Bond ruling mistake, town's brief argues

A brief filed Friday in the state Supreme Court argues that a Superior Court judge mistakenly interpreted the Town Charter as well as state law when he ruled in July that the town could not issue bonds for improvements around the proposed Mall at Buckland Hills without a referendum.

In the decision he handed down July 29, Maloney ruled that the $13 million in tax-increment bonds for road and utilities improvements should have been approved by voters in a referendum.

Connecticut Gov. William O'Neill watches a Chinese seal carver, who cuts stone seals, or "chops," to order, Tuesday at Qufu, where the Chinese sage Confucius lived 2,500 years ago. O'Neill is leading a state delegation to Shandong province.

O'Neill tours Confucius' town

QUFU, China (AP) — Connecticut Gov. William A. O'Neill today toured the town where Confucius lived 2,500 years ago, and had his own name carved in stone.

O'Neill and other members of the state's delegation watched as an artisan outside an ancient temple dedicated to Confucius carved a stone "chop," or small seal, bearing the governor's name. Chinese use such seals to sign official documents.

The governor also toured the mansion where the sage Confucius' descendants have lived for centuries. O'Neill has been touring Shandong province in eastern China since Sunday as a guest of the provincial government. As he went, sightseeing, other members of a Connecticut economic delegation wound up discussions with Shandong economic officials over possible business ties.

Shandong and Connecticut signed a sister state agreement in May 1986 in Hartford. O'Neill is the first Connecticut governor to visit Shandong, the country's second most populous province with 77 million people.

Only Sichuan province in the southwest has more, with 103 million people.

Town likely to reject N. Elm bid

Manchester will probably reject the only bid it got for construction of apartments for the elderly and seek bids again in the late fall with changes in the bid specifications.

Town Director Peter DiRosa said Monday he has been spearheading the project for the directors.

He said the current thinking among officials is that the minor changes should be made in the plans and that some site preparation and drain work should be done by town employees instead of by the contractor.

DiRosa said that even a late fall bid should give the town the time it needs to get the project completed or substantially completed before its July 1, 1988, deadline for use of the property.

The terms of the will under which the town acquired the property as a gift call for having the housing in place by that time. If it is not, the property will go to the American Cancer Society.

Weekend rain didn't help pumps

A disappointing one and one-quarter inches of rain fell on Manchester Sunday, according to measurements in a rain gauge installed by the town's water division.

Patrick Kearney, water operations manager, said this morning he had hoped the downpour that kept most residents indoors Sunday would amount to a couple of inches.

When the town's four reservoirs were measured a week ago, they were at 66 percent capacity.

Meanwhile, a curtailment on use of water in the eastern fringe of town remains in effect while steps are being taken to install a new pump at the pump station on Highland Street.

The pumping capacity there has been adequate to meet the needs of outdoor water use this summer without leaving storage tanks short of water for fire protection.

Water division officials are also studying bids for moving an emergency generator from the town's former water treatment plant to the pump station.

The bid included several alternatives that are under consideration. The low bid, in the aggregate, was approximately $18,350.

The cost of the pump itself, purchased without bidding, was $4,021.

Ford lauds Bork as hearings open

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said Bork was "definitely not the man I would have chosen to go on the Supreme Court," but added that he is anxious to hear Bork's testimony. Both Leahy and Simpson were interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Ford said in remarks introducing Bork that he had known him since the mid-1960s when Bork taught at Yale Law School, which the ex-president had attended.

Referring to Bork's role in firing Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox, Ford said Bork "acted with integrity to preserve the continuity of both the Justice Department and special prosecutor's investigation. I think that his performance was in the nation's interest."

Ford said "Judge Bork's record on the bench has been exemplary," and he added that Bork is "uniquely qualified to sit on the U.S. Supreme Court."

On other fronts, Shultz is trying to persuade the Soviets to adopt more lenient emigration procedures and to agree to withdraw 115,000 troops from Afghanistan over a few months' time.

Shultz posed for photographs with Shevardnadze in a seventh-floor sitting room outside his office. They always have a handshake on these occasions," Shultz reminded his guest. Shevardnadze readily complied.

The handful of American and Soviet reporters permitted to watch the picture-taking were admonished in advance that they should not ask any questions.

Consequently, no questions were put to Shultz or Shevardnadze as they chatted amiably through Shevardnadze's visit or date set for Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to come to Washington for a summit meeting.

Support for "America the Beautiful" was strongest in the North, while the South preferred the song penned by Key during the War of 1812.

The brief also argues that Maloney's ruling that the town's legislative body consists of the voters combined with the directors is based on a state statute that became effective after the town changed from the Town Meeting to the director form of government.

"It is difficult to accept the court's conclusion that the Town chose the form of its legislative body pursuant to a statute which did not exist when the alleged choice was made," the brief states.

Manchester attorney Bruce S. Beck, who represents residents who challenged the bond issue, said this morning that the appeal is moot since the directors have agreed to hold a referendum in November.

"As I said to the Supreme Court, to us it is meaningless," he said.

Beck has asked that the Supreme Court refuse to hear the appeal because of the referendum. He said that he plans to file a brief in response to Homart and the town's.

A brief was also filed Friday by attorneys representing the town's Economic Development Commission. That brief also argues that the Town Charter does not apply to state law concerning tax-increment bonds.

Get out woolies, almanac gurus warn this year

By Jerry Markovitz The Associated Press

LEWISTON, Maine — Americans should "get their woolies out" this winter, says the editor of the 1988 Farmers' Almanac, whose readers say they favor retaining "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the national anthem.

Midwesterners can expect to shovel more snow, and bricker temperatures will be the rule across much of the nation, according to the almanac's 171st edition, just off the presses.

The coming cold season will be "the first in a series of two to three fairly rough winters," said Ray Geiger, who has edited the folksy publication for more than half a century. "We suggest people get their woolies out."

THE ALMANAC'S elusive prognosticator, who calls himself Caleb Weatherbee, bases his predictions on "sunspots, the position of the planets and the tidal action of the moon."

This year's almanac, with a circulation of nearly 6 million, contains the usual melange of calendar data, household hints, one-line jokes, inspirational messages, puzzles and recipes.

It also reports the results of a readers' poll that found "America the Beautiful" to be a strong contender to replace Francis Scott Key's "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the preferred national anthem.

About 34,000 readers' ballots showed 54 percent favoring "The Star-Spangled Banner," while 46 percent picked "America the Beautiful," by Katherine Lee Bates.

IN A SIMILAR survey last year, USA Today found 55 percent voted to keep Key's anthem, while 30 percent preferred "America the Beautiful." The also-rans included "God Bless America," to Bruce Springsteen's "Born in the U.S.A."

Most almanac readers marked their choices on post cards, but many wrote letters supporting their preference, Geiger said. "There are no luke-warmers on this question," Geiger said.

Partisans of "The Star-Spangled Banner" emphasized its emotional grip on Americans and questioned the wisdom of tampering with tradition. Advocates of "America the Beautiful" claimed the music and lyrics were more pleasing.

Support for "America the Beautiful" was strongest in the North, while the South preferred the song penned by Key during the War of 1812.

DAUGHTERS OF the War of 1812, through their South Carolina president, Lorraine C. McNair, cast 4,200 votes for "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Many schools conducted student polls and discussions, including the Leroy L. Wood School in Fairhaven, Mass., which mailed in 142 individual letters. Among them, Rebecca Fernandes wrote that it was only fair to give "America the Beautiful" a turn as national anthem.

Fifth-grade classmate Lloyd Jacobsen disagreed, saying he couldn't imagine a baseball game that wasn't preceded by "The Star-Spangled Banner."

An Albuquerque, N.M., woman, Ann Medley, offered "Lord, We Praise Thee," a "non-sectarian, patriotic hymn" that she wrote 12 years ago for the nation's Bicentennial celebrations, as a write-in choice, enclosing a cassette tape and audiotape.

Congress officially recognized "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the national anthem in 1931. Various proposals to change it have languished in committee.

RX for good health: laugh!

Therapist tells MMH audience humor helps

By Andrew J. Davis Herald Reporter

Lighten up. Joyce Anisman-Saltman, an assistant professor of special education at Southern Connecticut State University and a certified gestalt therapist, wrote those words in mammoth letters on a blackboard before she spoke to 100 people at Manchester Memorial Hospital Monday.

The title of her lecture, "Laughter: Prescription for Survival."

Lighten up was the key to her hour-and-a-half address, which was often interrupted by laughter, giggles and smiles. Anisman-Saltman, 44, used anecdotes and jokes to get the audience to think about why people should laugh.

"We are an uptight generation," she said. "We only relax when we are sleeping, have passed out or laugh. All the good things that happen to you when you jog happen when you laugh." And, she added, "You don't need a special outfit."

Laughter can help our health, she said. "I'm sure one of the greatest killers in the world is the word cancer," she said. "If negative thinking can make you sick, then positive thinking can make you better."

Laughter, she said, causes the pulse to quicken, the throat to go into uncoordinated spasms, and the pituitary glands to produce the natural painkillers endorphins and enkephalins, which are 100 times more powerful than morphine.

Anisman-Saltman offered seven pointers on how to have more of those uncoordinated spasms:

- Don't read the newspaper more than once or twice every two or three weeks, since it is often filled with bad news.
- Sleep with someone funny-looking.
- Have a special area at home and work devoted to humorous things such as cartoons, sayings and jokes.
- When you go shopping for clothes, do not buy anything that does not make you smile when you see how you look in it.
- Make a list of 20 things you like to do and then commit yourself to doing 10 of them a day.
- Surround yourself with positive people because negative people "make you feel lousy."
- Write to her mother.

By following those seven suggestions, people are sure to feel the benefits that laughter can bring into their lives, Anisman-Saltman said.

She ended her lecture by prescribing some of her own medicine. She told audience members to stand up and hug five people while giggling. Audience members left the auditorium laughing and smiling.

As they were leaving, she shouted her most important advice over again. "Above all," she said, "lighten up and pass it on."

Voluntary tipping becoming obsolete

By Mary MacVean The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Now that America's palates have matured and its top chefs have become celebrities, it is time for those who wait tables to get their just desserts, says the Society for American Cuisine.

"Eight to 10 years ago, people who worked in kitchens had the same low level of self-esteem that waiters do today," said Patrick O'Connell, chef and co-owner of the Inn at Little Washington in Washington, Va., and a major force behind a movement to improve the image of waiters.

"A lot of people think it's an easy job, that anyone can do it. But it takes skill," said Anne Tylar, who waits tables at the Union Square Cafe in Manhattan. "You need knowledge of food and food preparation, knowledge of wine and a lot of physical agility."

Ms. Tylar's "recipe" for the perfect waiter won her a two-week culinary tour of the United States. Her essay was selected from among 210 entries, and she and other top finishers were to receive their awards today at the sixth Symposium on American Cuisine in Charleston, S.C.

The perfect waiter is made up of "two parts Walter Cronkite to one part Mae West, carefully blended with a cup of Mikhail Baryshnikov and a liberal sprinkling of Mother Teresa," according to Ms. Tylar, 26.

The veteran newsmen provides trust and dignity, Miss West a sense of humor and adventure, Baryshnikov the grace and agility, and Mother Teresa patience and altruism.

The contest is part of the society's Year of the Waiter. The symposium will also consider the image of waiters and future of tipping.

The effort also includes working to eliminate the word waitress, thought to be demeaning, and considering replacing tips with automatic service charges, as is done in much of Europe.

The essay contest, O'Connell said, should help "prove to the American diner that these people are thinking, literate, creative."

But it's a slow process, he said. And while O'Connell is an advocate of service charges, his restaurant is not among the few that have replaced tips.

"We are waiting for the educational process of all this to create a little higher degree of comfort with the public. But it's my firm belief that tipping has to be abolished," he said. "It's a custom that no longer works in our culture."

Gary Penn, a former waiter who runs the Professional Waiters School in Los Angeles, agrees waiters suffer from a poor image, but disagrees tipping is a problem.

Good waiters at good restaurants can earn $300 to $1,000 a week, said Penn, who also disagreed with the common complaint that working for tips is degrading, too much like begging. A service charge would cut into that and "make diners resentful."

What is needed, he said, is improved training for waiters.

What's also needed is a standard of service, said Dorothy Cann, director of the French Culinary Institute in New York.

"In America, we've just in the last 10 years come up with our own cuisine," she said. "Now we want to explore American service. We need to set standards, even for diners. It should not be formal or stuffy, but there should be standards."

Most restaurant patrons do not understand the waiter's role, O'Connell said. "It's very educational for the public to get a clear picture of the range of talents and abilities required in doing what looks to them like a very simple task," said O'Connell.

At her restaurant, Ms. Tylar said, "We get written exams on our menus and they post our grades. You can lose your job if you don't know how food is prepared."

Aside from image, the current system means many waiters have no pensions, paid vacations, insurance or other benefits. Federal minimum wage for waiters who earn tips is $2.81 an hour, $1.34 less than minimum wage.

And you can lose your tip, even if the problems are not your fault, she said. If a chef makes a mistake or the air conditioning is too strong or the people at the next table are too loud, diners may exact payment for their dissatisfaction in the tip.

With a service charge included, however, a diner can complain to the manager about poor service, just as about poor food, said Ms. Tylar. "A waiter stands between hungry people and food; it's the worst position."

Corrine Crocker: "I don't know, I think it would be great. I didn't know he was coming in the first place. But I'm sure it would be a very good thing."

Dombrowski, raised as a Polish Catholic, does not want to see the pope make regulations stricter here. "Things with Catholics are already too controlled, particularly in the area of family and marriage. That's why I left the Catholic Church. He shouldn't make things worse."

Edward Werner: "I don't think there's going to be much of a gain. Because there's a lot of dissension among the Catholic people. And unless the people who meet with him manage to change his mind on things, then it doesn't help to have everyone talking about dissent, and splits within the church."

Dan Profant: "I think it's good in the respect of all the international relations gain you'll see. It's good for a lot of the religious people in this country. But it's not going to have much of an effect on me."

William Pawshuk: "How about, 'What are we losing?' We're losing money. We've got to pay the bills for his visit whether we need it or not. He's here not too long ago. We don't need him to come over again." Pawshuk is a Catholic, who emigrated from Poland.

Bridge section with a card game table. It lists North, South, East, and West hands with card symbols. The table includes a declarer's hand and a dummy's hand, along with a score and a note about the opening lead.

Declarer can do better. By James Jacoby. Are there better ways for South to bid his hand, after hearing North cue-bid two diamonds in response to the takeout double? Probably, but the simplicity of the five-spade bid is attractive. Some might interpret the bid as asking for good trump support, others might treat it as looking for a diamond contract. South actually meant it to say, "Partner, we might have a slam. You make the decision." Was North right to go on? You be the judge.

A-Q of clubs or play a diamond. Of course West was happy to take his two heart tricks and defeat the contract. Declarer can do better. After winning dummy's spade king, he can play the king of diamonds, shedding a heart. West will win the ace and can do no better than to play back a diamond. South throws two more hearts on the Q-J of diamonds, comes back to his heart ace, plays the seven of spades to dummy's eight and trumps a heart with his queen. He now leads the six of spades to dummy's nine and trumps another heart with his ace. He can still get back to dummy by playing a low spade to the five-spot. The little heart led is now a winner, on which he can shed the queen of clubs.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is 'Jacoby on Card Games' published by Pharos Books.

Giants lick wounds after Bear mauling

By Joe Moosill
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Mike Tomczak, Dennis McKinnon and the Chicago Bears defense had something to prove. They did it with such vicious determination that they left the Super Bowl champion New York Giants dazed and dazed.

Tomczak threw touchdown passes of 42 and 56 yards. McKinnon came off of a one-year layoff with a team-record 94-yard punt return for a touchdown and the defense registered eight sacks for losses of 53 yards in a 34-10 rout of the Giants Monday night.

The much-heralded battle of the interception and what did they have? "I explained his punt return, which eclipsed the previous team record of 89 yards by Ray "Scooter" McLean back in 1942. McKinnon said "I crawled for 30 yards, made a move and hit the end zone. That play sealed the coffin."

It came shortly after Terry Kinard intercepted a Tomczak pass and returned it 70 yards for a touchdown that cut the Bears' lead to 24-13 and gave the Giants a brief ray of hope.

"They beat us real good," said Giants Coach Bill Parcells. "We haven't been beat like that in a long time. It's obvious they did whatever they wanted to against us. Their quarterback was excellent considering it was his first start in a game of this magnitude."

The vaunted Giant defense did little to harass Tomczak, while the Bears were all over Giants' quarterback Phil Simms, who had his bell rung several times and twice had to leave the game to clear the cobwebs.

"They said hello to me a couple of times and I took some shots," said Tomczak, who nevertheless was not sacked once and threw touchdown passes of 42 yards to Ron Morris and 56 yards to Willie Gault in the third quarter.

"Give the offensive line credit," said Tomczak. "The Giants have some studs but our line kept them off of me."

Tomczak also sneaked a yard for a touchdown just before halftime and finished with 20 completions in 34 attempts for 292 yards.

"The greatest thing about this game is we got the football season started," said Bears Coach Mike Ditka, who apparently had his fill of the hype that centered around this game. "I've seen you expect that when two good teams get together," said Ditka. "Our offensive line did a helluva job. No sacks. They gave Tomczak great protection."

The Giants took the opening kickoff and Simms quickly put the offense into gear as the Giants marched to the Chicago 10-yard line. Then came a sack by Todd Bell and Simms fumbled with Wilber Marshall recovering.

The Bears were forced to punt, but it was blocked by Erik Howard and Tom Flynn recovered in the end zone for a 7-0 New York lead.

Kevin Butler kicked a 26-yard field goal for the Bears before the quarter ended and then the Bears took charge after that with the defense repeatedly sacking Simms.

An 80-yard drive which ended with Tomczak's 1-yard sneak up 48 left in the half gave the Bears a 10-7 lead.

On Chicago's second possession in the second half, Tomczak hit Morris with a 42-yard touchdown pass. The next time the Bears got the ball, he threw a 56-yard touchdown pass to Gault on the first play.

"The game dictated that we throw more, we now have burners on both sides," said Tomczak of Morris, a rookie from SMU, and Gault.

"They are not a one-dimensional offense," said Giants linebacker Carl Banks. "They have big play capabilities and they caught us off guard tonight."

Simms could have blamed his protection for breaking down, but said, "A couple of times I should have gotten rid of the ball earlier. I would have liked to go deep down the field."

"I expected the game to be physical," added Simms, who was the MVP in the Giants' 39-20 Super Bowl victory over Denver. "Early in the game we made some key mistakes, and you can't do that against the Chicago Bears."

But in the end it was the Bears' defense that prevailed. The Giants managed only 75 yards rushing and 128 net yards passing.

Much had been made of which team had the better linebackers. And for this game, the Bears' linebacking corps of Mike Singletary, Otis Wilson and Marshall all had a hand in the sacks.

"I don't know and I don't care," said Singletary when asked if he thought the Bears had the better linebackers. "The important thing

Alexander perfect in Detroit

By Ken Rappoport
The Associated Press

Since coming to Detroit in an Aug. 12 trade, pitcher Doyle Alexander has been a real Tiger.

"As long as you're hitting the corners like Alexander is, he's going to be successful," said Boston outfielder Jim Rice, who went hitless in three at-bats against Alexander in a 3-0 loss to the Tigers Monday night. "He doesn't have to challenge you. He keeps the ball in play. That's the way to play it."

Alexander scattered eight hits and twice worked out of bases-loaded situations in seven innings to improve his record to 6-0 since the Tigers acquired him from the Atlanta Braves. The right-hander got hitting and fielding support from Kirk Gibson, who drove in Walker knocked in four runs, three with a double in the fifth inning, as he was replaced defensively in the eighth inning.

The Blue Jays hit three homers in the second inning, two in the third, one in the fifth, one in the sixth, two in the seventh and one in the eighth in breaking the record of eight homers in a game set by the 1939 New York Yankees and tied by six other teams. Whit hit solo homers in the second and fifth and added a three-run homer in the seventh.

George Bell hit two homers for the Blue Jays to take over the major-league lead with 45. Rance Mulliniks also had two homers while Lloyd Moseby, Rob Ducey and Fred McGriff each homered once.

Ripken had played every inning of 86 consecutive games until he was replaced at shortstop in the bottom of the eighth inning by Ron Washington. Ripken's streak began on June 5, 1982.

Brewers 5, Yankees 4

Ernest Riles and Dale Sveum each hit solo homers and reliever Dave Stapleton won in his first major-league appearance as Milwaukee defeated New York.

The victory moved the Brewers one-half game in front of the Yankees and into third place in the American League East.

The 25-year-old Stapleton, 11-3 at Denver this season, was recalled earlier in the day and pitched 3-1-3 scores in his first start.

Mark Clear went the final 1-1-3 innings for his fifth save.

White Sox 5, Twins 2

Dave LaPoint pitched four-hit ball over 8 2/3 innings and Greg Walker knocked in four runs, three with a double in the fifth inning, as Chicago beat Minnesota.

LaPoint, 4-3, struck out four and walked six before needing last-out relief help from Bob James. James finished up after giving up a two-run single to Randy Bush.

Minnesota loser Frank Viola, 15-9, gave up eight hits in five innings. Viola, second in the AL in ERA, has not won on the road since July.

Ivan Calderon hit a solo homer, his 25th, for the White Sox.

Royals 8, Angels 5

Bill Pecota's fifth-inning double snapped a tie and reliever Bud Black struck California for six innings as Kansas City beat the Angels.

Pecota's double off reliever Jack Lazorko, 4-4, scored Willie Wilson, who had started the inning with a bunt single and then stole his 48th base of the season.

The Royals moved to within 3 1/2 games of first-place Minnesota in the American League West, which lost to Chicago 8-2.

Bobby 7-4, relieved Royals starter Melido Perez, who was making his second major-league start, with the Royals leading 5-4 in the third inning. Black gave four hits, struck out three and didn't walk a batter in his six-inning stint.

Rangers 2, Athletics 1

Oakland reliever Steve Ontiveros walked Darrell Porter with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning, giving Texas its victory over the Athletics.

Ontiveros, 8-4, had walked Pefe O'Brien intentionally and Larry Parrish unintentionally, setting the stage for Porter's game-winning RBI.

Dale Mohorcic, 7-4, won in relief, pitching only the top of the 11th.

The loss dropped the Athletics out of a second-place tie with the Kansas City Royals in the American League West.

Minnesota's first seven innings for Texas and allowed one run on five hits with eight walks and seven strikeouts. Mitch Williams pitched three scoreless innings in relief.

Indians 11, Mariners 8

Brook Jacoby drove in three runs and Lay Bell hit a two-run homer to lead a 16-hit attack as Cleveland beat Seattle.

Pecota's double off reliever Jack Lazorko, 4-4, scored Willie Wilson, who had started the inning with a bunt single and then stole his 48th

NEW YORK — It's not too late for Jesse Orosco to save his season or for him to help save the New York Mets.

Orosco, whose inconsistency has paralleled New York's problems this year, pitched three strong innings Monday night and preserved the 6-5 victory over Chicago that enabled the Mets to creep closer to the St. Louis Cardinals in the National League East race.

"I've had some good ones and some bad ones," Orosco said after his one-hit relief allowed the Mets to pull within 1 1/2 games of division-leading St. Louis, which blew a 2-0 ninth-inning lead and lost to Philadelphia 3-2 in 11 innings.

Orosco, one of the top relievers in baseball in recent years, got his first save in just three opportunities since July 24. That gave him 15 saves this season. He is 3-8 with a 4.63 earned run average.

"I'm surprised he (Manager Davey Johnson) left me in," Orosco said. "I don't know my role out there. I don't know if it's in short relief or middle relief."

Johnson, however, felt it was time to go with Orosco with a 6-5 lead entering the seventh.

"A lot of times, I'll go on hunches, and that was one of them," Johnson said. "I left myself wide open for a lot of criticism by leaving him in there after he dusted off the left-hander."

That brought up Dawson, who hit the first pitch far over the left-field fence for his 44th home run and 121st run batted in, both league highs. Leon Durham followed with his 27th homer and Keith Hernandez singled before Aguilera struck out Jody Davis to end the inning.

"I don't know why anybody would be so early and release Johnson said, referring to the pitch Dawson hit.

Orosco retired the top of the Cubs' order on three fly balls in the seventh. He gave up a leadoff single to Andre Dawson in the eighth before getting the final six Cubs, all right-handed batters. He struck out four.

"He's still got a lot of good innings left in him," Johnson said.

Gary Carter, Darryl Strawberry and Keith Hernandez each drove in two runs as New York rallied from an early 4-1 deficit and beat Chicago for just the second time in their last two series meetings.

Cluck Aguilera pitched six innings for the victory, his sixth straight and fifth since coming off the disabled list Aug. 24 with an elbow problem.

"Aguie survived several close books. He didn't pitch very well," Johnson said.

Aguilera, 9-2, struggled most in the third inning. With one out, Dave Martinez got a single on a ball that trickled off the first-base bag and Rafael Palmeiro lined a two-out single off second baseman Wally Backman's glove.

That brought up Dawson, who hit the first pitch far over the left-field fence for his 44th home run and 121st run batted in, both league highs. Leon Durham followed with his 27th homer and Keith Hernandez singled before Aguilera struck out Jody Davis to end the inning.

Flu-ridden Lendl cops Open title

By Barry Wilner

NEW YORK — No one was surprised Ivan Lendl won his third straight U.S. Open championship — except Ivan Lendl.

"I just can't believe I won this one," a flu-ridden Lendl said after his 6-7, 6-0, 7-6, 6-4 victory over Mats Wilander in four sets. "I felt like I was out of juice for the last 3 1/2 sets. It was a strength of mind and a little bit of luck."

And the most relentless game tennis has seen since Bjorn Borg was in his prime.

"He's just steeper than anyone else," Wilander said. "If I don't play well the whole match, he plays the same and he wins."

Lendl joined John McEnroe as the only men to win three successive titles in the Open era.

"It's something I never dreamt of, it's unbelievable," said Lendl, the top seed who dropped only one set — the one set to Wilander in the entire tournament and won his sixth Grand Slam crown — he has three French Open titles. "If somebody told me three years ago that I would win three in a row after losing three straight finals here, I wouldn't have believed it. I would have said that person was crazy."

Anyone who suggested that Wilander, a classic baseliner from Sweden and the third-ranked player in the world, would attempt to serve-and-volley in the Open final might have been accused of the same thing. But Wilander felt "it was the only way I could win."

ment. I would not have played Saturday (in the semifinals against Jimmy Connors) or today.

"I had no strength for almost 3 1/2 sets. I played on emotion."

Lendl, 27, of Czechoslovakia, has been accused of lacking emotion on the court.

"I tried to keep my emotions up because my strength was going up and down," he said. "I felt like I was falling over on two or three points... then I felt stronger."

"When I lost my strength, I felt quicker and able to move better. I'm not as flashy as his are," he said of some of his tour opponents. "I don't have as much talent as others but I work very hard on my game and I'm steeper."

Lendl joined when he beat Wilander in the French Open final in June. He displayed it once again here.

"In this kind of match," he said after collecting the $250,000 first prize, "there is such little difference between the players."

Actually, there is a wide gap between Lendl and the rest of the men's tennis world. He certified that by winning a major title despite being ill.

Wilander got the first break of the match, in the fifth game. Lendl broke back in the eighth and they went into the tiebreaker. Wilander, who clearly was the crowd favorite, held a set point at 6-5, but Lendl hit a service winner. After Wilander saved a set point with a spectacular forehand passing shot from the baseline, he won it when Lendl hit a forehand wide.

Lendl breezed through the second set as Wilander won only five points.

"Those things happen sometimes," Wilander said. "He got up on me early and released the tension from the first set."

There were six service breaks in the third set. Lendl broke in the first game and Wilander immediately broke back. The same thing happened in the next two games and the seventh and eighth games.

In the tiebreaker, Lendl jumped to a 4-0 lead, but Wilander got within 5-4 before Lendl hit a forehand winner and then an ace to clinch the set.

The only break of the final set was in the fifth game, when Lendl's backhand service return down the line ended the 4-hour, 47-minute match.

"Once I got into the match and played fairly well and was winning a bit," Lendl said. "I said, 'Come on, keep going...'"

Fame dinner will honor all Manchester natives

History will be made one week from Friday night at the Army and Navy Club when the eighth annual Manchester Sports Hall of Fame induction dinner will be staged.

For the first time since the organization was formed in 1960, all four 1987 honorees are Manchester natives. Maurice "Hippo" Correnti and Jim O'Leary from the east side, Tom Kelley, the late Brung Mosk, and Earl Vost were reared at the north end of town.

Since 1983, five men were honored each year. This, after the Hall of Fame Committee started off with a bang in its initial presentation with nine honorees. Three were cited in each of the next two years. Total membership after this year's program will be 50.

Plaque of all Hall of Famers are on display at the Lutz Museum.

The induction dinner is open to men and women as well as children.

powerful football teams ever assembled across the tracks in "God's Country".

Two-way, triple threat, an unknown part of the specialized game of football today, was the label Mosk held. He played both ways, offense and defense, never wore a shoulder pads, and in addition handled the punting and passing chores and drop-kicked the extra points.

The annual blood-bath town rivalry between the South End Cubs and North End Cleverlands, and later the Majors, lured thousands of spectators to the season-ending set at Mt. Nebo or Hickey's Grove.

There was never any love lost between the teams, or followers, and it was the thing to do on Sunday during the football season, attend church first and then walk the family in the car and see the side of the series game. Hundreds, too, without transportation, walked miles to take in the action.

The Cubs gained the coveted honor as town champions during the 1927-1928 season, 1927-1928 under the coaching of Tom Kelley (not to be confused with this year's inductee of the same name.)

Kelley who was in the Manchester as the Manchester High coach, guided the South Enders to the state championship in 1927.

Following the Cubs' triumph in 1927, supporters of the team met within hours after the game and planned a victory parade to officially bury the Cubs, recalled the Pete Vendrillo, who managed the Cubs, recalled the event.

"I had to get special permission from Chief (Samuel) Gordon of the Police Department when I told him what we had in mind. We rented a hearse from one of the local undertakers, the kind with lights on the top, and hats and the coats with long tails that they wore in those days.

Gordon said it was all right to stage the parade, but not to go past Depey Square. I didn't tell him that we had the parade planned to go all the way to the cemetery next to Hickey's Grove and bury the "body." The body in the wood casket was a dummy wearing a blue Majors jersey.

"There were several hundred Cub fans in the parade, and a lot of music, and when we got to Depot Square, we got stoned and sticks were tossed at us so we turned around and headed back to the South End. I don't think anybody got hurt."

The parade had formed at the Army and Navy Club. Those North End fans were really brutal, Vendrillo recalled, and so were some of the players.

"One guy who wasn't, was Brung Mosk. He was the cleanest player the Majors ever had, and the best."

Victory parade

Moske lived with that hurt for two more years, the North Enders always felt the Cubs were going overboard by rubbing it in over their first success against the Majors.

The shoe was on the other foot in 1930 when Mosk led the Majors to the town laurels and the gang from across the railroad tracks prevailed again in 1931 with the hard-as-rocks Mosk setting the pace.

The '31 series ended the bitter town rivalry and when the teams disbanded interest faded and although the series was carried on for several years it never reached the heights of the Cubs-Majors battles.
