Strong storms bring hail, winds, tornadoes

By The Associated Press

Lameza, one of four tornadoes reported within 50 miles of Lubbock, the National Weather Service said.

The thunderstorms spawned golf ball-size hail on Melrose, Texas, and Salina, Kan., and 1/2-inch hail near Portales, N.M., and Orton, Okla. Tornadoes, recorded winds gusting to 53 mph during the storms.

Showers and thunderstorms also continued today from South Carolina to Virginia, where the James River rose above flood stage Wednesday in the capital city of Richmond.

Public Safety Director Jack M. Fulton said some businesses and streets in a low-lying area of downtown would have high water today, but the flooding would be minor and serious property damage was not expected.

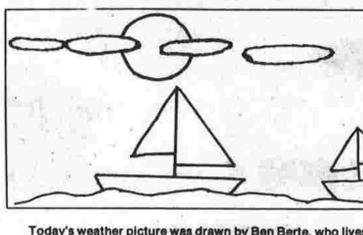

Dense fog was forming across parts of northern Lower Michigan, West Virginia, northern Pennsylvania and upstate New York as well as parts of Vermont and Maine.

Fog was reported on the Oregon and Washington coasts, and a travelers advisory for heavy smoke was issued for Shasta and Trinity counties in Northern California, where visibilities as low as a quarter-mile were reported.

FOCUS

Seafaring Sailors

Hundreds of U.S. sailors in the Persian Gulf have been having rough tours of duty lately. But they can be thankful that the Navy has changed its disciplinary measures over the years. In 1848, sailors guilty of bad cooking could be given 12 strokes of the whip. Those using foul language, wearing dirty clothes and neglecting their mess utensils met the same fate. Fewer strokes were given for certain other infractions, such as appearing naked on deck or being too noisy.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is Secretary of the Navy? WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — The city of Cologne is located in West Germany.

Your Birthday

Friday, Sept. 11, 1987

Many of the lessons you've learned from past experiences will be used to your advantage in the year ahead. This pertains to your social life, as well as to your professional life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep your temper in check today if someone throws cold water on a proposal about which you are all steamed up. You won't need this person's approval anyway. Making changes are ahead for Virgo in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-2428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Think carefully at this time before assuming any new, long-range financial obligations. You don't want to put yourself in a position where you'll later be pressed for funds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might get a title lifted today because a person with whom you are trying to cooperate doesn't show you equal consideration.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A co-worker might try to steal the limelight today, and take credit for something you accomplished. It will be up to you to set the record straight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your happy-go-lucky spirit might not be shared by a cranky companion today. If this occurs, find other friends more amenable to having a good time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A matter of importance that you want to conclude today can be finalized, but it could prove to be rather difficult to do so. Don't quit.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) When dealing with a touchy friend today, be careful not to bring up an old, unresolved issue. It could ignite sparks.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your possibilities for profit are reasonably good today, but there are indications that obstacles will have to be overcome. Be persistent.

TALURIUS (April 20-May 20) Something about which you are enthusiastic might not be of equal interest to one to whom you are closely associated. Handle this matter carefully.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Before venturing your assistance today, be sure you get a complete picture in advance. You may be subjecting yourself to greater responsibilities than you realize.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone with whom you may be involved socially today could have a chip on his or her shoulder. Try not to be the one who knocks it off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Associates will be extremely annoyed with you today if they feel you're only looking out for your own interests and ignoring theirs. Walk the middle line.

Current Quotations

"Imagine, if you will, that the U.S. might continue blindly on its present course of excessive nuclear armament, traveling alone and pointlessly down a blind alley of history and ending up militarily musclebound, uncompetitive in industry, agriculture, or technology, irrelevant to the world of the 21st century — and broke." — Former Colorado Sen. MHS teachers divided on butt ban

By Andrew J. Davis Herald Reporter

Faculty members at Manchester High School are split on whether the new school smoking policy discriminates against students, an informal poll of staff members revealed this week.

The policy, passed by the Manchester Board of Education and put into effect when school began Sept. 1, forbids students from smoking or carrying smoking materials during school or during school functions, though it allows staff and visitors to smoke in certain places at certain times.

"There are a lot of double standards," said Carol Cowing, a MHS math teacher. "There are drinking laws, too."

Cowing, a non-smoker, said that because faculty members are not allowed to smoke in front of students and because teachers are adults, a double standard does not exist.

"We're not giving a bad example," Cowing said. "Until they ban smoking in all work places, it should be allowed."

Millie Costa, a co-worker, agreed.

"It goes by age," said Costa. "An English teacher and a non-smoker. Students at 18 may think it's unfair, but it's not unfair."

The school board approved the policy recently to comply with two new state laws. One forbids smoking by students in school and during school functions, and the other outlaws teen-agers under 18 to buy smoking materials as of Oct. 1. Currently, the law forbids teens under 18 from buying smoking materials.

One teacher, a smoker who refused to give her name, said a ban on faculty smoking would cause teachers who smoke to leave school grounds during free periods to indulge in their habit.

She added that faculty members who smoke have always been courteous about their habit.

Frankly, many of us who smoke are so self-conscious that you won't find faculty members in a smoke-filled room."

Some teachers said they did see the new policy as a double standard.

Phil Stearns, an English teacher, said the school should be completely smoke-free. He said students know that some of their teachers smoke.

"We should realize we're all in the same boat... We teach by example," he said.

A number of students said they did not like the new smoking policy.

"I think it stinks," said Amy Kellner, an 11th-grader at the school. "I don't think it's right to deny us an education just because we have a smoking problem."

Penalties for violating the policy include a one-day in-school suspension, with the school contacting the offender's parents, to a 10-day suspension for four-time offenders.

"It stinks," said Denise Morissette, an 11th-grader. "But it is making us smoke less."

The teachers agreed. Since the policy went into effect, students are smoking less and the school is cleaner.

Hospital starts series on eating

Fad diets will be the first subject in Manchester Memorial Hospital's Community Health Education Series.

"Taking A Look At Fad Diets" will be presented at the hospital's H. Louise Ruddell Auditorium on Wednesday at 6 p.m. Nancy Egelhofer, a registered dietitian with the hospital, will be the speaker. The program is free and open to the public.

Other topics will include: "How Are You Managing Stress?" scheduled for Sept. 23; "Caretakers — Who's Taking Care of You?" Sept. 30; "Alcohol in America," Oct. 7; "AIDS Update," Oct. 21; "Estate Planning," Oct. 28 and 29; and "Suddenly Single," Nov. 4.

All programs will start at 6 p.m. in the auditorium except for "Estate Planning." It will begin at 7 p.m., but also will be held in the auditorium.

For more information, contact the hospital at 647-6600.

Town wants suit dismissed

The Town of Manchester will move to have the court dismiss the town as a defendant in a suit brought by a woman who claims to have been injured in an accident involving vehicles of the Eighth Utilities District Fire Department, Town Attorney John W. Cooney said last week.

Cooney said he assumes the attorney for the plaintiff named the town as one of the defendants because he was not aware of the relationship of the town and the district.

The suit, filed in Superior Court at Hartford two weeks ago, also names as defendants the district and district firefighters Thomas O'Marra and Alex Zagan. The complaint said they were drivers of district fire vehicles that pulled out from the shoulder of Interstate 84 in front of a car driven by Judy A. Gianantoni, 38, of South Windsor, on Aug. 29, 1986.

She is seeking damages of more than $15,000 in the suit.

Exit 58 on I-84 is shifted

As of Wednesday, Exit 58 from I-84 east to Roberts Street and Silver Lane was shifted about 150 feet south. A new off-ramp located just after the Main Street overpass will serve as temporary access from I-84 eastbound to Roberts Street and Silver Lane until next spring. The change was made in conjunction with the I-84 widening project under way in East Hartford.

Voter sign-up session is tonight

The Registrars of Voters are holding voter-making sessions tonight from 6:30-8:30 at the Marshall's Mall in the Broad Street Parkade, and from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Savings Bank of Manchester on Main Street.

Another session will be Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Super Stop & Shop at the Parkade. If it rains, the session will be moved inside Marshall's mini-mall.

Sole N. Elm bid higher than expected

Faced with too high a bid for the construction of housing for the elderly on North Elm Street, town officials will meet next week to decide what to do.

The only bid submitted Wednesday was almost $300,000 higher than the $1.3 million authorized for the project.

The bid, submitted by Naek Construction Co. Inc. of Vernon, was $1,595,000.

Carol Shanley, executive director of the Housing Authority of Manchester, said today that town officials connected with the project plan to discuss alternatives.

The town must make use of the North Elm Street parcel by July of next year or surrender it, under terms of the will by which the land was given to the town.

The plan is to construct 24 apartments for rental to elderly tenants and to have them managed by the Housing Authority of Manchester.

MMH receives $20,000 bequest

Manchester Memorial Hospital has announced the receipt of a bequest in the amount of $20,000 from the estate of Alfred W. Cavedon, formerly of South Windsor, who died in March.

Cavedon was appointed an incorporator and trustee at the hospital in 1964 and was named an honorary trustee in 1974. As a member of the board of the hospital, he served as a member of both the executive and finance committees. He was president of Aldon Associates, Inc., and served as president and chairman of the board of People's Savings Bank of Rockville.

Balloon stars at Coventryfest

COVENTRY — A hot-air balloon designed and built by a Bolton resident will star this year's Coventryfest.

The festival will be Sept. 19 at the Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School on Route 31. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., rain or shine.

Balloonist James Clark of Bolton designed and built the 50,000-cubic foot balloon. It is dedicated to the memory of prisoners of war and those missing in action in Southeast Asia and throughout the world, said William Thurston, president of the Coventry

Eighth voters approve a loan

At a meeting that lasted only 11 minutes Wednesday night, about 30 voters of the Eighth Utilities District gave the district directors authority to borrow more than $100,000 to buy a $195,645 communications system for the district's fire department.

Only three persons voted against the move, including District Director Willard Marvin, who said after the meeting that he is uncomfortable with the purchase and with the confusion over the financing arrangements.

Before the vote was taken, District Director Walter Joyner read a letter from Bruce Marcus, president of Marcus Communications Inc. of 275 New State Road, criticizing the procedure under which the communications system was purchased from Motorola Communications and Electronics Inc. of Rocky Hill, the only firm that has been tested in use.

Marcus said the bid specifications were written for the benefit of one bidder only. He called on the directors to reconsider the purchase. He also questioned plans to change to a radio band separate from other fire departments in the area.

The critics by Marcus echoed those made earlier this year by Richard Skoglund, a district resident and former district firefighter which the communications system was purchased from Motorola Communications and Electronics Inc. of Rocky Hill, the only firm that has been tested in use.

Director Joseph Tripp, who is fire commissioner, responding to the letter, said the district fire department wanted a contract that provided for servicing the equipment, and the district got that in the bid.

Tripp said there was enough flexibility in the specifications so that other firms could have submitted bids.

After the meeting, Joyner said it may not be necessary to borrow money to finance the purchase. But he said he wanted the authority to do so if it is necessary.

He said the district will have to have 70 percent of the purchase price when the equipment is delivered, 20 percent when it is installed, and the remainder after it has been tested in use.

But he said that the district may be able to finance the purchase by transferring line items in the budget.

Joyner said the directors already had authority to borrow up to $100,000. Wednesday's vote gives directors the authority to borrow additional funds.

The district had planned to pay back the loan over a five-year period at $40,000 a year.

Gregory B. Haroian D.M.D.

Dr. Gregory B. Haroian is pleased to announce the opening of his office for the practice of General Dentistry. Dr. Haroian, a native of Manchester, graduated from Manchester High School in 1974. He received his B.S. degree in Biology and Psychology from Trinity College in Hartford and his D.M.D. degree from the University of Connecticut School of Dental Medicine in 1983. His professional memberships include The Hartford Dental Society, Connecticut State Dental Association, and the Academy of General Dentistry. Dr. Haroian treats all age groups and offers evening and Saturday appointments. His new office is located at 1160 Ellington Road in South Windsor.

PZC OKs extension for Homart

By Andrew J. Davis Herald Reporter

The Homart Development Co. had its wish granted Wednesday. The Chicago-based company, the main developer of the proposed mall at Buckland Hills in the northern section of Manchester, requested that the Planning and Zoning Commission grant it an extension on its open-space plan for the mall. The subsidiary of Sears, Roebuck & Co. now has been granted the extension, but was not given a time limit on it.

According to Mark Pellegrini, planning director, the company would have to submit an open-space plan the next time it appears before the commission, no matter when that will be. He said that the open-ended extension would permit the company to revise its plans at a more leisurely pace.

"Whenever their next appearance... they will have to provide an open-space plan," Pellegrini told the commission Wednesday night. The motion was approved unanimously.

In May, the commission approved site plans for the proposed mall, but required that Homart submit revised open-space plans within 90 days. Zoning regulations require that Homart set aside 10 acres of land for open-space recreational activities.

Even though the company designated 12 acres as open space, three acres were part of a rainwater detention basin and 1 acre was located on two strips of land next to the mall. Commission members were split on whether the plan met requirements.

Joseph LeBuc, a senior development director for Homart, said the company had requested the extension because it had just hired a landscaping contractor, who required more time to complete the open-space plans for the proposed 785,000-square-foot mall.

The mall's construction, which was originally slated for June, has since been delayed with the July decision by Hartford Superior Court Judge John P. Maloney. Maloney ruled that the town had acted illegally when approving $13 million in tax-increment bonds for road and sewer improvements near the site without voter approval.

Pee-wee's pictures

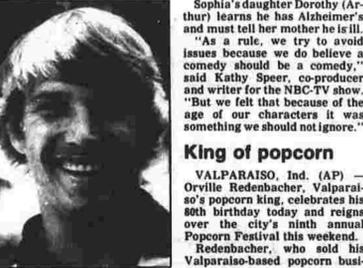

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pee-wee Herman has signed with Paramount Pictures to develop, write, produce and star in movies.

The first picture will be an as-yet untitled movie about the circus, scheduled for production this fall. Randall Kleiser will direct from a screenplay by George McGrath and Paul Reubens, which is Herman's real name.

Reubens' first movie, "Pee-wee's Big Adventure," was an international hit and broke box office records in Paris and London. His Saturday morning show on CBS, "Pee-wee's Playhouse," has received 12 Emmy nominations.

Connecticut In Brief

Parents charged in car deaths

CANTERBURY — Felony charges have been filed against the parents of two children who died of carbon monoxide poisoning when they were left to sleep overnight in the family car, police said.

Leonard Edmond, 33, and his wife Carleen, 32, of Canterbury were charged Wednesday with three counts each of neglect of a minor, state police spokesman Marcy Stamm said. They were released on written promises to appear in Danbury Superior Court on Sept. 23.

Each count is punishable on conviction by a $500 fine and up to 10 years in prison.

State police spokesman Sgt. Robert Slattery said Judge Richard C. Noren signed warrants for the parents' arrest Wednesday. Investigators concentrated on the car and its carbon monoxide levels, but Slattery declined further comment on the investigation.

Police said the Edmonds left three of their daughters asleep in the car after returning home early on Aug. 24. The couple took their 8-month-old daughter Faye into the house to sleep there, police said.

CIA link increases stamp value

STAMFORD — A 27-year-old Stamford man who has been collecting stamps for nearly two decades made the most expensive purchase of his career this week when he paid nearly $1 million for 18 rare misprinted stamps.

But John Reznikoff is counting on two things to increase the value of his investment — the CIA's connection with the stamps and the fact that the image on the stamps is upside down, which is a rarity in the stamp business.

"You have to understand the mentality of a stamp collector," said Reznikoff, who is founder and owner of the University Stamp Company Inc. "They're going to show the stamp to their grandchildren and say, 'That's Stampcam.'"

Reznikoff paid a group of three other dealers about $50,000 each for the 18 stamps depicting an inverted candlestick. The inscription on the stamps reads "America's Light Fueled By Truth and Reason." Reznikoff bought the stamps on Monday.

The stamps were from a batch of 95 that a CIA employee bought for the agency in March 1986 at a McLean, Va., post office, according to a report by the federal Bureau of Printing and Engraving.

Mall shoppers watch fatal stabbing

NEW HAVEN — A city man faces a murder charge following the fatal stabbing of his former wife in front of her children and shoppers at the Chapel Square Mall, New Haven police said.

The suspect, Albert Harris, 34, was arrested after the 5 p.m. incident Wednesday. Police also allegedly stabbed Ricky Louls, the woman's male friend, when Louls tried to intervene.

Louls was taken to Yale-New Haven Hospital where he was listed in serious condition this morning, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Harris, who listed his address as the city YMCA, was immediately arrested by police with the help of mall security. He was charged with murder and first-degree assault, police said.

Police Cmdr. John Maher said the attack began inside the mall as Harris and his ex-wife shopped for merchandise for their four young children. Maher said Harris then chased the woman outside the mall to Crown Street and fatally stabbed her when she climbed inside Louls' black pickup truck.

Shays gets an ovation in House

WASHINGTON — Christopher Shays, a real estate broker from Stamford, Conn., and a long-time state legislator, is the newest member of Congress, replacing the only congressman known to have died from AIDS.

The Republican, who was sworn in Wednesday, received a rousing, minute-long standing ovation from his new House colleagues as he waived to them and jubilantly extended both arms and blew a kiss to his wife, family and friends sitting in the visitors' gallery.

"It's a thrill of a lifetime to be a member of the House of Representatives in Washington," the 41-year-old lawmaker told reporters Wednesday shortly after taking the oath of office.

"I don't expect in the course of my year and four months to move mountains, but I'm going to do my best to represent that district. I want to bring Washington home to the people of the 4th Congressional District and I want to bring the 4th Congressional District to Washington."

O'Neill confident on trade tour

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill, leading a trade delegation to Japan and China, said he was convinced that Japanese businessmen want to see America's trade deficit reduced because it will help them in the long run.

He rejected the notion that the Japanese were more worried about trade tariffs and other sanctions that could be imposed if Japan does not open its markets to American business, as the United States has opened its markets to the Japanese.

"The whole economy of the free world is based upon the American market and consequently they're very concerned about the health of the American economy," O'Neill told the Connecticut Radio Network in a telephone interview from Tokyo Wednesday.

The governor said he had held a series of talks with Japanese government officials and business leaders. He would not reveal the name of one Japanese company negotiating with the state to open an office.

State unrepresented at ceremony

HARTFORD — Some state officials are a bit surprised at the turn of events which will mean there will be no official Connecticut government representative in Philadelphia next week in the grand finale to the Constitutional Bicentennial celebrations.

Organizers of the festivities have rejected Secretary of the State Julie Taishian as a representative of Gov. William A. O'Neill, who cannot attend because he will be in the People's Republic of China.

The organizers rejected any stand-in for O'Neill, saying his invitation was "non-transferable." They said they already have given away Connecticut's seat at a ceremonial dinner Sept. 17.

"This really is a slap at our state," Taishian said Wednesday. "It would be like me throwing a Governor's Day here and not inviting the governor. I can't believe this. What they seem to be doing is knocking Connecticut out of the box altogether."

Girl killed by falling stone pillar

NORWALK — A 3 1/2-year-old Norwalk girl was fatally injured when a stone and brick pillar fell on her while she was walking on a sidewalk with her mother, police said.

The pillar, about 5 feet tall, fell Wednesday for no apparent reason from its post at the entrance to the Second District Water Department office on Water Street near Burrill Avenue, police Lt. Jeff Finch said.

The girl was pronounced dead at Norwalk Hospital shortly after the 5:45 p.m. accident.

Finch said he could not provide the girl's identity this morning.

Auditors, Lieberman settle phone flap

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — The state auditors and the attorney general's office say they've settled a dispute over the handling of whistleblower complaints that were filed on the hotline in the now-defunct inspector general's office.

Complaints will go to the attorney general's office, but that office will only take the whistleblower's name and phone number and forward them to the auditors.

When the General Assembly voted this year to dismantle the inspector general's office, it also agreed to transfer its responsibilities for government waste and abuse to the auditors and the attorney general.

Last week, when the transfer became official,

Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said the hotline was being transferred to his office.

That prompted the auditors, Democrat Leo V. Donohue and Republican Henry J. Becker Jr. to fire off a letter to Lieberman, reminding him that the law required complaints to go first to the auditors, because lawmakers didn't want them screened by an elected official.

Lieberman said he would meet with the auditors and settle it. As it turned out, they settled it over the phone, Donohue said Wednesday.

"He is going to take the name of anyone who has a complaint and refer it to us and we will contact the person," Donohue said.

He and James E. Kennedy, a spokesman for Lieberman, said the arrangement was satisfactory.

After the auditors evaluate any complaints, they will make recommendations for action to Lieberman's office.

Kennedy said he knew of no calls that had come in on the hotline. But, he said, two complaints had come in the mail since last week's announcement. Those were being referred to the auditors, Kennedy said.

Kennedy also confirmed that one of two investigators transferred from the inspector general's office to Lieberman's office had quit.

Tyrene T. Butler had handed in his letter of resignation Sept. 2, the day after Lieberman had introduced him and other members of the so-called Citizen Advocacy Team created by Lieberman to take up the work of the inspector general.

Judge bars evidence with AIDS

HARTFORD (AP) — An AIDS expert says he fears a judge's decision barring evidence obtained from a blood sample taken from the victim in the public's hysteria over the killer disease.

Superior Court Judge John P. Maloney ruled on Wednesday that prosecutors will not be allowed to show jurors physical evidence such as blood from the victim and the defendant, Maloney said.

The judge's decision, however, will be reviewed by the chief court administrator's office, placing the prosecution of the sexual assault case on hold, said Hartford State's Attorney John M. Bailey.

In his ruling, Maloney said he wanted to ensure the safety of court staff and onlookers, according to Assistant State's Attorney Kevin McMahon.

The judge also said people are going to be fearful of dried blood from a person with the AIDS virus regardless of evidence the virus does not survive in dried blood, according to McMahon.

John Wilcox, coordinator of AIDS Project New Haven, said he understood the judge's reasoning but he said "We know time and again through experience, that this is not an easily transferred virus. We can easily be reassured by the fact or continue pulling up hysteria and really, that is what the good judge has done."

Prosecutors had proposed putting the articles in heavy plastic bags, even double wrapping them, for examination in court during the trial of a New Britain man on charges including first-degree sexual assault.

"Our entire voluntary tax system depends on public confidence in it," Bannan said.

He said he couldn't estimate how much the state might be losing each year to tax cheats, although his predecessor, John G. Groppo, estimated earlier this year that the total could be as much as $1 billion.

The Department of Revenue Services came under fire this year for allegedly lenient treatment of tax delinquents, including the waiving of millions of dollars in penalties.

After state Sen. Reginald J. Smith, R-New Hartford, recommended some improvements, Groppo confronted the senator with a confidential tax file on a car Smith's son had purchased. After a series of public battles, Groppo resigned.

Bannan said Wednesday he was confident that episode had been put to rest. However, among his proposals Wednesday were several changes to the security and confidentiality of tax files.

Metro-North commuters like service

NORWALK (AP) — When a panel of rail commuters decided to store their fellow passengers' opinions on service and station conditions, it expected to get a long list of grievances, the chairman said.

So the Metro-North Commuter Council, set up by the legislature in 1985 to represent commuter interests, was somewhat surprised to hear that a majority of riders rated service highly.

"We anticipated having a negative response," Harry P. Harris of Fairfield, the council's chairman, said Wednesday in releasing the results at the South Norwalk station. "You anticipate that the people with gripes will be more likely to fill out and return the survey."

The survey found that 62 percent of the nearly 4,000 riders who responded rated the railroads' overall service as good or excellent.

Station facilities, however, got lower grades.

More than half of the respondents who said they use the South Norwalk station graded it as substandard or failing, and more than 40 percent of those who use the Stamford, Milford and Stratford stations gave them bad marks.

Meanwhile, those commuting from the Westport, Greens Farms New Haven, Darien and Fairfield stations rated their facilities as good.

The survey did not have respondents grade individual stations, but it analyzed results based on where commuters said they use the train.

"The one aspect of train service that showed up as being negative was cleanliness of the lavatories," Harris said.

The restrooms on the trains were rated as failing by 23.7 percent of respondents, and as substandard by another 28.9 percent.

Harris said the commuter council already has asked its staff consultant, James Finch, to analyze the railroads' cleaning procedures.

The council distributed 27,500 postpaid, mail-in survey sheets to New Haven line riders in early June. About 15 percent responded.

Harris said he has received another 400 replies that arrived too late for analysis, but that they seem to be consistent with the reported results.

The General Assembly may create a priority investigation system, which will match investigative functions to areas where the need is the greatest, and establishment of liaisons with federal and state law-enforcement agencies.

Bannan said his department would also begin providing tax fraud training programs for other law-enforcement agencies, including the state police.

State Tax Commissioner Timothy Bannan talks at a Wednesday news conference in Hartford in which he announced he will beef up enforcement of state tax laws.

New tax chief moves to revamp department

HARTFORD (AP) — State Tax Commissioner Timothy F. Bannan on the job for a month, wants to improve tax law enforcement and make his employees more aware of the need to ensure the confidentiality of tax records.

"Our entire voluntary tax system depends on public confidence in it," Bannan said.

He said he couldn't estimate how much the state might be losing each year to tax cheats, although his predecessor, John G. Groppo, estimated earlier this year that the total could be as much as $1 billion.

The Department of Revenue Services came under fire this year for allegedly lenient treatment of tax delinquents, including the waiving of millions of dollars in penalties.

After state Sen. Reginald J. Smith, R-New Hartford, recommended some improvements, Groppo confronted the senator with a confidential tax file on a car Smith's son had purchased. After a series of public battles, Groppo resigned.

Bannan said Wednesday he was confident that episode had been put to rest. However, among his proposals Wednesday were several changes to the security and confidentiality of tax files.

Among other things, a computer program is being developed to track inquiries into potentially sensitive records. In the Groppo-Smith matter, investigators were never able to determine how the file on Smith's son got to Groppo's desk from the agency's records room.

"I don't perceive that the issue of confidentiality, although it's been highlighted recently, is a problem within the tax department," Bannan said. But, he said, changes have been made in the department's employee manual emphasizing more heavily the requirement that information in tax files be kept confidential.

His department has eight tax investigators and he is asking for three more in his 1988-89 budget.

His proposals include creation of a priority investigation system, which will match investigative functions to areas where the need is the greatest, and establishment of liaisons with federal and state law-enforcement agencies.

Bannan said his department would also begin providing tax fraud training programs for other law-enforcement agencies, including the state police.

Walsh questions Ex-Reagan aides

WASHINGTON — Independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh is investigating alleged efforts by former Reagan administration officials to deceive Congress about White House involvement in aid to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Former Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., who chaired a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee until last year, said he was questioned by prosecutors several months ago about his dealings in 1985 with, then-National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane.

Walsh's office also has questioned staff members of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence about briefings given by McFarlane, former White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North and ex-National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter, according to sources who spoke on condition they not be named.

Ethiopia needs tons of food

WASHINGTON — The Ethiopian government has notified aid donor countries it will need 850,000 metric tons of food over the next year to offset the effects of a drought that U.S. officials say could jeopardize the lives of as many as 5 million people.

The officials said the conditions do not appear as severe as those which existed starting in 1983 and eventually threatened the lives of more than 7 million people.

According to the officials, who spoke only on condition they not be identified, the Ethiopian government and the food donor countries are better equipped to deal with the existing drought because of an early warning system and an improved transportation network. Far more trucks are available now for food distribution than there were three years ago.

1930 Oscar used as a doorstep

LOS ANGELES — A plea for an Oscar awarded in 1930 was answered by a screenwriter's son who agreed to loan the gold statuette won by his late mother, and used by her as a doorstep, to complete a Hollywood display.

Richard G. Thomson, the son of screenwriter Frances Marion, stepped forward this week to offer the statuette after learning of the plea from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, which opened the display Wednesday.

Marian received the Oscar for the screenplay of the box-office blockbuster "The Big House," a Metro Goldwyn Mayer prison drama with Wallace Beery as a hard-boiled murderer.

Bell companies can offer services

WASHINGTON — A federal judge today opened the door for the Bell operating companies to transmit computerized information services, but refused to lift restrictions that prevent the companies from making telephone equipment and providing long-distance service.

U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene said the companies can transmit computerized services, such as message-storing and alarm-monitoring, but he precluded them from providing the information itself.

Greene also said the companies will no longer have to obtain a waiver from the court to enter non-telecommunications businesses.

The seven Bell companies, spun off from American Telephone & Telegraph Co. by an antitrust decree three years ago, had sought to vastly expand their businesses by having all three restrictions of the decree removed.

The Justice Department had recommended to Greene that the Bell companies be allowed to manufacture telephone equipment and provide information services.

Americans staying single longer

WASHINGTON — Americans in record numbers are staying single through their 20s and even into their early 30s, but nine out of 10 will still marry during their lifetimes, the Census Bureau says.

In a new report Wednesday, the bureau said the percentage of men and women below the age of 35 who have not yet married has risen dramatically since 1970.

Among men between the ages of 30 and 34, those who had never married totaled 23.1 percent, according to estimates made last March. That was almost 2 1/2 times the 1970 figure of 9.4 percent.

Among women in the 30-34 age group, 14.6 percent had never been married, according to the 1987 report, more than double the 6.2 percent in 1970.

Dissidents attack Iranian offices

OSLO, Norway — Iranian dissidents occupied or attacked Iranian offices in Norway, France and West Germany today to protest the Islamic revolutionary government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Unarmed men occupied the Iranian Embassy in Oslo for more than two hours, and three people were injured, the national news agency NTB said. The 11 surrendered peacefully and were taken to police headquarters for questioning, the agency said.

In Frankfurt, West Germany, eight unarmed Iranians were detained after briefly occupying the offices of Iran Air, the national airline, and distributing leaflets calling for an uprising against the Khomeini government.

An anonymous telephone caller to The Associated Press later said the eight belonged to the People's Fedayeen, a group opposed to Khomeini.

In Paris, a group of Iranian dissidents attacked the Iran Air offices on the Avenue des Champs-Elysees, police said.

Weather key factor in forest fires

By The Associated Press

Heavy firefighters looked for help from the sky today, hoping that the rain would help them attack the fast-growing of the forest and brush fires that have charred more than 1,000 square miles in the West.

The National Weather Service, which issued travelers' advisories for Northern California because of the dense smoke that has been plaguing firefighters, said there was a good chance of rain there this afternoon and Friday.

"If we get as much as one-tenth of an inch, which we're saying is possible, that will go a long way toward shutting down the fires," said John Saltenberger of the weather service in Redding, Calif.

"Everybody will be looking to the sky to see what happens," said Tony LaCruz, a firefighter in the Klamath National Forest, where a cluster of blazes grew by 11,000 acres in 24 hours to become California's largest fire this season at 19,000 acres.

About 1,250 fires have burned nearly 545,000 acres in California since a spate of lightning strikes Aug. 28. More than 170 of the blazes remained uncontained Wednesday.

Fires have consumed 112,500 acres in Oregon and 30,800 in Idaho, and smaller fires in Washington, South Dakota, Wyoming, Arizona and Montana contributed to a total of 113,000 acres, or 1,114 square miles.

Hawaii also had more than 14,000 acres of grassland and forest on fire in Volcanoes National Park.

The latest blazes flare up were a pair of brushfires blamed on arsonists in Southern California that burned 2,200 acres Wednesday in the dry hills of Orange and Riverside counties.

One of the fires, 65 miles southeast of Los Angeles, destroyed a house, a garage and a shed and for a while Wednesday threatened other homes near the Perris area. More than 170 of the blazes remained uncontained Wednesday.

Citizen group on right track with recycling

The Connecticut Citizen Action Group is asking a lot from people in its recommendations for reducing waste and recycling, but even the laziest of us will have to agree that CCAAG is on the right track.

CCAAG has published a booklet as a guide to household recycling and waste separation, reduction and disposal. The booklet is free.

Readers will find that some of the booklet's admonitions impose a burden.

For instance, CCAAG asks us to try to avoid using dishwasher detergent boxes because there is no way now to recycle them. They have a metal spout that would have to be removed before recycling.

That example illustrates how much we will have to change our habits if we ever to achieve the ultimate in recycling and reduction of the waste we are running out of space for.

Manchester residents might be especially difficult to persuade because their town, unlike most Connecticut communities, is lucky enough to have a landfill that has space left.

But the town landfill will not last forever and townspeople, like everyone else, will have to learn how to reuse things, avoid acquiring things that can't be recycled, and take the pains to separate those things that can be recycled instead of putting them all together at the curb and watching them disappear.

New state law calls on communities to provide for recycling one-quarter of their trash by 1991.

It is pretty clear that in the future we will have to give up many of the conveniences of pre-packaging and disposability in order to avoid having our trash push us off the earth or pollute all our resources.

Getting a copy of the CCAAG booklet and making an effort to do a least some of the things CCAAG recommends will be a good start.

Even without changes in the town's trash disposal system, there are things Manchester residents can do immediately to help. They can tie newspapers together or put them in paper bags and take them to a trailer at the landfill area. At the same time they can take along glass bottles, with metal removed, and put them into bins for white, green and amber glass. They can take crankcase oil to a special place at the landfill. Residents can also develop greener thumbs by composting organic material and putting it back into the soil.

Anyone who wants a copy of the CCAAG booklet to begin developing a recycling mindset can get it writing CCAAG at 51 Van Dyke Ave., Hartford 06106, or phoning CCAAG at 527-7191.

Laser game not for convenience

To the Editor:

Within the next few days, our town zoning officer must make a decision regarding Laserquest's application for a building permit. Politics and personal appeals aside, the fundamental question is whether such a business really meets the intent of our zoning regulations and further, whether the intent of our zoning regulations is really being protected by our zoning officer.

The basic definition of Business Zone 2 is "a commercial area for the shopping convenience of the general public." In addition, there are listed several business types which do or do not fall properly under Business Zone 2. These tend to dilute the basic definition and can lead to misinterpretation if taken out of context of the entire definition. They include items such as theaters and bowling alleys, which are allowed. One wonders why the authors of the zoning ordinance included them at all. Probably those which were allowed might already have been in existence at the time the zoning ordinance was written, and those which are banned represent the authors' example of that day of those they specifically wanted to exclude.

Suppose one takes a simple approach and asks the following multiple choice question:

A game is played where players carry a high-tech device for the purpose of aiming at targets at various times under various situations and activating the device to emit a laser beam at those targets, said targets being sometimes freakish looking simulators of space creatures which can be evaluated as friend or foe.

Is it more logical to interpret the definition using the word "convenience" as something rather local that satisfies frequent daily needs of the average person; but as a laser game, shooting a beam of light? How in the world can our zoning officer make even a remotest connection with "shopping convenience"?

There is also the question of the Laserquest business itself. According to news stories, Laserquest apparently plans that the Manchester installation will be a model in which they will bring potential franchise purchasers from all over the country. That seemed to put the business venture definitely out of the general public shopping convenience category and into a much heavier commercial business category which falls well beyond the intent of Business Zone 2.

I believe that our zoning officer owes the citizens of Manchester some clear, non-evasive, non-compromising answers regarding his earlier opinions. If he cannot provide satisfactory analysis of the entire question, his usefulness to the town and his ability to make careful, logical judgments should be carefully reviewed by our town officials.

Faith and belief in EMS system

To the Editor:

This letter is written with a strong sense of faith and belief in the emergency medical treatment provided by the town of Manchester.

On July 23 at 8:55 a.m., our mother, Alyce McArdle, stopped breathing. With the prompt response of 911, a number of emergency vehicles reached her home in a matter of minutes. The paramedics worked quickly and professionally on our mother right up to the moment the Manchester hospital emergency unit took over.

Thanks to the quick response of the emergency medical technicians, the expertise at the Manchester Memorial Hospital emergency room and the dedication of the entire hospital staff, our mother is with us today. We know she would not be here today if it were not for these caring and dedicated people. We certainly feel relieved to know our mother is home today with a secure feeling knowing that if an emergency ever exists again in the future, her life is in good hands.

Reagan kept this promise

To the Editor:

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has kept one campaign promise that has gone largely unheralded. He correctly suspected that the federal budget was loaded down with waste, and he pledged to seek out and eliminate mispending.

He created a task force of business leaders and asked them to apply their managerial know-how and common sense to the problem. Its official title was the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control. But such a moniker couldn't last, and it quickly became known as the Grace Commission after the drive and determination of its chairman, J. Peter Grace.

With a powerful push from the president, the commission has made extraordinary progress at cutting government waste — against the stiff opposition of the special interests. For the fiscal years 1986 and 1987, this effort has saved close to $70 billion. This amazing achievement has been documented out of government ledgers by the Office of Management and Budget.

Thus the federal deficit rate has been cut significantly without damaging or depriving a single federal program; the fat has merely been sliced off. The biggest saving has come from modifying government procedures. In the words of the president, the Grace Commission "set down a long-term strategy for streamlining our government," which has become "the basis for on-going reforms."

Meanwhile, Congress is also turning to the Grace Commission's proposals for slashing government expenditures. One out of every three members has already joined Grace Caucuses, which have pledged to cut the waste out of the federal budget. The anti-waste drive is led in the Senate by Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., and Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., and in the House by Buddy Roemer, D-La., and Beau Boulter, R-Texas.

Because of the Grace Commission's stunning success, it has been enlarged and revitalized as the United States Taxpayers Commission. The president met on July 7 with J. Peter Grace, who set up the new commission, which will serve as the taxpayers' eyes and ears in Washington.

It will keep a permanent watch on how the taxpayers' money is spent. As Reagan later explained in his weekly radio broadcast, "J. Peter Grace and a group of dedicated business leaders are now forming the U.S. Taxpayers Commission to keep the focus on reducing costs rather than raising taxes. I expect they will bring renewed interest to streamlining federal operations and to assure that you, the American people, are getting all the government you are paying for."

The Taxpayers Commission is recruiting commissioners from the grass roots. It will seek a political balance of Democrats and Republicans, liberals and conservatives, who will seek new ways to fight waste, improve efficiency and cut spending. It will report back to the taxpayers on a regular basis on the mispending of government funds.

How to pay for yesterday's expenditures with tomorrow's revenues, meanwhile, is a troubling problem. For the spending rate is still too high and the growing tax burden on the people cannot remain free and productive if a constantly increasing share of their earnings is taken by government and spent on its purposes rather than theirs.

Reagan, pope will talk about Central America

To the Editor:

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Pope John Paul II are taking up the issue of peace in Central America today, with Reagan stressing the crucial role of the Roman Catholic cardinal who heads a commission to promote democratic reform in Nicaragua.

Reagan was scheduled to meet with the pontiff for 35 minutes this evening, four hours after greeting him in Miami at the start of John Paul's second U.S. tour.

Sources familiar with plans for their discussion, who spoke on condition they not be identified by name or position, said Reagan was to talk with the pope "about the values of democracy and the human rights values that he is trying to preserve" in Central America, and particularly in Nicaragua.

Reagan will stress that one man who can play a vital role in returning democracy to Nicaragua is that nation's Roman Catholic cardinal, Miguel Obando y Bravo, the source said.

The cardinal is an outspoken critic of the Sandinista government, but also has been named chairman of the National Reconciliation Commission. That panel, named by the Sandinista government, will monitor Nicaragua compliance with the peace plan signed last month by five Central American presidents.

The pope visits Miami

To the Editor:

THE CHURCH: The Roman Catholic Church has 555,000 members in the Archdiocese of Miami, but church officials say there are actually twice that many Catholics. Important national groups within the archdiocese are Cuban, Nicaraguan and Haitian refugees, who are urging Pope John Paul II to condemn the status quo in their homelands.

KEY ISSUE: The church's sensitive relations with Jews will be highlighted at a meeting with U.S. Jewish leaders Friday morning. That meeting nearly fell through when John Paul received Austrian President Kurt Waldheim at the Vatican in June. Waldheim has recently been accused of participating in Nazi war crimes.

Catholic and Jewish leaders discussed the Waldheim visit, and the Vatican's refusal to recognize the state of Israel, last week in Rome. Henry Siegman of the American Jewish Congress said he expected the pope "to make a very important statement on the whole subject of the relations between the church and the Jews in Miami."

PUBLIC EVENTS: Today, John Paul was to greet some 3,500 representatives of various ethnic groups at St. Mary's Cathedral. On Friday, he will celebrate Mass at Tamiami Park.

PRESIDENTIAL MEETING: The pope has scheduled a one-hour meeting with President Reagan for tonight.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Pope John Paul II are taking up the issue of peace in Central America today, with Reagan stressing the crucial role of the Roman Catholic cardinal who heads a commission to promote democratic reform in Nicaragua.

Reagan was scheduled to meet with the pontiff for 35 minutes this evening, four hours after greeting him in Miami at the start of John Paul's second U.S. tour.

Sources familiar with plans for their discussion, who spoke on condition they not be identified by name or position, said Reagan was to talk with the pope "about the values of democracy and the human rights values that he is trying to preserve" in Central America, and particularly in Nicaragua.

Reagan will stress that one man who can play a vital role in returning democracy to Nicaragua is that nation's Roman Catholic cardinal, Miguel Obando y Bravo, the source said.

The cardinal is an outspoken critic of the Sandinista government, but also has been named chairman of the National Reconciliation Commission. That panel, named by the Sandinista government, will monitor Nicaragua compliance with the peace plan signed last month by five Central American presidents.

Women have child-support obligations, too

"In this time and age of women's liberation, why is it more socially acceptable for a woman to walk out on her husband and her children?" asked a father in Rome, N.Y., in a letter to me objecting to a recent column in which I denounced men who cheat ex-wives and kids of financial support.

His wife of more than 20 years walked away, leaving three children at home aged 13, 14 and 15, plus one entering college. While the father (I'll call him Joe) was awarded custody, he says his wife was asked to pay "a measly $25 per week support for all three children" while she earned $275 a week. And even that quickly ended when she moved and changed her name.

Joe sought help from New York State's child-support unit in tracking her down in Florida — but got none though she earns more than he. So Joe asks, "Why pick on the men and let the women get away free and clear to start a new life? If this had been me, the authorities would have chased me from state to state for non-support, garnishing my wages."

"Today my three youngsters are 19, 20 and 21 years old, living at home. I still support them on my own while she wins, dates and dances. I would appreciate an article just once regarding women and their obligations to their children. I feel most women do not think they have the same obligations as men when it comes to child support."

Joe has valid objections. About 30 percent of women at the time of divorce do earn less than their husbands. And even if she earns less, the woman who abandons her children should be required to give child support.

But the sad facts are that 90 percent of the parents who walk away are male. And of the 8.8 million women bringing up children alone, only 2.1 million get full child-support payments. That's why Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan's welfare reform bill calls for automatic deduction of child support from the absent parent's wages — whether male or female.

The bill also provides that states set child-support formulas that are "binding on judges" and that the awards be reviewed at least every two years. Why? In 1985, average child support was only $27 per child a week.

What kind of food, clothing and medical care can be given for that? No wonder that half the kids being brought up by mothers are in poverty.

Clearly, however, the burden may be equally heavy on fathers who are bringing up children without child support from the mothers. The Moynihan bill would help custodial parents of either sex get adequate, regular aid.

One reason many fathers pay little or no child support is that an ex-wife can block access to children. And payments don't guarantee access.

A divorced father in Pennsylvania wrote that even though he pays $285 a month for one child plus medical insurance, "to get time with my daughter I have spent approximately $10,000 in legal fees." He now can see her 2.5 days a week, on holidays and vacations, "but I had to litigate in court."

"My ex-wife is constantly frustrating my efforts to spend time with my daughter, and during this time I have never missed a support payment."

This particular father offered to let me do a background check to prove he has no criminal record or problem with drinking, etc.

However, it must be added that at least 1.8

Dangerous cargo

Bills are expected in Congress this fall to require a proper monitoring of the half-million loads of hazardous substances that are transported through more than 600,000 largely unsuspecting communities each day.

The existing system of alerting local authorities to shipments of nuclear wastes, toxic chemicals and explosives is primitive at best. The problem is complicated by the involvement of mobsters in some waste-disposal companies, which subverts the makeshift warning system by false reporting.

Federal law has long required those who generate the deadly substances to provide authorities with manifests giving details on the dangerous shipments, but there is no computerized system to make sure manifests are even made out. The current setup provides effective information only after an accident happens, and often too late to do the firefighters and police on the scene any good.

The result is that emergency crews often have no idea whether they're dealing with deadly nitrous fumes, nuclear waste or just a gasoline fire. Their lives and their communities are at stake.

An up-to-date computerized system, which the federal government has failed to put in place even though it has had the authority to do so for 13 years, would enable police or firefighters to learn exactly what's in a truck, railroad car or barge within minutes, using nothing more than the vehicle's license plate or registration number.

Better safe than sorry
By James Jacoby

No one would say that South didn't make the right bid when he jumped to four hearts after his partner's one-spade response. Six clubs would be the right spot if North held as little as the spade ace and four clubs headed by the king. At the same time, concealing the club suit could lead to a favorable defense from the opponents. That is what happened on the current deal.

With no indication in the bidding that declarer had a strong side-suit in clubs, West let his singleton deuce. Declarer won East's king with his ace. Already counting the overtricks, he continued with the club queen. West ruffed, and realizing that declarer probably had club losers, switched to a low heart. South was able to ruff only one of those club losers in dummy. He discarded a club on dummy's ace of diamonds, but that left him with only nine tricks. Did anything go wrong? Declarer needs to stifle his greed for overtricks and look instead for a safe and sure 10 tricks. Of course it's unlikely that the opening lead is a singleton, but it is a possibility. Guaranteeing the contract requires only that a low club be played at trick two. East will win and return a trump, but South will be able to ruff one club, take the ace of diamonds, and later score the club queen after picking up trumps. That will be 10 tricks.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Can this maple syrup be saved?
By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — We have some maple syrup that's been in our pantry for over a year. It looks a little hazy on top, as though mold is developing. Can this syrup be saved? — ELLEN

DEAR ELLEN — Mold on the syrup is not harmful if the syrup is treated as follows: Skim off any visible mold, then heat the syrup to the boiling point. Skim off any form of foreign matter, then pour the syrup into clean jars or containers. Refrigerate the syrup. (Any opened containers of maple syrup should always be refrigerated. Unopened commercially canned syrup can be stored in a cool, dry place.) — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — For great cheese popcorn, heat processed cheese spread with a little butter until it is melted, then pour over the popcorn. Mix gently and enjoy a real treat! — NANCY

DEAR POLLY — I soften a pint of vanilla ice cream, then stir chopped salted peanuts into it. Yummy! — G.L.

DEAR POLLY — To my mind, there's no better ice-cream topping than pure maple syrup poured over a scoop or two of vanilla ice cream. It's a dessert we Vermonters serve often. — J.H.

DEAR POLLY — When you're ready to can peaches, make sure peaches you buy are freestone, not cling peaches. If you end up with cling peaches, you'll have a terrible time getting the pits out. With freestone, you just slice around the middle of the peach, twist the two halves and the pit comes right out. — KATIE

FDIC pledges almost a billion to rescue giant bank in Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has pledged nearly $1 billion to rescue a giant Texas bank, but the agency's chairman says the second-largest U.S. bank bailout ever doesn't reflect favoritism toward big banks.

The rescue of First City Bancorp. of Texas is a boon for the institution's customers but not stockholders, officials and analysts said.

"I suppose one of the criticisms that we'll hear is that this is another example of the too-big-to-fail syndrome," said L. William Seidman, chairman of the FDIC, which gave the rescue preliminary approval Wednesday.

"Let me point out that for all practical purposes, in terms of the stockholders and management, the bank has failed. But in terms of all of the depositors, the bank continues."

The FDIC, which insures deposits of up to $100,000, said it would use funds it collects from its 14,000 member banks nationwide to pump $970 million into the Houston-based bank-holding company, which is the state's fourth largest and is reeling from losses on loans to Texas' depressed oil and real estate industries.

The FDIC said it would acquire a 15-percent interest in the restructured bank company and give a controlling interest to a group of investors headed by A. Robert Abboud, a former banking executive who operates an investment firm in suburban Chicago. Abboud's group promised to raise $500 million through stock sales.

A. ROBERT ABOUD... First City's new owner

Seidman said similar rescue plans had been used for smaller banks.

As of June 30, First City had $12.2 billion in assets and opened 61 banks in Texas and one in South Dakota. It lost $109.9 million in the first six months of this year and $402 million in 1986.

Under the restructuring, a spin-off bank will be set up to try to price decline anytime soon.

The key factor supporting prices, the analysts say, is tension in the oil-rich Persian Gulf, where a growing number of Western nations are sending naval forces to prevent the Iran-Iraq "tanker war" from halting oil traffic.

"Prices aren't plunging, because the situation in the gulf is providing a support," said Bahman Karbasian, a Vienna-based oil consultant and a former OPEC official.

Nonetheless, the consensus among analysts is that prices are likely to fall perhaps by as much as $2 per barrel over the next few months as OPEC struggles to restore discipline within its ranks.

The International Energy Agency reported Monday that nearly all OPEC's major producers were exceeding their production

10 percent can be 'controlling'

QUESTION: It is said that a person who owns 10 percent of a company's stock has "control." How can anyone control a company?

ANSWER: It can happen when the rest of the company's stock is spread around among many other investors, none of whom owns a big block of stock. If you own 10 percent of XYZ Corp.'s stock and no one else owns even 1 percent, you might very well have control.

There are lots of companies where the members of the board of directors and officers own much less than 10 percent of the stock. A management team with relatively small stock holdings thus controls the company and stays in control, unless some person or group challenges them by electing new directors.

"Absolute" control, of course, is anything more than 50 percent. With that amount of XYZ stock, you could install your choice of members on the board of directors. The board sets corporate policy.

hires and fires officers.

You might be able to take over with a much smaller amount of stock, if you could convince enough other shareholders to vote for your slate of directors at an XYZ stockholders' meeting.

That could involve a "proxy fight," pitting your nominees for directorships against management's. In practice, corporate managements usually win proxy fights, unless the challengers have accumulated a good deal more than 10 percent of the stock.

QUESTION: Property values in our area of Texas have plummeted in recent years. A Realtor advises us to sell our home at its present depressed value, take a $15,000 long-term capital loss on our income tax return and buy a comparable home in the same neighborhood.

Would this be a wise move?

ANSWER: Not if the Internal Revenue Service catches you. The tax code specifically prohibits taking a capital loss on your home or any other capital asset held for personal use.

QUESTION: I'm informed that, when a stock broker gives a commission discount to a customer, the brokerage firm deducts a very large portion of that discount from the broker's earnings. Is that so?

ANSWER: Generally, yes, although arrangements vary among different brokerage firms.

As a rough rule of thumb, most brokers keep about 40 percent of the commissions from their customers' transactions. When a commission is discounted, the typical brokerage firm doesn't absorb all the reduction in charge. Instead, the percentage of the commission the broker receives is reduced.

OPEC members discuss cheating

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Oil ministers from five members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries called an emergency session today to discuss evidence that key producers are cheating on a June agreement to strictly limit production.

In meetings today and Friday, the ministers are expected to reaffirm the cartel's commitment to the June production limits designed to keep oil's average price at $18 a 42-gallon barrel.

But they are unlikely to take concrete action to end the overproduction, according to OPEC sources who spoke on condition they not be identified. The ministers are from Saudi Arabia, Nigeria, Algeria, Venezuela and Indonesia.

Even with the cheating, industry analysts see little chance of a major

Man arrested after a climb

A 35-year-old Manchester man was arrested Wednesday after he was climbing up the repair scaffolds at Center Congregation Church, police said.

Bruce W. Coburn, of 17 Spring St., was charged with breach of peace and simple trespassing in connection with the incident. The scaffolds are at the church while it is being painted, said the Rev. Newell H. Curtis Jr., the church's pastor.

When police arrived at the church at 11 Center St., they asked Coburn if he needed help. He said he was climbing down from the scaffolds, police said.

When asked why he had climbed to the 60- to 80-foot height, Coburn said he did it on a bet, police said.

Coburn was released on a $250 non-surety bond. He is to appear in Manchester Superior Court on Monday.

Attack in a bar leads to charge

A 29-year-old Manchester man was charged with second-degree assault and breach of peace Wednesday in connection with an attack on a bartender, police said.

Edward W. Guardo, 83 Tolland Turnpike, was arrested early Wednesday morning after striking Jay E. Hall, 22, a bartender at Harpo's at 422 Oakland St., according to an arrest report.

The incident occurred after Guardo lit the bar with a beer bottle, the report said. Hall approached Guardo in the bar's parking lot and asked for the bottle back, the report said.

Hall was then struck on the left temple, suffering a half-inch cut, the report said. He told police he was unsure whether he was hit with a bottle, but said he heard the sound of breaking glass after being struck, according to police records.

Guardo suffered a bruise on his eyes and face, the report said.

He was released on a $1,000 non-surety bond. He is to appear in Manchester Superior Court on Tuesday.

Rice unveils jeans ads, remains silent on Hart

NEW YORK (AP) — Donna Rice got on television to announce "I've got a lot to say," but she was selling blue jeans and not discussing her relationship with Gary Hart.

Promoters of the No Excuses sportswear line, who unveiled the advertising campaign featuring Miss Rice on Wednesday, freely acknowledged that they are capitalizing on her notoriety.

Neil Cole, president of New Retail Concepts Inc., which owns the line, said the company specifically looked for someone "with a very high profile, one that would create the attention that we desired."

In one 15-second commercial, Rice says, "I make no excuses. I only wear them." In the other, she says, "I've got a lot to say. But 15 seconds? Not enough time."

Rice has never publicly described her relationship with Hart.

Rice said, "For a change, I can say it's really good to see all of you here today. I never realized the press was so fashion-conscious."

After reading her prepared lines from a piece of paper, Rice was whisked from the Water Club in a chauffeur-driven limousine.

Reports of Hart's relationship with the Miami model led to Hart's withdrawal from the presidential race on May 8. In a television interview Tuesday on ABC's "Nightline," Hart refused to specifically say if he had an affair with Rice but admitted to being unfaithful to his wife, Lee, during their 29-year marriage.

For the Record

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press erroneously reported Wednesday that Belvidere, N.J., and Lake Ridge, N.Y., were on a list of 50 most expensive U.S. suburban communities as compiled by the Real Broker Network, a real estate group. The AP list should have shown Belvidere, Calif., ranked No. 22, and Lake Ridge, Nev., ranked No. 48.

Planners cite traffic problems in denying shopping center bid

By Andrew J. Davis
Herold Reporter

A proposal to build a 120,000-square-foot shopping center off Buckland Street was rejected by the Planning and Zoning Commission Wednesday because of possible traffic problems it could cause in the area.

The commission voted to deny without prejudice an application by the Konover Development Co. of West Hartford to build a shopping center next to the proposed Red Roof Inn.

Commission members cited the potential for traffic problems near the proposed shopping center, which would be between Buckland and Slater streets off the east ramp of Interstate 84.

With the denial without prejudice, the proposal can be resubmitted at a later date by Konover.

The town has proposed that Red Stone Road be built between Buckland and Slater streets. However, Konover officials were upset that the plans would not allow potential customers to make left turns from the proposed shopping center off Buckland Street, since it would be too dangerous.

The town planning department has recommended that a median opening off of Buckland Road, near the Interstate 84 east ramp, be closed to help alleviate the problem, said Mark Pellegrini, planning director.

But the potential of building a shopping center where customers could not make left turns onto a main street did not please Konover officials.

"We all have a problem here," said John Larson, vice president of Konover, who was at the commission meeting. "If the traffic problem can't be resolved, it's pointless for us to pursue this project."

Larson said the town shared in the problem as well, even if Konover backed out of developing the center. He said future development for the site hinges on resolving traffic problems.

"I wish I had an easy solution," he said. "It's just a ridiculous situation."

Town officials had requested that Konover submit improved plans from its original proposal, but Larson decided that until the traffic problems are resolved, it is fruitless for the company to work on the plans.

He added that he believed the traffic problem has been resolved last year when plans for the Red Roof Inn had been approved.

"We erroneously believed with the approval of the Red Roof Inn and Red Stone Road that it was pretty clear ... that the town accepted ... that ultimately you would have an increase in traffic (in the area)," he said. Red Roof Inns of Hilliard, Ohio, plans to build a 12-room motel on the site.

The next move in resolution of the problem is up to Konover, Pellegrini said.

Larson could not be reached for comment this morning.

Survey tells what we smell

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Geographic magazine asked its readers to stop and smell the paper, and it is surprising 1.5 million people from around the world respond that it ended up being the largest survey of smell ever done.

The survey, consisting of questionnaires containing scratch-and-sniff panels, produced an unprecedented amount of information about smell, the least understood of the five senses, the National Geographic Society said today.

Preliminary findings of the survey, which resulted in so much data that full analysis may take years, confirmed some beliefs about smell and called others into question.

Women usually smell more acutely than men. However, pregnant women may experience a diminished sense of smell, opposite of what had been believed.

Both pleasant and unpleasant odors can evoke vivid memories of the past, but this ability appears to decrease gradually with age.

Odor detection ability declines slowly with age, starting when people are in their 20s, although it remains near youthful levels well into the 60s.

Contrary to some beliefs, factory workers can identify odors better than people who work outdoors.

People with allergies can smell as well as those without this problem.

Almost two out of three people have suffered at least a temporary loss of smell, usually because of a cold, flu or sinus infection, but only 1.2 percent have a permanent loss.

People in different areas of the world react very differently to a sweaty scent, with almost a third of the people in the United States not being able to pick it up at all.

The survey, mailed to 11 million National Geographic members in the United States and, for purposes of international comparison, all 160,000 responses from abroad, including Europe, Africa, Asia, Latin America and Australia.

Readers were asked to fill out a form that included questions about age, sex, occupation, race and disease history.

Gilbert and Wysocki said their first findings are based upon a random selection of 26,200 replies from the United States and, for purposes of international comparison, all 160,000 responses from abroad, including Europe, Africa, Asia, Latin America and Australia.

Laser-game issues unresolved cheer, but he declined to say where those sites were.

LASERQUEST HAS drawn public opposition from the day it was proposed. Originally, Laserquest was planned to open the game center at the former Andy's Supermarket on North Main Street, and a temporary injunction barring enforcement of the ordinance. O'Marra denied the first building permit for Laserquest the same day.

Richard S. Peterson, a spokesman for LOOM — Laser games Out of Manchester, said Wednesday that the group would not take any action until the ZBA decides on the appeal. LOOM will not get involved in Laser Game's challenge of the town ordinance because it is a matter for the town to defend, he said.

Peterson seemed unconcerned about Laser game's new building, which he said appears to be no different from the original one.

The ordinance effectively barred the Laserquest from opening since the former Matt's building is located near the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center and housing for the elderly.

ON AUG. 7, Rockville Superior Court Judge Harry N. Jackaway enjoined the city from enforcing the ordinance. O'Marra denied the first building permit for Laserquest the same day.

Judge Jackaway is to decide on Monday whether the temporary injunction should be made permanent. Town Manager Robert B. Weiss said today the town is preparing to fight the injunction.

"Chut lo depends on what the judge does next week," Weiss said. "He could throw the case out."

Even if O'Marra approves the latest application for a building permit and Jackaway grants a permanent injunction, Laserquest could be held up by the Zoning Board of Appeals. Wilmer B. and Carol E. Clevenger, two members of an anti-Laserquest group, are appealing O'Marra's ruling that the entertainment center meets zoning regulations.

The appeal, dated Aug. 25, charges that Laserquest is not a permitted use in the former supermarket building. The ZBA may consider the appeal at its Sept. 28 meeting.

'That's where I live!'

Malone house marker tells a tale

By Nancy Pappas
Herold Reporter

Last Christmas, Dr. H. John Malone's favorite present never made it under the tree. Although his wife, Beverly, had labored long to ensure that her surprise would remain under wraps, the present was accidentally unveiled about a month early — in public.

The big surprise for Malone, a Manchester pediatrician and Board of Education member, was to be a house marker prepared by the Manchester Historical Society. It attests that the Knight Rogers home at 84 Prospect St., where the Malones have lived for 27 years, was built in 1906.

Beverly Malone took copies of the research that her husband had spent years compiling and turned it over to the historical society. If the research passed committee review, the marker would be a holiday surprise.

Unfortunately, the finished sign was displayed on the society's membership table at its November antiques show.

"I was walking by and my eyes were caught by the sign: 'Knight Rogers home, 1906,'" Dr. Malone said last week. "I remember thinking, 'What? That's where I live!'"

Although presented prematurely, the house marker is something that both Malones cherish. "It's nice to have. It's some type of proof of the age of the house," said Mrs. Malone.

IN THE 13 YEARS since it was established, the Manchester Historical Society's House Marker Committee has put markers on 70 homes in town.

Using records found in the town clerk's and assessor's offices, homeowners do their own research, says George Thompson, the house marker committee chairman.

There are also town directories in Mary Cheney Library, and the society itself has various records available at the Manchester Historical Museum on Cedar Street. Guidance can be provided by the members of the House Marker Committee, and a book called "Researching the Old House," a publication of Greater Portland Landmark, Inc., of Maine, which is sold at the historical museum.

Homeowners then compile their findings, citing the document pages on which they found references to their properties. When the research is turned over to the society, members of the House Marker Committee must check back over those documents.

"When we issue a marker, we need to be sure that it is completely authentic," said Thompson.

"If we can't verify the date, the marker is held up, until we can verify the date. If we ever can," said Lillian Grant, the society's recording secretary and a member of the original house marker committee. "But it's a very small percentage of applications that are rejected."

"The MALONES' HOME is an example of a verification problem. The house marker implies that Knight Rogers built the house in 1906. However, it is known that Rogers first built his home on the opposite side of Prospect Street, at least 10 years earlier.

"Knight Rogers and his sister, Gert, were the principles in the Rogers Paper Mill," said Beverly Malone. "They built homes next to each other on the other side of the road. But when Knight became engaged and then married, his sister was highly incensed. She told him, 'Take your house and move.' So he did."

Rogers moved his home across the street to a piece of farmland owned by the Cheney family. "Our deeds were to be allowed to sleep in the attic of the Rogers garage," said coachesmen to the Cheney family were to be allowed to sleep in the attic of the Rogers garage," said Mrs. Malone. The stables were placed there he said.

Dr. H. John Malone stands beside the marker which the Manchester Historical Society made for his home, at 84 Prospect St.

Thanks A Million Percy Ross

DEAR MR. ROSS: Please excuse my printing — I caught my hand in a lawn mower and the rest is history. I still have my thumb so I'm not in too bad of shape. I keep reading about the wonderful things you do. Mr. Ross, you're my kind of people.

What I need is a little help refurbishing my "People's Bench." Elderly citizens use it as a stop-off place between shopping and their high-rise condominiums. Some days it's hot as hell and they look like they're going to drop like flies. It truly serves as a resting spot.

Perhaps you can help. I need wood, some green paint and wood preservative. I'm retired and living on a pension.

I know my problems are small, so heck if you don't see it my way. I'll manage and the people will still enjoy.

MR. R.L.
FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA.

DEAR MR. L.: We can't have the elderly in your community "dropping like flies" from heat prostration so ... my check's in the mail ... I've also included a little extra. Should time permit, please offer the "overheated" ones a cool drink on me.

DEAR MR. ROSS: I've never asked anyone for money, but under present circumstances, I need your help.

I have a 4-year-old son and am on Aid to Dependent Children. This is going to sound really bizarre, but I was watching two snakes for my friend. Somehow or other, they got loose.

They got through the vents and into my neighbor's apartment. When she saw the one snake, she panicked and dropped a lit cigarette, setting her bedroom on fire.

My landlord is holding me responsible for damages totaling $225 — seeing how the snakes came from my apartment, I'll have to pay this amount out of my next two paychecks.

All I'm asking for is $200 to buy food and personal needs for the month. You can verify this with the Taylor Fire Department and my landlord.

MS. M.G.
DETROIT, MICH.

DEAR MS. G.: When receiving a request which merits help, for a couple hundred dollars, I rarely check out the story behind it, but there's a first time for everything. You can bet I checked out yours.

The check's in the mail.

DEAR MR. ROSS: I will never understand why people are willing to send those TV evangelists money when their neighborhood churches are desperate for help.

Just remember, it's the local minister who does all the baptizing, marrying, and burying. He's the one who services the community and needs to survive.

But no — it's the Jim and Tammy Bakkers of the world who seem to have all the bread. I ask you — where is justice?

MR. V.P.
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

DEAR MR. P: It sort of gives you the impression that for some, the Lord is their shepherd and they're just helping to shear the sheep. On the other hand, one bad apple shouldn't spoil the bushel.

I suggest you do like me, and spend your money on whatever makes you feel the best.

Dennis Weaver stars in a movie about illiteracy

By Kathryn Baker
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Not being able to read means more than missing out on the classics. In the upcoming ABC made-for-television movie "Bluffing It," it also means living with constant fear, anger and emotional pain.

The movie, airing Sunday, is part of Project Literacy U.S. (PLUS), a joint campaign by Capital Cities-ABC Inc. and the Public Broadcasting Service.

James Sawdith wrote and directed the movie, an at times melodramatic but still effective portrayal of a widespread problem that should inspire some people to overcome pride or fear and seek help. An 800 number is provided.

Dennis Weaver stars as Jack Duggan, a middle-aged factory foreman who has settled into a comfortable life that accommodates his illiteracy. Only his wife, played by Janet Carroll, knows his secret, and she helps him live the lie, reading and writing for him and drawing him diagrams.

Eventually Duggan is forced to face the consequences of his illiteracy — and the changes in his life that the power of reading will bring.

In a nice story twist, Duggan's reading turns out to be a former employee, Cal (Cleveland Derricks).

The movie opens with a young Duggan sliding through school on his athletic abilities. He's smart and gets along well with others, so once out of school, he rises through the ranks of the plant to foreman.

But his life changes for good when the assembly line is automated, putting Duggan's buddies out of jobs and setting him up for a big promotion, running the computer that will run the line.

When Duggan concludes that the just can't do it and is fired, his co-workers mistakenly think he has walked off the job in solidarity with them.

In a pivotal scene, Duggan, his back to the camera, gives his colleagues a clenched-fist salute. When he turns around, there is terror in his eyes.

"It's unbelievable the amount of people who are functional illiterates in this country. It's something like 20 million," said Weaver in a Los Angeles news conference last month.

"They feel guilt, they feel fear, they feel intimidated, they feel low esteem of themselves. They feel they're not of value, of any use," Weaver said.

But Duggan's wife isn't always there. When he goes out to work with his daughter and son-in-law, he orders a hamburger because he can't read the menu. The restaurant's nautical motif confounds him when he goes to find the men's room and can't tell the difference between "Mermaids" on one door and "Sailors" on the other.

When he looks for a new job, he has to get friendly secretaries to fill out applications for him by claiming he lost his glasses or by putting his arm in a sling. He is offered a job driving a gasoline tanker truck, but he has to get a special license. He finishes a copy of the test and memorizes the multiple-choice answers.

On his first driving job, his wife draws him a diagram of his route, but he becomes confused by similar exit signs and jack-knives the truck, pinning a young family in their car. He runs to a phone booth and calls for help, but he can't read the signs to tell the police where he is.

"It's one of the most devastating situations that I've ever played as an actor," — Dennis Weaver star of "Bluffing It."

"You can quit, and in three years you'll still be 55, and you won't read the Globe," Cal tells him.

Duggan still has to learn to read and write — and admit a lifetime of lies to his family and friends.

Weaver comes on at the end of the movie to plug Project Literacy U.S. and the Literacy Hotline for anyone needing help — 1-800-228-8813.

Third seed Chris Evert is deep in thought in between games against 11th-seeded Lori McNeil in their quarterfinal match Wednesday at the U.S. Open. Evert was eliminated in three sets.

Chris, McEnroe don't have it

By Barry Winer
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chris Evert didn't have it. John McEnroe didn't want it. Two of the most dominant players in U.S. Open history — Evert has won six titles, McEnroe four — were eliminated from the tournament Wednesday. Evert, the 33-year-old, was slugged and out of control as she lost to No. 11 Lori McNeil 3-6, 6-2, 6-4. It was her first time in her 17 appearances at the American championships that she did not at least make the semifinals. The defeat also shattered her record of 13 straight years with a Grand Slam crown. "I think I'm more disappointed in losing the match," Evert said in a packed interview room. "I have a record of getting to the semifinals every year and I broke that. I'm sure these things will hit me later on." "What do you want me to do, start crying in front of all you people?" McEnroe, admittedly lacking the desire of his opponent, was blitzed by top-seeded Ivan Lendl 6-2, 6-3, 6-4 in a night match before 21,016, a record for an evening session at the Open. "He wanted it more than I did," McEnroe said of Lendl, who has won the last two Opens and been in the straight final in Toronto, which is one game behind the Tigers. "This is tough. The season is winding down." New York second baseman Willie Randolph said, "Every loss is damaging to us right now." "We weren't looking past this game," Yankees designated hitter Mike Easler said. "Not with Roger Clemens pitching. We knew we had to go out and beat Roger Clemens because we could even think about beating Toronto." "We had a guy like Tom Mattingly swinging at bad pitches," Boston right fielder Todd Benizner said. "When Tom Mattingly can't hit Roger Clemens, I don't know who can." Benizner hasn't had trouble with three hits Tuesday night, including a three-run homer that gave Boston the lead for good in an 8-3 victory over New York. He had three more hits Wednesday night, including a solo homer in the fourth that also put the Red Sox ahead to stay. His third homer of the year came one pitch after Jim Rice had tied the score 2-2, with his 13th homer, the Yankees' first since Cal Ripken Jr. hit his 300th home run. "I got a couple of pitches down to Rice and then I pitched to Ozie Guillen," Benizner said. "I was just trying to get the ball in play." Benizner, a rookie who joined Boston June 19, had been in a recent slump. The Yankees took a 2-0 lead in consecutive singles by Randolph Mattingly, Dave Winfield and Easler in the first. "I wasn't hitting the locations," Clemens said. "I was a little too strong." He didn't give up another hit until the ninth when Mattingly and Winfield infield hits and Mattingly scored on Mike Pagliaro's ground out. Mike Greenwell's run-scoring single had cut New York's lead to 2-1 in the first. After homering in the fourth, Rice and Benizner added back-to-back RBI singles in the seventh that put Boston ahead 5-2. By that time, Piniella had been ejected for the second straight game by Larry McCoy. The first base umpire in both games. On Tuesday night, he was thrown out for arguing that Easler's shot into the right field seats was a homer instead of a foul ball, as McCoy ruled. On Wednesday night, after Easler had grounded out to end the top of the sixth, Piniella ran to first base, lifted the bat and heaved it toward right field. Both teams' senior player had been taking his foot off the base before catching infielders' throws. "I just went out and had a few words with him (McCoy) and it got a little heated," Piniella said. "I don't know what he was thinking in me from last (Tuesday) night."

Clemens, Bosox hand Yankees damaging setback

By Howard Ullman
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Roger Clemens is rolling and the New York Yankees are tumbling — all the way out of the American League East race. He struck out 12 and pitched hitless ball from the second through the eighth innings as the Boston Red Sox won 5-3 Wednesday night. The Yankees' second straight loss to Boston dropped them further out of first place than they've been all season. Detroit, which swept a doubleheader from Baltimore, is 6½ games ahead of the third-place Yankees, whose previous biggest deficit was 5½ games. The Yankees have just 23 games left and don't play Detroit again.

They open a three-game series Friday night in Toronto, which is one game behind the Tigers. "This is tough. The season is winding down." New York second baseman Willie Randolph said, "Every loss is damaging to us right now." "We weren't looking past this game," Yankees designated hitter Mike Easler said. "Not with Roger Clemens pitching. We knew we had to go out and beat Roger Clemens because we could even think about beating Toronto." "We had a guy like Tom Mattingly swinging at bad pitches," Boston right fielder Todd Benizner said. "When Tom Mattingly can't hit Roger Clemens, I don't know who can." Benizner hasn't had trouble

Mets in hot pursuit of the Cardinals

Thanks to batting coach Bill Robinson, Darryl Strawberry is back in the groove and the New York Mets are in hot pursuit of the lead in the National League East. Strawberry hit a pair of two-run homers, his 34th and 35th of the season, to lead the Mets to an 11-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies on Wednesday night. "I'm excited now," Mets manager Dave Johnson said. "A couple of wins and we're in first place. That's what the season is all about." "The pitching is good... all the offense is ready to erupt... all our ammunition is available. I still think this team, when healthy, is better than last year's." Last year's Mets won the World Series. Shane Rawley held the Mets to just one hit over the first five innings. That's when Robinson talked strategy to Keith Hernandez and Strawberry. "Bill told Keith and myself in the dugout that we should try to break Rawley's rhythm," Strawberry innings as the Astros defeated San Francisco to move within 4½ games of the visiting NL West Division-leading Giants. Ryan, 7-14, boosted his strikeout total to a major league-leading 226 over 176 2/3 innings in the game. He extended his major league record to 172 games with 10 or more strikeouts, family-style, by striking 12 batters he faced, including the last five. It was his highest strikeout total since he struck out 16 in 1979, when he was with the California Angels. His previous high came in 1977, also with the Angels, when he fanned 19. "I think I probably had as good control of all three pitches as I've had," Ryan said. "What made tonight so good was I threw my curve ball harder and for strikes." The Astros took a 4-0 lead over the Padres' second career game-winning hit and a double by Kevin Young in the second inning, and Kevin Bass' two-run homer in the third. Tom Browning threw a two-hitter and Barry Larkin knocked in two runs as Cincinnati defeated visiting Los Angeles. Browning, 7-11, started the game by hurling five perfect innings before Mike Devereaux doubled down the right field line to lead off the sixth. After Devereaux scored on an errant pickoff attempt by Browning, Steve Sax doubled for the Dodgers' only other hit. Dennis Martinez, 9-3, pitching with three days of rest for the first time since 1986, went 6 1/3 innings for the victory. Joe Magrane, 7-7, was the loser. Pirates 4, Cubs 3 Pitcher Jeff Robinson's two-out, ninth-inning homer, his first in the major leagues, gave visiting Pittsburgh the victory. Chicago reliever Lee Smith, 4-9, retired the first two batters before Robinson homered into the left field bleachers. September proving big month for Alexander Baltimore's Billy Ripken throws some dirt in disgust after being forced at second base in the sixth inning of the second game of a doubleheader with Detroit Wednesday night in Baltimore. The Tigers swept the pair to take over first place in the AL East.

In 1988, Doyle Alexander might celebrate New Year's Day on Sept. 1, Valentine's Day on Sept. 4, Independence Day on Sept. 4, Christmas on Sept. 25 and Thanksgiving on the third Thursday in September. "I think I'll get a calendar next year and write 'September' on every month," Alexander said after beating Baltimore 6-0 to complete a doubleheader sweep for the Detroit Tigers on Wednesday night. "I try to go out and make the pitches. That's all I try to do, whether it's June, July, or April." The six-hitter gave Alexander a 15-1 record in September since 1984 and was his fifth consecutive victory and second shutout since the Tigers acquired him from Atlanta on Aug. 12. "I enjoyed playing with Atlanta, but obviously these ball clubs are quite different," Alexander said. "We have a chance to win here. Atlanta is at least two years away. I don't know Detroit needed pitching. I wasn't paying attention to that race." "The Tigers' 7-4 victory in the first game, Alexander's win and Milwaukee's 6-4 defeat of Toronto gave Detroit a 1½ game lead in the American League East. "I think it's going to be a tight race," Alexander said. "If any ball club pulls away, I hope it's us. Brewers 6, Blue Jays 4

Milwaukee rallied for four runs in the seventh inning against Toronto, keyed by B.J. Surhoff's two-out, two-run single. Blue Jays starter Jim Clancy had 10 strikeouts and a 4-2 lead entering the seventh, but the Brewers came back against Clancy and relievers Duane Ward and Tom Henke. Glenn Braggs hit a sacrifice fly to make it 4-3 before Rob Deer tied it with a double off Henke. Surhoff's single broke Cleaver's 7-0 stoppage and pitched the final three innings.

Tim Lincecum led off the bottom of the ninth with a homer, the second this season he has broken a ninth-inning tie at the Metrodome with a homer off Chicago reliever Jim Winn.

EC swimming future unsure

The record a year ago for the East Catholic High School girls' swimming team was 3-8 but what will happen in 1987 is beyond Coach Jim Neff's grasp. "We're swimming against a lot of new teams so I don't know what's going to happen this year," the second-year coach said. East, which opens its schedule next Friday at Middletown High School at 4 p.m., should be strong in the state meet. The team includes Leslie Carnolic and Kathleen FitzGerald. Others expected to compete for East this year include versatile senior Carol Trocicola. She will lead East in the butterfly event and will be in the women's 100-meter freestyle event. Sophomore Lynn Kravitz is a top contender in the 100-meter freestyle event along with senior Lisa Wilson. Coach Neff said the team will be looked to for points in the sprint freestyle, while promising freshman Christine Duda leads East in diving. Schedule: Sept. 17 Middletown 4 p.m., 22 Hamden 4 p.m., 24 at Wethersfield with Ferni, 29 Glastonbury 4 p.m. Oct. 6 Haddam-Killingworth 8 p.m., 9 Windor Locks 4 p.m., 13 Maloney 8 p.m., 14 St. Joseph 8 p.m., 20 Windsor 8 p.m., 27 Torrington 8 p.m., 27 Windham 4 p.m. Nov. 3 Manchester 7 p.m. Meets not noted at 3:30 p.m. Home pool at the Manchester High School.

Success second nature to MHS girls' soccer

By Jim Tierney

Success has become second nature to the Manchester High girls' soccer team. The 1987 edition of the Indian playoffs should be no different. Three-time defending Central Connecticut Conference East Division champion and Class I quarterfinalist a year ago, Manchester has the necessary tools to duplicate its 16-1 overall record of 1986. Nine of 11 starters return to the Indian 20-man roster, including 10 seniors. Heading the list of returnees is senior co-captain center midfielder Jen Atwell, who earned All-State and All-New England honors last season. The other senior co-captain will be fullback Sue Webb, who earned all-league honors the past two seasons. "It should be a good year for us," seventh-year coach Joe Erardi, who has overseen the program since its inception in 1981, said. "We have an excellent nucleus and I expect great years out of our two captains. The group of seniors is the same group which came in as sophomores and they've done real nice things for the program." Joining Atwell at midfield will be senior Chris Rovigno and filling in for the departed Julie Parsault, junior Amy Gates, and filling freshman Ellen Moriarty. Midfield help will come from sophomore Jean Faber and senior Terry Scata while the

Along with Webb will be junior Heather Lavigne, who missed the entire '86 campaign with a knee injury, senior Rachel Odell, two-time all-league performer, and sophomore stopperback Meg Berte, a second team All-State pick as a freshman. Getting the starting goalie assignment is senior Michelle Callahan, who will have capable backup support from junior Paula Hollis. "It's competitive," Erardi said of the netminding position. "Michelle had a great preseason. Having a backup like Paula is a luxury." Battling for the three forward slots will be senior Amy Barrera, all-league senior Heather Bogli, sophomore Karen Rattanakou, who earned all-league honors as a freshman, senior Jen Faber, and filling freshman Kathy Cumberland. They'll be joined by sophomore Julie Parsault, junior Amy Gates, and filling freshman Ellen Moriarty. Midfield help will come from sophomore Jean Faber and senior Terry Scata while the Bjorkland attends Olympic camp COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Elizabeth Bjorkland, 16, of Manchester was one of 150 Utah county students selected to attend a training camp at the U.S. Olympic Training Center Aug. 23-30. The purpose of the one-week camp was to teach junior-level students new skills and techniques which they can continue to develop for the 1992 and 1996 Olympic competitions, according to Master Lee, head coach for the Pan Am Games and the 1988 Olympic coach. Bjorkland is a student at Manchester High School. She has trained in taekwondo for five years. Bjorkland placed third in free sparring at the Junior Olympics in Tulsa, Okla., this year. She is the daughter of Fred and Suzanne Bjorkland.

Stephenson with Central booters NEW BRITAIN — Freshman Hank Stephenson, a Manchester High School graduate, is with the 1987 Central Connecticut State Soccer team's soccer team. Stephenson, 5-5 and 125 pounds, is listed at a forward slot. He scored one goal for the Indians last season. Central was 11-7-1 and finished the season in the New England Division I Top 10 last year.

MacDonald wins Boston swim BOSTON — Marcy MacDonald, a 1986 Manchester High School graduate, captured her second consecutive Boston Harbor Light Marathon Swim last weekend with a time of 2 hours and 54 minutes for the 10 mile swim. MacDonald two weeks prior won the five-mile Eggrock Open Water Swim in Lyme, N.H. She will be racing Sept. 25 in the Martha's Vineyard to Falmouth 6-mile swim in the third leg of the marathon swimming triple crown. MacDonald, 23, is a 1985 graduate of American International College in Springfield. She is now at the New York College of Podiatric Medicine in New York City.

North Korea threat to '88 Games SEOUL, South Korea — Unless its demands are not met to co-host the Games, North Korea will reportedly try to disrupt the 1988 Seoul Olympics with military action. "Pyongyang will try to disrupt the Games by any means to justify its unprecedented demand to co-host the Games," said a report by the Korea Development Institute. The report by the Seoul Institute, obtained today, warned that the communist nation was capable of using military provocation to wreck the Games. But it is unlikely that such a provocation could lead to a major war on the Korean peninsula, the government-funded institute said.

Bosworth draws start for Seahawks

By The Associated Press
Brian Bosworth's first taste of regular-season NFL action will be more than a taste when the Seattle Seahawks open their campaign Sunday in Denver. In their training camp news, holdout defensive end Jeff Stover came to terms with the San Francisco 49ers. Stover, a 6-foot-5, 275-pounder, was the 10th player taken in the draft last April. New to Munich, West Germany, to rejoin the European track circuit. He had returned to his Fort Wayne, Ind., home last week as his agent and attorney held lengthy contract talks with negotiator Jim Boston of the Steelers. "I'm a little disappointed I can't be playing football this fall," said Woodson, the 10th player selected in the draft. "It's my first year not playing in 12 years now. It's kind of hard for me, but I knew it wouldn't be easy." Highsmith and his agent turned down a contract calling for a $1-million signing bonus and a $2.2-million, four-year salary, according to Houston General Manager Ladd Herzog. But Herzog said the Oilers, who had increased the bonus from $800,000 and boosted the contract from $2 million, have no plans to trade Highsmith. Minnesota Coach Jerry Burns

UConn impressive in win over Boston College

By Jim Tierney

NEW BRITAIN — Great strides have been accomplished by the University of Connecticut soccer team since its opening day tie with Adelphi University nine days ago. Since then, UConn has run off three consecutive victories, including an impressive 3-1 win over Big East Conference rival Boston College Wednesday night at Willow Brook Park before a crowd of 3,100. The visiting Eagles are winless at 0-3. The four-team, 3-0-1, leave today for San Francisco to participate in the four-team Metropolitan Life Classic. UConn will begin the tournament by playing the No. 1 ranked team in the country, Fresno

State, Saturday, and then face host University of San Francisco Sunday. UConn burst out of the gates in the first half and immediately put the pressure on Boston College by scoring three goals in the first 25 minutes of play. The Huskies overwhelmed the Eagles, dominating the action in the initial 45 minutes and scored their first goal at the 12:30 mark. Junior Dan Donigan sent a perfect low corner kick from the left side and sophomore Kevin O'Hara glanced a header off Boston College goalie Mercurio into the net. "Coach (Morone) likes me to have my back to the keeper to obstruct him," the 5-foot-9, 145-pound O'Hara said. "As I came out, the ball came right to me and I just went underneath it and kicked it with the back of my head. He (Mercurio) got a piece of it." It was O'Hara's second goal of the season. A score amount of time expired before Donigan tallied UConn's second goal at the 18:30 mark. Senior stopperback Chris Bell made a fine run into Eagle territory and fed a wide-open Donigan on the right side 30 yards out. Mercurio had no choice but to advance out of the penalty area after Donigan. The gifted Donigan saw Mercurio charging and beautifully sailed a high shot over him which nestled into the back of the net for a 2-0 Husky lead. "Certainly, Donigan's goal, in particular, was really world class," UConn Coach Joe Morone said. Eagle Coach Ben Brewster was equally impressed by Donigan. "He

Lengthy injury list concerns victorious Canadians

MONTREAL (AP) — In the euphoria of an electrifying Canada Cup victory over Czechoslovakia, the sobering reality of a growing injury list wasn't foremost in the minds of Team Canada.

But when the Canadians, who earned a 3-2 semifinal triumph over the Czechs Wednesday night, face the Soviet Union in the first game of the best-of-three final at the Forum on Friday night, Coach Mike Keenan may have difficulty dressing 50 players.

Forward Kevin Dineen's sprained ankle won't be healed and Rick Tochet, another forward, is hugely questioned mark because of a strained knee. Add Claude Lemieux, who twisted his ankle against the Czechs, and defenseman Normand Rochefort, who left the game with a tender knee.

Not surprisingly, Coach Jan Stastny of Czechoslovakia said after his team's setback, "Physically, the Soviet Union has the best prepared team in this tournament."

The Soviets aren't completely healthy, either — Sergei Svetlov, a major offensive contributor, is out with a broken arm — but, for the moment, the only thing that concerns Team Canada is that it has qualified for what Keenan described as "the ultimate matchup."

There were anxious moments on the way to the showdown, however. The Canadians left their legs in another part of the Montreal Forum for almost half the game, and they paid the price by falling behind 2-0 in first-period goals that Dusan Pasek and Jaroslav Benak.

"We've got a backs-to-the-wall club, but as a defenseman, I don't like to see that happen," said Doug Crossman, referring to the team's sluggish start.

Junior Todd Liscomb is one of five runners who put in 500 miles this summer in preparation for the Manchester High 1987 cross country season. Manchester goes into the campaign with high hopes.

Cullen, if he returns. Sophomores Crispin Haas and Steve Classon have nailed down the No. 4 and 5 positions while senior Jim Classon, Steve's brother who won the state Class M championship in the 132-pound class last winter, is also vying for the No. 5 slot.

In a study that will be reported on in the January 1988 issue of the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, Givovich and fellow researcher Mark Frank also suggest that teams become more cohesive after changing to black uniforms.

A Cornell University researcher has found that the most penalized professional football and basketball teams are the ones clad in black.

The researchers presented tapes of two games by a player in a black uniform. "Frank said, 'I don't really think we have any bias against black players, but we do have a bias against black players who are wearing black uniforms.'"

The Cornell duo said they expect some people to dispute to explain their findings by arguing that certain teams, such as the Raiders, deliberately recruit aggressive players.

However, Givovich and Frank said they found that once a team changed to black uniforms, it was penalized less often.

The Penguins, for instance, were averaging eight penalty minutes a game before switching to black and gold uniforms during the 1978-1979 season and 12 minutes a game after switching to black and white uniforms during the 1979-1980 season.

Even though the plays were more likely to call a penalty, describe the hit as one intended to inflict injury and to stress the importance of calling a "light" game when the defender was wearing black than when he was dressed in white, according to Frank.

"Raiders and fans are likely to associate black with evil and aggressiveness and to view certain actions as more vicious when performed by a player in a black uniform," Frank said.

To further document black's behavior effect, the researchers asked 72 male Cornell students and asked them to choose five activities from a list of 17 ranging in aggressiveness from putting golf balls and dart gun duels to playing golf balls.

WHEN YOU'VE GOT A MONSTER OF A
COPYING JOB...

PIP CAN DO IT.

High-volume orders don't frighten us. In fact, we welcome jobs requiring thousands of copies. But then you'd expect from the world's largest business printer.

At PIP, you can choose paper in a rainbow of colors and a wide variety of textures. No matter which stock you select, you can be sure you'll always receive clean, crisp, one- or two-sided copies from our state-of-the-art equipment.

Then we'll collate, staple or bind your order any way you like. And you don't have to worry about deadlines. We understand that even a perfect copying job is worthless if it's late.

PIP also offers many other printing services. All at competitive prices that you won't find a bit scary.

So if you've got a monster of a copying job, bring it to PIP.

SHOE SALE

AVIA

BUILT FOR YOUR BODY.

All AVIA shoes feature AVIA's patented concave cantilever sole that provides unequalled shock absorption and superior foot stability. The unique cantilever sole flares out on impact, creating a superior cushioning effect and directing shock away from the foot rather than straight up like most conventional shoes. AVIA shoes. High performance athletic footwear, built for your body.

Cantilever sole flares out on impact to absorb shock while increasing stability.

WIN-SUM has over 20 models of AVIA shoes in stock: basketball, fitness, running, tennis and walking.

CROSS TRAINERS

Cross-training is a fitness regimen that includes many sports, adding balance to your workout. Muscles and tendons that a one-sport workout wouldn't reach can be developed, reducing the chance of injury. NIKE Trainers are designed to handle any cross-training program, providing plenty of cushioning to soften shock and stability for all lateral movements. NIKE's got the right shoe. You bring the right attitude.
