 an hour, store owners can increase police security. Many retailers have done just that. Stop & Shop hires extra police patrols for Thursday through Sunday nights from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Broad Street to keep traffic moving as well as relying on the patrols at the entrance to the store. Fun Stop has increased patrols from 8 p.m. to midnight on weekends and Marshall's has hired additional patrols from 6 to 10 p.m. Many retailers believe the police are doing the best they can. But they are also aware of the department's limitations because the Parkade is private property. Wood pointed out that if there is a complaint about a person riding a skateboard on the sidewalk, for instance, only a private security guard can escort the rider off the premises. SOME STORE MANAGERS have hired their own security officers. Management at the Stop & Shop and Bradlee's, with common ownership, pay for overnight coverage. Please turn to page 13

Young people say it's 'a little world'

Joe Franklin, 17, of Manchester, said he hangs around the Manchester Parkade because "there's no other place for teen-agers to go." From 6 p.m. until after 2 a.m., Franklin meets his friends. "The Parkade has become the mecca for many teens from Manchester and surrounding towns. "The Parkade has its own little world," said Theresa Sears, 18, of Manchester. Sears said there's no other place for her and her friends to go without spending money. "But money doesn't appear to be the issue. Sears, like her friends, pays close attention to her appearance. This means hip clothing, makeup, and eye-catching jewelry. She smokes cigarettes almost constantly. "Who pays for the image?" Sears, who's unemployed, gets about $50 a week from home, she said. # Summer night brings vulgarity, loud music

In a group, the teen-agers who spend their evenings at the Parkade are rude, insolent and noisy. Individually, they are polite, chatty, and street-smart. The metamorphosis that occurs is baffling, however typical it may be. An observer recently watched what groups of young men and women strolling up and down the Parkade sidewalk on Wednesday and a Friday night between 8:30 and 11 p.m. in mid-August. Before too long, the groups met, exchanged cryptic conversation and laughter, and then the rituals began. A few girls could be seen parked on a bench near the Super Stop & Shop supermarket. A large portable stereo beside them blared music. They were unaware that they were being watched from the parking lot nearby. Clad in jeans, boots, and light sweater tops, they sang loudly along. The words were clear. The language was profane. "They party together, and they competed with honking horns and shouts of young people as they dashed between the cavalcade of Mark Miles, 17, left, a Manchester High School student, says "people come here to have fun." Miles wants to study computer technology. He said he's not at the Parkade much in the winter months because he's usually ice skating or snowmobiling. cars. In an area of the parking lot near the supermarket, a group of girls and boys stood up in the back of a medium-size black pickup truck. They huddled together and swayed to the beat of rock 'n' roll as music blared from a large radio. At first, the group didn't notice someone watching them from outside Bentley's. Then suddenly one of the boys turned and shouted, "Hey, take a picture of this!" referring to the suggestive motion in the truck. Two officers from the Manchester Police Department hurriedly walked over to a group of young people who stood around a car. After a heated exchange with the police, the group's member dispersed, driving off in their cars. Customers walked in and out of the stores. As they purposefully rushed to their parked cars, some customers seemed oblivious. Others seemed to accept the activities. None looked as though they were out for a quiet evening's stroll or window shopping.

Richard Marx finds success

NEW YORK (AP) — When he was 18 years old, singer-songwriter Richard Marx received a phone call from his Illinois home offering the aspiring musician: "Hey man, Chicago ain't the place if you want to do this..."

Since the caller was music superstar Lionel Richie, Marx listened. Five long years and several near-record deals later, Marx has released his self-titled debut album and scored a Top 10 single...

Marx is still in rock 'n' roll, as his hit single — featuring ex-Eagles Randy Meisner and Timothy B. Schmidt on back-up vocals and Joe Walsh on slide guitar — demonstrates. But when he recorded the song, Marx had no idea it would climb to No. 3 on the Billboard charts...

"I worked on his albums, background vocals, and he was real cool. He's a good guy," Marx recalled in a recent interview with the publisher's office. "It was very different music than I wanted to do, because I was into rock 'n' roll, but I was not a idiot either. I knew it was a great opportunity..."

"I've got to admit, there's some gratification out of the fact that all those idiots at all those record companies said, 'This song's not happening,'" he continued. "Record companies tend to want you to be somebody else, and I'm not an actor..."

Manhattan appears quite happy with his work as Richard Marx. In fact, top company executive Joe Smith suggested Marx's debut album could sell as many as 4 million copies...

"I heard about that, and I said, 'No way. He didn't say that. He used my name,'" said a bemused Marx. "The song — and its accompanying video — detail all the pitfalls of trying to make it in Los Angeles, but Marx insists it's not merely an exercise in autobiography..."

'Dirty Dancing' is satisfying

By Bob Thomas The Associated Press Dirty dancing is what the young employees of a Catskills summer resort do to unwind after a long day of catering to the demands of the New York vacationers...

Their dancing is not all that dirty — this is 1987, after all. But its loose-limbed, hip-thrilling sensuality first alarms, then transfuses "Baby" Houseman when she stumbles into the workers' quarters. Her fascination centers on Johnny Castle, who has escaped his rough background to become dance instructor at the resort...

The beginning premise of "Dirty Dancing" is a richly satisfying little film from the fledgling company of Vestron Pictures. It compares favorably to "Saturday Night Fever" and "Flashdance" in its depiction of how pop dancing can elevate determined people above their commonplace lives...

The Houseman family arrives for a pleasant holiday at Kellerman's — the doctor (Jerry Orbach), his understanding wife (Kelly Bishop) and their disparate daughters, the dull-witted Lisa (Jane Bruckner) and Baby (Jennifer Grey), an idealist with her sights on the Peace Corps...

The family tranquility is broken when Baby falls under the spell of Johnny Castle (Patrick Swayze). When Johnny's dance partner (Cynthia Rhodes) becomes pregnant and opts for an abortion, he needs someone to help him fulfill an appearance at a nearby resort. In Henry Higgins style, Johnny teaches the inept Baby the mambo routine. She also submits willingly to his passion...

Houseman is shattered by what he considers his daughter's deception, and Johnny is fired by the iron-fisted resort operator (Jack Weston). You can bet that all of the misunderstandings will be overcome by the rousing dance finale...

What elevates "Dirty Dancing" above the flood of "Rocky" clones is the inclusive script by Eleanor Bergstein, razor-sharp portrayals by a talented cast, the joyful

'Ollie mania' fades away as fast as his TV image

PHILMONT, N.Y. (AP) — The Ollie North and Betsy dolls have gone the way of the hula hoop, the lava lamp and 3-D movies. "Ollie mania," the national craze that followed the Marine lieutenant colonel's congressional testimony on his role in the Iran-contra affair, has faded as fast as his image from the nation's TV screens...

Hudson and his wife, Shana, designed the dolls, modeling them after Ken and Barbie, shortly after the fired National Security Council aide testified July 7-13. Hudson said his $20,000 investment has returned $1,200. Philmont, North's hometown about 30 miles south of Albany, honored its local hero with a parade Aug. 15. DEAR ABBY: Just yesterday, my father pulled a clipping of your column out from his wallet and asked me to write to you and find out how old it is. Here it is: DEAR ABBY: I'm answer to "Too Tall," women in the know go for small men. That's why so many women go wild over Latin Americans and fight over jockeys. The hit all men tend to fall apart early. They get potbellies and double chins, and succumb to heart attacks in their mid-40s. While the little wiry men are still going strong...

DEAR MR. ANDERSON: 1. What difference does it make whether children or kids are called "kids"? Labels are meaningless. Feelings speak volumes. 2. Electronic toys will never replace electronic toys because electronic toys cannot answer questions, nor do they kiss the kids goodnight. DEAR MR. ANDERSON: Our 20-year-old unmarried daughter brought her 1-month-old baby girl to us and said, "Here, keep her, she's yours!" My wife worked days and I worked the night shift so one of us would always be with that beautiful child we called "Sweetie." We cared for her for five years. We were the only mother and daddy she knew. Our daughter, Sweetie's real mother, would run in and run out. She pulled the penny for All Children's and sent a check or money order and a long, stamped (39 cent), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

DEAR MR. ANDERSON: Our 20-year-old unmarried daughter brought her 1-month-old baby girl to us and said, "Here, keep her, she's yours!" My wife worked days and I worked the night shift so one of us would always be with that beautiful child we called "Sweetie." We cared for her for five years. We were the only mother and daddy she knew. Our daughter, Sweetie's real mother, would run in and run out. She pulled the penny for All Children's and sent a check or money order and a long, stamped (39 cent), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Hotel chain selling for $1.06 billion

LONDON (AP) — Ladbroke Group PLC, a British betting, leisure and hotels conglomerate, announced today it has agreed to buy Hilton International Co. for $1.06 billion from Allegis Corp., the parent company of United Airlines.

Ladbroke said it will finance the acquisition of the 91-hotel chain partly by raising $419 million through a rights issue, the sale of new shares to existing shareholders.

Ladbroke, whose shareholders must approve the purchase, said the rest of the financing will come from bank loans.

New York-based Hilton International is a separate company from Los Angeles-based Hilton Hotels Corp., a publicly traded company that operates Hilton hotels in the United States.

Allegis is based in Chicago. Ladbroke shares fell the equivalent of 15 cents to $7.09 on the London Stock Exchange after the announcement.

"To have secured Hilton at a reasonable price is a great coup for Ladbroke," said Ladbroke Chairman Cyril Stein.

As part of the purchase agreement, Hilton will operate the 600-bedroom Toronto Westin for a minimum of 20 years. The Toronto Westin had belonged to another Allegis subsidiary.

Allegis previously had indicated it was interested in selling its Hilton subsidiary. Several international airlines, as well as French and U.S. hotel chains, had shown interest in buying it.

Ladbroke announced its interest last week.

Hilton International had pretax profit of $47.6 million on revenue of $754.5 million in 1986.

Ladbroke had pretax profit of $91 million on sales of $1.6 billion in the first six months of this year.

In the rights issue, Ladbroke said it will offer its shareholders one ordinary share at $6.24 for every five shares owned. Ladbroke said a bank has already underwritten the issue.

Pioneer tries to keep lease

Pioneer Systems Inc. is continuing efforts to negotiate a lease with real estate agent Robert W. Weinberg so that the company can remain at its present location on Hale Road, Alan H. Greenstadt, Pioneer's chairman and president said Tuesday.

Weinberg bought the 89,000-square-foot building in June from Somerville Corp. for $4.5 million. Pioneer has a lease on the building until December 1987.

Greenstadt said the company, which manufactures parachutes and other aircraft deceleration systems, wants to remain in the area.

Neither Greenstadt nor Weinberg would reveal details of the negotiations.

Purolator OKs subsidiary plan

WILTON (AP) — Shareholders of Purolator Courier Corp. have voted final approval of a merger plan making Purolator a separate operating, wholly owned subsidiary of Emery Air Freight, Emery announced.

The vote was taken at a special meeting Thursday of Purolator shareholders in Basking Ridge, N.J., and announced in Wilton.

According to terms of the merger agreement, each of the 17 percent of the Purolator shares Emery does not own will be converted into the right to receive $40 principal amount of Emery's 13 percent junior subordinate debentures due 2002.

MCI will buy RCA Globcom

FAIRFIELD (AP) — MCI Communications Corp. will buy RCA Global Communications Inc. from GE for approximately $160 million, the companies announced.

MCI and GE have signed a letter of intent and expect to close the deal by Sept. 30, the companies said in a joint announcement Thursday. The price of the transaction is subject to closing date adjustments.

RCA Globcom, headquartered in Piscataway, N.J., is an international telecommunications company whose principal businesses are international telex and high speed data transmission. RCA merged with GE in June 1986.

MCI currently provides international voice and messaging services through a subsidiary. The transaction is subject to the execution of a definitive agreement and regulatory approval.

One-millionth shave

George Barnett of Canton, Mass., one of about 200 employees who shave daily at the Gillette Safety Razor Division's Shave Test Center in Boston, conducts the one-millionth test since 1972, when the center opened. Watching during the Tuesday shave is Eloise Gross of Jamaica Plain, Mass., a test center assistant. Results of the tests are recorded and fed into computers for tabulation.

Women gain in jobs & pay, but still earn less than men

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women are making gains in jobs and pay, but still earn much less than men, largely because of clustering in certain jobs and lack of work experience, a government study says.

The Census Bureau said Thursday that women's earnings climbed to 70 cents for every dollar men took home in 1986, up from 62 cents in 1979. The ratio is better among younger age groups, the report said.

The report is based on a detailed analysis of income in 1984, the most recent year for which complete figures are available, but includes some updated 1986 figures from the Current Population Survey taken last March.

Among non-college women, the study found that grouping them into female-dominated jobs seems to be the major factor in holding down wages. For those with college degrees, however, lack of job experience was the largest problem, followed by job clustering.

But Gordon W. Green Jr. of the bureau's division of socioeconomic statistics says the findings also may indicate progress for women.

"We're seeing some real changes in women's labor force participation ... and I think women are showing more commitment to the labor force and getting more career oriented," Green said.

"The number of females as a percent of full-time workers rose in a number of professional, managerial and technical occupations," the report noted.

It cites the accounting profession, in which females increased their share from 34 percent to 45 percent between 1979 and 1986. For the same period their share of computer programmers went from 28 percent to 40 percent; lawyers from 10 percent to 15 percent; and managers and administrators from 22 percent to 29 percent. Green said the study also found that the difference between wages of men and women is narrower for younger age groups than older ones.

Between the ages of 21 and 29, women averaged 83 percent of men's pay, while those 30 to 44 took home only 72 percent of men's wages, and in the 45 to 64 group pay for women was only 60 percent of men's.

This may be because younger women are studying more technical occupations in college and spending more time developing their careers once they enter the labor force, Green said.

Green said this indicates that if women go to college, they should study fields men have traditionally studied, such as law, engineering, science and mathematics. If they do not choose college, they should develop technical training or enter the skilled trades, he said.

And, Green added, if family duties call them away from work, women should try to limit those interruptions so they will not lose their seniority or let their skills become obsolete.

Interruptions in careers was another major factor cited for pay differences. Forty-seven percent of employed females had been off work for at least six months sometime in their work lives, the study found, compared with only 13 percent of men.

Family duties were the most common reason for women, to have taken time off, while for men the major reason was inability to find work.

And these work absences have an effect on future wages, the report found.

The study reported that among full-time workers average hourly pay for men was $10.82 while women earned $7.52, or 70 cents for every dollar. But for people who ever had had a work interruption of six months or more, average hourly pay for both men and women was sharply less.

The report, based on a survey of 20,000 U.S. households, concluded that while women have been making headway in many male-dominated jobs in this decade, major workplace differences remain between the sexes.

"Working in an occupation that has a high proportion of women has a negative effect on earnings," the study said.

"Among female college graduates, for example, a 1 percent increase in the proportion of women in an occupation reduces earnings by 0.42 percent," the study said.

It found clustering of women appears to be the largest factor for lower earnings among women without college degrees, accounting for 30 percent of the wage difference between the sexes. Lack of work experience was blamed for between 14 percent and 22 percent of their lower pay.

Some social scientists contend grouping of women into certain jobs is a result of discrimination, while others claim women often choose jobs which give them more flexibility to be near home and have time with their families.

For college graduates, being clustered in female jobs was blamed for 17 percent of their lower pay, while the biggest factor was having less work experience than men, which was blamed for 23 percent of the difference.

The report found several areas in which women tended to be clustered, including secretaries, 99.2 percent in 1986; registered nurses, 94.6 percent; bookkeepers and accounting clerks, 88.1 percent; nursing aides, 85.1 percent; and cashiers, 77.7 percent.
